

THE PENAL LAW OF BRITISH INDIA

THE PENAL LAW
OF
BRITISH INDIA

BEING A COMMENTARY, ANALYTICAL, CRITICAL
AND EXPOSITORY ON THE INDIAN PENAL CODE (BEING ACT XLV OF 1860 AS AMENDED UP TO DATE.)

BY

SIR HARI SINGH GOUR

M.A., D.Litt, D.C.L., LL.D.

OF THE INNER TEMPLE, KNIGHT, BARRISTER-AT-LAW;
VICE-CHANCELLOR, NAGPUR UNIVERSITY; ADVOCATE OF THE HIGH COURTS OF CALCUTTA, ALLAHABAD AND NAGPUR; AUTHOR OF
"THE LAW OF TRANSFER IN BRITISH INDIA" AND OF "THE HINDU CODE."

IN TWO VOLUMES

VOLS. I & II.

FIFTH EDITION
(Revised and Rewritten)

---

NAGPUR
THE CENTRAL BOOK DEPOT
1936

6-1121

PRINTED AT
THE MADRAS PUBLISHING HOUSE LTD..
19, MOUNT ROAD, MADRAS

DEPARTMENT OF LAW LIBRARY
UNIVERSITY OF
NO 2127 DATE 20-2-2001

PREFACE TO THE FIFTH EDITION.

In preparing a new edition of this work, I have tried to reduce its bulk by avoiding as far as possible repetitions of the same discussion and concentrating it in one place, to which reference is made under appropriate heads. The advantage of repetitions under appropriate heads was intended to limit the discussion as applied to a particular section in hand. To a practitioner, this is an advantage, but it had to be sacrificed because, if the same scheme had been continued, the two volumes would have further grown in size against which I have received complaints. In the second place, when this work was originally planned, it was intended to be an exhaustive review of the law on the subject. As such, all the reported and unreported cases were pressed into service for this purpose. But on reconsideration, I have preserved the original scheme, and yet eliminated cases which merely paraphrase the text of the sections, and were found in fact to be new cases without deciding a new point. It has led the reading of such cases in detail, but will, I hope, assist the reader in sorting out only such of them as possess any ratiocinative value. The multiplication of reports within the last few years, and the competition between them in reporting the largest number of cases has enormously increased the bulk of the case-law without correspondingly shedding more light on the subject. If I had followed the wake of the reports and cited all the cases irrespective of their value, I would have made the work more ponderous, and possibly more confusing to the practitioner, and indeed, too bewildering to the student of law.

All cases reported in the authorised and unauthorised reports may, broadly speaking, be divided into four groups: (i) Those in which the Court has to state the points calling for decision for which it has necessarily to paraphrase a section or those points thereof requiring notice with reference to the facts of the case before it; (ii) Those in which the Court has to concede or repel an argument addressed to it with reference to some point arising out of a section; (iii) Those disposed of in the ordinary course of routine work, in which casual references to the law and cases are not intended to be ex cathedra—such cases swell the reports with unreportable cases and furnish examples of the same Courts having given contradictory decisions; (iv) Those in which the Court has to apply its mind to the elucidation of a section and at times to deduce corollaries therefrom, it may be, in the light of other provisions of the law. The first three form the bulk of the cases published in the reports. Those of the fourth class being few and far between; though it is these that really interest the commentator. But in the Courts, unfortunately, there is a growing tendency to overwhelm them with indiscriminate citation of authorities, a tendency which might be curbed if the Courts were to pay greater regard to the principles rather than to the authorities which at times are bafflingly conflicting.

If this work has made any contribution to the clarification of the Indian Law on the subject, it has been because in groping my way through the jungle of cases, I have never lost sight of my objective, and I am happy to find that my work has, in some degree, helped to fix the principle which I have striven to state, and which my commentary is intended to elucidate. My work was never intended to be a mere collection of cases, though their citation has grown with each edition. They have now been recast from first to last, and I believe that in this respect this edition of my work may more be regarded as a new work rather than a new edition.

There remain another class of cases indiscriminately reported, and many of these placed cheek by jowl, in which the same court, and the same learned judges, have permitted themselves to give contradictory decisions. These judgements were never given ex cathedra and should never have been reported.

I have rewritten many parts of the work and brought the reference down to the latest date of publication. I hope the economy of space effected will make the work more handy, but none the less equally serviceable, both alike to the student and the practitioner, while my critical review of the cases might be of some help to those who have to interpret and administer the law.

As the superior courts naturally prefer to follow decisions of their own court on a given point, I have added such references in the foot-notes.

In order to avoid a lengthy addenda, special arrangements had to be made for printing off the work within the shorest time possible, and I am obliged to Mr. S. N. Kherdekar, who took upon himself the duty of proceeding to Madras to read through the proofs without reference to me.

Nagpur
15th March, 1936 }

H. S. GOUR

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE, 1860.

GENERAL CONTENTS.

VOLS. I & II

	PAGES
1. THE TEXT OF THE PENAL CODE ... ..	1-109
2. COMMENTARY.
CHAPTERS.
I.—Introduction (Ss. 1-5) ... ..	109-138
II.—General Explanations (Ss. 6-52) ... ..	139-212
III.—Of Punishments (Ss. 53-75) ... ..	213-260
IV.—General Exceptions (Ss. 76-106) ... ..	261-394
V.—Of Abetment (Ss. 107-120) ... ..	395-440
V-A.—Criminal Conspiracy (Ss. 120-A-120-B) ... ..	441-448
VI.—Of Offences against the State (Ss. 121-130) ... ..	449-484
VII.—Of Offences relating to the Army, Navy and Air Force (Ss. 131-140) ... ..	485-495
VIII.—Of Offences against the Public Tranquillity (Ss. 141-160) ... ..	496-543
IX.—Of Offences by or relating to Public Servants (Ss. 161-171)... ..	544-570
IX-A.—Of Offences relating to Elections (Ss. 171. A-171 I) ... ..	571-583
X.—Of Contempts of the Lawful Authority of Public Servants (Ss. 172-190) ... ..	584-645
XI.—Of False Evidence and Offences against Public Justice (Ss. 191-229) ... ..	646-804
XII.—Of Offences relating to Coin and Government Stamps (Ss. 230-263-A) ... ..	805-844
XIII.—Of Offences relating to Weights and Measures (Ss. 264-267) ... ..	845-854
XIV.—Of Offences affecting the Public Health, Safety, Convenience, Decency and Morals (Ss. 268-294-A) ... ..	855-935
XV.—Of Offences relating to Religion (Ss. 295-298) ... ..	936-955
XVI.—Of Offences affecting the Human Body (Ss. 299-377) ... ..	956-1246
XVII.—Of Offences against Property (Ss. 378-462) ... ..	1247-1561
XVIII.—Of Offences relating to Documents and to Trade or Property Marks (Ss. 463-489-D) ... ..	1562-1650
XIX.—Of the Criminal Breach of Contracts of Service (Ss. 490-492) ... ..	1651-1653
XX.—Of Offences relating to Marriage (Ss. 493-498) ... ..	1654-1694
XXI.—Of Defamation (Ss. 499-502) ... ..	1695-1761
XXII.—Of Criminal Intimidation, Insult and Annoyance (Ss. 503-510) ... ..	1762-1781
XXIII.—Of Attempts to Commit Offences (S. 511) ... ..	1782-1794
3. INDEX ... ..	1795

SECTIONAL TABLE

VOLUME I

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTION.

	PAGE
PREAMBLE	109
SECTIONS.
1. Title and extent of operation of the Code	109
2. Punishment of offences committed within the said territories	117
3. Punishment of offences committed beyond, but which by law may be tried within, the territories	125
4. Extension of Code to extra-territorial offences	129
5. Certain laws not to be affected by this Act	135

CHAPTER II.

GENERAL EXPLANATIONS.

6. Definitions in the Code to be understood subject to exceptions.	139
7. Sense of expression once explained	139
8. Gender	140
9. Number	140
10. "Man"	140
" Woman "	41
11. " Person "	142
12. " Public "	143
13. " Queen "	143
14. " Servant of the Queen "	143
15. " British India "	144
16. " Government of India "	144
17. " Government "	146
18. " Presidency "	146
19. " Judge "	147
20. " Court of Justice "	148
21. " Public servant "	149
22. " Moveable property "
23. " Wrongful gain "
Gaining wrongfully	162
Losing wrongfully	166
24. " Dishonestly "	172
25. " Fraudulently "	175
26. " Reason to believe "	178
27. " Property in possession of wife, clerk or servant "	180
28. " Counterfeit "	81
29. " Document "	182
30. " Valuable security "	184
31. " A will "	184
32. Words referring to acts include illegal omissions
33. " Act "	135
" Omission "	185
34. Acts done by several persons in furtherance of common intention	193
35. When such an act is criminal by reason of its being done with a criminal knowledge or intention.	194
36. Effect caused partly by act and partly by omission	195
37. Co-operation by doing one of several acts constituting an offence	196
38. Persons concerned in criminal act may be guilty of different offences	197
39. " Voluntarily "	201
40. " Offence "	203
41. " Special law "	203
42. " Local Law "	203
43. " Illegal "
" Legally bound to do "	203
44. " Injury "	204
45. " Life "	206
46. " Death "	206

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

SECTIONS.	PAGE
47. "Animal" ...	209
48. "Vessel" ...	206
49. "Year" ...	206
50. "Month" ...	207
51. "Section" ...	207
52. "Oath" ...	207
52. "Good faith" ...	...

CHAPTER. III

OF PUNISHMENTS.

53. Punishments ...	213
54. Commutation of sentence of death ...	225
55. Commutation of sentence of transportation for life ...	226
56. Sentence of Europeans and Amercians to penal servitude ...	226
Proviso as to sentence for term exceeding ten years, but not for life ...	227
57. Fractions of terms of punishment ...	227
58. Offenders sentenced to transportation, how dealt with until transported ...	227
59. Transportation instead of imprisonment ...	227
60. Sentence may be (in certain cases of imprisonment) wholly or partly rigorous or simple ...	229
61. Repealed ...	230
62. Amount of fine ...	230
63. Sentence of imprisonment for non-payment of fine ...	234
64. Limit to imprisonment for non-payment of fine, when imprisonment and fine awardable ...	235
65. Description of imprisonment for non-payment of fine ...	237
66. Imprisonment for non-payment of fine, when offence punishable with fine only ...	237
67. Imprisonment to terminate on payment of fine ...	238
68. Termination of imprisonment on payment of proportional part of fine ...	238
69. Fine leviable within six years, or during imprisonment ...	239
70. Death not to discharge property from liability ...	240
71. Limit of punishment of offence made up of several offences ...	250
72. Punishment of person guilty of one of several offences, the judgment stating that it is doubtful of which ...	251
73. Solitary confinement ...	253
74. Limit of solitary confinement ...	254
75. Enhanced punishment for certain offences under Chapter XII or Chapter XVIII after previous conviction ...	...

CHAPTER IV.

GENERAL EXCEPTIONS.

76. Act done by a person bound, or by mistake of fact believing himself bound, by law ...	261
77. Act of Judge when acting judically ...	271
78. Act done pursuant to the judgment or order of Court. ...	279
79. Act done by a person justified, or by mistake of fact believing himself justified, by law ...	283
80. Accident in doing a lawful act ...	293
81. Act likely to cause harm, but done without criminal intent, and to prevent other harm ...	301
82. Act of a child under seven years of age ...	305
83. Act of a child above seven and under twelve of immature understanding ...	307
84. Act of a person of unsound mind ...	310
85. Act of a person incapabe of judgment by reason of intoxication caused against his will ...	328
86. Offence requiring a particular intent or knowledge committed by one who is intoxicated ...	332
87. Act not intended and not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt, done by consent ...	333
88. Act not intended to cause death, done by consent in good faith for person's benefit ...	340
89. Act done in good faith for benefit of child or insane person, by or by consent of guardian ...	344
Provisos ...	...

SECTIONS.	PAGE
90. Consent known to be given under fear or misconception
Consent of insane person
Consent of child	346
91. Exclusion of acts which are offences independently of harm caused	349
92. Act done in good faith for benefit of a person without consent
Provisos	350
93. Communication made in good faith	352
94. Act to which a person is compelled by threats	352
95. Act causing slight harm	356

Of the Right of Private Defence

96. Things done in private defence	360
97. Right of private defence of the body and of property	362
98. Right of private defence against the act of a person of unsound mind, etc.	367
99. Acts against which there is no right of private defence
Extent to which the right may be exercised	367
100. When the right of private defence of the body extends to causing death	338
101. When such right extends to causing any harm other than death	851
102. Commencement and continuance of the right of private defence of the body	385
103. When the right of private defence of property extends to causing death	388
104. When such right extends to causing any harm other than death	390
105. Commencement and continuance of the right of private defence of property	391
106. Right of private defence against deadly assault when there is risk of harm to innocent person	393

CHAPTER V.

OF ABETMENT.

107. Abetment of a thing	395
108. Abettor	409
108-A. Abetment in British India of offences outside it	415
109. Punishment of abetment if the act abetted is committed in consequence and where no express provision is made for its punishment	416
110. Punishment of abetment if person abetted does act with different intention from that of abettor	421
111. Liability of abettor when one act abetted and different act done
Proviso	421
112. Abettor when liable to cumulative punishment for act abetted and for act done	424
113. Liability of abettor for an effect caused by the act abetted different from that intended by the abettor	425
114. Abettor present when offence is committed	426
115. Abetment of offence punishable with death or transportation for life—if offence not committed ;
if act causing harm be done in consequence	431
116. Abetment of offence punishable with imprisonment—
if offence be not committed ;
if abettor or person abetted be a public servant whose duty it is to prevent offence	432
117. Abetting commission of offence by the public, or by more than ten persons	434
118. Concealing design to commit offence punishable with death or transportation for life—
if offence be committed ;
if offence be not committed	435
119. Public servant concealing design to commit offence which it is his duty to prevent—
if offence be committed ;
if offence be punishable with death, etc. ; —
if the offence be not committed	438
120. Concealing design to commit offence punishable with imprisonment—
if offence be committed ;
if offence be not committed	439

CHAPTER V-A.

CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY.

120-A. Definition of criminal conspiracy	441
120-B. Punishment of criminal conspiracy	445

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER VI.

OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE.

SECTIONS.

	PAGE
121. Waging or attempting to wage war, or abetting waging of war, against the Queen ...	449
121-A. Conspiracy to commit offences punishable by section 121 ...	456
122. Collecting arms, etc., with intention of waging war against the Queen ...	459
123. Concealing with intent to facilitate design to wage war ...	460
124. Assaulting Governor-General, Governor, etc., with intent to compel or restraint the exercise of any lawful power ...	460
124-A. Sedition ...	462
125. Waging war against any Asiatic Power in alliance with the Queen ...	479
126. Committing depredation on territories of Power at peace with the Queen ...	480
127. Receiving property taken by war or depredation mentioned in sections 125 and 126 ...	480
128. Public servant voluntarily allowing prisoners of State or war to escape...	482
129. Public servant negligently suffering such prisoner to escape ...	483
130. Aiding escape of, rescuing or harbouring such prisoner ...	483

CHAPTER VII.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE.

131. Abetting mutiny, or attempting to seduce a soldier, sailor or airman from his duty ...	485
132. Abetment of mutiny, if mutiny is committed in consequence thereof ...	487
133. Abetment of assault by soldier, sailor or airman on his superior officer, when in execution of his office. ...	487
134. Abetment of such assault, if the assault is committed ...	490
135. Abetment of desertion of soldier, sailor or airman ...	490
136. Harboursing deserter ...	491
137. Deserter concealed on board merchant vessel through negligence of master ...	493
138. Abetment of act of insubordination by soldier, sailor, or airman ...	493
138-A. ( Repealed ) ...	494
139. Persons subject to certain Acts ...	494
140. Wearing garb or carrying token used by soldier, sailor or airman ...	495

CHAPTER VIII.

OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY.

141. Unlawful assembly ...	496
142. Being member of unlawful assembly ...	503
143. Punishment ...	504
144. Joining unlawful assembly, armed with deadly weapon ...	505
145. Joining or continuing in unlawful assembly, knowing it has been commanded to disperse ...	507
146. Rioting ...	508
147. Punishment for rioting ...	510
148. Rioting, armed with deadly weapon ...	515
149. Every member of unlawful assembly guilty of offence committed in prosecution of common object ...	515
150. Hiring, or conniving at hiring, of persons to join unlawful assembly ...	522
151. Knowingly joining or continuing in assembly of five or more persons after it has been commanded to disperse ...	524
152. Assaulting or obstructing public servant when suppressing riot, etc. ...	527
153. Wantonly giving provocation, with intent to cause riot— if rioting be committed : if not committed ...	528
153-A. Promoting enmity between classes ...	531
154. Owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held ...	533
155. Liability of person for whose benefit riot is committed ...	536
156. Liability of agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit riot is committed ...	537
157. Harboursing persons hired for an unlawful assembly ...	538
158. Being hired to take part in an unlawful assembly or riot ; or to go round ...	540
159. Affray ...	540
160. Punishment for committing affray ...	542

CHAPTER IX.

OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS.

SECTIONS.	PAGE
161. Public servant taking gratification other than legal remuneration in respect of an official act. ...	545
162. Taking gratification, in order, by corrupt or illegal means, to influence public servant ...	555
163. Taking gratification, for exercise of personal influence with public servant ...	557
164. Punishment for abetment by public servant of offences defined in section 162 or 163 ...	558
165. Public servant obtaining valuable thing, without consideration, from person concerned in proceeding or for business transacted by such public servant ...	559
166. Public servant disobeying law, with intent to cause injury to any person ...	562
167. Public servant framing an incorrect document with intent to cause injury ...	564
168. Public servant unlawfully engaging in trade ...	566
168. Public servant unlawfully buying or bidding for property ...	567
170. Personating a public servant ...	568
171. Wearing garb or carrying token used by public servant with fraudulent intent ...	569

CHAPTER IX-A.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO ELECTIONS.

171-A. "Candidate," "Electoral right" defined ...	572
171-B. Bribery ...	572
171-C. Undue influence at elections ...	575
171-D. Personation at elections ...	577
171-E. Punishment for bribery ...	578
171-F. Punishment for undue influence or personation at an election ...	579
171-G. False statement in connection with an election ...	580
171-H. Illegal payments in connection with an election ...	582
171-I. Failure to keep election accounts ...	582

CHAPTER X.

OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS.

172. Abconding to avoid service of summons or other proceeding ...	584
173. Preventing service of summons or other proceeding, or preventing publication thereof ...	587
174. Non-attendance in obedience to an order from public servant ...	589
175. Omission to produce document to public servant by person legally bound to produce it ...	595
176. Omission to give notice or information to public servant by person legally bound to give it ...	596
177. Furnishing false information ...	600
178. Refusing oath or affirmation when duly required by public servant to make it ...	603
179. Refusing to answer public servant authorized to question ...	604
180. Refusing to sign statement ...	607
181. False statement on oath or affirmation to public servant or person authorized to administer an oath or affirmation ...	608
182. False information, with intent to cause public servant to use his lawful power to the injury of another person ...	610
183. Resistance to the taking of property by the lawful authority of a public servant ...	618
184. Obstructing sale of property offered for sale by authority of public servant ...	622
185. Illegal purchase or bid for property offered for sale by authority of public servant ...	623
186. Obstructing public servant in discharge of public functions ...	625
187. Omission to assist public servant when bound by law to give assistance ...	632
188. Disobedience to order duly promulgated by public servant ...	634
189. Threat of injury to public servant ...	642
190. Threat of injury to induce person to refrain from applying for protection to public servant ...	644

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

CHAPTER XI.

OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE

SECTIONS.

	PAGE
191. Giving false evidence	646
192. Fabricating false evidence	659
193. Punishment for false evidence	669
194. Giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction of capital offence ; if innocent person be thereby convicted and executed	683
195. Giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction of offence punishable with transportation or imprisonment	685
196. Using evidence known to be false	687
197. Issuing or signing false certificate	691
198. Using as true a certificate known to be false	694
199. False statement made in declaration which is by law receivable as evidence	694
200. Using as true such declaration knowing it to be false	698
201. Causing disappearance of evidence of offence, or giving false information, to screen offender— if a capital offence ; if punishable with transportation ; if punishable with less than ten years' imprisonment	698
202. Intentional omission to give information of offence by person bound to inform	705
203. Giving false information respecting an offence committed	707
204. Destruction of document to prevent its production as evidence	709
205. False personation for purpose of act or proceeding in suit or prosecution	711
206. Fraudulent removal or concealment of property to prevent its seizure as forfeited or in execution	713
207. Fraudulent claim to property to prevent its seizure as forfeited or in execution	718
208. Fraudulently suffering decree for sum not due	719
209. Dishonestly making false claim in Court	722
210. Fraudulently obtaining decree for sum not due	724
211. False charge of offence made with intent to injure	727
212. Harboursing offender— if a capital offence ; if punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment	744
213. Taking gift, etc., to screen an offender from punishment— if a capital offence if punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment	748
214. Offering gift or restoration of property in consideration of screening offender— if a capital offence ; if punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment	750
215. Taking gift to help to recover, stolen property, etc.	755
216. Harboursing offender who has escaped from custody or whose apprehension has been ordered— if a capital offence ; if punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment	758
216-A. Penalty for harboursing robbers or dacoits	761
216-B. Definition of "harbour" in sections 212, 216 and 216-A	762
217. Public servant disobeying direction of law with intent to save person from punishment or property from forfeiture	763
218. Public servant framing incorrect record or writing with intent to save person from punishment or property from forfeiture	766
219. Public servant in judicial proceeding corruptly making report, etc., contrary to law	770
220. Commitment for trial or confinement by person having authority who knows that he is acting contrary to law	772
221. Intentional omission to apprehend on the part of public servant bound to apprehend	773
222. Intentional omission to apprehend on the part of public servant bound to apprehend person under sentence or lawfully committed	775
223. Escape from confinement or custody negligently suffered by public servant	777
224. Resistance or obstruction by a person to his lawful apprehension	779
225. Resistance or obstruction to lawful apprehension of another person	785
225-A. Omission to apprehend, or sufferance of escape, on part of public servant, in cases not otherwise provided for	787
225-B. Resistance or obstruction to lawful apprehension, or escape or rescue, in cases not otherwise provided for	789

SECTIONS.	PAGE
226. Unlawful return from transportation ...	793
227. Violation of condition of remission of punishment ...	795
228. Intentional insult or interruption to public servant sitting in judicial proceeding ...	796
229. Personation of a juror or assessor ...	803

CHAPTER XII.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO COIN AND GOVERNMENT STAMPS.

230. "Coin" defined	805
Queen's coin	807
231. Counterfeiting coin	810
232. Counterfeiting Queen's coin	811
233. Making or selling instrument for counterfeiting coin	811
234. Making or selling instrument for counterfeiting Queen's coin	811
235. Possession of instrument or material for the purpose of using the same for counterfeiting coin; if Queen's coin	813
236. Abetting in India the counterfeiting out of India of coin	817
237. Import or export of counterfeit coin	818
238. Import or export of counterfeits of the Queen's coin	819
239. Delivery of coin, possessed with knowledge that it is counterfeit	819
240. Delivery of Queen's coin, possessed with knowledge that it is counterfeit.	823
241. Delivery of coin as genuine, which, when first possessed, the deliverer did not know to be counterfeit	824
242. Possession of counterfeit coin by person who knew it to be counterfeit when he became possessed thereof	825
243. Possession of Queen's coin by person who knew it to be counterfeit when he became possessed thereof	826
244. Person employed in mint causing coin to be of different weight or composition from that fixed by law	826
245. Unlawfully taking coining instrument from mint	827
246. Fraudulently or dishonestly diminishing weight or altering composition of coin	828
247. Fraudulently or dishonestly diminishing weight or altering composition of Queen's coin	829
248. Altering appearance of coin with intent that it shall pass as coin of different description	829
249. Altering appearance of Queen's coin, with intent that it shall pass as coin of different description	831
250. Delivery of coin, possessed with knowledge that it is altered	831
251. Delivery of Queen's coin, possessed with knowledge that it is altered	832
252. Possession of coin by person who knew it to be altered when he became possessed thereof	833
253. Possession of Queen's coin by person who knew it to be altered when he became possessed thereof	833
254. Delivery of coins as genuine which, when first possessed, the deliverer did not know to be altered	833
255. Counterfeiting Government Stamp	834
256. Having possession of instrument or material for counterfeiting Government stamp	835
257. Making or selling instrument for counterfeiting Government stamp	837
258. Sale of counterfeit Government stamp	838
259. Having possession of counterfeit Government stamp	338
260. Using as genuine a Government stamp known to be counterfeit	839
261. Effacing writing from substance bearing Government stamp, or removing from document a stamp used for it, with intent to cause loss to Government	840
262. Using Government stamp known to have been before used	841
263. Erasure of mark denoting that stamp has been used.	842
263-A. Prohibition of fictitious stamps	843

CHAPTER XIII

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

264. Fraudulent use of false instrument for weighing	845
265. Fraudulent use of false weight or measure	847
266. Being in possession of false weight or measure	849
267. Making or selling false weight or measure	851

CHAPTER XIV.

OF OFFENCES AFFECTING THE PUBLIC HEALTH, SAFETY, CONVENIENCE, DECENCY AND MORALS

SECTIONS.	PAGE
268. Public Nuisance ... ..	855
269. Negligent act likely to spread infection of disease dangerous to life ...	867
270. Malignant act likely to spread infection of disease dangerous to life ...	871
271. Disobedience to quarantine rule ... ..	872
272. Adulteration of food or drink intended for sale ... ..	873
273. Sale of noxious food or drink ... ..	874
274. Adulteration of drugs ... ..	877
275. Sale of adulterated drugs ... ..	879
276. Sale of durg as a different drug or preparation ... ..	881
277. Fouling water of public spring or reservoir ... ..	882
278. Making atmosphere noxious to health ... ..	884
279. Rash driving or riding on a public way ... ..	887
280. Rash navigation of vessel ... ..	893
281. Exhibition of false light, mark or buoy ... ..	895
282. Conveying person by water for hire in unsafe or overloaded vessel ...	896
283. Danger or obstruction in public way or line of navigation ... ..	897
284. Negligent conduct with respect to poisonous substance ... ..	902
285. Negligent conduct with respect to fire or combustible matter ... ..	904
286. Negligent conduct with respect to explosive substance ... ..	906
287. Negligent conduct with respect to machinery ... ..	909
288. Negligent conduct with respect to pulling down or repairing buildings ...	911
289. Negligent conduct with respect to animal ... ..	912
290. Punishment for public nuisance in cases not otherwise provided for ...	915
291. Continuance of nuisance after injunction to discontinue ... ..	917
292. Sale, etc., of obscene books, etc. ... ..	918
293. Sale, etc., of obscene objects to young person ... ..	924
294. Obscene acts and songs ... ..	925
294-A. Keeping lottery-office ... ..	926

CHAPTER XV.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO RELIGION.

295. Injuring or defiling place of worship, with intent to insult the religion of any class ... ..	936
295-A. Deliberate and malicious acts intended to outrage religious feelings of any class by insulting its religion or religious beliefs ... ..	941
296. Disturbing religious assembly ... ..	942
297. Trespassing on burial places, etc., ... ..	946
298. Uttering words, etc., with deliberate intent to wound religious feelings ...	950

VOLUME II

CHAPTER XVI.

OF OFFENCES AFFECTING THE HUMAN BODY

Of offences affecting Life.

SECTIONS	PAGE
299. Culpable homicide	956
300. Murder	975
When culpable homicide is not murder	976
301. Culpable homicide by causing death of person other than person whose death was intended	1011
302. Punishment for murder	1013
303. Punishment for murder by life-convict	1035
304. Punishment for culpable homicide not amounting to murder	1035
304-A. Causing death by negligence	1044
305. Abetment of suicide of child or insane person	1057
306. Abetment of suicide	1058
307. Attempt to murder
Attempts by life-convicts	1062
308. Attempts to commit culpable homicide	1069
309. Attempt to commit suicide	1079
310. Thug.	1073
311. Punishment	1074

Of the causing of Miscarriage, of Injuries to unborn Children, of the Exposure of Infants, and of the Concealment of Births.

312. Causing miscarriage	1075
313. Causing miscarriage without woman's consent	1078
314. Death caused by act done with intent to cause miscarriage
If act done without woman's consent	1079
315. Act done with intent to prevent child being born alive or to cause it to die after birth	1081
316. Causing death of quick unborn child by act amounting to culpable homicide	1082
317. Exposure and abandonment of child under twelve years, by parent or person having care of it	1083
318. Concealment of birth by secret disposal of dead body	1087

Of Hurt

319. Hurt	1092
320. Grievous Hurt	1095
321. Voluntarily causing hurt	1100
322. Voluntarily causing grievous hurt	1100
323. Punishment for voluntarily causing hurt	1101
324. Voluntarily causing hurt by dangerous weapons or means	1108
325. Punishment for voluntarily causing grievous hurt	1112
326. Voluntarily causing grievous hurt by dangerous weapons or means	1116
327. Voluntarily causing hurt to extort property, or to constrain to an illegal act	1319
328. Causing hurt by means of poison, etc., with intent to commit an offence	1121
329. Voluntarily causing grievous hurt to extort property, or to constrain to an illegal act	1125
330. Voluntarily causing hurt to extort confession, or to compel restoration of property	1125
331. Voluntarily causing grievous hurt to extort confession, or to compel restoration of property	1129
332. Voluntarily causing hurt to deter public servant from his duty	1130
333. Voluntarily causing grievous hurt to deter public servant from his duty	1134
334. Voluntarily causing hurt on provocation	1135
335. Voluntarily causing grievous hurt on provocation	1136
336. Act endangering life or personal safety of others	1137
337. Causing hurt by act endangering life or personal safety of others	1140
338. Causing grievous hurt by act endangering life or personal safety of others	1142

Of Wrongful Restraint and Wrongful Confinement

PAGE

339.	Wrongful restraint	...	...	...	...	1143
340.	Wrongful confinement	...	...	...	...	1148
341.	Punishment for wrongful restraint	...	...	...	...	1154
342.	Punishment for wrongful confinement	...	...	...	...	1156
343.	Wrongful confinement for three or more days	...	...	...	...	1160
344.	Wrongful confinement for ten or more days	...	...	...	...	1160
345.	Wrongful confinement of person for whose liberation writ has been issued	...	...	...	...	1161
346.	Wrongful confinement in secret	...	...	...	...	1163
347.	Wrongful confinement to extort property or constrain to illegal act.	...	...	...	...	1164
348.	Wrongful confinement to extort confession, or compel restoration of property	...	...	...	...	1166

Of Criminal Force and Assault

349.	Force	...	...	...	...	1167
350.	Criminal force	...	...	...	...	1168
351.	Assault	...	...	...	...	1171
352.	Punishment for assault or criminal force otherwise than on grave provocation	...	...	...	...	1173
353.	Assault or criminal force to deter public servant from discharge of his duty	...	...	...	...	1176
354.	Assault or criminal force to woman with intent to outrage her modesty	...	...	...	...	1177
355.	Assault or criminal force with intent to dishonour person, otherwise than on grave provocation	...	...	...	...	1178
356.	Assault or criminal force in attempt to commit theft of property carried by a person	...	...	...	...	1182
357.	Assault or criminal force in attempt wrongfully to confine a person	...	...	...	...	1184
358.	Assault or criminal force on grave provocation	...	...	...	...	1185

Of Kidnapping, Abduction, Slavery, and Forced Labour

359.	Kidnapping	...	...	...	...	1185
360.	Kidnapping from British India	...	...	...	...	1186
361.	Kidnapping from lawful guardianship	...	...	...	...	1187
362.	Abduction	...	...	...	...	1198
363.	Punishment for kidnapping	...	...	...	...	1198
364.	Kidnapping or abducting in order to murder	...	...	...	...	1201
365.	Kidnapping or abducting with intent secretly and wrongfully to confine person	...	...	...	...	1203
366.	Kidnapping, abducting or inducing woman to compel her marriage, etc.	...	...	...	...	1204
366-A.	Procuration of minor girls	...	...	...	...	1209
366-B.	Importation of girl from foreign country	...	...	...	...	1210
367.	Kidnapping or abducting in order to subject person to grievous hurt, slavery, etc.	...	...	...	...	1211
368.	Wrongfully concealing or keeping in confinement kidnapped or abducted person	...	...	...	...	1212
369.	Kidnapping or abducting child under ten years with intent to steal from his person	...	...	...	...	1214
370.	Buying or disposing of any person as a slave	...	...	...	...	1215
371.	Habitual dealing in slaves	...	...	...	...	1218
372.	Selling minor for purposes of prostitution, etc.	...	...	...	...	1219
373.	Buying minor for purposes of prostitution, etc.	...	...	...	...	1225
374.	Unlawful compulsory labour	...	...	...	...	1229

Of Rape

375.	Rape	...	...	...	...	1230
376.	Punishment for rape	...	...	...	...	1235

Of Unnatural Offences

377.	Unnatural offences	...	...	...	...	1241
------	--------------------	-----	-----	-----	-----	------

CHAPTER XVII.

OF OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY

Of Theft

378.	Theft	...	...	...	...	1247
379.	Punishment for theft	...	...	...	...	1268
380.	Theft in dwelling-house, etc.	...	...	...	...	1278

SECTIONAL TABLE

xix

SECTIONS.	PAGE
381. Theft by clerk or servant of property in possession of master	1282
382. Theft after preparation made for causing death, hurt or restraint, in order to the committing of the theft	1287
Of Extortion.
383. Extortion	1289
384. Punishment for extortion	1298
385. Putting person in fear of injury in order to commit extortion	1300
386. Extortion by putting a person in fear of death or grievous hurt	1301
387. Putting person in fear of death or of grievous hurt, in order to commit extortion	1302
388. Extortion by threat of accusation of an offence punishable with death or transportation, etc.	1303
389. Putting person in fear of accusation of offence in order to commit extortion	1305
Of Robbery and Dacoity.
390. Robbery	1306
When theft is robbery
When extortion is robbery	1311
391. Dacoity	1314
392. Punishment for robbery	1316
393. Attempt to commit robbery	1317
394. Voluntarily causing hurt in committing robbery
395. Punishment for dacoity	1319
396. Dacoity with murder	1323
397. Robbery or dacoity, with attempt to cause death or grievous hurt	1326
398. Attempt to commit robbery or dacoity when armed with deadly weapon	1330
399. Making preparation to commit dacoity	1332
400. Punishment for belonging to gang of dacoits	1336
401. Punishment for belonging to gang of thieves	1340
402. Assembling for purpose of committing dacoity
Of Criminal Misappropriation of Property.
403. Dishonest misappropriation of property	1342
404. Dishonest misappropriation of property possessed by deceased person at the time of his death.	1354
Of Criminal Breach of Trust.
405. Criminal breach of trust	1355
406. Punishment for criminal breach of trust	1371
407. Criminal breach of trust by carrier, etc.	1377
408. Criminal breach of trust by clerk or servant	1379
409. Criminal breach of trust by public servant, or by banker, merchant or agent	1383
Of the Receiving of Stolen Property.
410. Stolen property	1389
411. Dishonestly receiving stolen property	1393
412. Dishonestly receiving property stolen in the commission of a dacoity	1411
413. Habitually dealing in stolen property	1414
414. Assisting in concealment of stolen property	1415
Of Cheating.
415. Cheating	1417
416. Cheating by personation	1444
417. Punishment for cheating	1447
418. Cheating with knowledge that wrongful loss may ensue to person whose interest offender is bound to protect	1454
419. Punishment for cheating by personation	1456
420. Cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property	1457
Of Fraudulent Deeds and Dispositions of Property.
421. Dishonest or fraudulent removal or concealment of property to prevent distribution among creditors	1463
422. Dishonestly or fraudulently preventing debt being available for creditors	1465
423. Dishonest or fraudulent execution of deed of transfer containing false statement of consideration	1467
424. Dishonest or fraudulent removal or concealment of property	1469

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

SECTIONS.

PAGE

Of Mischief

425.	Mischief	...	...	...	...	...	1471
426.	Punishment for mischief	...	...	...	...	...	1482
427.	Mischief causing damage to the amount of fifty rupees	...	...	...	...	...	1486
428.	Mischief by killing or maiming animal of the value of ten rupees	...	...	...	...	...	1487
429.	Mischief by killing or maiming cattle, etc., of any value or any animal of the value of fifty rupees	...	...	...	...	...	1490
430.	Mischief by injury to works of irrigation or by wrongfully diverting water	...	...	...	...	...	1492
431.	Mischief by injury to public road, bridge, river or channel	...	...	...	...	...	1495
432.	Mischief by causing inundation or obstruction to pulic drainage attended with damage	...	...	...	...	...	1496
433.	Mischief by destroying, moving or rendering less useful a light-house or sea-mark	...	...	...	...	...	1498
434.	Mischief by destroying or moving, etc., a land-mark fixed by public authority	...	...	...	...	...	1498
435.	Mischief by fire or explosive substance with intent to cause damage to amount of one hundred or (in case of agricultural produce) ten rupees	...	...	...	...	...	1499
436.	Mischief by fire or explosive substance with intent to destroy houses, etc.	...	...	...	...	...	1502
437.	Mischief with intent to destroy or make unsafe a decked vessel or one of twenty tons burden	...	...	...	...	...	1506
438.	Punishment for the mischief described in section 437 committed by fire or explosive substance	...	...	...	...	...	1507
439.	Punishment for intentionally running vessel aground or ashore with intent to commit theft, etc.,	...	...	...	...	...	1508
440.	Mischief committed after preparation made for causing death or hurt	...	...	...	...	...	1509

Of Criminal Trespass.

441.	Criminal trespass	...	...	...	...	...	1510
442.	House trespass	...	...	...	...	...	1522
443.	Lurking house-trespass	...	...	...	...	...	1525
444.	Lurking house-trespass by night	...	...	...	...	...	1527
445.	House-breaking	...	...	...	...	...	1527
446.	House-breaking by night	...	...	...	...	...	1532
447.	Punishment for criminal trespass	...	...	...	...	...	1533
448.	Punishment for house-trespass	...	...	...	...	...	1536
449.	House-trespass in order to commit offence punishable with death	...	...	...	...	...	1538
450.	House-trespass in order to commit offence punishable with transporatation for life	...	...	...	...	...	1539
451.	House-trespass in order to commit offence punishable with imprisonment	...	...	...	...	...	1539
452.	House-trespass after preparation for hurt assault or wrongful restraint	...	...	...	...	...	1541
453.	Punishment for lurking house-trespass or house-breaking	...	...	...	...	...	1544
454.	Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking in order to commit offence punishable with imprisonment	...	...	...	...	...	1545
455.	Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking after preparation for hurt, assault or wrongful restraint	...	...	...	...	...	1547
456.	Punishment for lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night	...	...	...	...	...	1548
457.	Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night in order to commit offence punishable with imprisonment	...	...	...	...	...	1550
458.	Lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night, after preparation for hurt, assault or wrongful restraint...	...	...	...	...	...	1554
459.	Grievous hurt caused whilst committing lurking house-trespass or house-breaking	...	...	...	...	...	1555
460.	All persons jointly concerned in lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night punishable where death or grievous hurt caused by one of them	...	...	...	...	...	1557
461.	Dishonestly breaking open receptacle containing property	...	...	...	...	...	1559
462.	Punishment for same offence when committed by person entrusted with custody	...	...	...	...	...	1560

CHAPTER XVIII

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO DOCUMENTS AND TO TRADE OR PROPERTY MARKS.

463.	Forgery	...	...	...	...	...	1562
464.	Making a false document	...	...	...	...	...	1562
465.	Punishment for forgery	...	...	...	...	...	1581
466.	Forgery of record of Court or of public register, etc.,	...	...	...	...	...	1588
467.	Forgery of valuable security, will, etc.	...	...	...	...	...	1591
468.	Forgery for purpose of cheating	...	...	...	...	...	1593
469.	Forgery for purpose of harming reputation	...	...	...	...	...	1595

SECTIONAL TABLE

xxi

SECTIONS	PAGE
470. Forged document	1596
471. Using as genuine a forged document	1596
472. Making or possessing counterfeit seal, etc., with intent to commit forgery punishable under section 467	1604
473. Making or possessing counterfeit seal, etc., with intent to commit forgery punishable otherwise	1605
474. Having possession of document described in section 466 or 467, knowing it to be forged and intending to use it as genuine	1606
475. Counterfeiting device or mark used for authenticating documents described in section 467, or possessing counterfeit marked material	1607
476. Counterfeiting device or mark used for authenticating documents other than those described in section 467 or possessing counterfeit marked material	1609
477. Fraudulent cancellation, destruction, etc., of will, authority to adopt, or valuable security	1610
477-A. Falsification of accounts	1611
Of Trade Property and Other Marks
478. Trade mark	1616
479. Property mark	1620
480. Using a false trade mark	1621
481. Using a false property mark	1628
482. Punishment for using a false trade mark or property mark	1628
483. Counterfeiting a trade mark or property mark used by another	1634
484. Counterfeiting a mark used by a public servant	1635
485. Making or possession of any instrument for counterfeiting a trade mark or property mark	1636
486. Selling goods marked with a counterfeit trade mark or property mark	1638
487. Making a false mark upon any receptacle containing goods	1641
488. Punishment for making use of any such false mark	1643
489. Tampering with property mark with intent to cause injury	1644
Of Currency-Notes and Bank-Notes
489-A. Counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes	1645
489-B. Using as genuine forged or counterfeit currency-notes or bank-notes	1646
489-C. Possession of forged or counterfeit currency-notes or bank-notes	1648
489-D. Making or possessing instruments or materials for forging or counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes	1649

CHAPTER XIX

OF THE CRIMINAL BREACH OF CONTRACTS OF SERVICE.

490. Repealed	1651
491. Breach of contract to attend on and supply wants of helpless persons	1651
492. Repealed	1653

CHAPTER XX

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO MARRIAGES

493. Cohabitation caused by a man deceitfully inducing a belief of lawful marriage	1654
494. Marrying again during life-time of husband or wife	1656
495. Same offence with concealment of former marriage from person with whom subsequent marriage is contracted	1675
496. Marriage ceremony fraudulently gone through without lawful marriage	1777
497. Adultery	1679
498. Enticing or taking away or detaining with criminal intent a married woman	1687

CHAPTER XXI

OF DEFAMATION.

499. Defamation	1695
Imputation of truth which public good requires to be made or published	1696
Public conduct of public servants	1696
Conduct of any person touching any public question	1696

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

SECTIONS

	PAGE
Publication of reports of proceedings of Courts	1696
Merits of case decided in Court, or conduct of witnesses and others concerned	1696
Merits of public performance	1697
Censure passed in good faith by person having lawful authority over another	1697
Accusation preferred in good faith to authorised person	1697
Imputation made in good faith by person for protection of his or other's interests	1697
Caution intended for good of person to whom conveyed or for public good	1697
500. Punishment for defamation	1750
501. Printing or engraving matter known to be defamatory	1759
502. Sale of printed or engraved substance containing defamatory matter	1760

CHAPTER XXII.

OF CRIMINAL INTIMIDATION, INSULT AND ANNOYANCE

503. Criminal intimidation	1762
504. Intentional insult with intent to provoke breach of the peace	1767
505. Statements conducing to public mischief	1770
506. Punishment for criminal intimidation	1773
If threat be to cause death or grievous hurt, etc.,...	1775
507. Criminal intimidation by an anonymous communication	1776
508. Act caused by inducing person to believe that he will be rendered an object of the Divine displeasure	1779
509. Word, gesture or act intended to insult the modesty of a woman	1781
510. Misconduct in public by a drunken person

CHAPTER XXIII.

OF ATTEMPTS TO COMMIT OFFENCES

511. Punishment for attempting to commit offences punishable with transportation or imprisonment	1782
--	------

TABLE OF ABBREVIATIONS

A. C.	... Appeal Cases (L. R. from 1891— )
A. & E.	... Adolphus and Ellis' Reports (1834—1840). New Series (1841—1852)
A. I. R.	... All India Reporter (1922— ). Citation : Ali Meah, (1926) C. 1012
A. L. J. R.	... Allahabad Law Journal Reports (1904— ).
A. W. N.	... Allahabad Weekly Notes (1881—1908).
Agra	... Agra High Court Reports (1866—1868).
Alison	... Alison's Criminal Law of Scotland.
App.	... Appendix
Austin	... Austin's Jurisprudence
Bacon	... Bacon's Abridgment of the Law
B. & A.	... Barnwell and Alderson (K. B. Reports, 1817—1822)
B. & C.	... Barnwell and Creswell (King's Bench, 1822—1830)
Beav.	... Beavan's Reports (Rolls, 1836—1866).
Bell	... Bell's Crown Cases Reserved (1858—1860)
B. H. C. R.	... Bombay High Court Reports (1862—1875)
B. L. R.	... Bengal Law Reports (1868—1875)
Bing.	... Bingham's Cases (Common Pleas, 1834—1840)
Bishop	... Bishop's Criminal Law
Black	... Blackstone's Commentaries (Ed. 1773)
Bligh	... Bligh's House of Lords Reports (1819—1821)
Bligh N. S.	... Bligh's House of Lords Reports (1827—1837)
Bom. L. R.	... Bombay Law Reporter (1899— )
Boul.	... Boulnois' Reports (Calcutta, 1862—1875)
B. & S.	... Best and Smith (Q. B., 1861—1869)
B. U. C.	... Bombay Unreported Cases (1862—1898)
Bur. L. J.	... Burmah Law Journal (1923— )
Bur. L. R.	... Burmah Law Reports (1895— ).
Burr.	... Burrow's Reports (K. B. 1757—1771)
Cald.	... Caldecott's Settlement Cases (K. B., 1776—1785)
C. C. R.	... Crown Cases Reserved
C. L. J.	... Calcutta Law Journal (1905— )
C. L. R.	... Calcutta Law Reports (1878—1883).
C. P. L. R.	... Central Provinces Law Reports (1887—1904)
C. W. N.	... Calcutta Weekly Notes (1896— )
Camp.	... Campbell's Reports (N. P. 1808—1816)
C. B.	... Common Bench Reports (C. P. 1845—1856)
C. P.	... Common Pleas (Law Reports, 1866—1874)
C. P. D.	... Common Pleas Division (L. R., 1875—1890)
C. & K.	... Carrington and Kirwan (N. P., 1843—1850)
C. & M.	... Crompton and Meeson (Exch., 1832—1834)
C. & P.	... Carrington and Payn (N. P., 1823—1841)
Ch. D.	... Chancery Division (L. R., 1875—1890)
Cl. & F.	... Clark and Finnelly (N. P., 1831—1846).
Coke	... Coke's Reports (1752—1816)
Cox	... Cox's Criminal Cases (1843— )
Cr. Car.	... Croke's Reports of the Reign of Charles I (1625—1641)
Cr. L. J.	... Criminal Law Journal (1904)
Cr. P. C.	... Criminal Procedure Code (1898)
D. & B.	... Dearsley and Bell's Crown Cases (1856—1858)
Dears.	... Dearsley's Crown Cases (1852—1856)
Den. C. C.	... Denison's Crown Cases (1844)
Doug.	... Douglas's Reports (K. B., 1778—1784)
Dow.	... Dow's House of Lords Reports (1812—1818)
Dow. & C.	... Dow and Charles' House of Lords Reports (1827—1831)
Dowl. & Ry. }	... Dowing and Ryland's King's Bench (1822—1827)
D. & Ry.
D. & R.
D. & R.	... Magistrate's Cases (1822—1827)

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

East	... East's Pleas of the Crown
East R.	... East's Reports of the King's Bench (1801—1812)
E. B. & E.	Ellis Blackburn and Ellis (Q. B., 1858)
E. & B.	... Ellis and Blackburn (Q. B. 1852—1858)
E. & E. }	...
Ell. & E. }	... Ellis and Ellis (Q. B., 1858—1861).
E. & I. App.	... English and Irish Appeal Cases (1861— )
Esp.	... Espinasse's Reports (N. S. 1793—1807)
Exch.	... Exchequer
Ex. D.	... Exchequer Division
Forst.	... Forster (Dublin C. C., 1767)
F. B.	Full Bench
F. & F.	... Foster and Finlayson (Nisi Prius, 1856—1867)
Foster	... Foster's Crown Law (1743—1761)
Hagg.	... Haggard's Reports. (Admiralty Cases 1822—1837 Consistorial Reports 1789—1802 Ecclesiastical Reports, (1827—1833)
Hale	... Hale's Pleas of the Crown
Harc	... Hale's Reports (1841—1853)
Hawk.	... Hawkin's Pleas of the Crown
Hay.	... Hay's Reports (Calcutta 1862—1863)
H. & C.	... Hurlstone and Coltman (Exchequer, 1862—1865)
H. L.	... House of Lords
H. L. C.	... House of Lords Cases (1847—1866)
Hob.	... Hobbart's Reports (1608—1625)
Hyde	... Hyde's Reports (Calcutta, 1863—1864)
I. A.	... Law Reports, Indian Appeals (1876— )
I. C.	... Indian Cases (1909)
I. J.	... India Jurist ( Old Series, Calcutta, 1862 ; New Series, Calcutta, 1866, 1867)
I. L. R., All.	... Indian Law Reports, Allahabad High Court (1876— )
I. L. R., Bom.	... Indian Law Reports, Bombay High Court (1876— )
I. L. R., Cal.	... Indian Law Reports, Calcutta High Court (1876— )
I. L. R., Lah.	... Indian Law Reports, Lahore (1920— )
I. L. R., Mad.	... Indian Law Reports, Madras High Court (1876— )
I. L. R., Pat.	... Indian Law Reports, Patna (1922— )
I. L. R., Ran.	... Indian Law Reports, Rangoon (1924— )
J. P.	... Justice of the Peace, (Reports 1836— )
Keb.	... Keble's Reports, King's Bench (1661—1679)
Kel.	... Kelyng's Reports, King's Bench ( 1673—1706)
L. B. R.	... Lower Burmah Rulings ( 1901— )
L. & C.	... Leigh and Cave's Crown Cases (1861—1865)
L. L. J.	... Lahore Law Journal (1920— )
L. J. Ch.	... Law Journ. Reports Chancery (1822— )
L. J. C. P.	... Law Journ. Crown Pleas
L. J. Ex.	... Law Journ. Exchequer
L. J. M. C.	... Law Journ. Magistrates's Class
L. J. M.	... Law Journ. Matrimonial Cases
L. J. P. M. & A.	... Law Journ. Probate, Matrimonial and Admiralty
L. J. Q. B.	... Law Journ, Queen's Bench
Ld. Raym.	... Lord Raymond's Reports (K. B. & C. P. 1694—1734)
Leach	... Leach's Crown Cases (1730—1788)
L. R. A.	... Law Reporter, Allahabad (1920— )
L. R. A. C.	... Law Reports, Appeal Cases.
L. R. C. C.	... Law Reports Crown Cases (1866— )
L. R. C. P.	... Law Reports, Common Pleas (1866—1875)
L. R. C. P. D.	... Law Reports, Common Pleas Division (1876— )
L. R. E. & I.	... Law Reports, English and Irish Appeal Cases
L. R. Q. B.	... Law Reports, Queen's Bench (1891— )
L. T.	... Law Times (1845—1858)
L. T. (N. S.)	... Law Times New Series (1859— )
Ld. Ray	... Lord Raymond's Reports (Common Law, 1694— 1734)
Lewin	... Lewin's Crown Cases (1822—1833)
Loff.	... Lofft's Reports, King's Bench (K. B., 1772—1774)
Mad.	... Madras
M. H. C. R.	... Madras High Court Reports (1862—1875)
M. L. J. R.	... Madras Law Journal Reports (1891— )
M. & R.	...
Man. & R.	... Manning and Ryland's Reports (K. B., 1827—1830)

Marsh.	...	Marshall's Reports (Common Pleas, 1813—1816)
Mood. C. C.	...	Moody's Crown Cases Reserved (1824—1844)
M. I. A.	...	Moore's Indian Appeals (1836—1873)
M. & R.	...	Moody and Robinson (Nishi Prius, 1830—1843)
M. & S.	...	Maule and Selwyn (King's Bench, 1813—1819)
M. & W.	...	Meeson and Welby (Exchequer, 1836—1847)
Mod.	...	Modern Reports (King's Bench, 1669—1732)
N. L. R.	...	Nagpur Law Reports (1905)
N. & M.	}	Neville and Manning (K. B., 1832—1836). Magis-
Nev. & M.
Nol.	...	Nonal's Magistrates' Cases (K. B., 1791—1793)
Oudh L. J.	...	Oudh Law Journal (1915— )
Oudh W. N.	...	Oudh Weekly Notes (1924— )
Palm	...	Palmer's Reports (King's Bench, 1619—1629)
Parl. Rep.	...	Parliamentary Reports
Pat. L. J.	...	Patna Law Journal
Pat. L. R.	...	Patna Law Reporter (1924— )
Pat. L. T.	...	Patna Law Times (1920— )
P. C.	...	Privy Council
P. J. L. B.	...	Printed Judgments, Lower Burmah (1893—1900)
P. L. R.	...	The Punjab Law Reporter
Price	...	Prince's Reports Exchequer
P. R.	...	Punjab Record (1862— )
P. W. R.	...	Punjab Weekly Reporter, (1906— )
P. & D.	...	Perry and Division (Q. B., 1838—1841)
Q. B.	...	Queen's Bench Reports (Adolphus and Ellis Q. B., 1841—1852)
Ray.		Lord Raymond's Reports (Common Law, 1694—1734)
R. & M. C. C. R.	...	Russel and Mylne Crown Cases Reserved (1829—1831)
R. R.	...	Revised Reports (1735—1865)
R. & R.	...	Russell and Refan (1799—1823)
Rob	...	Robert's Reports
Roll.	...	Sir H. Rolle's Reports (K. B., 1614—1625)
Russ. & Ry.	...	Russell & Ryan's Crown Cases Reserved (1799—1823)
S. J. L. B.	...	Select Judgments, Lower Burmah (1872—1892)
Salk.	...	Salket's Reports (1689—1712)
Show.	...	Shower's Report (H. L., 1740 ; Q. B., 1678—1695)
Sm.	...	Smith Q. B., 1803—1806)
Sm. & B.	...	Smith (Q. B., Ireland—1824—1825)
Steph. Comm.	...	Stephen's Commentaries of the Laws of England
Steph. Cr. L.	...	Sir James Stephen's Criminal Law
Steph. Dig.	...	Sir James Stephen's Digest of Criminal Law.
Str.	...	Strange's Reports (King's Bench, 1795)
Str. Tr.	...	Howell's State Trials (1163—1584)
Sw. & Tr.	...	Swabey and Tristram (1858—1865)
Sty.	...	Style's Reports (& B., 1646—1655)
Taunt.	...	Taunton's Reports (Common Pleas, 1807—1819)
T. L. R.	...	Times Law Reports 1885
T. R.	...	Durnford and East's Term Reports (K. B., 1785—1800)
U. B.	...	Upper Burma
Vent.	...	Ventries' Reports (1688—1691)
Ves.	...	Vesey's Reports (Senior, 1746—1756)
Ves. J.	...	Vesey's Reports (Junior 1789—1817)
Weir	...	Weir's Law of Offences, Vol. I (4th Ed., 1905)
Will.	}	Willmore, Wellaston and Devison (& B., or K. B., 1695—1735)
W. & D.
W. W. & D.	}	Willmore, Wollaston and Hodges (K. B., 1838—1839)
Will. W. & H.
W. W. & H.	}	Willmore, Wollaston and Hodges (K. B., 1838—1839)
Wilson
W. R.	...	Wilson's Reports (1805—1817)
W. Cr. L.	...	Weekly Reporter (Calcutta, 1862—1875)
Wym.	...	Weekly Criminal Letters
Yelv.	...	Wyman's Revenue and Criminal Rulings
	...	Yelverton (Q. B., 1603—1613)

STATEMENT OF REPEALS AND AMENDMENTS

Ss. 1 and 2 repealed in part by	..	Act 12 of 1891 (Schedule)
S. 4 substituted by	..	Act 4 of 1898, s. 2.
S. 5 repealed in part by	..	Act 14 of 1870 (Schedule)
S. 5 amended by	..	Act 10 of 1927, s. 2 and Schedule I
S. 15 repealed in part by	..	Act 12 of 1891 (Schedule)
S. 21 amended by	..	Act 39 of 1920, s. 2.
S. 21 amended by	..	Act 10 of 1927, s. 2 and Schedule I.
S. 28 amended by	..	Act 1 of 1889, s. 9
S. 34 substituted by	..	Act 27 of 1870, s. 1
S. 40 substituted by	..	Act 27 of 1870, s. 2.
S. 40 amended by	..	Act 8 of 1882, s. 1.
S. 40 amended by	..	Act 10 of 1886, s. 21 (1)
S. 40 amended by	..	Act 8 of 1913, s. 2.
S. 40 amended by	..	Act VIII of 1930.
S. 56 amended by	..	Act 27 of 1870, s. 3
Ss. 61 and 62 repealed by	..	Act 16 of 1921, s. 4
S. 64 amended by	..	Act 8 of 1882, s. 2
S. 64 amended by	..	Act 10 of 1886, s. 21 (2)
S. 67 amended by	..	Act 8 of 1882, s. 3
S. 71 amended by	..	Act 8 of 1882, s. 4
S. 73 amended by	..	Act 8 of 1882, s. 5
S. 75 substituted by	..	Act 3 of 1910, s. 2
S. 108-A added by	..	Act 4 of 1898, s. 3.
Ss. 120-A and 120-B (Chapter V-A) inserted by	..	Act 8 of 1913, s. 3
S. 121 amended by	..	Act 16 of 1921, s. 2
S. 121-A inserted by	..	Act 27 of 1870, s. 4
S. 121-A amended by	..	Act 16 of 1921, s. 3
S. 122-A amended by	..	Act 16 of 1921, s. 2
S. 124-A substituted by	..	Act 4 of 1898, s. 4
S. 131 amended by	..	Act 27 of 1870, s. 6
S. 131 amended by	..	Act 10 of 1927, s. 2 and Schedule I.
Ss. 131 and 139 amended by	..	Act XIV of 1932 (Schedule)
S. 131 amended by	..	Act XXXV of 1934.
Ss. 132 to 138 amended by	..	Act 10 of 1927, s. 2 and Schedule I
S. 138 repealed by	..	Act XXV of 1934.
Ss. 139 and 140 amended by	..	Act 10 of 1927, s. 2 and Schedule I
S. 139 amended by	..	Act XXXV of 1934.
S. 153-A added by	..	Act 4 of 1898, S. 5
Ss. 171-A to 171-H (Chapter IX-A) inserted by	..	Act 39 of 1920, s. 2
S. 177 amended by	..	Act 3 of 1894, s. 5
S. 178 amended by	..	Act 10 of 1873, s. 15
S. 181 amended by	..	Act 10 of 1873, s. 15
S. 182 substituted by	..	Act 3 of 1895, s. 1
S. 193 Explanation I repealed in part by	..	Act 13 of 1889 (Schedule)
Ss. 194 and 195 amended by	..	Act 9 of 1890, s. 149
S. 203 amended by	..	Act 3 of 1894, s. 7
S. 212 amended by	..	Act 3 of 1894, s. 7
S. 214 amended by	..	Act 8 of 1882, s. 6
S. 214 repealed in part by	..	Act 10 of 1882
S. 216 amended by	..	Act 10 of 1886, s. 23
Ss. 216-A and 216-B inserted by	..	Act 3 of 1894, s. 8
Ss. 222 and 223 amended by	..	Act 27 of 1870, s. 8
S. 225-A substituted by	..	Act 10 of 1886, s. 24 (I)
S. 225-B substituted by	..	Act 10 of 1886, s. 24 (I)
S. 230 amended by	..	Act 19 of 1872, s. 1
S. 230 amended by	..	Act 6 of 1896, s. 1 (I) and (II)
S. 263-A added by	..	Act 3 of 1895, s. 2
Ss. 292 and 293 substituted by	..	Act 8 of 1925, s. 2
S. 294 substituted by	..	Act 3 of 1895, s. 3

S. 294-A inserted by	..	..	Act 27 of 1870, s. 10
S. 295-A inserted by	..	..	Act 25 of 1927, s. 2
S. 304-A inserted by	..	..	Act 27 of 1870, s. 12
S. 307 amended by	..	..	Act 27 of 1870, s. 11
S. 307 Illustration (c) amended by			Act 12 of 1891 (Schedule)
S. 309 amended by	..	..	Act 8 of 1882, s. 7
S. 335 amended by	..	..	Act 8 of 1882, s. 8
S. 366 amended by	..	..	Act 20 of 1923, s. 2
Ss. 366-A and 366-B inserted by	..	..	Act 20 of 1923, s. 3
Ss. 372 and 373 amended by	..	..	Act 18 of 1924, ss. 2 to 4
S. 375 amended by	..	..	Act 10 of 1891, s. 1
S. 375 amended by	..	..	Act 18 of 1924, s. 4
S. 376 amended by	..	..	Act 29 of 1925, s. 3
S. 410 amended by	..	..	Act 8 of 1882, s. 9
S. 410 repealed in part by	..	..	Act 8 of 1882 and Act 12 of 1891 (Schedule)
S. 435 amended by	..	..	Act 8 of 1882, s. 10
S. 477-A added by	..	..	Act 3 of 1885, S. 4
Ss. 478 to 489 substituted by	..	..	Act 4 of 1889, s. 3
Ss. 489-A to 489-D inserted by	..	..	Act 12 of 1899, s. 2
Ss. 490 and 492 repealed by	..	..	Act 3 of 1925, s. 2 and Schedule
S. 505 substituted by	..	..	Act 4 of 1898, s. 6
S. 505 amended by	..	..	Act 10 of 1927, s. 2 and Schedule 1
In so far as this Code is inconsistent with the Sind Frontier Regu- lations, 1872, it is superseded by that regulation in the Sindh Frontier District by
	..	..	Reg. 5 of 1872, s. 11

TABLE OF CASES CITED

VOLS. I & II.

	PAGE		PAGE
A		Abdul Kadiri v Abdul Kasim 137 I. C.
A v. B , 27 L. R. Ir. 608.	77	(C.) 872	947, 1474
Aaron's Reefs v. Twiss , (1896) A. C.	1432	Abdul Kadir , 3 A. 279 F. B.	701
273	512	Abdul Kadir , 9 A. 452	784
Abas , 26 C. 537	657	—20 M. 8	417
A. B. , 7 N. L. R. 53	1607	—3 A. 279, F. B.	701
Abaji Ramchandra , 15 B. 189 1607, 1608, 1609	1607	—20 C.W. N. 1267, 35 I.C.	1502
Abaji Ramchandra , 16 B. 165	997	981, 17 Cr. L. J. 421	197
Abalu Das , 28 C. 571	599, 597	Abdul Karim , 58 I. C. (A.) 158	1151
Abas Khan , (1883) P. R. No. 30.	1140	Abdul Karim , (1930) O. 505	419, 411
Abas Mirza 42 B. 396	167, 169, 174, 1562, 1572	—4 C. 10	621, 628
Abazi Bhusan , 15 C. W. N. 265	1210	—v. Bullen, 5 A. 385	154
Abbas Ali 25 C. 512 F.B.	1199	—v. Bullen, 6 A. 385	331, 333
Abbas Bi , (1911) 2 M. W. N. 379	1422	—(1892) S. J. L. B. 650	14 A. L. J. 417, 36 I. C.
Abbi Reddi , 17 M. 402	258	148	1262
Abbott , 1 Den C. C. 273	1351	Abdul Kala , (1889) B. U. C. 553	1416
Abbulu , (1909) 7 M. L. T. 77	245	Abdul Khada , 20 M. 8	417
Abdool , 10 R. 23-A	113	Abdul Khadar v. Meera Saheb , (1892)
Abdul Azeez 7 W. R. 59	1723	15 M. 224	1582
Abdul Azziz v. Fazal Rahman , 113	1412	Abdulla , 71 I. C. (L.) 998	233
I. C. (R.) 816	403	Abdulla , 136 I. C. (L.) 715	992, 1542
Abdool Hossein , 1 W. R. 48	210	Abdulla , 33 P. L. R. 382	1031, 1597
Abdool Karim 4 C. 10.	1650	—63 I. C. (L.) 865	637, 636
Abdool Wadood , 31 B. 292 (298)	1423, 1429, 1436, 1459	—17 A. L. J. 200, 49 I. C. 776.	531
Abdoor Rahman , 7 W. R. 37		Abdulla (Nawab) , (1914) P.R. No. 31, 25
Abdul Ahob , 1882 A.W. N. 6	1273	I. C. 522 (524)	1034
Abdul Ali v. Net Ali , 27 C. L. J. 228,	1031, 1273	Abdulla Jan , (1905) P. R. No. 37	253
44 I. C. 350, 19 Cr. L. J. 334	551	—(1890) P. R. No. 15	428
Abdul Alim , (1927) A. 105	1476, 1499	Abdul Latif , 10 B. 186	1391, 1411
Abdul Aziz , (1888) A. W. N. 179	1258	Abdul Majid v. Krishnalal Nag. 20,
—(1895) B. U. C. 745	1495	C. 724	653, 696, 697
Abdul Biswas v. Khater Mondul , 4	733	Abdul Malik , 52 M. 795	259
C. W. N. 190		—(1903) P. L. R. No. 14	816
Abdul Ghani Sulaman , (1898) P.J.L.B.		Abdul Rahaman , 9 C. L. J. 432, 2 I. C.
593	1585	593	1067
Abdul Gafar , 6 L. 28	1178	—16 B. 580	1110, 1117, 1118
Abdul Ghani v. Azizul Huq 99 I. C.	1585	—(1899) 1 Weir 218	800
324, (1927) L. 51 263, 383, 409, 1027 2608	1002	—4 M. L. W. 556, 36 I. C.
—v. Azizul Haq, 39 C. 409	1745	142, 17 Cr. L. J. 462	1767
(418)	499	Abdul Rahaman , (1895) B. U. C. 763	205
Abdul Ghafoor , 43 A. 225	1570	Abdul Rahiman , (1896) B. U. C. 852	1030
—23 C. 896 154, 282, 627, 619, 791, 1133	728, 730, 732, 735, 737	Abdul Rahiman , 4 M. L. W. 556, 36
Abdul Ghani , 76 I. C. (P.) 186	1412	T. L. 142	1767
Abdul Gafoor 43 A. 225	672	—Sahib, (1914) M. W. N.
Abdul Hakim 3 A. 253	1298	498, 24 I. C. 175	787
—v. Richander, 3 A. 815	756	Abdul Rahaman , (1928) S. 49	1473
Abdul Hamid , 2 C. 134	739, 735	—(1902) I. L. B. R. 153..	874
—13 C. 349		—21 M. L. J. 766, 11. I.
Abdul Hasan , 1 A. 497		C. 241; 12 Cr. L. J. 377	1650
Abdul Hossein , 1 W. R. 48		—(1916) P. W. R. 17, 33 I.C.
Abdul Jamal , (1913) P. W. R. 13, 18 I. C.		630	1236
667		Abdul Rahim , 130 I. C. (Pat.) 796	1458
Abdul Kadar , 3 B. H. C. R. 43		Abdul Rahiman , 36 I. C. (M.) 142	359
A Ler 9 I. C. (Sindh) 421		Abdul Rashid , 12 A. L. J. 104, 22 I. C.
Abdul Hakim Khan , 59 C. 334		1005	193, 1591
		—(1929) A. 940	359

	PAGE		PAGE
Abdul Rashid, 16 A. L. J. 476, 46 I. C. 402, 19 Cr. L. J. 722	1634	Ahilya, 47 B. 47, (1923) B. 183	1020
Abdul Razack, (1895) P. R. 2	174, 1442, 1568	Ah Hein, (1893-1900) 385	236
— v. Gauri Nath, (1910) P. W. R. 4, 5 I. C. 714	1739, 1741	Ahmad, 11 W. R. (Cr.) 25	113
Abdulsalam (1935) A. 132	1326	Ahmad, 11 Pat. 523	500
Abdul Sikdar v. Mathu Singh, 5 C. W. N. 447	784	— 91 I. C. 541, (1926) L. 209	702
Abdul Sovan v. Jitendranath Datt (1933) C. 445	180	— Bepari, 84 I. C. 434, (1925) C. 578	1207
Abdul Wadood, 31 B. 293	210	Ahmada, (1905) P. L. R. 145	1400
Abdul Wahab, 76 I. C. 97	1032	— (1913) P. L. R. 250, 19 I. C. 707	1027, 1029
Abdul Wahid, 34 A. 93	1448	— (1914) P. R. 9, 27 I. C. 203	1419, 1446
Abdul Wahid Khan, 103 I. C. 559, (1927) C. 318	1693	— (1915) P. L. R. 4, 27 I. C. 219	1029
Abdul Wahid Ali, 21 A. L. J. 211, 71 I. C. 661	681	Ahmad Ally, 11 W. R. 25	679
Abdur Rahaman, (1896) B. U. C. 852	1030	Ahmad Hasham, 57 B. 329	529
— 7 W. R. 37	231, 232	Ahmad Shah, (1892) P. R. No. 10	823, 839
— 38 A. 664	1191	Ahmad Yar Khan, (1909) P. W. R. 1, 5 I. C. 602	1068
Abdus Sattar, 28 A. 461	908	Ahmad Din, (1927) L. 194, 100 I. C. 124	365
— 28 A. 464	908	Ahmed, 106 I. C. (C.) 350	1341
Abhi Miser, 27 C. 566	428, 516	Ahmed, L. L. J. 245	381
Abinash Chandra, 23 C. W. N. 385, 48 I. C. 678	1260	Ahmed, (1927) S. 108	518
Abinash Chandra Bhattacharjee, 11 C. W. N. 1046	1396	Ahmed Ali, 42 C. L. J. 215, 90 I. C. 534	1568, 1562
Abraham v. Abraham, 9 M. I. A. 195	1667, 1668, 1671, 1672	Ahmed Khan, (1898) B. U. C. 962 1221, 1222, 1223, 1226, 1227	738
Abdul Hasan, 1 A. 497	735	— (1904) P. L. R. 397, 1 Cr. L. J. 957	795
Aburba Krishn, 35 C. 154	469	Ahone Akong, 9 B. H. C. R. 356	656, 658, 676
Acharjee, 1 M. 224	972	Aijaz Husain, 38 A. 506	629, 630, 790
Achi, (1882) 1 Weir 223	846	Aiman, 1 A. L. J. R. 162	691, 972
Adabala, 37 M. 237	1114, 1117, 1327	Aimona, (Mt.) 1 W. R. 43	309
Adaikalammai v. Raman, 32 M. 90	1581	Ainuddi, 34 C. L. J. 515	972
Adams, 22 Q. B. D. 66	1694	Aishen, 5 L. L. J. 78	1029
Adams v. Coleridge, 1 T. L. R. 84	1749	— (1920) P. L. R. 107	1028
— 3 C. & P. 600	1275, 1407	Aiyagiri, (1912) M. W. N. 545, 14 I. C. 603, 13 Cr. L. J. 251	1613
Adalut, (1866) P. R. No. 69	1034	Aiyannagowd, (1881) 1 Weir 507	1495
— v. Adams, 1 P. & D. 333	338	Aiyavu, 9 M. 61	1025
— R. & R. 225	1264	Ajita, 9 A. L. J. 565, 10 I. C. 23	1334, 1340
Adam Ali, 31 C. W. N. 314, (1927) C. 324	189, 193, 361	Ajodhya, 54 I. C. (Pat). 992	170
Adam Ali, 100 I. C. (C.) 718	192	Ajudhi, 2 O. L. J. 463 ; 30 I. C. 449	1039
Addaita Bhuia v. Kali Das De, 12 C. W. N. 96	157, 503, 626	— 17 A. 120	201, 256, 1784
Ademma, 9 M. 369	1076, 1078	— 2 A. 644	1545
Aden, 12 Cox, 512	1372, 1378	Ajudhia Prasad, (1928) A. 752	547, 548
Adhar Midday, 5 C. W. N. 391	369, 621	Akba, 4 B. H. C. R. 6	800, 801
Adhika, 1 C. P. L. R. 25	915	Akbar, (1924) C. 449	512
Adho, 86 I. C. 961, (1925) S. 257	703	Akbar Ali, 72 I. C. 949	760, 763
Adil Mahomed, 8 C. L. J. 561	1008	— 26 P. L. R. 733, (1925) L. 614	1203
Adin Deo, 5 A. 532	1571	Akbar Hossain, 89 I. C. 398, (1925) M. 294	1598
Adivigadu, 1 M. 171	1391	Akbar Kazee, 1 W. R. 21	1233
Administrator-General v. Premlal, 22 C. 788, P. C.	117	Akbar Khan, (1882) P. R. 40	1683
Administrator-General of Madras v. Anandachari, 9 M. 466	1670, 1671	Akbar Momin, 6 C. W. N. 202	1131
Admiralty Case, 6 coke, Rep. Pt. XIII, Page 51	118	Akhoy Kumar v. Jagat Chunder, 27 C. 925	554, 1165
Adolph Bjornsen, 10 Cox. 74	134	Akhil Chandra De, 22 C. 1004	1597, 1582
Adu Shikdar, 11 C. 635	1019, 1020	Akhtiar, 6 S. L. J. 143, 19 I. C. 508	707
Afridi, (1880) P. R. 9	1333, 1339	Akidullah, 5 S. L. R. 263, 15 I. C. 808	887, 1486
Afiruddi, 52 I. C. (C.) 485	361, 362	Aklumian, (1928) Pat. 405	511
Agha Muhammad Yusuf, 18 A. 88	164, 1250	Akshoy v. Rameswar, 43 C. 1143	1533, 1536
Agnew v. Jobson, 13 Cox. 623	1757	Alabaksh, (1891) P. R. 16	1689
Agra, (1914) P. R. No. 37, 27 I. C. 833	1115	Alagu Kone, 16 M. 421	664
Ahad Shah, (1918) P. R. (Cr.) 18, 45 I. C. 150	157, 158	Alangamonjori v. Sonamoni, 8 C. 637	114
Ahcoug, 9 R. 601	629	Alagaraswami, 28 M. 304	170, 1239
		Alam Bibi, 137 I. C. (L) 259	1575
		Alawal, (1922) P. L. R. 19, 64 I. C. 731, (1922) Lah. 73	787

	PAGE		PAGE
Albel Singh, (1890) P. R. No. 32 ..	778	Amar Ali 93 I. C. 1050, (1926) N. 884 ..	1217
Aldons v. Cornwell, L. R. 3 Q. B. 573 ..	1567	Amarnath 5 A. 318 ..	282, 622, 631, 791
Alexander, Broadfoot Post, Cr. L. J. 154 ..	1004	Amarnath Dey v. Mohendra Nath, 16 C. W. N. 983 ..	1771
Alexander Pirie & Sons, (1892) 1 Ch. 135 ..	1633	Amarsang Jetha, 10 B. 506 ..	772, 773
Algoo Lal, 57 I. C. (A) 96 ..	615, 618	Amar Singh, 5 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 45 ..	205
Ali Ahmed, (1922) P. L. R. 2, 62 I. C. 327, ..	612	Amar Singh, (1917) P. W. R. 34 ..	915
Alibahai, (1888) B. U. C. 412 ..	618, 619	Amar Singh, (1928) O. 282 ..	1565
Alice de Waldborough's case, 1 Hale P. C. 26, ..	169, 308	Amarnath Singh (1928) O. 282 ..	1008
Ali Hasan, 28 A. 358 ..	1570	Amavasaya v. Mani Pollachi, 15 I. C. (M) 317 (1912) M. W. N. 395 ..	1515
Ali Hasan, 28 A. 213 ..	1570	Amba Prasad, 20 A. 55 F. B. ..	466, 474
Ali Hussain, 23 A. 806 ..	1277, 1280	Ambikacharan De (1933) C. 361 ..	507
Ali Kasim, 10 I. C. 929 ..	168	Ambika Prasad, 35 C. 820 ..	1598, 1600
Ali Khan, (1879) P. R. (Civil) 16 ..	1734	Ambika Lal, 35 C. 443 ..	375 500
Ali Kala (1891) B. de C. 553 ..	1416	Ambika Prasad 139 I. C. (A) 106, (1932) A 566 ..	633
Ali Mahamad, 9 R. 338 ..	1372	Ambika Singh, 1 P. 212 ..	574
Ali Mea, (1926) C. 1012 ..	389	Ameera, (1866) P. R. 12 ..	1006
Ali Mohamed, 1 I. C. (C.) 335 ..	243	Ameer Abbas Ali, 18 W. R. 17 ..	1297
Ali Muhammad, (1918) P. R. 10; F. B., 44 I. C. 330 ..	939	Ameer Khan, 6 B. L. R. 459 ..	392, 452, 483, 1160
Ali Mohamad, 9. R. 378 ..	1372	Amir Khan 6. B. L. R. 392 ..	1162
Ali Muhammad, 13 C. W. N. 418, 1 I. C. 335 ..	1372	—————12 W. R. 35 ..	1035
Ali Mirza, 51 C. 265 ..	193, 1328, 1330	—————17 W. R. 15 ..	406
Alingal Kunhinayan, 28 M. 454 ..	376, 377	Ameeruddeen, 12 W. R. 36 ..	638
Alison, 8 C. and P. 418 ..	1059, 1061	Amgad Bugeah, 2 W. R. 61 ..	1191 1196,
Alla Baksh, (1887) P. R. 9 ..	1524, 1527	Amiappa v. Mhd. Mustafa, 2 M. H. C. R. 443 ..	276
Alladin, 29 P. L. R. 59 ..	256	Amina, (1892) B. U. C. 607 ..	1091
Alla-ud-din, 52 I. C. (A.) 49 ..	228	Amina, 7 M. 277 ..	1217
Alladitta, (1882) P. R. 29 ..	1519 1522,	Amin Chand, (1893) P. R. No 8 ..	597
Alla Ditta, 4 A. L. J. 276 ..	194	Aminulla, 26 C. W. N. 536, (1922) C. 191 ..	512
Allah Baksh, (1890) P. R. No. 28 ..	585, 586, 591	Amir Ali v. Oakhan Momin, (1928) Pat. 574 ..	614
Allah Baksh, (1891) P. R. No. 16 ..	1693	Amir Ali Khan, 3 N. W. P. H. C. R. 133 ..	677
Allah Dad, 75 I. C. (L.) 731 ..	511, 1177	Amir Chand, (1878) P. R. 9 ..	1479
Allah Din, 73 I. C. (P.) 695 ..	1118	—————(1889) P. R. No. 24 ..	710
—————101 I. C. 451, (1927) L. 432 ..	1118	Amir Hassan, (1883) A. W. N. 167 ..	1709
Allah Wadhya, 123 I. C. (L.) 525 ..	814	Amir Jan, 7 N. W. P. H. C. R. 302 ..	586
Allah Wasaya, 112 I. C. (R.) 468 ..	673	Amir Khan (1886) B. U. C. 273 ..	643, 644
Allahwarayo, 10 S. L. R. 64, 35 I. C. 655 ..	672	Amir Singh, (1904) P. R. 29 ..	1752
Allen, 7 C & P. 153 ..	895	Amir Singh 144 I. C. (Pat.) 791 ..	1469
—————v. Ormond, 8 East 4 ..	890	Amrit Lal, 29 A. 25 ..	1374
—————v. Flood, 1898, A. C. 1 ..	162	Amritlal 42 C. 957 ..	444, 445, 446, 447
—————30 L. J. P. M. and A. 2 ..	1235	Amiruddeen, 3 C. 412 ..	731, 765, 766, 770
—————1 Roll, Abr. 54 ..	1712	Amiruddin, 24 Bom. L. R. 534, 67 I. C. 818 ..	548 555,
Allen v. Allen, 30 L. J. P. M. & A. 2. ..	1685	Ameeruddin Saleboy 24 B. 345 ..	399
Alli, 23 A. 209 ..	1753	—————40 C. L. J. 306, (1925) C. 217 ..	247
Allington, 9 T. L. R. 199 ..	1447	Amode Ali 58 C. 1228 ..	432
Allison, R. & R. 109 ..	1689	Ammaniammal, 7 Cr. L. R. (Mad.) 200 ..	399,
Allison and others, 16 Cox, 559 ..	477	Amolak Ram, (1918) P. L. R. 56, 43 I. C. 429 ..	1056
Alleston, 1 Hell. 167 ..	1713	—————51 I. C. 579 ..	663
Allgood, 3 C & P. 436 ..	1305	Amos, 20 L. J. M. C. 103 ..	674
Allpost v. Nutt, 14 L. J. C. P. 272 ..	929	Amra Nathu, (1890) B. U. C. 500 ..	1505
Allu, 45 A. 272 ..	801	Amrita Govinda, 10 B. H. C. R. 497 ..	1396
Allu, (1914) P. W. R. 35, 25 I. C. 982 ..	1406	————— ..	430,
—————86 I. C. 1007, (1923) L. 512 ..	1198	Amrit Sonar, 4 Pat. L. J. 525, (1919) Pat. 220, 51 I. C. 263 ..	431
Alludin Ahmed (1935) S. 7 ..	547	Ananda Laxman, 14 Bom. L. R. 504, 15 I. C. 803 ..	180, 817
Allpart v. Nutt, 14 L. J. C. P. 272 ..	929	Ananda Muttusami Aiyar, (1882) 1 Weir 284 ..	221, 1269
Alman, 5 Burr. 2686 ..	465	Anandappa Nadan, (1884) 1 Weir, 130 ..	1470
Almon, 20 St. Tr. 803 ..	476	Ananda Parhi, (1931) Pat. 242 ..	631
Alsop, 11 Cox 264 ..	667	Anandgir, 7 S. L. R. 128, 24 I. C. 599 ..	220
A. Lu, 9 I. C. (S.) 421 ..	..	Anandgir, 15 Cr. L. J. 511 ..	130
Aludomal, (1916) 9 S. L. R. 141, 32, I. C. 679 ..	791, 792	Anandi, 32 I. C. (A.) 838 ..	130
Alu Kala, (1891) B. U. C. 553 ..	1416	————— ..	1014, 1016
Alya Dhurma, (1870) B. U. C. 37 ..	1764
Aman, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 130 ..	1003
Amann v. Damn, 8 C. B. N. S. 602 ..	1746, 1749
Aman v. Damm, 3 C. B. N. S. 597 (602) ..	1744
Amanullah, 16 I. C. (C.) 165 ..	1271

	PAGE		PAGE
Anandi, 45 A. 320	312	Anon, (1889) 1 Weir 478	1431
Anand Kishore, (1930) L. 306	478	—C. & P. 459	1407
Anand Lall Beera, 10 C. 18	619	—(1865) 1 Weir 622	1763
Anand Rao, 17 Bom. L.R. 82, 21 C. 657.	1699	—1 Leach 7 Note (a)	400
	1707, 1754, 1755	Anookool Chunder Nundy, 27 C. 776	1618,
Anandrao Balakrishna, 17 Bom. L. R. 82,	210		1621
27 I. C. 657	210	Anta, 1 B. H. C. R. 101	1098
Ananga, 22 C. W. N. 478, 44 I. C. (C.)	352	Antakka, 24 M. 662	1083
	613	Anthow 22 P. C. (M.) 976	1598
Anantha Goundan, 15 M. L. J. R. 224	1751	Anthony, (1884) 1 Weir 230	1883
Anath Nath v. Mohendra, 16 C. W. N.	983, 15 I. C. 488	—Udayan, 6 M. 280	857
	1752, 1753, 1771	Antonio Depardo, 1 Taunt 26	20
Anath Nath Dey, 40 C. 281	1628	Antony, 33 M. 371	1672
Ananta Narayan (1933) M. 337	241	Ants Beg, 21 A. L. J. 844	1093
Anant Pandit, Modhu Sudan 26 C. 574	375	Anumantan, (1881) Weir 144	376
Anant Puranik, 25 B. 90	1784 1789,	Anunto, 14 B. L. R. 295 note	648
Anant Ram, 4 A. 293	670	—Rurnagat, 6 W. R. 57	349
—(1921) P. W. R. 8, 59 I. C.	550, 22 Cr. L. J. 118	Anwarkhan, 9 B. H. C. R. 172	243
	180, 1541	Anwar Khan, 23 Bom. L. R. 823, 63 I. C.	701, 705
Anant Vinayak, 25 B. 90	1781	146
Andal Shah, 86 I. C. 973, (1925) S. 306	1116	Anwar Khan, (1872) Bom. unrep Rul. 23rd.
Anderson, L. R. I. C. C. R. 161, 38 L. J.	(M. C.) 12	May
	137	Anwaruddin, (1917) 1 K. B 643
Anderson v. Gorie, (1895) 1 Q. B. 668	277,	Anwaruddin v. Fatheni Bai, (1927) M.
	1737	379	1745
Anderson, 7 W. R. 12	282, 620	Apalu, 1 R. 285	987
—2 M. & Rob. 471	1432	Appa v. Maricar, 43 I. C. (R.) 417, 19 Cr.
Andrew Gray, 26 L. J. P. 663	1735	L. J. 129	1750
Andrew v. Chapman 3 C. & K. 289	1732	Appadurai Iyer. 32 I. C. (M.) 158	1343
Andrews, 3 C. and K. 228	1733	Appasami v. Munisami (1884) 1 Weir
Andy Chetty, 2 M. H. C. R. 438	401,	225	849, 1446
	609, 659	Appaji, 21 B. 517	155, 550, 735
Angappa Ansar, (1892) 1 Weir 71	883	Appaji Narain, (1895) B. U. C. 764	563
Anga Valayan, 22 M. 15	1117	Appalsawmi, (1892) 1 Weir 441	205
Anglo-Swiss Condensed Milk Co. 31 Ch. D.	454 (458, 459)	Appa Malya, (1876) B. U. C. 110	715
	1625	Appanda, (1915) M. W. N. 275, 28 I. C.
Aniruddha 86 I. C. (C.) 475, (1925)	C. 913	159	1536
	189, 193	Appanna Hegade, (1899) 1 Weir 52	185, 409
Anis Beg, 21 A. L. J. 844	1093	Appasami, 12 M. 151	169
Anna Khan, 6 A. 83	252	Appayya. 14 M. 484	208, 600, 606
Anna Kumaru v. Muthupayal, 27 M. 551	1256	Appigadu, 23 M. 544 note	606
Anna Laxman 18 Bom. L. R. 289, 34 I. C.	973, 17 Cr. L. J. 253	Apurba Krishna Bose, 35 C. 141	463, 469
	1489	Aradhun v. Myan Khan 24 W. R. (Cr.) 7.	163,
Annamalai, (1914) M. W. N. 106, 22 I. C.	762		164, 169
	1257	Arayi, 7 M. 17	157
Annappa, 9 Bom. L. R. 347 (349)	447, 449	Araz Bebee, 2 W. R. 33	553
Annasami, 1 Weir 554	157, 167, 1614, 1615	Archer, 1 F. and F 351	908
—15 M. 41	1222	—R. and M. C. C 143	1401
Annawdin, 1 R. 218	792	Archibald George Eage Combe (1928)
Ann Coxhead, C. & K. 623	1091	C. 264	1398
Annoju, B. H. C. Cr. Rul. 27th April 1873	258	Aredshir Merwanjee, (1889) B. U. C. 484	1370
Anon, 3 Salk 328	1712	Arfan Ali, 44 C. 66	1257
Anon, (1638) Cro. Car. 516	1712	Arguanado, L. J. p. 449	1627
Anon 6 M. 96	563	Ariff Munshi, 18 C. W. N. 992, 22 I. C.,
Anon, 1 Weir 575	1708	(C.) 764	513, 514, 1331
—3 Leon 231	1711	Arjan Das, 76 I. C. 963 (1923) L. 340	1402,
—5 M. H. C. R. (App.) 5	1512		1414
—1 M. 55	136	Arjun, 1 B. H. C. R. 87	730
—(1871) M. H. C. R. 477	1438	Arjuna Bewa, 19 W. R. 32	1077, 1178
—3 M. H. C. R. (App.) 6	1366	Arjun Pramanik, 31 C. 664	1174, 1476
—3 M. H. C. (App.) 7	1667	Arjan Singh, (1930) L. 156	474
—6 M. H. C. R. (App.) 36	1474	Arjun Sute, 3 Pat. L. J. 106, 44 I. C. 737	626
—1 N. W. P. H. C. R. 298	1395	Arjun Singh, 53 A. 598	670
—1 Weir 31	235	Armuga Nadan, 1 Weir 79, 5 M 200 note	588,
—1 Weir (3rd. Ed.) 233	1250		1148
—1 Weir (3rd. Ed.) 357	1754	Arnold, 41 C. 1023 (1063, 1064) P. C...	898
—(1879) 1 Weir 15	253	Arnold v. Blakar 40 L. J. Q. B. 185	898, 1726
—(1880) Weir (3rd. Ed.) 269	1366, 1431
—(1880) 1 Weir 435 (454)	1220	Arnold's case, 8 St. Tr. 317, 16 St. Tr.	(764, 765)
—(1881) 1 Weir, 359, (362) F. B.	1221,	Arrayi, 7 M. 17	324
	1222, 1223, 1224		158

	PAGE		PAGE
Arscott, 6 C. & P. 408	1601	Athol, 1 Wm. Rob	374
Arshed Ali, 13 C. L. R. 125	1657, 1690	Atim Ali, 4 C. W. N.	500
Arshed Malla, 29 C. L. J. 325, 51 I. C. 685	1324	Atkinson, 2 East P. C.	673
Arton, (1896) 1 Q. B. 509 (517)	1612	Atmaram, 76 I. C. (N.)	29
Artur, 3 Pat. 549	364	Atnera, (1903) P. R. No. 31	229
Arumuga, 34 M. 547	1681	Attorney-General v. Brighton and Hove Co-operative Supply Association, (1900) 1 Ch. 276	901
Arumuga v Muthial (1933) M. W. N. 736.	205	Attorney-General v. Code (1900) W. N. 279	867, 901
Arunachala Achari, (1881) Weir 520	1519	Attorney-General v. Corporation of Nottingham, (1904) 7 Ch. 673	403, 864, 868
Arunachalam 36 M. 392	1327, 1328, 1601	Attorney-General v. Proprietors of the Bedford Canal. L. R. 2 Eq. 71 (79)	862-863
Arunachellam, 1 M. 164	1221, 1681	Attorney General v. Richmond, 1 L. R. 2 E. Q. 306 (311)	856
Arura, 1913 (P. R.) 10, 20 I. C. 596, 14 Cr. L. J. 426	184, 1442	Attorney-General v. Terry, L. R. 9 Ch. 423 (432)	900
Arura Mal, (1816) P. W. R. 30, 36 I. C. 154	1450, 1601, 1607	Attorney-General v. Tod Healty, (1897) 1 Ch. 560 (566)	900, 901
Aruz Sircar, 10 W. R. 29	1474	Attria, (1891) P. R. 9	981
Arzao Bebee, 2 W. R. 33	327, 328	Atwa Singh, (1926) L. 412	359
Asa, (1913) P. L. R. 325, 20 I. C. 992	367	Attiya, 9 Bom. L. J. (1923) R. 133	792
	371, 372	Atwood, 1 Leach 464	554
Asai, 5 B. H. C. O. C. J. 64	134	Au, (1883) P. R. 4	1389
Asa Mal, (1884) P. R. 1	1519, 1522	Audheen Roy, 14 W. R. 24	653
Asad Ali, 106 I. C. (Pat) 348	1240	Audal Shah, 86 I. C. 973 (1925) S. 306	702
Asatosh Mallick, 33 C. 50	1427	Aufar Singh, 17 C. W. N. 1213	1034
Asghar Ali, 6 A. 61	1193	Aung Do, (1886) S. J. L. B. 389	450
Ash, 2 Moo & R. 294	1090	Aung Ala, 9 R. 404	354, 450
Asha Gopal, (1897) B. U. C. 932	995	Aushi Bibi, 20 C. W. N. 512, 33 I. C. 828	1125
Ashan Ali, (1919) P. R. 11, 50 I. C. 830	779	Austin v. Dowling, 5 C. & P. 534	1153, 1154
Ashburner, 4 B. H. C. R. (A. C.) 150	439	Austin's case, 1 Vent. 189	890
Ashburton, (1859) W. and Br. 5	574	Australian Newspaper Co. v. Bennett, (1894) A. C. 287	1713, 1717, 1718
Ashley v. White, 1 Sm. L. C. (9th Ed.) 268 (274)	1817	Au Su, (1908) 4 L. B. R. 275	1257
Ashrof Ali, 5 C. 281	205	Autar, 47 A. 306	705
Ashrof Ali 6 A 129	779	Authoor, 24 I. C. (Mad.) 976	417
Ashton, 22 L. J. M. C. 1	927	Averani v. Abdul Rahim, 4 C. W. N. 201	742
Aston v Blagrane, 8 Mod. 270	1713	Avery, 8 C & P 596	1575
Ashutosh Mullick, 33 C. 50	1427, 1438	Avudayappa, (1923) M. W. N. 451, 74 I. C. 856, 24 Cr. L. J. 824, (1924) M. 40.	1533
Ashutosh v. Purnachandra, 36 C. L. J. 287	1753, 1771	A. We, (1900) 1 U. B. R. 291	992, 993
Asiruddin Ahmad, 8 C. W. N. 714, 1 Cr. L. J. 708	1002	Axtell, (1661) Keyling 13	269
Askur, (1864) W. R. 12	414	Aydross, (1922) M. W. N. 800	192, 517
Asmatulla Sirdar, 2 C. L. J. 621	596, 599	Aydros, (1923) M. 187	203
Asimuddin, 33 C. L. J. 19, 59 I. C. 204	1321	Aylesbury, (1866) 4 O'M & H 6	574
Asiruddin Ahmad, 8 C. W. N. 147	1001	Aylett, 1 T. R. 69	670
Asimuddin, 11 W. R. 15	1015, 1321	Ayre, 2 A and E 2	1712
Asomal (1884) P. R. No. 1.	1512	Ayya Annasamy, 25 M. 624, 4 M. H. C. (App.) 65	501
Aspinwall, 20 Q. B. D. 48	444	Ayyaswami, 47 M. L. J. 8	1748
Asrabuddin v. Kali Doyal, 19 C. W. N. 125, 28 I. C. 645	1601	Azakhani 169 I. C. (L.) 286	1370
Assistant Sessions Judge v. Ramammal 36 M. 387	1601	Azeemoola, (1867) P. R. No. 44	809
Asterley, 7 C. & P. 191	1423	Azibulla, 13 C. W. N. 422, 1 I. C. 287	658, 673, 677
Asteley's case, 2 East P. C. C. 16, S. 131, p. 729	1313	Azimooddeen, 11 W. R. 15	184, 1568, 1600
Aston, 8 Mod. 270	1713	Azizuddin, 27 A. 294	569
Asvini Kumar Roy, 10 C. W. N. 219	1409	Aziz Ahmad, 110 I. C. (L.) 236	1703
Ata Hussain, (1886) A. W. N. 41	1765	Azimuddy, 54 C. 237	1016
Attar Singh (1918) P. R. 9	370
Ata Muhammad, 5 L. L. J. 475	511
(1923) L. 692	511
Ataullah v. Azimullah, 12 A 494, F. B.	943
Atar Ali, 11 C. 79	739, 740
Attiya, 9 Bur. L. J. 19; 27 I. C. 67, (1923) R. 133	1245
Athimoolam v. Palaniyandi, (1920) M. W. N. 131, 54 I. C. 617, 21 Cr. L. J. 137	1478
Athinarayanasawmy Pillai v. Subbier, (1888) 1 Weir 505	1492
Atholone, (1880) 3 O'M & H 57	573

B

B v. C., (1908) P. R. 83, 4 I. C. 918	1750
—Cro. Car. 326	1711
Babaji, 17 B. 127	1365
—22 B. 769	633
—4 B. H. C. R. 16	1365
Baban Khan, 2 B. 142	764
Babe, (1881) B. U. J. 172	328

	PAGE		PAGE
Babiru, (1886) B. U. C. 312	1412	Baibaya, 7 B. 126	1474
Baboolum Hijraj, 5 W. R. 7	1111, 1125	Bai Ganga, 19 Bom. L. R. 56, 39 I. C. 308	1681
Babulan Hijrah, 5 W. R. 7	342, 968, 1010	Bai Jiba, 19 Bom. L. R. 823, 42 I. C. 754	1043
Baboo Moondu, 13 W. R. 23	1111	Baiji Kualet v. 36 C. 297	375
Babujan (Sheikh), (1923) C. 403	243	Baij Nath, 36 C. 296	500, 501
Babulal, 33 B. 213	157	Bajinath Dhanuk, 13 C. W. N. 677, 36 C. 296	1207
Baburam, 32 C. 775. 168, 169, 172, 173, 1439	361, 362, 511	Baijan Das, 72 I. C. (R.) 533, 24 Cr. L. J. 421	1207
—————17 C. L. J. 394, 19 I. C. 951.	514, 1334, 1415	Bajinath Ram v. Burgess, 5 C. W. N. 255	1425
—————19 C. 190	1426, 1428, 1430	Baij Natti, 1 O. L. T. 416, 25 I. C. 840	1192
Baburam Rai, 1 C. L. J. 469,	174, 1426	Bailey, 12 Cox. 56	1284
Babu Ram Rai, 32 C. 775	1139	—————4 F. & F. 342	1504
—————47 A. 606	890	—————R. & R. 341	1531
Babu Santu, 23 Bom. L. R. 358, 61 I. C. 52	1026	Bailey, 82 Vern. 107	1234
Babya, 1 Bom. L. R. 784	1720	Bailey v. Kalamazoo Publishing Co., (1879) 4 Ch. (Mich.) 251	1710
Bachcha, 6 I. C. (A.) 876	1333	Bailiffs of Romney Marsh v. Trinity House, L. R. 5 Exch. 204 (208)	894
Bachchu, (1930) O. 455	1590	Baillie, 8 Cox. 238	1191, 1193
Bacha Miah, (1891) 1 Weir 541	244, 512	Bainbridge v. Bainbridge, 4 Cox. C. C. 454	325
Bachu Mullah v. Sita Ram Singh, 14 C. 358	1309	Bai Rukshmani, 10 B. 430	1657
Backer's case, 1 Leach 200	1341	Bai Ratan, 10 B. H. C. R. 166	607
Bacliedta, (1916) P. W. R. 7, 32 I. C. 833	1673	Bai Shanbana v. Umrao, 50 B. 162 F.B.	1745
Badal Aurat, 19 C. 79	623	Baisakhi, (1888) 7 P. R. No. 38	723
Badam Singh, (1883) A. W. N. 197	1585	Baishtab Charan Das v. Upendra Nath Mitra, 3 C. W. N. 66	876
Badan Singh, 3 L. 373, (1923) L. 11	572	Baishtab Charan Shaha, 30 C. 95	1151
Badan Singh, (1928) P. 150	1376	Bajo Singh, 8 Pat 274	247
Badd, 45 A 288	279	Bajoo Singh, 26 C. 158 145,	156
Badger, 4 Q. B. 468	722	Baji, (1933) O. 163	1681
Badri, 52 I. C. (A.) 666	1314	Bajrangi, 38 C. 304	372
Badril Prasad, 44 A. 538	661	Baju, 9 B. 173	1486
Badri Prasad, 40 A. 35	1592	Bakar Halsana Dinobandhu, 3 B. L. R. (A. Cr.) 17, 12 W. R. 1.	1478
Badri Prashad, 35 A. 63	1040	Bakaullah Mallik, 31 C. 411	160, 1629
Bag, (1902) P. R. No. 29	1738, 1748	Bake, 3 Burr. 1731	1510
Baga Mahar, 76 I. C. (N.) 393, 25 Cr. L. J. 68	364	Baku, 24 B. 284	416
Bablu Ragula Bheemappa, 26 M. 249	629	Baker v. Pierce, 6 Mod. 23	1711
Badri Gopi, 5 Pat. 213,	621	Baker's Case, 1 Leach, 200	1309
Badri Gopi, 5 Pat. 215	1154	Bakhan, (1887) P. R. 60	1056
Badu Ibrahim, 42 B. 181	514	Bakhatilal, 116 I. C. (N.) 671, 849	1334
Bagri, (1916) P. L. R. 107, 36 I. C. 450.	324	Bakhshish Singh, 86 I. C. 826 (1925) L. 549	1041
Bagga, (1931) L. 276	1478	Bakhtawar (Mt.), (1882) P. R. 24	415, 1786
Bagiram Dome v. Ahar Dome, 15 C. 388	431	Bakhtawar, (Rep.) (1882) P. R. No. 24	402
Bag Shah, (1879) P. R. No. 3	1236	Bakhtawari, (1913) P. L. R. 328, 20 I. C. 1005	1090
Bagi, 143 I. C. (O) 73	228	Bakhtawar Lal, (1922) P. L. R. 51, (1922) L. 459	1759
Bahadur, (1881) P. R. 7,	993	Bakhtawar Singh, 3 L. L. J. 283, 67 I. C. 588, 23 Cr. L. J. 428	1456
—————(1935) Pesh. 78 (79)	228	Bakshali, 5 S. L. R. 136, 13 I. C. 220	672
—————(1886) P. R. No. 14	939, 940	Bakshi, 21 A. L. J. 805 (1924) A. 187	612
—————(1888) P. R. No. 34	259	Baksho, 24 S. L. R. 252, (1930) S. 211	1137
—————(1872) P. R. No. 41	1188	Bakshi Ram, 3 A. 201	653
—————Ali, 73 I. C. 510, (1923) L. 158	1017, 1578	Baku, 24 B. 287	402, 1785, 1787
Bahadur, 112 I. C. (L.) 215	320	Bakullah Mallick, 31 C. 411	1620
Bahadur, 9 L. 371,	361	Bala, (1895) B. U. C. 761	616
Bahadur Khan, 9 O. W. N. 1019	985	Bala, (1881) B. U. C. 160	707
Bahaduri, 99 I. C. 77, (1927) L. 63	369, 372	Balai Bauri, (1934) Pat. 603	985
Bahal, 28 A. 481, (1906) A. W. N. 28	611	Balabhai, 6 Bom. L. R. 516	1394
Baharalli, 58 C. 1065	187, 1203	Balakee Jolahed, 10 W. R. 9	363, 393, 1002
Baharuddin, 18 C. L. J. 578, 22 I. C. 187,	1625	Balakrishna, 17 B. 573	1715
Bahauallah, 31 C. 411	257	Balakrishna, 37 B. 666 15 Bom. L. R. 708	167, 1513, 1571
Bahawal, (1913) P. R. No. 17, 20 I. C. 1007	255	—————37 B. 666	1571
Bahawal, 21 I. C. 904	1161
Bahiraji, 1 B. H. C. R. 39	792
Bahubal Sircar, 10 C. W. N. 287	1681
Bahu Dhondi, 17 Bom. L. R. 75, 27 I. C. 837, 16 Cr. L. J. 213

	PAGE		PAGE
Balakrishna, 46 B. 592	802, 803	Bank of New South Wales v. Piper,
Balayya, (1894) 1 Weir 467 (468)	1385	(1897) A. C. 383 (389, 390)	177
Baldeo v. Mhd. Mamul Huq, 43 I. C.		Banks, 1 Esp. 144	263
(C.) 826	673	Banks and Fenwick, 26 C. L. J. 401, 45
Baldeo Prasad, 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. 187	1398	I. C. 113	801
Baldeo, (1926) O. 184	985, 1513	Bankes v. Allen, 1 Roll. Abr. 54	1712
Baldeo Prasad, (1906) A. W. N. 32	1204	Banku Behari, 20 I. C. 602	363
Baldeo Sahai, 2 A. 253, 399, 551, 1790, 1796		Banne, 24 O. C. 250, 64 I. C. 142, 22 255, 256,
Baldewa, 28 A. 372	130	Cr. L. J. 750	1784
Baldewa, (1906) A. W. N. 52	1411	Bannen, I. C. and R. 295	813
Bal Gobinda Shaha, 4 C. W. N. 309	1383	Bannessur Biswas, 18 W. R. 46	1594
Bali, (1888) B. U. C. 396	891	Banni, 2 A. 349	501, 1083, 1084
Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 22 B. 112	463, 466,	Bannister, v. Jatty 59 J. P. 793	1740
	468, 469, 470, 472, 474	Bannu Mal, 97 I. C. 960, (1926, O. 560)	1213
Balkaran, 89 I. C. 152, (1925) O. 423	759, 769	Bansi, 34 A. 210	1485, 1484, 1495
Balkarav, (1925) O. 423	733	Bansidhar, 74 I. C. 1054	733
Ball, 1 Camp 324	822	Bansi Lal, (1913) P. W. R. 36, 21 I. C. 461
Ball v. Ray, L. R. 6 Ch. 467	863, 886, 912	14 Cr. L. J. 595	1690
Ball, C. & M. 249	1421	Bansi Sheikh, 5 I. C. 469	1600, 1602
Ball, 7 C. & P. 429	1600	Banta Singh, (1930) L. 457	985
Balla, (1913) P. R. 3, 9 I. C. 208	1039	Bantu, 69 I. C. (P.) 439, (1923) L. 68	986
Ballia, (1914) P. L. R. 161, 25 I. C. 839	1196	Banwari Magatta, (1882) 1 Weir 483	1470
Balmakand Ram v. Ghansam Ram,		Banwari Lal, 49 A. 215	894
22 C. 391	1512, 1520, 1545, 1548,	Banwari, (1895) P. R. No. 38	282
	1549, 1550, 1553, 1780, 1788, 1835	Banwari Lal, (1914) P. R. No. 20, 22 I. C.
Balmokand, (1915) P. R. No. 17. 28 I.		748	179, 180
C. 738	444, 448	Ba Nyun, 7 L. B. R. 75, 22 I. C. 166	639
Balnath, 1 B. H. C. R. 95	1397	Baperam v. Goure Nath, 20 C. 474	727
Balok Khan, 4 S. L. R. 38	171	Bapu, (1864) B. U. C. 2	805, 1447
Balos, (1882) 1 Weir 419	1267, 1287	Bapuji Beacher, (1874) B. U. C. 81	638
Balraj v. Jagat Pal, 26 A. 393	114	Bapuji Dayaram, 10 B. 288	727
Balthasar, 41 C. 844	1368, 1370, 1373,	Bapu Naran, (1888) B. U. C. 401	681
	1374, 1375	Bapu Yadar, 11 B. H. C. R. 172	808
Balu, (1885) P. R. No. 7	727	Barada Kant Parmanik, 1 C. W. N. 75	627
Balunki, 1 C. P. L. R. 112	889	Barada Kanta, 25 C. W. N. 815, 66 I. C.
Balwant, 14 B. L. R. 41	244	1003	792
Bambridge v. Bambridge 4 Cox C. C.		Baradi, (1909) 3 S. L. R. 224	247
454	325	Barclay v. Parson, (1893) 2 Ch. 155
Balwant Singh, 1 C. L. J. 30, 23 I. C.		(164, 165)	928, 930
700	416, 760	Bardot v. The Augusta, 10 B. H. C. 110	134
Balwant Singh, (1918) P. R. No. 31, 48		Barendra K. Ghose, 52 C. 197 P. C.	115,
I. C. 865	416	186, 188, 189, 190, 191, 427,
Balya Dagdu, (1898) B. U. C. 952	1018	428, 451
Balya Somya, 15 B. 369	1396	Barendra, 28 C. W. N. 170 F. B.	1027
Baman, (1903) P. R. No. 1	805, 807	Barindra, 37 C. 457	447, 448, 451
Bamard, 7 C. & P. 784	1444	Barham Sahib (1930) M. 671	548
Bamford v. Turnley, 31 L. J. Q.B. 29, 862, 867		Barjya, (1895) B. U. C. 797	448
—3 B. & S. 62	855	Barkat, 19 A. 200	654
Banaji, 2 Bom. L. R. 621	1461	Barkat, 60 I. C. 54	249
Bana Panja, 17 B. 260, F. B.	247, 528	Barkat Ram, (1911) P. L. R. 158, 10 I. C.
Banarsi Das, 9 L. 491	1629	121	672
Bande Ali, (1927) 29 Cr. L. J. 68	691, 1301	Bakshi, 21 A. L. J. 805, (1924) A. 187	612
Bandhu, 8 A. 51 164, 915, 1352, 1411, 1491		Barkatulla, (1887) P. R. 32	981, 982, 990
—81 I. C. 436	1019	Barkatullah v. Sadhu, 10 A. L. J. 429
Bandhu, (1894) B. U. C. 689	1541	17 I. C. 791	729, 735, 981
Bandhu Singh 6 Pat. 794	1519, 1535	Barke v. Skipp, 45 M. L. J. 754	1753, 1754,
Bandhu, v. Naba, 15 B. 238	1147		1757
Bandhu Ebrahim, 42 B. 181	1154	Barley v. Edmonds, (1895) 1 T. L. R. 537	581
Banee Madhub, 1 W. R. 29	1380, 1230	Barlow v. Terret, (1891) 2 Q.B. 107	876
Baneerji v. Anukul, 55 C. 85	1745	Barnard, 7 C. & P. 784	570, 1432
Banee Madhub Ghose, 8 W. R. 1.	1389	—43 J. P. 127	1761
Banga Hadua, 11 C. L. J. 270, 5 I. C.		Barnes, 20 L. J. M. C. 34	1266
771	504	Barnes v. Akroyd, L. R. 7 Q. B. 474.	177, 271
Bangaru Asax. 27 M. 61	1681	Barnett v. Allen, 1 F. & F. 125	1717
Bandhu, (1895) B. U. C. 689	1550	—27 L. J. Ex. 412	1713
Baistab Charan Shaha, 30 C. 95	1151	Baroda Kanta Sarkar, 30 I. C. (Cal.) 449	652
Bankan Singh, 60 I. C. (O.) 679	519	Baronet and Allain, (1852) Dearsly 51	262
Bankataram, 28 B. 533	677	Barraclough Johnson, 8 Ad. & E 99	891
Bank of Bengal v. Mendes, 5 C. 654	1270	Barratt, 43 L. J. M. C. 7	1232, 1233
Bank of England v. Vagliano, (1891) A C		Barret, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 83	348
107	117	Barrett v. Flynn, (1916) 2 Jr. R. I.	935

	PAGE		PAGE
Barrow, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 156	1654	Behala Bibi, 6 C. 789	113
Barrow, 38 L. J. M. C. 20	1234	Beharee, 3 W. R. 23 (26)	113
Barrow v. Isaacs & Sons, (1891) 1 Q. B. 417	265	Behari Lal, 59 I. C. (A.) 335	592
Barrow-in-Furness, (1886) 4 O'M. & H. 77	572	Behari Mahton, 11 C. 106	504, 516
Barrow v. Lewellin, Hob. 62	1702	Behari, (1924) P. C. 126	521
Basammal, 26 I. C. 324	1031	Behari, (1883) A. W. N. 36	1709
Basanta v. Corporation, 15 C. W. N. 906, 11 I. C. 143	234	Behary Singh, 7 W. R. 3	185, 773, 1153
Basanta 94 I. C. (C) 236	398	Beja, (1914) P. R. 13, 26 I. C. 625	1340, 1337
Basanta Kumar Ghattak, 26 C. 49	1017	Bela Singh, (1916) P. L. R. 54, 34 I. C. 1004	1236
Basappa, 19 Bom. L. R. 535, 41 I. C. 160	718	Belfast, (1869) 10 & H	285
Basarat Lall, 27 C. 329	782, 783	Beli, 7 L. L. J. 525, (1925) L. 621	1041
Basava, 15 M. 75	1224	Bejoy Singh v. Commissioner, Income Tax, 60 C. 1029 P. C.	46
Bashikachari, (1883) 1 Weir 528	1457, 1521	Bell, 1 East 169	817
Bashir Ahmad, 22 O. C. 256, 54 I. C. 245, 21 Cr. L. J. 40	1399	—2 Moo. & R. 294	1090
Basiruddi, 21 C. 897	508	—C. C. 242	414
Basiruddin, 9 C. L. J. 257, 4 I. C. 48	1381	—Hensley, 3 Jones 131	335
Ba Shein, 13 Bur. L. T. 239, 64 I. C. 33, 22 Cr. L. J. 721	1457	—11 Ir. C. L. R. 413 (420)	1758
Basumati v. Budram Kolita, 22 C. 46	1738	Bellen Contre, (1891) 2 Q. B. 122	1372
Batakala, 26 M. 49	1513	Bellingham's case, Collis. Add. 636	324, 339
Batcha, (1913) M. W. N. 556, 18 I. C. 675	1031	Bembridge, 1 Salk. 380 Note (a)	563
Bateman v. Black, 18 Q. B. 870	854	Benarsidas, 4 L. L. J. 482, (1922) P. L. R. 53	1472
Batiram, 5 C. P. L. R. 23	854	Beni, 23 A. 78	1320, 1331
Batisa Singh, 140 I. C. (Pat.) 752	1164	—12 A. L. J. 349, 25 I. C. 352	917
Batter, (1895) 1 Q. B. 797	667	Beni Madhub, 30 C. 123 F. B.	732
Batwa Khan, 12 Bur. L. J. 222, 52 I. C. (R.) 59, 20 Cr. L. J. 571	1787	Beni Madhay, 25 C. 275	902
Baukan Singh, 60 I. C. (Oudh) 679	519	Beni Pershad, (1878) P. R. No. 30	235
Bavaji, (1875) B.U. C. 96	1875, 1419	Benjamin, 43 L. J. C. P. 166	854, 861
Bavuri Magata, (1882) 1 Weir 483	1470	—L. R. 9 C. P. 400	863
Bawaji, (1872) B. U. C. 63	1046	Benjamin Bannen, 2 Moody 309	1608
Bawool Chander Biswas, 1 W. R. 36	552	Bennett, 4 F. & F 405	1093, 1094
Bawool Manjee, 8 W. R. 32	1287	—14 Cox. 45	1674
Baxendale v. McMurray, L. R. 2 Ch. 790	886	—Bell C. C. 1	299
Bayer v. Bard, (1898) 25 R. 1142, 35 Sc. L. R. 913	1627	—v. Deacon, 2 C. B. 628	1749
Bayne, 8 Bom. L. R. 414	136, 137, 889, 216, 1321	Benito Lopeiz, Christian, Sattler (1858) 7 Cox. 431	134
Bazlur Rahman (1929) C. 1.	317, 320, 324	Bentley, 4 Cox, C. C. 406	292
Bazand Mawaz, 3 L. 213, 88 I. C. 620, (1922) L. 380,	1193	Bepin Behari, 11 C. W. N. 176	501
Bazid, 27 A. 298	1512, 1522	Bepin Behari, 13 C. L. R. 110	259
Bazu, 8 W. R. 47	244	Bernard Schedmaizig, 2 Tay. Med. Jur., p. 600	319
Beajaddin, 18 C. W. N. 1245, 26 I. C. 173	502	Bernadiston, Tay. Rep. 291	277
Beale, 35 L. J. M. C. 60	1233	Bernina, 13 App. Cas. 1 (17), 12 P. D. 58	892
—v. Dairy Supply Co., Ltd. 15 T. L. R. 484	1738, 1752	Berriman, 6 Cox. 388	1089
Beaumont v. Hastings, Cro. Jac. 240	1713	Berry Henderson, L. R. 5 Q. B. 296	241, 248
Beardsall, 1 F. & F 529	1566	Best, 2 Moo C. C. 124	749
Beatty v. Gillbanks, 9 Q. B. D. 308	498, 500, 502	Bethan Chetti, (1881) 1 Weir 242	861
Beauchamp v. Moore, 26 M. 43	1752	Bethell, 38 Ch. D. 220	1664
Beaumont, Dears, C. C. 270	1363, 1362	Betts, 20 Q. B. D. 771	177
—5 S. L. R. 270, 1 I. C. 813, 13 Cr. L. J. 541	1683	—15 W. R. (Cr.) 76	537
Bechoo Saoni 19 W. R. 35.	992, 993, 997, 1137	Beverley, (1869) W & Br. 188	574
Beckett, 1 M. & Rob. 526	1488	Beverey's case, 4 Coke 124	312
Bedoo Noshyo, 12 W. R. 11	678	Beyor v. Bard, (1898) 25 A. 35	1142, 1627
Beechey, (1916) 85 L. J. (P. C.) 32	468	88 Sc. L. R. 913	1193
Beegum Mahtoon, 12 W. R. 37	724	Bezand Mawaz, 3. L. 213, 88 I. C. 620	670
Begarayi, 6 M. 373	309	Bhabani Shankar, 5 B. H. C. R. 55,	1510
Bega, (1916) P. L. R. 105, 37 I. C.	491	Bhabani Shelhankar, 11 B. H. C. R. 3..	1333
Behari, 120 L. J. 339, 98 I. C. 155 (1925) O. 452	1404	Bhabuti, 19 A. L. J. 725, 63 I. C. 455	1025
		Bhadu, 19 A. 119	1364
		Bhaga, (1897) B. U. C. 9289	154
		Bhagai Dafadar, 2 B. L. R. 21 (F. B)	627
		—10 W. R. 43	1271
		Bhagavan	1085, 1086
		Bhagan, (1879) P. R. 4	1425
		Bhedwar v. Roo	1330
		Bhan Singh, 137 I. C. (L.) 196

	PAGE		PAGE
Bhagat Singh, 5 P. L. R. 372.	989, 990, 1394	Bharat Bipuri, 25 C. W. N. 670, 62 I. C.	1056
	1539	414	502
Bhagava Giryappa, 19 Bom. L. R. 54,	1069, 1142	Bharat Sing, 1612 B. 1044	1328
38 I. C. 1003	1592	Bharjya, (1895) B. U. C. 797	650
Bhagavatty, 17 I. C. (M.) 798	710	Bharma Ningappa, 11 B. 702 F. B.	1406
Bhagawat Prasad Singh, 14 C. L. J. 120	598	Bharos, 21 A. L. J. 836	1683
11 I. C. 794	1512	Bhasavachuri, (1889) 1 Weir 569	1681
Bhagwant Rao, 90 I. C. (N) 145	948	Bhavani, 38 A. 278	256, 1784
Bhagwanna v. Kedari, 25 B. 202 (226)	884	Bharosa, 17 A. 123	474
Bhagga, (1880) B. U. C. 148	1229, 1734	Bhasker, 8 Bom. L. R. 421	606
Bhagi, 2 Bom. L. R. 1078	1090	Bhardul Kurmi, 149 I. C. (A.) 1661	733, 738
Bhagirath, 13 C. W. N. 1087	1229	Bhawan Sahai, 13 L. 568	1274
3 A. 383	1229	Bhava Chela, (1886) B. U. C. 227	801
(1900) A. W. N. 133	1255, 1345, 1518	Bhavani Mudaliyar, (1888) 1 Weir 216	1584
Bhagiram Dome, 15 C. 388, (1878)	625, 628	11 B. H. C. R. 3	1488
1 Weir 384	1385	Bhawal Singh, (1891) P. R. 7	728
Bhaga Mana, 52 B. 286	1014	Bhawani Prasad, 4 A. 182	1271
Bhag Singh, (1876) P. R. 24	625	Bhawani, 43 I. C. (Pat.) 404, 19 Cr. L.	267, 290
69 I. C. 449	1364	J. 116	1425
Bhagtidas, 5 B. H. C. R. 51	1683	Bhawoo, 12 B. 377	940
Bhagu, (1897) B. U. C. 928	1014	Bhewar v. Rao, 27 C. W. N. 919, 74 I. C.	995
Bhagu, 17 Bom. L. R. 75	1271	76, 24 Cr. L. J. 748	318, 319
Bhagwana, 17 A. L. J. 1095	566	Bheema Goundan, (1891) 1 Weir 256	233
16 A. L. J. 383, 45 I. C. 513,	1768	Bhekye, 1 W. R. 46	170, 1259
19 Cr. L. J. 609	1768	Bheleka Aham, 29 C. 493	1526
Bhairo Prasad, 50 A. 377	1137	Bhiba, (1891) B. U. C. 566	236
Bhagwati Prasad, 74 I. C. (L.) 69	1443, 1792	Bhicajee, (1869) B. U. C. 22	1738
Bhagwan Das, 23 A. L. J. 93, 86 I. C. 79,	1033,	Bhigwanna, 16 A. L. J. 353, 45 I. C.	613
(1925) A. 318	1118	(A.) 513	732, 735
Bhagwan Chhagan, 17 Bom. L. R. 69,	1536	Bhiharao, B. U. C. 979	1648
27 I. C. 552	775	Bhikaji, (1888) B. U. C. 387	985
Bhagwan Dass, 2 A. L. J. R. 718	1536	Bhikaiji, (1877) B. U. C. 124	1699, 1707
Bhagwan Din, 30 A. 568.	1536	Bhika Lala, (1890) B. U. C. 525	1711
16 A. L. J. 501, 46 I. C. 150	1271	Bhika Ram, 7 L. 80	846, 848
19 Cr. L. J. 704	1027	Bhikari, 150 I. C. (O.) 819	1744
Bhagwan Din, (1929) A. 935	1436	Bhikh Chand, 96 I. C. 116	233
Bhagwan Din, 46 I. C. (A.) 160	516	S. 258	1394, 3094
Bhagwan v. Prem Mashi, 43 I. C. (Pat.)	166	Bhikam Chand, 98 I. C. 124	594
404, 19 Cr. L. J. 116	1534	Bhikka Mal, (1883) A. W. N. 224	115
Bhagwan Kaur, (1911) P. W. R.	1258, 1259	Bhikamber Singh, 15 C. 264	708
16, 11 I. C. 596 F. B.	944	Bhilya, (1891) B. U. C. 556	589
Bhagwan Kesseb, 4 Bom. L. R. 76	371	Bhima, 38 A. 311	648
Bhagwan Singh, (1901) P. R. No. 4 F. B.	1744	Bhirgu Singh, 49 A. 205	1321
Bhagwant v. Kedari, 25 B. 202	1209	Bhista, 1 B. 308	985
Bhag Chand 58 B. 498	630	Bhitto Kahar, (1862) I. J. (O. S.) 123	1428, 1429
Bhagwant Rao, (1925) N. 50	681	Bhobuneshwar Dutt, 3 C. 621	728
Bhagwat Saran, 14 A. L. J. 399, 35 I. C.	1135	Bhogta, 14 B. L. R. 294, F. B.	1225
167	640	Bhoja, 6 W. R. 54	381
Bhagya, (1880) B. U. C. 148	1276	Bhojo, 152 I. C. (S.) 1032	210, 1682
Bhai Lal Chowdhury, 29 C. 417	824	Bhojraj, 9 S. L. R. 97, 30 I. C. 992.	1741
Bhai Shankar v. Wadia, 2 Bom. L. R.	1688	Bhokteram v. Heera Kulita, 5 C. 181	1662
3. F. B.	1689	Bhola Sardar, 138 I. C. (C.) 111	195, 520, 967, 1116
Bhajan Das, 72 I. C. (P.) 533, 24 Cr. L.	228	Bhola Mahto, 9 C. W. N. 125 (127)	595
J. 421	502	Bhola Nath, 51 C. 488	1341
Bhaktidas, 5 B. H. C. R. 51	257	Bholanath, 113 I. C. (A.) 213	1013
Bhakoas Tutum, 7 W. R. 13	1395	Bhola Singh, 26 Bom. L. R. 211	186
Bhala Chula, 1 B. H. C. R. 17		Bhola Singh, 29 A. 282	1117
Bhalchandra Randine, 31 Bom.		Bholonath, (1883) A. W. N. 109	233
L. R. 1151		Bholu, 23 A. 124	1199
Bhami Luxumon, (1910) 8 M. L. T. 418,		Bhomonee Abum, 8 W. R. 78
8 I. C. 145		Bhondu Das, 7 Pat. 758
Bhana, (1910) P. R. 32, 8 I. C. 1150, 12		Bhondu Das, 113 I. C. (Pat.) 676
Cr. L. J. 50		Bhoobun, 11 W. R. 89
Bhan Singh, 124 I. C. (P.) 688		Bhoodea, 8 W. R. 3
Bhandaram, 61 I. C. (C.) 652, 22 Cr. L. J.		Bhuban Mohan Banerjee v. Tansuk Roy
412		6 C. W. N. 34
Bhandha Singh 6 Pat. 794		Bhugwan Ahir, 8 W. R. 56
Bhanga Singh, (1900) P. R. No. 21		Bhujabali, 14 Bom. L. R. 583, 16 I. C.
Bhanwar, 42 A. 136		509
Bhara Muli, (1871) P. R. 37		Bhujang, (1924) 10 O. A. L. R. 439
		Bhula, (1893) B. U. C. 632

	PAGE		PAGE
Bhultun Rugwan, 12 W. R. 49	1018	Bishan Singh, 74 I. C. (L.) 534, 24 Cr. L. J. 790	1537
Bhndarmal, Ramachander	1349	Bishendharee Kahar, 7 W. R. 100	314, 984
Bhungee Aheer, 2 W. R. 5	1191, 1198	Bisheshar, 9 A. 615	246
Bhuan Kahar, 83 I. C. 701, (1925) Pat. 326	730	Bisheshar, 16 A. 124	743, 744
Bhunun Kasa, 9 C. 53	1578	Bisheshar Dayal, (1905) 25 A. W. N. 93	1568
Bhup Singh, 8 C. W. N. 305	516	Bishna, (1922) A. I. R. (Lah.) 405, 73 I. C. 517	514
Bhupendranath Singh Sinha 60 C. 1316	1349	Bishoo Barrick, 16 W. R. 77	730, 732
Bhuran (Mt.), (1878) P. R. 5	1085, 1086	Bishoo Chunder, 10 W. R. 27	276
Bhure Mal, 45 A. 526	641	Bishoo Manjee, 9 W. R. 16	1413
Bhusan Parui v. Denonath Banerjee, 20 W. R. 15	1255, 1580	Bishop, 5 Q. B. D. 259	177, 271
Bhutan, 16 A. 472	1053, 1054	Bishop v. Latimer, 4 L. T. 775	1732
Bhutia, 7 N. W. P. H. C. R. 295	1227	Bishop v. North, 11 M. & W. 418	386
Bhyroo Dyal, 3 B. L. R. (A. Cr.) 4	276	Bishwa Nath v. Keshab, 7 C. W. N. 74	1701
Bibhuti Bhusan, 46 A. 515	917	Bishwanath v. Keshab, 30 C. 402	1754
Bibi (Mt.), (1882) P. R. 43	1673	Bissa v. Misser, 41 C. 261	1700
Bichitranand, 16 C. 667	112	Bissessur Roy, 11 W. R. 51	1350
Bichuk Aheer, 6 W. R. 5	246, 1483	Bissumbhar, 5 C. W. N. 108	115
Bidha, 21 A. L. J. 914	252, 253	Bissuram, 3 C. L. R. 410	1684
Bidhudananda, 47 C. 71	1614	Bisla, 1 B. 308	115
Biggs v. G. E. Ry. Co., 16 W. R. (Eng.) 908	1722	Bisu Haldar v. Probhat Chunder, 6 C. L. J. 127	370
Bihari, (1883) A. W. N. 36	1708	Bisukhi, (1871) P. R. 29, 41 I. C. 987	180
Bikram Singh 1929 A. 535	999, 552	Bithal Nath, 16 O. C. 371, 22 I. C. 753	639
Bikka Mal, (1883) A. W. N. 224	848	Blackburn's Case, 2 East P. C. 16, S. 128 p. 711	1310
Biku Koer, 5 C. W. N. 368	500	Blackham v. Pugh, (1846) 2 C. B. 611	1745
Billinghurst, 27 C. W. N. 821, (1924) A. I. R. (Cal.) 18	1447, 1448, 1784, 1792, 1375, 1382	Black v. Hunt, 2 Ir. L. R. 10	1748
Bimala Charan Roy, 35 A. 361	1375, 1382	Blades v. Higgs, 10 C. B. (N. S.) 713	908
Binderswari, 5 Pat. L. W. 101, 46 I. C. 413.	195, 406, 429	Blagg v. Stuart, 10 Q. B. 899	1740
Bingley, R. & R. 446	1031, 1597	Blake v. Pilford, 1 Moo & Rob. 189	1748
Binjhia, (1934) Pat. 536	857	Blake v. Stevens, 1 F. & F. 232	1701
Binks, 32 L. J. Q. B. 26	521	Bleasdale, 2 C. & K. 768	1487
Binod, 24 W. R. 66	1373	Bleo v. Harston, 3 Q. B. D. 454	927
Bipra Das, 12 C. W. N. 577	175	Blenkinsop, 1 Den. C. R. 276	835
Birajpal, 7 A. L. J. 181	1172	Bloomfield, C. & M. 537	1445
Birbal Khalifa, 30 C. 97	270, 892, 1048	Bluest v. Pipon, 1 Knapp. P. C. C. 60	125
Birchall, 4 F & F 1087	1530	Blumby v. Rose, 1 Roll. Abr. 73	1170
Bird, 9 C & P. 44	1512, 1534	Blundell v. Caterall, 5 B. & Ald. 268	125
Bird, 13 Pat. 268	1149, 1150	Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks Co., 11 Ex. 784	888, 1045
Bird v. Jones, 7 Q. B. 742 (746)	1158	Boardman, 2 M. & Rob. 147	189
Birdi Chand v. Darbari Jugaswal (1932) P. 276	629	Boddu Ramayya v. Chitturi, 28 M. L. J. 486, 29 I. C. 71	1601
Birendra Lal Bhaduri, 32 C. 22	1436, 1459	Bodhee Khan, 5 W. R. 79	329
Birendra Nath, 18 C. W. N. 1342, 27 I. C. 211	673	Bodhraj, 76 I. C. (K.) 105	992, 997
Birjoo Singh v. Khub Lal, 19 W. R. 66	500	Bodwin, (1869) O'M. & H. 124	573
Birraj, 17 C. W. N. 294, 18 I. C. 680, 14 Cr. L. J. 120	1443	Bohra Birbal, 65 I. C. (A.) 864	594
Birjubhukan, 69 I. C. (N.) 633, (1923) A. I. R. (Nag.) 100	511	Boidnath Singh, 3 W. R. 26	1281, 1287
Birkett, R. & R. 86	1578	Bokoo, (1864) W. R. 21, 3 M. H. C. R. (App.) 11	137
Birmingham, 8 B. & C. 29	1671	Balai Dey, 35 C. 361	792
Birmingham, and Gloucester Rly. Co. 2 Q. B. 47	900	Bolton, 1 Q. B. 66	276
Birmingham Water Works Co., 1. B. & S. 84	161	Bolton v. O'Brien, 16 L. R. Ir. Q. B. D. 97 (108)	1718
Birt., 5 C. & P. 154	509	Bomonce Abum, 8 N. R. 78	1013
Biru, (1890) P. R. 15	1020	Bomford v. Turnley, 3 B. & S. 62	855
Bisarkhi, (1917) P. R. 29	1267	Bonai, 38 C. 408	1332, 1334, 1336, 1337
Bishambar, 87 I. C. 962, (1925) O. 676	1374	Bonigiri Pottigadu, 32 M. 179.	407, 1332, 1335, 1336, 1340
Bishambhar Nath, (1926) O. 161	448	Bonkall, 9 Cox. 419	1287
Bishan Dyal v. Brij Behari; 145 I. C. (O.) 625	1512	Bonomally, 5 W. R. 32	735
Bishan Singh, (1929) L. 639	331	Bonomally Ghose, (1864) W. R. 8	1320
Bishandas, 5 L. L. J. 272, 71 I. C. 700.	249, 810	Bontein, R. & R. 260	1575
Bishankas, 27 A. 561	1428, 1429	Boober, 4 Cox. 272	816
Bishan Prasad, 37 A. 126	624	Boodah Das, (1866) P. R. 41	333
		Boodhoa, 9 W. R. 6 F. B.	228, 229
		Boodhun Ahir, 17 W. R. 32	674
		Booth, 12 Cox. 231	1195

	PAGE		PAGE
Booth v. Briscoe, 2 Q. B. D. 496	118, 715, 1191, 1729	Brinbadhur Putnaik, 5 W. R. 21	1369
Boronet's case, 1 E. and B. 1	1005	Brindaban v. Ishaquddin, 13 C. W. N. 550	1753
Borrow, 3 B. & Ald. 434	278	Brinkley v. Attorney-General, L. R. 15 P. 76 (80)	1664
Boss v. Litton, 5 C. & P. 407	297	Brisac, 4 East 164	446, 447
Boston, 17 B. 626	365	Bristol Grand Jury, 5 C. & P. 26	1530
Boston, (1874) 2 O'M. & H. 161	574	British American Tobacco Co. v. Mah-bub Buksh, 38 C. 110	1617
Botterile, 41 L. T. 588	1743	Britt v. Robinson, L. R. 5 C. P. 503 (513, 514)	116
Boucher, 4 C. & P. 562	1302	Brogden v. Metropolitan Railway Co., 2 App. Cas. 666 (692)	974
Boulnois v. Peake, 13 Ch. D. 513	1633	Brojo Kishore Dutt, 8 W. R. 17	1470
Boulter v. Clarke, Buller's N. P. 16	238	Brojo Nath Ghose, 4 C. W. N. 227	642
———(1908) 72 J. P. 188	952	Broke, 1 F. & F. 514	891
" Bovril " Trade Mark No. 58, 405 (1896) 2 Ch 600	1619	Bromage v. Prosser, 4 B. & C. 247 (255)	771
Bowden, 2 M. C. C. R. 285	1201	Bromilow v. Phillips, (1891) W. N. 209	802
Bowen v. Hall, 6 Q. B. D. 333 (343)	171	Brompton, (1893) 2 Q. B. 195	803
Bowers, 35 L. J. M. C. 206	1285	Brook v. Errans, 29 L. J. Ch 616	1731
Bowyer, 4 C. & P. 556	1507	Brook v. Brook, 9 H. L. C. 193	1659, 1660, 1661
Boxsius, (1894) 1 Q. B. 842	1702, 1742	Brooke, 2 T. R. 190	278
Boya Munigadu, 3 M. 33	995	———7 Cox. 251	891
Boya Sunkulamma, (1890) 1 Weir 331 (332)	1086	Brooks, 4 C. & P. 131	1254
Boydell v. Jones, 4 M. & W. 466	1717, 1732	Brooks & Co., Ltd. v. The Norfolk Cycle Co., (1889) P. R. C. 523	1623
Boystum Moochee, 17 W. R. 11	1348, 1351	Brooks v. Mason, (1902) 2 K. B. 743	271
Bozid 27 A. 298	1512	Brough, 2 F. F. F. 838	316
Bozagellaya, 19 M. L. T. 238, 4 L. C. 1166	1177	Brown, 24 Q. B. D. 357 (359)	1266, 1243, 1783, 1788
Braby & Co's Application, 21 Ch. D. 223	1624	———2 Cox. 348	1438
Bradford Navigation Co., 6 B. & S. 631 (651)	901	———7 Cox. 442	444
Bradford, (1869) 1 O'M. & H. 32	574	———C. & M. 314	631
Bradlaugh, 2 Q. B. D. 569, O. A. 3 Q. B. D. 607	920, 922, 925	———11 Mad. 86	1711
Bradlaugh and others, 15 Cox. C. C. 217	1761	———L. R. 1 C. C. R. 244, 39 L. J. M. C. 94	1090, 1091
Bradshaw, (1878) 14 Cox. C. C. 83	339	Brown, Dr. 11 Mad. 86	1067
———v. Jackman, 21 L. L. R. Ir. 12	142	Brown v. Anandlal, 44 C. 65	733
Bare, 10 C. 338	536, 537	Brown v. Brown, L. R. 1 P. & D. 46	1094
Bagnell, 4 Cox. 402	1301	Brown v. Smith, 13 C. B. 596	1713
Braham v. Beachim, 7 Ch. D. 848	1631	Brown's Case, 2 East P. C. C. 16	1304
Brahma Dutt, (1921) O. 149	1681	Browne v. Dawson, 12 A. & E. 624	1517, 1519
Brahmanna v. Ramakrishnama, 18 M. 250	1715	Browning, 39 L. C. 322	1027
Brain, 6 C. & P. 349	958	Brownlie v. Campbell, 5 App. Cas. 952	265
Brain's case, 1 Hale P. C. 455	359	Bryan, D. & B. 265	1424, 1437
Bramanund, 8 C. L. R. 233	738	———2 F. & F. 567	1437
Bramley, R. & R. 478	1261	Bryant, 27 J. P. 277 (289)	1372
Brannan, L. R. 7 C. P. 261	921	Bryce, (1886) 2 T. L. R. 435	1727
Brayne v. Cooper, 5 M. & W. 249	1711	Bucha, (1904) P. R. No. 1; 1 Cr. L. J. 113	703
Brembridge 12 W. R. (Eng.) 878	1788, 1756, 1758, 1723	Buchi, 17 M. 401	1262
Bren, 9 Cox. 398	1286	Buzlar Rahman, (1929) P. R. 1	311
Brenon v. Ridgway, (1887) 3 T. L. R. 592	1727	Buckmaster v. Reynolds, 3 C. (N. S.) 62	1195
Brett, 20 W. R. 723 (Eng.)	1701	Buck Shah, 5 S. L. R. 136, 13 I. C. 220	681
Brewster, T., 15 Car. 11 K. B.	471	Buddha, (1880) P. R. No. 14	616
Brice R. & R. 450	1530	Buddha Reddi, 44 M. L. J. 234, 69 I. C. 59, 23 Cr. L. J. 655	1414, 1499
Bridgenorth, 8 L. J. N. C. 86	573	Budhabai, 86 I. C. 428, (1925) N. 358	1591
Bridges v. Playdel, Brown & Golds 2	574, 1711	Budha, (1880) P. R. No. 14	209
Bridgewater Case, Unrep.	400	———(1916) P. R. 21; 35 I. C. 176
Briggs, 26 L. J. M. C. 7	1674	17 Cr. L. J. 304	1526, 1531
Briggs, Dears & B. 98	1674	Budhan Khan, 14 Bom. L. R. 893; 17 I. C. 537	1417
Briggs v. The Lightships, 11 Allen 157	125	Budh Lall, 29 A. 598	1277, 1391, 1399
Brigstock, 6 C. & P. 184	1721	Budho, (1915) P. R. 29, 32 I. C. 148	957, 958
Briji Basi, 19 A. 74. 1541, 1545, 1549, 1553		Budh Sen, 13 A. 351	616
Brij Behari (1926) 88 I. C. 724. 255, 255, 1512		Budh Singh, 2 A. 101. 170, 1512, 1518, 1657
———23 A. L. J. 1926, (1926) A. 44	260	Budhu (1887) P. R. No. 1	167
Brij Mohan Lal, 7 N. W. P. H. C. R. 134	768, 412	Budhu v. Mt. Lachminia, 4 C. W. N. 599	504
Brijoo Singh v. Khub Lal, 19 W. R. 66.	364

	PAGE		PAGE
Budhun, 10 C. L. R. 392	255	Butto Kristo Doss, 3 C. 497	265
Budri Roy, 23 W. R. 65	1115	Button, 8 C. & P. 660	1094
Budrood Hossein, 24 W. R. 51	291, 1151	———(1900) 2 Q. B. 597	1445
Budruddeen, 11 W. R. 20	1019	Button v. Hayward, 8 Mod. 24	1711
Bugwati Prashad, 74 I. C. (A.) 69	310	Bykuntram, 10 B. L. R. 434	639
Bukhtavar (Mt.), (1882) P. R. 24	1069	Bykunt Nath Banerjee, 5 W. R. 72	665
Buksh, 73 I. C. (L.) 815, (1923) A. I. R. (Lah.) 327	1337	Bykuntram Shaha Roy, 18 W. R. 47	637
Bulaki Ram, (1889) 7 A. W. N. 1	723	Byramj, Jamsetji 52 B. 280	1343
Budha Singh, (1927) A. 111	598	Byramji Edalji, 12 B. 437	940
Buddhu, 42 A. 401	1683	Byrchley's Case, 4 Rep. 16	1712
Budh. Kishen, 4 Pat. L. J. 603, 72 I. C. 614, 24 Cr. L. J. 454	1273	Bysagoc Noshyo, 8 W. R. 29	961, 972 1106
Bulchand, 8 S. L. R. 55, 25 I. C. 1003, 16 Cr. L. J. 675	1393	C
Buldeo Pershad, 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. 187	1194	Cadd, 45 A. 288	1376
Bull 2F. & F. 201	344	Cadman, R & M. C. C. R. 114	1077, 1123
———1 Cox 261	415	Cahoon v. Mathews, 24 C. 494	869, 870
Bullavu Goud, (1897) 1 Weir 426	1259	Calder v. Halket, 2 M. I. A. 293	272
Bullock L. R. 1 C. C. R. 115	1489	Callicott, 4 Faunt 300	1576
———v. Dunlop, 2 Ex. D. 43	1270	Calthorpe, 27 J. P. 581	1727
Buloram, 7 W. R. 104	608	Calvert v. Baker, 4 M. & W. 417	1567
Bultun Rujurm,	1018	Calvins Case, 7 Rep. 1	451
Bugwate Prashad, 74 I. C. (A.) 69	312	Calye's case, 8 Co. Rep. 33	1252
Bunce, 1 F. & F. 523	1420	Cama v. Morgan, 1 B. H. C. R. 205	1173
Bunkall, 33 L. J. M. C. 75	1372, 1378	Cambridge Cases, (1857) W. & D. 39	575
Bunsi, (1882) P. R. No. 9	252	Caminada v. Hailton, 60 L. J. (M. C.) 116	933
Bunyan, 1 Cox 64	925	Campbell v. Spottiswoode, 32 L. J. Q. B. 199	1728
Bura, (1886) P. R. 5	1512, 1513	Camplin, 1 Cox. C. C. 229	347, 1231
Burdett, 1 St. Tr. (N. S.) 3 B. & Ald. 717	466	Caniff, (1840) 9 C. & P. 359	339
———4 B. & A. 95 (126, et. seq.)	1721	Cannon, R. & R. 146	1304, 1311
———4 B. & Ald. 143	1700	Canta Sarkar, 30 I. C. (C.) 444	663
Burch, 4 F. & F. 407	1386	Cann v. Wilson, 32 Ch. D. 39	888
Burgess, 9 Cox. 302	1261	Cape v. Scotts, L. R. 9 Q. B. 269	1258
———16 Q. B. D. 141	750	Capital and Countries Bank v. Henty, 7 App. Cas. 741 (772)	172
Burgon, Dears & B. 11	1437	Capital and Counties Bank v. Hrenty & Sons, 5 C. P. D. 514, O. A. App. Cas. 741	1718, 1720
Burke, 6 A. 224	1398, 1274, 1408	Cardwell v. Martin, 9 East 190	1567
Burnan Shah, (1887) P. R. No. 26	947	Carey v. Lidbitter, 13 C.B. (N. C.) 470. 855, 856	1256
Burnard Edward Mullany, 34 L. J. M. C. 111	669	Carleton v. Brightwell, 1 P. Wms. 462.	923
Burnly v. Botlett, 16 M. & W. 644	877	Carlile, 3 B. & A. 167	950
Burnes v. Pennell, 2 H. L. C. 497	1386	Carlisle, 3 B. & Ald. 161	1713
Burnett, 4 M. & S. 73	862, 869, 871	Carn v. Osgood, 1 Lev. 280	133
Burnett v. Berry, (1896) 1 Q. B. 641	926	Carr, 10 Q. B. D. 76	1284
Burrows v. Rhodes and Jameson, (1889) 1 Q. B. 816	479	Carr, R. & R. 198	176
Bur Singh v. Ishar Singh, (1917) P. W. R. (Cr.) 4	1648, 1649	Carr v. Francis Times & Co., (1902) A.C. 176	285
Burt, 11 Cox. 399	900	Carr v. Stringer, L. R. 2 Q. B. 433	847
Burton, 3 F. & F. 772	325, 323	Carr (Sir John) v. Hood, 1 Camp 355	1736
———1 Mood C. C. 237	1286	Carradice, R. & R. C. C. 205	1255
———Dears C. C. 822	1407	Carratt v. Morley, (1841) 1 Q. B. 18	1154
Burton's Case, 1 Str. 481	1052	Carrickfergus, (1896) 5 O'M & H 95	574
Buruby v. Bollett, 16 M. & W. 644, 876	506, 866, 901, 1400	Carrol, 1 Leach 287	1525
Bush v. Steinman, 1 Bos. and Pul. 407, (408)	1403	Carruthers, 1 Cox, 138	1294, 1302
Buta, (1917) P. R. 1, 39 I. C. 330	1403	Carter, 10 Cox. 642	1431
———77 I. C. (L.) 809, 25 Cr. L. J. 457.	1014, 1034	Carter v. Thomas, (1893) 1 Q. B. 673	287
Butari, 9 M. L. J. 103, 9 I. C. 288.	1204	Cartwright v. Green, 8 Ves. 405	1343
Buta Singh, 89 I. C. (L.) 912	1403	Case, 1 Dent. C. C. 580 (582)	347
Buta Singh (1917) P.R. 1, 39 I.C. 330, 18 Cr. L. J. 490	1433	Case, 4 Cox. C. C. 220	335
Butcher 28 L. J. M. C. 14	732	Case, 19 L. J. M. C. 174	1233
Buth Nath, 4 C. W. N. 305	1783	Cash Ltd. v. Cash, (1902) T. L. R. 299	1627
Butler, 6 C. & P. 368	161	Casorati, (1879) P. R. No. 36	384
Butler v. Butler, 28 Ch. D. 66	1614	Cassem Karrim v. Jamshedjee, 9 C. W. N. 195	1747
Butt, 15 Cox. 564	1745	Cassidy, 4 B. H. C. R. 17	981
———Jackson, 10 Ir. L. R. 120	281, 458	Cassy Mul, 3 W. R. 10	1320
———Newman, Gow. 97	854	Castel v. Bambridge, 2 Str. 854	1003
Butterfield v. Forester, East 60	1447	Castro, 6 App. Cas. 229	245, 802
Buttery, 4 B. & Ald. 179		Castro, 2 Cockburn 816	1017

	PAGE		PAGE
Cathercole v. Miall, 15 L. J. Ex.	1729	Chet Singh, (1911) P. W. R. 21, 11 I. C.	1767
179	295	619, 12 Cr. L. J. 435	1664, 1665
Caton, 12 Cox. C. C. 624	1432	Chetti v. Chetti, (1909) P. 67	1144
Caulson, 4 Cox. 227	1575	Chhagam, 29 Bom. L. R. 494, (1927) B.	1468, 1469
Causeley, 43 C. 421	541	369	383
Cawasji, 26 B. 609	1712	Chhajju (1908) P. R. No. 16	733
Cawdry v. Highley, Cro. Car. 270	1711	Chheda, (1933) O. 386	738
Ceely v. Haskins, Cro. Car. 509	869	Chhedi, 24 Cr. L. J. 316	597
Chabumian, 12 M. L. T. 664, 18 I. C.	1428	Chhedi Kandhu, 7 A. L. J. 618, 6 I. C.	514
269	1658	390	1591
Chadwick v. Manning, (1896) A. C. 231	1658	Chheddi Lal, (1924) 10 O. & A. L. R. 144	188
(238)	554	Chhida, 24 A. L. J. 178, (1926) A. 225	1494
—11 Q. B. 173	998	Chhotalal, 14 Bom. L. R. 367	466, 467
—6 C & P. 181	233	Chhotalal, 14 Bom. L. R. 147	532
Chagan, 14 B. 331	916	Chidambaran v. Md. Khan Sahib, 34 M.	593
Chainu, 91 I. C. 241, (1926) O. 272	1027	L. J. 206, 44 I. C. 580, 19 Cr. L. J.
Chairman, Municipality v. Annessuddin	1259	356
20 W. R. 64	651, 655	Chidambaram Pillai, 19 M. L. T. 81, 1 I.
Chairman of Municipal Council, Ellore,	310, 312	C. 42
(1893) 1 Weir 243	723	Chida Nand, (1930) L. 350
Chaju (1928) L. 335	531, 532	Chikka Honappa, (1882) 1 Weir 97
Chaitan v. Kalachand, 10 C.W.N. 233n	781	Chikbati Guruadu, (1881) Weir (3rd Ed.)
Chait Ram, 6 A. 103	824, 1748	390
Chajju Mal, (1909) P. L. R. 94, 4 I. C.	1295, 1296	Child, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 307
985	344	Chill, 8 B. H. C. R. 92
Chakauri, 54 I. C. (Pat.) 636	1516, 1684	124, 125, 132, 133
Chakravarthi, 54 C. 59	1255, 1518	Chima, 8 B. H. C. R. 164
Chakua, (1896) A. W. N. 151	260	Chiman Lal v. Gulam Mohiuddin, (1911)
Chalil Kothali, (1882) 1 Weir 609	1744	P. L. R. 59, 10 I. C. 646
Chalmers, 10 Cox. 450	1745	Chiman Lal, 27 Bom. L. R. 363
Chamberlain, 10 Cox. C. C. 486	670	Chinia Bhikha Roli, 8 Bom. L. R. 240
Chamia (Mt.) 7 C. L. R. 354	1366	Chinna, 31 M. 106
Cham Nayiab 2 C. 354	1018, 1579	Chinna Gangappa, 54 M. 68
Chamman, 1 Pat. L. J. 11, 54 I. C. 623	420	699, 700, 702, 727
Champa v. Pirbhu, (1926) A. 287	192	Chinna Kannu, (1899) 1 Weir 197
Champa Davi, 24 A. L. J. 329,	967, 1041, 1116	Chinna Kavippa (1909) 1 Weir 463
A. 287	1325	Chinna Madakudumban, (1882) 1 Weir
Champney's case, 2 Lew 258	1325	203
Chanan Singh (1935) L. 31	1325	Chinna Ramana, 31 M. 506
Chanan, 151 I. C. (L.) 238	1325	Chinnaswami v. Chairman, 16 M. L. T.
Chanda, (1894) P. R. No. 6	1325	429, 25 I. C. 837
Chanda, 18 A. 24	1325	Chinnaswami (1910) M. W. N. 776,
Chandan, 94 I. C. (A.) 363	1325	8 I. C. 668
Chandan Singh, 40 A. 103	1325	Chinna Thoyi, (1895) 1 Weir 518
Chandar, (1906) 26 A. W. N. 47, 3 Cr.	1325	Chintamoni (1930) C. 579
L. J. 294	1325	Chiraguddin, 18 C. W. N. 1144, 23 I. C.
Chandaria, (1911) P. W. R. 36, 11 I. C.	1325	501, 15 Cr. L. J. 293
623	1325	Chiragh 115 E. C. 65
Chandgi, 99 I. C. 84, (1927) L. 91	1325	Chiranji Lal v. Ram Lal, 9 A. L. J. 538,
Chandi Pershad v. Abdur Rahman,	1325	15 I. C. 495
22 C. 131	1325	Chitoraputra, (1896) 1 Weir 623
Chandi Pershad v. Evans, 22 C. 123	1325	Chitta Kanaiya, (1888) 1 Weir 132
1515, 1520, 1533	1325	Chittar, 20 A. 389
Chandi Ram, (1926) S. 174, 20 S. L. R.	1325	Chit Tha, 9 L. B. R. 165, 45 I. C. 840
140	1325	Chittu, (1900) P. R. No. 4
Chand Singh, 35 P. L. R. 715	1325	Chockalingam, (1912) M. W. N. 119,
Chandika Prasad, 21 O.C. 150, 46 C. 817	1325	13 I. C. 819
Chand Khan, 37 B. 553	1325	Chodapa, (1868) B. U. C. 8
Chand Mahal, 19 W. R. 1	1325	Choghatta, (1891) P. R. No. 20
Chand Mal, (1879) P. R. No. 9	1325	Cholay, (1864) Mad. Unrep.
Chand Mur, 11 B.H.C.R. (A.C.) 240	1325	Choostey, 20 A. L. J. 855, 69 I. C. 457
Chando Chandaline, 24 W.R. 55. 429, 554, 1462	1325	Chooamoni, 14 W. R. 25
Chandra Bhuiya 20 C. 537	1325	Choragudi Rai Jagadish, 15 C. W. N. 732,
Chenchugadu (1885) 8 M. 421	1325	5 I. C. 847
Chengamma, (1911) 2 M. W.N. 349	1325	Chota Ally, 4 Bom. L. R. 463
Chenna Mali, 27 M. 129	1325	Chota Hurry Pramanick, 15 W. R. 5
Cheppa Mehton (1928) Pat. 550	1325	Chota Jadub Chunder Biswas, (1864)
Chepple, 9 C. & P. 355	1325	W. R. 11
Cherry's Case, 1 Leach 236	1325	Chote Lal, 40 A. 221
—2 East P. C. 556	1325	Chhotlalal, 14 Bom. L. R. 147
Cheta Mahto, 89 I. C. (Pat.) 1050	1325

	PAGE		PAGE
Chotalal Lallubhai v. Nathabhai, 25 B. 115, F. B.	1751, 1752	Cockermouth, (1901) 5 O. M. & H.	158 582, 583
Chota Sadoo, 9 W. R. 3	673	Codd v. Cabe, 1 Ex. D.	352 282
Chhoti Bai, 2 Nag. L. R. 119	744	Coe, 6 C. & P.	403 413, 1080
Christian Sattler, (1858) 7 Cox.	431 134	Coesar v. Curseny, Cro. Eliz.	1713
Christe v. Davey, (1893) 1 Ch.	316 916	Coggins, 12 Cox.	517 429, 1411
Christopher, 28 L. J. M. C.	35 1343	Coghlan, (1865) 4 F. & F.	316 1721
Chuhar Singh, (1914) P. W. R. 40, 26 I. C. 1001	1027	Cohen, 8 Cox. C. C.	41 263, 1195, 1376
Chulhan Ahir, 16 C. W. N. 263, 13 I. C. 826	1485	Cohen, 40 I. C. (C.) 728, 18 Cr. L. J.	728
Chullendee, 3 W. R. 55	975, 1137	Coke, 3 Inst.	9 454
Chunia Thoyi, (1895) 1 Weir	518 1572	Cole, 1 Phil. Ed.	181 1243
Chunder Coomar Sen, 3 C. W. N. 605	1133	Colelough, 15 Cox.	92 1599
Chunder Kumar, 3 C. W. N. 344	370	Coleman, 2 East P. C.	672 1265
Chundra Kant Ghose, 3 C. W. N. 3	671, 672, 729	Coleman v. Coleman, L. R. 1 P. & M.	81 1686
Chundra Mohan Bannerjee v. Balfour, 26, C. 359	731	Coleman's Trade Mark Application (No. 2) (1894) 2 Ch.	115 1619
Chunder Narain v. Brija Bullub, 14 B. L. R. 254	272, 273, 274	Collector v. Chithambaram, 1 M. 89 (97) F. B.	106 276
Chunder Nath Ghose v. Nundolal, 11 C. 81	1681	Collector of Salem, 7 M.H.C.R.	233 1270, 1395
Chunder Prasad Singh, 10 W. R. 30	236	Collector v. Taruknath, 7 B. L. R.	449 273, 277
Chunder Sunngjee, (1869) P. M. J. 14, 2 P. R. 1887	520	Collect (1929) M. W. N.	395 887, 1051, 1388, 1624
Chundi Churn Nath, 8 W. R. 5	659	Collicot, 4 Taunt,	300 1576
Chuni, 18 A. 497	995, 1451	Collier, v. Simpson, 5 C & P.	73 1712
Chunia Venkatesu Pedda Kesamma 54 M 515	1513	Collins, 9 C. & P.	456 466, 469, 471
Chunibhai, 4 B. L. R. 78	1769	Collins, 33 L. J. M. C.	177 1067, 1650, 1783
Chuni Mull (1871) P. R. No. 35	282	Collins, L. R. 1 C. C. R.	54 1266
Chunnu, 8 A.L. J. 656, 11 I. C. 142	1258, 1375	Collins. 1 Cox	57 1565
Churchill v. Gedney, 53 J. P. 471	1718	Collins v. Carnegie, 1 A & E.	695 1712
Churchill v. Hunt, 2 B. & Ald. 685,	1721	Collison. 4 C. & P.	535 965
Chuni, (1913) P. R. No. 10, 27 I. C. 200	1451	Colliss v. Hector, L. R. 19 Eq.	334 1665
Chuni Lal, 12 L. 483	476	Colman v. Godwin, 3 Daug.	90 1711
Chunilal v. Narsing Das, 40 A. 341 F. B.	1744	Colmer, 9 Cox.	506 1089
Churn Napit, 8 C. 331	201	Collins v. Higgimson 4 M. & W.	245 891
Chutterbuck v. Chaffers, 1 Stark 471	1700	Chandra Kant Chuckerbutty, 10 W. R. 14	627
Chytun 5 W. R. 49	243, 349	Chandra Kanta De, 6 C.	445 636
Chytun Bowra 5 W. R. 49	249	Chandra Kumar De, 44 C. L. J. 230, 99 I. C. 57, (1927) C.	78 612
City of London, 27 L. J. M. C. 231	1395	Chandra Kumar Missir, 2 C. L. J.	46 663
Civil Service Supply Association v. Dean, 13 Ch. D. 512	1631, 1632	Chandra Lal, 21 A. L. J.	776 324
Clarence, 23 Q. B. D. 58	336, 347	Chandra Mohan, 43 I. C.	822 681
Clarence, 22 Q. B. D. 23	1092, 1094	Chandra Mohan Singh, 1 Pat. L. T.	623 499, 513
Clark's Case, 2 Leach 1036	1257	Chandra Narain v. Farquharson 4 C. 837	1515
Clark, Dears C. C. 397	1234, 1654	Chandra Mal 19 W. R. 1.	913
Clark v. Molyneux 3 Q. B. D. 237	1747, 1749	Chandra Nath, 7 Luck.	543 1327
Clarke, 4 F. & F 1040	1090	Chandra Prasad, 5 Pat.	578 1365
Clarke, 24 L. J. M. C. 25	1374	Chandra Sekhar Ray, 5 B. L. R.	100 594
Clarke, (1905) 69 J. P. 150	1374	Chandu, 16 I. C. (M.)	511 1142
Clarke v. Taylor, 2 Bing N. C. 664 ;	1721	Chandu v. Chandu Mal, (1885) P. R. (Civ.)	5 1361
Clarkson, 17 Cox. 483	498	Chanduka, 18 C. W. N. 275, 22 I. C.	993 366, 376, 500, 501
Clarkson v. Lawson, 6 Bing, 266	1722	Chandu Singh, 3 L. L. J. 574, 67 I. C.	731 1205, 1532
Class, 27 L. J. M. C. 541	1616	Changel v. Basermal, 5 S. L. R. 122	13 I. C. 214 1255
Clayton, 1 C. & K. 128	1438	Changanlal Ishwardas Shah, 146 I. C. (B)	550 798
Cleary v. Booth, (1893) 1 Q. B. 465	288	Chanivora, 1 B. H. C. R.	4 1070
Clerk, 1 Barnard 304	465	Channing Arnold, 41 C. 1023 (1058) P. C.	210, 211
Cleverton, 2 F. & F. 833	1020	Chapman, 12 Cox.	4 372
Cleaver v. Sarrande, 1 Camp. 268	1746, 1749	Chapman v. Cripps 2 F & F	864 890
Clement v. Lewis, 3 B. & Ald. 702	1732	Chapple, 9 C. & P.	355 747
Clifford v. Brandon, 2 Camp. 369	509, 510	Charan (1925) A.	798 887
Clover v. Rayden, L. R. 17 Eq. 190	1747	Charia, 13 M.	353 111
Cluderoy, 1 Den, C. C. 514	1112	Chariton v. Lings, L. R. 4 C. P.	374 141
Coal-heaver's Case, 1 Leach 66	395	Charles Fletcher L. R. 1 C. C. R.	39 348
Cobbet, 29 St. Tr. 49	471	Charles Gogerly, (1818) R & R.	343 429
Cobbett, 29 St. Tr. 153	478
Cock v. Coxwell, 2 C. M. & R. 291	1567

	PAGE		PAGE
The Charlotte 1 Dods R. 392	.. 260	Cope v. Evans L. R. 18 Eq. 138	.. 1620
Charnock, 12 St. Tr. 1377	.. 459	Cornwallis, 7 St. Tr. 149 ; 26 St. Tr. 218	1016
Charoo Chunder, 4 C. W. N. 47	.. 1514	Cornwall, 2 Str. 881	1016, 1531
Charu Chunder, 28 C. W. N. 414, (1924)	.. 1462	Cory, 10 Cox 23	.. 1254
502	.. 1462	Cosnett, (1901) 65 J. P. 472	.. 1432
Charu Nuyaib, 2 C. 354	.. 1516	Cosnet, 20 Cox 6	.. 1432
Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. C. 349	172	Costlet's Case, 1 Leach 236	.. 1267
Chatar Singh, (1901) P. R. No. 15	.. 417	Coventry, (1869), O'M. & H. 97	575, 578
Chatru, 43 I. C. (Pat.) 95	.. 398	Cowan v. Milbourn, L. R. 2 Ex. 230 (236)	162, 163
Chatradhari Goala, 2 C. W. N. 49	.. 428	Cowell, 2 East P. C. 617, 718	.. 1392
Chatterji, (1933) A. 434	.. 211	Cowling v. Higginson, 4 M. & W. 245	891
Chatter Lal v. Thakoor Pershad, 18 C.	.. 159	Cowper Essex v. Acton, 14 App. Cas. 153	204
518	.. 159	Cox v. Burbridge, 13 C. B. (N. S.) 430	914, 1090
Chatterpal Singh (1930) O. 502	1033, 1540, 1599	Coxhead v. Richards, 2 C. B. 569	1743, 1744, 1749
Chatter Singh, (1885) A. W. N. 43	592, 1323, 1537	Cracknell, 10 Cox 408	1293, 1296, 1304
Chattel v. Turner, (1896) 12 T. L. R.	.. 1702	Cramp, Q. B. D. 307	.. 141
360	.. 1702	Cranden v. Walden, 3 Lev. 17	.. 1712
Chatter Singh, (1919) U. B. R. 194	1325, 1326	Crane v. Lawrence, 25 Q. B. D. 152	881
Chatterton v. Secretary of state for	.. 1739	Crawford v. Dale, 3 Salk 327	.. 1713
India in Council, 2 C. P. D. 445	.. 1739	Crawly, 3 F. & F. 109	.. 874
Chatterton v. Secretary of State (1895)	.. 285, 1745	Cread, 1 C. & K. 63	.. 1369
2 Q. B. 189	.. 285, 1745	Creevey, 1 M. & S. 273	.. 923
Chatur, 8 A. L. J. 11 I. C. 579, 12 Cr. L.	.. 1558	Crespigny, 1 Esp. 280	.. 669
J. 395	.. 1558	Creek, 1 F. & F. 519	342, 343
Chatur Nath, 21 Bom. L. R. 1101, 54 I.	.. 1107	Crepps, 41 B. 152	.. 1085
C. 485	.. 1107	Crisp v. Gill, 29 L. L. (O.S.) 82	1085, 1086 1713,
Chaturbhuj, 45 A. 137	.. 1296	Critchley, (1734) 4 F. R. 129-n.	.. 1714
Chagan, 14 B. 331	.. 554	Crofts (Sir Herbert) v. Brown, 3 Blus	.. 1711
Cheafor, 21 L. J. M. C. 43	.. 1254	201	.. 1711
Cheda Lal, 29 A. 351	.. 682	Croft v. Lumley, 6 H. L. C. 722	.. 336
Cheda Singh, (1924) L. R. 5 A. 133	.. 188	Crokee 2 Str. 901	.. 1575
Chedilal, (1924) 10 O. & A. L. R. 144	597	Crook, 1 F. & F. 521	342, 344
Chedilal, (1883) A. W. N. 170	.. 630	Cross, Dears V. B. 469	.. 182
————, 2 C. P. L. R. 198	.. 731	Cross, 3 Camp. 227	.. 856
Cheesemen, L & C. 140	.. 1783	Cross, 2 C. & P. 483	.. 885
Cheseman, 7 C & P. 455	.. 288	Cross, 3 Camp. 224	.. 899
Cheetoour Chowkidar, 1 W. R. 18	.. 709	Crossby, 7 T. R. 315	670, 1437
Cheetar, 15 W. R. 5	.. 1344	Cross 1 F. & F. 510	1674
Chekutty, 26 M. 454. 420, 1191, 1197, 1198	.. 1751	Crossbey v. Lightowler, 36 L. J. Ch. 584	859
Chellam Naidu v. Ramasami, 14 M. 379	.. 463	Crossby v. Lightowler, L. R. 2 Ch. 478	1624
Chellam Pillai, (1928) R. 276	.. 463	Crossby, 2 M. & R. 17	.. 1437
Cheltenham, (1869) 1 O'M. & H. 64	.. 576	Crow, 1 Lewin 88	.. 1357
Chemoo Gora, 29 C. 415	.. 1681	Crowdy v. Reilly, 17 C. W. N. 554	.. 1744
Colville v. Kris Kishore, 26 C. 746	.. 154	Crowe, 3 C & K. 123	.. 1054
Combe v. Pitt, 3 Burr. 1434	.. 206	Crowhurst, 1 C. & K. 370	1276, 1409
Commonwealth v. Holmes, Wharton's	.. 303	Crowhurst v. Amercham Burial Board,	.. 856
Homicide, p. 237	.. 1232	4 Ex. D. 5	.. 802
Complin, 1 C & K. 746	.. 1240	In re Crown Bank, 44 Ch. D. 649	.. 865
Comptin 1 Cox 220	.. 1030	Cruden, 2 Camp. 189	.. 170
Connor, 2 C & P. 438	.. 288, 295	Crump, 1 C. & P. 658	.. 333
Condi Chetti, 8 I. C. (M.) 128	.. 1711	Cruse 8 C. & P. 541	.. 1516
Connor, 7 C. & P. 438	.. 1711	Cubitt v. Porter, 8 P. & C. 257	.. 398
Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534	295, 338, 339, 398	Cuddi, 1 C. & K. 210	1363, 1674
Cook v. Wingfield, 1 Str. 555	.. 1711	Cullum, L. R. 2 C. C. 28	.. 177, 1005
Cooke, 5 A & C. 538	448, 1375, 1601	Cundy v. Le Coeq, 13 Q. B. D. 207	.. 466
Cooke, 7 Bur. L. T. 187, 23 I. C. 195	141, 935, 928	Curline, 2 St. Tr. (N.S.) 464	.. 1761
Cooke, 8 C. & P. 582	.. 1578	Cuttlel, 27 How. St. Tr. 642	.. 1674
Cooking (Sir Thos.) v. Witnain, Cro. Eliz.	.. 1711	Cingerween L. R. I. C. C. 1.	.. 1674
49	.. 1711
Cookin's Case, 2 Lew. 235	.. 1275
Cooper, 3 C. & K. 318	1256, 1407
Cooper, 2 Q. B. D. 510 (514)	1431, 1433
Cooper, 3 Cox. 547	.. 1305
Cooper v. Chibbs, L. R. 2 H. L. 149 (170)	262
Cooper v. Simmons, 7 H. & N. No. 717	262
Cooper v. Slade, 6 H. L. C. 746	.. 574
Cooverji, 9 Bom. L. R. 159 (161)	.. 204

D

Dabei Singh, 7 W. R. 55	.. 1434
Dabyabhai, 6 Bom. L. R. 513	.. 1621
Da Costa v. Deefholts, 29 C W. N. 362	.. 1421
86 I. C. 985, (1925) C. 605	.. 657, 673, 677,
Dad, (1901) P. R. No. 21	1280, 1583

	PAGE		PAGE
Dad, (1879) P. R. No. 10	1280, 1523	Das, (I. R.) 1 R.	594
Dadubhai v. Sub-Collector of Brouch,		Dasan, 116 I. C. (M.)	142
7 B. H. C. R. (A.C.) 82 (84, 85)	1517, 1519	Das v. Secretary of State for India in	1046, 1616
Dada Hanmant Dain, 20 B.	794	Council, L. R. 19 Eq.	509
Dadaia (1881) 1 Weir	426	Dasappa, 29 I. C. (M.)	85
Dadan Gazi, 10 C. W. N.	890	Dasondha Singh, (1911) P. L. R.	230,
Dade, 1 Mood C. C.	307	11 I. C.	539
Dadson, 20 L. J. M. C.	57		672, 677
Dadubhai, (1895) B. U. C.	766 (768)	Dastar Ali, 58 C.	822
Daem Sardhar v. Batu Dhali, 3 C. L. J.	38	Dasondhi 9 L.	424
	1752	Dasrath Mandal, 34 C.	325
Dagh Bhika, 30 Bom. L. R.	631	Dasarathi 36 C.	158
Dagadi, (1892) B. U. C.	592	Dasi Pitchigadu, (1883) 1 Weir	335
Daga Shaukar, 29 O. C.	245, 94 I. C.	Datta Ram, 3 I. C. (B.)	285
205, (1926) O.	398	Datta Ram, (1882) P. R.	45
Daji, (1895) B. U. C.	756	Dattatraya, 6 B. L. R.	541
Daji Mahadhu, (1895) B. U. C.	756	Datee, 34 P. L. R.	680
Dala Jiva, 10 B.	490	Daud, (1884) P. R. No.	22
Dale, 6 Cox.	14	Daulat 2 Luck	264
Dalganjan, 22 A. L. J.	81	Daulat Rai, (1915) P. W. R.	24, 29 I. C.
Dalip, 18 A.	246	86, 16 Cr. L. J.	454
	368, 372, 522,		1371, 1386, 1614
	1131, 1132, 1134	Daulatram, 59 C.	1233
Dalip Singh, (1930) L.	92	Daulatya, 3 A.	305
Dalip Singh, L. L. J. 44, 86 I. C.	341 ;	Daud v. Kingscote, 6 M. & W.	174
(1925) L.	318	David, 6 C. L. R.	245
Dalu Sadar, 18 C. W. N.	1279, 26 I. C.	David Narsu, 6 Bom. L. R.	548
517		Davies, 10 Cox.	239
Dalli, 20 A. L. J.	326, 66 I. C.	Davies, 1 F. & F.	69
A. 233		Davies (1906) 1 K. B.	32
Dal Chand v. Ram Lal, 75 I. C. (Oudh)	727	Davies, 14 Cox, C. C.	564
	1657	Davies, R. & R.	499
Daley, 4 C. & P.	369	Davies 6 C. & P.	177
Dal Singh, 20 A.	166	Davis, Case (Aune), 4 Rep	17
Dalsukram, 2 B. H. C. R.	384	Davis, 3 Burr.	1317
Dalu Sardar, 18 C. W. N.	1179, 26 I. C.	Davis v. Duncan, L. R. 9 C. P.	396
107		Davis v. Harvey, L. R. 9 Q. B.	433
Daly, 9 C. & P.	342	Davis v. Lewis, 7 T. R.	17
Damarua, (1885) A. W. N.	197	Davis v. Miller, 2 Str.	1169
Dawarua, (1885) A. W. N.	197	Davis v. Snead, L. R. 5 Q. B.	608
Damdaya, 1. R.	211	Davis v. Russel, 5 Bing	344
Dammaree, 15 St. Tr.	521	Davison v. Duncan, 2 E. & B.	229
Damodaran, 12 M.	56	Daw v. Eley, L. R. 7 Eq.	49
Damodhar v. Lall, 8 B. H. C. R. (A. C.)	177	Dawkins v. Lord Paulet, L. R. 5 Q. & B.	94
	282		171
Damodhar Dalji, 1 B. H. C. R.	21	Dawkins v. Lord Rokeby, L. R. 7 H. L.	744 ; O. A. from S. C. L. R. 8 Q. B.
Damu Haree, 21 W. R.	35	255	148, 274, 1739, 1745,
Danappa, 24 Bom. L. R.	45, 65 I. C.	640
(1922) B.	38	Day, 9 C. & P.	722
Dand Khan, (1925) A.	673	Day v. Buller, 3 Wils.	59
Dandekar (V. S.) 122 I. C. (A)	596	Day v. Bream, 2 Moo. and Rob.	55
Dane 1 F. & F.	328	Daya v. Param Sukh, 11 A.	104
Danesh v. Tafir, 7 C. W. N.	143	Daya Bhima, 13 B.	147
Dangar Khan, 5 L.L. J.	224, 68 I. C.	Daya Karsan, 1 Bom L. R.	515
817		Daya Rai 57 A.	407
Danna Sing, (1922) L.	477	Daya Ram, (1914) P. W. R.	11, 23 I.
Dant, (1865) L & C.	567	C. 471
Dappile Chenchugari, (1915) M. W. N.	253, 28 I. C.	108	725, 726
	739	Dayabhai, 1 B. H. C. R.	140
Darai Swami, 48 M.	774	Daval Singh 5 L L. J.	228, 71 I. C.
Daraz, 75 I.C. (P.) 689, (1923) L.	317	52	1041, 1107
Darba, 1 A. 461 F. B.	235, 236, 238	Dayaram, (1914) P. L. R.	64
Darbari, 60 I. C. (Pat.)	999	Dayalji Endarji, 8 B. H. C. R.	21
Dark, 1 Den. C. C.	276	Dean's Case, 1 Hale P. C. p. 25 note	(U.)
Darhoon, 8 S. L. R., 337 ; 29 I. C.	104		308
	987	Dean's Case Cr. Eliz.	689
Darkhan (Mt.) (1928) L.	27	Debanks 13 Q. B. D.	29
Daria Khan, 2 N. W. P. H. C. R.	125	Debendra v. Bhagirat, 13 C. W. N.	1087
Daroga Gope, 88 I. C.	1045, (1925)	Debendra Chandra v. Mohini Mohan, 5	C. W. N. 432
Pat. 717, 5 Pat.	33	Debi Prosad Bhagat v. Nagar Mull, 35 C.	1108
Daroga Lohar (1930) Pat.	347		1358
Dartmouth, (1859) W. & Br.	21	Debi Singh, 28 C.	399
	573	Debi Das, (1881) A. W. N.	115
			1260

	PAGE		PAGE
Debi, 44 I. C. (A) 13	612	Devama, 1 B. 64	1773
Debi Din, (1886) A. W. N. 295	150, 154	Devetoo Case, Cro Car 538	367
Debigir, 23 A. L. J. 146, 86 I. C. 973		Devi Dyal, 4 L. 55	1758
(1925) A. 322	588	Devij, 18 B. 581	1582
Debrilal v. Dhajadhasi, 36 M. 392	1597	Devi Lal, v. Dhaja Dhasi, 36 M. 392	1597
Debendra, 38 C. L. J. 158	710	Deshbandhu, 6 L. L. J. 162	533
Debendra Pershad, 36 C. 573	1453	De Souza, 42 A. 272	1056
De Barenger 3 M. & S. 67	400	Devarasetti, (1884) 1 Weir 515	1515
Degamber v. Kallynath, 7 C. 654	629	Devi Das, (1918) P. L. R. 36, 45 I. C.	365
Deenabandhu v. Viswarasarayi, (1923)		683	1401, 1417
M. W. N. 634, 75 I. C. 862, 24 Cr. L. J.	1410	De Silva, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 120	116
330		Deumal, 3 S. L. R. 66	1365
Deer, 32 L. J. M. C. 33		Devasikhmani, 95 I.C. 943, (1926) M. 727.	805, 807
De Banks, 13 Q. B. D 29	1372, 1377	Devi, 28 A. 62	355
De Crespigny v. Wellesly, 5 Bing 393	1704	Deviji Govendji, 20 B. 215	1279
De Cruz, 8 M. 140	1779	Devis, R. & R. 322	594
Dema, 19 M. 483	967	Devi Saran, 104 I. C. 234, (1927) L.	532, 941
Devarasetti, (1884) 1 Weir 516	1512, 1518	Devidin Durga Prasad, In re, 22 B. 844	1396
Dee, 15 Cox. C. C. 579	349, 1234	Devji, 20 B. 215	267
Dee, L. R. R. 468	1654	Deva Singh, (1918) P. R. No. 33	789
Deflander 59 C. 92	1372	Dewa Singh, (1897) P. R. No. 15	789
De Green v. Stone, 22 Ch. D. 243	121	Dewan Singh, (1879) P. R. No. 15	693, 565
Degumber, 21 W. R. 22	787	Dewanap, 16 East, 196	854
De Haber v. The Queen of Portugal, 17		Dexter v. Spear, 4 Mason 115	477
Q. B. 171	125	Dhalu Ram, (1909) P. R. No. 33,
Deik Singh, 17 A. L. J. 56, 49 I. C. 169	1041	2 I. C. 981	944
Deladal, 3 Burr. 1434	444	Dhammaloka, 4 Bur. L. L. 84, 10 I. C.	533
Deebakar, 31 C. W. N. 527, (1927) C. 520,		789
101 I. C. 180	500	Dhananjay v. Provat Chandra Biswas
Deebo Nath Jogee, 8 W. R. Cr. L. 14	1502	(1934) C. 480	1524
De Fanu v. Malcolmson, 1 H. L. C.		Dhanan Joy Dhara v. Provat
637	1715	Chandra Biswas 149 I. C. (C) 431	1511
Deharty, (1887) 15 Cox 306	1046	Dhanun, 86 I. C. 156, (1925) L. 459	1523
De La Motte, 21 St. Tr. 87	458	Dhani, 27 P. L. R. 716	429
Delan, Dears C. C. 436	1393	Dhania v. Clifford, 13 B. 376	1151
Delany v. Jones, 4 Esq. 191	1711	Dhania Daji, 5 B H. C. R. 59	1123, 1124
De Marney, (1907) 1 K. B. 388	399, 924	Dhania Kunbi, 75 I. C. (N.) 767, 25 Cr.
Delondo, East P. C. 1098	1507	L. J. 63	1031
Denmour, 8 Cox 440	1363	Dhani Bux, 9 S. L. R. 171, 32 I. C. 671	323, 317
Deo. V. Luddom, 7 Bing 275	161	Dhaniram, 14 C. P. L. R. 192	413
Deodhar Singh, 27 C. 144		Dhaniram, (1913) P. L. R. 162, 18 I. C.
399, 429, 558, 554, 767, 769		664	1034
Denonath v. Rajcoomar, 3 C. 573	500	Dhanjibhai, 20 B. 348	267
Dent, 1 C. & K. 249	1438	Dhan Singh, 1 A. L. J. R. 615, 1 Cr. L.
Deenabandu v. Vishwarasarayi, (1923)		J. 987	639
M. W. N. 634	1494	Dhantua Lodhi, 47 I. C. (N.) 77, 19 Cr.
Deoje Keru, (1872) B. U. C. 65	1328	L. J. 881	1787
Deoji, (1889) B. U. C. 473	801	Dharbari Chowdry 60 I. C. (Pat.) 992.	417
Deo v. Aunder Ferohed 33 C. 649	429	Dharam Chand Lal, 22 C. 569	154, 623, 621
Deonandan Pershad, 33 C. 649		Dharam Deo Singh, 14 A. L. J. 738,
553, 554, 1165, 1299		35 I. C. 978	248
Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Matuk-		Dharam Rai, (1887) A. W. N. 236	195, 190
dhari, 20 C. W. N. 128, 32 I. C. 137		Dharmadas Ghose v. Nusseeruddin 12 C
500, 501, 1657		660	1477, 1482
Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Ijjatulla		Dharmadas Lilaram, (1932) S. 168
Kazi, 10 C. W. N. 1005	1430	Dharmalinga 39 M. 57	1478, 1476, 1148
Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karuna		Dhanuman Teli 6 W. R. 203	363
Baistabi, 22 C. 164	113	Dhava, 89 I C. 961	874
Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Sarna		Dheramal, (1901) I U. B. R. 350	1520
Kahni, 26 C. 336	1657	Dhera Singh, (1878) P. R. No. 8	1192
Dermott, L. R. 1 P. C. 260, L. R. 2 P. C.		Dhian Singh, 9 A. L. J. 180	105
341	802	Dhian Singh, 14 I. C. 649	188, 189, 190,
Derbyshire Coal Co., v. Derby, (1896) 2			192
Q. B. 57, 58	202	Dhian Singh, (1915) P. R. Cr. 16	516, 517, 519
Derbyshire v. Houlston, (1897) 1 Q. B.		Dhian Singh, (1915) P. R. 15, 30 I. C. 37	518
772	271, 888	Dhirajaddi, 33 I. C. (C.) 644	787
Derry v. Peek, 14 App. Cas. 337	888	Dhirendra Mohan, 14 C. W. N. 408	1259
Desraj, 108 I. C. (R) 902, 992, 1027, 1594		Dhondi, (1895) B. U. C. 785	969
De Sylva, 11 Bom. L. R. 221	129, 134	Dhoonda Bhooya, 8 W. R. 85	780
Deva Singh, (1872) P. R. No. 27	255
Dedmal. 3 S. L. R. 66	416

	PAGE		PAGE
Dhori Kullian, 9 B. H. C. R. 165	631	Doe. v. Bainbridge, 4 Cox. C. C. 454	325
Dhula Singh, (1874) P. R. 10	1210	Doherty, 16 Cox. C. C. 306	330, 333, 1044
Dhum Singh, 6 A. 220	1721	Dolan, 1 Cox. 449	1265
Dhundi, 8 A. 304	1788, 1792	Dolloway, 2 Cox. 273	1053
Dhunmun, 75 I. C. (Pat.) 176	488, 502	Doma Sahu, 2 Pat. L. J. 83, 38 I. C.	1007
Dhunno Kazi, 8 C. 121	1017	Donnalli's Case, 2 East, P. C. C. 16	536
Dhunum Kazee, 9 C. 53 (60)	173, 174, 175	Donally, 1 Leach 193	1304
	689	Donoghue v. Hayes, (1831) Hayes Ir.	1311, 1314
Dhunpat Ojhah, 7 W. R. 51	1435	Leach, 265	1717
Dhununjai, 14 W. R. 68	379	Dooloo Mul v. Dewa Singh, (1868) P. R.	No. 2
Dhurmonarian, 1 W. R. 39	1199	Doolubh, 2 N. L. R. 883	775
Dhuronidhar Ghosh, 17 C. 298	1196	Doorgessur Surmah, 7 W. R. 97	510
Dial Singh, (1926) L. 419, 93 I. C. 1043	517	Doorjodhun Shamonto, 19 W. R. 45	407, 424
Dibal Safar, 5 S. L. R. 102, 12 I. C. 651	680	Dorai Lal, 17 A. L. J. 500, 50 I. C. 667	1035
Dibakar Das, 54 C. 476	1271	20 Cr. L. J. 331	1428
Dicas v. Lord Brougham, 6 C & P. 249	1737	Dorasamy, 9 M. 284	258
Dick, 12 A. L. J. 1258	166	Doraiswamy, 48 M. 774	1420, 1774, 1777
Dickenson, Russ & Ry. 420	170	Doraisami Pillai, 27 M. 52	391, 1521
Dickins v. Gill, (1896) 2 Q. B. 310	836, 843, 844	Dori Lal, 8 Cr. L. R. (A.) 275	1260
Dickins v. Randerson, (1901) 1 K. B. 437	684	Dorsett, 2 C. & K. 306	1504
Digambar v. Ram Taran, 41 I. C. (C.) 663	1597, 1601	Doss v. Secretary of State, L. R. 19 Eq. 509 (532)	1711
Digambar, 88 I. C. 1051, (1925) N. 440	1501	Dosset, 2 Cox, 243	1503
Dilan Singh, 40 C. 360	612, 735	Douglas, 13 Q. B. 42	560, 1290
Dil Gazi, 34 C. 686	323	Dovey, (1884) 2 Russ. 278	1276
Diljour, 2 C. 225, F. B. 111, 118	1094	Dover v. Child, 1 Ex. D. 172	1270
Dilworth, 2 M. & Ro. 53	1379	Dowey, 37 L. J. M. C. 52	1424
Dina, 6 L. 257	1027	Dowey, 11 Cox. 115	1432
Dina, 109 I. C. 912	680	Dowlat Bee v. Sheikh Ali, 5 M. H. C. R. 473 1220, 1221, 1222 1223, 1226, 1227, 1228,	1625, 1629
Dina Nath v. Nek Ram, 21 A. L. J. 74	159, 161	Dowlat Ram, 32 C. 431	184
I. C. 75	199	Donlat Ram 59 C. 1233	674
Dina Nath Gangooly, 8 B. L. R. App. 58, 17 W. R. (Cr.) 12	992 1542	Dowlut Moonshee, 8 W. R. 95	1255
Dinbandho Ooriga, (1930) C. 199	518	Dowling, 11 Cox. 580	577
Din Bundo, 9 W. R. 19	1271, 1321, 1323	Down, (1880) 30 M. 122	1444, 1789
Din Dayal, 10 O. L. J. 347, 40 L. J. 83, 39 I. C. 296, 18 Cr. L. J. 456	854	Doyal Bawri, 3 B. L. R. (A.C.) 55	835
Dines v. Perby, 15 Q. B. 276	992	Doyley, v. Roberts, 3 Bing. N. C. N. C.	1712
Dini, 94 I. C. 140, (1926) L. 485	553, 555	Dr. Shebbeare 37 R. 430	465
Dinkar Rao, 55 A. 654	1475	Drake v. Drake, 1 Roll. Abr. 366	1712
Dinkar, 7 Bom. L. R. 86	413	Dredge, 1 Cox. 235	1407
Dinonath Burooa, 18 W. R. 32	331, 332, 333, 479, 499, 502, 1031	Dring, 7 Cox. 283	1401
Director v. Beard, (1920) A. C. 479	171	Drewett, (1905) 69 I. P. 37	1373, 1615
Directors v. Brand, (1868) L. R. 4 H. L.	114	Dubakar v. Saktidar Kabiraj, 54 C. 476	1401
District Magistrate, Nellore, 6 M. L. T. 247, (1909) 3 I. C. 460, 10 Cr. L. J. 293	779	Duberby v. Gunning, 4 J. R. 651	1685
District Board, Sialkot v. Sultan. Mhd Khan, 9 L. 340	789	Duckworth, (1892) 2 Q. B. 3	406
Dital Safar, 5 S. L. R. 102, 12 I. C. 651	654, 697	Duckworth, (1893) 2 Q. B. 83	1265
Ditta, 110 I. C. (L.) 682	702	Dudala, (1881) 1 Weir 426	1263
Ditta, (1869) P. R. No. 31	1039	Dudley, 14 Q. B. D. 273 (285)	355, 992
Dixon, 3 M. & S. 11	299, 866, 974	Dudley v. Stephenson, 14 Q. B. D. 273 (287, 288)	354
Dixon v. Bell, 4 M. & S. 198	909	Duffield, 5 Cox. 404	447, 448
Dixon, 25 L. J. M. C. 39	1343	Duffy, 9 Ir. L. R. 329	470, 1721
Dixon v. Smith, 29, L. J. Ex. 125	1747	Duffey's Case, (1830) 1 Lewin C. C. 194	186
Dixon, (1885) Dears C. C. 580	1387	Dugdale, 1 E. & B. 435	1792
Dixon's Case, 2 Lew. 378	1566	Duguid, 75 L. J. K. B. 470	448
Diwanchand Jolly (1930) L. 81	933, 1454	Dukari Chandra Karmarkar, 33 C. W. N. 1226	1034, 1600
Diwan Singh, (1885) A. W. N. 214	1133	Duke of Brunswick v. King of Hanover 6 Beav. (50)	121
Diwan Mahto 54 I. C. 977	621	Dukharan, 7 O. C. 163	1340
Doda (1867) P. R. 19	1217	Dukhi Mullah, 23 C. 55	114
Dod Basaya, 11 B. H. C. R. 13	241, 248, 1483	Duleelodeen Sheik, 5 W. R. 19	1310
Dodgon, 9 A. & E. 704	279	Duli Chand, 38 I. C. (C.) 997	1377
		Dula Singh, 9 L. 531	179
		Dulle, 6 N. W. P. H. C. R. 307	1280, 1523
		Dulli 47 A. 59	1327

	PAGE		PAGE
Elmesley, 2 Lew 126	1490	Fakir Prasad v. Kripasindu 54 C. 137.	1745
Elmstone, 7 B. H. C. R. (Cr.) 89	134, 396	Fakirruddin, (1877) P. R. No. 4	701
Elsley v. Kirby, 12 L. J. Ex. 97	146	Fakirya Vecia, (1888) B. U. C. 393	1520
Elsworth, 9 East, 986	1561	Falkingham, L. R. 1. C. C. R. 122, 39 L. J.
Elwood v. Bullock, 6 Q. B. 383	900	M. C. 47	1085
Emaji, (1880) B. U. C. 150	1680	Fandi Khot, (1921) Pat. 192, 5 Pat. L. J.
Embleton v. Brown, 30 L. J. M. C. 1	124	64, 58 I. C. 527	361
Emdad Ally, 2 W. R. 65	1530	Fanja Singh 32 P. L. R. 273	1113
Emma Bati, 11 Cox. 686	1091	Fanthome (1882) A. W. N. 85	239
Emmens v. Pottle, 16 Q. B. D. 354	1704	Faquir Mahomed, (1890) P. R. No. 10. 967, 1041
Empson v. Bathurst, Hutt, 52	564	Farid, 9 I. C. (S.) 452	1003
Enai Bibi, 4 W. R. 25	1676, 1677	Farman Khan, 5 Pat. 520	361
Eno v. Dunn, 15 App. Cas. 252	1623	Farnborough, (1895) 2 Q. B. 484	168, 1258
Enock, 5 C. & P. 539	958	Farnham, 1 Cox. 349	1090
Entick v. Carrington, 19 St. Tr. 1029		Farre's Case, Kel. 43	1369
(1069)	373	Farrington, Russ & Ry. 207	168, 1123, 1503
Entrehman, C. & M. 248	208	Farrow, D & B. C. C. 288	1077
Erayet Hossain, 11 W. R. 1	1356	Farukh Husain, 24 O. C. 294, 67 I. C.
Esan Chunder Dey, 21 W. R. 40	258	588, 23 Cr. L. J. 428	1399
Esdaile, 1 F. & F. 213	444, 1386	Farzand Ali, 96 I. C. 221, (1926) Pat. 347	1448
Eshak Meah, 7 C. W. N. 245	536	Farzand Ali, 107 I. C. 1448, 1027, 1594	482
Eshan Meah, 12 W. R. 52	407	Fateh, 5 A. 217	666
Esop, 7 C. & P. 456	118, 124	Fateh, Ali, (1912) P. R. No. 8, 16 I. C. 521	607
Essan Chandra Dutt v. Prannath Chowdhry, (1863) W. R. (F. B.) 71, 74	1565	Fateh, Ali, (1894) P. R. No 15	651
Essex, 27 L. J. M. C. 73	1266	Fateh Chand, 21 C. W. N. 33	825
Essub Ibrahim, (1845) Perry's Oriental Cases, 577	129, 134	Fateh Din, (1909) P. R. No. 14, 4 I. C.
Ezufalli, 20 Bom. L. R. 601, 46 I. C. 411		863	1473, 1481, 1494, 1495
19 Cr. L. J. 731	1710	Fateh Din, (1881) P. R. No. 33	1489
Etim Ali Majumdar, 4 C. W. N. 500	399	Fateh Din Khan, (1934) L. 40	1477
Eusor, 3 T. L. R. 366	1694, 1714	Fateh Khan, 8 Bom. L. R. 835	249
Evans, 2 Cox. 270	1277	Fateh Khan, (1890) P. R. No. 35	615
Evans, (1812) Unrep. cited in 5 C. & P. 151	959	Fateh Khan, (1874) P. R. 11	136
Evans, Bell C. C. 187	1424	Fatehkhan (1930) L. 950	192
Evans 28 C. 123	1512	Fateh Muhammad, (1889) P. R. No. 84	1745
Evans v. Gwyn, 5 Q. B. 844	1712	Fateh Mhd 151 I. C. (S.) 376	1020
Evening News, (1866) 3 T. L. R. 255	1731	Fateh Sher, (1913) P. W. R. 35, 21 I. C.
Exchange, 7 Cranch, 116	121	503	510, 514
Ex Parte Witton, 1 Dowl. (N.S.) 805	802	Fateh Singh 12 A. 442	701
Ewaz Ali, 37 A. 624	1208	Fateh Singh, 41 C. 43	364, 366, 375, 501
Eyre v. Garlick, 42 J. p. 68	1706	Fatik Biswas, 1 B. L. R. (A. C.) 13	674
Ezekiel, 6 Bom. L. R. 54	157	Fatima v. Mc Cormick, 6 Bur, L. T. 21, F. B., 19 I. C. 149	1180, 1196
		Fatta, (1889) P. R. No. 32	915
		Fatta, (1878) P. R. No. 16	252, 254
		Fatta, (1913) P. W. R. 31, 21 I. C. 473	1322
		Fatte Chand, 5 B. H. C. R. 85	1026, 1592
		Fatti, (1911) P. R. No. 7, 10 I. C. 97	1192
		Fattu 55 A. 109	791
		Fattu 31 P. L. R. 1004	1064
		Fattu, (1884) P. R. No. 34	256
		Fattu, (1923) L. 286, 75 I. C. 368	255, 257
		Faulkes (1903) 19 T. L. R. 250	1674
		Faulkner, 13 Cox. (Ir.) 550	1503
		Faiz Alam, 151 I. C. (Pesh) 816	734
		Faizulla, 61 I. C. 522	189
		Fazal, (1899) P. R. No. 9	995
		Fazla, 110 I. C. (L) 230	986
		Fazla (1890) P. R. No. 9	1524
		Fazal Dad, (1904) P. R. No. 4	1039
		Fazal Din, (1906) 1 P. W. R. 9	1442
		Fazla, (1890) P. R. No. 9	1524
		Fazle, 110 I. C. (L) 230	1536
		Fazl Ahmed, (1914) P. R. 1, 23 I. C. 696,	663, 669, 677, 688
		Fazul (1886) B. U. C. 312	1452, 1453 167
		Fazal, (1899) P. R. 8	995, 1039
		Fazur Shand, (1934) L. 227	1217
		Fazlur Rahman 9 Pat 725	203, 1030
		Fazoo Khan v. Jatoo, (1931) C. 643	186
		Feda Hossein, 10 C. L. R. 184	1578

xlix

D

G

	PAGE		PAGE
Gamirrullah v. Mahadshet, (1889) B. U. C		Ganpat, 16 Bom. L. R. 78, 21, I. C.
432	1482	831,	1630
Gammon, 5 C & P 321	1235, 1484	Ganpat Rao, 19 B. 105	202
Galappande	1512, 1477	Ganpat Rao Ramchandra, (1894) 19 B.	415
Ganapathi Aiyar, (1882) 1 Weir 85	591, 1339	105	1535
Ganapathi Bhatta, 36 M. 308, 19 I. C.		Ganpat Ramshet, (1888) B. U. C. 390	203, 600,
310	729	Ganpat Subrao, 58 B. 491	602 603
Ganauri Lal 16 C. 206	375, 500	Ganpat Tapidas, 10 B 526	1198
Ganda Shah, (1894) P. R. No. 23	203, 417	Ganpat v. Collector of Canara, 1 B. 7	1339
Gandhi, 22 Bom. L. R. 368, 58 I. C. 915,		Ganpat, (1918) P. L. R. 47, I. C. 670	1241
F. B.	1114	Ganpat, (1868) P. R. 6	1371
Ganduva Nayako, (1881) 1 Weir 305,	381, 489	Ganpat, (1888) B. U. C. 390	1512
Gandu, (1923) L. 170	428	Ganpat, 16 Bom. L. R. 78, 24 I. C. 834	1630
Ganesh, 10 I. C. 168	202	Ganpatya, 5 C. P. L. R. 20	884
Ganesh Balwant, 12 B. L. R. 21	466, 467	Ganu, (1884) B. U. C. 207	239
Ganesh, 13 B. 506	1789	Ganu, 4 B. H. C. R. 25	926
Ganesh, 34 B. 394	432, 458	Ganu Ladu, 2 B. H. C. R. 126	259
Ganesh, 31 A. 448	1192	Gardi Singh, (1872) P. R. No. 7	1199
Ganesh Balwant, 34 B. 378	1196	Gardiner v. Atwater, (1756) Sayer 265.	1395
Ganesh Dutt Singh (Baboo) v. Muhneeram,		Gardner v. Walsh, 24 L. J. Q. B. 285..	408
11 B. L. R. 321, P.C., 17 W. R. 283		Gardner, 1 C. & P. 479	1304
O. A. Bom. 5 W. R. 134	1744	Gardner, (1862) L. C. C. R. 243	476
Ganeshi Lal 27 A. 28	622, 631	Gardner, 32 L. J. M. C. 35	340
Ganesh Khanderas, 13 B. 506	202, 209,	Gardner, 25 L. J. M. C. 100	634
	603, 615, 616	Gardner, 2 Moo. C. C. 95	667
Ganseshi Lal v. Nand Kishore, 34 A.		Garib, 17 A. L. J. 985, 53 I. C. 495	1032
487	376, 493	Garlick, 1 Den. C. E. 276	1422
Ganesh Lal v. Amir Khan, 8 B. L. R.		Garmukh Singh, 2 A. 218, F. B.	126, 129
83	806	Garnham, 8 Cox. 451	126
Ganesh Narayan Sathe, 13 B. 600	115,	Garr v. Selden, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 416	1254
	606, 1744	Garratt, 10 T. L. R. 167	1432
Ganesh Ram, 54 I. C. (Pat.) 619 21 Cr.		Garugu, 8 M. L. T. 462, 8 I. C. 1088	362
L. J. 139	1690	Gascoigne's case, 1 Leach 280	1413
Ganesh Singh v. Ram Raja, 3 B. L. R.		Gassey Mal, 3 W. R. 10	1483
45 P. C.	1597	Gasling v. Brooks, 2 F. & F. 76	463
Ganeshi Lal, 4 L. L. J. 484	1456	Gatee Meena (1869) P. R. 69	370, 402
Ganesh Wasudeva Mavlanker 55 B 322		Gathercole, 2 Lew. C. C. 254	1715
(331)	635	Gathercole v. Miall, 15 L. T. Ex. 179	1736
Ganesh Waman Joshi, 55 B. 233	435	Gati Mandal. 4 C. L. J. 89	727, 730,
Ganga, (1871) B. U. C. 59	713		737, 738
Ganga; 19 Bom. L. R. 56, 39 I. C. 308,		Gauns, 7 L. 561 (563)	1213
18 Cr. L. J. 468	1250	Gaunt v. Fynney, L. R. 8 Ch. 12	916
Ganga (Mt.) 11 C. P. L. R. 6	1227	Gauntlet Dyke v. Elliot, L. R. 4 C. C.	184
Ganga Bhat, 38 A. 517	1547		480
Ganga Charan Singh, 21 C. 337	784	Gauri Shankar, 6 A. 42	663, 769
Ganga Chunder Sen v. Gour Chandra		Gauri Shankar, 40 A. 360	990, 1033
Banikya, 15 C. 671	1745	Gavaran, 6 Cox. 64	321, 403
Ganga Devi, 12 A. L. J. 91, 22 I. C. 730	1208	Gaya, 9 O. L. J. 342, 69 I. C. 81, (1923)	612, 735
Ganga Dayal (1933) O. 374	618	O. 4	1535, 1515
Ganga Prasad, 29 A. 685	1750	Gaya Bhar, 38 A. 517	1550
Ganga Prasad, 27 A. 260	1385	Gaya Bhat, 28 A. 17	260
Gangappa, 2 Bom. L. R. 541	630	Gayadin, (1934) O. 124	501, 502
Gangaram Mulji, 6 B. H. C. R. 43	1258	Gaya Prasad, (1924) Pat. H. C. C. 29	743
Ganga Ram, 8 A. 38	730	Gaya Prasad v. Sardar Bhagat Singh, 30	749
Ganga Ram, 16 N. C. R. 52, 67 I. C. 619		A. 525 P. C.	530, 1139
23 Cr. L. J. 143	1459	Gaya Prasad, 36 A. 395
Ganga Ram, 9 B. 135	1258	Gaya Prasad (1928) A 745	500
Ganga Ram, 14 Bom. L. R. 1163, 17 I.		Gayasuddin Anant Pandit v. Madhu-
C. 1008	709, 710, 711	sudan 26 C. 574
Ganga Shahai, (1902) A. W. N. 52	671	Gayam Singh, (1915) P. L. R. 232, 29 I. C.	1033
Ganga Sahai, (1903) A. W. N. 68	676, 679	49	729, 1029
Ganga Singh, 5 N.W.P. H. C. R. 44	1762, 1763	Gaya Tali, (1930) A. 818	1123
Gangatam, 9 B. 135	1258	Gaylor, (1857) D. & B. 288	282
Gangu 31 A 448	1196	Gazi, 7 B. H. C. R. 83	620
Ganirs, 72, 561	1027	Gazi Abba Dore 7 B. H. C. R. 83	1077, 1080
Ganourai Lal Das, 16 C. 206	361, 364	Geach, 9 C. & P. 499	832
Gangoo Singh, 2 C. L.R. 389	611, 730	Gelen v. Hall, 2 H. & N. 379
Ganpat, (1884) P. R. 20	1217	Gendanlal v. Abdul Aziz Khan, 27 A.	1428
Ganpattee, (1869) B. U. C. 19	889	302	504

	PAGE		PAGE
Genger v. Lysaght, 49 L. T. 51	360	Ghulam Yusuf, 75 I. C. 297, 24 Cr. L. J.	1198
Genu, 18 C. W. N. 1276, 26 I. C. 152	512	921	656, 657
Genya, (1877) B, U. C. 129	1453	Ghulet, 7 A. 44	994, 996, 997
George, 3 Salk, 88	1510	Ghuntappa, (1882) 1 Weir 306	1030
George, 11 Cox. 41	1091	Ghunnai (1934) A. 475	1394
George Loveday, (1886) 1 Weir 337	1139, 1479	Ghusoo Khan, 5 W. R. 49	1031, 1033
Gersop, D. N. B. 442,	1424	Ghutali, 31 A. 48	1113, 1176
Ghagi Khan, (1934) Pesh. 110	414, 415	Gian Singh, 111 I. C. (L.) 665	667
3, A. L. J. 1545, 1550		Gibbon, 31 L. J. M. C. 98	1532
Gerish Chandra v. Akhoy Kumar, 62 L. C. (C.) 331, 22 Cr. L. J. 507	321	Gibbons, R. & R. 442	1284
Gerrish & Brown, 2 Moo. & R 219	820	Gibson, 8 Cox. 436	1279
Gerring v. Barfield, 16 C.B. (N.S.) 597	898, 898	Gilbert, 1 C. & R. 84	200, 206
Ghaffur Nath, 21 Bom. L. R. 1101	1057	Gilham, 1 Esp. 285	1304
54 I. C. 485	1057	Gill's case 1 Lew, 305	1419
Ghafor Natha, 21 Bom. L. R. 1101, 54 I. C. 485	1057	Gilles, 34 L. J. M. C. 50	1293, 1370
Ghafur (1887) P. R. No. 62	981	Giles Seddon v. Loane, 9 M. L. T. 20, 8 I. C. 325	1431
Ghanaya, (1879) P. R. No. 17	209, 603, 614	Giles, L. & C. 502	1420
Ghanashyam Singh, 6 Pat. 627	423, 1357	Giles, 10 Cox. 44	1028
Ghani Khan, 21 O. C. 134, 46 I. C. 844	508, 509	Gilpin v. Gilpin, 3 Hag. Ec. Rep. 150	138, 1507
Ghanta Vecianna, (1887) 1 Weir 500	1491	Gilson, R. & R 138	1519
Ghansam, 8 B. L. R. 538	701	Gil (Mrs.), (1904) P. L. R. 484	1305
Ghansam Das, 26 O. L. R. 165	1396	Gill's case, 1 Lew. 305	1685
Ghansyam, 4 Nag. L. R. 136	732, 1396	Gipps, v. Gipps, 11 H. L. C. 1 (27)	124, 1687
Gharaya, 19 B. 728	1018	Gipps v. Gipps, 11 H. L. C. 13 (14)	33
Ghasita v. Kalka, (1885) A. W. N. 49	950	Girdhar Dharamdas, 6 B. H. C. R. 33	168
Ghasita, (1919) P. R. 13, 51 I. C. 476,	1271, 1788	Girdharee, 10 W. R. 35	166
20 Cr. L. J. 492	1243	Girdhari, 8 A. 653	611
Ghasita, (1884) A. W. N. 25	317	Girdhari v. Uchit Jah, 8 C. 435	1426
Ghatu, 28 C. 613	314, 315	Girdharee, (1876) P. R. No. 16	110 779, 1426
Ghatu Pramanic, 21 C. 613	1034	Girdhari, 15 A. L. J. 883, 43 I. C. 110	167, 174, 1603
Ghasi, (1922) P. W. R. 165	414, 415	Girdhari Lal, 8 A. 653	1601
Ghazi Khan, (1934) Pesh 110	1470	Girdhari Lal, 2 O. W. N. 174, 86 I. C. 993, (1925) O. 413	1459, 1457
Ghazir (1930) A 329	314, 317	Girdhari Lal, (1913) P. R. No. 12, 6 I. C. 64, 11 Cr. L. J. 428	677
Ghinua, (1918) Pat. 57, F. B. 43 I. C. 423	611	Girdhari Mal 9 S. L. R. 202, 34 I. C. 655	730
Gholam Durbesh, 10 W. R. 36	252	Girdhari Monda! v. Uchit Jah, 8 C. 435	727, 742
Gholam Ahmed Kazi, 14 C. 314	1030	Girdhari Naik, 5 C. W. N. 727	526, 502
Gholam Hossain, (1866) P. R. No. 120	981, 990	Girdhar Singh, 3 L. L. J. 526, 64 I. C. 373, (1922) L. 135	1448
Ghosain, 18 A. L. J. 851, 57 I. C. 175.	1002	Girja Dayal, 25 O. C. 151, 69 I. C. 271, (1922) O. 250	423
Ghufar, (1887) P. R. 62	193, 1524, 1555	Girga Prasad, 57 A. 717	1325
Ghuha, (1913) P. R. No. 18, 20 I. C. 1002	779, 786	Girija Laxmappa, 6 Bom. L. R. 248	1347
Ghulam, 4 L. 399	192	Girij, (1904) 6 Bom. L. R. 1093	1767, 1768
Ghulam Ali, (1883) P. R. No. 19	920, 921, 922	Girish Chandra Mitter v. Jatadhari, 26 C. 653 F. B.	749, 750, 701
Ghulam Hossain, 73 I.C. 796, (1924) A. 78	738	Girish Muythe, 23 C. 420	1085
Ghulam Hussain, (1917) P.R. No. 5, 39 I. C. 473	1143	Gita Bai, 55 I. C. (N.) 205	500
Ghulam Hussain, (1879) P. R. No. 14	409	Gita Prasad Singh, (1924) Pat. H. C. C. 29	1113
Ghulam Hyder, 39 B. 523	592	Giyan Singh, (1914) P. L. R. 182, 24 I. C. 948	201
Ghulam Jilani, 26 P. L. R. 430, 88 I. C. 286, (1925) L. 559	986, 1043	Glanvil Lib, 1 C. 2, 4 Black, 75	206
Ghulam Khan, (1887) P. R. No. 14	1332	Glassington v. Rawlins, 3 East 407	1399
Ghulam Mahammed, (1917) P.R. No. 9, 39 I. C. 680	246, 1204	Gleed 12 cr, A. R. 32	1686
Ghulam Muhammed, 7 L. 484	1752	Glennie v. Glennie, 22 L. J. P. M. & A. 17	575, 578
Ghulam Mahomed, 9 M. 439	1164, 1788	Gloucester, (1873) 2 O'M. & H. 52	1343
Ghulam Mahomed, (1879) P. R. 13	986, 1043	Glyde, 37 L. J. M. C. 107	1309
Ghulam Muhiuddin, 3 L. L. J. 581, 53 I. C. 450	246	Gnosil, 1 C & P. 304	1034
Ghulam Mustafa, (1891) P. L. R. 68, 10 I. C. 838	361, 362	Gobadur Bhooyan, 13 W. R. 55	987
Ghulam Rasul, (1925) L. 119	1115	Gobinda, 1 B. 342	1271, 1403
Ghulam Rasul, 3 L. L. J. 284, 62 I. C. 331		Gobinda, 17 A. 576	663
Ghulam Jilani, (1889) P. R. No. 16		Gobind, 45 B. 668	1013
		Gobind Bollajee, (1828) Morley's Ding. (N. S.) 125

	PAGE		PAGE
Gobindu, (1919) P. R. No. 10. 51 I. C.	1690	Gooroo Churn Chung, 14 W. R. 69	364, 989
842, 20 Cr. L. J. 554	..	Gooroodass Rajbunsee, 4 W. R. 7	1195
Gobinath Mal I. C. L. R. 141	1316	Gopala, (1896) B. U. C. 865	1240
C. P. I. Weir 288. 289	648	Gopal 941 C 603, 925 R 228	1689
Gobind Chandra Seal, 19 C. 355	174, 1568	Gopal, (1903) A. W. N. 115	805, 807
Gobindo Mal, (1895) P. R. No. 21	1512	Gopal, (1925) R. 328, 94 I. C. 603	1681
Gobind Prasad, 2 A. 465	1699	Gopal, 10 Bom. L. R. 95	1583
Gobind Pershad v. Gurth, 28 C. 63	1013, 1592	Gopaldasami, 25 M. 729	1470
Gobind Ramappa, (1889) B. U. C. 467	390	Gopalia, 20 Bom. L. R. 138	267
Goburdhun, 14 W. R. 74	703	Gopal Bhikaji, (1873) B. U. C. 72	185,
Goburdhun, 6 W. R. 80	363, 386		409, 617
Gobardhan Bhuyan, 4 B. L. R. 110	673	Gopal Chunder Sirdar, 8 C. 728	1299
Goverdhone v. Habibulla, 3 C. W. N. 35	756	Gopal Dhanuk, 7 C. 96	734, 1025
Godha, 8 L. 263	1711	Gopal Kahar, 61 I. C. (C.) 171	612, 725
Godwin, 3 Dong 901	1676	Gopala Krishna, 6 M. L. J. 428, 6 I. C.	1602
Godi, (1896) B. U. C. 876	1568, 1598	776	..
Godlavedu Balayya, (1902) 1 Weir, 551	1603	Gopal Lall Sanyan, 46 C. L. J. 156, (1927)	467
Goff's Case, 1 Ventr. 216	1003	C. 751	123,
Gogarthy, 1 Cox. 107	1090, 1107, 1583	Gopal Naidu, 46 M. 605 (631) F. B.	305, 306
Gogun Chandra Ghose, 6 C. 247	379, 1003		117
Gohool Bowree, 5 W. R. 33	998, 999	Gopal v. Parsotam, 5 A. 121, F. B.	1792
Gohra, (1890) P. R. 7	603, 614	Gopalarama, (1896) B. U. C. 865	631
Gokal, (1879) P. R. No. 34	611, 793	Gopal Rai, (1905) P. R. No. 7, 2 Cr. L.	597, 599, 1177
Gokal, 3 S. L. R. 132, 4 I. C. 477	793	J. 44	1230, 1470
Gokal, 45 A. 142	1044	Gopal Singh, 20 C. 336	399
Gokal Chand, 36 R. L. R. 88	1515	Gopal Singh, 56 A. 6	790
Gokul v. Seithi Roshun Lal, 2 N. W. P. H.	1370	Gopal Singh, 1 Agra 21,	117, 1420
C. R. 82	992, 994	Gopal Singh, 116 I. C. (L.) 709	136
Gokavarapu, (1916) 2 M. W. N. 158, 36	115, 119, 123	Gopal v. Sakhoji, 18 B. 133	211, 369
I. C. 866	684	Gopal Sein, 8 W. R. (Cr.) 16	801
Gokuol Bowree, 5 W. R. 33	130	Gopi Mahto, 10 Pat. 821	671
Gokul Mandar v. Pudmanand, 29 C. 707	1515	Gopi Chand, (1918) P. R. 18, 46 I. C. 36	589
P. C.	1152	Gopinath, (1917) Pat. 267, 41 I. C. 148	186, 189, 200, 888
Gokuldas, (1874) B. U. C. 80	1006	Gopinath Paryah, (1905) 20 C. L. J. 555	988
Gokuldas Amarsce, (1933) S. 333	1370, 1449	Gorachand Gope, B. L. R. (Sup. Vol.)	1711
Gokul v. Seithi Roshon Lal, 2 N. W. P.	1518	443, F. B.	1013
H. C. R. 82	519	Gorachand Gopi, 5 W. R. 45, F. B.	1275
Gokul Chand (1901) P. R. No. 14	201	Gordon Cumming v. Green and Others,	511
Gokula Mala, (1881) Weir (3rd Ed.) 174	1360	(1891) 7 T. L. R. 403	300
Gokul Khalik, 29 C. W. N. 483 (1925)	1744	Gore's Case, 9 Co. 81	832 361, 362, 366
C. 674	1395	Gorle Kandugadu, (1912) M. W. N. 97,	1254
Golla Subta Reddi, 24 M. 81, (1879) 1	1090	13 I. C. 828	1712
Weir 520	311	Gorripati, 12 I. C. (M.) 216	1713
Golam Arfin, 13 W. R. 33	424	Gorris v. Scott, L. R. 9 Ex. 125	1422
Golam Hossein, 7 W. R. 10	1106, 1604	Gorie Sanker, 41 I. C. (L. B.) 832 361, 362, 366	1310
Golam Hussain, 22 C. W. N. 1005, 49 I. C.	637	Gory, 10 Cox. 23	629, 630
343, 20 Cr L. J. 151	399, 453	Goslett v. Garment, (1897) 13 T' L. R.	929
Golap v. Bholanath, 38 C. 880	282	391	285, 929
Goldsmith, 12 Cox. 594	969	Gostling v Brooks, 2 F. & F. 76	1667
Goldthrope, 2 Moo. C. C. 244	631	Goss, Bell C. C. 208	916
Golla, 22 J. C. 737	1385	Goseignes case 1 Leach 280	1470
Goluck Chung, 5 W. R. 75	1270	Gothumukkula, (1924) M. W. N. 438	378
Goluck Chunder, 13 W. R. 16	1711		995
Goluck Chandra Pal v. Kali Charn De, 13	1091	Gotty v. Field, 15 L. J. Q. B. 408	715, 718
C. 175	1323	Gould v. Stuart, (1896) A. C. 575	229, 228
Goman Saya, (1913) 6 Bur, L. J. 153,	1798	Goulder v. Goulder, (1892) P. 240	519
21 I. C. 658	243, 1773	Gronnt v. Fynney, L. R. 8 Ch. 12	970, 1107
Goma v. Gokul Das, 3 B. 74		Gour Benode Dutt, 21 W. R. 10	1107
Gonesh Doobey, 5 C. 351		Gourchand Chong, 18 W. R. 19	192, 195
Ganeshi Lal, 27 A. 258		Gour Chunder Polee, 1 W. R. 17	1371
Gonga Prosad, 27 A. 260		Gour Chunder Chuckerbutty, 10 W. R.	375
Goodman v. Harvey, 4 Ad. & El. 870		46
Goodale v. castle cro, 554		Gour Chunder, 8 W. R. 2
Goode, 6 Cox. 318		Gour Chunder Das, 24 W. R. 5
Goola, (1867) P. R. No. 15.		Gour Gobindo, 6 W. R. 55
Goolab, 5 Bom. L. R. 597		Gour Gobind Thakoor, 6 W. R. 55 (56,
Goolzarkhan, 9 W. R. 30		57)
		Gouridas, 36 C. 659 (664)
		Gour Narayan v. Til Bikram, 25 C. W. N.
		838, 65 I. C. 1004, 23 Cr. L. J. 220
		Gouri Shankar 41 I. C. 830

	PAGE		PAGE
Governor v. Moti Lal , 17 C. W. N. 1253, 20 I. C. 81	18, 1264	Griffiths v. Payne , 11 A. & F. 131	408
Government of Bombay v. Ganga , 4 B. 330	1670	Griffiths v. Lewis , 7 Q. B. 61	326
Government of Bengal v. Umesh Chunder Mitter , 16 C. 319	1792	Griss Chunder , 7 C. 87	611
Gover , 9 Cox. 282	817	Groombridge , 7 C. & P. 582	310
Govinda , (1873) B. U. C. 79	243	Grove (Daniel) 1 Weir, 489	1475, 1480
Govind Mahton , 64 I. C. (Pat.) 510	129	Groves , (1882) 1 Weir 521 (522)	1517
Govind Mal , (1895) P. R. No. 21	174	Gromit , 6 C. & P. 629	297
Govind Presad , 2 A. 465	154, 1512, 1513, 1515, 1536	Gubala , (1887) Weir. 188	732
Govindu Swamy , 21 M. L. J. 748, 11 I. C. 590	1457	Gubick v. Carrington , 18 St. Tr. 1029	285
Govind Pershad Pandey v. Garth , 28 C. 63	1708	Gudhare , 8 A 663	568
Govindarajulu , (1886) 1 Weir 382	1242, 1394	Gudru Subbamma , 14 I. C. (M.) 204	1657
Govinda , 1 B. 342	980	Guelder, Bell , C. C. 284	1369
Govindas , 6 B. H. C. R. (Cr.) 76	155	Guerdon v. Wintersted , Cro. Elliz. 308	154, 1711
Govind , 3 Pat. L. T. 127, 66 I. C. 334	317	Gujan , (1893) P. R. 18	967, 1041
Govinda Pillai v. Thayammal , 28 M. 57	114	Gujjar , (1911) P. R. No. 12, 12 I. C. 967	1041
Govindan v. Atchutha , 39 M. 433	1774	Guj Singh , (1875) P. R. No. 11	857
Govindarajulu (1914) M. W. N. 352, 23 I. C. 208	1479	Gulab 75 I. C. 693, (1923) L. 315	1029
Govindu Panja , 8 B. 295	1436	Gulab , 1 A. L. J. 125	158, 1116
Gowkaran Lal , 1 Pat. L. T. 200, 56 I. C. 775, 21 Cr. L. J. 519	1348	Gulab 14 A. 686	195, 967
Gowardhan Das , (1907) P. W. R. No. 38	511, 513, 504	Gulab , 88 I. C. 365, (1925) L. 584	1034
Granden v. Walden , 3 Lev. 17	1712	Gulabchand , (1927) N. 163	512
Grand Junction Canal Co. v. Shugar , L. R. 6 Ch. 438	172	Gulbad Shah , (1888) P. R. No. 37,	1404
Grant v. Secretary of State for India , 2 C. P. D. 445	285, 1765	Gulbadan (1885) P. R. No. 25	381, 393
Grant v. Gould , (1792) 2 Hen. Bl. 69	1745	Gulab Hamir (1894) B. W. J. 688;
Gray , (1900) 2 Q. B. 36	802, 1733	6 M. H. C. R. (App.) 2; 1 Weir	259
Gray , 4 F. & F. 1102	1504	36, 37	444, 448
Greathead , 14 Cox. 198	1158, 1436	Gulab Singh , 35 I. C. (A.) 991,	791, 1782
Great North of England Ry Co. , 9 Q. B. 312	901	Gulab Singh , 32 A. 116	671
Greaves v. Keene , L. R. 4 Ex. D. 73	1159	Gulam Ahmad , 15 Bom. L. R. 104,	501
Great Western Ry Co., v. Bailei 34 L. J. M. C. 31	847	19 I. C. 190	1141
Great Yarmouth , (1906) Printed Judgments, 7	578	Gulam Hoosein , 11 Bom. L. R. 849	1280
Green , (1835) 7 C. & P. 156	894, 895, 1057	Gulam Hyder , 39 B. 523	581,
Green v. Chapman , 4 Bing, N. C. 92	1736	Gulam Jelani , (1889) P. R. No. 16	1118
Green , 3 C. & K. 209	822	Gulam Mohiuddin , 3 I. L. J. 581,	129,
Green , 3 F. & F. 274	1195	63 I. C. 480	175
Greenacre , 8 C. & P. 35	978	Gulbad Shah , (1888) P. R. No. 37
Greenbalgh , C. C. 26 Dears	1461	Gul Mahamad v. Akbar Ali , 99 I. C. 604 (1927) L. 129	1583, 1767
Gregg , 14 St. Tr. 1371	458	Gullu , (1904) A. W. N. 113	361
Gregory , 2 F. & F. 153	270	Gulshah , 6 S. L. R. 121, 17 I. C. 78	364
Gregory (1866) 1 J. (N. S.) 423	13, 1293	Gul Shah , (1914) P. W. R. 41, 25 I. C. 1005	961
Gregory , L. R. I. C. C. R. 77	400	Gulzarilal , 24 A. 254 (1882) A. W. N. 229	359, 1373
Grey (Lord) , 9 St. Tr. 127	444	Gulzari Lal , 3 C. W. N. 760, (1926) C. 615	564
Grey , 4 F. & F. 73	865	Guman , (1873) B. U. C. 75	590
Griel v. General Iron Screw Collier Co. , 35 L. J. C. P. 321	573	Gumbher , 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. 234	1680
Grile v. General from Screwcollar Co. , 35 L. J. C. P. 321	573	Gumphat , (1868) P. R. 6,	1443
Grimes v. Lovel , 12 Mod. 242	493	Gunanundu , 29 C. W. N. 432, 86 I. C. 213, (1925) C. 613	1367, 1468
Griepe , 12 Mad. 145	668	Gunamony , 3 C. W. N. 758	730, 732
Griepe , 1 Lord Rayon 256	670	Gunder Singh , 4 W. R. (Cr.) 6	1193, 1208
Griesley , 1 Vent 4	898	Gundial , 55 A. 119	1470
Griffiths v. Place , 20 L. T. N. S. 484	851	Gunesh Laskar , 9 W. R. 72	1076
Griffiths v. Lewes 17 Q. B. 61	1599, 1713	Gumditta , 145 I. C. (L) 284	1046
Griffin , 11 Cox. 402	963	Gunesha , (1873) P. R. No. 15	877
Griffin, Cas, Temp Hardw , 39	1715	Gunga Chunder v. Gour Chunder , 15 C. 671 (673)	387
Griffiths v. Taylor , 48 L. J. App. (C. P.) 152	292	Gunga Ram , 8 A. 38	738
		Gunga Singh , 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 44	176
		Gunjar Mohammed , 69 I. C. (C.) 451, 23 Cr. L. J. 723	1584
		Gunjra , 48 A. 687	123

	PAGE		PAGE
Gun Pal, (1906) U. B. R. 4 Cr. L. J.	287	Haku, 114 I. C. (L.)	438
Gunpatya, 5 C. P. L. R. 20	792	Hakim, (1884) P. R. No. 27	939
Gunwant, 13 N. L. R. 35	938	Hakim (1884) P. R. No. 41	362, 381, 940
Gunya, (1886) B. U. C. 295	670	Hakim (1881) P. R. No. 5	1389
Gurdeit Singh (1872) P. R. No. 12	745, 917	Hakiman, (1905) P. L. R. No. 194	1403
Gurdit Singh (1889) P. R. No. 17	381	Halim, (1881) P. R. No. 34	1677
Gurdit Singh, (1883) P. R. No. 27	252	Halimmozumah v. Municipal Commis-
	268,	sioners, 13 W. R. 340	273
	269, 1119, 1208	Hall, 1 Mood. C. C. 474	1286
Gurdita, (1917) P. R. No. 19	732	Hall 3 C. & P. 409	1369
Gureebollah Maithya Gazee, 6 W. R.		—13 Cox 49	1284
42	995	—R. & R. 355	1580
Gurjoon Aheer, 7 W. R. 37	683	Hall v. Cox., (1899) 1 Q. B. 198	933
Gurlingeppa, 23 Bom. L. R. 817, 63 I.		Hall v. Harding, 4 Burr. 2426	1258
C. 154	383	Hall v. Mac William, (1901) 20 Cox.
Gur Narayan Parsad, 25 A. 534	1753	33	931, 935
Gurney v. Langland, 5 B. & A.		Hallet, 9 C. & P. 751	337
330	1251, 1585	Hallid, (1889) L. T. 702	1040
Gurdner, L. C. 243.	346, 1258	Hamedin v. Brudd, 19 Q. B. 306
Gurram Siddugadu, (1886) 1 Weir.		Hamid Ali, 52 C. 1015	1258
492	1474, 1259	Hamid Ali v. Imtiazan, 2 A. 71	1675
Gureeboollah, 5 W. R. 42	974	Hamilton v. Pandorf. 12 App. Cas. 518	294
Gurumahanty, (1894) 1 Weir. 465	1359	Hamilton, 1 C. & K. 212	1293, 1296
Gurucharam Singh (1934) L. 467,	1042	Hamelin v. Brudd	1567
Guru Siddhesnar, (1897) B. U. C.		Hamilton, 8 C. & P. 49	1281
919	1118	—9 Q. B. 271	1498
Gutch and others, Moox & Malk,		Hamira, (1866) P. R. No. 37	1483
348	1704	Hammack v. White, 11 C. B. N. S. L.
Gutch Fisher and Alexander, Moa &		& C. 567	892
Mal, 433	1761	Hamma Timmappa, 30 B. L. R. 383	242
Guzzala Hanuman, 26 M. 467	1275	Hamad 134 I. C. (L.) 589	1689
	1412, 1413, 1402	Hamman, 35 A. 560	189
Gyan Chunder Roy v. Pratap Chunder		Hammond, 2 Esp. 719	447
Das, 7 C. 208	730	Hammond v. Howell, 1 M. 84, O. A.
		2 M. 218	277
		Hampden v. Walsh. 1 Q. B. D. 189	931
		Hampton v. Southwark, etc., Co.,
		(1900) A. C. 3	161
		Hanbury v. Lovett, 16 W. R. (Eng)
		795	1567
		Hancock, 14 Cox. 119	1265
		Handley, 1 F. & F. 648	1190
		Haneef Fakeer, 23 W. R. 50	995
		Hanmanta, 1 B. 610	142, 655, 1266
		Hanmant Rao, 75 I. C. (N.) 764	1296
		Hanmappa. 25 Bom. L. R. 231,
		(1923) B. 262	700
		Han Nagji, 7 B. H. C. R. 74	861
		Hannah v. Jagannath & Co., 42 C.
		262	1672
		Hankinson v. Bilby, 16 M. & W. 445	1718
		Hanuman, 35 A. 560	1116, 1082, 1033, 967
		Hanuman, 57 I. C. 103, 21 Cr. L. J.
		583	1458
		Hansa Pathak v. Banshilal Das, 8 C.
		W. N. 519	1264
		Hanuman, (1908) O. C. 148	1675
		Hanuman Sharma, 60 C. 179	1178
		Hanund-anath	1512
		Honway v. Boulton, 4 C. & F. 350	1488
		Hansaraj 115 I. C. (L.) 469	1577
		Happoo Mal, 22 A. L. J. 662	916
		Haradhan, 19 C. 380	167
		Haradhan Maiti, 14 C. 513, F. B. 1581, 1590
		Harak Chand, 40 A. 84	850, 851
		Harakrishna Mahtah, 121 I. C. (Pat)
		321	1368
		Hara Kumar Chowdhurani v. R. Sari.
		28 C. 314	1466
		Haran Mandal, 2 B. L. R. App. J. C.
		1	696

	PAGE		PAGE
Haran Mandal, 10 W. R. 31	654	Hari Narayan Biswas, 3 C. W. N. 65	731
Harb v. Catherall, 14 L. T. 801	1739	Hari Ram, 62 I. C. 867, 22 Cr. L. J. 595	1407
Harbons, 22 A. L. J. 820	1533	Hari Ramji, 9 Bom. L. R. 27	1276, 1409
Hardcastle v. The South Yorkshire Ry. Co., 28 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. 139	857	Hari Sarvothama, 32 M. 338	466, 476
Hardeo, (1880) P. R. No. 7	1194, 1227	Hari Shankar, 6 Bom. L. R. C. 375	1427, 1450
Hardeo Singh, 60 I. C. (Pat.) 567	519	Hari Shankar, 4 Bom. L. R. 375	1437
Hardeo Singh, v. Hanuman, 26 A. 244	736, 737	Hari Shankar, 2 B. H. C. R. 130	1417
Hardeo (1934) S. 149	928, 1446	Hari Singh, 3 C. L. R. 49	518, 519
Har Dial, (1905) P. L. R. 503	1269	Hari Singh, 33 P. L. R.	154, 1031, 1597
Har Dial, (1905) P. R. No. 58	243	Hari Singh, (1894) P. R. No. 25	598, 599
Hardit Singh, (1911) P. L. R. 161, 10 I. C. 278	573	Hari Singh, 28 A. 100	921, 922
Hardwar Pal, 34 A. 322, 10 A. L. J. 61	611	Hari Singh, 52 I. C. (Pat.) 276, 20 Cr. L. J. 612	1472
Hardwick v. Chandler, 2 Stra. 1138, 1712	732	Harisin 7 C. & P 781	1357
Hardwicke v. Lane (1904) 1 K. B. 204	929	Harish Chandra, 27 C. W. N. 1042, 75 I. C. 328	621
Hardy and Horn Tooke, 24 St. Tr. 203	456	Harjee Mall v. Imam Ali, 8 C. W. N. 278	1789
Hardyal, 3 B. L. R. (A. Cr.) 35	685	Harjiwan Walji, 50 B. 174	173, 1571
Hardy East P. C. 93	456	Harkha, (1906) A. W. N. 193	313
Hare v. Mellers, 3 Leon, 138	1739	Harle v. Catherall, 14 L. T. 801	1729
Harendra Barman, (1931) C. 606	247	Harley, 4 C. & P. 369	1122, 1123, 1163
Harendral Lal Roy, 8 C. W. N. 908	537	Harnam, 84 I. C. 1055,	759
Harendra Nath v. Jyotish Chandra, 52 C. 188	1440, 1442, 1512	Harnamdas, (1930) L. 100	260
Harendra Barman 134 I. C. (C) 1041	1031, 1597	Harnaman, (1901) P. R. No. 6	1329
Hargayan, 45 A. 159	758	Harnam Singh, 16 A. L. J. 600, 47 I. C. 875, 19 Cr. L. J. 975	1366
Hargobind v. Greaves, Cotton & Co., (1900) P. R. No. 32	1641	Harnam Singh, (1919) P. R. No. 21	1319
Hargobind v. Ralli Brothers, (1902) P. R. 35	1640	52 I. C. 395	659
Hargovandas, 9 B. H. C. R. 448	1427, 1452	Harnam Singh, (1890) P. R. No. 27	1700
Hargrave, 5 C. & P. 170	339	Har Narain, 84 I. C. 706, (1925) A. 239	1593
Hargreaves v. Diddams, L. R. 13 Q. B. 582	177, 271	Harnay 21 st. T. (N. S.) 71	702
Har Pian 49 A. 87	1027	Har Piari, 49 A. 57	1375
Hari, (1877) B. U. C. 126	906, 1502	Harprasad Singh v. Hulsan Chamar 110 I. C. (Pat) 98	476
Hari, 6 B. L. R. 887	815	Harris st. 925	1363
Hari (1887) B. U. C. 215	883	Harris, 6 Cox. 363	1485
Hari Bapuji, (1897) B. U. C. 920	1259	Harris, 15 Cox. 73	679
Haribhai, 42 B. 391	1208	Harris, 5 B. Ald. 926	925
Hari Bhuimal, 9 C. W. N. 974	1251, 1512	Harris, 40 L. J. M. C. 67	930
Hari Bhuimali. 6. C. W. N. 97	1259	Harris, 10 Cox. 352	1504
Hari Bijal, 17 Bom. L. R. 906, 31 I. C. 345	188, 1030	Harris, 4 F. & F. 342	865, 1353
Hhari Charan and Srish Chandra, 38 C. 68	183	Harris, 40 A. 119	1601, 1486
Hariditt (1925) L. 274, 6 L. L. J. 622.	1131, 1208	Harris, 7 C. & P. 428	1701
Haridas, (1883) A. W. N. 110	258	Harris, v. Dixon, Cro. Jac. 158	849
Harider Singh, 2 Pat. L. J. 541, 42 I. C. 142	511	Harris, v. London County Council, (95) 1. Q. B. 240	1738
Hari Dagon, (1896) B. U. C. 872	1375	Harris v. Thompson, 13 C. B. 333	822
Harihar, 1 C. P. L. R. 24	551, 1298	Harrison, 2 Lewin 118	1713
Harihar Singh, 90 I. C. (Pat.) 154, 26 Cr. L. J. 1498	189	Harrison. v. Berington, 8 C. & P. 708	1740
Hari Jan Mhd. (1935) S. 105	758	Harrison v. Bush, 25 L. J. Q. B. 25	1742
Hari Krishan, (1910) P. W. R. 40, 8 I. C. 256	1154	Harrison v. Bush 5 E. & B. 344	912
Hari Lakshman, 10 B. 185	606	Harrison v. Southwark & Vauxhall Water Co., (1891) 2 Ch. 409 (414)	863
Hari Lal, 14 B. 180	638	Harrison v. Thornborough, 10 Mod. 196	1711
Hari Lal, (1889) B. U. C. 433	642	Harry Jones, 28 C. W. N. 831	1372
Hari Lal, 13 O. J. 243, 7 I. C. 1012	1332, 1333	Harsha Nath, 42 C. 1152	446, 447
Hari Lal, 45 A. 281	1385	Harsukh Rai, (1919) 3 P. W. R. 3	237, 546
Hari Mandal v. Jafar, 22 C. 457	149	Hart v. Colley, 44 Ch. D. 193	1624
		Hartford v. Morris, 2 Hagg. Con. Rep. 423, 434	1659
		Hartley, R. & R. 169	1284
		Hartly v. Herring, 8 T. R. 130	1711
		Hartshorn, 6 Cox. 395	1566
		Harvey, 1 Leach, 467	465, 477, 771, 977
		Harvey, 2 B. & C. 268	1037
		Harvey, L. R. 1, C. C. R. 284	814, 844

	PAGE		PAGE
Harvey 2 St. Tr. (N. S.) 1	1578	Henry, 8 C. & P. 809	1304
Harwick, (1848) 1 P. R. & D. 74	574	Henry Hunt, (1820) 3 B. & A. 566	466
Hasan, 2 Bom. L. R. 613	1446	Hensler, 11 Cox. 570 2217,	1426, 1783
Hasan Ali, (1894) 7 N. W. 76	785	Henson, Dears, C. C. 24	869
Hashim, 7 S. L. R. 29, 20 I. C. 619	1032, 1033, 1043	Henwood, 11 Cox. 526	1487
Hashmat, (1882) P. R. No. 19	1681	Henwood v. Harrison, L. R. 7 C. P.	725, 728
Hashim, 1 Leach 418	1348	606
Hassan Mirza v. Mt. Mabbuban. 18		Heramba, v. Kali Prasanna, 1 C. W.	189
C. W. N. 391, 23 I. C. 723	730	N. 465	809
Hasrat Mohani, 24 Bom. L. R. 885	453, 456	Hermann, 4 Q. B. D. 842
(1922) B. 284		Hermann v. Seshachel, 13 C. B. (N.S.)	267
Hathim Mondal, 24 C. W. N. 619, 56		392, 403
I. C. 849, 21 Cr. L. J. 515	1407	Hersham v. Blackwood, 11 C. B. 111	1735
Hatim Moonshee, 8 W. R. 11	1607	Hescott's Cases, 1 Salk 330	564
Haukinson v. Billy, 16 M. & W.	1709	Heseltine, 12 Cox. 404	1504
442		Hetherington. 5 Jur. 529	950
Haveli, (1886) P. R. No. 25	1148	Hetley, 97	668
Hawkins v. Gathercole, 6 De M & G. 1	135	Hevey's Case, 1 Leach 229, 2 East	1573
Hawkins, 1 Den. C. C. 584	1362	P. C. 856
Hawkins, 3 C. & P. 892	191	Hewgill, Dears C. C. 315	1424, 1454
Hawkins v. Hawkins, L. R. 16 P. D.	1686	Hewitt, 4 F. & F. 110	1089
177	1357	Hexham (1892) Day's Elec. Cases, 68	578
Hawtin, 7 C. & P. 781		Hexham and Rochester, (1892) Day's
Hay, 28 O. C. 230, 88 I. C. 830 (1925)	1374	Elec. Cases, 14 104	575
462	210	Heyes v. Heyes & Mason, L. R. B.	1686
Hayat, (1888) P. R. No. 11	1393	P. D. 11
Hayat, 110 I. C. (L) 673	1382	Hibbins v. Lee, 4 F. & F. 243	1734
Hay's Case, L. R. 10 Ch. 593	810,	Hicklin, L. R. 3 Q. B. 360	920, 921
Hayah, (1904) P. R. No. 14	811, 1273,	Hickman, C. & P. 151	959, 960
	172 1427,	Hickman's Case, 2 East P. C. p. 728	1304, 1316
Haycraft v. Creasy, 2 East 92	1286	1 Leach, 278	1040, 1296
Haydon. 7 C. & P. 445	112	Hickman, R. & M. C. C. 34
Hayes, 12 M. 39	316, 317 531, 532	Hick's (Str. Baptist) Case, Hob. 215
Hayes, 1 F & F.	1256
Haynes, 12 Co. Rep. 113	1488	Hicks v. Faulkner, 8 Q. B. D. 167	740
Haywood, R. & R. 16	1273	C. 524
Hazari, (1930) O. 353	412	Hidayata, (1915) P. R. No. 3 28 I.	1337
Hazzarilal, 2 Pat. L. T. 72, 61 C.	1015	524	574
836	1482	Higgerston (1896) 5 O' M. & H. 74	400
Hazal Gulkhan, 40 C. 116	1271, 1321	Higgins, 2 East 5	861
Hazelton, 44 L. J. M. C. 11	1031,	Higginson, 2 Burr. 1233
Hazura, 5 L. L. J. 52, (1923) L. 161	1575	Highmore v. Harrington (Earl and Hazrat Galkhan, 109 I. C. (C.) 482	1254	Countess of), 3 C. B. (N. S.) 142	1712
	888	Hikmat Khan v. Sakina, 53 A. 416	725
Head, I. F. & F. 350	1362	Hill, R. & R. 190	1484
Heaven Pender, 11 Q. B. D. 503	1047	Hill, 8 C. & P. 275	1578
Hedge's Case, 2 Leach 1033	1434	Hill v. Biggs, 3 Moo. P. C. 465
Heera Jeeta, 3 Bom. L. R. 395	609, 981	Hilliard (Sir Christopher) v. Constable
Heeramun Hulwye, 5 W. R. 5	591	Cro. Eliz. 306	1713
Heeramun Singh 8 W. R. 30	1093	Hilton, 1. Bell, C. C. 20	429
Heera Singh, (1871) P. R. No. 1	749	Hilton's Case, 2 Lew. 214	1050
Hegarty v. Shive, 2 L. R. Ir. 273	531	Himanchal Singh, 52 A. 568, F. B.	590
O. p. 4 L, R. Ir. 288	1711	Himayat Ali (1905) P. R. No. 110	626
Hem Chandra, 52 C. 151	758	2 F. J. 64
Hemendra Prosad, 31 C. W. N. 168,		Hindle v. Birtwistle, (1897) 1 Q. B.	910
(1927) C. 215		192
Heming v. Power, 10 M. & W. 564	1297	Hindmarsh, 2 Leach 569	1019, 1020
Hemraj, 6 I. C. (A.) 250	1620	Hing v. Silai, 57 C. 849	860, 1350
Henderson v. Preston, 21 Q. B. D.		Hingan Khan, (1884) P. R. No. 32	614
362		Hira, 45 A. 250	364
Hendy, 4 Cox. 243		Hirabai v. Dinshaw 51 B. 167	1744
Hennessy & Co. v. Keatin, (1908) 8		Hira, (1895) P. R. No. 18	403
Ir. R. 43. O. A. 24, T. L. R. 534		Hiralal, (1908) P. R. No. 36	1347, 1361
		Hiralal, 139 I. C. (Pat.) 543	723
		—(1883) P. R. No. 28	583, 587
		Hiralal, 61 I. C. (A.) 165	1036, 1039
		Hiralal, 24 O. C. 18, 61 I. C. 237	636
		Hiranand, 26 I. C. (S.) 230	1727

	PAGE		PAGE
Hira Nand Ojha, 10 C. W. N. 1099 ..	656	Hossein Munjee, 9 W. R. 70 ..	586
Hiran Kumar v. Mangal Sen, 17 C. W. N. 761, 20 I. C. 222 ..	1448	Hotchard, (1817) unrep. cited in Folkard's Libel (5th Ed.) 821, 822 ..	1715
Hira Singh, (1872) P. R. No. 32 ..	565	Hotchin v. Hindmersh, (1891) 2 Q. B. 180 ..	176
Hira Singh, 17 N. L. R. 88 ..	636	Houksell v. Smyth, 29 L. J. (N. S.) C. P. 203 ..	857
Hird v. Wood, 38 Sol. J. 234 ..	1706	Howana, (1889) B. U. C. 451 ..	1147
Hirde Ram 9 C. P. L. R. 18 ..	1764	Howard, 12 B. 167 ..	1705
Hiri, (1888) B. U. C. 367 ..	165	Howard v. Gosset, 10 Q. B. 377, 14 L. J. (Q. B.) 375 ..	374
Hiru Mondul, 17 C. 852 ..	1256	Howard v. Mull. 1 Bom. H. C. R. (App.) 85 ..	1725, 1726
Hiru Satna, (1929) B. 12 ..	597	Howell, 2 Den. 362 ..	1254
Hissamuddln, 3 W. R. 37 ..	693	Howell, 9 C. & P. 437 ..	429, 965
Hit Narain, 96 I. C. 505, (1926) Pat. 517. ..	672	Howell, 4 F. & F. 160 ..	444
Hoare v. Silverlock, 12 Q. B. 624 ..	1717	Hoy v. Bush, 1 M. & G. 775 (780) ..	373
Hoatson, 2 C. & R. 777 ..	1578	Hoyat, (1905) P. R. No. 14 ..	249
Hoeramun Hulwye, 5 W. R. 5 ..	1453	Hub Ali, 21 A. L. J. 187, (1923) A. 329 ..	1673
Hobson, Dears, C. C. 400 ..	1400	Hube, 5 T. R. 542 ..	944
Hock Cheng & Co. v. Tha Ko Do, 6 Bur. L. T. 13 F. B., 19 I. C. 145 ..	1360	Huckle v. Reynolds, 7 C. B. (N. S.) 114 ..	1711
Hodgson, (1730) 1 Leach. 6 ..	935	Huddersfield, (1869) W. & Br. 39 ..	593
Hodgson, 7 Cox. 78 ..	1581	Hudson, 2 Str. 909 ..	890
Hodgson 25 L. J. M. C. 78 ..	1531	Hudson v. Maere, 33 L. J. M. C. 65 ..	271
Hoggerton, (1896) 5 O'M. H. 69 ..	572	Hughes, 9 C. & P. 752 ..	1235
Hogson v. Scarlett, 1 B. & Ald. 244 ..	1748	Hughes, 4 Cox. 477 ..	1091
Holbrook, 3 Q. B. D. 60 ..	476	Hughes, 6 Jur. 177 ..	414
Holden, R. & R. 154 ..	1578	Hughes v. Buckland, 15 M. & W. 346 ..	267
Hole v. Barlow, 4 Com. Beng. N. S. 334 ..	855, 856	Hukam Din v. Allachi, (1879) P. R. No. 27 ..	1687, 1692
Hole v. Sitingbourne & Sheernes Ry. C. 6 H. & N. 488 ..	900	Hukum Chand, 73 I. C. (A.) 805, 24 Cr. L. J. 693, (1923) A. 544 ..	1478, 1483, 1485
Holland, 1 T. R. 692 ..	278	Hukum Singh, 24 A. L. J. 536, 94 I. C. 889, (1926) A. 474 ..	590
Holland, 2 M. & Rob. 351 ..	962	Hukum Singh, 84 I. C. 1150, (1925) L. 289 ..	759
Holland-Bombay Trading Co. v. Buktcar Mull, 8 C. W. N. 42 ..	1625, 1639	Hull, Kel 40 ..	1055
Holiday v. Wakefield, (1891) A. C. 81 ..	161	Hulodhur Poroc, 2 C. 383 ..	883, 884
Holloway, 1 Den. 370 ..	1249	Hulton & Co. v. Jones, (1910) A. C. 20 ..	1712
Holloway, Cro. Car. 131 ..	380	Hume v. Marshall, 42 J. P. 136 ..	1738
Holloway, 5 C. & P. 524 ..	1369	Humphreys v. Stilwell, 2 F. & F. 590 ..	1011
Holloway, v. Clent, (1903) R. P. C. 525. ..	1627	Hunt, 1 Moo. C. C. 93 ..	1738 1742
Holloway v. Holloway 5 A. 71 ..	1686	Hunt v. Great Northern Ry. Co., (1891) 2 Q. B. 189 ..	1714, 1747
Holmes, 22 L. J. (M. C.) 122. ..	865, 925	Hunt, (1824) 2 St. Tr. (N. S.) 69 ..	930
Holmes, 12 Q. B. D. 23 ..	1447	Hunt v. Williams, (1888) 52 J. P. 821 ..	1431
Holmes Dears, C. C. 207 ..	1768	Hunter, 10 Cox. 642 ..	1683
Holmes v. Mather, L. R. 10 Ex. 261 ..	300	Hunter, 61 I. C. (A.) 238, 22 Cr. L. J. 382 ..	1722
Holt, 4 T. R. 436 ..	1700	Hunter v. Sharp, 4 F. & F. 983 ..	766, 770
Holt, 5 T. R. 444 ..	476	Hurdut Surma, 8 W. R. 68 ..	611
Holt, 8 Cox. 411 ..	1708	Huree Ram, 3 N. W. P. H. C. R. 194. ..	1143, 1235
Holt v. Scholefield, 6 T. R. 691 ..	1711	Huree Mohun Mythee, 18 C. 49 ..	1000
Hoondraj v. Mithomal, 84 I. C. (B.) 58. ..	112	Huri Giree, 10 W. R. 26 ..	1259
Home v. Bentinck, 2 B. & B. 130 ..	1719	Huris Chunder Das v. Bolai Audhicary, 19 W. R. 75 ..	1442
Homes, 107 I. C. 772 ..	789	Hurjee Mull v. Imam Ali Sircar, 8 C. W. N. 278, F. B. ..	1595
Hood, R. & N., C. C. R. 281 ..	373	Hurmukh Rai, (1870) P. R. No. 15 ..	252
Hoost, 2 East P. C. 950 ..	1526	Hurnarain, (1870) P. R. No. 20 ..	535, 537
Hope v. Sir W. C. Leng & Co., (1907) 123 T. L. R. 243 ..	1738	Hurnath Roy, 3 W. R. 54 ..	256
Hopely, 2 F. & F. 202 ..	287, 963	Hurpaul, 4 W. R. 9 ..	1702
Hopkins, 8 C. & P. 591 ..	1020	Hurtert v. Weines, 26 Dowa 134 ..
Hori Charan Singh, 27 C. 455 ..	653
Hopper, (1892) P. R. No. 6 ..	1520, 1780
Hormusji, 19 B. 715 ..	891
Horne, Cowp. 762 ..	470
Horne v. Took; 1 East P. C. 98 ..	456
Horsee Mahapatro v. Dinobundo, 7 C. 523 ..	112
Horsfall v. Thomas, L. J. Ex. 322 ..	1428
Horsham Case, (1876) 1 O'M. & H. 52 ..	574
Hosein Beg, (1882) P. R. No. 16 ..	904
Hossein Buksh, 6 C. 96 ..	515, 512

PAGE		PAGE
Hurry Charn Chuckerbutty, 10 C. 140	1017	Indramma 118 I. C. M. 817	1046
Hurnath Chowdhury, 7 W. R. 58	618	Indra Nath Banerjee, 25 C. 425..	866
Husain Baksh, 25 A. 261	759, 763	Indrajit, 11 O. L. J. 40	500
Husain Baksh, 29 A. 569	529, 530	Indra Talwar v. Narasimha 29 I. C. (M.) 670	1493, 1494
Hussainally Mahomedally, (1929) S. 469	1370	Indrachand, 56 B. 213	671
Hushrut Sheik, 6 W. R. 85	1288, 1388	Inga, 4 Bur. L. T. 267, 13 I. C. 285	314
Hussa, (1873) P. R. No. 8	1395	Inhabitants of Hodnetto, 1 T. R. 96	116
Hussain, 15 B. 564	619	Innes v. Newman, (1894) 2 Q. B. 292	926, 916
Hussainan, 4 L. L. J. 445	1029, 1561	In Ruding V. Smith 2 Hegg Cons. R. 371	1662
Hussain Bibi, 20 S. L. R. 74, 92 I. C. 248, (1926) S. 15	1520	Instan, (1893) 1 Q. B. 450	1056
Hussainuddy, 11 W. R. 49	366, 378, 386	International, 3 A. & E. 321	480
Hussin, (1872) P. R. No. 30	408, 995	In the matter of two Second Grade pleaders, 34, M. 29	114
Hussan Ali, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 42	136, 137	In Tok v. In Sham Ma, (1894) 1 U. B. R. 262	1535
Hutchinson, 9 Cox. 555	1048	Intru Souza, (1886) 1 Weir 327	1053
Hyams, 7 C. & P. 441	1580	Ioan, 2 Den, C. C. 475	1601
Hyat, (1888) P. R. No. 11	205	Ippite, 38 M. L. J. 27, 64 I. C. 241	625
Hyde v. Hyde, L.R. 1 P. & M. 130	1663, 1664	Iqbal Hussian, (1930) O. 252	1044
Hyde v. Graham, 1 H & C.	375	Iradalli, 4 C. 869	611, 733
Hyderally, (1884) B. U. C. 199	1474	Irapa, (1898) B. U. C. 818	328, 324
I		Irula Sadayan, 29 I. C. (M.) 72 F. B.	1271, 1274
Ibrahim, (1894) P. R. No. 7	253, 1213	Isac, 2 East P. C. 1013	1509
Ibrahim, 100 I. C. (L.) 128	1237	Isah Mandal, 28 C. 348	674
Ibrahim, 108 I. C. (L.) 166	998, 1552	Isap Mohd, 31 B. 218	1681
Idu Beg, 3 A. 776	961, 966, 967, 972, 1046, 1101, 1106, 1114	Isham v. York, Cro Car. 15	1713
Idu Jolha, 3 Pat. L.J. 386, 46 I. C. 293.	183	Ishan Chandra, 21 C. 328	399, 554
Ifathullah 58 C. 1138	1036	Ishan Chandra Chandra 21 C. 328	1398
Ilahi Baksh, (1897) A. W. N. 99	1639	Ishan Muchi, 15 C. 511	1394, 1411
Ilahia, 72 I. C. (A.) 517, 24 Cr. L. J. 405	1328	Ishar Das (1908) P. R. No. 10	1102, 1339
Imam, 38 I. C. (C.) 318, 18 Cr. L. J. 286	1259	Ishar Das, 6 L. 50	1601
Imam Ali, 10 A. 150 F. B.	939, 940	Ishar Das, (1912) P. W. R. 36, 17 I. C. 543	1332, 1335, 1337
Imam Ali, 72 I. C. 850, (1926) L. 212	1204	Ishar Singh, 96 I. C. (L.) 400 (192-) L. 617	256
Imam Baksh, (1885) P. R. No. 10	136	Islam (1831) C. 710	221
Imam Bux, 7 S. L. R. 96, 23 I. C. 747	677	Ismail, 8 Bnr. L. T. 82, 25 I. C. 515	655, 695, 696
Imam Din, 3 L. L. J. 245	519	Ismail, 11 B. 659	258, 664
Imam Din, 1902 P. L. R. 157	1369	Ismail, 11 S. L. R. 79, 44 I. C. 335	960
Imam Din, (1891) P. R. No. 2, F. B.	778	Ismail Ali Bai, 39 B. 326	255, 260
Imamdi Bhooyah, 21 W. R. 8	413, 424	Ismail Khan, 8 A. 649	1555, 1556
Imamdy, 1 M. L. W. 647, 25 I. C. (M.) 1000	617	Ismail Khader Saheb, 52 B. 385	671
Imamuddin, (1876) P. R. No. 17	393, 1555, 1556	Ismail, 109 I. C. 364	1030
Imam Bur, 5 S. L. R. 130, 12 I. C. 987	1257	Ismail Panju, (1925) N. 337, 88 I. C. 283	184
Imami, 10 A. L. J. 426, 35 A. 24	113	Ismail Panju. 89 I. C. 523, 21 N. L. R. 152	1591
Imam Khan 14 Bom. L. R. 141	1681	Istlingapp, 14 Bom. L. R. 887, 17 I. C. 542	1045, 1046
Imdad Khan, 8 A. 120	1382	Isub Musa, B. U. C 117	148
Imtiazan, 25 A. 132	1657	Issur Chunder Mundle v. Rohim Sheikh, 25 W. R. 65	1480, 1482, 1484
Ina Sheikh, 11 C. 160	1404, 1407, 1408	Ishwar Chundra v. Ghoshal, 12 C. W. N. 1016	372, 596
Incha Ram, 44 A. 647	615	Ishwar Chandra Jogee, (1864) W. R. 21	249, 1213
Indar, (1882) A. W. N. 23	197	Ishwar Chandra Karmakar v. Sital Das Mitter. 17 W. R. 47	1512
Indar Singh, 85 I. C. (L.) 822, (1923) L. 325	1031, 1597	Iswar Chunder Guha, 14 C. 653	650, 654 696
Indar Singh, 5 L. L. J. 87, 73 I. C. 331, 24 Cr. L. J. 587	1366	Israil Mahso, (1931) Pat. 346 S. B.	1068
Indar Singh (1926) L. 617	256	Ishri, 29 A. 45, 3 A.L. J. 652	1545, 1548, 1553
Indarman, 3 A. 837	921, 922	Isri Prasad v. Umrud Singh, 22 A. 234	1745
Indarjit, 11 A. 262	742	Isree Panday, 7 W. R. 56	245, 1205
Inderjit, (1923) O. 167	502	Isser, 14 C. W. N. 765, 6 I. C. 415	611
Inder Sain, 56 I. C. 21	203	Isu Sheikh, 31 C. W. N. 171, 99 I. C. 937, (1927) C. 200	1205
Inder Singh, 10 L. 477	190, 967
Indra, 127 I. C. (R.) 870,	478

	PAGE		PAGE
Ishtiaq Ahmad, 27 A. 69	1373	Jageshar, 74 L. C. 533	300, 1057
Issub, (1888) B. U. C. 3289	1403	Jageshar, 15 A. L. J. 47, 40 L. C. 311	500, 501
Itwaree Deme, 6 W. R. 83	1315	Jageshar, (1874) N. W. H. C. R. 56	174, 1568
Ivson v. Meore, 1 Ld. Raym 486	854	Jagjiban Ghose, 13 C. W. N. 861, 2 L. C. 681	1277
Iyyemperumal v. Naiken, (1901) Weir 127	620	Jaglia Raysing, 1 Bom. L. R. 349	778
J		Jagmohan, 6 A. L. J. 4 L. C. 812	736
Jabor, (1881) P. R. No. 1	1280	Jagobundhoo, 30 C. 415	738, 739
Jackson, 7 Cox. 357	406, 194	Jagut Mohini v. Madhu Sudan, 10 C. L. R. 4	412
Jackson, 17 Cox. 104	405	Jagtu, 5 L. L. J. 417	1029
Jackson, 1 Lewis. C. C. 270	657, 679	Jahana, (1916) P. L. R. 109, 36 L. C. 131	1041, 1042
Jackson, 1 Mood. 119	1266	Jahangira, (1886) A. W. N. 16	1337, 1339
Jackson, 1 Leach. 193	1311	Jaharna, (1904) P. R. No. 4	1444
Jackson, 1 Leach. 267	1296	Jahiruddin, 22 C. 306	518, 520, 521, 498
Jackson, 1 East P. C.	1301	Jai Dayal, (1876) P. R. 21	1170
Jackson, (1844) 1 C. & K. 384	1365, 1369	Jai Debi, 13 A. L. J. 681, 29 L. C. 322, 16 Cr. L. J. 482	1750
Jackson, 3 Camp. 370	1432	Jai Jai Ram, 17 A. L. J. 374, 50 L. C. 28	683
Jackson, 2 Tay. Med. Jur. p. 600	319	Jailal, 64 L. C. 838	189
Jacob v. Lawrence, 4 L. R. Ir. 579	1741	Jaimaddin v. Chohak, 1 C. W. N. 498	1686
Jacobs, R. & R. 231	1242	Jaimal, 89 L. C. (L.) 848	1788
Jacob v. Seward, L. R. 5 H. L.	1516	Jaimal Sing, P. R. No. 1 of 1901	420
Jacobs, 2 Mood C. C. 140	1675	Jaimal Singh, (1233) L. 294	333
Jadubar Singh, 52 L. C. (Pat.) 494	511	Jaimal Singh (1923) L. 224	257
Jaddu, (1935) A. 919	1596, 1030	Jaimal, 10 B. H. C. R. 69	800, 801
Jadubar Sing, 37 C. 250	722	Jainath, (1927) (Pat) 181, 100 L. C. 383	364
Jafar, 14 A. L. J. 789	192, 783, 787	Jaipal, 19 O. C. 18, 33 L. C. 820	364
Jaffar Ali, (1894) P. R. No. 30	1389, 1391, 1394	Jaipal, 66 L. C. (N.) 665, (1922) N. 141	1032
Jafar, (1905) 6 P. L. R. 492	995, 999	Jaipal Gir v. Dharmapala, 23 C. 60	943, 946
Jafdeo, 15 A. L. J. 163	655	Jaibal Kumbi, (1922) N. 121, 66 L. C. 665	385, 1042
Jaffar Fadu, 4 S. L. R. 67, 8 L. C. 209	1748	Jairam, 35 C. 103	500
Jaffar Ayub, 68 L. C. (N.) 621, 23 Cr. L. J. 589, (1922) N. 195	1460	Jairam Sabu, (1923) Pat 111, 72 L. C. 954	1177
Jaffer, (1882) P. R. No. 2	393, 1555, 1556	Jai Ram, 12 A. L. J. 151, 23 L. C. 183, 15 Cr. L. J. 231	1168, 1171
Jaffir Naik, 2 B. H. C. R. 127	1367	Jai Ram, (1887) P. R. No. 28	1034
Jaffir (1881) P. R. No. 2	1558	Jairam Mahlon, 25 C. 103	375
Jafir Khan, (1885) P. R. No. 32	514	Jairo, 9 S. L. R. 204, 34 L. C. 655, 17 Cr. L. J. 239	1271, 1278
Jagu Bundhoo Mythee v. Golam Ali Sha, 22 C. 457 note,	1491	Jaladu, 36 M. 453	336
Jagan Dubey, 45 L. C. (Pat.) 677, 19 Cr. L. J. 629	1536	Jalaluddin, (1914) P. L. R. 147, 15 L. C. 979	1586
Jagannadha, 24 M. 284	1192	Jalaluddin Mandal, (1930) A. 433	1206
Jagannath, 5 B. H. C. R. 103	233	Jamadar Pai, (1930) Pat. 504	1452
Jagannath, 15 Cr. L. J. 630, 25 L. C. 638	1189	Jamaludin, (1892) B. U. C. 603	968
Jagannath, 10 B. 183	1478	Jamaludin, (1887) P. R. No. 55	417
Jagannath, 140 L. C. (A) 118	791	Jamaruddi, 16 C. W. N. 909	188
Jagannath, 66 L. C. 522,	1019	Jambulinga, 47 M. L. J. 437	1536
Jaganath, 1 O. L. J. 48, 23 L. C. 703	1541, 1559	Jamdad, (1887) P. R. No. 53	252
Jaganath, 136 L. C. (B) 493	1374	James v. Boston, 2 C. & K. 4	1747
Jaganath v. Deokinandan, 29 L. C. (C) 671	1373	James Crawshaw, (1860) 8 Cox. 375	935
Jaganath Bhikaji, 10 B. 183	1493	James Gibson, (1844) 4 Brown 232	324
Jaganatha Rao v. Kamaraju, 24 M. 284.	1193	James Fletcher, 7 M. L. J. 201, 5 L. C. 973	1451
Jagannathan, (1902) 1 Weir 490	1479, 1480	Jameson, (1896) 2 Q. B. 425	479
Jagarnath, 24 C. 324	364	James Scudder, 3 C. & P. 605	1077
Jagarnath, (1925) Pat. 183	644	James, 8 C. & P. 131	1472
Jagat Chundra Majumdar, 3 C. W. N. 491	731	James (J. E.) 26 S. L. R. 295	673
Jagat Chandra Roy v. Rakhal Chandra Roy, 4 C. W. N. 10	1259	James v. Phelps, 11 Ad. & E. 483	1472
Jagat Chandra Sarma, 5 C. W. N. 332	547, 553	James v. Hayward, Cro. Car. 184	898
Jagat Mohan v. Kalipada, 1 Pat. 371	1744	James Sommersett, 20 St. Tr. 1	1216
Jagat Narain Lal, 110 L. C. (Pat.) 922,	1437	Jameson v. Dublin Distillers Co., (1900) 1 Ir. L. 43	1627
Jagat Ram, (1918) P. R. No. 28, 47 L. C. 872	680
Jagat Singh, Oudh Case 11	209

	PAGE		PAGE
Jamieson & Co. v. Jamieson, (1898) 1 T. L. R. 160	14 1626, 1627, 1628	Jeetoo, 4 W. R. 23	412, 421
Jamiruddi, 16 C. W. N. 909	188, 192	Jeeva Amtha, B. U. J. 10	327
James v. Jones, (1894) 1 Q. B. 304	875	Jeewan v. Boodha, (1867) P. R. No. 51	1278
Jammu, (1889) P. R. No. 17,	252	Jefferies, 3 Cox. 85	430
Jamna, 31 A. 290	1056	Jefferie v. Duncombe, 11 East 226	1706
Jamna Debi v. Mulraj, (1907) P. R. No. 49	1670	Jehan Buksh, 16 W. R. 42	236, 1174
Jamna, (1884) A. W. N. 87	1491	Jehan Mullick, 5 W. R. 67	259
Jamni, 5 B. H. C. R. 27	1679	Jehangir v. Secretary of State, 27 B. 189,	213, 285
Jamo Allarakhia, 9 S. L. R. 223, 34 I. C. 640	448	Jellyman, 8 C. & P. 604	1242
Jamoonah, 6 C. 620	737	Jenks v. Turpin, 13 Q. B. D. 505	935
Jamsetji, (1888) B. U. C. 395	165, 1259	Jenner, 7 L. J. (O. S.) M. C. 79	102
Jamshed Sirdar, 1 C. L. R. 62	361	Jenner v. A. Beckett, L. R. 7 Q. B. 11	1713
Jamura, (1884) 4 A. W. N. 87	1411, 1491	Jenoure v. Delmege, (1891) A. C. 73	1740, 1746
Jamurha, 7 N. W. P. H. C. R. 137	251	Jeosall, 7 W. R. 34	366, 375
Janaki Nath (Thakur) v. Jnanendra, 26 I. C. (C.) 328	639	Jeoni, 39 A. 161	1013
Janardhan, 19 B. 703	1705, 1724	Jeoni, (Mt.) (1803) A. W. N. 100	1087
Jane May, 10 Cox. 448	1089	Jeremiah v. Vas, 36 M. 457	1754
Jang Bahadur, 93 I. C. 40,	1471	Jesson v. Hayes, 1 roll. Abr. 63	1713
Jangama Pattan, (1883) 1 Weir 98	593	Jessop, 16 Cox. 204	1059
Jang Bahadur Lal, 14 C. L. J. 652	1597	Jessop, D. & B. 442	1424
Jangi Singh, 26 A. 194	1522, 1512	Jethalal, 29 B. 449	1403
Jani Hira, 14 Bom. L. R. 503, 15 I. C. 793	1458, 1444, 1448	Jetha Nathoo, 6 Bom. L. R. 785	1193, 1189, 1213, 1191
Janki Mahto, (1933) Pat. 568	361	Jewan Das, (1904) P. R. No. 30	1783
Janki Pershad, 3 A. 205	282	Jewaram, (1932) A. 69.	136
Janki Pershad, 8 A. 293	370, 1133	Jewison v. Dyron, 9 M. & W. 586	1190, 1151
Janki, 7 B. 82	403	Jhabhar Mal and others, 115 I. C. (A) 872, (1929) A. 472	1757
Jan Mahomed 10 C. 584	165, 169, 174, 184, 1570, 1581, 1593, 1603	Jhagroo, 9 N. L. R. 88	224
Jan Mahomed, 1 W. R. 49	420	Jhagut Mohini v. Madhusudhen 10 C. L. R. 4.	412
Jan Muhammad, 119 I. C. (L) 323	1545, 1994,	Jhakri, 17 I. C. (C.) 1001	189, 190, 192
Jan Muhammad Husen, (1886) P. R. No. 1	729	Jhalku, 17 C. W. N. 1081, 21 I. C. 382	378, 501, 511
Janki Das, (1922) P. L. R. 38, 68 I. C. 819, 23 Cr. L. J. 595	1448	Jhamman Lal, (1906) P. R. 14	1784
Janki Rai, 49 A. 482	653	Jhan Singh, 58 I. C. 820, 21 Cr. L. J. 820	1443, 1452
Janu v. Ahmudullah, 13 A. 419 F. B...	943	Jhanda Singh, (1918) P. R. No. 16, 44 I. C. 351, 19 Cr. L. J. 335	1443
Jareni v. Gourikant, 7 C. W. N. 25	1534	Jhandi, 6 L. L. J. 268	1116
Jarha v. Surit Ram, 3 N. L. R. 177	392, 393	Jhandu, (1886) P. R. No. 27	1348
Jarvis, 3 F. & F. 108	873, 874	Jhantala Noshyo, 6 W. R. 59	1137
Jasauli, 34 A. 340	1208	Jharu Sheik, 61 C. W. N. 696	1548
Jasha Bewa, 11 C. W. N. 904	1030, 1031	Jhinguri, (1890) A. W. N. 12	258
Jaswant Singh, (1925) L. 139	625, 629	Jhotish Chandra, 36 C. 955	1567
Jatra Sheikh v. Reazab Sheikh, 20 C. 483	1687	Joomuck, 6 W. R. 90	257
Jatadu, 38 M. 453 (456, 459)	349	Jhubboo Mahton, 8 C. 955	522
Jas Raja Jagga (1929) L. 234	359	Jhuboo, 8 C. 739	193
Jasuram, 74 I. C. (Pat.) 73	364	Jhugroo, 4 W. R. 2	438
Jaswant Rai, (1907) P. R. No. 10	531, 532	Jhulam Sani, 40 C. 548	947, 949
Jasoda Nand, 20 A. 501	638	Jhuman Lal, 10 C. W. N. 228	1264
Jasimaddin v. Ichohak, 1 C. W. N. 498	1636, 1691	Jhundoo v. Ahmed Deen, (1866) P. R. No. 40	412, 1208
Jassu Ram, 4 L. 246	1583	Jiaratdin, 34 C. L. J. 678, 67 I. C. 200	637
Jeorakhan, v. Nanakram (1934) M. 129	1759	Jibai Vaja, 11 B. H. C. R. 11	651, 665
Jatwa Sheikh, 20 C. 483	1681	Jildar Kaiyer, 119 I. C. (Pat) 72	1192
Jawahir, 14 A. L. J. 643	183	Jijibhai Gobind, 22 B. 596	732, 736
Jawahir, 38 A. 430	183	Jimam, 5 C. P. L. R. 17	253
Jawahir, 1 A. 527	640	Jina Ranchhod v. Jodha Ghella, 1 B. H. C. R. 1	854
Jawala Ram, (1895) P. R. No. 12	1575	Jita, (1873) P. R. No. 26	252
Jawaya, (1887) P. R. 46	1406	Jit Mal, (1888) P. R. No. 4	417
Jay Chandra Sarkar, 38 C. 214	464	Jit Singh, (1912) P. W. R. 23, 15 J. C. 983	797, 801
Jay Krishna, 21 C. W. N. 95	1769, 1767	Jiwa Ram, (1881) A. W. N. 100	352
Jay v. Ladler, 40 Ch. D. 649	1631	Jiwa, (1885) P. R. No. 11, Note	1513, 1529
Jeans, 1 C. & K. 539	1488, 1489
Jeenu Bebee, 1 W. R. 46	1520

	PAGE		PAGE
Jiwan, (1887) 7 A. W. N. 195 (196) ..	1602	Jones, (Williams) (1898) 1 Q. B. 119 ..	1430, 1436
Jiwandas, 55, B. 59 F. B. ..	1372	Jones' Case, 2 East P. C. C. 16 S. 130 ..	1304
Jiwan Singh, (1908) P. R. No. 17	174, 1512, 1543	Jones v. Foley, (1891) 1 Q. B. 730 ..	1147
Jiwanand, 5 A. 221	174, 666, 1568, 1571, 1594, 1603	Jones v. Hulton & Co., (1909) 3 K. B. 444 O. A. ..	1708
J. M. (1910) V. B. R. 17, ..	331	Jones v. Fay, (1865) 4 F. & F. 525 ..	344
Joan Bleadsdale, 2 C. & K. 765 ..	413	Jonnalagadda, 28 M. 565 615, 617, 611, 735
Job v. Launch, 11a Ex. 542 ..	204	Jordar, 9 C. & P. 118 ..	1230
Jobania, (1889) B. U. C. 476, (1868) 1 Weir 448 ..	1318	Joseph, (1888) 1 Weir 223 ..	832
Jodha Singh, 11 A. L. J. 27 14 I. C. 752 ..	1273	Joseph Gerrald, 23 St. Tr. 803 ..	468
Jogali, (1927) M. 97, 97 I. C. 958 ..	361	Joseph Lines, 1 C. & K. 393 ..	1240
Joghnath Bhikagi, 10 B. 183 ..	1493	Joseph Merian, 10 W. R. 10 229, 1237, 1784
Jogayya, 10 M. 353 ..	1769	Joseph Webb, (1834) 2 Lewin 191 ..	344
Jogendra Chandra Bose, 19 C. 35	466, 474, 475	Jotee Ghoraee, 1 W. R. 7 ..	1123
Jogendra Narain v. Shyama Churn Ukil, 6 C. L. J. 713 ..	799	Jotharam Davy, 2 M. 30	1512, 1514, 1515, 1549
Jogendra Nath Mukherji, 24 C. 350	369, 626, 1133	Joti Rout, 105. I. C. (Pat.) 234 ..	504
Jogendra Nath Mokherji, 33 C. 1 ..	732	Joti Prosad Gupta (1932) A. 18 ..	435
Jogendra Nath v. Hiralal, 51 I. C. 902	791, 792, 1177	Jowahir Shab, 10 W. R. 35 ..	1146
Jogendra Nath v. Hira Lal, 39 C. L. J. 452 ..		Jowahir Pattack v. Parbhoo Ahir, 30 C. 418	1764, 1765
Jogeshar Bagdee, 7 W. R. 109	1412, 1413	Jodha Singh 11 A. L. J. 270 14 I. C. 282	1260
Jogeshur Pershad, 6 N. W. P. H. C. R. 56	1603	Jowahir Singh, (1914) P. L. R. 4, 22 I. C. 759 ..	260
Jogidas, 24 Bom. L. R. 99, 66, I. C. 328, 23 Cr. L. J. 264, 1922) B. 82 ..	1593	Jowahir Singh (1894) P. R. No. 16	256, 667
Jogjiban Ghose, 9 Cr. L. J. 663	403, 448	Jowala Singh (1880) P. R. No. 12 ..	1558
Jogobundhoo, 30 C. 415 ..	732	Joy Chandra Sarkar 38 C. 214	533, 464, 467, 468
Jog Raj, (1930) L. 534 ..	985	Joy Gopal, 4 W. R. 4	1124, 1125
Joharu Sheikh, 16 C. W. N. 696 ..	1548	Joykissto, 1 B. L. R. (A. Cr.) 20 ..	276
John Ardley, 12 Cox. 23 ..	1422	Joy v. Ladler, 40 Ch. 649 ..	1631
John Bryan, 26 L. J. M. C. 85 ..	1421	Joynarain, 20 W. 66	707, 708, 766
John Bruce, 2 Leach, 1093 ..	134	Joynt v. Cycle Trade Publishing Co., (1904) 2 K. B. 292 1726, 1727, 1728, 1737
John Horne, 20 St. Tr. 651 ..	463	Joy Kurn Singh v. Man Patuck, 21 W. R. 41 (43) ..	1446
John Reeves, 26 St. Tr. 530 ..	466	Joy Narain, 20 W. R. 66 ..	703
John Scott, 1 N. L. R. 139 ..	357	Joynath Mundul v. Tamul Sheikh, 6 W. R. 71 ..	887
Johnson, 20 Q. B. D. 68 ..	802	Judagi Raub, 2 Pat. L. J. 18, 38 I. C. 744 ..	1178
Johnson v. Lemmon, 2 Roll R. 144 ..	1713	Judah, 29 C. W. N. 1011, 90 I. C. 289	1263
Johns v. Gittings, Cro. Fliz 299 ..	1713	Judoo, 6 W. R. 60, 4 W. R. Cr. 1 ..	1684
John Smidt v. Reddaway & Co., 32 C. 401 ..	1623	Judonath v. Shumshoonisa, 11 M. I. A. 551 ..	716
Johnson, C. & M. 218	430, 1531	Judoonath Lutt, 2 C. L. R. 181 ..	683
John Wilkes, 19 St. Tr. 1075 ..	465	Judgadi Mallah, 8 Pat 911 33, 985, 1597
John Thomas, 7 C. & P. 817 ..	331	Jugal Das Dalal, 20 C. 665	864, 902
John Reed, (1842) C. & M. 306 ..	263	Jugal Kishore, 8 A. 382	611, 728, 730
Johnson, C. & Mar. 218 ..	1530	Juggeshwar Dass v. Kaylash Chunder Chatterjee, 12 C. 55	1477
John Wright, R. & R. 456 ..	325	Juggomohan Bukshee v. Roy Mothoora Nath Chowdhary, 7 W. R. 18 P. C. ...	116
Johri, 136 I. C. (A.) 277 ..	734	Jugo Mohan, 24 W. R. 5 ..	327
Jokhu, 8 A. 99 ..	918	Juggun Lall, 7 C. L. R. 366 ..	666
Joleka, 3 Pat. L. J. 386, 46 I. C. 293 ..	1600	Juggurnath Singh, 2 W. R. 55 ..	1287
Jolliffe, 4 T. R. 85 ..	1733	Jugut Mohini Dasi, 10 C. L. R. 4 ..	713
Jonathan Davay, 11 M. 30 ..	1551	Jukdown, Sinha, 23 C. 372	1363, 1364
Jones v. Herne, 2 Wills 87 ..	1711	Jumma, 141 I. C. (L.) 40 ..	993
Jones v. Hulton & Co., (1909) 2 K. B. 444 (453) ..	1708	Jumman, 21 A. L. J. 321, (1923) A. 431	1443, 1452
Jones, 2 Camp. 31 ..	1576	Jungle Lall, 19 W. R. 40	765, 768, 770
Jones, 1 Leach, 204 ..	1577	Jurup and others, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 133 ..	1214
Jones v. Williams, 1 T. L. R. 572 ..	1700	Justan, 17 I. J. (N. S.) 183 ..	1087
Jones, 7 C. & P. 833 ..	1369	Justices of Kent, 24 Q. B. D. 181 (183).	851
Jones Carr. E. M. 614 ..	1674	Juturi Venkatappa, 28 I. C. (M.) 110 ..	861
Jones, 1 Den. & C. C. 551	1257, 1369	Jwala, 103 I. C. 62, (1927) O. 277	1044, 1275, 1274, 1612, 1646, 1649
Jones (1864) L. R. 2 C. C. 10	1233, 1234	Jyotish Chandra, 36 C. 955 ..	174
Jones, 11 Cox. C. C. 544	270, 298, 892, 1048
Jones, 19 L. J. M. C. 162 ..	1447
Jones, 3 Camp. 203 ..	899

K		PAGE			PAGE
Kabari Veerannat; 35 I. C. (M.) 820	..	689	Kalika Misser, 1 Agra, 3	..	1208
Kabil Cazee, 3 B. L. R. (A. C.) 1	..	521	Kalibur Rahman, 11 R. 213 F. B.	1205, 1208
Kabiruddin, 7 C. L. J. 359, 35 C. 368	..	300, 375, 376	Kalimdayan, 9 M. L. T. 401, 10 I. C. 290.	1208
Kabir Shah, (1923) Pat. 297.		1397	Kali Munda, 27 C. 797	..	448
Kabul Patlur, 15 W. R. 4	..	1077	Kali Nath Nag, 9 W. R. 1	..	1512
Kachria Mahar, 18 N. L. R. 101, 64 I. C.			Kali Prosunno Ghose, 7 C. L. R. 575	..	634
27, (1922) N. 65	..	1030	Kalio Kerio, (1872) B. U. C. 65	1308, 1311
Kadar Ravuttan, 4 M. H. C. R. 18	..	712	Kali Prasad, 26 I. C. (C.) 668, 16 Cr. L. J.	..	1584
Kada, (1882) P. R. No. 6 F. B.	..	282	76
Kadawali, 39 C. W. N. 318	..	1159	Kali Prosad Mahisal, 27 C. 7	..
Kader Buksh, 21 W. R. 34	..	735	Kali Persad Banerjee, 26 I. C. (Cal.) 668	1576, 1583
Kader, 23 C. 604	..	312	Krli Puddo Paramanik, 23 W. R. 43	..	1435
Kader Nasyer, 23 C. 604	310, 311		Kali Sankar, 12 W. R. 2	..	786
Kader Nasyer Shah, 23 C. 604	314, 318, 322, 323		Kaliyani, 19 M. 35	..	971
Kader Sundar, 16 C. W. N. 69, 13 I. C.			Kalu Khalashi, 17 C. W. N. 538, 19 I. C.
279	997, 1332, 1333, 1335, 1336		1002	..	510
Kadir Baksh, 33 A. 429	1368, 1370		Kallukhan v. Adyanath Holder 130 I. C.	..	1255
Kadir Box, 3 N, W. P. H. C. R. 16	..	1431	(C.) 50	..	199
Kadir Baksh, 2 L. L. J. 406, 63	..	997	Kallappa, (1933) M. 798	..	1040
I. C. 403	..	1028, 1030	Kallu, 64 I. C. (A.) 133	..	775, 787
Kadir Bux, 5 S. L. R. 256, 15 I. C. 807.	1028, 1030		Kallu, 4 L. L. J. 448, 67 I. C. 721	1657, 1681, 1687
Kadir Baksh v. Bhawani, 14 A. 145	..	117	Kallu, 5 A. 233	..	1745
Kadhu, 24 A. 298	..	375	Kallu v. Sital, 40 A. 271	..	291
Kadrutulla, 39 C. 781	375, 511		Kallu, 3 A. 60	..	606
Kaba, (1889) P. R. N 12	..	1260	Kallu, 92 I. C. 428, (1926) L. 420	..	1321, 1322, 1323
Kahanji, 18 B. 758	529, 530		Kallu, 40 L. J. 63, 39 I. C. 296, 18 Cr.	..	1175
Kahalavaya, 2 M. H. C. R. 247	..	183	L. J. 456	..	673
Kai Khusro, (1898) B. U. C. 949	..	1479	Kalluram Manuram, 145 I. C. (S.) 259	..	589
Kailas Chandra, 6 C. W. N. 382	920, 921, 1434, 1436, 1572, 1593		Kalisadhan, 52 C. 478	..	713
Kailash Chander, 139 I. C. (C.) 461	920, 921		Kalya, 5 B. H. C. R. 34	..	1787
Kailasam Jutter, 5 M. H. C. R. 373	..	667	Kalya, 5 B. L. R. 138	..	156
Kailash Ghose v. Jugal Lohar, 1 C. L. J.			Kalyan Singh, 16 A. 409	..	681
104	1516, 1517, 1568		Kalyanray, B. U. C. 36	..	971, 1096
Kaim, (1893) P. R. No 5	..	1042	Kalyanji, 48 M. 395	..
Kain, 8 C. & P. 187	1304, 1775		Kaliyani, 19 M. 356	..
Kairthadi Anantha, (1888) 1 Weir, 511	511, 1496		Kamakshi v. Appavu, 1 M. H. C. R.	..	928, 932
Kaka, 5 S. L. R. 95, 12 I. C. 651	641, 1423		448	..	1030, 1031
Kaka, (1889) P. R. No. 12	..	1260	Kaml, (1873) P. R. No. 13	..	1337
Kaku, 4 L. L. J. 487, 63 I. C. 822	..	1057	Kamal Fakeer, 17 W. R. 50	..
Kala, 89 I. C. 400, (1925) L. 623	..	789	Kamal Kishna Bose, 5 M. L. T. 141,	..	1362
Kala Chand Gope, 10 W. R. 59	1080, 1081		4 I. C. 1106	..	902, 917
Kallachand, 7 W. R. (Cr.) 99	..	155	Kamla Prosad, 10 A. L. J. 362	..	1592, 1594
Kalai v. Kalu Chowkidar, 27 C. 366	..		Kamatchinatha, 42 M. 558	..	681
291, 783, 787, 792			Kamatchinathan, 28 M. 308	..	1524
Kala Singh, (1911) P. W. R. 25, 12 I. C.			Kamarajee, (1887) 1 Weir 534	..
92	..	1029	Kamdar Ali, 15 C. W. N. 835, 11 I. C.	..	893, 894
Kalaya, (1885) B. U. C. 217	..	1494	130	..	1113
Kale Modock, 18 W. R. 61	..	1435	Kaminee Dassee, 12 W. R. 25	..	562
Kaleechurn, 3 W. R. 10	..	550	Kampta Pershad, 1 A. 530	..
Kalee Beparee, 1 C. L. R. 521	..	375	Kamruddin, (1905) P. R. No. 22, 2 Cr.	..	1054
Kalian Singh, (1904) A. W. N. 233,			L. J. 207	..	1010, 1567, 1610
1 Cr. L. J. 987	..	639	Kanaga Kasavan, 54 M. 504	..	1622, 1641
Kali Churn Mookerjee, 11 C. L. R. 232	..	361	Kanai Das v. Radha Shyam, 26 C. 232.	..	290, 1146, 1180
Kali Charan Sharma, (1927) A. 649	..	1147		..	1402
Kalidas, 30 C. W. N. 192, (1925) C. 1214.	941		Kanbai, 35 A. 329	..	1032, 1116
Kalian, 19 M. 310	371, 783, 784		Kanchanlal, 32 Bom. L. R 385	..	532
Kaliji, 24 A. 143	..	364, 375	Kanchan Molla, (1924), 14 C. L. J. 563,	..
Kali Churn, 21 W. R. 11	..	185	88 I. C. (C.) 997 C. 1015	..	245
Kalichurn Lahoree, 9 W. R. 54	..	679	Kanchi Doraisamy, (in re), 7 M. L. T.	..	1628, 1630
Kali Charen, (1927) A. 649 S. B. 185, 402, 408,	..		309, 6 I. C. 683	..
409			Kandungadu, (1912) M. W. N. 97, 13	..	1276
Kali Charan Gangooly, 21 W. R. 11	..	403	I. C. 828	..
Kalichasan, 49 A. 856 F. B.	..	532	Kandamuru Annappa, (1883) 1 Weir 221	..	808, 822
Kalit Munda, 28 C. 797	..	444, 445		..	500, 944
Kalidas Basu, 39 C. L. J. 151	..	1015	Kandasamy v. Sabraya, 32 M. 478	..	1132
			Kandaswami, 46 M. L. J. 45, 76 I. C. 962.	..	869
			Kandaswamy, 43 M. 344	..

	PAGE		PAGE
Kandbaia, 7 A. 67, 7 M. H. C. (App.) 41.		Karrim Bux, 3 W. R. 12	365
201, 778, 781, 784, 789, 790		Karruppa Muppen, (1887) 1 Weir	822
Kandu, 106 I. C. 457,	1031, 1597	222	822
Kangla, 23 A. 82	1545	Karsan, 2 B. H. C. R. 117 (124, 1st	263
Kangla, (1898) A. W. N. 1663	1545, 1553	Ed.)	263
Kanhai, 35 A. 329	967, 1032, 1161	Karsan Babu, 4 Bom. L. R. 626	1263
Kanhai Shahi, 23 W. R. 40	366	Karsanlal Danat Ram, 5 B. H. C. R. 20.	591
Kanhaya Lal (1906) P. R. No. 8	910	Karta Singh, 109 I. C. (L.) 674	1402
Kanji Samal, 38 B. 144	192	Kartar Singh, 90 I. C. 156, (1925) L.	1686
Kanji Shivji, 14 Bom. L. R. 137, 14 I. C.	669	406	1686
669	1461	Kartick Chunder Dass, 14 C. 710, F. B.	1334
Kannammal, 24 M. L. J. 211, 18 I. C. 257.	1221	Kattick Chunder Haldar, 9 W. R. 58	654
Kanniappa, (1913) M. W. N. 696	1142, 1403	Kartik Chundra Marty, 138 I. C. (Pat.)	782
Kanshi, 94 I. C. (L.) 134	192	844	782
Kanshi, 28 P. L. R. 90, 100 I. C. 831,		Kartikeshwar, 76 I. C. (C.) 694, (1923)	1262
(1927) L. 165	1442	C. 594	1262
Kanta Neya, 9 I. C. (C.) 455	509, 513	Karuman, (1894) 1 Weir 134	631
Kantila, 31 C. W. N. 583, (1927) C. 505.	1180	Karuna Baistavi, 22 C. 164 1220, 1221, 1229	1229
Kanthoppa v. Shesappa, 22 B. 898	1147	Karupanna v. Mada Nandan, (1904)	742
Kantir, Misser, (1930) Pat. 98	612, 627	L. B. R. 300	742
Kapalavaya, 2 M. H. C. R. 247, 7 M. H.		Karuppa, 38 I. C. (M.) 370	1308
C. R. App. XXVI	358, 1592	Karuppa Thenan, (1929) M. 841	256
Kapil v. Rabbani, 41 C. L. J. 471, 89 I. C.		Karu Singh, (1926) Pat. 425	1744
241, (1925) C. 1039	247	Kasai, (1894) B. U. C. 727	1089
Kadildar Narayan, (1930) Pat. 221	1370	Kascemooddeen, 4 W. R. 38	995
Kappa v. Kappa, 7 Cr. L. R. 125	960	Kasem Ali, 45 C. L. J. 201, 101 I. C.	446
Kaptan v. Smith, 16 W. R. 3	1174	481	446
Kapur Singh, (1918) P. L. R. 98, 50 I. C.		Kasem Ali, 31 C. L. J. 392, 55 I. C.	1337
481	1019	994, 21 Cr. L. J. 386	1337
Karaka Nachiar, 3 M. H. C. R. 254	1313	Kashee Ram, (1868) P. R. No. 27	1323
Karali Prasad, 20 C. W. N. 1075 (1078).	1548, 1551	Kashia, 10 Bom. L. R. 26	256
Karam Ali, 28 P. L. R. 299 (1927) L.	355	Kashia Antoo, 10 B. L. R. 26	427
355	392, 393	Kashi Chunder v. Hurkishore, 19 W.	1255
Karamatullah, 18 A. L. J. 284, 55 I. C.		R. 47	1255
852	621	Kashi Chunder Sen, 8 C. 276	1197
Karam Chand, 69 I. C. 445	157	Kashi Nath, 8 B. H. C. R. 126	700, 701
Karan Singh, 14 A. L. J. 792	192, 1190	Kashi, Nath, 8 B. 168	1739
Karatuka, 42 C. L. J. 212, 90 I. C. 520,		Kashinath Bhanshet, (1871) B. U. C.	1281
(1925) C. 1241	1356	56	1281
Karaturi Nagaruma, (1882) 1 Weir 339.	1146	Kashi Nath Naek, 25 C. 207	183, 184, 358, 418, 1592
Karbat Singh, (1917) P. R. No. 12, 39		183, 184, 358, 418, 1592	611
I. C. 847	680	Kashi Ram, 46 A. 906	592
Karem Bux, 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. 30	1349	Kashi Ram, (1871) P. R. No. 2	1020
Kari Gopi, 6 Pat. 760	695	Kashua, (1894) B. U. C. 687	654
Karigowda, 19 B. 51	735, 737, 738	Kasi Chunder, 6 C. 440	654, 664
Karim, (1905) P. R. No. 12	739, 740	Kasim Khan, 7 C. 121 F. B.	1379, 1380, 1613
Karim Bardshe 9 L. 550 (560)	1331	Kasi Viswanathan, 30 M. 328	907, 1501
Karim Baksh, (1918) P. W. R. 31, 46		Kasiya, Pillai, (1886) 1 Weir 235	262, 271, 293
I. C. 40, 19 Cr. L. J. 680	1674, 1675	Kassim, 15 I. C. (B.) 802	1337
Karim Baksh, 17 C. 574 F. B.	734, 735, 736, 744	Kasim Ali, 6 W. R. 23	606
Karim Baksh, 76 I. C. (Punj.) 1039,		Kassim Khan, (1882) 7 C. 121, F. B.	136
(1923) L. 329	1325	Kassimuddin, 8 W. R. (Cr.) 55	1476, 1483
Karim Baksh v. Habibulla, (1903)		Kasturchand (1934) Pat. 221	118, 123, 124
P. R. No. 10	1358	Kastya, 8 B. H. C. R., Cr. 36	1486
Karimdad, 6 C. 497	611, 730	Kastya Rama, 8 B. H. C. R. 63	359
Karimdad, (1913) P. R. 25, 21 I. C.		Kasya, 5 B. H. C. R. 35	1542
907	1598	Katakan Narasigadu, (1882) 1 Weir	1446
Karim Khan, (1909) P. W. R. 4, 1		(3rd Ed.) 329	188
I. C. 100	331, 1380	Katamraju, 28 M. 90, F. B.	512
Karimuddin, 40 A. 565	1362, 1380	Kathooru (1924) 11, 584	801
Kari Singh, 40 C. 433	115, 119, 123, 1745	Katwari Rai, 39 A. 623	1394
Karm, (1893) P. R. No. 5	1040	Kanlashia, 12 Pat. 1	256
Karm Din, (1890) P. R. No. 34	563	Kaur, (1907) P. W. R. Cr. 4	1003, 1036
Karmun, (1916) P. R. No. 6, 34 I. C.		Kaushya Yeshu, 4 B. H. C. R. 11	1567
1000	1331	Kayambu, 32 I. C. (M.) 670	1687
Karri Mangadu, (1914) M. W. N. 791,		Kayaram Surma v. Nichala Katani, 75	1518
25 I. C. 514	1355, 1470	C. 402	535
Karri Venkanna, 18 M. L. J. 591, 31		Kazi Zeamuddin, 28 C. 504	1113
I. C. 330	677, 1349	Keamuddi, 51 C. 79	1567
		Keane v. Smallbone, 17 C. B. 179	1687
		Keats v. Keats, 28 L. J. P. & M. 57

	PAGE		PAGE
Kedar Nath, 5 C. W. N. 897	166, 174	Kewala, 1913 P. L. R. 317, 21 I. C.	478
Kedar Nath, 29 C. W. N. 408, 86 I. C.	1448	Keymer, 12 A. L. J. 730, 23 I. C.	492
705, (1925) C. 603	1376	Khadar Moidin, 4 M. 235	902
Kedar Nath, 73 I. C. 807 24 Cr. L. J.	166, 174	Khadam, (1910) P. W. R. 42, 8 I. C.	1179, 1181
625	672	257	992
Kedar Nath, 25 C. 604	1704	Khadin Hussain, 7 L. 488	817
Kedarnath v. Mohesh Chunder. 16 C.	546	Khadin Hasain, 84 I. C. 247, (1925)	185, 402
661	1029	L. 22	364
Keenslow, (1895) 1 Q. B. 758 (765)	229, 479	Khadin, Sheik, 4 B. L. R. (A. Cr.) 7	1005
Kehri Illahi, (1911) P. W. R. 26, 12	756	Khadu Singh, 24 A. 298	1448
I. C. 93	1004	Khairati, 15 A. L. J. 807, 42 I. C.	1243
Kehri, 3 L. L. J. 147	1376, 1430	19 Cr. L. J. 45	1779
Keixa Singh, 3 W. R. 16	269, 1004	Khairati, 6 A. 204	1085
Kehr Singh, 88 I. C. 353, (1925) L.	1747	Khair Mahomed, 86 I. C. 968 (1925) S.	1516, 1520
563	406, 429, 430	271	676
Keighley v. Bell, 4 F. & F. 490	404, 429, 404	Khairo, (1872) P. R. No. 33	185, 408, 509, 510
Khitish Chandra, 51 C. 796	995	Khaja Mahomed, 3 M. 178 948, 949, 1516, 1520	185, 509
Keighley v. Bell, 4 F. & F. 763	1729	Khajamal, 14 S. L. R. 69, 58 I. C. 515.	258, 259
Keight v. Hill, (1873) J. P. 176	265	Khajah Noorul Hossein v. Fabre	1231
Kelly, R. & R. 421	277	Zonnerre, 24 W. R. 26	1553
Kelly, 2 C. & K. 379	1552	Khaja Noorul Hossein alias Khaja	517
Kelly, 2 C. & K. 814	1341	Waheed Jan, 24. W. R. 26	1677
Kelly v. Tinning, L. R. 1 Q. B. 599	846	Khalak, 11 A. 393	1242
Kelly v. Solari, 9 M. & W. 54	1575	Khalil, Rahimau 11 R. 213	743, 744
Kemp v. Neville, 10 C. B. (N. S.) 523	1402	Khalas, (1915) P. L. R. 79	1350
	583	Khamiso, 6 S. L. R. 101, 17 I. C. 408.	203
Kenaram Bousee, 4 W. R. 19	444	Khana, (1872) P. R. No. 10	199, 970, 1067, 1107
Kendra Kumar, 7 W. R. 61	1480	Khanu, 87 I. C. 97, (1925) S. 286	1551
Kengalee Muduk, 18 W. R. 7	1438	Khan Bahadur, (1888) P. R. No. 26	1242
Kennang, (1917) 1 K. B. 25	1705	Khanderao, (1894) B. U. C.	1600
Kenney, 2 Q. B. D. 307	1705	Khandia, 7 A. 67	418
Kennington, 1886, 4 W'M & H. 93	1742	Khandu, 15 B. 194	429
Kenrick, 5 Q. B. 49	1446	Khandu, (1886) B. U. C. 302	251
Kera, (1888) B. U. C. 387	990	Khandu, (1934) L. 228 (2)	255
Kerrigan, 9 Cox. 441	1194	Khandu Singh, 22 B. 768	1541, 1554
Kerr, 12 I. R. L. R. 642	1033	Khandu Vishnu 1 Bom. L. R. 351	1242
Kerr, 8 C & P 177	1533, 1744	Khand Vithu Sathee, 1 B. L. R. 351	257
Kershow v. Bailey, 17 L. J. Ex. 129	1175	Khan Muhommed, (1887) P. R. No. 11	789
Keruppannes, (1883) 1 Weir 480	857	Khan Muhommed, (1904) P. R. No. 17	1034
Kesab Din, 1920) P. W. R. 3, 55 I. C.	525	Khanoon Ram, 60 I. C. (L.) 666, 22	1677
479	1744	Cr. L. J. 266	1262
Kesar, (1919) Pat. 33 F. B., 49 I. C.	1394	Khanu, 87 I. C. 97, (1925) S. 286	1205
481 20 Cr. L. J. 161	112	Khanu, 110 I. C. (L.) 804	498
Kesar Din, (1920) P. W. R. 3, 55 I. C.	363	Khanu Kori, 77 I. C. 814	1028
479	202	Khanum, (1930) L. 171	332
Kesavlal, 21 B. 536	428	Kharak Singh, (1881) P. R. No. 36	1448
Kesav Singh, 14 A. L. J. 792, 36 I. C.	513	Khatabai, 6 B. H. C. R. 9	263
630	438	Khem Das, 95 I. C. 931, (1926) L. 547	688
Keshaji Ahmed, (1892) 1, Weir 239	767	Khemee Singh, I. W. R. 18	1285
Keshab, 23 Bom. L. R. 350, 60 I. C.	1193	Khen (1934) O. 13	1029
1008	966, 1046, 1106	Khilawan, 112 I. C. (O)	920, 921
Keshav Lal, 21 B. 536	892, 1054	Khirati, 15 A. L. J. 807, 42 I. C. 1005	1430
Keshav 6 Bom. L. R. 361	1118	Khankor v. Umiashan, 10 B. H. C. R.	464
Kesho Ram, (1889) P. R. No. 36	1004, 1006	381	1205
Kesho Singh, 72 I. C. 583, 24 Cr. I. J.		Kherode Chunder Mozumdar, 5 C. 717	636
467		Khetter Nath v. Indro, 16 W. R. 78	990
Keshub, 8 C. 985, F. B.		170, 1259,	1376, 1419, 1423
Keshar Lal, (1930) M. W. N. 502		1066, 1068, 1086, 1087
Keshwar Lal v. Girish, 29 C. 496		896, 897
Keshwar Lal v. Girish Chwnder, 29 A.
498
Kesireddi, 9 M. L. T. 167, 8 I. C. 880.
Kesree, (1866) 1 Agra 31
Kesri Mal, 1 O. L. J. 200, 24 I. C. 590.
Kessat, (1919) Pat. 33, F. B., 49 I. C.
481
Ketabdi Mundul, 4 C. 764
Kew, 12 Cox. 355
Kewa. 115 I. C. (L.) 66
Kewal Dasad, (1834) W. R. 36

	PAGE		PAGE
Khogayi, 2 M. 122	983, 992	Knavesborough, (1805) 2 Peck. 382	577
Khoma, (1879) P. R. No. 31	1399, 1406, 1416	Knell, 1 Barnard 305	465
Khoab Lall, 9 W. R. 66	670	Knight, 12 Cox. 102	1343
Khota Ram, (1907) P. R. No. 4	592	Knight v. Bowers, 14 Q. B. D. 845	881
Khuda Baksh, (1887) P. R. No. 27	1194	Knight v. Gibbs, 1 A. & E. 43	1747
Khuda Bakshi (1886) P. R. No. 10	1547	Knight's case, 1 Lew. C. C. 168	298, 1053
Khurkuhar Lohar, (1929) Pat. 518	1038	Knill v. Williams, 2 East 431	1567
Khusal, (1877) P. R. No. 13	252	Kohmi, (1914) P. R. No. 24, 26 I. C. 305, 16 Cr. L. J. 1	1523
Khushal, (1869) B. U. C. 17	589	Kohna Ram, 46 A. 11	612
Khushala, 1880) P. R. No. 27	1221, 1223, 1224	Kokal Das, (1874) B. U. C. 80	684
Khushal Hiranman, 4 B. H. C. R. 28	183	Koilash Chandra, 16 C. 657	1548, 1550
Khushal Singh, (1886) P. R. No. 36	797	Koilash Ghose v. Jugall Lohar, 1 C. L. J. 104	1519
Khushal Singh, (1866) A. W. N. 23	530	Kola, 8 C. 214	116
Khushi Khan, (1870) P. R. No. 24	651	Kolanda Nayakan 53 M. 861	1031, 1596, 1597
Khushi Ram, 20 A. L. J. 162, (1922) A. 83, 67 I. C. 388, 23 Cr. L. J. 385	1401, 1407	Kola Lalang, 8 C. 214	115
Khushi Ram, 2 L. L. J. 99, 59 I. C. 654, 22 Cr. L. J. 142	1471	Kolangaret, 29 I. C. (M.) 670	1065, 1067
Khwaja, Hassan. 71 I. C. 350, 24 Cr. L. J. 136	1330	Komal Chunder Bose v. Nabin, Chunder Bose, 10 W. R. 184	1700, 1701
Kiamuddi, 51 C. 79, 28 C. W. N. 347	241, 247	Komali Viswasam, (1886) 1 Weir 450	1328
Kikabhai, 9 B. H. C. R. 451	1754	Komati Ramannah, (1882) 1 Weir 131	631
Kilham, 39 L. J. M. C. 109	1437	Kombola, 27 I. C. (M.) 560 (1915) M. W. N. 203	509
Killikyataroy, (1912) M. W. N. 1108, 19 I. C. 207	201	Komul Das, 2 W. R. 7	1434
Killikyatara, (1912) M. W. N. 1108, 19 I. C. 207	355	Komul Kisto Bonick, 12 C. L. R. 231	639
Kimber v. The Press Association, (1893) 1 Q. B. 65	1732	Kona Tirumala Reddi, (1899) 1 Weir 219	813
Kimidi, 91 I. C. 385, (1925) M. 1093	613	Konda Satyawatamma, 134 I. C. (M.) 87	435
Kina Karmakar v. Preo Nath Dutt, 29 C. 481	732	Kondiah 17 M. L. W. 746, 72 I. C. 616, (1923) A. I. R. (M.) 608.	1168
Kindar Singh, 149 I. C. (A.) 880	1061	Kondi Chetty, 8 M. L. T. 385, 8 I. C. 128	1475, 1494
Kine v. Sewell, 3 M. & W. 299	1746, 1749	Koochri, 7 S. L. R. 17, 20 I. C. 599	1191, 1193
King v. Watts, 8 C. & P. 641	1747, 1749	Kookey v. Edeveain, (1897) 14 T. L. R. 34	1727
King v. Patterson, (1887) 83 L. T. J. 408	1749	Koonee, 7 W. R. 48	1320, 1329
King v. Smith, 4 T. R. 414	934	Koordam Singh, 3 W. R. 15	1191, 1196
King, (1897) 1 Q. B. 214 (219)	1433, 1454	Koorathalwar, (1920) M. W. N. 346, 55 I. C. 469, 21 Cr. L. J. 309	1370
King, 1 Cox. 36	755	Koraga, 6 M. 374	1691
Kinkar, (1881) A. W. N. 94	1399	Koram Singh, 67 I. C. (C.) 729	513
Kinnersley, (1719) 1 Stra. 93	442	Korban, 32 C. 444	1196
Kipps, 4, Cox. 167	1191	Korothe Mammad, 41 M. 334	1217
Kirab Singh, (1907) A. W. N. 291	1446	Kota Appadu 32 I. C. (M.) 673, 17 Cr. L. J. 81	1260, 1273
Kirkhan, 8 C. & P. 115	1007	Kotamraju Venkatragadu, 28 M. 90 F. B	169, 1426, 1428, 1579, 1580, 1615
Kirkwood, 1 Mood. C. C. 304	196	Kotayya, 27 I. C. (M.) 159	696
Kirwood, R. & M. 304	195, 406	Kotayya, 10 M. 255	160, 1253
Kirode, Chander Roy, 39 C. 377	921	Kotha Goundan, (1890) 1 Weir 554	1611
Kirpa Singh, (1912) P. W. R. 26, 16 I. C. 169	360, 953	Kotha Subba Chetty, 6 M. 252	609, 610, 650, 664, 670
Kirpa Ram, (1887) P. R. No. 21	1734	Kottaigadu, (1915) M. W. N. 544, 30 I. C. 439	249
Kirpal Singh, 9 A. 523	1394	Kottoora, 40 M. L. J. 311, 77 I. C. 444, 25 Cr. L. J. 396	1321
Kisan Bapu, 10 B. 93	594	Koura Khan, (1868) P. R. No. 34	498
Kishan Lal, 22 A. L. J. 501	1130	Koylash v. Sonatan, 7 C. 132	114
Kishanlal (1904) A. L. J. R. 207	550	Kocing v. Ritchie, 3 F. & F. 413	1735
Kishen Koer, P. R. No. 20 of 1878	130, 1395	Kripal Singh, 9 A. 523	1394
Kishen Lal, 22 A. L. J. 501	361	Kripa Singh, (1912) P. W. R. No. 26, 16 I. C. 169	953
Kishen Pershad, 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. 202	1572	Krishna, 27, I. C. 198	224
Kishori Lal Chatterji, 9 C. W. N. 764	1439
Kishori Lal, 85 I. C. 821, (1925) A. 409	639
Kisham v. Link, (1896) 1 Q. B. 574	146
Kishin Chand, 20 S. L. R. 18,	448
Kisto Soondar Deb, 2 W. R. 5	1605, 1607, 1608
Kishorymohan v. Hursook, 17 C. 436 P. C.	282
Kissore Pater, 7 W. R. 35	1310
Kitchin v. Hawkins, L. R. 2 C. P. 22	262
Klawar, S. C. 175 (Oudh)	236

	PAGE		PAGE
Krishna, (1897) B. N. J. 927	243	Kundan, (1903) A. W. N. 43	1086
Krishna, 30 M. L. J. 132	735	Kundan, 36 A. 495	252
Krishna v. Corporation 31 C. 993	1102	Kundan. 99 I. C. 600, (1927) S. 128	653
Krishna, (1889) B. U. C. 430	1483	Kunda Singh, (194) P. L. R. 3, 22 I. C.	754
Krishna, (1878) B. H. C. 134	904, 906		1042
Krishna, 88 I. C. 188 (1925) M. 577	1493	Kundun, (1864) W. R. 13	1678
Krishna 2 A. 713	701, 702, 704	Kunhussa, 5 M. 28	229
Krishna, 24 M. 641	1117	Kunj Beharee, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R.	187
Krishnachari, (1884) 1 Weir 259	943		806, 808
Krishna Chandra Pati. 117 I. C. (Pat.)	164	Kunja Bhunia, 39 C. 896	380, 386, 1103
	1546	Kunju Nayar, 12 M. 114	1441, 1581
Krishna Gobind Das, 20 C. 358	589, 608	Kunji Lal, 12 A. L. J. 151	1511
Krishna Govinda, 43 C. 783	1598, 1602	Kunhi Bava, 114, I. C. 234,	218
Krishnaji, (1888) B. U. C. 405	770	Kuppa Pillai (1888) 1 Weir. 242	859
Krishnappa, 7 M. 276	869	Kuppan. 11 M. 137	591
Krishna Kour (1878) P. R. No. 20	1395	Kuppua Pillai, (1885) Weir (3rd. Ed.)	336
Krishna Prasad v. Rabindra Nath			1594
13 I. C. (C.) 99, 13 Cr. L. J. 6	1597, 1600	Kuppusami, 28 M. L. J. 505, 20 I. C.	109
Krishna Shetti, 1 Weir 50	185		1769
Krisnamal v. Krishnaiyengar, 23		Kuppuswami Chetty, (1933) M. W. N.	1259
M. L. J. 50 F. B. 15 I. C. 652	1741		260
Krishna Chandra Pali, 117 I. C. (Pat.)	164	Kuppusawmy v. Doraiswami, 19 M. L.	J. R. 714
	994		1718
Krishna Maharana, (1929) Pat. 651	1189	Kuppa Somier, 28 M. 454	382
Krishnanund, 12 C. 58 F. B.	673	Kura Khan, (1868) P. R. No. 34	509
Krishna Rao, 4 Bom. L. R. 53	670	Kure, (1886) A. W. N. 65	1045, 1333
Krishna Rao, v. Appaswami, (1891)		Kure, 16 A. L. J. 614	967
1 Weir 585	1367, 1752	Kureem Buksh, (1868) P. R. No.	13
Krishnarao, 5 Bom. L. R. 1023	518, 520		366, 1041
Krishna Rao, 6 N. L. R. 119, 73		Kurim Bux, 2 W. R. 12	379
I. C. 335, 24 Cr. L. J. 591	1367	Kuria, (1875) P. R. No. 18	592
Krishna Shetti, (1891) 1 Weir 50	185, 409	Kurli Brahman, 27 O. C. 385, 89 I. C.	836, (1925) O. 374
Krishna Chetty, (1882) 1 Weir 70	507		1332
Krishnaji Ganesh, (1898) B. U. C.	955	Kurma Urang, (1928) C. 238	313
	550	Kurnam Seshayya, 21 M. L. J. 781, 11	I. C. 797
Krishna Shaji, (1897) B. U. C. 927	1769		1534
Krishna Shet, (1890) B. U. C. 527	641	Kushhali, 29 A. 141	806
Krishna Swami, 51 M. 263	428	Kushal, 130 I. C. (L.) 782	1193
Krishnashet, 5 B. H. C. R. 46	640	Kushal Hiranman, 4 B. H. C. R. 28	184
Krishnappa, 7 M. 276	869, 870	Kushee (Mt.), (1887) B. U. C. 328	1522
Krishtappa, 27 Bom. L. R. 599, 87		Kutab Ali, (1902) A. W. N. 151, (1903)	A. W. N. 231
I. C. 838	182		1419
Krishnappa, 20 M. 31	594	Kutab Ali, (1911) P. R. 14, 12 I. C.	973
Kristo Behari Dey, 12 C. L. R. 555	259		985
Krestodhone, 25 W. R. 6.	233	Kustandin, (1887) B. U. C. 327	1751
Kromme, (1892) 17 Cox, 492	442	Kuttan, (1870) P. R. No. 13	500
Kudart Nath, 75 I. C. 79, (1923)		Kutia Alu, (1886) B. U. C. 298	781
L. 295	1362	Kutti, 11 M. 441	787
Kudrutullah, 38 C. 781	504, 508, 516	Kuttiah Odayotte 29 I. C. (M.) 672	1260
Kudukoli Burandni, (1882) 1 Weir 515	1515	Kuttichami, 41 M. 930	940
Kudumban, (1895) 1 Weir 196	756	Kya Nyun, 8 L. B. R. 125, 33 I. C.	634
Kukati, 25 I. C. 629	796		1014, 1043
Kuldip Pandey v. Ramnath, (1917)		Kyanla, 4 Bur. L. T. 136, 12 I. C.	848
Pat. 71, 1 Pat. L. J. 353, 35 I. C.	491		1237
Kulli Mooddeen, 7 W. R. 53	1471	Kya Sone, 6 L. B. R. 48, 15 I. C.	990
Kuloda Prasad Majumdar, 11 C. W. N.	396		755
100	115, 137
Kullappa, (1920) M. W. N. 131, 54 I. C.
617, 21 Cr. L. J. 137	1512
Kulum 10 W. R. 39	258
Kumarasami, 2 M. H. C. R. 331	1689, 1691
Kumarasami Asari, (1929) M. W. N.	587
	1063
Kumede Charan Ghose, 15 C. L. J. 512,
15 I. C. 656, 13 Cr. L. J. 512	1360
Kumeda Charan Ghose 15 C. L. J. 515	1376
Kumud Nath, 57 I. C. 915	636
Kunund Narain Bhoop, 4 C. 650	637
Kudaon, 21 N. L. R. 86 (1925) N.	407
	702

L
Labh Singh, (1923) L. 291, 75 I. C.	77
	249
Labh Singh, 94 I. C. (L.) 365	256
Labh Singh, 6 L. 24	1321
Labhu, (1919) P. R. No. 25, 52 I. C.	797
	1102, 1113, 1363
Labouchere, 12 Q. B. D. 320,	1722
Labouchere, 14 Cox. 419	1714, 1715
Lachi Ram, 73 I. C. (Pat.) 260, (1923)	L. 330
	1190
Lachman, 46 A. 243	312
Lachman Chamar, 18 A. L. J. 311, 56	I. C. 209, 21 Cr. L. J. 417
	1690

	PAGE		PAGE
Lachman Singh, 7 Pat. 715,	614, 615, 1370	Lalbu, (1898) B. U. C. 961	1090
Lachman Lal, 4 Pat. L. J. 16, 49 I. C.		Lal Gumal, (1870) 1558, 1603 N. W. P.
174, 20 Cr. L. J. 142	1442	H. C. R. 11	174, 1568, 1603
Lachmi Seni, 58 C. 971,	635, 636	Lale, 118 I. C. (O) 423	1337
Lachmi Narain, 16 O. C. 81, 19 I. C.		Lalit Mohan, 22 C. 313	172, 174, 1382
712	658, 677		1388, 1571, 1603, 1615
Lachmi Narayan, 42 I. C. (A.) 913	913	Lalit Mohan Chakrabarty, 15 C. W. N.
Ladka, (1888) B. U. C. 635	1429	98, 8 I. C. 1059	445 457
Lad Khan, (1912) P. L. R. 11, 13 I. C.		Lalji v. Girdhari, 5 C. W. N. 106	732
998	1327	Lalji Bhanji, 14 Bom. L. R. 306, 15 I.
Laffar Ayul, 68 P. C. (N) 621	1460	C. 645	1379
Lahai Mundal, 7 W. R. 29	598	Lalji Hari, 49 I. C. 850	733
Lahanu, 27 Bom. L. R. 1419,		Lalji Ram, (1898) P. R. No. 12	1548
(1889) 1 Weir 340	1146	Lal Khan, (1914) P. W. R. 29, 12 I. C.
Lahori, 23 A. L. J. 587, 88 I. C. 260,		836, 15 Cr. L. J. 524	1688
(1925) A. 647	1025	Lal Khan v. Kureem Khan, (1866)
Lahya, 1 B. 50	130	P. R. No. 71	414
Laidman v. Hearsay, 7 A. 806	1756, 1758	Lall Chand Ray, 9 W. R. 37	1358
Laing v. Bishopswearmouth, 3 Q. B.		Lalli, 7 A. 749	701
D. 299	161	Lallubhai, 4 Bom. L. R. 440	1441
Lajee Ram, (1898) P. R. 12	1520, 1552	Lallu Ram, 21 A. L. J. 772	860
Lakanaw, (1916) 2 U. B. R. 124, 38		Laloo, Ghella, 6 Bom. L. R. 553	1556 1614
I. C. 739	1259	Lallu Waghji, 43 B. 550	1258
Lakhappe Kore, 5 B. H. C. R. 45	915, 916	Lal Mahomed, 22 W. R. 82	165, 166, 1426
Lake v. Hatton, 11 Mod. 99, 5 Coke,			1429, 1430, 1434
125	1721	Lal Meah, 4 Bur. L. J. 140, 12 I. C. 846	893
Lake v. Ventr, 28	1712	Lal Mohan, 28 C. 293	514, 1103
Lakhan Chanda, (1925) C. 149	163	Lalmoni, 1 Pat. L. R. 142, 72 I. C. 161	676
Lakhmidas, 14 B. 165	638	Lal Sahai, 11 A. 183	648, 649
Lakhan Savra, (1932) C. 815 F. B.	1030	Lal Singh, 7 C. P. L. R. 24	255
Lakhu, 2 L. L. J. 536	1208	Lal Singh, 63 I. C. (P.) 610	995
Lakhu Shah, (1894) P. R. No. 27	654, 656	Lal Singh, (1911) P. L. R. 113, 24 I. C.
Lakhy Govind, 1 B. 50	1391, 1394	833, 15 Cr. L. J. 521	1397, 1407
Lakmia, 18 B. 400	234	Lalta Prasad, 19 A. L. J. 125, 61 I
Lakshia, (1884) B. U. C. 202	820	C. 59	902
Lakshman, 26 B. 558	1536	Lal Triloknath, 1 O. 75	575
Lakshman, 2 B. 481	1752	Lalu Gope, 1 Pat. L. W. 691	1471
Lakshman Kalyan, (1875) B. U. C. 89		Lambard Inen p. 129	339
	1147, 1150	Lambert, 2 Camp, 400	471
Lakshman Raghunath, 26 B. 558	168, 174	Lambert and Perry, 2 Camp. 398	465
	1534, 1538	Lampheir v. Phipson, 8 C. & P. 475	344
Lakshman, (1888) B. U. C. 411	990	Lancaster, (1896) 5 Oill & H. 46	583
Lakshman, (1898) B. U. C. 989	849	Lane v. Rondall, (1899) 2 Q. B. 1673
Lakshman, 10 B. 512	312, 323, 1207		847, 1178
Lakshman Dagdeb, 10 B. 512	312	Langadaya, (1897) B. U. C. 904	635
Lakshmi, B. U. R. 303	185	Langar, (1912) P. L. R. 11, 16 I. C. 526.	1034
Lakshmi, (1881) B. U. C. 152	585, 586	Longford, (1870) 2 O. M. & H. 14	577
Lakshmi, 7 M. 289	688, 689, 690	Langford, C. & M. 602	509
Lakshmi, (1886) B. U. C. 303	408	Langley, 2 Salk. 697	474
Lakshmi Narain, 16 O. C. 81, 19 I. C.		Langley, 6 Mad. 125	1698
712	672	Langmead, L. & C. 427	1276, 1410
Lakshminarayana, 42 M. L. J. 490,		Langride 35 A. 29	1372
(1922) M. 405	1257	Lanier, (1914) A. C. 221, 18 C. W. N. 98
Lakshmi Narayan, (1917) M. W. N. 31,		P. C.	1375, 1376
42 I. C. 989	398	Lapier's Case, 1 Leach. 320	1309
Lakshumi Prasad, 65 I. C. (Pat.) 492,		Larner, 14 Cox. 497	1437
23 Cr. L. J. 108	1441, 1786	Lashkar, 2 L. 275	1311
Lakshmi Gadu, (1883) 1 Weir. 121	1152	Lashkari Khan, 8 S. L. R. 343, 29 I. C.
Lakshmya, (1878) B. U. C. 136	1263	664	375, 501, 501
Lakumal, 8 S. L. R. 199, 27 I. C. 902	1618	Latif Khan, 20 B. 394	185, 268, 269,
Lal, 99 I. C. 90, 28 Cr. L. J. 58	191		402, 409, 1128
Lal, (1912) P. W. R. 85, 16 I. C. 528	1404	Latif Miyam, 39 A. 123	1622, 1918
Lala, (1911) P. L. R. 32 9 I. C. 731 990, 1033		Latiful Hasan v. Mumtaz Ali, 3 A. L. J.
Lala, 32 A. 78	1657	818	240
Lalai, 2 A. 301	1513	Latimer, 17 Q. B. D. 359 (361)	1011 1013
Lalamun Singh, 1 Agra 31	241	Laugher v. Painter, 5 B. & C. at p. 576	866
Lala Ojha 26 C. 863	1598, 1602	Laughton v. Bishop of Sodor L. R. 4
Lala Raoji, 111, I. C. (B) 730	1343, 1370	P. C. 495 (598)	1738
Lal Bahadur, 140 I. C. (A) 97	1428	Launeston, (1874) 2 O. M. & H. 129	573
Lal Behari, 86 I. C. 669, (1925) C. 664	1262	Lauter, (1913) A. C. 221	1367
Lal Behary Singh, 1 Pat. L. J. 205	732	Lava, 13 N. L. R. 87, 40 I. C. 629	1178

	PAGE		PAGE
Lavey, 3 C. & K. 26	667	Limbya (1895) B. U. C. 799	703
Law, 2 F. & F. 836	316	Limba Taty 31 Bom. L. R. 800	628
Lawlers v. Anglo-Egyptian Cotton Co., L. R. 4 Q. B. 262	1738	Lince, 12 Cox. 451	1424, 1454
Lawrence v. Hedger, 3 Taunt 14-16	267, 290	Lindsay, 66 J. P. 505	1683
Lawrence Jenkins, C. J. in Omkar 4 Bom. L. R. 679	1621	Lines, 1 C. & K. 393	1235
Lawrence v. Woodward, Cro. Car. 277	1711	Lingam Ramanna, 2 M. 137	398, 408
Laxmanrao, 150. I. C. (N.) 1028,	511	Lingapa, (1892) B. U. C. 606	914
Lazar, 30 M. 550	1670, 1672	Lingha, (1883) 1 Weir 130	631
Leach, 6 Mad. 145	896	Linsberg, (1905) 69 J. P. 107	1152
Leach, 25 L. J. M. C. 77	1447	Lister, 26 L. J. M. C. 196	299, 967
Leach v. Money, 19 St. Tr. 1000	373	Lister, D. & B 118	1369
Leame v. Bray, 3 East. R. 593	1052	Lister v. Perryman, L. R. 4 E. & I. App. 521	741, 1365
Leasley, (1860) 29 L. J. M. C. 97	133, 1156	Littler v. Thompson, 2 Beav. 129	1735
Leather Cloth Co. v. American Leather Cloth Co., 11 H. L. C. 523 (534, 535)	1618, 1619	Liverpool Case, (1853) 2 P. R. & D. 248	574
Leddington, 9 C. & P. 79	1060	Lixon, 3 M. & S. 11	877
Ledga, 66 I. C. (N.) 422, 23 Cr. L. J. 278	1531	Lloyd, 4 Esp. 200	860
Ledger, 2 F. & F. 857	1447, 1049	Lloyd, 7 C. & P. 318	1237
Lee, 6 C. & P. 536	406, 747	Lloyd, 7 Car. & Pay. 318	1788
Lee, 4 F. & F. 63	965	Lochan, 8 A. 635	998, 999, 1000
Lee's Case, Leach 258 n.	1576	Lock, 12 Cox. C. C. 244	346, 348
Lee v. Haley, L. R. 5 Ch. 155	1633	Lock, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 10	348
Lee v. Risdon, 17 R. R. 484	1259	Locost, Kel. (J.) 30	1535, 1551
Lee v. Simpson, 3 C. B. 871	177	Loganathiyar, 4 I. C. (M.) 700	193, 504
Leeds Bank v. Walker, 11 Q. B. D. 84	1567	Lekenath, 11 C. 349	247
Leefe, 2 Camp. 134	674	Lokenath Kar. 18 W. R. 2	543
Leefe v. Hart, L. R. 3C. P. 322	267	Lolit Mohon Sarkar, 22 C. 313	172, 174, 1382
Le Fanu v. Malcolmson, 1 H. L. C. 637	1715, 1717		1388, 1571, 1603, 1615
Lefrey, L. R. 8 Q. B. 134	803	Lolley's Case, R. & R. 237	271
Lefroy v. Burnside (No. 2) 4 L. R. Ir. 556	1726, 1727, 1728	London & Brighton Ry. Co. v. Tru- mun, 11 App. Cas. 45	863
Legal Remembrancer v. Abi Lal, 48 C. 911	682	London County Council, (1894) 71 L. T. 638
Legal Remembrancer v. Matilal Ghose, 41 C. 173	802, 803	London & North Western Ry. Co. v. Richards, 2 B. & S. 326	847
Leigh, (1866) 4 F. & F. 916	324	Long, 4 C. & P. 423	1055
Lekhray, 1 A. L. J. R. 145	535	Longbottom, 3 Cox. C. C. 439, 6 M. H. C. R. (App.) 31	298, 270
Lekha Singh (1933) O. 53	518	Longbottom, 3 Cox. C. C. 509	1049, 1054
Lemerick, (1869) 1 O. M. & H. 261	574	Longbottom, Rus. C. & M. 871	892
Le Mesurier v. Le Mesurier, (1895) A. C. 517	1666	Longford, (1870) 2 O'M. H. 15	577, 575
Le Neve v. Gould, (1893) 1 Q. B. 491 (497)	888	Longhurst, (1858) Mad. unrep.	168
Lennard, 1 East, 170	817	Longton Gas Co., 8 Cox. 317	899
Leonard, 1 Den. C. C. 304	1425	Lonier, (1914) A. C. 221, 18 C. W. N. 98	1368, 1370
Leversage v. Smith, Cro. Eliz. 191	1711	Lonsdale, 4 F. & F. 56	1254
Levets' Case, 1 Hab. 474	265	Loodon, (1869) P. R. No. 11	412
Levett, Cro. Car. 536	210	Loothy Bewa, 11 W. R. 24	1446
Levy v. Lawson, 27 L. J. Q. B. 282	1731	Lopez v. Lopez, 12 C. 706 F. B.	1666, 1668
Lewis, 22 I. C. 747	271	Lord Abingdon, 1 Ex. 228	477
Lewis 38 M. 773	202, 263, 293	Lord Andley, 3 St. Tr. 401	1241
Lewis, 1 C. & K. 419	338, 295	Lord Byron, 11 St. Tr. 1117	1006
Lewis, 11 Cox. 404	444	Lordesmere, 15 Q. B. 689	891
Lewis, 6 C. & P. 161	1122, 1123	Lord Ferrer's Case, 19 St. Fr. 947	324
Lewis, 2 C. & P. 628	1530	Lord George Gordon, 21 St. Tr. 485	455
Lewis v. Levy, 27 L. J. Q. B. 282	1732	Lord Huntingtower v. Gardiner, 1 B. & C. 297 (299)	116
Lewknor v. Cruchley, Cro. Car. 140	1711	Louth. (1880) 30 M. & H. 61	575
Lews. v. Walter, Cro Jac. 406	1704, 1734	Love, 5 How. S. T. 113	208
Lewis v. Walter, 4 B. & Ald. 605	1732	Love, 18 W. R. 44	233
Leyman v. Latuner, 3 Ex. D. 15	1711	Lovell, 8 Q. B. D. 185	1294
Lichfield, (1896) 5 O. M. & H. 27	574, 576, 583	Lovett, 9 C. & P. 456	466, 1757
Light 27 L. T. M. C. 1	1148	Lowe, 3 C. & K. 123	892
Ligon, R. & R. 255; Froud C. 389	1577	Loyd, 4 Esp. 200	854
Lila, 90 L. J. 291, (1922) O. 228	500	Luchmaka, 12 M. 352	205
Lila Singh, 22 C. 286	369, 625, 626	Luchman Pershad 18 W. R. 22	600
		Luchman Singh, 31 C. 710	407, 423, 1165, 1154
		Luchmi Singh, (1918) Pat. 36, 44 456, 19 Cr. L. J. 344	I. C. 1583, 1584

	PAGE		PAGE
Luckumsey v. Hurbun, 5 B. 580	1715	McLeod, 12 Cox. C. C. 434	343
Lukhee Singh, (1869) 12 W. R. 23	602, 606, 654	McMahon, 13 Cox 275	1410
Lukhini Agradanim, 22 W. R. 27 (28)	307, 308, 309, 306	McNaughten's Case 1 C. & K. 130	313, 314
Lukhun Das, 2 W. R. 52	1558	MacPherson v. Daniels, 10 B. & C. 263	1037, 1704, 1705
Lumley v. Gye (1853) 22 L. J. Q. B. 471	442	M'Pherson, D. & B. 197	1783
Lundomal, 9 S. L. R. 75, 30 I. C. 1003, 16 Cr. L. J. 715	1259, 1273	Mc. Quire v. Western Morning News Co., (1903) 2 K. B. 100	1707, 1727, 1737
Lurrel's Case, 2 Rep. 493	883	McRue, 8 C. & P. 641	1235
Lutchmiat, (1893) 1 Weir 143	639	McShame, C. & M. 212	430, 1235
Luthi, Bewa, 2 B. L. R. (A. C. Cr.) 25	169, 713	Madan Gopal, (1910) P. R. No. 17	935
Lutt, 3 F. & F. 834	822	Madan Gopal (1910) P. R. No. 92, 6 I. C. 620
Luxman, 26 B. 558	1512	Madan Gopal, P. R. No. 17
Luxman Narayan Joshi, 2 Bom. L. R. 286	471	Madan Gopal, 34 A. 589	928, 930, 931, 933
Luxumandas, (1869) B. U. C. 25	652	Madanjit, 4 Bur. L. T. 48, 9 I. C. 775	1724
Lynam v. Gowing, 6 L. R. Tr. 259	1741, 1743	Madan Mohan, (1883) 3 A. W. N. 197	543
Lynch, 5 C. & P. 323	1007	Madan Mohan Biswas, 19 C. 572	1230
Lynch v. Nurdin, 1 Q. B. 29	1048	Madan Mandal, 41 C. 662	200, 1103
Lyon's Case, (1738) 1 East P. C. 469	1658	Madan Singh, 7 C. P. L. R. 21	403
Lyons v. Martin, 8 A. & E. 512	877	Madappa (1888) 1 Weir 471	1408
Lyton, 4 Cox C. C.	311, 317	Madappa Goundan, 43 I. C. (M.) 403, 19 Cr. L. J. 115	1750
M		Madaree Chawkidar, 3 W. R. 2	1250
Mabarali Ali, 17 C. W. N. 94	1294, 1584, 1589, 1600, 1698, 1798	Madar Sahib (1884) 1 Weir 227	876
Mabi, 25 B. 706	249	Madat Khan (1887) P. R. No. 61	518, 519
Macaulay's Case, 1 Leach, 287	1309	Maddala Ramanujamma, 39 M. 977	665
MacCrea, 15 A. 173, O. A. 15 A. 310 P. C. 353, 354, 356, 662,	1787	Maddi (1670) 1 Ventr. 158	995
Macdonald, 9 Cox. 10	1284	Madduri Krishnanimes, (1883) 1 Weir 455	1349
Mackay v. Ford, 5 H. & N. 792	1745	Madar Sahib, (1902) 1 Weir 497	1483
Mackenzie, (1892) 2 Q. B. 519	445	Madha v. Bhagwant, 88 I. C. 181 (1925) N. 345; 86 I. C. 993, (1925) O. 413	1601
Macleod v. A. G. of New South Wales, (1891) A. C. 455 (458)	1704	Madhab Hari, 15 C. 388	627, 1255
Macklini, 5 Cox. 216	1395	Madhava, 31 M. L. J. 305, 35 I. C. 161	628
Mackaji, (1884) B. U. C. 198	1142	Madha Sonar, 13 A. L. J. 691, 30 I. C. 141	1178
Mac Millan, 1 Cox. 41	803	Madho, 40 A. 28	613
Macpherson v. Daniells, 10 B. & C. 272, 771, 1037, 1705		Madho, 4 A. 498	1132
McArthur v. Peake, N. P. C. 155	648	Madho Singh, (1878) P. R. No. 22	1072
McCarthy, 9 A. 420	1699, 1707	Madho Singh, 47 A. 409	789
M'—Combs v. Tuttle, E. Blackford (Md.) 431	1702	Madho Sonat, 13 A. L. J. 691, 30 I. C. 141, 20 Cr. L. J. 48	1139, 1177
McCormick, 6 Bur. L. T. 21, F. B.	1179	Madho Phat, 13 C. 270	611
McDaniel, 19 St. Tr. 746 (804)	400, 1262	Madhub Chunder, 21 W. R. (Cr.) 13	113
McDermott v. The Justices of British Guiana, 5 Moo. P. C. (N. S.) 497	137	Madhu Hari, 15 C. 390	1255, 1259
McDonnell, 3 R. 524	136	Madhub Chander Giri, 21 W. R. 13 (17)	1682, 1683, 1684
McDonnell, 5 Cox. 153	1305	Madhub Chunder Mozumdar v. Novo-deep, 16 C. 126	727
M'Donald's Case, 9 Cox. 10		Madhu Chinnagi, 32 I. C. (M.) 665, 17 Cr. L. J. 73	1592
McGregor v. Gregory, 11 M. & W. 287	1717	Madhu Sudan v. Sasti Prasad, 7 C. W. N. 859, (1881) 1 Weir 488	1486
McGregor v. Gregory, 12 L. J. Ex. 204	1703	Madoo Soodan, 7 W. R. 23	690
McGregor v. Thwaites, (1824) 3 B. & C. 24	1705	Madree, 5 W. R. 68	164, 168, 401
McGrowther, 18 St. Tr. 391 (393, 394)	353, 354, 356	Madun Mohun, 4 C. 37	1230
M'Grath, L. R. 1. C. C. 205	1294	Madurai (In re) 12 M. 54	1611
M'Hugh, (1901) 2 Jr. L. R. 569	1721	Madur Joloba, 8 W. R. 28	972
McIntosh, 2 Leach, 833	379, 956, 1577	Madu Chimnaji, 32 I. C. (M.) 665	1592
McIntyre 2 Cox. 379	956, 962, 1492	Madyar, 4. L. I. J. 235; (1922) L. 263	1027
McIntyre, v. Mcbean, 11 Upper Canada, Q. B. R. 534	1740	Mafizaddi, 31 C. W. N. 940, 104 I. C. 245, (1927) C. 644	1205
McKay's Case, 2 Ch. D. 1	1382	Maganlal, 14, B. 115
McKenzie, (1903) 1 K. B. 56	445	Maganlal, 6 B. 622	554
M'Clarens, 3 Cox. 425	1402	Maganlal, 14 B. 131.	189, 355, 399
M'Langhlin, 8 C. & P. 635	1128	Magdelana Steam Navigation Co. v. Martin, (1859) 2 E. & E. 94	120
M'cLeod, 3 A. 342	1704	Megenee Behara, 11 W. R. 3	897

	PAGE		PAGE
Maghuni Padan, 7 Pat. 408 ..	730	Mahomed Hossein, 5 W. R. 49 ..	553, 408
Magraj, (1881) P. R. No. 20 F. B. ..	552	Mahomed Hossain, 16 W. R. 337 ..	671, 679
Maguire, 5 C. 124 ..	136	Mahomed Hossein, 29 P-L-R. 34 ..	255, 260
Mahabent, 16 O. C. 4, 19 I. C. 497, ..	192	Mahomed Ibrahim, 112 I. C. (N.) 902 ..	504
Maguire, 5 C. 124 F. B. ..	192	Mahomed Ismail Khan, 22 O. C. 236, ..	681
Malhar Martand, 26 B. 193 ..	554	54 I. C. 60 ..	1044
Mahabir, 16 O. C. 19, 19 I. C. 497 ..	192	Mohomed Ali (1913) P. L. R. 187 ..	1208
Mahabir, 19 A. L. J. 295 ..	1043	Mahavan (1916) P. R. 13 ..	1558
Mahbir Baitha, 5 C. (Pat.) 172 ..	730	Mahomed 2 L. 342 ..	592
Mahabir Thakur, 20 C. W. N. 520, 33 ..	691, 693	Mahomed Ismail, (1873) B. U. C. 70 ..	398
I. C. 316 ..	118, 1468	Mahomed Jamal, (1930) S. 64 ..	566
Mahabir Singh, 25 A. 31 ..	1328	Mahomed Jan v. Khadi Sheikh, 16 ..	1634
Mahabir Tiwari, 21 A. 263 ..	1328	W. R. 65 ..	1783
Mahadeo Koshti, 23 N. L. R. 106 ..	186	Mahomed Jewa v. Wilson, 4 Bur. ..	315, 956,
Mahaddi 5 C. 870 (871) ..	1419	L. T. 83, 10 I. C. 787, 12 Cr. L. J. ..	960, 1432, 1492, 3437
Mahadev Govind, (1930) B. 176 ..	1353	246 ..	1437
Mahadshet (1854) B. U. C. 200 ..	886	Martin, 2 Mood. C. C. 123 ..	892
Mahadev (1934) A. 1024 ..	1534	Martin, 5 C. & P. 128, 130 ..	377
Mahadeo, 96 I. C. 210, (1926) A. 704 ..	1480	960, 1432, 1492, 3437 ..	413, 414
Mahadeo, 12 N. L. R. 188 ..	1491	Martin, L. R. 1 C. C. 56 ..	648
Mahadeo, 32 A. 397 ..	169, 1745	Martin v. Great Northern Ry., 16 C. B. ..	1016
Mahadeo, 90 L. J. 597, 74 I. C. 712 ..	1034, 1039	192 ..	1731
(1923) A. I. R. (O.) 112 ..	708	Martin v. Vithoba, 15 Bom. L. R. 391, ..	1688
Mahadeogir, 9 N. L. R. 26 ..	1253	21 I. C. 881 ..	612, 616
Mahadeo Prasad, 45 A. 680 ..	732	1064, 1066, 1068, 1782 ..	1713
Mahadeo Singh, 27 C. 921 611, 671, 730, 732 ..	611	Martin v. Burling, Cro. Chief 589 ..	1590
Mahadeo Singh, (1887) A. W. N. 142 ..	735, 737	Martin v. Laei, 2 F. & F. 654 ..	1031
Mahadu, 24 Cr. L. J. 959 ..	1196, 1197	Martindale, 52 C. 347 (370) ..	944
Mahakor, (1895) B. U. C. 820 ..	1031, 1597	Martindale, (1894) 3 Ch. 193 ..	1009
Mahadev, 131 I. C. (N.) 431 ..	1139	Marudachela Goundan 1931 M. W. N. ..	1409, 1366
Mahadev Pondey, 140 I. C. (A.) 99 ..	1353	645 ..	1567
Mahadev Covind (1930) B. 176 ..	607	Maruti Dada, 1 B. 15 ..	271, 1741
Mahali Ram, (1881) A. W. N. 43 ..	1614	Maru, 10 A. 207 ..	1746
Mahamed v. Mhd. Idris, 88 I. C. 189, ..	512	Mary Blandy, 18 St. Tr. 1186 ..	1408, 1425
(1925) S. 328 ..	511	Mary Carlile, 3 B. & Ald. 167 ..	1038
Mahankali, (1923) M. W. N. 814 ..	670	Mary Din, 4 L. 7 ..	859, 1110
Mahantawa v. Gangawa, 33 B. 693 ..	123, 275	Mary Good, 1 C. & R. 185 ..	1010, 1567
(697) ..	674	Masham v. Bridges Cro. Car. 223 ..	1250
Maharaj, 16 W. R. 41 ..	511	Ma Saw Yin, 11 L. B. R. 43, 64 I. C. ..	1398
Maharaja Madho Singh, (1904) 6 Bom. ..	1405	839 ..	650, 664
L. R. 763 P. C. ..	707	Ma Shwe Yi, 1 R. 751 ..	650
Mahraj Miser, 16 W. R. 47 ..	1405	Masit, 34 A. 78 ..	701
Maharaj Singh, 53 I. C. (N) 488) ..	150, 157	Mason, 2 East, P. C. 796 ..	701
Maharanee Ram v. Maharanee Sooth ..	681	Mason, R. & R. 419 ..	1250, 1791
7 W. R. 323 ..	159	Mason v. Bradley, 11 M. & W. 590 ..	399
Mahatu Babaji, (1895) B. U. C. 783 ..	644	Masse v. Marriss, (1894) 2 Q. B. 414 ..	278
Mahbood, 56 I. C. (A.) 856, 21 Cr. L. ..	511, 512	96 ..	1343
J. 552 ..	375	Masterson, 2 Cox. 100 ..	295, 338
Mahabir Singh, 25 A. 31 ..	635, 1715	Masti, (1911) P. R. No. 3, 10 I. C. 852 ..	1028, 1264
Mahavir, 1 Bom. L. R. 69 ..	308	Masumut Begum, 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. ..	985
MaHeaya, (1908) L. B. R. 276 ..	1715	349 ..	783
Mahendra, 15 C. W. N. 319, 9 I. C. ..	203, 427, 428, 1144	Masumali (1929) L. 50 ..	784
698 ..	1236	1010, 1567 ..	359, 1257
Mahendra Nath, Misser 12 C. W. N. ..	114	Matabhar Shekh, 14 C. W. N. 936, 7 I. ..	1116
845 ..	1481	C. 257 ..	638
Maherban, 9 I. C. (A.) 669 ..		Mataya, (1888) B. U. C. 416 ..
Maheshri Baksh Singh, 8 A. 380 ..		Mata Dayal, 24 C. 755 ..
Mahesh Dutt Singh, (1920) Pat. 127, ..		Mata Dayal, 4 N. W. P. H. C. R. 6 ..
54 I. C. 773 ..		Mata Din, 60 W. N. 1017 ..
Mahesh Sheikh, 21 C. 392 ..		Mata Prasad, 8 L. R. (A.) 77 ..
Mahimchandra Nath Bhoumick 56 C. ..		Matarao, 23, S. L. R. 5 ..
824 (830), ..		Mather, 2 Barnardiston 249 ..
Mahimuddin, 27 C. 133 ..		Mathews, 12 Cox. 489 ..
Mahimchandra 55 C. 1280 ..		Mathew v. Ollerton, Comb. 218 ..
Mahendranath, 62 C. 629 (633, 634) ..		Mathi, (1886) B. U. C. 314 ..
203, 427, 428, 1144 ..		Mahommad, 137 I. C. (L) 65 ..
Mahla Ram 75 I. C. 986 ..		Mahomed Kasi, 43 C. 1161 ..
Mahomed Ayoob, 2 Bom. L. R. 918 ..		Mahomed Kasim, (1882) 1 Weir 204 ..
Mahomed Foyaz v. Khan Mahomed ..		Mahomed Khan, 8 C. P. L. R. 15 ..
18 W. R. 10 ..		Mahomed Nabikhan, 149 I. C. (O.) 343 ..
		Mahomed Siddiq, 13 C. W. N. 911 ..

	PAGE		PAGE
Mahomed Yakoob, 7 M. L. T.	386	Mangal, 10 B.	258
6 I. C. 12	1131, 1132	Mangal Sen v. Shankar Sahai, 25 A.	232, 1016
Mahomed Wasil, 13 C. W. N.	191	580, F. B.	1567
Mahomed Yasin, 4 Pat.	323	Mangal Singh, 27 Punj L. R.	15
Mahomed Zaman, 34 P. L. R.	899	Mangal Singh, (1901) P. R. No. 31	513,
Mainda (1887) 1 Weir	101	514, 1553
Majhi Mamud, (1902) 2 C. L. J.	625	Mangat Rai, 7 A. L. J. 93 5 I. C.	695
Maka, (1892-1895), U. B. R.	158	677,	726
	754	Mangaya, (1915) P. W. R. 41, 32 I. C.
Makbulshah, (1885) 1 Weir	470	660	1276
Makee, 12 W. R.	15	Mangaya Shah, (1916) P. L. R. 62, 32 I.	1275
Ma Khewat Kyi, 6 R.	791	C. 660, 17 Cr. L. J.	68
Makhan, 15 A.	317	Mangovind, 3 C. W. N.	627
Makin v. Attorney-General, (1894) A.		Manga Ram, (1886) P. R. No. 28	730, 732
C. 57	447	Mangan Das 29 C.	379
Makintosh v. Haydon, Ry. & M.	362	Mangat Ram, 18 A.	358
Makunda v. Bhikari, 1 C. W. N.	452	Mangat Rai, A. L. J. 93, 5 I. C.	695
Makund Ram, 6 A. L. J.	472, 2 I. C.	Mangavalli, (1889) 1 Weir 328 (329)	1067,
226	1719	1068
Ma Kye, W. (1891) S. J. L. B.	537	Mangesh Jivaji, B.	376
MaNyien v. Nga Sein 5 L. B. R.	100	Mangloo (1930) L.	544
F. B., 4 I. C.	293	Mangroo, 6 N. W. P. H. C. R.	293
Malai Singh, 28 A.	492	Mangu, (1914) P. W. R. 35, 25 I. C.
Maloobigadu, (1882) 1 Weir.	239	978	1677
	915, 950	Manhur Hussain, 41 A.	587
Mala Singh, 5 L. L. J. 121, (1924) A. I.		Mania, (188) B. N. C.	407
R. (Lahore) 61	192	Mania Goundan, 37 M.	47
Malayan Kalan, (1883) 1 Weir,	510	Manicka, (1915) M. W. N. 278 I. C.
Malcomson v. O'Dea, 10 H. L. C.	593	102	1571
	1496	Mani Ram, (1908) 19 M. L. J. 271, 3 I.
Malhar Martaend 26 B.	193	C. 600	1458
Malhar Ramchandra, 7 B. H. C. R.		Manihar Singh, 7 N. L. R. 101, 11 I. C.
64	789	785	600
Malhari, 6 B.	731	Manikka, 8 I. C. (M.) 318, 11 Cr. L.
Malik Dand, (1887) P. R. No. 30	438, 599	J. 623	1485, 1515
Mali Muthu, 4 R.	251	Manikkam, (1908) 4 M. L. T. 324, 8
Mall v. Metropolitan Ommibus Co.,		Cr. L. J. 421	1456
28 L. J. Ch.	777	Manikham Pillai, 19 M. L. J. R. 271	616
Mallampati, 47 M. L. J.	447	Manindra Chandra, 41 C.	754
Mallapa, 17 Bom. L. R.	676,	Mani Pradano, (1882) 1 Weir 306
	639, 642, 737	(307)	993
Mallappa, 27 M.	127	Maniruddin, 35 C.	384
Mallela, (1917) M. W. N. 875, 42 I. C.		Mani Ram, (1912) P. W. R. 22, 15 I.
998	613	C. 971	1401
Mallison, 20 Cox.	204	Mani Ram, 8 L.	114
Mallow, (1870) 1 O'M. & H.	22	323 324
Maloney v. Bartley, 3 Camp.	213	Manjunath v. Venkatesh, 6 B.	54
Malu, 23 B.	706 F. B.	Mankletow, 22 L. J. M. C.	115
Malta Prasad, 18 A. L. J. 371, 55 I. C.		Mankura Pasi, 27 C. 139	1334, 1335, 1336
730, 21 Cr. L. J. 362	1459	1337, 1339
Malumarich v. Fulong etc 7 R.	169	Manmatha, 51 C. 250 (262, 263)	1440, 1451
Mammum, (1916) P. R. No. 35, 38 I. C.		Man Mohan, 35 I. C. (C.) 999	445, 447
751	1031, 1042	Man Mohan Roy, 19 C. W. N. 672, 26
Mamvez, 89 I. C. (C.) 390, 26 Cr. L. J.		I. C. 307	1394
1350	246, 248	Mannada v. Nallaya, 32 M.	527
Manage 13 F. and B.	1301	Mannikka, 8 M. L. T. 246, L. I. C. (M.)
Mana Gendal, 32 Bom L. R.	1143	855	316
	1510, 1600	Manning, 12 Q. B. D.	241
Managil Karuran, (1891) 1 Weir	240	Manning, L. R. 1 C. C. R.	338
Manaruddi, 35 C.	718	Mannu, 19 A. 390, F. B.	613
Manawar, (1875) P. R. No. 4	252, 1677	Mansang Bhava Sang, 10 B. H. C. R.
Manbvi, 3 C. W. N. 1	1772	74	1253
Mancherji Kavasji, 10 B.	97	Mansha Singh, 86 I. C. 347 (1925) L.
	928, 929,	371	1034
	933, 934	Ma Nyein v. Nga Seiu, 5 L. B. R.	100
Manchu Paidu, (1914) M. W. N. 168,		F. B. 4 I. C. 293	1005, 1039
22 I. C. 429	1255	Manohar, 5 B. H. C. R.	17
Mandaru Gadaba, 38 M.	479	Manohar, 16 A. L. J. 614, 47 I. C.	95
Mandi Ghasi, (1912) M. W. N. 49, 13 I.		Mansingh, 15 Bom. L. R. 568, 20 I. C.
C. 781	1781	593	1461
Mandru, 38 M.	479	Mans, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 235	1106
Mangh (1925) L. A. H.	868

Mantaja, 5 I. C. (C.) 477	311, 312, 320, 324
Mansa Ram, (1913) P. W. R. 25, 20 I. C. 1004, 14 Cr. L. J. 524	1450, 1452
Mansergh, 1 B. & S. 400	1745
Manshomal, 7 S. L. R. 71, 16 I. C. 768	1193
Mantripragada, 44 I. C. (M.) 973	205
Manu Singh, 7 W. R. 103	375
Manwa 83 I. C. 481 (1925) O. 298 S. 180 ill (b)	1393
Mazur Hasan v. Mhd. Zaman, 47 A. 151 P. C.	944, 1148
Mand Ally, (1906) 7 Bur. L. R. 125	902
Mangan Das, 29 C. 379	516
Manla Baksh, 27 A. 28	358
Ma Paw, 8 R. 499	728, 1030
Marcus, 2 C. & R. 356	1578
Margo, 5 B. 338 F. B.	116
Margam v. Mercer, 23 I. C. 177	180
Marigawda, (1891) B. U. C. 383	1590
Marimuthu, 5 M. L. T. 296, 1 I. C. 807	309
Marimuthu, 4 M. 243	1514, 1516
Marimuthu, (1923) M. W. N. 769, 73 I. C. 961	503, 1039, 1576
Markandeyulu, 22 M. L. J. 169, 37 I. C. 521	921, 922
Markandeyulu, 5 L. W. (Mad.) 237, 37 I. C. 521	920
Markuss, 4 F. & F. 356	344
Marks v. Samuel, (1904) 2 K. B. 287	1710
Marogawdha v. Srinivasa, 35 M. 594	1488, 1489
Marpeth, (1774) 1 Dougl. 147	577
Marquis of Buckingham, 4 Camp. N. P. 189	891
Marquis of Stafford v. Coyney, 7 B. & C. 257	891
Marriot, 8 C. & P. 425	1057
Marris v. Marris, 2 Sw. & Tr. 530	338
Marris v. Marris, 31 L. J. P. & M. 69	1686
Marsden, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 131	1454
Marsh v. Loader, 14 C. P. (N. S.) 535	307
Marsh, 3 F. & F. 523	1261
Marsh, 2 B. & C. 747	177
Martin, 5 Q. B. D. 34	712, 1574
Martin, 8 Q. B. D. 54	772, 989, 1040
Martin, 3 C. & P. 211	296
Mathradas v. Secretary of State, 5 S. L. R. 140, 13 I. C. 237	1173
Mathu Singh, 143 I. C. (C.) 14 S. B.	1015
Mathura Das, 6 A. 491	404, 423, 1582
Mathura Das, 16 A. 80 (83)	1173
Mathuranath, 139 I. C. (C.) 89	671
Mathura Prasad, 15 A. L. J. 767	1375
Mathura Prasad, 40 I. C. (A.) 303, 18 Cr. L. J. 655	1323, 1368, 1373, 1375
Mathura Prasad, 93 I. C. 66 (1926) O. 255	1602
Mathura Prasad, 21 A. 27	158
Mathura Prasad, 39 A. 715	735, 737, 1602
Mathura Thakur, 6 C. W. N. 72	1323, 1324, 1325
Mathuswami Naier, (1930) M. 507	1371
Mathuswami Pillai, (1895) 1 Weir 432 (433, 434)	1389
Mathura (Mt.) v. Kalicharan, 1 C. P. L. R. 18	507, 1930
Mathura Rai, 63 I. C. (Pat.) 830	1522, 1536
Mathura Rai, (1928) A. 671	1536

Matin Lon v. Maonru, 3 R. 36	690
Matilal Lahiri, 28 C. 60	1613
Mati Ram, 85 I. C. 710, (1925) A. 410	673
Mato Ho, (1921) Pat. 76, 57 I. C. 171	1034
Mattaparti, (1888) 1 Weir 445	1315
Matti Ven Kaura, 46 M. 257	504
Matu, (1917) P. R. No. 18, 36 I. C. 838	1028, 1029, 1030
Matuki Misser, 11 C. 619	598, 701, 703
Matu Ram, 73 I. C. (P.) 338	629
Maula, (1929) L. 787	260
Maulana, 1 A. 599	111, 118
Maula Baksh, 12 I. C. (L.) 762	776
Maung Gyi, 7 L. B. R. 13, 20 I. C. 411	313, 316, 1331, 1426
Maung U., (1894) P. J. L. B. 112	1031
Maung Gyi, 1 R. 520	1397
Maung Gyi, 1 R. 390	1014
Maung Kala v. Nga Kin Mya, 38 I. C. (R.) 433, 18 Cr. L. J. 321	1681
Maung Mya Gyi, v. Nga, P. O. Shew, 7 Bur. L. T. 222, 24 I. C. 161	1376
Maung Pa, 4 L. B. R. 253, 8 Cr. L. J. 68	280
Maung Po Ngan, 36 I. C. (Bur.) 145	1105, 1139
Maung Po, 2 R. 53	1426
Mauning, 12 Q. B. D. 241 (244)	606
Mawbridge, Kel. 121	387
Mawng Aung Tun, 36 I. C. 592	1042
May, 2 East, P. C. 796	291
Mayadeb Gossami, 6 C. 762	687
Maya Dewaji, B. W. C. 40	239
Mayandi Pillai, (1886) 1 Weir 462	1372
Mayandi Nadar, 145 I. C. (M.) 371	673
Mayaram v. Nichala, 15 C. 402	1211, 1245
Maya Das (1893) P. R. No. 14	1745
Mayaram Surma v. Nichala, Katani, 15 C. 402	1478, 1717
Mayers, 12 Cox 311	1232
Mayor etc., of Bradford v. Pickles, (1895) A. C. 587 (594)	172, 1491
Mayor of Celchester v. Brooke 7 Q. B. 339	854
Mawbey, 6 T. R. 619	659
Mazagora, R. & R. 291	1578
Mazhar Husain, 5 A. 553	660, 662, 767
Mead, 4 C. & P. 535	1257
Meade's Case, 1 Lew 184	378
Mead v. Young, 4 T. R. 28	1573
Meadway v. Neadham, 16 Mass. R. 157	1660
Meadows, 1 C. & K. 399	1191
Meajan, 4 W. R. 5	1298
Mea Jan, v. Sharafatullah. 16 C. W. N. 1007, 17 I. C. 415, 13 Cr. L. J. 873	1397
Meakin, 7 C. & P. 297	331
Meango v. Baviah (1918) M. W. N. 239, 45 I. C. 507	680, 907
Meanwo. (1916) M. W. N. 239, 45 I. C. 507	681
Mears, 2 Den. 79	444
Mear Allem Khan, (1868) P. R. No. 23	1208
Madley, 6 C. & P. 292	177, 271, 866, 867, 882
Mee v. Cruickshank, 20 Cox. 210	1154

	PAGE		PAGE
Meeah Muhomed, (1866) P. R. No. 86	1128	Mg. Po. Honyin, 2 R. 53	359, 1441
Meehia, (1915) P. W. R. 28. 31		Mg. Sein. 4 R. 462	525
I. C. 337, 16 Cr. L. J. 737	1550	Mg. Sein, (1927) R. 23	1698
Meerza, 10 Bur. L. T. 255, 38 I. C. 746, 18 Cr. L. J. 362	1646	Mhadnack, (1888) B. U. C. 376	525, 1692, 1699, 1778
Magha, 1 A. 637	257	Mhd. Akbar, 72 I. C. 520	379
Magha Meah, 2 W. R. 39	961, 972, 1114	Mhd. Ali Khan, 55 A. 557	241
Magraj, (1881) P. R. No. 13	552, 754, 768	Mhd. Ata, 19 A. L. J. 961, 67 I. C. 498	1273
Magharaj v. Jakir Hussain, 1 A 250	273	Mhd. Ahsam, 120 I. C. L. 490	1321
Maggs v. Griffith. Cro. Eliz. 400	1704	Mhd. Hugh, 2, C. L. R. 569	1721
Mehapal Singh, (1914) P. R. (Cr) 26	517	Mhd. Shah, (1915) P. R. 8 19 I. C. 710	1451
Meharban Singh, 9 I. C. (A) 669	159, 1177	Mhd. Sharif, (1915) P. R. 14, 29 I. C. 826	228, 260
Mehar Dowalia, 16 W. R. 663	1253, 1540	Md. Janel 119 I. C. (S.) 536, (1930) S. 64	887
Meher Ali, 11 C. 530	1128	Mhd. Yusufuddin, v. Q. E. 25 C. 20, P. C.	122
Meher Singh, 146 I. C. (L.) 387	789	Mehra Mistk, 151, I. C. L. 751	1552
Meheronji, Bejanji, 6 B. H. C. R. 6	1430, 1522	Meherban, A. (1929) A. 374	1571
Mehpal Singh, 41 C. 836	513	Mianjin, 73 I. C. 81	189
Mehr Din, 99 I. C. 116, (1927) L 162	1176, 1178	Miard, 1 Cox. 22	1295, 1296
Mehraj Din, 100 I. C. 116, (1927) L. 222	1240	Michael, 2 Mo. C. C. C. 120	1013
Meehran, (1916) P. R. No. 13, 34		Michael v. Jogesur Mochi, 3 C. 379	1270
I. C. 1003, 17 Cr. L. J. 283	1205, 1749	Middleton, 42 L. J. M. C. 84	1013, 1234, 1317, 1654
Meehran Singh, 6 A. 626	652	Middleship, 5 Cox 275	1057
Mehrbani Singh, (1884) A. W. N. 52	670	Mighell v. The Sultan of Johar, (1894) 1 Q. B. 149	121
Mehri Ilahi, (1911) P. W. R. 26, 12 I. C. 93	1045	Migotti v. Colville, 4 C. P. D. 233 (236) (237)	206, 207, 1158
Mehr Khan, (1886) P. R. No. 6	1020	Mihan Singh, 5 L. 1	398, 446
Mehtab Rai, 48 A. 603	829	Mihan Singh, (1914) P. R. No. 26	501, 1691
Mckin, 7 C. & P. 297	333	Mihan Singh, (1914) P. R. No. 28, I. C. 652	514
Meelan v. Dwarkanath, (1864) W. R. 7	248	Miharban, (1884) P. R. No. 9	809, 1460
Mellappa. 27 M. 127	735	Mi Hla So v. Nga Than, 4 Bur. L. T. 268, 13 I. C. 389	293, 1179, 1512
Mellish, R. & R. 80	1357	Mikartan, (1884) P. R. No. 9	1460
Mellor v. Denham, 5 Q. B. D. 467	742	Mi Kin Gale v. Mi Kin Khan, (1910) U. B. R. 42, 8 I. C. 1169	1020, 1086
Members v. Great Western Ry. Co., 14 App. Cas. 168, 187	337	Mi Kun Ya, (1904) U. B. R. (P. C.) 4.	925
Menage, 3 F. & F. 310	1301	Mg. Ba Maury, (1930) R. 325	1727
Mercer v. Woodgate, 39 L. J. M. C. 21	898	Mg. Chit Tay. v. Mg. Tun. Nyam, (1935) R. 101	138
Meridith v. Sanjihani, 42 C. 330	1163, 1103	Mg. Ba Chit 7 R. 84	1752, 1717
Meriton v. Coambes, 9 C. B. 787	1409	Milan, (the), Lush 388	1264
Merivale & Wife v. Carson, 20 Q B. D. 275	1729, 1736	Miles v. Presland, 4 My. & C. 431	892
Merriman v. The Hundred of Chippenham, 2 East P. C. C. 16	1310	Miles Armstrong, 13 App. Cas. 1 (89)	146
Messenger, 6 St. Tr. 897	456	Milissich v. Lloyds, 46 L. J. C. P. 406	892, 1404
Metcalfe v. Watson, 76 I. C. (C.) 17, 25 Cr. L. J. 81	1447	Milkhi Ram, (1919) P. L. R. 50	1732, 1772
Metropolitan Asylum District v. Hill, 6 App. Cas. 193 (213)	862, 869, 870	Millard, R. R. 245 822	1549
Metropolitan Board of Works v. McCarthy, L. R. 7 H. L. 243	204	Millard, 10 M. 218	1599, 1600
Metropolitan Board of Works v. McCarthy, 43 L. J. C. P. 385	854	Miller, 2 Mood C. C. 249	1570, 1671
Mewa Lal, 18 A. L. J. 620	731	Miller, 6 Cox 353	1286
Mewa Singh, (1917) P. W. R. 27, 40 I. C. 305, 18 Cr. L. J. 657	1551, 1554	Miller v. Race, 1 S. L. C. 516	1193, 1393
Meyila, (1913) M. W. N. 145, 18 I. C. 337	1029	Miller v. Slare, 2 W. B. 1141	1270
M'Gavarson; B. C. & R. 320	288, 346	Miller v. Solomons, 7 Ex. 534 (558)	277
Mg Pa v. Mg. Chaw, (1928) R. 243	728	Miligan, 2 Tay. Med. Jur. p. 600	208
Mg Pukai, 7 R. 329 (F. B.)	418, 427	Mills, D. & B. 205	319, 1549
Mg. Ba Chit, 7 R. 821	1264	Mills, 26 L. J. M. C. 79	1425
Mg. Ba Thaung, 3 R. 661	1106	Mills aud wife v. Spencer and Wife Holt N. P. 533	1426
Mg. Ba Tin, 98 I. C. 180, (1927) R. 67	612, 1236	Milton v. Sherman, 22 C. W. N. 1001, 45 I. C. 701, 19 Cr. L. J. 781	523, 1705
Mg. Bo, Ni,	611		1443, 1451

	PAGE		PAGE
Mi Me v. Kishwa Ma, 39 C. 492	..	Mohamad Ashgar, 23 W. R. 11	427, 431
P. C.	.. 497	Mhamad Gul v. Haji Fazley, 56 C. 1013	210, 1757
Mi Mein Gale, (1914) U. B. R. 5	225, 1086	Mohammad Ishaq Khan I A. L. J.	.. 1171
24 I. C. 837, Mi Ma	.. 920	602, 1 Cr. L. J. 1057	.. 1493
Mi Min Si, (1884) S. J. L. B. 262	.. 319	Mohammad, 5 I. C. 560	.. 602
Minchin, 2 Tay. Med. Jur. p. 600	.. 612, 735	Mohamed Wasil, 13 C. W. N. 191,	.. 383
Mi Ngwe v. Mi Chit, (1912) U. B. R.	.. 1709	4 I. C. 578	998, 999
134, 15 I. C. 992	.. 906	Mohandi 1930 L. 93	.. 435
Minors v. Leeford, Cro Jac, 114	1068, 1125,	Mohan, 8 A. 622	229, 1411
Mion, (1881) S. J. L. B. 134	1783	Mohan Lal Saksena (1930) O. 497	.. 668
Mi Pu, 5 L. B. R. 79, 3 I C. 721	.. 680	Mohanundo Bhundary, 5 W. R. 16	.. 918
Mirabuys, 18 N. L. R. 192, 68 I C	.. 681	Mohesh Chandra, 28 C. L. J. 213, 47	.. 1597
36	.. 681	I. C. 871	.. 1394
Mirabux, 68 I C. 36, 18 N. L. R.	.. 701, 704	Mohesh Chunder 20 W. R. 55	.. 1155, 1156
192	.. 657	Mahesh Chunder Sircar, 3 W. R. 13	.. 1326
Mir Afzal (1881) P. R. No. 25	.. 420	Moheshwari, 18 C. W. N. 1178	.. 116
Mir Afzal, (1883) P. R. No. 20	.. 1481	Mohini Mohun Chowdhury v.	.. 157
Mir Bayankhan, (1935) Pesh 65	.. 392	Harendra Chandra Chowdhury, 31	.. 1327
Miras Chowkidar, 7 C. W. N. 718	660, 662, 689	C. 691	1493, 1494
Mirdad, 7 L. 21	1083, 1086	Mohan Singh, 88 I C. 456, 26 P.	.. 1014
Mir Ekbar Ali, 6 C 482	.. 420	L. R. 398	.. 681
Merchia, 18 A. 364	.. 1132	Mohan Singh, 151 I. C. (L) 391	501, 542
Mir Hyder, 29 I. C. (M.) 88	.. 1027	Mohandra Prasad 9 I, C. 698	.. 621, 628, 1445
Mir Shah Nawa Khan, 8 S. L. R. 1	.. 733	Mohua, (1901) P. R. No. 16	.. 871, 1178
26 I C. 319	.. 513	Mahur Singh v. Laloo, 3 A. L. I.	.. 1600
Mirza 96 I. C. (L) 849	.. 403	142-n	399, 404
Mirza Hassan, 18 C. W. N. 391	375, 390	Mohar Ali, 19 C. W. N. 556, 29 I. C.	.. 1730, 1770
I. C. 723	614	321	654, 684, 733
Mirza Shah Nawaz Khan, 8 S. L. R.	.. 1294	Mohendra Nath Missar, 12 C. W. N.	.. 946, 1201
1	.. 503	845	.. 314
Mi Sahabi, (1899) P. J. L. B. 564	.. 1536	Moher Sheikh, 21 C. 392	.. 658
Mi Shwe Ke, (1902) 1 B. L. R. 268	.. 1322	Mohim Chunder Sil, 16 W. R. 42	.. 1102
Mitchell, 2 Den. C. C. 468	.. 1255	(43)	679, 680
Mitchel v. Jenkins, 5 B & Ad. 5	.. 158	Mohini Mohan Banerji, 1 Pat. L.	.. 556
Mitche v. The Queen, (1896) 1 Q. B.	.. 400	J. 550, 36 I C. 871	.. 658
1321 (foot note)	.. 443, 444	Mohit Kumar Mukerjee, 52 C. 881	663, 671
Mithoo Singh v. Gopal Lal, 3 C. W. N.	.. 162	Mohit Pandey, 3 N. W. P. H. C	.. 1027
761	.. 772	R. 316	.. 1583
Mithulal, 8 A. 18	.. 1208	Mhd. Baksh, 65 I. C. (L.) 635, 23	.. 1549
Mitto Singh, 3 W. R. 41 (42) & (43)	.. 1481	Cr. L. J. 171	.. 172
Miyan 1 L. B. R. 101	.. 1227	Mhd. Hayat, (1922) P. W. R. 6,	700, 1451
Moakes, 4 F. & F. 290	.. 1426	65 I C 434. (1922) A I R (L)	.. 679
Mobarruk, 7 W. R. 28	.. 787	133	.. 663, 671
Mober Sheikh, 21 C. 329	.. 1374	Mhd. Hussain, 17 A. L. J. 820, 51	.. 1027
Modan Mondal, 41 C. 662	.. 1208	I. C. 197	.. 1583
Modhoo Manjee, 5 W. R. 51	.. 1481	Mhd. Hussain, 23 A. L. J. 10	.. 1549
Modhoo Mundle v. Umesh Parui, 15	.. 1227	(1925) A. 295	.. 172
C. 388	.. 1208	Mhd. Hussain, 150 C. 321 F. B.	.. 1451
Modum Mohun, 4 C. 376	.. 1208	Md. Ibrahim v. Dawood, 44 M. 417	.. 1700, 1701
Mogul Steamship Co. v. McGregor Gow	.. 1208	Mhd. Ismail Khan, 22 O. C. 236	.. 679, 680
& Co., 23 Q. B. D. 598, O.	.. 1208	Mhd. Ishaq, 36 A. 362	.. 556
A. (1892) A. C. 25 (49)	.. 1208	Mhd. Ismail, 8 L. O. 47 (1649)	.. 658
Magul Steamship Co. v. McGregor	.. 1208	Mhd. Kajim Ali v. Sarabdi, 46 C.	.. 663, 671
Gow & Co., 21 Q. B. D. 544 (549)	.. 1208	986	.. 1027
Mogul Steamship & Co., v.	.. 1208	Mhd. Khasim, (1914) M. W. N. 718,	.. 1027
McGregor Gow & Co., 33 Q. B.	.. 1208	23 I. C. 755	.. 1027
D. 591	.. 1208	Mhd. Kobiruddin, 51 I. C. (Pat.)	.. 1583
Mogul Co. v. McGregor 23 Q. B. D.	.. 1208	775, 20 Cr. L. J. 534	.. 1549
598, O. A. (1892) A C. 25	.. 1208	Md. Nasiruddin, 4 Pat. 459	.. 172
Mogul Co. v. McGregor, 58 L. J. Q	.. 1208	Mhd. Saeed Khan, 21 A. 113 (115)	.. 1451
B. 477	.. 1208	Mhd. Shah, (1918) P. R. No. 34.	.. 1700, 1701
Mohabhat Singh, 5 L. L. J. 38,	.. 1208	48 I. C. 877, 20 Cr. L. J. 77	.. 679
(1923) A.I.R. (L) 274	.. 1208	Mohamed Ismail Khan v. Mohomed	.. 1326
Mohomed Fapaz v. Khan Mohomad	.. 1208	Tahir, 6 N. W. P. H. C. R. 38	.. 670
Mohana, (1895 P. R. No. 20	.. 1208	Mohomed Hoomayoon, 13 B. L. R.	.. 1027, 1593
Mohubutt, (1873) P. R. No. 16	.. 1208	324	.. 679
Mohabat, (1889) P. R. No. 20	.. 1208	Mohne (1901) P. R. No. 16	.. 1326
Mohajan, Sheik, 49 C. 708	.. 1208	Moharaj, 16 W. R. 47	.. 670
Mohomed Akhbar, 12 W. R. 17	.. 1208	Mohammed, 137 I. C. (L.) 68	.. 1027, 1593

	PAGE		PAGE
Mohaulal v. Ramcharan, (1930) S.	164	Moore's Case, 1 Lech.	335
..	1192	Moorga, 5 B. 338 (362, 363) F.B.	117, 130, 415
Mohaulal v. Ramacharan, 108 I. C. (A)	1707, 1719	Moorga Chetty, 5 B. 348	202, 203, 690
690	900, 1418	..	1199, 1389
Mohri Ram (1930) L.	453	Moosubroo, 8 W. R.	37
Mohun Gunsham, (1871) P. R. No. 8	1680	Mootkee Kora, 2 W. R.	12
Mohar Mir 16 C. 725	247, 513, 514	Mosqsud Hussain, 45 A.	52
Mohumnuddin S. C.	31	..	948
Moideen, (1896) P. J. L. B.	229	Morali, (1908) 4 L. B. R.	277
Mairs Case, 7 C. & P.	178	..	1270
Mair Williams, (1892) 1 Q. B. & 264	1279	Moran Baksh, (1917) P. W. R.	12
Moizudin, 11 W. R. 41 (42)	378	..	1130
Mojoy, 17 C. 606	1428	Mordon v. Porter, 7 C. B. (N. S. 641	271, 177
Mokand Lal, (1901) P. R. No. 26	1592	Morgan, 9 Cr. L. J.	393
Mokand Ram (Pundit), 1883) P	..	..	192, 199
R. No. 1	1704	Morgan 36 C. 302	205, 1045, 1052
Mokandi v. Mohri, (1893) P. R. No.	17	Moriarty v. Brooks, 8 C. & P.	634
..	1690	..	1488
Mokee, 12 W. R. 15 (16)	379, 380	Morba Bhaskarji, 8 B. H. C. R.	101
Mokhan 15 A 317	1394	..	359, 1764
Molai, 59 I. C. (A.) 411	1273	Morestwar Zanardan (1928) B.	497
Molaiappa Goundan (1928) M.	1235	..	628
..	1429	Moro Balwant Marathee, 15 Bom	L. R. 1039, 22 I. C. 159
Moland, 2 M. C. C.	276	..	1770
Mole, 1 C. & K.	417	Morris v. Baumgarteu, Bourke	128
Molla Fuzla Karim, 33 C. & 193	725, 726	..	131
Moluck Chand, 3 W. R. 17	255, 256	Morris v. Blackman, 2 H. & C.	912
Monee v. Rose, L. R. 4 Q. B.	486	..	931
Monkaya Shah, (1916) P. L. R.	62, 32	Morris v. Langdale, 2 Bos. & Pul	284
I C. 660	1256	..	1713, 1717
Monkhouse, 5 Cox C. C.	557	Morris, 2 Cox	489
Monmohun Roy, 24 W. R. 33 (35)	1392	..	1091
Mon Mohon, 38 C. 253	464, 466, 467, 468, 477	Morris, 1 Leach	50
Monmohon, 20 C. W. N. 292 (294)	466, 467	..	648
Mon Mohon, 15 C. W. N. 141, 1 C.	531	Morris, 1 B. & Ad.	441
..	445	..	886, 899
Monmouth, (1901) 5 O. M. & H.	171	Morrison v. Harmer, 3 Bing. N. C.	767
Monohar Raiji, 5 B. H. C. R.	17 398	..	1722
Monson & Co. v. Boehm, 26 Ch. D.	398	Morrison v. Ritche & Co., (1902) 4 F.	645
..	1624	..	1713
Montgomery, (1892) 4 O. M. & H.	167	Morton's Case, 2 East P. C. C.	195, 45,
..	572, 583	P. 955	2079
Montgomery, (1892) 7 Day's Elec	Cases 150	Morton, 2 East	955
..	578	..	1592
Monteith's Case	131	Morton, R. & R.	10
Mon, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R.	235	..	1670
Moodhoo Paul, 3 W. R.	9	Moss, 16 A	88
Moodaley v. E. I. Co. 1 Bro. C. C.	..	..	419, 661, 1455
Moodie, 1 M. & R.	128	Mosley, 31 L. J. M. C.	24
Moodsoodum, 3 W. R.	61	..	1227, 1386, 1454
Mookkandi Maniagaram, (1903) 1	Weir 446	Motawel Pakuran, 1 Weir	37
..	1320	..	256, 1784
Mokandi Lal (1901) P. R. No. 26	1592	Motee Chand v. Mohendranath, 9 W.	R. (Cr.) 29
Mookford, 11 Cox.	16	..	125
Mooktaram, 23 W. R.	18	Motee Jolaha, (1864) W. R.	66
Mooli, 18 A L. J. 1039, 58 I. C. 831	781, 787	..	1320, 1413
Mooneappa, 5 M. H. C. R.	326	Mothoora Nath Ray, 22 W. R.	72
Moore, 3 C. & K.	319	..	1688
Moore, 1 F. & F.	73	Moti, 83 I. C. 893, (1925) S.	21
Moore, 13 Cox.	544	..	1257
Moore 30 L. J. M. S.	77	Moti Lal, 24 A. 155. 953, 1481, 1483, 1488,	1769
Mosaddi Rai	1030	Motilal, 47 A.	855
Moore, 2 C. & P.	205	..	1512
Moore, 2 C. & P.	235	Motilal Premasuk v. Kanhai Lal Das,	32 C. 969
Moore, 3 B. & Ad. 184 (188)	860, 866, 867	..	1640
Moore v. Webb. 1 C. B. (N. S.)	673	Motilal Raha v. Indra Nath, 36 C.	907
..	886	..	1708
Moore's Case, 1 Leach. 314, 1 Russ.	Bk. 1, Ch. III, pp. 161, 162	Motilal Lahiri, 26 C.	60
..	194, 447	..	1613
		Moti Ram, 86 I. C. 661, (1925) L.	461
		..	770
		Mt. Chubba, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R.	189
		..	1214
		Mt. Mahbubun v. Hassan Mirza, 18	C. W. N. 391, 23 I. C. 723
		..	741
		Mt. Mathro (1886) P. R. No. 4	..
		..	228
		Mt. Sharing, (1884) P. R. No. 42	..
		..	699
		Mt. Wahabji, (1875) P. R. No. 14	..
		..	411
		Mousi Lal, (1918) Pat. 285, 49 I. C.	340
		..	787
		Mouson v. Tussands Ltd., (1894) 1 Q.	B. 671 (687)
		..	1706
		Moulvy Abdool Luteef, 9 W. R.	30
		..	611
		Movi v. Williams, (1892) 1 Q. B. 264	..
		..	1279, 1523
		Mowbridge Kelyn	174
		..	771
		Mozam Dafadar, 144 I. C. (C.)	93
		..	1205
		Mozhur Hossein, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R.	570
		..	636, 637
		Muchi Mian, 21 C. W. N.	1062, 40
		I. C. 731	759, 768

	PAGE		PAGE
Muddoo Soodan, 7 W. R. 23	688	Mula Singh, (1895) P. R. No. 19	701
Mudon Mohan, 6 N. W. P. H. C. R. 302	751	Mula Mal v. Rahman, (1884) P. R. No. 8, F. B.	727
Mudurupavalagadu, 53 M. L. J. 559, 96 I. C. 158	515	Mula 2 A. 105	661, 662
Mudzooddeen 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. 148	156, 550, 562	Mulana, 1 A. 599 (600)	111
Mugapa, 18 B. 377	679	Mul Singh, (1895) P. R. No. 13	1589
Mugnee Ram v. Gonesh Dutt, 5 W. R. 134	1744	Mulcahy, L. R. 3 H. L. 2 H. L. 306	404, 442, 443, 447, 458
Muhammad, (1889) P. R. No. 15	1405	Mulharji, (1882) B. U. C. 182	623
Muhammad, (1886) P. R. No. 32	684	Mulchand, (1884) P. R. No. 1 N. M.	1745
Muhammad Ali Shet, 19 M. L. J. 301, 4 I. C. 163	611	Mulhari, 6 B. 731	1277
Muhammada, 9 Cr. L. J. 90	155	Mulia, 17 A. L. J. 78, 50 I. C. 1003	1071, 1072, 1077
Muhammad, (1908) P. R. No. 22	150, 155	Mulkeru v. Ward, L. R. 13 Eq., 622	1728
Muhammada, (1906) 7 P. L. R. 100	1352	Mulla, 37 A. 395	1549
Muhammad, 5 I. C. 560	1473	Mulla Abdul Rahim, (1882) P. R. No. 28	463
Muhammad, 2 L. 342	1558	Mulla, 5 L. L. J. 528	1031
Muhammad, (1887) P. R. No. 37	597	Mullany, 34 L. J. M. C. 111	667, 668
Muhammad Ali, 23 A. 81	597	Mulldar, (1881) B. U. R. 145 (146)	841
Muhammad Buksh, (1904) P. R. No. 16	792	Mullins v. Collins., L. R. 9 Q. B. 292	177
1 Cr. L. J. 1091	704	Mulna, 1 A. 599 (600)	118
Muhammad Buksh, (1882) P. R. No. 21	420	Mulna, (1900) A. W. N. 15	1524
Muhammad Buksh, (1894) P. R. No. 8	1147, 1150	Mulna, 14 A. 502	244
Muhammad Din, (1894) P. R. No. 36	809	Mulraj, (1905) P. R. No. 36	636, 637
Muhammad Husain, 23 A. 420	1403	Mubraj Whir, (1930) Pat. 507	910, 1419
Muhammad Ibrahim, 32 I. C. (A.) 153	677	Mulshankar, 35 B. 63	1463
Muhammad Ishaq, 36 A. 362	602	Mul Singh, 28 A. 402	1602
Muhammad Ismail Khan, 20 A. 151	209, 603	Multy Khan v. Mungloo, 5 W. R. 50	1691
Muhammad Khalil, (1887) A. W. N. 268. 10 A. 69	209	Mumtaz Ali, (1905) P. R. No. 35	924
Muhammad Khalil, 10 A. 49	1559	Munda, 130 I. C. (L.) 331	1020, 1582
Muhammad Shah, (1881) P. R. No. 14	710, 769, 770	Mungul Das, 22 W. R. 28	674
Muhammad Shah Khan, 20 A. 307	1039	Mungesh Jivaji, 11 B. 376	1766
Muhammad Yar, (1904) P. R. No. 2	237	Mungroo, 6 N. W. P. H. C. R. 293	1199
Muhammad, 1 M. 277	312	Muniandi, 16 M. L. T. 535, 26 I. C. 332	220, 1030, 1031, 1032
Muhammad Hussain, 15 O. C. 321 F. B., 18 I. C. 641	1674	Municipal Corporation, 3 C. 758 (764)	158
Muhammad Nissa, (Mt.) 1900 P. R. 1	866	Munir, 9 I. C. 533, (1926) A. 189	1682
Muhammad Mohidin, v. Municipal Commissioners, 25 M. 118 (131)	924	Municipal Commrs. of the Suburbs of Calcutta v. Mohamed Ail 16 W. R. 6	856
Muhammad Mohsin, (1890) A. W. N. 175	914	Municipal Corporation, 3 C. 758	157, 159
Muhammad Sadiq, 1 A. L. J. R. 605	1512	Munisami, 8 M. L. J. 118, 7 I. C. 416	928, 1173
Muhammad Sha, (1881) P. R. 42	255	Munlandi, (1915) M. W. N. 34, 36 I. C. 332	1034
Muhammad Yar, 3 L. L. J. 40, (1924) A. I. R. (L.) 62	928	Munshi Ram v. Deera Mul, (1889) 1 U. B. R. 277	727
Mukandi Lal, (1917) P. R. 35, 41 I. C. 144	1183	Munslaw, (1895) Q. B. 758 (761)	1701
Mukeen, (1865) B. U. C. 3	385, 370, 379	Munson, 2 Cox. 186	1505
Mukerjee, (1901) P. R. No. 5	756	Munster v. Lamb, 11 Q. B. D. 588	1744, 1745
Mukhbara, 46 A. 915	252	Munston, 1 Esq. 62, 8 R. R. 556	1615
Mukh Ram, (1879) P. R. No. 24	1131, 1132	Munwa, 83 I. C. 481, (1925) O. 298	1393
Mukhtar Ahmad, 37 A. 353	309	Muppan, 18 M. 401	784, 783
Mukmuddin, 27 C. 133	498, 500, 502, 1483	Murad, 2 L. L. J. 539	592
Mukka Muthiriyar, 31 I. C. (M.) 337	1363	Murad, (1894) P. R. No. 29	740
Mukul Lal Rai, 96 I. C. (C.) 501	1159	Murad Ali, 40 P. R. 1880	238
Mukund Babu Vethe, 19 B. 72	612	Muraji, 43 B. 842	526, 1451
Mula, 17 A. L. J. 32, 49 I. C. 98	1787	Muralidhar (1887) P. R. No. 22	1220
Mula, (1888) P. R. 13	430	Mure Venkata, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 375. 12 I. C. 650	1029
Mula, 2 A. 105	643	Murido, (1930) I. 58	256, 257
Mula Baksh, 5 L. L. J. 375, 73 I. C. 272		Murkuss, 4 F. & F. 356	1055
Mulai Bai, 24 A. L. J. 314, (1926) A. 277		Murli, (1888) A. W. N. 237	715, 717
		Murlidar v. Narayandas, 8 S. L. R. 143, 27 I. C. 205	1729
		Murlidhar, (1887) P. R. No. 22	505
		Muralidhar, 38 A. 284	796
		Murphy, 6 C. & P. 103	295, 308, 339

	PAGE
Murphy 13 Cox. 298	1432
Murray, 1 F. & F. 80	668
Murray, 21 C. 103	754, 755
Murray, 5 Cox. C. C. 509	299, 890, 1052
Murton, 3 F. & F. 492	960
Muru Gaiya, (1911) M. W. N. 275, 10 I. C. 262	1008
Muruga Goundan, 25 I. C. 351	1118, 1123
Muruga Pillai, (1883) Weir 508	1492
Murugappa, 48 M. L. J. 97, 87 I. C. 286, (1925) M. 613	627
Murugesu Pillai v. Papathi Ammal, (1897) 1 Weir 612	1587
Murugan, (1883) 1 Weir 455	1353
Murughandi, (1891) 1 Weir 154	652
Musa, 22 A. L. J. 520	618
Mnsafir Singh 186 I. C. (Pat) 447	618
Musal Kamat, 1 Pat. L. T. 431, 58 I. C. 341, 21 Cr. L. J. 757	1401
Musal Lal, 18 I. C. (A.) 893, 14 Cr. L. J. 141	1467
Muscot, 10 Md. R. 194	679
Mussahur Daaudh, 6 W. R. 92	243, 249
Mustan, 1 R. 690	947
Mustoffa v. Moti Lal, 2 I. C. (Bom.) 825	947
Musurus Bey v. Gadban, (1894) 2 Q. B. 352	120
Mutaya v. Maung Shwe Bou, 3 Bur. L. T. 152, 8 I. C. 996	1598
Muthalgiri Raju, (1892) 1 Weir 74	566
Muthiah Chetty, 29 M. 190	1534
Muthialu v. Bapu Sahib, 2 M. 140	641, 941
Muthia, (1916) M. W. N. 1, 337 I. C. 638	744
Muthiah Chetty, 36 M. 392	652
Muthialu v. Banpan, 2 M. 140	944
Muthian, (1896) 1 Weir 229	883
Muthra v. Roora, (1870) P. R. No. 16	731
Muthra v. Jawahir, 1 A. 527	1518
Muthu Goundan, 87 I. C. 418, (1925) M. 400	612
Muthu Coundan, (1931) M. W. N. 113	331
Muthu Ibrahi, 37 M. 567	1199
Muthuakka, 18 M. L. J. 121, 30 I. C. 435	255, 1314
Muthukanakku, (1922) M. W. N. 182, 65 I. C. 862	514
Muthukumara, 21 M. L. J. 411, 9 I. C. 262	681
Muthumada, 31 I. C. (M.) 347	1009
Muthu Mada, 11 I. C. (M.) 347	989
Muthu Vijaya v. Thandavaraya, 22 M. 214	932
Muthuraman Chetti, 4 M. 325	727
Muthurakka, (1915) 18 M. L. T. 121, 30 I. C. 435	1314
Muthuramalingam, 11 M. L. J. 127	228
Muthusami v. Masilamani, 33 M. 342	1667
Muthuswami, (1919) M. W. N. 796, 53 I. C. 282	312, 323
Muthers, 34 L. J. M. C. 54	859
Muthirulappan, (1877) 1 Weir 447	1324
Muthumira, 7 M. 590	859
Muwala Kondaiya, (1881) 1 Weir 300	975
Muzammal, (1909) P. W. R. 8, 3 I. C. 622	701, 1014
Muzhar Husain, 5 A. 553	662
Mya Din, 4 Bur L. J. 69, 10 I. C. 773	220

	PAGE
Mya Zan (1902) 1 L. B. R. 358	1515
Mycock, 12 Cox. 28	1189, 1193
N
Naba, (1911) P. L. R. 193, 11 I. C. 577	1208
Nabadeshwar, 27 A. 491	1133
Namuddiny, 18 C. 484 F. B.	384
Naba Kumar Patnaik I. C. W. N. 146	1333
	1334, 1337
Nabibux, 52, B. 168	193
Nabin Chunder Banerjee, 20 W. R. 70	328
Nabin Dome, 2 W. R. 35 (36)	358
Naben v. Milcock, Skin 183	1717
Nabi Baksh, v. Ali Baksh, 25 C. 416	163,
	1251
Nabi Baksh, (1913) P. W. R. 2	887
Nabin Chunder Halder, 1 W. R. 79	1260
Nabab of Arcot v. E. I. Co., (1793) 4
Bro. C. C. 180	284
Nachnisan V Nachinson (1930) P.
2173, (166)	1662, 1665
Nachimuttu, 7 M. 8	153, 158
Nadar 4 L. L. J. 535, 73 I. C. 524, 24
Cr. L. J. 636	1688
Nade 11 Cox. 549,	1231
Nadir, (1914) P. W. R. 43, 26 I. C.	1029
Nafar Chandra Bhattacharjee v. Helaluddin, 8 C. W. N. 370	1493, 1494
Nagar Sardar, 60 C. 149	629
Nag Po Thet, 42 I. C. (R.) 787, 19 Cr.
L. J. 27	1311
Nag Pru, (1886) S. J. L. B. 390	249
Naga Po Seik, 5 Bur. L. T. 143 F. B.,
17 I. C. 824	1360
Naga Kan Tha, (1912) 6 Bur. L. T. 62,
20 I. C. 237	1300
Nagappa, 15 B. 344, 168, 170, 1249, 1250,
	1260, 1457
Naga Sein Gale 12 R. 445	1600
Nagari, 19 B. 340	1745
Nagarmal, 11 P-t. 493	629
Naga Sein Tun 144 I. C. (R) 146,	1326
Nagawa, 4 Bom. L. R. 425	1056
Nagendra Nath v. Jogendra Nath 15
I. C. (C) 491, 13 Cr. L. J. 491	1752
Nageshappa, 20 B. 543	136
Naghabhushanam, 7 M. H. C. R. 1191	1054
Nagheswar, 28 A. 404	1328
Nagoji, (1898) 1 Weir 143	639
Nagshwe E. Eik, 1 Bur. L. R. 370	1400
Naguib, (1907) 1 K. B. 359 (332)	1683
Naiada, 1 A. 43 (45), F. B.	228, 229
Naimuddi, 14 W. R. 7	259
Nainamalai, 14 M. L. W. 18	1028
Naja, 1 L. L. J. 247	1031
Najibulla Khan, (1884) C. R. 18	1406
Nakul Kabiraj, 13 C. W. N. 754, 4 I. C.
543	1199
Nalla, 11 M. 145	1256, 1491
Nallaga v. Rangassmi, (1895) 1 Weir
556	1626
Nallan, 1 Weir 125	784, 789
Nallappa, (1899) 1 Weir 505 (506)	1495
Nalli Veera Thevan, 26 M. L. J. 598, 24
I. C. 351	756
Naloo, 38 C. 368	655
Nana, Sahib (1880) B. U. C. 373	205
Naube Khan, (1897) A. W. N. 41.	1254, 1434

	PAGE		PAGE
Nam Newaz, 30 A. 506	195	Narasimha v. Shri Krishna, 2 M. L. J. R. 236	953
Nana Rahim, 5 B. 140	256	Narasimba Naragan, 33 C. 353	435
Nana Rama, 6 Bom. L. R. 52	883	Narantukati V. Parakkal 48 M. 986	1675
Nanak, 134 I. C. 583	1041	Narayan Das 51 I. G. (A.) 351	1513
Nagar, 140 I. C. (I) 528	1327	Narasinga v. Kasturiranga, (1911) M. W. N. 226, 9 I. C. 279	1708
Nanbu, 45 A. 557	989	Narayan v. Sakham, 11 B. 519 (522)	953
Nanda, (1882) P. R. 26	1217	Narayan, 6 N. L. R. 114	567
Nandan, (1902) A. W. N. 42	1513, 1515	Narayan, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 6, 12 I. C. 96	1029
Nand Kishore, 6 A. 248	1049, 1054	Narayan, 8 M. L. T. 86, 6 I. C. 509, 672, 678
Nand Kishore, 19 A. 305	663, 700, 769, 1571	Narayan, (1889) B. U. C. 440	163
Nand Kishore, 102 I. C. 559	1763	Narayanaypa, (1890) 1 Weir 99	594
Nand Kishore, (1892) A. W. N. 1 (2)	1132	Narayan Chandra Gangnli, V, Haris Chaudra Sbah, 144 I. C. (C.) 935	1745
Nand Kumar Bose, 3 B. L. R. (App.) 149	642	Narayana Reddi, (1882) 1 Weir 100	590
Nandamuri, (1914) M. W. N. 382, 25 I. C. 630	739	Narayanasaawmi, (1912) M. W. N. 1107, 18 I. C. 662	655, 680
Nanda Lall (1904) A. W. N. 223	547	Narayanasaawmi, 9 M. L. T. 332, 9 I. C. 726, 12 Cr. L. J. 123	1381
Nand Lall, (1888) P. R. No. 36	1419, 1440	Narayan Babaji, 9 B. H. C. R. 346	772
Nandlal, 19 N. L. R. 183, 76 I. C. 655	1177	Narayan Krishna, 2 B. H. C. R. 392	1483
Nandolal Basak v. Mitter, 26 C. 852.	1752	Narayan Pasi, 24 W. R. 24	1114, 1173
Nand Lal Singh, 6 C. W. N. 343	419	Narbodeshwar, 27 A. 491	1133
Nandan Prasad, 17 C. W. N. 1132, 20 I. C. 623	501	Nareshi Singh, 2 Pat. 595	385
Nandeyappagowda, 8 Bom. L. R. 851	1474	Nari, 48 M. L. J. 594, 86 I. C. 804, (1925) M. 716	1220
Nandi, 1 L. 440	1670	Narjan, (1888) 1 Weir 205	782
Nand Singh, 26 P. L. R. 247	1535	Naro Gopal, 5 B. H. C. R. 56	183, 184
Nandu, (1889) B. U. C. 465	1480	Nardham Das, 6 A. 98	1429
Nandu, (1902) A. W. N. 42	739, 1210, 1512, 1513	Narottandas, 13 B. 681	115
Nan E., 9 R. 612	189, 234	Narsan Pathabai, 14 B. 441	368, 364
Nanhey v. Pyari, 96 I. C. (N.) 394	1748	Narshi, (1883) B. U. C. 188	1524
Nanhi Bahu, 6 A. L. J. 758, 3 I. C. 908	1343	Narsing, 14 B. 441	375, 376
Nanjunda, 20 M. 79	735, 743	Narsing, 18 C. W. N. 1176, 27 I. C. 195	1139
Nanjundappa, Weir, 3rd Ed. 197	424	Narsu, (1882) B. U. C. 185	1474
Nankee, (Mt.) (1866) P. R. No. 23	1086	Narumal, 6 Bom. L. R. 520	876
Nanni, 22 A. 113	859	Narumal v. Bombay Co., 8 S. L. R. 39, 25 I. C. 998	1619
Nanni Bux (1925) S. 59	474	Narumal Jawarmal, 6 Bom. L. R. 520	875
Nanubi Babu, 5 I. C. (A.) 138	1069	Nash, 2 Dears, C. C. R. 493	175, 1577
Nanny Simpson's Case, (1829) 1 Lewin 172	344	Nashkir, (1913) P. L. R. 259	1046
Nantrl, 130 I. C. (A) 640	1327	Nasib v. Nannoo, 15 W. R. 47	170
Nara Gopal 5 B. H. C. R. 56	1593	Nasib Chowdry v. Nannoo Chowdry 15 W. R. 47	1259
Narantakath, 45 M. 986	262, 263, 265, 293	Nasir Khan v. Fyaz Hassain, 72 I. C. 348 (1922) (C.) 57, 24 Cr. L. J. 348	1382
Narayan, 2 B. H. C. R. 392	246	Nataraja, 46 M. 90	184
Narain, 7 N. W. P. H. C. R. 209	246	Natesa Padayachi, 27 I. C. (M.) 909, 16 Cr. L. J. 237	156
Narain Acharji, 8 W. R. 80	712, 713	Nathalal, 4 Bom. L. R. 433	1208
Narain Adhikari, 8 C. W. N. 369	902	Nathalal Bapuji, 4 Bom. L. R. 433	1080
Narain Bagdee, 5 W. R. 3	1346	Natha Lalla, 5 B. H. C. R. 67	1379
Naranbai, 15 Bom. L. R. 578, 20 I. C. 601	765, 766	Natha Reva, (1881) B. U. C. 163	906
Narain Das, 3 L. 144, 68 I. C. 113	382	Natha Singh, (1910) P. R. No. 22, 7 I. C. 493	913, 914,
Narain Das, (1883) A. W. N. 39	937	Natha Singh, (1883) P. R. No. 11	1148
Narain Das, 17 A. L. J. 334, 51 I. C. 351, 20 Cr. L. J. 463	1536	Nathu, 10 C. 405	412,
Narain Jan Das v. Ram Kishen, (1870) P. R. No. 32	651	Nathu, 15 A. 19	1208, 1688
Narain Singh (1905) U B R P. C. 25	1488, 1489	Nathun (1933) L. 433	506, 507
Naraiyan Babaji, 9 B. H. C. R. 346	772, 773, 1151	Nathu Mal v. Abdul Hag, (1930) L. 159	260
Narayan Dhondeo, 12 Bom. L. R. 383	202	Nathu Mula, 4 B. H. C. R. 57	769
Narain Dutt, 47 A. 948	1615	Natharam Naranji, 4 Bom. L. R. 442	239
Naralmal, 3 B. H. C. R. (A. C.) 16	734	Nathu Sheikh, (1884) 10 C. 405	1419
Naramban, (1922) M. W. N. 396 (1922) (M.) 195	1323	Nathass, 15 Cox. 753	657, 606,
Narain Singh 108 I. C. (L.) 912	1408		1486
Narayan Singh (1930) L. 172	995, 1034, 1548
Narayan Singh, 6 Pat. 224	1745
Narasaiya, (1882) 1 Weir 100	590
Narasamma, (1882) 1 Weir 251	925
Narasingh Fathubai, 14 B. 441	500

	PAGE		PAGE
National Bank of Australasia v. Morris, (1892) A. C. 287 ..	176	Nga Ba Thein, 4 U. B. R. 174, 76 I. C. 225 ..	1579
Natwarai, 16 B. 178 ..	132	Nga Ba Tu, 11 L. B. R. 56, 64 I. C. 843 ..	1056
Naurang, (1906) A. L. J. 110 ..	684	Nga Ba Sein, 3 Bur. L. J. 113 ..	1561, 1592
Nanrang, 13 A. L. J. 251, 28 I. C. 651 16 Cr. L. J. 315 ..	1690	Nga Ba Shein, 115 I. C. (R.) 185 ..	737
Naufwaram, 6 B. H. C. R. 64 ...	157	Nga Ba Shin, (1928) R. 200 F. B. ..	260
Nattakallappa, (1886) 1 Weir 308 ..	994	Nga Bein, Po., 1 R. 306 ..	253
Nauranga, 71 I. C. 792 ..	1271	Nga Bo Cale, (1899) P. J. L. B. 628 ..	906
Naurati, 6 L. 375 ..	1753	Nga Bo Gyi, 3 R. 224 ..	673
Naushe Ali Khah, 34 A. 39 ..	1250	Nga Chan Mya, 1 L. B. R. 297 ..	1207
Nava Kumar Patnaik, 1 C. W. N. 146 ..	1333	Nga Bon She, 10 Bur. L. T. 259, 38 I. C. 334 ..	737
Navalmal, 3 B. C. R. (A. C.) 16 ..	734	Nga Cleat, 1 Bur. L. R. 292 ..	1115
Nawab, (1881) P. R. No. 22 ..	512	Ngachet Ky, (1885) S. J. L. B. 333 ..	541
Nawab (1914) P. R. No. 21 ..	987, 1032	Nga Chin, 1 Bur. L. R. 483 ..	232, 233
Nawab, Ali (1885) A. W. N. 50 ..	1513	Nga Chitu, (1893) 1 U. B. R. 232 ..	1228
Nawab Ali, (1928) C. 752 ..	423	Nga Cho, (1885) S. J. L. B. 353 ..	236
Nawabdi (1864) W. R. 11 ..	375	Nga Cho, (1887) P. J. L. B. 411 ..	906
Nawab Din, 144 I. C. (L.) 12 ..	703	Nga Dwe, (1904) 10 Bur. L. R. 171 ..	986
Nawabiji, (1881) P. R. No. 37 ..	130	Nga E., (1885) S. J. L. B. 354 ..	189
Nawrang Mal, (1902) P. R. No. 13 ..	726, 727	Nga Hat, (1898) P. J. L. B. 406 ..	634
Nawtara Singh, (1904) 19 Bur. L. R. 356 ..	1253	Nga Hla Agun, 12 I. C. 85 ..	331
Nazamuddin, 28 C. 344 ..	150, 153, 156	Nga Hla Tun U, (1896) P. J. L. B. 219 ..	376
Nayamuddin, 18 C. 484 F. B. ..	1010	Nga Hmut, (1897-1901) U. B. R. 345 ..	1371
Nazaree, (1902) P. R. No. 6 ..	702	Nga Hmyin, (1906) 3 L. B. R. 199, 4 Cr. L. J. 465 ..	1535
Nazar Shah, 92 I. C. 750 (1226) 150 ..	1327	Nga Hnin, (1917) 9 L. B. R. 52, 38 I. C. 439 ..	546, 553
Nazim, 5 C. W. N. 670 (572) ..	258, 259	Nga Han, (1919) 3 U. B. R. 137, 51 I. C. 780 ..	1027
Nazimuddi, 40 C. 163 ..	362	Nga I, 6 L. B. R. 41, 14 I. C. 651, 13 Cr. L. J. 267 ..	1327
Nazir Khan, 36 A. 1 ..	1683	Nga Kaing, (1898) 1 U. B. R. 247, U. B. C. M. S. 100 (1892) 1 U. B. R. 146 ..	253
Nazir Singh, 76 I. C. (P. 184) ..	252, 253	Nga Kaman, (1903) 9 Bur. L. R. 145 ..	986
Nazoo Fakir, 4 W. R. 26 ..	519	Nga Kan Tha, (1895) 1 U. B. R. 147 ..	256
Neela Bebee, 10 W. R. 33 ..	1200	Nga Kan Tha, 6 Bur. L. T. 92, 20 I. C. 237 ..	548, 550
Nagendra Lall Chatterjee v. Okhoy Coomar Shaw, 21 W. R. 39 F. B. ..	1358	Nga Khan, 65 I. C. (Bur.) 495 ..	1033
Negus, 42 L. J. M. C. 62 ..	1284, 1285	Nga Khan Hla, (1914) U. B. R. 3 D. Q. R. 28, 26 I. C. 1007 ..	317
Neil, 2 C. & P. 345 ..	856, 859	Nga Ku, (1897) U. B. R. 330 ..	214
Nek Muhammed, (1903) P. R. No. 22 ..	567	Nga Kyaw Dun, (1903) 10 Bur. L. R. 99 ..	383
Neki, 76 I. C. (L.) 810, 25 Cr. L. J. 116. 1037		Nga Kyaw Zau, (1903) 10 Bur. L. R. 191 ..	383
Nemai Chatoraj, 27 C. 1041 F. B. 420 ..	1191, 1197, 1498	Nga Kzin Bur. 146 I. C. (R.) 216 ..	1034
Nemdhari Singh, 2 Pat. L. T. 91, 61 I. C. 833 ..	513	Nga Kywe, 4 L. B. R. (1872-1892), 410 ..	238
Nennur Rami, 33 I. C. (M.) 655 ..	398, 399	Nga Lu Gui, (1884) S. J. L. B. 291 ..	256
Neostyle Macturing Co. v. Ellam's Duplicate Co., (1904) 21 R. P. C. 589 ..	1623	Nga Lu Nyun, 4 Bur. L. J. 17, 10 I. C. 777 ..	249, 1600
Nepal, (1886) B. U. J. 299 ..	328	Nga Meik, (1905) U. B. R. 11, P. C. 228 ..
Netai Luskar, 11 C. 410 ..	1027	Nga Min Po, (1900) I. U. B. R. 288 7 Bur. L. R. 247 ..	973
Nettleton, 1 Mood. C. C. 259 ..	1286, 1711	Nga Mya, 4 Bur. L. T. 14; 9 I. C. 458 ..	1427
Neve v. Cros Sty, 350 ..	1710	Nga Myaina Gui, (1898) P. J. L. B. 494 ..	236
Nevill v. Fine Arts etc. Co., (1895) 2 Q. B. 156 ..	1741	Nga Myat Gyi, (1883) S. J. L. B. 174 ..	760
Neville Peake, N. P. C. 91 ..	856, 885	Nga Myat Kaing 37 I. C. (R.) 465 ..	1031
Neville, Peake 21 ..	885	Nga Myat Tha, (1882) S. J. L. B. 164 ..	269
Newbould, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 344 ..	1503	Nga Myat Thin, (1898) P. J. L. B. 426 ..	1045, 1139
Newell v. Newell, (1896) W. N. 160 ..	801	Nga Nan Da, (1919) U. B. R. 176, 54 I. C. 577 ..	379
Newill, R & M. C. C. R. 458 ..	1472	Nga Ne U, (1883) S. J. L. B. 202 ..	1207
Newman, 22 L. J. Q. B. 156 ..	1723	Nga Nge, (1905) U. B. R. 17, 2 Cr. L. J. 476 ..	1207
New Post Dock Co., 31 L. J. M. C. 266 ..	161	Nga Ni Ta, (1903) U. B. R. (P. C.) 15 ..	1207
Newton, 2 M. & Rob, 503, 3 C. hub nom. ..	1633
Nga Aung Dwe, (1894) 1 U. B. R. 229 ..	1081
Nga Aung Po, (1905) U. B. R. P. C. 13, 2 Cr. L. J. 474 ..	613, 614
Nga Aung So, (1899) P. J. L. B. 633 ..	1005, 1269, 1483
Nga Aung Thein, 13 R. 210 F. B. ..	191
Nga Ba, 24 I. C. (Bur.) 572. 15 Cr. L. J. 484 ..	192,
Nga Ba Gyan, (1911) 1 U. B. R. 105 ..	331
Nga Ba Thein, (1925) R. 9 ..	166

	PAGE		PAGE
Nga Nyan, (1914) U. B. R. 4th Qr. 43, 28 I. C. 997	756	Nga San Pu, 43 I. C. (R.) 443, 19 Cr. L. J. 155	1488
Nga Nyo, (1904) 2 L. B. R. 310, 1 Cr. L. J. 1116	757	Nga San Nyein, 8 Bur. L. T. 131, 28 I. C. 152	817
Nga Ok Gyi, (1889) S. J. L. B. 449	1278	Nga San Yun, (1885) S. J. L. B. 404	1488, 1489
Nga Pa Gyan, (1911) U. B. R. 4th Qr 105, 15 I. C. 311	1108	Nga Sein, (1891) S. J. L. B. 569	906
Nga Paik, (1894) 1 U. B. R. 241	1483	Nga Sein, (1905) 3 L. B. R. 121	906
Nga Pan Gyi, (1885) S. J. L. B. 308	1052, 1759	Nga Sein Gale 12 R. 445	333
Nga Paw, L. B. R. (1893-1900) 281	237	Nga Sein PO, I. R. 306	253
Nga Paw Hi, 1 Bur. L. R. 421	233	Nga Shaw Bwin, 11 Bur. L. R. 33	403
Nga Pe, (1892-1896) U. B. R. 168 568	1005	Nga Thun Baw, 7 Cr. L. J. 205	193
Nga Po, 6 Bur. L. T. 68, 20 I. C. 220	192	Nga Shan Gale, (1903) 10 Bur. L. R. 87	1288
Nga Po, (1882) S. J. L. B. 168	243	Nga Shwe Gon (1903) 10 Bur. L. R. 123	1330
Nga Po, 84 I. C. 1049, (1925) R. 123	1029	Nga Shan Gyi, (1885) S. J. L. B. 371	1006
Nga Po Aung, (1889) S. J. L. B. 459	1015	Nga Shwe Baw, 7 Bur. L. R. 250	973
Nga Pochein, 6 Bur. L. T. 261, 13 I. C. 390	116	Nga Shwe Kin, 8 L. B. R. 166	340
Nga Pe Hle, (1886) S. J. L. B. 399	1267	Nga Shwe Le, 1 L. B. R. 123	1496
Nga Po Huyin, 4 Bur. S. J. 68, 10 I. C. 772	260	Nga Shwe Nyo, (1884) S. J. L. B. 279	861
Nga Po Kya, (1903) 9 Bur. L. R. 190	4 6	Nga Shwe On, 13 Bur. L. J. 47, 57 I. C. 918	192
Nga Po Kyone, 11 R. 354	191, 428	Nge Shwe Pe, (1894) P. L. J. B. 81	1038
Nga Po Kyaw, (1902) 1 U. B. R. P. C. I.	969	Nga Shwe Tha U, (1884) S. J. I. B. 271	986
Nga Po Kyaw, (1885) S. J. L. B. 334	260	Nga Shwe Ya, 1 Bur. 275	512, 515
Nga Po Kyaw, (1904) U. B. R. P. C. 3	570	Nga Shwe The, (1893) P. J. L. R. 52	1590
Nga Po Lon, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 232	1318	Nga Shwe Zan, (1885) 1 Bur. 331	512, 515
Nga Po Lu, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 356	1031, 1034	Nga Shwe Zan, 10 Bur. L. T. 261, 38 I. C. 332	134
Nga Po Lu, 4 Bur. L. T. 248, 12 I. C. 282	1456, 1460	Nga Si, (1903) 10 Bur. L. R. 126	1481
Nga Po Lu, 4 Bur. L. J. 253, 12 I. C. 292	1034	Ngas Kun Ba, (1899) P. J. L. B. 554	252
Nga Po Lwin, 57 I. C. (Bur.) 940	709	Nga Tha, 15 I. C. 485	244
Nga Po Maung, (1891) 1 U. B. R. 255	1441	Nga Tha Dwe, (1896) P. J. L. B. 279	1606
Nga Poona, 9 Bur. L. T. 136, 34 I. C. 323, 17 Cr. L. J. 213	1368	Nga Than, (1933) R. 273	363
Nga Po Naing, (1892-1896) 1 U. B. R. 179	639	Nga Tha Sin, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 216	1030
Nga Po Shat, 4 Bur. L. T. 263, 13 I. C. 395	1394	Nga Tha Kin, 12 Cr. L. J. 448	1031
Nga Po Saw, (1901) U. B. R. 329	1199	Nga Tha Rin, (1911) 1 U. B. R. 87, 11 I. C. 792	214, 220
Nga Po Sau, (1894) 1 U. B. R. 199	1207	Nga Tha Ku, (1879) S. J. L. B. 91	1139
Nga Po Seik, 6 L. B. R. 62 F. B., 17 I. C. 824, 13 Cr. L. J. 888	1361	Nga Tha Win v. Nga San, (1913) 1 U. B. R. 166, 20 I. C. 406	672
Nga Po Sein, (1902) 9 Bur. L. R. 16 186, 940	1533	Nga Tha Zan, (1905) U. B. R. 19	1496
Nga Po Tok, 49 I. C. (R.) 99, 20 Cr. L. J. 115	1533	Nga Thun Baw, 7 Cr. L. J. 205	193
Nga Po Tok, (1912) 1 U. B. R. 158, 20 I. C. 136	1553	Nga Thwe, 4 Bur. L. T. 17, 14 I. C. 656	1005
Nga Po Thaw, (1912) U. B. R. 4th Qr. 155, 19 I. C. 716	1237	Nga Tun, 35 I. C. (R.) 511	1038, 1041
Nga Po Tha, (1917) U. B. R. 54, 44 I. C. 679	1237	Nga Tun Baw, 5 Bur. L. T. 175, 17 I. C. 800 P. C. 331, 332, 333, 1031, 1113	188
Nga Po Thain, (1897) P. J. L. B. 596, 253	1237	Nga Tun Baw, 7 Cr. L. J. 205	188
Nga Po Thein, 8 Bur. L. J. 35, 25 I. C. 329	1237	Nga Tun Baw, 17 I. C. (R.) 800 F. B., Vol. I, P. 221	235
Nga Po Tho (1896) P. J. L. B. 249 328, 1496	159	Nga Tun Kaing, 42 I. C. (R.) 175, 18 Cr. L. J. 943	1792
Nga Pow, (1917) 38 I. C. (M.B.) 735	654	Nga Tun Nyein, 38 I. C. 316	380, 385
Nga Po Yin, 9 Bur. L. R. 203	1360	Nga Tun Tha, (1894) P. J. L. R. 78	259
Nga Po Yni, 7, Bur. L. T. 209, F. B., 24 I. C. 332	193	Nga Thwe, 4 Bur. L. T. 17, 14 I. C. 656	1005
Nga Pu, (1926) R. 207	1590	Nga Tune, 8 L. B. R. 166, 30 I. C. 133	1113
Nga Pya, (1904) 2 L. B. R. 316	321	Nga Thwe Lankke, (1899) P. J. L. B. 629	1496
Nga Pyan, 4 Bur. L. J. 267, 13 I. C. 385	604	Nga Waik, 1 R. 209	1065
Nga Pyo, (1907) U. B. R. (Cr.) P. C. 9	1216	Nga Ya Po, (1885) P. J. L. B. 337	906
Nga San, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 259	243	Nga Yank, (1885) S. J. L. B. 366	1276
Nga San Dan, (1889) S. J. L. B. 444		Ngwka, (1903) U. B. R. (P. C.) 7	906
		Ngwa v. Thwe Kin, 8 L. B. R. 166, 30 I. C. 133	346, 347
		Niadar Mal (1902) P. R. No. 22	869
		Naidir, 10 A. 580	1015, 1693
		Niamat, 86 I. C. 337, (1925) L. 117	1042
		Niamat Khan, (1883) P. R. No. 17	268, 269
		Niamuddi, 14 W. R. 7	259
		Niaz Ahmad, (1881) A. W. N. 56	841

	PAGE		PAGE
Niaz Ali, (1904) A. W. N. 2	324, 328	Northampton, 2 M. & S. 262	841
Niaz Ali, 5 A. 17	324, 328, 650, 656, 657	North Durham, (1874) 2 O'M. & H. 156	576, 577
Nibaran, 11 C. W. N. 1085	188	North Meath and East Clare, (1892) Day's Elec. Cases, 144, 164	1689, 577
Nichol, Russ. & R. M. C. 130	288, 348, 1234	North Norpolk, (1869) O'M. & H. 240	576, 577
Nichols v. Hall, L. R. 8 C. P. 322	264	Norton 8 C. & P. 671	1305, 1311
Nicholls, 13 Cox. 75	1048	Norwich, (1886) 4 O'M. & H. 91	575
Nicholson, 2 Leach. 610	1265, 1420	Nothingham (1869) 1 O'M. & H. 245	577
Nicholson v. Revill, 4 A. & E. 675	1627	Nottingham, (1843) B. & Arn. 165	574
Nicholson & Co. v. Buchanan, (1902) 19 R. P. C. 321	1627	Nottingham, (1869) 1 O'M. & H. 246	576
Nidamarti Nagabhusanam, 7 M. H. C. R. 119	888, 967, 1142	Nottingham, (1802) 1 Peck. 85	577
Niddha, 14 A. 38	1063, 1064, 1065, 1066, 1067	Nouzan, 7 M. H. C. R. 375	243, 249
Nidhi, 10 O. & A. L. R. 639	1332	Nouranjan, 14 W. R. 39	1222
Nidhi, 83 I. C. 683 (1925) O. 144	1332	Nowabdee (1864) W. R. 11	375
Nidamarti, 7 M. H. C. R. 119	199, 888, 1106	Nowlia, 1 Agra 9	1416
Nihal, 9 A. 348	164, 1286, 1411, 1491	Nowrangi Singh, 5 C. W. N. 135	1132
Nihala, (1877) P. R. No. 11	252	Nrigendra Lall v. Okhoy Coomar, 21 W. R. 59, F. B.	1349
Nihal Singh, (1874) P. R. No. 17	256	Nripendranath Doss 110 I. C. (C) 97	1360
Nijun Ali, 6 W. R. 41	1565	Nripendra (1924) C. 1018	534
Nikunja v. Harendra, 38 C. 375	1745	Nrisingha 20 C. W. N. 1112	1448, 1450
Nikunja v. Harendra Chandra, 41 C. 514	1745	Nubi Buksh v. Oomra, (1866) P. R. No. 109	1765, 1904
Nilappa Dayappa, (1898) B. U. C. 963	883	Nujeebedoolah, 9 W. R. 20	1570
Nilkantha, 35 M. 247	458	Nujum Ali, 6 W. R. 41	1602
Nilmadhub Sircar, 3 W. R. 22	985	Nuna, (1912) P. W. R. 16, 15 I. C. 309, 13 Cr. L. J. 469	1180, 1181
Nil Money Nag, 19 C. W. N. 927, 30 I. C. 1007, 16 Cr. L. J. 719	180, 957, 1617, 1621	Nunda, 4 N. W. P. H. C. R. 133	663, 1790
Nilmony Poddar, 16 C. 442 F. B.	247, 513, 514, 1113	Nund Mohon Sirkar, 12 W. R. 33	1544
Nim Chand Mookerjee, 20 W. R. 41	418, 659, 684	Nundo Kumaree v. Anand Mohun Gooho, 24 W. R. 68	861
Nirghin, 56 I. C. (Pat.) 660	681	Nur Ahmad, (1874) P. R. No. 8	431
Nirchan, 12 M. 36	242, 1351, 1352	Nuran, (1880) P. R. No. 17	228
Nirmal Kant Ray, 41 C. 1072	188	Nur Dad, 1 L. L. J. 252	1324
Nirmal Chandra, 31 C. W. N. 293, (1927) C. 265	448	Nur Dad, (1932) L. 606	361
Nirmal Das, 22 A. 445	1399	Nur Din, (1903) P. R. No. 28	256
Nir Singha v. Kumudendu, 20 C. W. N. 1112, 37 I. C. 34, 18 Cr. L. J. 50	1452	Nur Kadir, v. Zuleika, 11 C. 649	1565
Nirsu Narayan Singh, 6 Pat. 224	1745	Nurjum Ali, 6 W. R. 41	1570
Niruni (Mt.) 7 W. R. 49	428	Nurkhan, (1894) P. R. No. 31	514, 1008
Nisar Mahmad, 6 L. 203	855, 864, 916	Nur Mahomed, 8 B. 223	822
Nish Kant Pat. 20 C. W. N. 857, 37 I. C. 46	629	Nuro, 7 S. L. R. 83 23 I. C. 744	960
Nishikant Chattergi v. Benary, 60 C. 656	611	Nurodin, (1888) B. U. C. 386 849, 1371, 1435
Nittar Mundle, 3 W. R. 38	1611	Nurul Hassan, 56 I. C. Pat. 669, 21 Cr. L. J. 509	1375
Nizamuddin, 28 C. 348	158	Nussurooddeen Shazwal, 11 W. R. 24	609
Nizham Din, 4 L. 179	1298	Nutt, 1 Barnard 306	465
Nobin Chandra Banerji, 20 W. R. 70	328	Nutty, 1 B. 147	751, 1368
Nobin Chunder Halidar, 6 W. R. 79	1251	Nyan Sukh Methar, 3 B. L. R. A. Cr. J. 49	252, 253, 365
Nobin Chunder Mudduck, 22 W. R. 46	1466	Nyein, 35 I.C. (Bur.) 316
Nobin Chunder Sircar, 12 W. R. 39	1236, 1255	Nyo Hla Aung, 4 Bur. L. J. 221, 12 I. C. 85	333
Nobin Dome, 2 W. R. 35	359	Nuzur Ali, 6 N. W. P. H. C. R. 39	246, 1567
Noble v. Noble, L. R. 1 P. D. 861	263	Nya Kyaw, (1900) 1 L. B. R. 39	1278, 1441
Nobokisto, 8 W. R. (Cr.) 87	113	Nya Lu Nye Gyi, (1889) S. J. L. B. 441	1336
Nobo Kisto Ghose, 8 W. R. 87	729, 733	Nyo Ke, (1885) S. J. L. B. 332	926
Nobo Pullee, 6 W. R. 49	243, 249
Nolli Narasigadu, 30 I. C. (M.) 135	700	O
Noni Gopal, 38 C.	458	Oates v. King Emperor, 38 C. L. J. 163	681
Noon, 6 Cox. 137	1037	Obammal, (1901) 1 Weir 502	1489, 1491
Noor Mahomed, 35 B. 368	901	Obayya, 22 M. 151	1263, 1348, 1470
Nooruboobu, 1 Weir 205	754	Obbava, (1912) M. W. N. 529, 16 I. C. 164, 13 Cr. L. J. 596	1407
Norendro v. Kamalabasini, 23 C. 563 P. C.	117	O'Brien, 19 A. 111	1379
Norman, C. & M. 501	1368, 1369	O'Brian, 12 Ir. L. R. 29	1721
Northallerton, (1860) 1 O'M. & H. 197	574	O'Brien, 1 W. R. (O. S.) 176	202
		O'Brien, 4 Cox. 400	1531
		O'Brien, (Ex parte), 15 Cox. 180	402, 470

	PAGE		PAGE
O'Brien, 15 L. T. (N.S.) 419	263	Padari Chenclin Reddi, (1883) Weir
O'Brien, 2 A. 766	961, 972, 1131, 1046	(3rd Ed.) 253	1146
O'Brien Ex parte Williams, 12 Q. B.		Paditi Chenchu, (1882) 1 Weir 440	1295
D. 29	470	Padman Babul, 14 Bom. L. R. 585,
O'Brien v. Clement, 16 L. I. Ex. 77	1713	16 I. C. 335, 13 Cr. L. J. 687	1748
O'Brien v. Cement 16 M. & W. 166	1717	Padmannabha, 33 M. 264	417
Obhoy Chunder Chakrabutty, 3 W. R.		Padmavati, (1869) 5 M. H. C. R. 415	1224
19	555, 556	Padmore v. Lawrence, 11 A. & E. 380	1742
O'Connel, 11 Cl. & Fin. 155	444	Padu, 10 N. L. R. 38, 23 I. C. 704	366, 367
O'Connell, 5 St. T. (N. S.) 1	442, 443	Page, 2 Cox. 133	1232
O'Connel, 1 Cox. 413	442, 443, 444	Pahlwan, (1915) P. W. R. 5, 27 I. C.
O'Comer v. Bradshaw, 20 L. J. Ex. 26	932	840, 16 Cr. L. J. 216	1691, 1692
Odda Kalantham, (1889) 1 Weir 85	593	Paiambar Baksh, 11 A. 361	797
Odger v. Mortimer, 28 L. T. 472	1735	Paimullah, 16 C. W. N. 238, 13 I. C. 783,
Ogden v. Ogden, (1908) P. 46	1660, 1665	13 Cr. L. J. 127	271, 1316, 1399
Oldham v. Peake, 2 W. B. 959	1660, 1665	Painell, 14 Cox. 508	442
Oldham v. Peake, Cowp. 278	1717	Pain, Holt Rep. 294	1714
Oliher, 10 Cox. 402	1189, 1190	Paine & Co's Trade Mark, (1893) 2 Ch.
Oliphant, (1905) 2 K. B. 67	1612	567	1619
Oliphant, (1905) J. P. 175	1615	Paira Ram, (1902) P. R. No. 25
Oliver St. John, (1615) Nov. 105	465	1682, 1786, 1789
Olliet v. Bessey, T. Jones R. 214	281, 1158	Pakir Mhd. (1929) R. 322	1627, 1637
Ollis (1900) 2 Q. B. 758	1454	Palagaon, 26 M. 55	678
Omichand v. Barker, 1 Atk. 21	208	Palakora Kathersa, (1883) Weir (3rd
Omka 4 Bom. L. R. 679	1047, 1048	Ed.), 140	900
Onebi, 2 Lord Ray, 1485	998	Palaniappa Chetti v. Annamalai Chetti,
Oneby, 2 Str. 766	983, 1007	14 M. L. J. R. 74	695
Onocram, 9 W. R. 70	916	Palani Asari, (1882) 1 Weir 613	1708
On Shwe Kalaw, 1 R. 436	986	Palani Goundan, 42 M. 547 F. B.
Oodayand Lary, (1887) 1 Weir 516	1819	199, 1107, 1115
Oodun Lall 3 W. R. 17	687, 689	Palani Goundan, (1892) 1 Weir 623	1762
Oomayan, (1914) 1 M. L. W. 492, 25		Palani Goundan, (1896) 1 Weir 523	1523
I. C. 330	1277	Palin, (1906) 1 K. B. 7	1615
Oomerkhan, (1865) B. U. C. 4	1535	Palmer, 2 Burr. 1162, 1 Russ., Bk.
Ootum Chand, (1871) P. R. No. 18	766	2 Ch. XIV (5th Ed.) P. 297	278
Opie, 8 Cox. 332	1090	Palmer v. Boyer, Cro. Eliz. 342	1712
Orchard Abir (1928) A. 194	1689	Palmer and Hudson, 1 New R. 96	412
Orchard, (1848) 83 Cox. 348	541	Pal Singh, (1917) P. R. 28, 41 I. C. 980
Orchard, 3 Cox. 248	920	1034, 1045
Orde v. Skinner, 3 A. 91 P. C.	131	Pampapati v. Subha Sastri, 23 M. 210	672
Orman, 14 Cox. 311	444	Pampapa, 28 Bom. L. R. 490, 95 I. C.
Orme, 2 Salk. 224	1715	68, (1926) B. 284	732
Osborn, 2 Barnard 138, 166	1715	Panama L. South Pacific Telegraph Co.
Osborn v. T. Boulter & Son, (1930) 2		v India Rubber, etc. Co., L. R. 10
K B. 226	1700	Ch 515	1382
Osborne v. Chocqueel, (1896) 2 Q. B.		Panatulla, 15 C. 386	602
109 (111)	177	Pancham, 6 O. L. J. 327, 52 I. C. 887	363, 367
Osmans (1914) C. 809	443	Panche Mandar, 57 I. C. (Pat.) 273, 21
Otaruddi v. Kafiluddin, 5 C. W. N.		Cr. L. J. 609	1471
372	1308, 1309	Panchanada Tambiram, 4 M. H. C. R.
Overton, 2 Moo. C. C. 263	667	229	596
Owen, R. & Mood. C. C. R. 96	429	Panchanan, 23 C. W. N. 693, 52 I. C.
Owens, 1 Mood. C. C. 205	1489	881	502
Oxford, 5 C. & P. 165	324	Panchanum Tantee, 5 W. R. 97	961, 972
Oxford, 9 C. & P. 533	324, 311	Pandaram, 1 Weir 205	784
		Pandia, 13 C. P. L. R. 20	884
		Pandit Gaya Parshad v. Sardar Bha-
		gal Singh, 12 C. W. N. 1010, P. C. ..	744
		Pandu, 19 Bom. L. R. 61, 39 I. C. 320	672
		Pandu, (1884) B. U. C. 197	913
		Pandu, 4 B. H. C. R. 7	801, 800
		Pandu Namaji, 19 Bom. L. R. 61	652
		Pandurang, 4 Bom. L. R. 823	1434
		Pandya Nayak, 7 M. 436	597, 599
		Pandyaram, (1912) M. W. N. 538, 16 I.
		C. 166	1190, 1193, 1259
		Pania, (Mt.) (1881) A. W. N. 89.	1350
		Pannalal, 1 L. 40	613
		Panni Besoy, (1883) 1 Weir 131	883
		Panpayya v. Narasannah, 2 M. 216	653

	PAGE		PAGE
Pan Thin, 6 Bur. L. T. 146, 20 I. C. 904	456	Partridge, 6 Cox 82	1431
Panttanbi, 19 M. L. J. 66	1584	Paruchery, 36 I. C. 872	1429, 1452
Papa Kamalkhan, (1935) B. 230	554	Parushullah v. Kheroo Mundul, 23 W. R. 4	821, 822
Papa Naiken, (1882) 1 Weir 217	800	Parvatanecil, (1915) M. W. N. 34, 26 I. C. 318	677
Papi Sani, 23 M. 159	1228	Parvari, 41 A. 311	1694, 1698
Pappineaw, 2 Str. 686	859, 885	Paryag Rai v. Arju Mian, 22 C. 139	238
Parabhu, 5 A. 598	735, 736, 744	Pascoe, 18 L. J. (M. C.) 186	756
Parachery, 36 I. C. (M.) 872, 18 Cr. L. J. 40	1452	Pashoo, 4 W. R. 33	985
Parakh, E. H. 92 I. C. 744, (1926) O. 202	631	Pashupathia Pillay 51 M. 872	1176
Paramaudi, 44 M. 443	1032	Passie v. Mondford, Cro. Fliz. 747	1711
Parameshwari, 22 Bom. L. R. 894, 58 I. C. 145	1032	Pasupat v. Rambhajan, 1 C. W. N. 545	361, 362
Paramasiva Moopan, 109 I. C. (M.) 606	641	Pasupuleti, 2 M. W. N. 64, 12 I. C. 222	565
Paranga, 16 M. 463	591	Patandin, 2 A. L. J. 26	115
Pascoe, 18 L. J. (M. C.) 186	756	Pateman, R. & R. 45	1592
Parankusum v. Stuart, 2 M. H. C. R. 396	274, 1150	Patel (P. D.), 146 I. C. (R.) 653	601
Parapravan v. Morgan, 1 Weir 48,		Patha, (1869) B. U. C. 140	883
Paras Ram Dube, 37 A, 187	306	Patibhuva, 28 Bom. L. R. 1029, 97 J. C. 737	427, 429
Paras Ram, (1903) P. R. No. 25	1436	Patiram, 5 C. P. L. R. 23	253
Paras Ram, 20 B, 193	193, 922	Patrick Harding, 12 St. Tr. 645	459
Parashram 7 B. H. C, R. 6	921, 922	Patten v. Hurren Ram, 3 Agra 409	275
Parasuram, 9 M. L. T. 168, 8 I. C. 881.	1178	Pattikadan, 26 M. 243	1117
Paratpravan, (1889) 1 Weir 48	411, 1514	Patta Gazi. 4 W. R. 19	1019, 1606
Parbatty Charan Chatterjee, 17 A 498. P. C.	396	Pattin v. Bhymer, 29 L. J. M. C. 189,	927
Parbatty Charan Aich, 16 C. 9	637	Paul De Cruz, 8 M. 140	645
Parbudas, 11 B. H. C. R. 90	1453	Paul De Flander 59 C. 92	1372
Parfail, 1 East P. C. 416	1297	Paung Tha Ri, (1880) P. J. L. B. 94	859
Parfait's Case, 1 Leach 19	1317	Paun Pundah, 18 W. R. 28	412
Parfit, 1 East P. C. p. 416	1725	Pavallimanakkal, (1915) M. W. N. 271, 27 I. C. 843	602
Parichat, 5 N. L. R. 17	171	Payne v. Wright 61 L. J. (M. C.) 114	742
Parimal Chatterjee, (1932) C. 760	435	Pazaldin, 120 I. C. (L.) 529	1027
Parisot, (1889) T. L. R. 344	134	Peacock, R. & R. 278	1575
Parmitar v. Coupland, 8 L. J. 202	1728	Peake v. Oldham, Cowp. 275	1711
Paris v. Levy, 9 C. B. N. S, 342	1737	Pearson, 2 Lewin 144	331, 1741
Parke, (1903) 2 K. B. 432	802	Peat, 2 East P. C. 557	170
Parker, 7 C. & P. 825	1432	Peddabha v. Warada, 52 M. 432	1745
Parker, 9 C. & P 45	1504	Pedda Enumundugaru, (1910) M. W. N. 52, 5 I. C. 797	1315
Parker and Bulteel, (1916) 80 J. P. 271	1431, 1433	Pedda Malla Reddi, 50 M. 479	928
Parker v. McKennea, L. R. 10 Ch. 96	1382	Peddomonee, 5 W. R. 98	1434
Parlement Belg., L. R. 5 P. D. 197	120, 121, 125	Pedley's Case, 1 Lech 325	669
Parma Singh, 9 I. C. (C) 586	359, 506	Pedley, 1 A. & E. 822	886
Parmaya, (1885) B. U. C. 210	209, 600, 603	Peelimuthu, 24 M. 124	498
Parmeshar Dat, 8 A. 201	150, 1461	Peera, (1869) P. R. No. 37	1335, 1339
Parameshri Das, 151 I. C. (L.) 469. 1041, 1609		Peers v. Coldwell, (1916) 1 K. B. 371	928, 931
Parmeshwar Lal, 13 C. W. N. 1089, 4 I. C. 28	1380	Peeru Muhammad, 32 I. C. (M.) 663	630
Parameshwar Lal, 4 Pat. 472	733	Pelham, 8 Q. B. 959	1057
Parmeshwar Singh, 7 I. C. (C.) 812	1485	Pelkoo Nushyo, 2 W. R. 43 J.	388, 701, 703, 705
Parmod Ban Beharisan 106 I C. (Pat.) 682	1370	Pelkin v. Herbert, 33 I. C. ch. 294	1735
Parameshwari, 22 Bom. L. R, 854, 58 I. C. 145	1221	Pemantle, 8 C. 971	1188
Parnel, 14 Cox 505	444	Pemberton v. Colls, 10 Q. B. 461	1711
Parse Hajra v. Bandhi Dhanug, 28 C. 251	732	Pemberton L. R. 122	162
Parshade v. Baljit Singh, 20 I. C. 233	372	Pemkoer, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 38	1106
Parsadhi, 112 I. C. (O.) 109	1322	Pemlton, L. R. 2 C. C. 119	1489
Parsons v. Survey, 4 F. & F. 247	1742	Penchul, 9 I. C. 567.	271
Parsons v. Alexander, 24 L. J. Q. B. 277	927	Penfold v. Westcote, 2 Bos. & P. N. R. 335	1709
Parsuram Dass, 7 W. R. 42	327	Penlick, (1904) 6 B. L. D. 254	619
Partapa. (1913) P. R. No. 11, 21 I C. 904	251	Penryn, (1869) O. M. & H. 129	574
Partridge, 7 C. & P. 551	1275, 1407	Penumetza 44 I. C. (M) 40	375, 376, 385
		People v. Dohring, 59 N. Y. 374	337
		People v. Morrison, 1 Parker, Cr. R. 625.	337
		Pera Raju, 13 M. 27	1435, 1575
		Per Baksh, 73 I. C. (L.) 815, (1923) L. 327	1337

	PAGE		PAGE
Percey Henry Buxa, 11 Bom. L. R. 1153	447	Phulal, 11 A. L. J. 15, 18 I. C. 344	613
Peria Ponnuswami, 100 I. C. 544, (1927) M. 506	1147	Phulmani, 77 I. C. (Pat.) 801, 25 Cr. L. J. 449	987
Perian-namatawaram, (1884) 1 Weir 84	591	Phulchand, Dube, 111 I. C. (A) 863	1056, 1352
Periannan, 4 M. 241	611	Phula Singh, (1874) P. R. No. 10	1214
Periaswamy, (1903) L. B. R. 163	742	Phula Singh, 10 A. L. J. 527, 18 I. C. 146	1260, 1272, 1273
Periyannan, (1883) 1 Weir 423	1263	Phuman, (1908) P. R. No. 11	1348
Periapium, 1 Weir 66	498	Phundi Ram, (1911) P. W. R. 7, 10 I. C. 681	1745
Periyaswami, (1886) 1 Weir 580	1705	Piare, 17 A. L. J. 866, 52 I. C. 224	1032, 1265
Perker C. & P. 300	1530	Piare Lal, 15 A. L. J. 106, 39 I. C. 495	771, 772
Perkins, 4 C. & P. 537	295, 338	Pierce, 6 Cox. 117	1343
Perma Sing, 9 I. C. 86	506	Pickford, 4 C. & P. 227	1297, 1305
Perring v. Home, 4 Being 28	1567	Pickton v. Jackman, 4 C. & P. 257	1749
Perrin, 72 J. P. 144	445	Pidding v. How, 8 Sim. 477	1617, 1634
Perry, Dears, C. C. 471	1090	Pifford, 1 Hyde. 79	799
Perry v. Truefit, 6 Beav. 66	1618, 1619 1634	Pigott, 11 Cox. 47	467
Pershad v. Baljit, 20 I. C. (O.) 233	367, 371, 372	Pigot v. Wilder, 26 Bea. 92	184
Pershad, 7 A. 414 F. B.	371, 372, 515	Pika Bewa, 39 C. 855 (861)	1056, 1112
Pertap Rai, 56 I. C. (Pat.) 231	516	Pika Ram, (1902) A. W. N. 6	1512
Perumal, 16 M. 105	548, 649	Pike, 2 Moo. C. C. R. 70	1577
Perumal, 90 I. C. 398, (1925) M. 672	729	Pillala, 9 M. 101	727
Perumal, (1912) M. W. N. 193, 13 I. C. 817	1033	Pimento, 22 Bom. L. R. 1224, 59 I. C. 202, 22 Cr. L. J. 58	1699, 1707
Perumalu (1885) Weir 344	874	Pindar v. Wordsworth, 2 East 154	360
Pestonji Dinshai, 10 B. H. C. R. 75	413	Pindi Das, (1907) P. W. R. (Cr.) 37	486
Petero, 2 S. L. R. 22, 10 Cr. L. J. 235	1683	Pinero v. Goodlake, 13 L. T. 676	1732
Peters v. Bradlough, (1888) 4 T. L. R. 467	1727	Pinet (F.) et cie v. Maison Louis Pinet, Ltd, (1898) Ch. 179	1627
Peterborough, (1860) W. & Br. 158	574	Pinkney, 2 East P. C. 820	845
Petersborough (Earl of) v. Mordant, 1 Lev. 277	1718	Piper, (1902) 95 J. P. 10	1358, 1374
Peterson, 1 A. 316	1785, 1787	Pippineaw, 1 S. M. 686	859
Pethiredla, (1883) 1 Weir 440	1296	Pira, 95 I. C. (L.) 504	192
Petta Gazi, 4 W. R. 19	1020	Pira, (1881) P. R. No. 38	1074
Perumalu, (1885) 1 Weir 344	874	Piran, 85 I. C. 839, (1923) L. 321	1374
Phakkar, (1927) A. 472	252	Pirbhu Dial, (1913) P. R. No. 4	1584
Phalia v. Jiwan Singh, 1871 P. R. No. 6	412	Pirtai, 10 B. H. C. R. 356	130, 1394
Phanendra Nath Mitter, 35 C. 945	475, 476, 934, 1004	Piran Ditta, (1895) P. R. No. 23	1681, 1683
Pharmaceutical Society v. London & Provincial Supply Association, 5 App. Cas. 857	141, 176, 881, 1716	Pira Ram, (1902) P. R. 25	1788
Pharmaceutical Society v. White, (1901) 1 K. B. 601	881	Pir Mahomed, 10 B. 254	244
Phelham 8 Q. B. 959	1057	Pri Muhammad, 75 I. C. 1020, (1923) L. 415	1065
Phias Mahammad, 5 Bom. L. R. 502	1520, 1780	Pirthi (accused No. 20), 84 I. C. 653	1030
Phikku, 89 I. C. 464, (1925) O. 701	1689	Pir Qadir Baksh, 6 L. 34	654
Philip Rangal, 56 C. 196,	359, 1768, 1769	Piru, 49 B. 916	247
Philip v. Spratt, (1928) B. 74	463	Pitamber, (1879) B. U. C. 140	1756
Phillips, 3 Camp 73	413	Pitambur, 5 C. 566 F. B.	1657, 1683, 1690
Phillips, 2 East P. C. 662	170	Pitam Singh, 58 I. C. (A.) 828, 21 Cr. L. J. 828	1479
Phillips, 2 M. C. C. 252	503, 509	Pitam Rai, 5 A. 215	736, 743, 744
Phillips, C. Cox, 88	1800	Pittrad v. Oliver, (1891) 1 Q. B. 474	1742
Phillips, 8 C. & P. 736	310, 1284	Pitts, C. & Mars, 284	960, 1040
Phillips v. Eyer, L. R. 6 Q. B. 1 (16)	286	Plate, 4 B. & Ad. 30	863
Phillips v. Barner, 1 Q. B. D. 436	1700	Plate Glass Co. v. Meredith, 4 T. R. 797	287
Phillips v. Eyer, L. R. 4 Q. B. 225	287, 416	Please, 4 B. & Ad. 30.	886
Phillips v. Jansen, 2 Esq. 624	1700. 1714	Pluckwell v. Wilson, 5 C. & P. 375	299, 1052
Phulia v. Jiwan, (1871) P. R. No. 6	1208, 1688	Plummer, 1 C. & K. 600	1057
Phillips v. Phillips, 1 Rob. 145	1685	Plummer, (1902) 2 K. B. 339	403, 448
Phillpots, 21 L. J. M. C. 18	667	Plymouth, (1859) 2 P. R. & D. 238	573
Philpot, 7 Cr. A. R. 140	362	Pochit Lal Missar, (1929) A. 917	628
Pholo, (1933) S. 407	189	Pochun Chong, 2 W. R. 35	249, 1688, 1691
Phool Chand Brojobasee, 16 W. R. 35	596, 599	Podimonu, 52 M. 61	1372
		Poe v. Mondford, Cro. Fliz. 620	1712
		Po Han, 7 L. B. R. 63	202, 203
		Po Hlaing v. Ba, E. 6 L. B. R. 50, 15 I. C. 981	732
		Pokhar, (1907) P. W. R. No. 10	386

	PAGE		PAGE
Po Kin, (1904) 2 L. B. R. 329, 1 Cr. L. J. 1128	1008, 1031	Pramatha Nath Ray, 17 C. W. N. 479, 19 I. C. 315	1374
Po Lan, 6 Bur. L. T. 77, 19 I. C. 167	1202	Prankhog, 16 C. W. N. 1078, 17 I. C. 76	372, 373
Pollard v. Mothial, 4 M. 234	742	Pran Kissen Bid, 6 W. R. 15	741
Polley, 1 C. & R. 77	1527, 1278	Prankisto v. Bissonath, 15 W. R. 6	1516
Poloke Nushyo, 2 W. R. 43	389	Pran Kaishna Surma, 8. C. 969	1197
Po Maung, (1906) 3 L. B. R. 196	1113	Pran Nath Shaha, 25 W. R. 69 (70)	1497
Pommanichintakath, 39 M. 534	636, 639	Pran Nath Kundu, 57 C. 526	890, 897
Ponigiri Pottigadu, 32 M. 171	133	Pratapa, 76 I. C. (P.) 970	994
Ponniah Lopez, 57 M. 643	247, 513, 1113	Pratap Chandra Guha, 29 C. W. N. 904, (1925) C. 1121	1715
Ponnummal, 16 M. 234	201	Pratt, 8 Cox. 334	1422
Ponnuswamy, 42 M. L. J. 139, 65 I. C. 12 (1922) M. 62	547	Prayag v. Arju Mian, 22 C. 139	168, 1264
Ponnusawmy, 8 R. 268	715	Prayag Singh, 12 A. 550	535
Ponnusami Pillai, (1898) 1 Weir 522	1517, 1519	Prayag Singh v. Morgan, 25 C. W. N. 425, 52 I. C. 190, 22 Cr. L. J. 494	1833
Ponnusami Tevan, 22 M. 488	1616	Prema Bhika, 1 B. H. C. R. 89	1447
Pontefract, (1893) Day's El. Cas. 130	573, 582	Preman, 11 L. 238	174
Pontefract, (1893) 4 O'M. & H. 200	574	Premenle, 8 C. 971	1192
Ponthala, 24 I. C. (M.) 327 F. B.	366, 369	Premanundo, v. Brindabun, 22 C. 994, 1548, 1520, 1780, 1781, 1788	1550, 1781, 1788
Ponurangam, 10 M. 186 R. 60	1260	Prem Chand, (1864) W. R. 35	228
Po Nyein, 9 L. B. R. 167, 45 I. C. 847	260	Premchand Dowlatram, 12 B. 63	596
Po Shin, (1906) 4 B. L. R. 45	683	Prem Chand Singh v. Dharamdas Singh, 9 C. W. N. 392	638
Pooche, 3 W. R. 9	324	Prem-narayan, 113 I. C. (A) 765	1189
Poole v. Huskinson, 11 M & W. 827	891	Premsookh Das, (1870) P. R. No. 38	808
Pooley v. Brown, 11 C. B. (N. S.) 575	262	Pronan 11 L. 238	1512
Poomalai, 21 M. 296	371, 628	Preolal Mukerjee, 18 C. W. N. 548, 24 I. C. 163	370, 371
Pooni Fathemah, 12 W. R. 7	347, 969, 1010	Preo Nath Banerji, 5 W. R. 68	168, 1250
Poonit Singh v. Madho Bhat, 13 C. 270	613, 617	Preo Nath Chowdhury, 29 C. 489	357, 1353
Poorusoo Mah Sikdar, 7 W. R. 14	1019	Preonath Dey v. Gobordhone Mal, 25 C. 278	856
Pope, 6 C. & P. 346	1343	Preonath, 3 W. R. 2	164
Poreshnath, 33 C. 295	364, 375, 501, 504, 511,	Preonath, 5 W. R. 68	168
Poromeshur Aheer, 23 W. R. 16	1408, 1275	Preonath, 29 C. 489	357
Portugal, 6 B. L. R. 323	134	Prescott v. Barker, 43 L. J. Ch. 498	161
Po Shat, 4 Bur. L. T. 263, 13 I. C. 395	1277	Preston, 21 L. J. M. C. 41	1343
Po Shin, (1906) 4 B. L. R. 45	683	Preston v. Pinder, Cro. Fliz, 308	1711
Po So, 9 L. B. R. 77, 42 I. C. 1007	257	Price, 12 Q. B. D. 247	866
Potadu, 11 M. 480	784	Price, 9 C. & P. 729	1486
Potaraju, 36 M. 216	117, 1148	Price, 8 Cox, 96	191
Po Han, 7 L. B. R. 63	202, 203	Price v. Hutchinson, L. R. 9 Eq. 534	802
Po Lan, 6 Bur. L. T. 77	245	Pridham v. Lucker, Hob. 126	1717
Po Nyein, 9 L. B. R. 167	260	Premelt, 1 F. & F. 51	1190
Po Tow, 3 L. B. R. 194	1170	Prince, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 154	177, 266, 271, 1189
Po Thaung, 5 L.B.R. 221, 12 Cr. L. J. 198	125	Prince, L. R. 1 C. C. 155	1266
Potharaju 136 I. C. (M) 314	996 1548	Prince, 44 L. J. M. C. 122	265, 1189, 1195
Pothen, L. B. R. 62	214	Prince Frederick, 2 Dod. 451	125
Po Thet, (1907) 4 L. B. R. 24	1523	Prior v. Wilson, 1 C. B. (N. S.) 95	1713
Po Twe, (1881) S. J. L. B. 130	1359	Private Johnson, (1933) Pesh. 9.	255
Poulterer's Case (1611) 9 Co. Rep. 55	422	Pritchard (1928) L. 38	1383
Poulton, C. & P. 329	458	Priya Nath v. Lalji, 27 C. W. N. 479, 72 I. C. 508, 24 Cr. L. J. 396	205, 1774
Pourangam, (1885) 1 Weir 373	1220, 1221, 1222	Probent, 2 East P. C. 1030	1503
Povey, Dears C. C. 32	1683	Proceedings, 1 Weir 497, 498	1491
Powel, 7 C. & P. 640	1395	Procter v. Manwaring, 3 B. & A. 145	116
Powell v. Geston, (1916) 2 K. B. 615	1700	Procter v. Webster, 16 Q. B. D. 112	1740
Powel v. Jones, 1 L. V. 297	1712	Prodyat, 140 I. C. (C) 80 F. B.	1031
Powin, 7 L. B. R. 20 I. C. 416	1328	Profulla v. Harendra, 21 C. W. N. 253	733
Po Ya, 10 L. B. R. 99, 58 I. C. 525	192	Profulla Kumar v. Harendranath, 44 C. 970	1753
Probh Dyal, (1905) P. R. No. 49, 3 Cr. L. J. 75	619	Promeshur Aheer, 23 W. R. 16	1275
Prabhu Dial, (1913) P. R. No. 4	1592, 1598	Proprietors of Margate Pier v. Town Council of Margate, 20 L. T. (N. S.) 564 (568)	901
Prafulla K. Mazumdar, 50 C. 41	191, 188	Prosunno Bose, 5 W. R. 96	1590
Prafullak-Roy, (1926) C. 345	446
Profulla Kumar Bose, 1207 (1930) C. 209
Prag Dat. 20 A. 459	361, 364, 503
Pramatha Nath, 30 C. L. J. 603. 55 I. C. 282, 21 Cr. L. J. 266	1271

PAGE		PAGE
Prosunno Coomer Chatterjee, 8 C. L. R. 231	638	Q
Prosunno Kumar v. Uday Sant, 22 C. 669	164, 168, 1250	Qadir Baksh, (1925) L. 589, 91 I. C. 804	516
Protab Chowkedar, 2 W. R. 9	291	Q. v. Anderson, L. R. 1 Cr. Ca. 161	161
Proud, L. & C. 97	1349, 1373	Q. v. Musson, 8 E. & B. 900	124
Proud, 3 Cox 22	1285	Q. v. Thompson, 1 B. L. R. (Cr.) 1	124
Proud, 41 L. J. M. C. 71	1368	Quadir Baksh, 30 A. 93	808
Puban, 5 W. R. 66	256, 257	Quagi Rahimulla, (1935) Pesh 26	547
Public Ali, 17 C. W. N. 94	1584	Quadir Baksh, 4 A. L. J. 776	180
Public Prosecutor S M. L. T. 286, 7 I. C. 392	783	Quinn v. Leathom, (1901) A. C. 495.	404, 421
Public Prosecutor, v. Annam Naidu, 48 M. 867	158	Q. v. Cooke, 40 L. J. M. C. 68	1375
Public Prosecutor v. Chaiareddi, 21 M. L. J. 1071, 12 I. C. 652	1028	R
Public Prosecutor v. Ramaswami Konan, 31 M. 271	272	Rabb Saleh, 144 I. C. (S.) 427	1344
Public Prosecutor v. Thandavan, 29 I. C. (M.) 671	1033	Rabbi Rout, 19 C. W. N. 127, 28 I. C. 656	611
Public Prosecutor v. Sunku, 7 M. L. T. 430, 6 I. C. 744	944	Rabindra Nath Dhar, 143 I. C. (C.) 113	1448
Pudala Venkatasami 3. M. 4	1444	Rabnawaz, (1875) P. R. No. 43	1673
Pudmon, (1889) B. U. C. 474	1757	Rachappa, 12 Bom. L. R. 229, 5 I. C. 971	732
Pugh v. Griffith, 7 A. & E. 827 (836)	1530	Radford, 1 C. & F. 707	1601
Puhan, 33 I. C. (Oudh) 830	1031	Radha, 91 I. C. (S.) 394	236
Pukot Kotu, 19 M. 349	371	Radha Kishan, (1912) P. L. R. 67, 15 I. C. 316	505, 1267
Pulemuthu, 24 M. 124	375	Radhakrishna Iyer, 55 M. 791	581
Pulin Behary, 16 I. C. (C) 257	458, 445	Radha Kishan, 5 A. 36	730
Pulin Behary, 16 C. W. N. 1105, 16 I. C. 257	445	Radha Kishan, 86 I. C. 671 (1925) L. 327	435
Pullabhotla, 39 I. C. (M.) 309, 18 Cr. L. J. 409	1523	Radha Kishan, (1929) Pat. 157	398
Pullman and Another v. Hill & Co., (1891) 1 Q. B. 524	1701, 7102, 1704	Radha Krishana v. Kissonala, 3 Bom. L. R. 883	726
Punai Fattama, 3 B. L. R. (A. C.) 25, 12 W. R. 7	969	Radha Nath Chowdry, 7 C. L. R. 289	535, 539
Puna Luxman, 6 Bom. L. R. 357, L. B. R. (1872-1892) 473	235	Radharaman Saha, 58 C. 1401	538, 539
Puna Mahton, 11 Pat. 743	370, 629	Radhey, (1923) A. 357, 73 I. C. 975	377
Punamalia Nodan, 5 M. 199	588	Radhika Badru, (1872) B. U. C. 67	1047
Punjia, (1888) B. U. C. 423	1429, 1439	Radhika Mohun Kuri v. Lal Mohun Sha, 20 C. 719	650
Punjab Singh, 6 C. 579	1514	Radho, 91 I. C. (S.) 394, (1926) S. 144.	1031
Punja Godad, 21 Bom. L. R. 247, 50 I. C. 995, 20 Cr. L. J. 387	1482	Raffe Mahamed v. Abbas Khan, 8 W. R. 76	727, 735
Punjaji Bapuji, 59 B. 177	1483	Ragg, (1860) Bell C. C. 214	1422
Punni, Basara, 5 M. L. T. 85, 2 I. C. 613	501	Raggha, 23 A. L. J. 821, 89 I. C. 903, (1925) A. 627, F. B.	1019
Punni Basara, 2 I. C. (M) 613	501	Raghavendra v. Kashinath Bhat, 19 B. B. 717	728, 729
Punva Sakham, (1897) B. U. C. 921	1327	Raghibali, (1881) A. W. N. 32	258
Puran, 3 O. L. J. 19, 33 I. C. 330	1034	Raghoji Kanoji, 3, B. H. C. R. (Cr.) 42.	209, 603
Puran, (1904) 6 P. L. R. No. 49	379, 383	Raghoo, (1864) B. U. C. 3	737
Puran, 33 I. C. (Oudh) 830	1031	Raghaonindan, 15 W. R. 19	1609
Purbati Charan Chatterjee, 7 A. 498 (504)	434	Raghoo Barrick, 11 W. R. 44	1603
Purcell v. Sowlek, 2 C. P. D. 218	1729	Raghoo Ram, 145 I. C. (A.) 749	1615
Purendar Jah v. Nanulal 6 Pat. 184	653	Ragho Ram, (1923) A. 535	1571
Purkob Kotu, 19 M. 349	628	Ragho Singh, 6 C. W. N. 507	1548
Purmanund Dhulia, 18 W. R. 22	1114	Raghu, (1864) W. R. 30	228
Purna Chandra, 28 C. W. N. 579	1754, 1758	Raghu, 1 O. L. J. 711, 26 I. C. 664	1053
Purna Chandra v. Hachanalli, 41 C. 17	411, 418, 787, 792	Raghubir, 51 I. C. (A.) 173, 30 Cr. L. J. 413	1346
Pursell v. Sawler, 1 C. P. D. 781, O. A. 2 C. P. D. 215	1724	Raghubir, 14 C. P. L. R. 174	636
Purshotam, (1896) B. U. C. 850	1763	Raghudatt, (1892-96) 1 U. B. R. 154	546
Pursoram Dass, 7 W. R. 42	327	Raghunadan, 15 O. C. 183, 15 I. C. 972.	521
Purushotam, 45 B. 895 F. B.	670, 680	Ragunandan, (1935) O. 52	518
Purushotam Kala, 5 B. H. C. R. 33	592	Ragunandan, 15 W. R. 19	1609
Putiram v. Mohd. Kasim, 3 C. W. N. 33	671	Ragunath, (1920) Pat. 76, 54 I. C. 997	266, 293, 398
Pyare Lal, 52 I. C. (N.) 423	1237	Ragunath, (1889) B. U. C. 470	1787
Pym, 1 Cox. 339	962	Ragunath, 15 A. 22	121
Pyo Gyi, 10 L. B. R. 31, 51 I. C. 673, 20 Cr. L. J. 513	1381	Ragunath, 47 A. 205	636
		Ragunath Das, 20 C. 413	1312, 1597
		Ragunath, Rai, 15 A. 22	1312
		Ragunath v. Ganpati, 27 A. 374	629

	PAGE		PAGE
Raghupat, (1922) 26, 66 I. C. 336 ..	733	Raj Coomar Singh, 3 C. 573 ..	1367
Raghpatti v. Narguza, 52 M. 181 ..	1481	Raji, (1895) B. U. C. 765 ..	859
Raghu Singh, 1 Pat. L. T. 221, 56 I. C. 592, 21 Cr. L. J. 496 ..	1548	Rajib Lochan, 28 C. W. N. 98 ...	1613
Raghu Tiwari, 15 A. 326 ..	611, 616, 728	Rai Kishore Patter v. Joy Krishna Sen 28 C. 362 ..	256
Rahamatulla, 1 Pat. L. J. 373, 38 I. C. 438 ..	241	Raj Kishto EDass, 12 W. R. 43 ..	393
Raham Shah, 85 I. C. 374 (1925) L. 114 992, 993 ..	992, 993	Raj Kristo Biswas, 16 W. R. 52 ..	568, 624, 1367
Rahim Ali (1911) P. R. (Cr.) 20, 14 I. C. 426 ..	792	Raj Kumar Singh, 1 Pat L. J. 298 ..	722
Rahiman Shah, (1926) N. 202 ..	361	Rajoo Ghose, 7 W. R. 70 ..	1006, 1008
Rahiman, (1872) P. R. No. 28 ..	1227	Rajpal, (1924) L. 590 ..	532, 941
Rahman, (1930) L. 344 ..	992	Rajpa, 103 I. C. 769, (1927) L. 590 ..	325
Rahimat, 1 B. 147 ..	151, 753	Rakhal Chandra, 87 I. C. (C.) 842 ..	1124
Rahimat Alli, 62 I. C. (B.) 401, 22 Bom. L. R. 166 ..	203, 529, 533	Rakhal Chandra Laha, 13 C. W. N. 942 ..	648, 650, 673
Rahim Baksh, 18 A. L. J. 1515, 56 I. C. 435, 21 Cr. L. J. 4251 ..	1770	Rakhal Chandra, (1930) C. 647 F. B. ...	448
Rahim Dad, (1913) P. W. R. 3. 191 I. C. 715 ..	220	Rakhal Das v. Kailash Babu, 11 C. L. J. 113, 5 I. C. 721 ..	390
Rahim Khan, 24 I. C. 589 ..	997	Rakhal as v. Bindoo, 1 Marsh, 392 ..	716
Rahim Khan, 7 S. L. R. 118, 24 I. C. 589 ..	886	Rakhal Nokari, 2 C. W. N. 81 ..	420
Rahim Mian, 116 I. C. (Pat.) 98 ..	894	Rakhan Javar, 139 I. C. (C.) 81 F. B. 1034 ..	1034
Rahimtullah, 87 I. C. 914 (1925) S. 284 ..	348	Rakhia, (1911) P. L. R. 157, 10 I. C. 199 ..	870
Rahimuddin, 5 C. 31 ..	498	Rakma, 11 B. 59 ..	1133
Rahimuddi v. Asgar Ali, 5 C. W. N. 31 ..	953	Rakhmaji, 9 P. 558 ..	1200
Rahamd, (1893) A. W. N. 144 ..	511, 1542	Raleigh v. Goschen, (1898) 1 Ch. 73 ..	310, 320
Rahman, (1926) L. 512 ..	1042	Ram, 23 C. W. N. 612, 50 I. C. 991 ..	735
Rahman, (1902) P. R. No. 30 ..	1113	Ramrao, 75 I. C. (N.) 158 (1923) N. 313 ..	731
Rahmat, 37 A. 419 ..	1788	Rambrose, 6 R. 578 ..	660, 688, 689, 1280
Rahmat Ali, 103 I. C. 408 (1927) L. 634 ..	1040	Rama, 40 317 ..	1326
Rahmatulla v. Rahimulla, 27 C. 501 ..	170	Ramachandrappa, 6 M. 249 ..	432
Rainy v. The Justices of Sierra Leone, 8 Moo. P. C. 47 ..	137	Ramachandriah, 51 M. 86 ..	472
Rai Narain Bhagabat, 35 C. 315 ..	504	Rama Chandra Narayan, 22 B. 152, F.B. 985, 1118 ..	509
Rai Pal, 7 L. 15 ..	533	Ram Acre, 90 L. J. 490 ..	514
Raisat Ali, 7 C. 352 ..	184	Ramadeen Doobay, 26 W. R. 6 ..	1206
Raj, (A. B.) 10 R. 23 K. 46 8 C. W. N. 22 ..	1399	Ramadin, 2 A. 139 ..	512
Raja, (1919) P. L. R. 18, 50 I. C. 977 ..	192	Ramadin, 25 A. 129 ..	512
Raja Bhagwan Baksha, 8 O. C. 148 ..	534, 535	Ramadhan, (1924) A. 230 ..	512
Rajad (1869) P. R. No. 33 ..	253	Ramadin, 21 & L. J. 839 ..	593
Rajai Mia, 22 C. 817 ..	2550	Ramadhir, (1880) P. W. R. No. 22 ..	619
Raja Khan, 32 C. L. L. J. 478, 61 I. C. 800 ..	417 418	Rama Gandan, (1891) 1 Weir 134 ..	1679
Rajam, (Mt.) (1905) P. R. No. 53, Cr. L. J. 136 ..	704	Ramajam, 1 Weir 452 ..	150, 156
Rajammal, 2 M. W. N. 479, 12 I. C. 645 ..	1222	Ramajewa, 12 B. H. C. R. 1 ..	1786
Rajani Kanta Kar, 8 C. W. N. 22 ..	1399	Ramakka, 8 M. 5 ..	1523
Rajani Kanta Pal, 5 C.W.N. 843 ..	791	Rama Krishna, 12 M. 49 ..	158
Rajani Kanta, 58 C. 940 ..	370	Ram Krishna Das, 7 B. L. R. 44 ..	150
Rajappa, 17 Bom. L. R. 22, 28 I. C. ..	697	Ramakrishna, 7 B. L. R. 446 ; 16 W. R. (Cr.) 27 ..	1018
Rajaram, 22 Bom. L. R. 1229 ..	663, 665	Raman, 21 M. 83 ..	1102
Raja Sahib, (1883) 1 Weir 243 ..	857	Rama Nand, (1917) P. R. No. 26, 40 I. C. C. 1008 ..	233
Raja Saligram v. Secretary of State, 12 B. L. R. 167( 181, 182, 184, 185, 187, 188, 187, 188, 194) P. C. ..	1273	Ramnaik, (1887) B. U. C. 318, 319 ..	1720
Raja Shah, (1889) P. R. No. 14 ..	1714	Ramanand, 3 A. 664 ..	788
Raj Bahadur, (1918) P. R. No. 23, 47 I. C. 447 ..	416	Ramanandan Singh, (1930) O. 103 ..	1431
Raj Begum v. Nawab Reza Hosein, 2 W. R. 76 ..	1209	Ramanath Kalapahar, 2 C. L. J. 524 ..	1793
Raj Bullub v. Issan Chunder, 7 W. R. 355 ..	282	Raman Behari, 50 C. 849 ..	722
Raj Coomar, 19 W. R. 41 ..	258	Raman, Behary, 41 C. 722 ..	247
Raj Coomar Banerjee, (1864) W. R. 25 ..	1428, 1434, 1436	Ram Angutha, 40 C. 511 ..	1201, 1228
Raj Coomar Banerjee, 1 Ind. Jur. (O.S.) 105 ..	420	Ramanna, 12 M. 273 ..	499
		Ramendra Chandra, 58 C. 1305 ..
		Ramanuja v. Prativadi, 12 I. C. (M.) 217 ..	359
		Ramappa, 22 M. L. J. 112 13 I. C. 108, 13 Cr. L. J. 15 ..	1381
		Ramaraja, 53 M. 937 (942) ..	517
		Rama Sama, (1873) B. U. C. 77 ..	1677, 1679
		Rama Redvdi, 2 M. L. W. 1035, 30 I. C. 748 ..	125
		Raman Singh, 28 C. 411 ..	522, 1132
		Ram Autar, 47 A. 51 ..	420

	PAGE		PAGE
Ramdarzan Mahton, (1920) Pat. 206 ..	247	Ramachandra, 55 B. 725	499, 507, 508, 511
Ramaya v. Parthevatti, 2 M. W. N. 8, 12 I. C. 217 ..	525	Ramachandra, (1848) 1 Weir. 139 ..	638
Ramasami v. Ramachandrudu, (1895) 1 Weir 612 ..	1262	Ram Chandra v. Haji Meah, 17 C. W. N. 1129, 21 I. C. 171, 14 Cr. L. J. 571 ..	1407
Ramasami, 30 M. L. T. 18, 69 I. C. 380	512	Ram Chandra Ganesh, (1896) B. U. C. 860 ..	1375
Ramasami v. Lankanada, 9 M. 387 ..	1704	Ram Chandra Narayan, 22 B. 152 F. B. 471, 473 ..	473
Ramaswami Konan, 31 M. 271 ..	789	Ramcharan, 6 W. R. 39 F. B. ..	249
Ramaswami, 7 M. 292	205, 731	RamachanSra Rai v. Ram Bilas, 142 I. C. (Pat.) 624 ..	1113
Ramaswami, 44 M. L. J. 505, 59 I. C. 272.	935	Ramcharan, (1898) A. W. N. 14 7 ..	413
Ramaswami, 12 M. 148	183, 358, 935 1592	Ramcharan, (1866) B. L. R. (Sup. Vol.) 488 F. B. ..	243
Ramaswami, 41 M. 589	182	Ram Chandra v. Haji Meah, 17 C. W. N. 1129, 21 I. C. 171 ..	1407
Ramasami, 13 M. 131	157	Ramcharan Kairi, 6 W. R. 39 F. B. ..	1544
Ramasami Aiyar, 44 M. 9 3	1745	Ram Chandran Rai, (1899) A. W. N. 77.	507
Ramasamier, 1 M. L. W. 274, 23 I. C. 498, 15 Cr. L. J. 290	1436, 1478	Ram Dai, (1870) P. R. No. 18 ..	1010
Ramasami Nadan, (1883) 1 Weir 462	1372	Ramdas, 18 A. L. J. 857, 59 I. C. 34 ..	639
Ramasami Naidu (1895) 1 Weir 612	710	Ramdass Sahoo v. Anand Chunder Roy, 19 W. R. 27 ..	654
Rama Singh, 42 A. 302	1011	Ram Das Singh, 54 C. 152	636, 645
Ram Asre, 90 L. J. 490	988, 987	Ram Dei, 18 A. 380 ..	420
Ram Asre, 26 O. C. 18, 73 I. C. 49, (1923) (Oudh) 97 ..	1043	Ramdhir, (1880) P. W. R. No. 22 ..	593
Ramasamy, 4 H. M. C. R. 152	794	Raminihi Nayar, 1 M. 266 (267) ..	765
Ramaswamy, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 44, 11 I. C. 799	768, 784	Ram Dayal, 38 A. 40 ..	1260
Ramasamy, 31 I. C. (M.) 825	504	Ram Dyal, (1886) P. R. No. 24 ..	1346
Ramasawmy, 14 M. L. W. 588	512	Ram Dyal, 21 A. L. J. 875 ..	874
Ramaswamy, (1911) 2 M. W. N. 44	768, 784	Ram Dyal, 83 I. C. 1004, (1924) A. 214 ..	874, 875
Ramaswamy, 20 M. L. J. 247 ; 30 I. C. 434	797, 798	Ram Dyal, 3 A. 773 ..	256
Ramesh Chandra Sanpal v. Vira Non- dae, 10 C. 882	144	Ram Dyal, 36 A. 26, 39 A. 26 ..	1061
Ramasamy Chetty, 1 Weir 176	697	Ram Dei, 18 A. 350 ..	1199
Ramasray, Ahir, 7 Pat. 484	516	Ram Dhun Dey, 13 W. R. 77 ..	1380
Ramatripati, (1881) 1 Weir 229	863	Ramdihal, 3 C. W. N. 174 ..	513
Ram Angutha Singh, 40 C. 511	513	Ram Ditta v. Kripa Singh, (1883) P. R. No. 3	859, 1536
Ramava, 17 Bom. L. R. 217	1056	Ram Deity, (1910) P. L. R. 11, 6 I. C. 490	1355
Ramaya, 13 M. 148	628	Ram Dwaya, (1868) P. R. No. 16 ..	1468
Ramaya, (1904) 10 Bur. L. R. 170	1369	Ram Dyal Mundle, 7 W. R. 28	1511, 1536
Ramaya Naick, 26 M. 419 F. B. 632, 633, 634	590	Ramudu Aiyar, 44 M. L. J. 243, 72 I. C. 538, 24 Cr. L. J. 426	154
Ram Bali, 13 O. C. 55, 51 I. C. 805	171	Ramachandra Chandra, 58 C. 1303 (1309) ..	636
Ram Baram, 15 A. 299	1442	Rames Ch. Sanyal v. Hiru Mundul, 17 C. 852	1352
Ram Behari, 50 C. 849	612	Rameshar, 27 A. 300 ..	128
Ram Bhrose, 6 R. 578	1347	Rama Gandan, (1891) 1 Weir 134 ..	619
Rambilas, 38 M. 639	675	Rameshar Rai, 1 A. 379	663, 687, 1246
Ram Bunsee Konwaree v. Soobh Koon- waree, 7 W. R. 325	1347	Ramgobind, 1 Pat. L. R. 17, 72 I. C. 887	681
Ram Byas Rai, 47 I. C. (Pat.) 667. 19 Cr. L. J. 943.	666	Ram Golam Singh, 47 A. 579	630
Ramchand, (1890) P. R. No. 26	728	Ram Golam Singh, 12 W. R. 59 ..	1483
Ramchand, 23 S. 225	167	Ram Gopal Daw, 32 C. 793 ..	642
Ramchand, 85 A.	1389	Ram Harakh, 23 A. L. J. 990, 90 I. C. 913	913
Ramchand, 1926 (L) 385	1308	Ram Harakh, 90 I. C. (A.) 913 ..	183
Ramchand, (1911) P. W. R. 28, 2 I. C. 220, 12 Cr. L. J. 500	592, 594, 593	Ram Harakh, 1 O. L. J. 238, 24 I. C. 172	362, 371, 372,
Ramchand, 66 I. C. (P.) 70	1424	Raminihi Nayar, 1 M. 266	902
Ram Chand v. Jai Dial, (1915) P. W. R. 18, 30 I. C. 641	473	Ramjan Khan, 41 C. 533 ..	1273
Ram Chandra Narayan, 22 B. 152 F. B.	1299	Ramji, 10 B 124	678
Ramchandrar Sahai, 35 I. C. 971	1190	Ramji, 53 I. C. (N.) 481	1029
Ramchander, 12 A. L. J. 265	173	Ram Jiwan, 95 I. C. 598, (1926) O. 448	612
Ram Chand Gurvala, (1926) L., 385	768, 770	Ramjerao, 12 B. H. C. R. I	153, 159, 666
Ram Chandra, (1884) B. U. C. 201	204	Ramji Sajabarao, 10 B. 124	613
Ram Chandra, 43 C. L. J. 287, 94 I. C.	1434	Ramejee Teli v. Rangho Teli, 12 C. P. L. R. 19	1684
Ramchandrappa, 6 M. 249	136, 137	Ramjiwan, (1881) A. W. N. 158	1481
Ramchandra, 5 Pat. 110	147	Ram Joy Karmokar, 25 W. R. 10	1405
Ramachandra Shahu, 12 Pat. 184	150
Ramachandra, 6 B. H. C. R. 36	640, 638

	PAGE		PAGE
Ram Karan Lai, 13 N. L. R. 68, 40 I. C. 298	884	Ramhit, 20 A. L. J. 178, 65 I. C. 849,
Ram Khelawan, 36 C. 827	501	23 Cr. L. J. 193, (1922) A. 24	1407
Ram Khelawan, 52 I. C. (Pat.) 430, 20 Cr. L. J. 654	484	Ram Prasad, 33 A. 773	947, 949
Ramkhilawan, 28 A. 705	660	Ram Prasad, 23 A. L. J. 18, 86 I. C. 282, (1925) A. 250	1332
Ram Khelawan Singh, 36 C. 827	500, 361	Ram Prosad, 1 Pat. 753	503
Ram Krishan Chetti v. Palaniyandi, 1 M. 262 F. B.	1423	Ram Prosad, 17 C. W. N. 379, F. B., 17 I. C. 993	730, 733, 741
Ram Krishna, 66 I. C. (Pat.) 817, (1922) A. I. R. (Pat.) 197	501, 1415	Ram Prashad, (1919) Pat. 262, 50 I. C. 983	378
Ram Krisana, 7 B. L. R. 446	153, 156	Ram Prasad, (1902) A. W. N. 16	765
Ram Krishna, 66 I. C. (Pat.) 817	502, 500	Ram Prosad Roy v. Sooba Roy, 1 C. W. N. 400	671, 672, 729
Ram Krishna Biswas, 27 C. 565	233	Ram Rang, (1905) P. R. No. 18	1280
Ram Krishna, 12 M. 49	234	Ram Ranjan, 42 C. 422	427, 428
Ram Krishna Singh, 3 Pat. L. T. 335, 66 I. C. 817, 23 Cr. L. J. 321	1477	Ramrao, 75 I. C. (N.) 158, (1923) Nag. 313	735
RamKristo Das, 16 W. R. 27	548	Ram Rachea Singh, 1 Wym. 1	701
Ram Kuar, 2 A. 723, F. B.	1217	Ram Rachea Singh, 4 W. R. 29	709
Ram Kumari, 18 C. 264	1670, 1672	Ram Rewas Kowar, 7 C. L. R. 356	696
Ram Lal, 60 I. C. 785	187, 797	Ram Ratnaji, 5 Bom. L. R. 460,	1483
Ram Lall, (1916) P. L. R. 121, 36 I. C. 493	1217	Rama Reddi, 2 M. L. W. 1035, 30 I. C. 749	1145
Ram Lala, 15 Bom. L. R. 103, 19 I. G. 127	1145	Ramuruttan Neogee, 6 W. R. 3	125
Ram Lal Singh, 22 W. R. 51	378, 388	Ram Sagar, 8 W. R. 57	1322
Ram Lala, 15 Bom. L. R. 103, 19 I. C. 27	216, 1145	Ram Sahay, 24 C. W. N. 763, 57 I. C. 278	503
Ramla Rahanji, 5 Bom. L. R. 460	1483	Ram Sahoy Bhar, (1864) W. R. 26	333
Ramlo, 12 S. L. R. 29, 47 I. C. 807	293	Ram Sahoy Bheer, (1864) W. R. 24	329, 333
Ramlo, 5 B. H. C. R. 27	1679	Ram Sami, 12 M. 148	567
Ram Lochan Sircar, 29 C. 214	522, 523, 524, 539	Ram Sankar v. Ganesh, (1907) 29 A. 385, F. B.	114
RamLogan Lal, 7 C. W. N. 556	727	Ram Saran, (1906) P. R. 12	174
Ram Lugun, 7 W. R. 54	396	Ram Saran, 5 A. 7	590, 591
Ram Manok Shaha v. Brindabhan, 5 W. R. (Cir.) 230	1363	Ramsharan Das, (1930) Cr. C. 988	478
Ramnaik, (1887) B. U. C. 318, 319	233	Ramasaran Chowbey, 4 N. W. P. H. C. R. 46	661, 662
Ram Nandan, 17 C. W. N. 1132 20 I. C. 623	501	Ram Saran Tewary, 24 W. R. 45	781
Ram Narain v. Jokhi Ram, 3 A. L. J. R. 1	717	Ramsaran 4 N. W. P. H. C. R. 46	1563
Ram Naroin Shahu, (1933) Pat. 601	183	Ram Sarup, 7 A. 757 F.B.	247
Ramnarain, 3 W. R. 2	1298	Ram Sarup, 43 I. C. (Pat.) 828, 19 Cr. L. J. 236	1234
Ram Narayan, 22 A. L. J. 639	1707	Ram Sarup, 36 A. 474	1534
Ram Narayan, 4 W. R. 37	412	Ram Sarup Bhakat, 4 C. W. N. 253 742,	1584
Ram Narain Josh, 4 W. R. 37	421	Ram Say & Foote, 15 Cox. 231	1761
Ram Naresh Rai, 133 I. C. (A.) 800	756, 758	Ramaswamy v. Maung Shwe Bau, 3 Bur. L. T. 151, 8 I. C. 995	1598
Ramnath v. Jaladhar, 3 C. L. J. 360	1229	Ramsewak. 146 P. C. (O.) 28	890
Ram Nath, (1904, 1905) P. R. No. 1, 2 Cr. L. J. 31	466, 469, 1019	Ram Sewak Lal v. Maneshwar, 37 C. 604	896
Ram Nath, 47 A. 268, 46 A. 611	398, 580	Ramsey, 1 C. & E. 126	952
Ram Nath, 99 I. C. 252, (1926) O. 234	1019	Ram Shastri, 15 C. P. L. R. 185	1214
Ramnath Rai, 2 Pat. L. J. 549, 61 I. C. 844	247	Ram Singh, 11 C. L. R. 462	1234
Ramanadan, 3 A. 664	1719	Ram Singh, 155 I. C. (Pat.) 421 S. B.	635
Ram Nath Surma Biswas, 21 W.R. 9 433, 434		Ram Soondar Poddar, 2 C. L. R. 515	1718
Ram Newaz, 35 A. 506	190, 195, 967, 1032, 1116	Ramsoonder Shootar, 7 W. R. 52,	701
Ramoo Singh, (1920) Pat. 20, 54 I. C. 173	630, 680	Ram Sundar, 19 A 109	420, 1197
Ram Panda, 18 W. R. 28	743	Ram Sundar Das, 23 C. W. N. 621,
Ram Pandal, 7 B.L. R. (A.C.) 16	412	50 I. C. 991	324
Ram Parshad, 30 I. C. (A.) 687	502	Ram Tahal Kahar, 3 B. L. R. (A.C.) 33	995
Ram Prashad, 35 A. 53	654, 694	Ram Tiwn, (1926) O. 448	612
Rampat, (1900) P. R. No. 26	741, 729	Ramun, (1907) P. W. R. No. 27,	593
RamPershad, 39 I. C. (A.) 687	1272	Ramzan, (1918) P. R. (Cr.) 30, 48 I. C. 942	314, 312, 317
Ram Pershad, 2 R. 80	1405	Ramzan, (1920) P. W. R. 2, 54 I. C. 51,	1041, 1116
Ram Pertab, 6 A. 121	250	Ramzan, 7 A. 461 F. B.	943
		Ranchore, (1888) B. M. J. 400,	359
		Randhir Singh, 3. 597	961, 972, 1046, 1047

	PAGE		PAGE
Ranga, 9 M.L.T. 362, 9 I. C. (M.) 727 ..	511,	Rean's Case, 2 Leach 620 ..	1304
Rangana, (1890) 1 Weir 510 ..	514	Reardon, L. R. 1 C. C. 31 ..	1396
Ranga Gowden, 30 I. C. (M.) 700 ..	1494	Reazooddeen, 3 W. R. 33 ..	62,3 624
Rangasawmy, 22 M. L. T. 68, 39 I. C. 938 ..	501	Reazuddi, 16 C. W. N. 1077, 15 I. C. 646, 13 Cr. L. J. 502 ..	114, 193, 1102, 1103
Rangasamy, 52 M. 73 ..	1488, 1489	Reckspear, 1 Mood. 342 ..	1242
Rangasami Naidu, 20 M.L.J. 568, 16 I. C. 773 ..	760	Re Coleridge, Q. 15 C. B. N. S. 410 ..	1747
Rango, 6 B. 402 ..	564, 569, 1404	Reddaway v. Banham, (1896) A. C. 199 ..	1623
Rango Timaji, 6 B. 402 ..	1258	Reddi Rami Reddi, 27 M. L. J. 586, 25 I. C. 524 ..	672, 677
Ranga Swamy Ayyangar, (1888) 1 Weir 466 ..	175, 177, 481, 825, 1398, 1403, 1416, 1599	Reddi Yerranna, 25 I. C. 388 ..	164
Rangu(1883) B. . U. C. 189 ..	445,	Redford v. Birely, (1822) 3 Stark, N. P. C. 76 ..	510
Rangi 53 I. C. (N.) 481 ..	579	Redman, 10 Cox. 159 ..	1293, 1305
Ranjirav, 12 B. H. C. R. 1 ..	1029	Reed, 12 Cox. ..	865
Ransford, 13 Cox. C. C. 9 ..	465	Rechards, 1 F. & F. 87 ..	1422
Raper v. London Tramways Co., (1893) 2 Ch. 588 ..	400	Reeves v. Slater, 7 B. & C. 486 ..	373
Rapheal v. Bank of England, 17 C. B. 161 ..	1788	Reeves Peake, App. Cas. 84 ..	467
Ratanlal, 17 B. 748 ..	863	Reeves, 26 St. Tr. 530 ..	469
Rasammal, 36 I. C. (M.) 324 ..	1236	Reference, 7 M. H. C. R. 27 ..	183
Rash Behari, 35 C. 450 ..	1396	Reference, 3 M. H. C. R. (App.) 21 ..	202, 203
Rash Behari v. Bhugwan, 17 C. 209 ..	1030	Reg. v. Ban, 9 C. & P. 22 ..	386
Rash Behari Das, 35 C. 450 ..	1450	Reg. v. Elmstone, 7 B. H. C. R. (Cr.) 86 ..	124
Rashidazzaman, 15 C.W.N. 434, 10 I.C. 684, 12 Cr. L. J. 193 ..	117	Reg. v. Prince, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 154 ..	1195
Rashikachari, (1883) 1 Weir 528 ..	167, 1615	Reg. v. Thompson, 1 B. L. R. (Cr. O. J., 1 ..	124
Rasharam, 20 B. 193 ..	1315, 1321	Regents Canal Co., 6 B. & C. 720 ..	161
Rasool Khan, (1912) M. W. N. 85 ..	1524	Regina Gaha, 21 C. W. N. 74 44 C. 290 S. B. ..	141
Rassam v. Bundge, (1893) 1 Q. B. 571 ..	1722	Regula Bheemappa, 26 M. 249 ..	365
Rassokoolan, 12 W. R. 51 ..	1625	Reily, 28 C. 434 ..	674
Rassul, (1876) P. R. No. 18 ..	1728	Reily, 5 C. W. N. 609 ..	1590
Rasul, (1889) P. R. No. 4 ..	401	Reinhardt v. Menfastoi, 42 Ch. D. 685 ..	867
Rasul, (1916) P. R. No. 27, 38 I. C. 734, 18 Cr. L. J. 350 ..	1677	Rekha Rai, 6 Pat. 471 ..	1200
Rasul Khan, 13 A. L. J. 470, 29 I. C. 91 ..	500, 508, 509, 516	Reley, (1896) 1 Q. B. 309 (314) ..	1605
Ratan, 138 I. C. (O) 123 ..	471	Remnant's Case, 5 T. R. 169 ..	1317
Ratanlal, 17 B. 748 ..	1014	Re Noyce, (1892) 1 Q. B. 642 ..	146
Ratan Lab- 8 Luck 570 ..	986, 1535	Rev Singh, (1894) B. U. C. 690 ..	1473
Ratan, 143 I. C. (O.) 45 ..	1396	Revu Pothadu, 5 M. 390 ..	1255
Ratan Moni Dey, 22 C. 292 ..	575, 984	Rex. v. Bond, 1 B. & Aldr. 390 (392) ..	116
Ratansi, 9 S. L. R. 170, 32 I. C. 688 ..	1029	Rex v. Wright, 8 T. R. 293 ..	1730
Ratan Singh, (1911) P.L.R. 72, 10 I. C. 840 ..	550, 551	Rex v. Lord Abingdon, 1 Esp. 26 ..	1705
Ratnam MMudaliar 148 I. C. (M) 573, 1081 ..	681	Rex v. Meade, (1909) 1 K. B. 895 ..	331
Rathmine's Case, (1904) 1 Ir. R. 161 ..	677	Reynolds v. Thomas Tilling Ltd., (1903) T. L. R. 539 ..	892
Rathnam Pillai, (1932) M. 427 ..	1081	Rhedoy Nath Biswas, 2 W. R. 247 ..	741
Rati Jha, 39 C. 463 ..	868	Rhodes, (1899) 1 Q. B. 77 ..	1453
Ratinam, 5 C. P. L. R. 23 ..	611	Rhodes, 2 Ld. Rayen 887 ..	668
Rati Ram, 28 P. L. R. 260 ..	1398, 1609	Rhuten Ram, 2 W. R. 63 ..	1512
Ratna Mudali, 10 M. 126 ..	253	Riasat Ali, 7 C. 352 ..	1444, 1783, 1787
Rattan Singh, (1911) P.W.R. 72, 10 I.C. 840 ..	1210, 1595	Richard Bailey, (1800) R. & R. 1 ..	264
Ravaji, (1885) B. U. C. 377 ..	940, 948	Richard Franklin, 17 St. Tr. 629 ..	474
Ravaji, (1892) B. U. C. 594 ..	1507	Richard Gotby, Russ. & R. 84 ..	749
Rawji, (1893) B. U. C. 632 ..	631	Richard Nutt, Digest Law Libel, 68 ..	471
Rayan Kutti, 26 M. 640 ..	1404	Richards, 11 Cox. 43 ..	1304
Rayapadayachi, 19 M. 240 ..	659	Richards, 8 Tr. 634 ..	890. 1293, 1296
Raza Hussain, (1904) A. W. N. 9 ..	739	Richards, 1 F. & F. 87 ..	325
Razzack, 21 A. L. J. 850 ..	167	Richardson, 2 F. & F. 343 ..	1373
Razzack (1924) A. 197 ..	1219	Richardson, 6 C. & P. 935 ..	1402
Razia Mia, 22 C. 817 ..	108	Ricket v. Metropolitan Rly. Co., 34 L. J. (& B.) 257 ..	854
Read v. Ambridge, 6 C. & P. 308 ..	205	Ricket v. Metropolitan Railway, L. R. 2 H. L. 175 ..	204
Read, 7 C. & P. 848 ..	312, 320	Rickman, 2 East P. C. 1035 ..	1503
Read's Case, Cro. Eliz. 645 ..	1709	Riddell, 2 Tyrw. 523 ..	877
Reajaddin, 18 C. W. N. 1245, 26 I. C. 173 ..	1422	Ridgelay's Case, 1 Leach, 189 ..	812, 814, 817
Reane, 2 East P. C. 735 ..	1704	Ridgway, (1862) 3 F. & F. 838 ..	1422
	501	Rienno Singh v. Kali Churn Misser, 16 W. R. 18 ..	1259
	1311	Ridgmaidon's Case, 1 Lew. C. C. 180 ..	297

	PAGE		PAGE
Riley, 1 Cox. 98	1420	Rose, (1884) 15 Cox. C. C. 540	363
Riley, (1896) 1 R. 13, 309	1560	Rose v. Miles, 4 M. & S. 101	854
Ring, 7 Cox. 491	405	Roshun, 5 C. 768	258
Ring, 61 L. J. M. C. 116	1283, 1286, 1788, 1791	Roshun Lal (Seith), 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. 82	1512
Rino, 5 S. L. R. 123, 13 I. C. 210	700	Rosinake, 1 Mood. 19	1180
Rino, 6 S. L. R. 76, 16 I. C. 753	701	Ross, 6 M. H. C. R. 342	656, 657, 658
Rino Subedar, 6 I. C. 753	114	Ross & Co. v. Scriven, 43 C. 1001	652
Riskallob Bey v. Whitehurst & others		Rothwell, 12 Cox. 145	992
18 L. T. 615	1734	Rough's Case, 2 East 607	1132, 1254
Riston, 39 L. I. M. C. 10	1572	Rouse, 4 Cox. 7	1454
Ritson, L. R. 1 C. C. 300	1511	Roxburgh, 12 Cox. 8	1372
Robb, 4 F. & F. 59	1191	Rowed, 3 & B. 180	920
Roberts, 2 East P. C. 487	1531, 1721	Rowlands, (1851) 17 & B. 671	442, 443, 444
Roberts, 25 L. J. M. C. 17	1283	Rowley's Case, 12 Rep. 87	384
Roberts v. Brown, 10 Bing. 519	1717, 1732	Rowcliffe v. Edmonds, 7 M. & W. 12	1710
Roberts v. Camden, 9 East 93	1711	Royal Aquazarium v. Parkinson, (1892) 1 & B. 431	148, 147, 274
Roberts v. Eagerton, L. R. 9 & B. 494	174, 177, 271	Roypadayachi, 19 M. 240	1274, 1276
Roberts v. Karr, 1 Camp. 216 Note (b)	890, 891	Royapan, (1894) 1 Weir 429	1274, 1276
Roberts v. Orchard, 2 H. & C. 769	267	Rushan Rai, (1901) P. R. No. 32	1274, 1276
Roberts v. Owen & others, (1888) 5 T. L. R. 11	734, 1732	Rubbeeoolah, 7 W. R. 13	249
Roberts v. Williams, 12 East 33, 34	1256	Ruchon v. M'Colgn, (1901) R. P. C. 262	1623
Robertson, 10 Cox. 9	1294	Ruddock v. Sowe, (1865) 4 F. & F. 519	344
Robertson v. Hartopp, 43 Ch. D. 484	360	In Ruding v. Smith, 2 Hagg. Cons. R. 371	1534, 1535
Robi v. Gobind, 1 B. 97 (116)	263	Rudrappa v. Nasingrao, 29 B. 213	1147
Robimuddin, 5 C. 31	1005, 1006	Ruel v. Tatnell, 43 L. T. 507	1717
Robins, 1 C. & R. 456	1189, 1191	Rufl, 1 Calarje (Lowa.) 482	1663
Robins' Case, 1 Leach, 290	1309	Rughoo, (1864) W. R. 30	228, 229
Robinson, 2 Lew. 273	1203, 1304	Rumale Nayayya, (1889) 1 Weir 496	1476
Robinson, 1 Wood. C. C. 327	1240, 1530	Rumnev v. Walter, 8 T. L. R. 256	1456
Robinson, 34 L. J. M. C. 176	810	Rumsey v. Webb, Car. & M. 105	1749
Robinson v. Robinson, (1879) 13 E. L. R. R. 564	1702	Rupa, 22 O. C. 121, 52 I. C. 275, 20 Cr. L. J. 610	1348
Robinson, 4 F. & F. 43	1398	Rup Deb, 11 A. L. J. 340, 20 I. C. 408, 14 Cr. L. J. 424	137
Robinson v. Jones, 4 L. R. (Ir.) 391	1702	Rup Lal v. Durga Prasad, 1 Pat. L. W. 416	396
Robinson v. Jones, Ir. L. R. 4 Ex. B. 391	1738	Rudraju Ramaraju, 129 I. C. (M) 77	1478
Robinson v. Merchant, (1845) 7 & B. 918	1713	Rup Narayan, 19 Pat. 140	146, 701, 702
Robinson Bell, 28 L. J. M. C. 58	1256	Ruppell v. Ronnusami, 22 M. 488	1629, 1634
Robshaw v. Smith, 38 L. T. 424	1246	Rup Singh, (1905) P. R. No. 44	614
Robson, 31 L. J. M. C. 22	1363	Ruri, (1919) P. R. No. 5, 48 I. C. 493, 20 Cr. L. J. 3	165
Robson, R. & R. 413	1420	Rur Singh, (1885) P. R. No. 5, 21	783, 784
Rohcester, (1892) 4 O' M. & H. 159	572, 583	Rustam Ali, (1882) A. W. N. 209	1429
Rochester and Montgomery, (1892) Dey's Elec. Cases, 103 151	578	Russell (William Lord), 9 St Tr. 695	456, 451
Roda Singh, (1818) P. R. 1202	1681	Russell, 1 East P. C. 438, 439	1235
Roda, (1867) P. R. 19	1217	Russell, C & Mar. 541	1504
Roda, P. R. N. 30 of 1889	130	Russell, R. & M. C. C. R. 356	1060
Roderick, 7 C. & P. 765	1254	Russell, 6 B. & C. 566	900
Roe, 11 Cox. 554	1455	Russell, 6 East. 4, 27	398, 900
Roebuck, D. L. B. 24	1421, 1426	Russell, 1 Moo. C. C. 377	1169
Rodgers, 7 M. 28	474	Russick Lal Mullick, 7 C. L. R. 382	727
Rodgres, 1 Leach, 89	1525	Rutna Muddali, 10 M. 126	940
Rodgers, 2 M. C. C. 85	820	Rutten Ram, 2 W. R. 63	676
Rodgers v. Rodgers, 3 Hag. 57	1685	R. v. Hammar Smith, (1917) 1 K. 13	634
Rogi, (1881) A. W. N. 112	1619	R. v. Ballard, 12 Cr. A. R. 1	1397
Rogier and Another, 1 B. & C. 272	861	R. v. Biggins, 26 J. P. 437	147
Rohimuddin, 5 C. 31	1006, 1008, 1009	R. v. Burton, Dears C. C. 283	1019
Rolet v. R. L. R. 1 Pr. C. Ca. 198	124	R. v. C. oper, 3 D. & R. 318	1206
Romesh Chandra Banerji, 41 C. 350	1491	R. v. Crowhurts, 1 C. & K. 370	1276
Romesh Chunder Sanyal v. Hira Mondal		R. v. Elmstone, 7 B. H. C. R. (Cr.) 89	124
17 C. 852	164	R. v. Evans, 12 Cr. A. R. 8, 85 L. J. (K.B.) 1186	1397
Ronki, (1915) P. W. R. 10, 27 I. C. 846	1322	R. v. Gleed, 12 Cr. A. R. 32	1399
Roop Lall Singh, 10 W. R. 39	205	R. v. Jameson, (1896) 2 Q. B. 425 (430)	127
Roopnarain Dutt, 18 W. R. 38	865	R. v. Leeds & Liverpool Navigation Co., 7 A. & E. 685	161
Roora, (1870) P. R. No. 16 F. B.	728	R. v. Norcott, (1917) 1 K. B. 347	1178
Roper v. Knott, (1898) 1 & B. 868	197

PAGE

R. v. Pemoleton, 43 L. J. M. C. 91	..	772
R. v. Salmon, 6 Q. B. D. 79	..	1052
R. v. St. Mary Abbots, (1891) 1 Q. B. 378	..	148
R. v. Warson, (1916) 2 K. B. 385	..	1399
Ryalls v. Leader, L. R. 1 Ex. 296	..	1737
Ryam, 2 Cox. 115	123, 1232
Ryalls v. Leader, L. R. 1 Ex. 296	..	1730
Rasa Hassan (1904) A. W. N. 9	..	1252

S

Sabalsang, 4 Bom. L. R. 936	..	170
Sabapati, 11 M. 411	1591, 1594, 1603
Sabapathy, 1 Weir 549	..	167
Sabapathy Pillai, 11 M. 411	..	615
Sabba Chand, (1881) P. R. No. 39	..
4 M. H. C. (App.) 13	..	1416
Sabed Ali, 11 B. L. R. 347, F. B.	186, 189, 190, 191
Sahed Ali, 40 C. 849	..	621
Sabid Ali, 20 W. R. 5 (8,9) F. B. 518, 519, 520	..
Sabir, 22 C. 276	504, 507, 511
Sabir Husain, 19 A. L. J. 487, 63 I. C.	157	512, 1102
Sachee, 7 W. R. 76	364, 366, 375, 389
Sada, (1893) B. U. C. 674	..	597
Sadamund Das, 2 W. R. 29	569, 1159, 1456, 1460
Sadagopa v. Krishnamoorthi 30 M. 185	P. C.	1148
Sada Ram, 18 A. L. J. 408, 58 I. C. 253,	21 Cr. L. J. 749	1424, 1425
Sadasib, 18 C. W. N. 1150, 26 I. C. 168	..	1168
Sada Singh, (1930) L. 338	..	1015
Sadashiv v. Atmaram, 18 B. 205	1700, 1701
Sadasiva Pillai, 1 Weir 26	136, 137
Sada Shev Singh, (1889) P. R. No. 58	..	599
Sadasiv Singh, 1 Pat. L. W. 135 ; 39	I. C. 475	1259
Sadbury and Others, 1 Lord Rayne, 484	..	497
Sad grove, v. Hole, (1901) 2 K. B. 1	..	1738
Sadho, 152 I. C. (A.) 108	..	511
Sadholal, 1 Pat. L. J. 391, 34 I. C. 992	17 Cr. L. J. 272	184, 1442
Sadoo Churn Pal, 4 W. R. 13	..	1434
Sadu, (1884) B. P. J. 207	..	419
Sadu Ram, 18 A. L. J. 408, 58 I. C. 253,	21 Cr. L. J. 749	1424
Sadhu Singh, (1933) L. 865	..	189
Safatulla, 4 C. 815	..	1044
Safdar Raza, 49 C. 905	..	1207
Sagan, (1878) B. U. C. 366	..	627
Sagar Dutta, 1 B. L. R. 41	..	233
Sagar Singh, 43 I. C. (C.) 440	..	567
Sagawa, 23 A. 497	239, 240
Saha Rae, 3 C. 623	..	1100
Sahar Ali Kunnizuddin, 58 C. 897	..	1192
Sadasiv Singh, 1 Pat. L. W. 135	..	1259
Sadheo Bai, 40 A. 577	..	588
Saheblall Reetlall, (1863) 1 R. J. P. J.	171	1060, 1061
Saheb Ali, 57 I. C. (C.) 826	..	1513
Sahib Ditta, (1885) P. R. No. 20	..	403
Saheblall, (1863) R. J. P. J. (C.) 174	..	1010
Saheb Ali, 40 C. 849	..	1107
Sahee Singh, (1906) A. W. N. 93	..	251
Sahib, (1900) P. R. No. 27	995, 1039
Sahiram, 5 C. W. N. 254	..	732
Sahibulla, 51 C. 31	..	370, 371
Sahoo, 11 W. R. 19	..	276

PAGE

Sahroe, 8 W. R. 31	243, 246, 249
Sahz Ali, (1877) P. R. No. 2	.. 1533
Saib Das, 1913 P. L. R. 335	.. 1272
Said Ahmed, 25 A. L. J. 515, (1927) A. 536	1555
Said Ali, (1890) P. R. No. 8	995, 1039
Saidaram, 146 I. C. (L.) 228	.. 1030
Saidiono, 9 S. L. R. 99, 30 I. C. 998	1032, 1033
Saif Ali, (1898) P. R. No. 17 F. B.	.. 205
Saifuddin, (1874) P. R. No. 16	1555, 1556, 1558
Saifulla, (1882) P. R. No. 15	512, 1046
Saintiff, 6 Mad. 225	.. 890
Saiyid Mohiduddin, 4 Pat. 488	.. 1383
Sajal Lall, 60 I. C. (Pat.) 274, 22 Cr. L. J. 274	.. 1600
Sajawal, 137 I. C. (L.) 131	.. 680
Sakaram, (1870) B. U. C. 35	.. 894
Sakharam, (1895) B. U. C. 775	762, 1205
Sakharam, (1935) B. 233	.. 621
Sakharam, 14 B. 564	.. 1026
Sakharam, (1889) B. U. C. 449	.. 1416
Sakharam Ganu, 8 Bom. L. R. 120	.. 1205
Sakharam Khandu, 2 Bom. L. R. 325	1325, 1326
Sakhawat, 18 A. L. J. 1161, 59 I. C. 198	671
Sakhi Bai, 49 I. C. (Pat.) 917	.. 680
Sakya, 5 B. H. C. R. 36	257, 259
Salamut Ali, 23 W. R. 59	.. 1534
Salar Baksh, (1901) P. R. No. 27	.. 228
Salar Mannaje v. Herejee Row, 1 Weir 614	.. 1748
Saleh Mahomed, 10 S. L. R. 159, 38 I. C. 991	491, 1792
Salford, (1869) 1 O'M. & H. 141	491, 577
Salig Ram, (1890) A. W. N. 171	.. 596
Salikram, 28 A. 312	800, 875
Salik Ram (1897) P. R. No. 16	.. 596
Salik, 1 A. 527	728, 730, 732, 735
Salik Roy, 6 C. 582	205, 875
Salimullah, 39 C. 487	.. 134
Salisbury, (1880) 3 O'M. & H. 132	.. 574
Salmon, R. & R. 26	1052, 1503, 1730
Salomen v. Salomen & Co., (1897) A. C. 22	.. 117
Salvador, L. R. 3 P. C. 218	.. 480
Salt, 3 F. & F. 834	1599, 1600
Salter v. Browne, Cro. Car. 436	.. 1711
Samachari, 45 M. L. J. 728	.. 1397
Samand Singh, (1919) P. R. No. 3, 49 I. C. 349	.. 1031
Samba Pillai, (1916) 2 M. W. N. 213, 35 I. C. 823	501, 514
Samban, 1 Weir 533	1534, 1540
Sambhu, 1 B. 347	263, 1674
Sambhu Singh, 1 Oudh 33	.. 403
Samers v. House, Holt 39	.. 1711
Sami, 13 M. 426	.. 1034
Samia Kaundan, 1 M. 173	1197, 1198
Saminoda, (1888) P. R. No. 22	.. 1389
Saminadha Pillai, 19 M. 464	.. 1145
Saminada Pillai, (1882) 1 Weir 339	866
Saminatha, 14 M. 400	701, 749, 753, 1389
Samiraddin, 18 W. R. 25	1148, 1413
Sampat, 15 A. L. J. 566	.. 369
Samsuddin, 2 Bom. L. R. 752	.. 1267
Samuel Aaron, (1931) M. 440	.. 538
Samuel v. Payne, 1 Dougl. 359	.. 291
Samundar, 91 I. C. (L.) 240	.. 1201

	PAGE		PAGE
Samvathi, 20 Bom. L. R. 106, 44 I. C. 463	1148	Sarju Prasad, 1 O. L. J. 360 : 25 I. C. (O.) 625	398, 399
Sanai Sardar v. Bukhetar, 25 W. R. 46	1482	Sarju Sahan, 7 A. L. J. 1150, 7 I. C. 50	707
Sanalal, 37 B. 658	749, 750, 753, 871	Sarroopchander Paul, 12 W. R. 25	534, 535, 536
Sanda, (1906) 4 L. B. R. 65	229	Sarrun (Bishop of) v. Nash, Buller's N. P. 9	1712
Sandagar, (1869) P. R. No. 23	1468	Sarsarsingh (1934) A. 711	168
Sanders Clark v. Grosvenor Mansions Co., (1900) 2 Ch. 373	867	Sarwan, (1882) P. R. No. 41	1553
Sandford v. Beal, (1895) 65 L. J. (Q. B.) 74	265	Sarwan Singh, 5 L. L. J. 329, 73 I. C. 691, (1923) (L.) 223	759
Sandhi v. Kanhya, (1876) P. R. No. 14	282	Sashi Bhusan, 15 A. 210	1482
Sangam Lal, 15 A. 129	179	Sashi Bushan Chukerabuty, 4 C. 623	597, 599
Sangaram, 143 I. C. (O.) 152	825	Sasi Kumar Bose, 7 C. W. N. 710	861
Sangridge, 35 A. 29	1732	Satanji Koer, 11 C. L. J. 10, 95 I. C. 311	760
San Hla, (1889) S. J. L. B. 475	243	Satawa, (1891) B. U. C. 557	1369
San Hla, (1900) 1 U. B. R. (1897-1901) 280	871	Satish Chandra v. Ram Doyal, 48 C. 388 F. B.	114; 1745
Sanjiv Ratnappa, 56 B. 488	173	Satish Chandra v. Ramdyal, 24 C. W. N. 982, F. B.	1744, 1753
Sami, 1897 B. U. C. 893	1270	Satish Chandra v. Jadu Nandan, 3 C. W. N. 741	154, 791
Sankaran, 6 M. 381	1702, 1719, 1764, 1776	Satish Chandra Rai v. Jadu Nundun, 26 C. 748	282
Sankaralinga Kone, 23 M. 544	606, 654	Satnarayan Pande, 55 A. 263	1047
Sankar Lal, (1887) A. W. N. 101	1476	Satrughan, 50 I. C. (Pat.) 337	188
Sankara Narayana, 4 L. W. 53, 35 I. C. 488	1397	Sattomayar V. Debarros L. R. 5 P. 94	1659, 1660, 1661
Sankaran Servai, 113 I. C. (M.) 455	734	Satyabodha, 24 Bom. L. R. 928, 69 I. C. 84	801
Sano Khan, 85 I. C. 818, (1925) A. 472	733	Satya charam De 35 C. W. N. 1002	640
Santa Cruz, (1915) M. W. N. 543, 30 I. C. 154	793	Satya Deva, 5 Pat. L. W. 109, 46 I. C. 525	1107
Sant Dass, (1891) Ind. Ry. Cas.	1050	Satyapureddi, 40 M. L. J. 194 P. C., 59 I. C. 926 P. C.	1036
Santa Singh, (1899) P. R. No. 3	657, 673, 677	Satyendranath Majundar, 34 C. W. N. 1095	468
Santa Singh, 146 I. C. (L.) 222	790	Satya Narain Bakshi, (1927) C. 678	478
Santa Singh, (1933) L. 660	432	Satyanarayana, 54 M. 1025	253, 507, 1618
Santokshi, 12 P. 241	1015, 1030, 1596	Satya Ranjan (1929) C. 309	532
Santok Singh, (1898) A. W. N. 186	214, 1659	Satya Ranjan, 56 C. 1085	468
Sant Ram v. Diwan Chand, 75 I. C. (O.) 289	617	Saunders, Plowd. 475	1013
Santu, (1868) 5 B. H. C. R. 45	237	Saunders, 8 C. & P. 265	347, 1180, 1234, 1654
Sanwar, 10 S. L. R. 171, 39 I. C. 318	433	Saunders v. Mills, 6 Bing. 213	1704
Sanja, 1889, 1 S. J. L. B. 463	1008	Saunders v. Swansea Finance Co., (1905) 21 T. L. R. 317	1154
Sarabaiya, 1 Weir 124	289, 284	Savage, 13 Cox. 178	1659, 1683
Sarabdawn Singh, 17 O. C. 21, 23 I. C. (O.) 134	501, 900	Savage v. Robbery, 15 Mod. 398	1711
Sarada Prasad Chatterjee, 32 C. 180	727	Savaldas, (1888) B. U. C. 418	1335
Sanada Saran, 21 A. L. J.	1437	Savani Virabayi, (1899) 1 Weir 111	606
Saraf Din, 35 P. L. R. 588	992	Savarajulu, 47 I. C. 445	192
Sareribai (1933) N. 303	1029	Savarkar, 13 Bom. L. R. 296	134
Saran, 99 I. C. 98, (1924) S. 104	1210	Savarkar, 5 I. C. (B.) 854	397, 399
Sarap Hobson's Case, 1 Lewin, C. C. 261	1016	Savi, (1897) B. U. C. 893	1270
Sarat Chandra Ghose, 32 C. 247	921	Savile v. Jardine, 2 H. Bl. 531	1711
Sarat Chandra v. Yakub, 2, C. W. N. 736	1483	Sayad Abdul, 28 Bom. L. R. 484, 95 I. C. 541, (1926) B. 305	257
Sarat Chanrda Shah Chowdry, 7 C. W. N. 301	536	Scheleisnger, 10 Q. B. 670	667, 669
Sarvana, 8 M. L. T. 222, 7 I. C. (M.) 855	1485	Schessinger, 17 L. J. (M. C.) 29	659
Sarbeswar, 39 C. L. J. 33, (1924) C. 501	629	Schmidt, 35 L. J. M. C. 94	1393
Sardaran, 146 I. C. (L.) 228	1575	Schofield, (1891) 2 Q. B. 428	742
Sardar Ahmad, (1915) P. L. R. 185, 28 I. C. 154	1241	Scholes v. Brook, 63 L. T. (N.S.) 835	888
Sardar Dayal Singh, (1891) P. R. No. 8	417, 761, 1761	Schuringe v. Dowell, 2 F. & F. 845	890
Sardar Khan, 41 B. 27	1032, 1033, 1042	Schwabe v. Clift, (1846) L. T. 342	1072
Sardar Khan, (1887) P. R. No. 5	504, 1008	Schwinge v. Dowell, 2 F. & F. 845	890
Sardar Pathoo, 1 N. W. P. C. R. C. 38	586	Scofield, (1784) Cal. 397 (403)	1785
Sardar Pathu, 1 B. H. C. R. 38	591	Scott, 3 Q. B. 535	900
Sardharilal, (1883) 1 Weir 217	801	Scott and another, 3 Burr., 1262	497
Sardino, 9 S. L. R. 99, 30 I. C. 998	987	Scott v. Brown, (1892) 2 Q. B. 724	444
Sarju, 32 I. C. (A.) 667	1273, 1260, 1352	Scott v. Hillir, Lane 98	1711
Sarju Mallah, 17 A. L. J. 145, 49 I. C. 778 20 Cr. L. J. 218	1103, 1348	Scott v. Sampson, 8 Q. B. D. 491	1758
Sarju Prasad, 9 O. L. J. 421, 71 I. C. 58, 24 Cr. L. J. 10, (1922) O. 280	1371

	PAGE		PAGE
Scully, 1 C. & P. 319 ..	389	Shah Muhammad, (1886) P. R. No. 19 ..	599
Seaman v. Burley, (1886) 2 Q. B. 344 ..	742	Shahrah, (1919) P. R. No. 19, 51 ..	1118
Searing, R. & R. 250 ..	1256	I. C. 670 ..	1118
Searle, 1 M. & Rob. 75 ..	325	Shahu, 11 S. L. R. 76, 42 I. C. 731, ..	1043, 1235
Seat Ali, 3 Pat., L. W. 356, 41 I. C. 142 ..	317, 1034	18 Cr. L. J. 1003 ..	695
Secor v. Harris, 18 Barb. 425 ..	1712	Shahzad Khan, (1933) Pat. 513 ..	1255
Secretary of State v. Balwant, 28 B. 105 ..	117	Shaikh Adam, 10 B. 123 ..	1431
Secretary of State v. Kamachee, 7 M. I. ..	284, 285	Shaik Basit, (1883) 1 Weir 479 ..	1030
A. 476 ..	121	Shafi Khan. 8 Pat. 181 ..	243
Secretary of State v. Moment, 17 ..	1269	Shaikh, Maneah, 11 W. R. 38 ..	1481
C. W. N. 169 ..	1019	Shakur Mahomed v. Chunder Mohan ..	478
Seda, 103 I. C. (L.) 107 ..	1117	Sha, 21 W. R. 38 ..	1473
Sedhu, (1882) A. W. N. 160 ..	1393	Sham Das (1930) L. 874 ..	1591
Sedrasul, (1916) P. R. No. 27 ..	1630, 1631	Shama (1874) B. U. C. 88 ..	743
Seeb Churn, 11 W. R. 12 ..	985	Shama Charan, 15 I. C. (A.) 1004 ..	726
Seena Haniff & Co., v. Lipton Ltd., 7 ..	1626, 1620	Shama Churn Bose v. Bhola Nath ..	609
Bur L. T. 116, 23 I. C. 689 ..	1027	Dutt, 6 W. R. (Cir. Ref.) 9 ..	1591, 1612
Seikh Choolye, 4 W. R. 35, ..	1376	Shama Charan Das v. Kasi Naik, ..	245, 1215
Sexio v. Provezende, L. R. 1 Ch. 192 ..	288	23 C. 971 ..	1235
Segiamuthu, 93 I. C. 42, (1926) M. 638 ..	1515, 1553	Shama Churn Roy, 8 W. R. 27 ..	1514
Selas Moses, 17 Bom. L. R. 670 ..	943	Shama Churn Sen, Cal. unrep. ..	914, 915
Self, 1 East, P. C. 226, 227 ..	985	Shama Sheikh, 8 W. R. 35 ..	256
Sellamuthu v. Pallamuthu, 35 M. 186 ..	619	Shambhu Khatri, 3 Pat. 410 ..	450
Selvarajulu Naicker, (1889) 1 Weir 259 ..	1632	Shambhunath v. Ram Kawal, 13 ..	611, 732, 1063
Semat Kala, 148 I. C. (B.) 1004 ..	1387	C. L. R. 212 ..	1144
Semayne's Case, 1 S. L. C. 76 ..	1180	Shambu Dial, (1904) P. R. No. 45 ..	913
Semble v. Cotton, L. J. 32 Ch. D. 309 ..	1498, 1055	Shamjee, 1 C. L. R. 481 ..	1535
(118) ..	191	Sham Khan, (1890) P. R. No. 16 ..	376, 1010
Semenza v. Brinsley, 18 C. B. N. S. 467 ..	1041	Shamlall, 14 C. 707, F. B. ..	348
Sena Shetty, (1190) 1 Weir 347 ..	500, 944	Sham Lal Lohan, 5 Pat. L. W. 114, ..	420
Senior, 1 Moo C. C. 346 ..	1031	46 I. C. 409, 19 Cr. L. J. 729 ..	1226, 1227
Senier, (1899) 11 Q. B. 283 ..	792	Shamlay, 3 Nag. L. R. 90 ..	1220
Sengoda, 19 M. L. T. 103 ; 30 I. C. 438 ..	1409	Sham Ma (1897) I U. B. R. 262 ..	1285
Sengodan, 15 I. C. (M.) 860 ..	1328	Shamsher Khan, (1896) A. W. N. 170 ..	1008
Sennimala, (1919) M. W. N. 695, 49 I. C. ..	1708	Shamsher Khan, 6 C. 154 ..	1181, 1237, 1603, 1788
656 ..	1332	Shamsul Huq, 33 C. L. T. 379, 64 ..	1571, 1581
Sennimalai, 97 I. C. (M.) 952 ..	989	I. C. 369 ..	130
Sen Raya Govindan, 3 M. L. T. 30, 7 Cr. ..	595	Sham Shundar, 45 B. 529 ..	1050
L. J. 30 ..	673	Shamsunderbai, 45 B. 529 ..	1300
Senta, 28 A. 404, (1899) A. W. N. 186 ..	735, 736	Shan bury, 2 Cox. 272 ..	1479
Senthinathiyar v. Gnanamuthu, (1884) ..	1373	Shan Gyi, (1885) 1 S. J. L. B. 371 ..	729
1 Weir 594 ..	146	Shankar, 5 B. 403 ..	932
Seolu Malla, 52 C. 595 ..	278	Shanker, 4 B. 657 ..	631
Serene, 16 Cox. 311 ..	547, 556	Shankar, 6 C. 307 ..	1008
Seshyya, 13 M. 24 ..	648	Shankar Balkishna, 32 C. 73 ..	1399
Seshyya, (1925) M. 1157 ..	361	Shankar Bhagvot, 2 B. H. C. R. 394 ..	1752
Sessions Judge v. Sivan Chetty, 32 M. ..	134	Shankar Lal, (1817) A. W. N. 101 ..	1610
258 F. B. ..	1399, 1400	Shankar Rao v. Sheik Daud, 4 ..	1441, 1792
Set Narain Tewari, 32 C. 1085 ..	1153	Nag. L. R. 140 ..	590, 592, 593
Seth v. Reading, 17 Q. B. D. 131 ..	1728	Shanmuga v. Kumarswamy, 48 M. 661 ..	1441
Setan, 7 T. R. 373 ..	642	Shanthearajah, 4 My. L. J. 29 ..	1372
Setual Chandra Bagchee, 3 W. R. 69 ..	1536	Shan Ya, (1889) 1 S. J. L. B. 463 ..	1526
Sewa Bhogata, 14 B. L. R. 294, F. B. ..	1320, 1412	Sharafat, 57 I. C. 913, 21 Cr. L. J. ..	1448
Sewal Seth, (1933) Pat. 144 ..	643	673 ..	1448
Seward v. Vera 10 App. Cas. 68 ..	1221	Sharbe Khan, 10 C. W. N. 518 ..	687
Sew Dhar, 40 C. 990 ..	995	Sher Alam, 35 Bom. L. R. 1602 ..	1514
Sewell v. National Telephone Co., (1907) ..		Shiamji, 65 I. C. (N.) 994, 23 Cr. ..	315
1 K. B. 557 ..		L. J. 212 ..	259
Seymour v. Butterworth, 3 F. & F. 372 ..		Shiam Lal, 25 I. C. (A.) 347 ..
Shabuckram, 2 W. R. 32 ..		Shiamji, 65 I. C. (N.) 694, 23 Cr. ..
Shadi Ram, 50 I. C. (L.) 834, 20 Cr. ..		L. J. 210, (1922) N. 40 ..
L. J. 354 ..		Shiam Sundar, 6 Luck 435 ..
Shahabut Sheikh, 13 W. R. 42 ..		Shib Charan, 10 L. 253 (258) ..
Shahdad Khan, 6 L. 558 ..		Shib Das, (1913) P. L. R. 335, 21 I. C. ..
Shahebara, 27 Bom. L. R. 1022, 89 I. C. ..		899 ..
1050 ..		Shid Das, (1909) P. W. R. 13; 4I. C. ..
Shahib, (1900) P. R. No. 27 ..		978 ..
		Shib Dyal, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 188 ..
		Shib Nath Banerjee, 24 W. R. 51 ..
		Shibokoeri 10 C. W. N. 725 ..
		Shiboo Mundal, 3 W. R. 38 ..

TABLE OF CASES CITED (VOLS. I &amp; II)

V
XC

PAGE

PAGE

Shib Pershad Chuckerbutty 17 W. R. 38	591, 594	Sheikh Arif, 35 C. 437	1493, 1253
Shib Prasad Pandah, 4 C. 124	1757	Sheikh Boodhoo, 8 W. R. 38	995
Shib Prasad, 19 W. R. 69	679	Sheikh Choollye, 4 W. R. 35	985, 1015, 1026
Shicke, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 158	1254, 1255	Sheik Dullo v. Zainab Bebee, 16 W. R. 17	1270
Shidilingappa, (1896) B. U. C. 844	408	Sheikh Husan, (1887) B. U. C. 433, (866)	1262, 1263
Shaipat Ali, 10 W. R. 61	1596	Sheikh Jakir, 22 W. R. 39	258
Shifait Ali, 2 B. L. R. (A. Cr.) 12	182	Sheikh Moneea, 11 W. R. 38	1269
Shikbharan, 18 Bom L. R. 682, 35 I. C. 815	913	Sheikh Mudun, 1 W. R. 27	246
Shimbha, 21 A. L. J. 391	385	Sheikh Mungli, (1871) P. R. No. 5	412
Shimonto Kopal, 7 W. R. 31	237	Sheikh Mustafa, 1 W. R. 19	327
Shiply, 4 Dong. 165	751	Sheikh Naseer, 33 C. 122	1470
Sbeire v. King. Yelv. 32	1712	Sheikh Oozeer, 6 W. R. 17	1213
Shistidhaur, 9 B. L. R. (App.) 19	1512	Sheikh Raju, 9 B. 173	1475
Shiv v. Gowda, 3 Bom. L. R. 188	1710	Sheikh Ramzan, 15 W. R. 53	260
Shiva Koti Swami, (1885) 1 Weir 253	938	Sheikh Sahab, (1886) B. U. C. 1280	1523
Shivbharan, 18 Bom. L. R. 682, 35 I. C. 815	812, 912	Sheikh Samir v. Sazidar, 53 C. 824	731
Shivdas Onkar, 15 Bom, L. R. 315, 19 I. C. 507	627, 629	Shenton v. Smith, (1895) A. C. 229	285
Shivram, 15 B. 702	160	Sheo Balak, 30 W. N. 411, 95 I. C. (B.) 283, (1926) O. 367	192, 1030
Shivram, (1875) B. U. C. 98	1253, 1411	Sheo Balack, 59 I. C. 369	611
Shivya, 1 B. 220	681	Sheo Balat Prasad 108 I. C. (N) 442	442
Shonaulla, 5 W. R. 44	228	Sheobans Singh 15 A. L. J. 850, 42 I. C. 997	510, 512
Shottis Iron Co. v. Ingnes, 7 A. P. B. Cas. (P.) 528	856	Sheobux, 3 N. W. P. H. C. R. 150, 820, 821, 823, 839,	1393
Seerihari v. Lal Khan, 5 C. W. N. 250	506	Sheo Charam, 45 A. 885	167, 174, 1568 1602
Shrikant, 2 A. L. J. 44	1586	Sheo Dayal, 7 A. 459	504
Shripad Chandavarkar, 52 B. 181	759	Sheo Dayal, 55 A. 689	400
Shriramulu Naidu, 52 M. 532	1897	Sheo Dial Mal, 16 A. 389	115
Shuka, 43 I. C. (C.) 827,	191	Sheodin, 10 A. 115	328
Shumbhoo Nath Panday, 1 W. R. 26	1167	Sheodin, (1901) A. W. N. 132
Shumsodeen, (1868) P. R. No. 26	808, 1167	Sheodurshan Das, 3 N. W. P. H. C. R. 17	1424
Shumeerudeen, 2 W. R. 40	402, 420	Sheo Bashi, (1930) Pat. 164	424
Shunker, 6 C. 307	130	Sheo Gholam, 24 W. R. 67	358, 1105 1108,
Shunker, 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. 312	246	Sheo Jangal Prasad, 50 A. 666	586
Shunker v. Burma Mahto, 23 W. R. 25	364, 375, 500, 501	Sheo Lal, 26 A. 387	877
Shunker Gope, 6 C. 307	1411	Sheomeshur Rai, (1888) A. W. N. 97	1250
Sharif (1933) L. 315	189	Sheonandan, 31 I. C. (A.) 647, 16 Cr. L. J. 791	1271, 1279, 1792
Sharif, 11 I. C. (R.) 993	1039	Sheo Nath, 97 I. C. (L.) 804, 87 Cr. L. J. 1172	516
Sharif Ahmed v. Qubul Singh, 43 A. 497	359	Sheo Nath, (1914) P. L. R. 34; 24 I. C. 844	1147
Sharp, 15 Tex. App. 171	1234	Sheo Prasad, 94 I. C. 353, (1926) Pat. 267	1788
Sharpa, (1915) P. R. Cr. 9, 29 I. C. 669	756, 758	Sheo Pratap Singh (1930) A. 820	1168
Sharpless, 4 T. R. 777	1510	Sheo Progas v. Bhup Narain, 22 C. 759	154
Sharrod v. London and North Western Ry. Co., 4 Ex. 580 (586)	299	Sheoram, 2 A. W. N. 237	1434
Sharwani, 55 I. C. (A.) 560	532	Sheo Sharan v. Mhd. Fazle, 10 W. R. 20	290
Sharwn, 1 East P. C. C. 8	1317	Sheo Saran Sahai, 10 W. R. 20	1144
Shasti Churn Napit, 8 C. 331	201, 778, 781, 784, 789, 790	Sheo Sharan, 9 C. 877	256
Shatlis Iron Co. v. Ingles, 7 App. Cas. at p. 528	856	Sheo Surun v. Mhd. Fazil, 10 W. R. 20	211, 290
Shava, 16 B. 359	648, 649	Shepherd, 1 L. & C. 147	1056, 1578
Shaw, 6 C. & P. 372	384	Shepherd, L. R. 1, C. C. R. 118	1487
Shea, 7 Cox. 147	1343	Shepherd v. Trustee of the Port of Bombay, 1 B. 477	1700, 1701
Shearwood, 2 Tay & Bell. 71	282, 791	Shephard v. Whitaker, L. R. 10 C. P. 502	1701
Thebbeare (Dr.) 3 T. R. 430	465	Sheppard, R. & R. 169	1578
Sheik Abdul Rahaman, 14 B. 227	208	Sher, 5 L. L. J. 337	1008, 1207
Sheikh Abdulla, 137 I. C. (C) 133	730	Shera, (1913) P. W. R. 14, 19 I. C. 196	1034, 1063
Sheikh Bazu, 8 W. R. 47 (51)	512	Shera, (1879) P. R. No. 35	1280
Sheik Beari, 10 M. 232	205, 673, 730, 732, 733, 979
Sheikh Ahmed, 21 M. L. J. 439, 10 I. C. 107	1154
Sheikh Alimuddin, 10 C. W. N. 982	1673, 1677, 1679

	PAGE		PAGE
Shera, (1868) P. R. No. 18	1331	Simpson v. Downs, 16 L. T.	391
Shera (1866) 117	1323	Simpson v. Yeend, (1869) L. R. 4 Q. B.	1739
Sher Alam, 101 I. C. (L.) 191	1009	262	574
Sher Alam Khan (1933) B. 494	184	Simson's Case, 2 East P. C. C. 16	1313
Sher Ali, (1878) P. R. No. 10	403, 405	Sinclair, 13 Cox. 28	1093, 1094
Sher Baz, (1880) P. R. No. 1	1003	Sinclair Broughton, 9 C. 341 P. C.	272
Shergold v. Hokoway; 2 Str. 1002	1159	Singaraju, 26 M. 464	1730
Sherif Saib v. Usuabibi, 6 M. H. C. R. (Civ.) 452	1675	Singer Co. v. Kimball, 11 Court of Sess. Cas. (3rd Ser.) 269	1627
Sher Khan, 5 L. L. J. 124, (1923) L. 59	1029	Singer Manufacturing Co. v. Loog, 11 Ch. D. 656	1627, 1632
Sherlock, 35 L. J. M. C. 92	634	Singer Manufacturing Co. v. Wilson, 2 Ch. D. 434	1621
Sher Muhammad, (1887) P. R. No. 20	598	Singhara, (1903) P. L. R. 613	1445
Sherras v. De Rutzen, (1895) 1 Q. B. 918	64, 171	Singoravelu, 14 I. C. (M.) 203	417
Sherrif, 2 C. & P. 427	820	Singhleton, 29 C. W. N. 260, 86 I. C. 38, (1925) C. 501	1374
Sherood v. London and North Western Ry., Co., 4 Ex. 580	299	Singleton v. Ellison, (1895) 1. Q. B. 607.	861
Sher Singh, (1883) P. R. No. 14	1033, 1548, 1551, 1552	Sini Tevan, (1886) Weir 429	1274
Sher Singh, (1882) P. R. No. 58	597	Sinja Prasad v. Mohahir 11 C.W.N. 887	1625
Sher Singh, (1889) P. R. No. 5	599	Sinnadu Padivachi, 5 M. 22, 1 Weir 66.	783, 784
Sher Singh, (1910) P. R. No. 10; 5 I. C. 892	1750	Sinnaswami, 16 M. L. W. 326	512
Sheru, (1926) C. 232	331, 333	Sipahi, 20 A. L. J. 900	1032
Sher Singh, (1930) C. 463	1210	Sipahi Singh, 45 A. 130	1032
Sher Singh, 32 P. L. R. 537	1598	Siray (1929) L. 788,	1034
Sherwood, (1857) D. & D. 251	1422	Sir Charles Sedley, 1 Keli 620	865
Sheshaiyangar v. Raghunath, 5 M. H. C. R. 345	276	Sir Charles Sidley, 2 Str. 791	471
Shettapa, (1912) 14 Bom. L. R. 753	655	Sirdarkhan (1930) L. 54	614
Shettyast, 2 Bom. L. R. 1129	498	Sir George Shatton, 21 St. Tr. 567	462
Shonaulla, 5 W. R. 44, 228	1598	Sir H. Constable's Case, 5 Rep. 105 (C.).	125
Shunmugam Pillay, (1902) 1 Weir 140.	640	Sir John Friend's Case. 13 St. Tr. 61	453, 456
Shuroop Chunder Dass, 2 W.R. 65 (66).	181	Sir Richard Grahme, 12 St. Tr. 645	458
	835, 840	Sirsapa, 4 B. 15	607
Shuruffoodin, 13 W. R. 64	366, 381, 390	Siryan, (Mt.), (1916) P. L. R. 69, 34 I. C. 990	385
Shushali, (1907) 26 A. W. N. 308	1460	Sita. 18 B. 212	164, 1411, 1352, 1354
Shwecho, (1905) 3 L. B. R. 111	1030	Sita Ahir, 40 C. 168	591
Shwe Hla U, 11 L.B.R. 323, 67 I.C. 613.	1030	Sita Devi v. Gopal Saran Naryan Singh, 111 I.C. 762	1682
Shwe Hlaw, (1910) 10 Bur. L. R. 29	986, 1030, 1038	Sita Nath, 20 C. 478	239
Shwe Ein, (1905) 3 L. B. R. 122, 3 C. & P., I. L. J. 355	108	Sitaram, 5 C. P. L. R. 48	835
Shur Ein, 3 L. B. R. 122	990	Sitaram, 42 A. 204	1385
Shweno, 10 L. B. R. 117, 57 I. C. 918	190	Sita Ram Rai, 3 A. 181	420
Shyamacharan, 16 C. W. N. 549, 15 I. C. 1006	370, 787, 791	Sitaram Vithal, 11 B. 657	114
Shyamanand Das, 31 C. 690	642	Sit Nyeid, 8 I.C. (Bur.) 988,	369
Shyon Sheman & Co. v. Solaman, 4 R. 16	1640	Sittal Prasad, 42 A. 146	1192
Siddon, 1 Tyreo, 51	877	Situl Chander Bagchee, 3 W. R. 69	556
Siddhut, 26 A. 542	155	Sivakoti Swami, (1885) 1 Weir 253	937, 938, 940
Sikandar, (1915) P. R. No. 20, 31 I. C. 382	1113, 1116	Sivananla, 86 I. C. (M.) 850, (1926) M. 1072	173
Sikandar, (1918) P. R. No. 36	366	Sivanupandia, 38 M. 793	1469, 1471
Sikandur Bukhut, 3 N. W. P. H. C. R. 146	1219	Sivaratri (1895) 1 Weir (3rd Ed.) 329.	167
Sikandar Khan, (1887) A. W. N. 285	687	Siva Sundari, 39 C. 834	534, 535
Sikandar Khan v. Jammu, 5 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 53	1720	Skeet, 4 F. & F. 931	424
Silajit, 36 C. 865	501, 375	Skinner v. Orde, 14 M. I. A. 308 (324).	1671
Silver v. Benu, (1896) 12 T. L. R. 199	581	Skinner v. Skinner, 25 C. 537 (546) P.C.	1669
Simon's Case, East P. C. 731	1297, 1775	Slazanges Ltd. v. E. Gilles & Co. (1916) 33 T. L. R. 350	1717
Simmons v. Mitchall, 6 App. Cas. 156 (158)	1718	Sleep, 9 Cox. 559	1090
Simonin v. Mallac, 29 L. J. P. & M. 97. 1 660, 1661	1661	Sleep, 30 L. J. (M. C.) 170	263
Simonin v. Mallac, 2 S. W. & Tr. 67	1661	Slowman v. Dutton, 10 Bing. 402	1710
Simpson, Dears, C. C. 421	1309	Smith, (1905) 69 J. P. 51	1453, 1454
Simpson, 1 Lewin. C. C. 172	1055	Smith, R. & R. 417	1530
		Smith, 2 Stan. 704	865, 916
		Smith, 2 C. & P. 449	288, 1599, 1158
		Smith, 27 L. J. M. C. 225	182
		Smith, 4 Cox. 42	1297
		Smith, 4 C. & P. 411	1599
		Smith, 3 F. & F. 504	1566

	PAGE		PAGE
Smith, 4 W. R. 31, 4 W. R. Cr. L. 10 ..	1683	Southam v. Allen, L. Raym. 231 ..	1746
Smith, Dears, C. C. 494 ..	1390	Sotho Velan V. Rama Home, 56 M. 481 ..	247
Smith, D & B. 566 ..	1422	Southerton, 6 East R. 126 ..	1292, 1294, 1295
Smith, 1 Den C. C. 510 ..	1305	Southerton, 6 East B. 726 ..	1762
Smith v. Ashby, (1846) 52 Mass. 367 ..	477	Southey, (1865) 4 F. & F. 864 ..	324
Smith v. Crosker, (1889) 5 T. L. R. 441 ..	1702	South Hetton Coal Co. v North Eastern News Association, (1894) 1 Q. B. 133 ..	1717, 1729
Smith v. Great Western Railway, 3 App. Cas. 180 ..	161	South Indian Railway Co. v. Ram- krishn, 13 M. 34 ..	359
Smith v. Justices of Sierre Leone, 3 Moo. P. C. 361 (367, 368) ..	137	South Meath, (1892) 4 O'M. & H. 142 ..	576, 577
Smith v. Scott, 2 C. & K. 580 ..	1730	Southwork and Vauxhall Water Co. v. Hampton Urban District Council, (1898) 1 Q. B. 273 ..	161, 742
Smith v. Webb, 12 T. L. R. 450 ..	177	Sowaroo, (1866) P. R. No. 105 ..	104
Smithies, 5 C. & P. 332 ..	989	Spall v. Massey and Others, 2 Stark. 559 ..	1706
Snag v. Gray 1 Roll Abr. 57 ..	1712	Speight v. Gosney, 60 L. J. Q. B. 231 ..	1705
Snell, 2 Moo. & R. 44 ..	1090	Spencer, R. & R. 299 ..	1284
Snow, 1 Leach. 151 ..	1009	Speir, (1887) P. R. No. 49 ..	201
Snowby, 4 C. & P. 390 ..	1357	Spigurnal's Case, 1 Hale P. C. 26 ..	308
Soane v. Knight, Moo. & Mall. 74 ..	1736	Spiller, 5 C. & P. 333 ..	344, 1055
Soban Lal, 13 A. L. J. 1131, 31 I. C. (M.) 651, 16 Cr. L. J. 795 ..	1352	Spilling, 2 M. & Rob. 107 ..	344
Soban Lal, 31 I. C. (M.) 651 ..	1345	Spooner v. Juddov, 4 M. I. A. 353 (379) ..	275
Soban Ram, 3 L. L. J. 247, 67 I. C. 586 ..	938	Spriggs, 1 W. & R. ob. 367 ..	1580
Sobeel Mahee, 5 W. R. 32 ..	986	Sreeman Chunder v. Gopaul, 11 M. I. A. 28 ..	716
Sobeel Mohe, 5 W. R. 32 ..	970	Sreemunt, 2 W. R. 63 ..	246, 1393
Soborati 8 Pat 734 ..	730, 735	Sreenath Banerjee, 9 C. 321 ..	1147, 1163
Soboy Dome, 6 W. R. 2 ..	1215	Sreenath Ghosh, 10 W. R. 33 ..	593
Sobratl v. Jungli, 2 C. W. N. 245 ..	1690	Sreeramalu, 47 M. 61 ..	1102
Sogiamuthu, 93 I. C. 42, (1926) M. 638 ..	1027	Sri Churn, 20 C. 1017, F. B. ..	117
Sohan Lal, (1905) P. R. No. 50 ..	1284	Sri Churn, 14 C. 357 ..	256
Sohan Mundin, (1929) Pat, 529, ..	1470	Sri Churn Chungo, 22 C. 1017, F. B. 164, 1250, 1251 ..	1021
Sohan Singh, (1888) P. R. No. 32 ..	657, 1044, 1612	Sridhar Mana, 7 Bom. L. R. 640 ..	506, 507
Sohrab, 5 L. 67 ..	992	Srihari v. Lalkhan 5 C. W. N. 250 ..	1586
Sohrai Das, 9 Pat. 424 ..	1596	Srikant, 2 A. L. J. R. 444 ..	411
Sohun, 2 W. R. 59 ..	377, 375	Srilal, 46 C. 607 ..	541
Sojoin Kant Das (1930) C. 244 (F.B.) ..	474	Srilal, 17 A. 166 ..	237
Soks, 142 I. C. (c) 297 ..	1179	Srimanta, Kottal 7 W. R. 31 ..	1692, 1207
Sokhina Bibi, 7 C. 87 ..	730	Srimotee Poddee, 1 W. R. 45 ..	481
Solaimuthu, (1915) M. W. N. 272, 28 I. C. 999 ..	737, 738	Sri Nawas, 56 I. C. (8) 671 ..	585, 586, 587
Solomon' (1887) B. U. C. 354 ..	1652	Srinivasa Ayyangar, 4 M. 393 ..	1221, 1222, 1223
Soma, (1916) P. R. 17 (Cr.) ..	336, 347	Srinivasa v. Annasami 15 M. 323 ..	1258
Somanna, 15 M. 221 ..	625, 630	Srinivasalu, 44 M. L. J. 138, 71 I. C. 798 ..	167, 169, 1427, 1660, 1785
Somannah, (1883) 1 Weir 82 ..	591	Srinivasan, 25 M. 726 ..	883
Somasundaram, 6 M. L. T. 266, 3 I. C. 736 ..	1568, 572	Srinivassa Naik, (1882) 1 Weir 231 ..	1337
Somerville v. Hawkins, 10 C. B. 583 ..	1702, 1746	Sriram Venkatasami, 6 M. H. C. R. 120 ..	1487
Somiruddin, 24 W. R. 48 ..	1006, 1008	Srish Chandra, 17 A. L. J. 343, 50 I. C. 347, 20 Cr. L. J. 299 ..	1286, 1359
Sanai Sardar v. Bukhetar Sardar, 25 W. R. 46 ..	1481, 1482	Stainer, 39 L. J. M. C. 54 ..	1505
Sona Meah, 2 R. 47 ..	1379	Stallion, R. & M. C. C. 398 ..	1711
Sonoo, 10 W. R. 48 ..	185, 354	Stanhope v. Hopkins, 2 Lev. 214 ..	300
Sooke, 7 W. R. 36 ..	1196	Stanley v. Powell, (1891) 1 Q. B. 86 ..	1233
Sookut, 4 N. W. P. H. C. R. 62 ..	823	Stanton, 1 C. & K. 415 ..	1395
Sookmoy Ghose, 10 W. R. 23 ..	1566	Stanton, 7 C. & P. 431 ..	1017
Soonder Mohooree, 9 W. R. 2 ..	674	Stanton, 14 A. 521 (523) ..	1304, 1314
Soondur Putnaick, 3 W. R. 59 ..	663, 664	Staple's Case, 2 East, P. C. C. 16 ..	1711
Soogoor Basanno, 22 I. C. (M.) 768 ..	1116	Stapleton v. Frier. Cro. Fliz. 251 ..	1628
Sooraparaza, (1894) 1 Weir 62 ..	1769	Starey v. Chilworth Gunpowder Co., 24 Q. B. D. 90 ..	442
Soorut, 4 N. W. P. H. C. R. 62 ..	825	Starling, (1665) Sid. 174 ..	337
Soosai Kannu Chetti, (1897) Weir 126 ..	620	State v. Stickney, 53 Kan. 303 ..	335
Soosai Naidu, (1891) 1 Weir 579 ..	1757	State v. Williams, 75 M. C. 134 ..	1746
Soshi Bhushan, 15 A. 210 ..	157, 164, 167, 169, 616, 1445	Staurto v. Bell (1891) 2 Q. B. 341 (359) ..	1660
Soshi Bhushun Roy, 4 Shome 14 ..	168, 169	Steale v. Braddell, Mibo E. R. (Ir) 1 ..	1711
Soshi Bhusun v Gobind Chandra, 7 C. W. N. 663 ..	504	Stebbing v. Warrner, 11 Mod. 255 ..
Sottomaver v. De Barros, L. R. 5 P. 94. (100) ..	1659, 1660, 1661
South, 24 M. 70 ..	635

	PAGE		PAGE
Steel v. Brannan, L. R. 7 C. P. 261 ..	921, 923	Subbarayan, 9 M. 9	1683, 1657
Steuson, 12 C. x. 111 ..	448	Subba Reddi v. Munshoor Ali, 24 M. 81	1255
Stephen Abkyun v. Petley, (1903) 10 Bur. L. R. 84 ..	1619	Subbiah, 36 M. 472	1255, 1207
Stephens (1866) L. R. 1 Q. B. 702	271, 177, 855, 866, 867	Subbigadu, (1925) 49M. 1238	322
Stephens v. Myers, 4 C. & P. 349 ..	1171	Subdar Meeah, 3 W. R. 44	1385
Stepney, (1886) 4 O'M. & H. 55	577, 578	Subhan, (1878) P. R. No. 18	231, 232
Stepney, (1892) Day's El. Cases 117	572, 583	Subhan, 18 A. 395	947, 948
Sterne, (1843) Cited in Best Ed., p. 76	1016	Subhan and five others, (1893) Weir 452	1
Steven, 1 Cox. 83	1432, 1421	Subbayya, 12 M. 45	1338
Stevens v. Bilur, 25 Ch. D. 31 (34) ..	1387	Subi Sani, 8 B. H. C. R. 28	610, 654
Stevenson, 3 F. & F. 106	873, 874	Subjan v. Suriatalla, 12 W. R. 329	1583
Steward's Case, 2 East P. C. C. 16 ..	1763	Submin Oldham V. Peaks, 2 W. Bl. 959	282
Stewart, R. & R. 288	429, 1792	Subodhi v. Balarama, 26 M. 481	1711
St. George's (1896) 5 O. M. & H. 99	574, 575, 578, 581, 583	Subrahmania, 25 M. 61, P. C. 635, 453, 1933	1343
St. Helen's Smelting Co. Ltd. v. Tripping, 35 L. J. Q. B. 67 ..	885	Subramania, 32 M. 3	467
St. Helen's Smelting Co. v. Tripping, H. L. C. 642	854, 855, 860, 866	Subramania, 8 Bur. L. T. 79, 27 I. C. 218	677
St. John Long, 4 C. & P. 398	343	Subramania, 3 M. 261	710
Stiles v. Nokes, 7 East 493	1732, 1733, 1735	Subramania v. Venkata, 6 M. 254 (257)	950
Stiffles v. Dixit, 7 N. L. J. 124	1769	Subramanian, (1916) M. W. N. 327	258
Stoddart v. Sagar, (1895) 2 Q. B. 474 (480) ..	933	Subramanian, 20 M. 1	640
Stokes, 3 C. & K. 185	327	Subramanya, 3 M. H. C. R. 551	710, 700, 1383
Stone, 23 L. J. M. C. 14	670	Subramanya v. Soma Sundara, M. 428	150
Stone, East P. C. 99	456	Subhramanya Pillai, 3 M. H. C. R. 251	701
Stone v. Jackson, 16 C. B. 199	890	Subrao Sukhal, 3 Bom. L. R. 503	1489
Stone v. Stone, 1 Rob. Ec. Rep. 99 (101) ..	1686	Subroya v. Abdul Kadar, (1914) M. W. N. 351, 23 I. C. 275	1730
Stook Port Water Works v. Poter 7 H. N. 160	856	Subsookh, 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. 476	282
Storey, R. & R. 81	1433	Subudhi Rantho v. Balarama, 26 M. 481	1261
Strachan v. Universal Stock Exchange, (1895) 2 Q. B. 697	204	Sucha Singh, (1887) P. R. No. 571	280, 1523
Stratton, 1 Camp, 549-n	442	Saddis, 1 East 312	1004
Stratton, 21 St. Tr. 1046 (1224)	305, 442	Sudgrove v. Hob., (1901) 2 K. B. 1	1702
Strauss v. Francis, 4 F. & F. 114, 939	1735	Suffurudden, 1 L. J. (O. S.) 122	689
Streeter, (1900) 2 Q. B. 601	402	Sudlnindra, 60 C. 643	105
Strickland v. Hayes, (1896) 1 Q. B. 290	925, 926	Sujal Biswas, 22 C. W. N. 599	46
Stringer, 2 M. C. C. R. 261	1304, 1305, 1311	I. C. 515	639
Strond Case, (1874) 2 O'M. & H. 184	574	Sukar Budhia, (1870) B. U. C. 30	637
Srinivaselu Naicken 39 M. L. J. 409	512	Sukaroo Kaviraj, 14 C. 566	210, 342, 968, 1046
Stuart, (1894) 1 Q. B. 310	1744	Sukee Raur, 21 C. 97	1222, 1223, 1227
Stuart v. Bell, (1891) 2 Q. B. 341	1742, 1749	Sukha, 43 I. C. (C.) 827	191
Stubs v. Marsh, 15 L. T. 312	1701	Sukha, (1885) P. R. No. 40	1786
Stuckland V. Hayes, (1896) 1 Q. B. 290	925	Sukhai, 88 I. C. 844 (1925) A. 676	992
Sturges v. Bridgman, 11 Ch. D. 852 (865) ..	864	Sukha Singh, (1905) P. R. No. 24	1480
Suba, (1887) P. R. No. 40	981, 982, 990	Sukhdeo, 3 Pat. L. J. 389, 43 I. C. 785	569, 1701, 1767
Suba Ahir, (1927) Pat. 27	516	Sukheswar, 38 C. 789	791
Suban Sahib 52M. 358	255, 260	Sukhigadu, 40 M. L. J. 598 (1925) 49 M. 1238	322
Suba Singh, 37 I. C. (L.) 318	500	Sukhwaria, 76 I. C. (N.) 29	1030
Subappa, 15 Bom. L. R. 303, 12 I. C. 331	195, 1014	Suklal, (1889) B. U. C. 23	854
Subba Chand, (1881) P. R. No. 39	1416	Sulaiman Khan, (1881) P. R. No. 40	800
Subbah, (1928) L. 724	1594	Sulamat Russooa, 4 W. R. 17	1118
Subbaiyar v. Kristnaiyar, 1 M. 383	1715	Suleman, 96 I. C. 871, (1926) L. 600	1512
Subbalakshmi, (1900) 1 Weir 334	1088	Suleman (1933) No. 134	188
Subba Naik, 21 M. 249	211, 990, 1005	Sulla, (1884) P. R. No. 17	743
Subbanna, 1 M. H. C. R. 30	728, 730, 732, 735	Sulleman, (1927) S. 92, 98 I. C. 467	364
Subbappa Chenappa, 15 Bom. L. R. 303	196	Sullivan and Piggott, 11 Cox. 44	464, 416, 467, 471, 478
Subbaraya, (1890) 1 Weir 237	913	Sullivan v. India Manufacturing Co., 113 Mass. 396	337
Subbarayadu, (1898) 1 Weir 498	1488	Sultan, (1888) P. R. No. 3	743, 744, 1208, 1205
		Sultan v. Soomer, 7 B. & C. 416	1567

	PAGE		PAGE
Sultan v. Wellborne, 3 R. 577	613	Surja Prasad v. Mohabir 11 C. W. N.	1625
Sumanta Dhupi, 20 C. W. N. 166, 32	700, 701, 702	887	918
I. C. 132	164	Surjanarain Dass, 6 C. 88	1318
Sumeshar, (1888) A. W. N. 96	228	Surji Dass, (1888) 1 Weir 449	244, 498, 512, 1536
Sund, (1866) P. R. No. 63	1229	Surroop Chunder Paul, 12 W. R. 75	1536
Sundar, (1904) A. L. J. 559	375	Surwan Singh, 11 W. R. 11	13
Sundar Baksh Singh, (1918) Pat. 359,	640, 641, 944	Surya Narayana, 22 M. L. J. 333, 13	1033
48 I. C. 183	1693	I. C. 833	134
Sundaram Chetti, 6 M. 203, F. B.	1155	Susanah, 9 B. & C. 446	1610, 1611, 1562
Sundar Das, 4 M. H. C. R. 20	15	Sushlv Behere Roy 58 C. 1051, 5 B.	210, 51 I. C.
Sundareshmara, 50 M. 673	108	449	400, 403
Sundar Singh, (1912) P. L. R. 68, 15	1027	Sutton, 4 Burr. 2116	870
I. C. 318	1428	Sutton v. Jhonston. (1785) 1 T. R. 493	1748
Sundar Singh, 66 I. C. (P.) 187	864,	Sutteroa, 3 Bom. L. R. 503	1488
Sundar Singh, (1904) P. R. No. 25	1321, 1324, 1523	Sutherland, 14 W. R. 20	594
Sunder, (1919) P. L. R. 56, 49 I. C.	611	S tor, 10 Cox. 577	1422
20 Cr. L. J. 240	1321	Sutton v. Warren, 10 Mcte. Mass. R.	1660
Sundar. 52 I. C. (Pat.) 282	1712	451	1712
Sundar, 56 I. C. (A.) 771, 21 C. R. L. J.	154, 159	Sutty v. Alewin, 11 Mod. 221	204
515	1027	Svami Nayudu v. Subramania, 2 M. H.	134
Sunder Doshad v. Sital Mahti, 28 C.	1609	C. R. 158 (160)	613, 737
217	1702	Sven Seberg, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 264	1234
Sundar Majhi, 30 C. 1084	582	Swaminatha, (1912) M. W. N. 1125, 14	161
Sunder Singh, (1905) P. R. No. 3, 2 Cr.	464	I. C. 767	270, 298, 892, 1048, 1049, 1051, 1624
L. J. 37	582	Sweenie, 8 Cox. 223	412, 1688
Sundar Singh, 6 P. L. R. 62	1381	Swift v. Swift, 29 L. J. Ch. 121	1034
Sunder v. Andrews, 6 Barbour (N. Y.)	200	Swindall. 2 C. & R. 330	603
43	1088, 1089	1048, 1049, 1051, 1624	1568, 1603
Sunderland, (1896) 5 O'M. & H. 64,	1056	Syed Ahmed, (1866) P. R. No. 17	1710
65	664	Syed Batcha, (1913) M. W. N. 556, 18	1269
Sunderlal 42 A. 233 (F.B.)	711, 713	I. C. 675	1770, 1768, 1763
Sundram, 6 M. 203	1575	Syed Futteli Mahomed, 21 W. R. 30	1683
Sunker Gope, 6 C. 307	117	Syed Hussain, (1881) 1 Weir 357	1493
Sunku Seethaiah, 6 I. C. 774	423	Syed Hussain, 7 A. 403
Sunna, (1884) 1 Weir 334	1008, 1398	Syed Khader Sahib, (1930) M. W. N.
Sunt Lal, (1881) P. R. No. 41	1143	173, 204
Supadi, 27 Bom. 604, 87 I. C. 840	1271	Syed Mahomed, (1900) 1 Weir 622
Suppa Tevan, 29 M. 89	463	760, 18 Cr. L. J. 1016
Suppakon, 1 M. H. C. R. 450	1517	Syton Chrisna Mangaiya, (1885) 1 Weir
Surabai, (1933) N. 303,	172, 173, 175	510
Surab Sundari v. Uma Prosad, 31 C.	277
628	477
Surji, (1873) B. U. C. 76	1333
209, 600, 602, 611	463
635, 918	802
Surajnarain Dass, 6 C. 88	137
Suraj Kumar Sen (1934) C. 221 (F.B.)	1517
Suraj Prasad, 95 I. C. 286	1076
Suraj Rali, 5 A. L. J. 155	172, 173, 175
Surat Singh, 10 L. J. 74, 23 I. C. 1004,	274
15 Cr. L. J. 404	277
Surendra Narayan, 39 C. 522	477
Surendra Nath Banerjee, 10 C. W. N.	1333
1062	463
Surrendra Nath Banerjee 10 C. 199	160
P. C.	160
Surrendra Nath Banerjee v. High	160
Court, 10 C. 109 P. C.	160
Surendra Nath, 38 C. 75	160
Surendra Nath Ghosh, 14 C. W. N.	160
1076	160
Surendra Nath Roy, 5 B. L. R. 274	160
(291)	160
Surendra Prasad, 38 C. 227	160
Sureshchandra Banerjee, 110 I. C. (C.)	160
449	160
Sures Chandra, 39 C. 606	160
Suri Venkatappaya Sastri v. Madula	160
Venkanna, 27 M. 531, F. F.	160
Surja, (1882) 2 A. W. N. 224	160
1199, 1280, 1513, 1523	160

T

Taaffe v. Downes, (Unrep Irish Case, 2	274, 277
M. I. A. 300)	277
—3 M. I. A. 36n (39)	1737
Taaffe v. Downes, 3 Moo. P. C. 36n	732
Tabarak Zaman Khan, 30 A. 52	1421
Tabram, C. & M. 251	1256
Tabu, (1898) P. R. No. 15	1157
Tadbul Hassain, (1929) C. 767	777
Tafaullah, 12 C. 190	504
Tafazzul Ahmed, 26 C. 630	1397
Tagar Nath, 6 Pat. L. T. 294, (1923)	1206
Pat 297	671, 681
Taher Khan, 45 C. 641	787
Taj Mahomed, 107 I. C. (L.) 100	1396
Taik Pyu, 5 L. B. R. 21, 2 I. C. 619	1780
Tajee Pramanik, 25 C. 711	1018, 1028
Tajje Ram (1898) P. R. No. 12	1701, 1706, 1707, 1719
Tajoo, (1916) P. W. R. 22, 34 I. C. 999	1207
	1484
Taki Husain, 7 A. 205	1006
Taki Mya 38 C. W. N. 71
Talebar, (1917) 2 Pat. L. W. 49
Talim Rai, 1 W. R. 33

	PAGE		PAGE
Tallutt v. Clark, 2 M. & Rob. 312	1704	Tejumaddi, 1 B. L. R.	594
Tamma Gantaya, 4 M. 228	1253	Tekchand, (1915) P. R. 27, 31 I. C. 380	1192
Tammi Reddi, 27 M. 59	732	Telapolu, (1884) 1 Weir 340	1145
Tamworth, (1869) 1 O'M. & H. 86	575	Teli Khaja Hussain, (1911) M. W. N. 14, 12 I. C. 217	1029
Tarak Chowdhury, (1923) Pat. 351, 73 I. C. 158	499	Tconi 39 A. 161	1012, 1013
Tarak Nath, (1935) C. 304	671	Teprah Fukcer, 5 W. R. 78	995
Tandi Ram, (1876) P. R. No. 14	1279	Tessymond's Case, 1 Lew. 169	297, 904
Tandra, 39 I. C. (M.) 1000, 18 Cr. L. J. 632	1253	Tha Do Hla (1902) 1 L. B. R. 264	1786
Tankard, (1894) 1 Q. B. 548 (551) 1286	1359	Thaikkottathil, 18 M. L. W. 946	517
Tanoo Shikdar, 3 W. R. 47	365	Thakar Datt, (1917) P. R. No. 25, 37 I. C. 478	921, 922
Tan sein, (1901) 1 L. B. R. 173	782	Thakaria v. Puran Singh, 67 I. C. (L.) 589, 23 Cr. L. J. 429	1199 1759
Tanuk Lal, (1920) Pat. 285, 60 I. C. 334	621, 629	Thakea, 16 B. 200	1199
Topeshri, 15 A. L. J. 127, 38 I. C. 429	1300	Thakoordas v. Shunker Roy, 3 W. R. 53	282
Taplin's Case, 2 East P. C. 712	1297, 1313, 1775	Thakri, (1911) P. W. R. 17, 11 I. C. 609	600, 702
Taprinessa, 46 C. 427	700	Thakur, 4 C. W. N. 347	671
Tapti Prasad, 15 A. L. J. 590; 41 I. C. 335	1050	Thakura Aung, (1885) S. L. B. 353	913
Tarachand Marwadi, 117 I. C. (N.) 210	673, 679	Thakur Dass, 6 N. W. P. H. C. R. 86	1708
Tarak Das Gupta, 50 B. 246	1180	Thakur Ira, 5 B. H. C. R. 81	201
Tara Kant Das, 4 C. W. N. 691;	535, 536	Thakur Das v. Adhar Chandra 31 C. 425	1751
Taraknath v. Collector. 4 B. L. R. (A. C.) 37	276, 277	Takhur Dasi 40 A. 41	445
Tara Prasad Laha, 30 C. 910 F. B.	1681	Thakur Singh, (1882) P. R. No. 32	431
Tara Singh, 7 L. 30	189	Thakur Tewary, 4 C. W. N. 34	741
Tarid, 9 I. C. (S.) 452	1003	Tha La Aung, (1906) 12 Bur. L. R. 70	398
Tarini, 7 W. R. 13	251, 1128	Thallman, 33 L. J. M. C. 58	920
Tarreneechurn, 21 W. R. 31	233	Thallman, 9 Cox. 388	865, 920
Tarinin Charan Chattopadhyay, 7 W. R. 3	1129	Thanda v. Arayudu, 14 M. 364	861
Tarinee Prasad, 18 W. R. 8	164, 168, 401, 1250	Thandavarayadi, 14 M. 64	419
Tasuduk Hossein, 6 N. W. P. H. C. R. 301	1560	Thankara Aung S. T. L. B. 353	913
Tate, 12 Cox 7	668	Tharu, 5 S. L. R. 29, 9 I. C. 895	1535
Tatia Hari, 1 Bom. L. R. 11	739	Thavasiandi, (1903) 1 Weir 122	737
Tatia Mahader, 14 Bom. L. R. 961, 17 I. C. 794	140, 141, 1178	Thave Issaji, 13 Bom. L. R. 635, 11 I. C. 993	625
Tateparthi v. Samam Vanakayye 1929 M. W. N. 77	1183	Theethumalai, 47 M. 746, F. B. 47 M. L. J. 221, F. B. 1102, 1103, 1114	666
Tather Lal, 1 B. & P. (N. R.) 94n	1599	Thewa Ram, 10 C. L. R. 187	1702, 1720
Taverner, 4 C. & P. 413n	822	Thiagaraya v. Krishnasami, 15 M. 214;	1139
Taya, (1871) B. U. C. 50	638, 1788	Thipanna, (1890) 1 Weir 337 (338)	269
Tayee, (1883) B. U. C. 188	1071	Thomas, 4 M. & S. 442	1007
Taylor, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 148, 44 L. J. M. C. 67	398	Thomas, 7 C. & P. 817	1265
Taylor, 1 F. & F. 535	406	Thomas, 9 C & P. 741	1285
Taylor, 1 Camp. 104	674	Thomas, 6 Cox. 403	125
Taylor, 3 B. C. 502	861	Thomas Scott, 10 L. T. (N. S.) 726	1317
Taylor, 5 Burr. 2793	1009	Thomas Case, 1 Leach 330	869
Taylor, 2 Str. 167	1139	Thomas Henson, Dears 24	471
Taylor, 72 Am. Dec. 347	1255	Thomas Paine, 22 St. Tr. 357	924
Taylor, R. & R. 418	1281	Thompson, (1904) 64 J. P. 456	1184, 1286
Taylor, 5 Cox. 138	1504	Thompson, 32 L. J. M. C. 53	1183
Taylor, (1912) A. C. 317 (353)	1590	Thompson, R. & M. C. C. 78	1551
Taylor, 3 Salk, 198	1714	Thompson, 2 Leach, 1105n	1701
Taylor, (1871) 25 L. T. 75	1788	Thompson v. Dashwood, 11 Q. B. D. 43	1619
Taylor's Case, 2 Lew. 215	957	Thompson v. Montgomery, (1891) A. C. 217	1711
Taylor v. Masely, 6 C. & P. 278	1567	Thompson v. Nyo, 16 Q. B. 175	1735
Taylor v. Perkins, Cro. Jac. 144	1711	Thompson v. Shackell, Moo. & Mal. 187
Taylor v. Smethen, 11 Q. B. D. 207 (209, 210)	928	Thoppulan v. Sankaranarayana, (1914) M. W. N. 483, 24 I. C. 176, 15 Cr. L. J. 440	1271, 1272, 1343, 1375
Teague's Case, 2 East P. C. C. 193, 55, p. 979	1517	Thornitti, 1 Weir 495	184, 1474
Teekai Bheer, 5 W. R. 95	1308, 1309	Thorogood v. Bryan, 8 C. B. 129	892
Teja, 17 A. 86	1325	Thoroley, R. & M. 343	1357
Tejo, (1885) P. R. No. 39	431	Thornbury, (1869) 4 O'M. & H. 66	577
		Thrustle v. Handyside, 20 Q. B. D. 359	337

	PAGE		PAGE
Thularam, 21 A. L. J. 865	.. 1794	Toogood v. Spyryng, 1 C. M. & R. 181	1741, 1742, 1746
Thukaram, 48 I. C. (N.) 688	.. 1177	Toolsee Singh, 10 W. R. 64	.. 364
Thurborn, 13 I. J. M. C. 140	1259 1343,	Toolshee Rai, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 186	701, 702, 704, 705
Thurborn, 1 Den. C. C. 387	.. 1353	Toorebaj Khan, B U. C. 11	.. 166
Thurborn, 2 C. & K. 831	.. 1251	Topan, 3 S. L. R. 189, 4 I. C. 1160	.. 611
Tibbits and Windust, (1902) 1 K. B. 77	1733	Topan Chatomal, 3 S. L. R. 189, 4 I. C. 1160	.. 732
Tibbot v. Haynes, Cro. Flz. 191	.. 1711	Topham, 4 T. R. 129	129, 477, 1700
Tichborne v. Mostyn, L. R. 7 Eq. 55-n	.. 802	Topham, (1791) 4 T. R. 126	.. 1714
Tika, 26 A. 197	.. 1705	Toppulan v. Sankaranarayana, (1914) M. W. N. 483, 24 I. C. 176	.. 1272
Tikam Das, 96 I. C. 499, (1927) S. 58	1711	Torap Ali, 35 I. C. (C.) 818	.. 1028
Tikaram, (1902) A. W. N. 6	.. 1515	Torap Ali, 22 C. 638	701, 703, 1014
Tika Ram, (1928) A. 680 F. B.	.. 594	Toshack, 4 Cox 38	167, 174
Tikham, Lakhi, 7 S. L. R. 108, 24 I. C. 576	.. 677	Toshak, 1 Den. C. C. 492	174, 1575
Tikikar v. Pearelal, 45 I. C. (N.) 1002, 19 Cr. L. J. 666	.. 1770	Townby, 3 F. & F. 839	.. 1040
Tilak (Bal Gangadhar), 22 B. 112	475, 477	Townsby 40 L. J. M. C. 144	.. 1253
Tilak Bal Gangadhar, 33 B 221	468, 469	Townshend (Lord) v. Dr. Haughes, 2 Mod. 166	.. 1718
Timappa, 3 Bom. L. R. 678	.. 300	Tozar v. Child, 7 E. & B. 337	.. 272
Timmal, 21 A 122	.. 361	Trailokya Nath v. Radharanjan, 25 C. W. N. 886, 67 I. C. 204	.. 652
Timmins, 7 C. & P. 499	.. 1052	Train, 2 B. & S. 640	.. 899
Timmins, Bell C. C. 273	1189, 1191	Trainee Prosaud Banerjee, 18 W. R. 8	.. 1250
Timothy v. Simpson, 4 L. J. (N. S.) Ex. 81, 40 R. R. 722	.. 1148	Trainer, 4 F. & F. 105	269, 270, 1051
Tinckler, 1 F. & F. 513	.. 1195	Trebilok, Dears & B. C. 453	.. 170
Tincouree, 27 C. W. N. 290, (1923) C. 460	234, 311, 324, 332, 333	Trebilock, 27 J. M. C. 103	.. 1249
Tincouree, (1864) W. R. 31	.. 243	Trenfield, 1 F. & R. 43	.. 1578
Tippa, 16 B. 737	.. 1222	Tribhawan, 5 O. L. J. 112, 45 I. C. 833	622, 631, 1270
Tipping v. St. Helen's Smelting Co., L. R. 1 Ch. 66	.. 856	Tribhovan, 9 B. 131	.. 170
Tirakadu, 14 M. 126	.. 496	Trilloe, C. & Marsh, 650	.. 958
Tiravengada v. Tripurasundari, 14 M. 728 F. B.	.. 1745	Trotman v. Dunn, 4 Camp. 211	.. 1745
Tiri 8 R. 81	1031, 1596	Troylukho Nath Chowdhury, 4 C. 366	414, 1265, 1266
Tiruchittambala, 21 M. 78	618, 620, 621, 628	Trustees of Rugby Charity v. Merry weather, 11 East 375	.. 890
Tirunarasimha, 19 M. 18	.. 664	Trusty, 1 East P. C. C. 8	.. 1317
Tirumala, 47 M. 396	235, 597, 599	Tu, 4 L. B. R. 306	.. 331
Tirumala, 1 Weir 219	.. 1650	Tuberville v. Savage, 1 Madd. 3	1172, 1173
Tirumalai, (1894) 1 Weir 31	.. 235	Tucker, R. & M. C. C. R. 134	.. 1775
Tirumal Reddi, 24 M. 523	.. 403	Tucker, 1 Cox. 73	.. 1530
Thirumalingadu, 52 M. 147	1030, 1596	Tucker, 1 Cox. C. C. 103	.. 321
Tiruvengada, 21 M 428	148, 150	Tucker, 7 B. 42	640, 526, 527, 1530
Tiruva Tewan, (1929) M. W. N. 899	.. 519	Tuckwell, C. & M. 215	.. 406
Tobayle, Cited Cro. Car. 510	884, 885	Tukaram, (1862) 12 B. H. C. R. 234	.. 658
Todan Mir, 20 C. W. N. 1287, 35 I. C. 981	.. 1504	Tukaram, (1888) B. U. C. 405	.. 570
Todd, (1882) A. W. N. 52	591, 631	Tukaram, 14 Bom. L. R. 373; 15 I. C. 811; 13 Cr. L. J. 539	1337, 1340
Todd v. Hawkins, 8 C. & P. 88	.. 1749	Tukaram, 77 I. C. (N.) 237; 25 Cr. L. J. 349	.. 1273
Todur Mal v. Mt. Bhali, (1882, 1870) P. R. No. 14	728, 731	Tukaram v. Zeli, 6 C. P. L. R. 7	.. 954
Tofazel Hoosein V. H. C. Hunt, (1930) C. 711	729, 734	Tukaya, 1 B. 214, 4 M. H. C. R. (App.) 37	.. 243
Tofail Mohd. Mia 61 C. 253	896, 1400, 1401	Tukaya, 1 B. 214 F. B.	.. 243
Tohfa (1933) A. 759	.. 629	Tula, 29 A. 587	.. 730
Tok Gyi, 35 I. C. (Bur.) 810	.. 1511	Tularam, 21 A. L. J. 865, 83 I. C. 993, (1924) A. 205	1442, 1788
Tokha, (1894, 1895) P. R. No. 8	.. 514	Tuljia, 12 B 36	644, 1582
Tola Ram, 102 I. C. (U.) 774	.. 323	Tulsha, 20 A. 143	971, 990, 1033, 1068
Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168	262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 1195, 1674	Tulsi Das v. S. F. Bellimoria 139 I. C. (B.) 275	.. 1745
Tolupur Bhagvannulu, (1897) Weir 105	.. 599	Tulsiram, 13 B. 168	369, 625, 626
Tomeinson v. Brittlebank, 4 B. & Ad. 630	.. 1709	Tulsi Singh, 10 W. R. 64	366, 375
Tomiji, 1 C. W. N. 301	.. 730	Tunaokoch, 2 W. R. 63	249, 243
Tomlinson, (1895) 1 Q. B. 706	1293, 1294	Tung Aung, (1907) 4 B. R. 149, 7 Cr. L. J. 448	.. 166
Tonooram, 3 W. R. 44	.. 228

	PAGE		PAGE
Tun Aung Gaw, 3 L. B. R. 222	428	Umrao Singh, (1883) 3 A. W. N. 209..	1469
Turberville v. Stamp, 1 Ld Raym, 264	866	Umrao Singh, 16 A. 437	1325
Turbsnille v. Sanage 1 Medel 3	1172, 1173	Ungan Lall, (1869) 1 N. W. P. H. C. R.	593
Turnbull v. Bird, 2 F. & F. 526	1728	303
Turimeha, 33 I. C. (M) 819, 17 Cr. L. J.	1408	Unnoda Prosad v. Raneer Shama, 24	640
179		W. R. 20
Turner, 13 East 228	442, 443, 1285	United Kingdom Electric Telegraphic	899
Turner, 12 Leach 305	1515	Co., 6 L. T. 378, O. A. 9 Cox. 137
Turner, 9 Cox. 145	1674	Universal Muhal Aid and Poor Homes	932
Turner, 11 Cox. 551	1285	Association Ltd. v. A. D. Thopa
Turner, 29 C. W. N. 868, 89 I. C. 248	183	Naidu, 56 M. 26	908
Turner v. Sullivan, 6 L. T. 130	1732	United States v. Guitean, 10 Fed. Rep. 161	908
Turner, 8 C. & P. 755	1090	Uppala Kotayya, 18 M.L.T. 310 30 I. C.	783
Tusharikanta Ghose (1935) C. 419	796, 799	656
F. B.	474	Upendra Nath, 21 C. W. N. 562, 39 I. C.	547
Tutchin, 14 St. Tr. 1095	471, 473	805
Tutchin, (1704) 5 St. Tr. 532	1712	Upendra Nath Bagchi, 36 C. 375	210
Tutty v. Alewin 11 Mad. 221	114	Upendra Nath Dass, 1 C. 356	920
Two Second Grade Pleaders (in the	716, 1674	Upendra Nath Das, 19 C. W. N. 653 F. B.	361, 362 matter of), 6 I. C. 313	355	30 I. C. 113, 21 D. L. J. 377	156
Twyne's Case, 1 S. L. C. 3	161	Upendra Kumar Ghose, 3 C. L. J. 475	1029
Tyler, 8 C. & P. 616	573	Usaf Khan, (1920) P.W.R. 1, 55 I.C. 607	709
Tync Boiler Works Co. v. Long-	1286, 1349	U. Sein Ywet v. U. Mg. Pyi, 148 I. C.	1730
henton, 56 L. J. M. C. 12	668	(R.) 845
Tynemouth, (1853) 2 P. R. & D.		Usill v. Hales, 3 C. P. D. 319	638
186		Uttam Chunder v. Ram Chunder, 13 W.	1414
Tyree, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 177		R. 72
Tyson, 27 L. J. M. C. 7		Uttom Koonddeo, 8 C. 634	1460
		Uttam Lal, 23 Bom. L. R. 340, 60 I. C.
		993, 22 Cr. L.J. 305
U
Uda, (1915) P. W. R. 26, 30 I. C. 458	1315	V
Udai Narain v. Ramanath, 40 I. C. (C)	1260, 1259	Vahial, 15 I. C. (S.) 810	192
732		Vaidyalingam, B. U. C. 871	235
Udha Singh, 10 S. L. R. 69, 35 I. C.	447	Vailhiratha, 36 M. 501 P. C.	1019
670	932	Vainbilee, 5 C. 826	1025
Udumalpet Nidhi Ltd. 57 M. 84 4	1042	Vajiram, 16 B. 414	244
Ujagat Singh, (1917) P. R. 45, 43 I. C.	503	Valentine Meat Jucie Co. v. Valentine	1623
413	260	Extract Co., (1900) 83 L. T. 259
Ujagat Singh, (1912) P. L. R. 223	1657, 1753	Vali Parasad Banerjee 26 I. C. (C.)	1581
Ujar Singh, (1933) L. 147	1364	668
Ujjala Bewa, 1 C. L. R. 513	640	Vallahbram, 27 Bom. L. R. 1391	1267
U Ka Doe, 8 R. 13	364, 372	Vallappa v. Bheema Row, 41 M. 156 F.B.	1575
Ulwap Gavda, (1896) B. U. C. 864	164	Valliant, 87 I. C. 513	1200
Uma Charn Singh, 6 C. W. N. 164	417	Valliant v. Eleazar, 30 C. W. N. 215, (1926)	1201
	413	C. 467	343, 1055
Umacharan Singh, 29 C. 244	1399	Van Butchell, 3 C. & P. 632	1585
Umadasi, 52 C. 112	673	Vander Donckt v. Thelluson, 8 C. B. 112	902
Umadosi Dari, 40 C. 143	354	Vankipuram, (1893) 1 Weir 232	1749
Umar, 3 S. L. R. 136, 4 I. C. 481	1558	Vanspike, v. Cleysom, Cro. Eliz. 541	359,
Umarbhai, (1888) B. U. C. 440	947, 949	Vansitart, (1883) A. W. N. 46	1708, 1709
Umar Din, 3 L. L. J. 287, 67 I. C.	607	Vantam Bills 4 M. & S. 73	869
340	252	Vantandilo, (1815) 4 M. & S. 73	869, 870, 871
Umar Din, (1891) P. R. No. 1	924, 1760,	Varajlal v. Ramdat, 26 B. 259	1715
Umar Din, (1915) P. R. No. 23, 30 I.	1753, 1759	Varayal Krishnan Nair, 14 I. C. (M.) 319	1271
C. 731	201	Vanderzstein, 10 Cox. (Irish) 177	429
Umar Khan, 39 A. 399	1032	Varyal, 14 I. C. (M.) 319	417
Umar Singh, (1869) P. R. No. 20	1748	Varlev's Case, 1 Leach, 76	807, 810
Uma Shankar (1889) P. R. No. 18	1744	Varnakote v. Kotalmana, (1900) 1 Weir	1702, 1703, 1753
	700	579	1100, 1115
Umbica Prosad, 1 C. L. J. 271	902, 916, 864	Vasta Chela, 19 B. 247	859
Umed, 45 A. 727	1426	Vasileva Chetti, (1882) 1 Weir 242	1494
Umed Singh, 22 A. L. J. 79, 77 I. C. 824	263, 407	Vatukaran, (1881) 1 Weir 507	1260
25 Cr. L. J. 472	1195	Vayalappay, 29 I. C. (M.) 90
Umed Singh, 21 A. L. J. 765	1206, 1321	Vazeerali v. Suryanarayana, 1 M. L. J.	1567
Umed Sheikh, 30 C. W. N. 816	1592, 1597, 1598	388	933, 1449
Umesh Chandra Kar, 14 C. 656		Vazirally 53 B. 55	649, 696
Umesh Chunder Mitter, 16 C. 316		Vedagurukkal, (1882) Weir (3rd. Ed.)	649, 696
Umi, 6 B. 126		328
Umsadbaksh, 3 B. 178		Vedamuthi, 4 M. H. C. R. 185	649, 695, 696
Umrao Khan, 10 O. & A. L. R. 197
Umrao Lal, 23 A. 84

	PAGE		PAGE
Vellamaidi, 54 M. 1025	.. 499	Vinayak v. Bai Itcha, 3 B. H. C. R. (A. C.)	.. 272
Veerana, 11 M. L. T. 261, 15 I. C. 310 361,	362	36	.. 1372
Verrapalli, (1902) 1 Weir 193	.. 739	Vinayak Laxman 53 B. 119	.. 681
Vekattigadu, (1897) 1 Weir 342	.. 1134	Viran, 9 M. 224	.. 743
Veley, 4 F. & F. 117	.. 1735	Viranna v. Nagayyah, 3 M. 6	864, 897,
Vellai Gownden, 2 I. C. (M.) 424	.. 917	Virappa Chetti 20 M. 433	902, 916
Vellai Ocha Thevan, 11 M. L. T. 189, 15 I.			648, 649
C. 315	.. 1408	Viraperumal, 16 M. 105	600, 603
Vellapoo Kotadu, (1894) 1 Weir 244	.. 857	Virasami, 4 M. 144	1431, 1452
Vemulacla, 1 Weir 736	.. 1034	Viraswami, (1881) 1 Weir 478	.. 603
Vengappaiyan, (1883) 1 Weir 491	.. 1475	Virasami Mudali, 4 M. 144, 6 M. H. R.	.. 563
Veni Bhushan, 34 C. 994	.. 473	(App.) 48	.. 590
Venkadu, (1930) M. 532	.. 511	Virasami Naick, (1876) 1 Weir 72	.. 1258
Venkaj Bhashar, 5 B. H. C. R. 19	.. 592	Virasami Pillai, (1895) 1 Weir 86	.. 282
Venkat v. Armstrong, 3 B. H. C. R. (A.C.)		Virjivandas v. Mahomed Ali Khan, 5	.. 921
47	.. 272	B. 215	.. 920
Venkappa, 38 M. 305	897, 902	Vir Singh, (1895) P. R. No. 59	.. 1166
Venkaraju, (1910) M. W. N. 232	1572, 1581	Vishnu, 15 Bom. L. R. 307, 19 I. C. 504	.. 172
Venkatchala, (1883) 1 Weir 476	1452, 1453	Vishnu Krishna Puranik, 15 Bom. L. R.	1225, 1227
Venkatachalan, (1881) 1 Weir 339	.. 1148	307, 19 I. C. 504	.. 259
Venkatachala Mudali, (1881) 1 Weir 341	1150	Vishvanatha Ayyer (1930) M. W. N.	1442, 1788
Vankata Chandrappa v. Venkatarama,		723	.. 1773
22 M. 256	.. 711	Vithal, 13 B. 515-n	.. 859
Venkatachela, (1892) 1 Weir 206	.. 785	Vithabai Sukha 52 B. 403	.. 276
Venkatachelam, 2 M. H. C. R. 43	.. 665	Vithaya, (1871) B. U. C. 49	.. 171, 313
Venkata Chetti, (1883) 1 Weir 225	.. 749	Vithinathaswami, 51 M. L. J. 800	.. 1334
Venkatagurinatha, 45 M. L. J. 133, 72		Vithoba, (1887) B. U. C. 330	.. 883
I. C. 612, (1923) M. 597	.. 1360	Vithoba, (1884) B. U. C. 203	.. 1705
Venkatanarasappa, (1894, 1 Weir 111	599	Vithoba v. Corfield, 3 B. H. C. R. (App.)	.. 1705
Venkata Purandam, (1902) 1 Weir 496	1476	1 (24)	.. 167
Venkataramanna, 23 M. 233	.. 665	Vithoo, 7 N. L. R. 185, 13 I. C. 916	.. 1029
Venkataramanuja, 6 M. L. T. 262, 3 I. C.		Vithu, 1 B. L. R. 156	.. 164
C. 828	.. 1534	Vitti Chokan, 4 M. 229	.. 170, 282
Venkataramiah, 5 M. L. T. 207, 4 I. C.		Vizetelley v. Mudie's Select Library,	.. 1481
C. 117	.. 1145	(1900) 2 Q. B. 170	.. 497, 498
Venkatta Reddi, (1885) 1 Weir 575	.. 1716	Voinet v. Barrett, 55 L. J. Q. B. 39	.. 560
Venkata Reddi, (1897) 1 Weir 120	.. 728	Vujeer, (1868) B. U. C. 10	.. 316
Venkatasami, (1866) Weir (3rd. Ed.) 187	402	Vuppalapu, 14 I. C. 601	.. 671, 687
Venkatasami, 12 M. 459	312, 323	Vyankataswami, 2 B. H. C. 106
Venkatasami, 14 M. 229	1268, 1348	Vyankatrav, 7 B. H. C. R. 50
Venkatasami, (1882) 1 Weir (3rd. Ed.) 187	1068	Vyapuri, 5 M. 401
Venkatasubba Reddy, (1910) M. W. N.		Vyapuri Chetty, 5 M. L. T. 285
72, 5 I. C. 851	.. 1145	Vyapoory Moodeliar, 6 C. 655
Venkata Subbier, (1890) 1 Weir 210	.. 786	Vyse, 3. F. & F. 247
Venkata Subbier, 44 M. L. J. 407, 72 I.		Vythnathaswami, 51 M. L. T. 800
C. 356, (1923) M. 603	.. 508
Venkatasubba, 54 M. 931	1014, 1575
Venkatesagadu, 10 M. 165 (167) F. B.	238
Venkatesan, (1882) 1 Weir 307	.. 994
Venkat Rao, 46 B. 973	.. 801
Venkat Row, 21 M. L. J. 832	138, 803
Venkatti Shetti, 1 Weir 40	.. 255
Venkatayya, 121 I. C. (M.) 763	.. 558
Venku Mahalinga, 11 M. 393	1228, 1222
Vernede, 10 M. 25	.. 1270
Veruputti Penchalugaddi, 6 M. L. T. 133,
4 I. C. 1061	.. 538
Vaigula, Fernandez, (1890) 1 Weir	.. 1479
489	.. 592
Vidiadhar, (1889) B. U. C. 488	.. 943, 945
Vijayaraghava Chariar, 26 M. 554 F. B.
	.. 1393
Villensky, (1892) 2 Q. B. 597	.. 1711
Villers v. Monsley, 2 Wils, 403	.. 1201
Villiant v. Eleayan, 30 C. W. N. 215,
(1926) C. 487	.. 1373
Villikkat Gobinda Menon, (1883) Weir	.. 472
(3rd Ed.) 270
Vinayaka Narayana, 2 Bom. L. R. 304

Wali Mohamed, 96 I. C. (L.) 874, (1926) L. 677	1201	Watson, 21 Q. B. D. 301	174
Walji v. Jaganath, 2 B. 84	117	Watson & Co. v. Golab Khan, 10 W. R. 28	1381
Walkden, L. R. I. C. C. R. 282	1094	Watson v. Vanderlosh Hetl. 71	1712
Walker, 1 Mood C. C. 155	1252	Watt, Moo. & Mall. N. P. C. 281	886
Walkins, 2 M. H. C. R. 444	133	Watts, 1 Salk 356	859, 865, 900
Walkley, 4 C. & P. 132	1391	Watts, 2 C. & P. 486	859
Walker, 26 Bom. L. R. 610	1916	Wattz, Moo. & M. 281	856
Walker, 1 C. & P. 320, 503	298, 1052	Wazirulzama Khan, (1881) A. W. N. 156	1054
Walker v. Baird, (1892) A. C. 491	285	Wazir Jan, 10 A. 58	241, 247, 250, 569
Walker v. Brogden, 19 C. B. N. S. 65	1729	Wazid Hossein, 32 A. 451	362
Wallen L. & C. 288	1294	Wazira, 8 B. L. R. (App.) 63	1683
Waller v. Loch, 7 Q. B. D. 626	1744, 1746, 1747	Weaver and Others, E. T. 2 Geo. IV	1714
Wallingford, (1869) 1 O'M & H. 59	575, 932	Webb, 1 Men. C. C. 338	921
Wallingford v. Mutual Society, 5 App. Cas. 685	932	Webb, 2 Lew 196	960
Wallon, L. & C. 238	1294	Webb, 18 L. J. M. C. 39	926
Walmsley, 1 C. W. N. cxxxiv	358	Webb, 1 M. & Rob. 405	342, 1055
Walnoth v. Meadows, 5 East. 463	1711	Webb, (1893) T. L. R. 199	1286
Walsall, (1892) 4 O'M. & H. 123	572, 583	Webster, L. & C. C. C. 77	1261
Walsh, 11 Cox. C. C. 336	383	Weeks, (1861) L. & C. 18	816
Walsh v. Southworth, 6 Exch. 150	154	Wegner, 2 Stark, N. P. 245, 19 R. R. 712	1694
Walter, (1799) 3 Esp. 21	1761	Welby v. Still, (1822) W. N. 6	802
Walters, 12 St. Tr. 113	1006	Welch, 2 C. & K. 296	1360
Walton, L. & C. 288	1297	Welch, 1 Q. B. D. 23 (24)	162, 1489
Walton v. Hastings, 4 Camp. 232	1567	Weld v. Hornby, 7 East 199	885
Value, 11 Cox. 647	1432	Wellard, 14 Q. B. D. 63 (65, 66)	884, 925
Waman Lakshman, (1898) B. U. C. 979	938	Wells, 1 F. & F. 109	1372
Wanchope, 61 C. 168	1344	Welman, Dears, C. C. 188	1445
Ward, 41 L. J. M. C. 69	771	Welsh, 1 Leach 364	809
Ward, 5 M. 33	133	Welsh, 2 D. C. C. R. 78	822
Ward, 4 Ad & E. 384	900	Wenman v. Ash, 13 C. B. 836	1700
Ward, 10 Cox. 4	1775	Wenmouth, 8 Cox. 348	1278
Ward, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 356	168	West, 24 L. J. M. C. 4	1343
Ward v. Hoebres, 4 App. Cas 13	300	West, 2 C. & K. 784	959
Ward v. Weeks, 7 Bing. 211	1711	Westbeer, 1 Leach 12	1252
Warden v. Bailer, 4 Taunt 67	1745	Westbury, (1869) 1 O'M. & H. 49	574
Wariam (1885) P. R. No. 11	1522, 1513	Westminster, (1869) 1 O'M. B. H. 90	574
Waris Ali, 7 N. L. R. 180	331, 171	Weston v. Bengalee, 15 C. W. N. 771	137
Waris, (1916) P. L. R. 89, 36 I. C. 152	1203	Whadhaw Singh, 76 I. C. (L.) 819	1326
Warner, 5 C. & P. 525	965	(1923) L. 389	679
Waman, 10 Bom. L. R. 171	271	Wheatland, 8 C. & P. 238	881
Warren v. Warren, 1 C. M. & R. 251	1741	Wheat v. Brown, (1892) 1 Q. B. 418	821, 822
Warner, 5 C. & P. 525	191, 965	(420, 421)	1574
Waring Gillow Ltd. v. Gillow & Gillow Ltd., (1917) 33 R. P. C. 173, 32 T. L. R. 389	1623	Whiley, 1 B. U. P. (N. R.) 92	1736
Warrender v. Warrender, 2 Cl. & F. 488	1659, 1662, 1663	Whiley, 2 Leach. 983	742
Warrinton v. Early, 2 E. & B. 763	1567	Whiley's Case, R. & R. 90	408, 1080
Waryam Singh, 72 I. C. 611	1041, 1116, 1031	Whistler v. Ruskin, (1878) Times Nov. 26th	859, 884, 885
Waryam Singh, 83 I. C. (L.) 344, (1923) L. 663	1030	Whitchurch, 7 Q. B. D. 534	1734
Waryam Singh 7 L. 141	331, 333, 265	Whitchurch, 24 Q. B. D. 420	1255
Wasawa Singh, (1916) P. L. R. 110, 35 I. C. 1003	1384, 1339, 1340	White, 1 Burr. 333	1403
Wasudev, Balwant, 56 B. 434	1064, 1065	White, 1 Camp. 359	1085
Wasudeva Mudaly, 52 M. 882	203, 517	White, 22 L. J. M. C. 123	1702
Wason v. Walter, L. R. 4 Q. B. 1	1728, 1730, 1731, 1737	White, 1 F. & F. 665	1387
Waterford, (1870) 2 O'M. & H. 25	573	White, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 311, 40 L. J. M. C. 135	1711
Water v. Beaver, 3 Lev. 166	1717	Whitfield and Others v. South East Ry. Co., E. B. & E. 115	344
Waters, 6 C. & P. 328	960	Whitfield v. Brand 16 M. & W. 282	207
Watkins, 2 M. H. C. R. 444	124, 132, 133	Whitfield v. Powel, 12 Mod. 248	1009, 1574
Watkins, v. Fox, 22 C. 948	711	Whitehead, 3 C. & P. 635	1430
Watgin v. Hall, L. R. 3 Q. B. 396 (401)	1704, 1705	White, 1 Leach. 430 (431)	886
Watkins v. Major, 44 L. J. M. C. 164	265, 1195	Whitlay's Case, 1 Lew, 173	894
		Whiteman, 23 L. J. M. C. 120
		White v. Bywater, 12 Q. B. D. 582
		White v. Crist, 10 Exch. R. 312

TABLE OF CASES CITED (VOLS. I &amp; II)

CV

[illegible]

	PAGE		PAGE
Yellappa, (1883) 1 Weir 93	593	Z
Yelli Kom Yalla, (1896) B. U. C. 863	1334	Zaharia, (1898) P. R. No. 9	548, 552
Yenku v. Mahalinga, 11 M. 393	1221, 1223	Zahoor Ali Khan, 4 N. W. P. H. C. R.	97
Yeppika, (1881) Weir 885	258	Zakaria, (1898) P. R. No. 9	586
Yerlagadda, 48 M. L. J. 605, 90 I. C. 436,		Zakaria, 9 P. R. 1893	158
(1925) M. 856	642	Zakir Husain, 21 A. 159	157
Yeshwant, (1887) B. U. C. 325	621	Zaki Uddin, 10 A. 44	663
Yogamathi (1882) 1 Weir 422 (423)	1203	Zaman, A. M. A., (1933) C. 139	868, 940
York's Case, Fost. Cr. L. 70	308	Zamiran, B. L. R. 521, F. B.	465, 532
Youghal, (1869) 1 O.M. & H. 294, 295		Zapantir, 57 I. C. 928	679
296	574, 575	Zar Muhammad Khan, (1901) A. W. N.	588
Young, 10 Cox. C. C. 37	339	187	723
Young, 14 Cox. C. C. 14	347	Zar Singh, 10 A. 146	1546
Young, 14 Cox. 114	1231	Zeri Khan, 8 Bur. L. T. 288, 30 I. C. 446	599
Young, 3 T. R. 304	845	Ziflr Nat (1934) A. 445	1275
Young, 3 T. R. 104	1418	Zinda, (1896) P. R. No. 15	1416
Young, 8 C. & P. 644	339, 398, 1005	Ziba (1927) N. 404	1249
Yusuf, (1910) P. R. 18	1132	Zingoo, 7 C. P. L. R. 45	938
Yusuf Beg Saheb v. Mhd. Sayad, 99 I.		Zipru, 5 B. 487 (490)	1148
C. 943, (1927) M. 397	1711	Zoolfkar Khan, 16 W. R. 36	329
Yusuf Mahomod v. Bansidhur, 25 C. 639	1639	Zora, 4 B. H. C. R. 12	245
Yusf Hosain, 40 A. 284	361, 362	Zorawar, (1890) A. W. N. 168	673
		Zorwat Singh, 8 A. L. J. 1106, 11 I.C.	617
			735, 738
		Zor Singh 10 A. 146	243

AUTHORITIES CITED

VOLUME I

	PAGE		PAGE
Alisons' Principles of the Criminal Law of India	321	English Law Commr. 7th Rep.	198, 223, 632, 699
Archbold's criminal Pleadings	201	Ff	329
Arch. Plead. 16 th Edn.	133	Finalyson's Review of Authorities as to suppression of Riot or Rebellion	286
Ayeeni—Akbari (Gladwin's Trans.) Intro.	..	Forsyth's Cases and Opinions on Constitutional Law	127, 128, 451
Bac. Abr. Tit Highways	890	Forsyth's Constitutional Law	451
Bac. Ab. Infancy	307	Fost	386, 388 400, 401, 410, 410, 423, 424, 429
Bac. Abr. Tit. "Nuisance "	858	Foster	454, 475
4 Bac. Abr.	307	Foster Cr. L.	..
Bac. Abr. Tit. Perjury	670	Gazette of India	110, 129, 131, 254, 415, 441, 531, 571, 576, 580, 582, 924
Bac. Max. Reg.	401, 423	Godbolt's Rep.	384
Bacon's Elements	304	Gour's Law of Transfer	160, 161, 162, 715, 716, 717, 771,
Bain's Emotions and the Will	170	Great Yarmouth 1906 Printed Judgments	578
Betham, IV, p. 49 X. p 530	251	2 Hag. Con. Rep. 333	865
Bentham's Constitutional Code Vol. X	450	1 Hale	120, 300, 304, 306, 307, 308, 310, 312, 313, 328, 330, 332, 339, 342, 353, 373, 380, 384, 386, 388, 389, 396, 399, 400, 423, 454, 700, 745, 747, 763, 807, 809, 870, 871, 960
Bentham's Principles of Morals and Legislation Vol. I	199	2 Hale	292
Bentham's Principles of Penal Laws	302, 360 363, 396	Hall's International Law, (3rd Ed.)	120, 121
„ Vol. I, Collected Ed.	213, 214, 224 228, 232	Hardcastle on Sratute Law	127
Bentham's Principles of Penal Law Lt., 2 Bk. 1	214, 222	1 Hawk	304, 305, 308, 328, 353, 380, 384, 386, 388, 401, 403, 422, 424, 496, 508, 509, 510, 541, 542, 543, 546, 647, 659, 667, 668, 669, 670, 853, 854, 858, 869, 890, 898, 934, 957, 959,
Best on Evidence	815	2 Hawk	194, 218, 399, 429, 700, 745, 746, 747
Bishop's Criminal Law	329	Hawk's Pleas of the Crown	442
Bishop's Criminal Law, Vol. I	195, 266	Ilbert's Govt. of India	127, 128, 130
Bishop's Criminal Law	267	Indian Commissioner's Report	451
1 Black	120, 278	Indian Law Commissioner's First Report	150, 152, 156, 162, 171, 178, 182, 183, 197, 198, 203, 211, 307, 356, 360, 382, 391, 409, 410, 424, 434, 450, 699, 959
2 Black	120, 161, 284	Indian Law Commr's 2nd Rep.	119, 216, 225, 227, 231, 236, 449, 450, 464, 548, 549, 556, 557, 558, 563, 564, 587, 595, 607, 609, 618, 623, 624, 632, 644, 647, 660, 714, 720, 721, 794, 821, 846, 847, 867, 874, 942, 946, 952, 954
3 Black	284, 353, 853	Inst.	306, 669
4 Black	201, 202, 222, 304, 306, 307, 308, 319, 328, 329, 342, 353, 386, 388, 389, 395, 396, 400, 423, 453, 541, 647, 700, 746, 747, 748, 763, 852, 942, 954	Inst. II, 1 Tr. 1, 2, 3	125
4 Burn's Justice	858, 901, 907, 912	3 Inst.	747, 869
2 Chit. Cr. L.	936	3 Just,	395, 853
3 Chit Cr. L.	858, 901	Kerr on Blackstone, Vol. I.	120
1 Coke 177	261	Lambard Eren. 129	339
3 Coke's Inst.	454	2 Ld. Ragur	912
Co. Litt.	147, 161, 202, 206, 261, 312, 328, 890
Collets Comments	329
Com. Dig. Action on the case for nuisance	855
Cox's Principles of Punishment	221
2 De Fragentibus prisonam	218
Digest	197, 382 424, 425, 556, 558, 595
Digest of Criminal Law	335
Digest Law, Libel	465, 471
Digest of the Law of Libel by a gentleman of the Inner Temple (1765)	465
1 East	291, 292, 297, 300, 339, 380, 384, 386, 388, 389, 456, 806, 807, 809, 950
Encyclopaedia of the Laws of England Eng. Dig. Cr. L.	632
English Law Commr's. Fifth Rep.	557, 660

	PAGE		PAGE
3 Lecky's Hist. of England ..	455	Starkee's Evidence	446, 647
Maxwell on Constitution of Statute (3rd Ed.) ..	116	Stephen's Criminal Law	178, 201, 206, 315, 318, 351, 354, 477
Mayne's Criminal Law ..	392	Stephen's Commentaries	285
Mercer's Criminal Responsibility	320, 321	Stephen's Dig. Cr. L.	664, 667, 786, 807,
Odger's Libel (2nd. Ed.)	465, 471	Stephen's History of Criminal Law	127, 166, 172, 201, 354
Phillimore's International Law Vol. II	120	Story's Conflict of Laws	117, 130, 416
Plow	329	Story's Equity Jurisprudence	346
Plowd	328, 400, 401, 423	Taylor's Med. Juris, 4th Ed.	312, 318, 319
Plutarch's Live's ..	453	2 Taylor's Medical Jurisprudence	315, 318, 319, 320, 326, 327
Pollock and Maitland's History of Criminal Law ..	202	Termers de la Lay	202
Pollock and Wright on Possession	178	Terms de law Ley (Treason)	202
Puffendorf ..	207	Thomas Pain, Author of Rights of Man	471
Puffendorf's Laws of Nature ..	329	Timse 4th Jan. 1892	332
Report of Select Committee 30th Jan. 1895 ..	843	2 Van Espan Pt. 2 s. IV	865
Report of Select Committee 1st Jan. 1895 on the Amending Bill of 1895 ..	843	2 Vattel 210-214 Customs of War S. 41	495
Roll Aler Nuisance (B)	471, 668, 898,	11 Volkmann	170
Russ	202	Waitz	170
1 Russ (5th Ed.)	194, 202, 265, 386,	Webster's Dictionary	529
1 Russ Crimes ..	305	Westlake's International Law	127
1 Russ Cr. (6th Ed.)	429, 821	Wharton's Criminal Law	337
3 Russ Cr. 411 ..	821	Wharton's Homicide	303
Sale's Koran ..	458	Wharton's Lexicon	948
Savigny on Possession Bk. I ..	815	Wheaton's International Law	127, 128
Shep. Plead, (9th Ed.) ..	948	Wright Conspiracy,	442, 443, 444
Shep. Touch ..	161
Sp. L. c. 14, C. 10. ..	329
Staund ford Pl. Fo. ..	373

VOLUME II

	PAGE		PAGE
Bell. Bk. 3, c. 7, s. 5, Assemblp De- bates ..	1219	Co. Litt.	1216, 1407
Aphorism, 45 ..	1038	De Corona, ff. 1186, 1196	1561
Ames, Forgery, 72 ..	1587	Dictum of Sir Montague of Ar- quendo	1718
Arch., Cr. Pl. (22nd Ed.)	1233, 1243, 1407, 1471	Digest Cr. L., Art. 306	1561
Bac. Abr. tit. Assault and Battery (A) ..	1092	Digest 47, 12, 3, 7, ..	1343
Bac. Abr. tit. Assault and Battery (B) ..	1171	Digest, Ch. XVIII, Arts. 12, 4	1003
Bac. Abr. tit. Burglary, (1807 Ed.)	1532	1 East P. C.	977, 989, 991, 999, 1003, 1004, 1006, 1008, 1009, 1012, 1055, 1092, 1156, 1186, 1192, 1235, 1237, 1241, 1250, 1297, 1503, 1531, 1532, 1577, 1592, 1775
Bac. Abr. Forgery (A)	1566, 1572	2 East P. C.	1097
Bacon's Advancement of Learning, Bk. 2	1038, 1404	Ellis's Anatomy, (10th Ed.), pp. 85, 314, 317, 320, 324, 653, 701, 709	1694
Bailie's Dig., 2nd Ed., pp. 180, 181 ..	1670	Exod. XXIII, 1	1712, 1715
Bentham's Theory of Legislation p. 299	1678	Folkard's Libel	1694, 1715
Best, Ev., p. 76	974, 1016	Folkard's Libel (5th Ed.)	1009
1 Bishop, Cr. L. 49	1168, 1791	Foster	977, 991, 1003, 1004, 1006, 1009
1 Black	1097, 1488	Fost, Cr. L.	977, 1307, 1503
2 Black	1246, 1254	French Penal Code, Art. 309	1098
3 Black	1092, 1241, 1407, 1488	Frontier Rules of 5th Jan. 1872	1677
4 Black	957, 977, 989, 991, 998, 1003, 1011, 1037, 1057, 1097, 1144, 1171, 1242, 1250, 1278, 1307, 1488, 1527, 1531, 1532, 1561	G. W. Gayer on "Foot Prints" Art. 11, p. 3	1588
Brit, Bk. J. C. 25 ..	1488	Gazette of India	1219, 1225, 1230, 1236, 1612
Britton, C. 9 ..	1241	Gour's Law of Transfer, Vol. I	1263, 1462, 1463, 1464, 1465, 1466, 1579
3 Coke Inst. 1253, 1345, 1527, 1530, 1531, 1675

	PAGE		PAGE
Gour's Law of Transfer, Vol. II, (5th Ed.)	1386, 1567	Jour. Psych. Med., p. 19	1071
Grady's Ed. of Hamilton's Transla- tion, pp. 64, 65	1670	Leviticus, Ch. 20, vv. 13, 15	1241
Griotino on Peace and War (De Bello et Pace) 1, 2, c. 5, s. 13, §. 2	1661	1 Lewin	300
Hagan on Disputed Handwriting, p. 90	1587	Manu, Ch. IX, vv. 156-158	1670
1 Hale	959, 960, 962, 977, 989, 991, 999, 1003, 1004, 1006, 1011, 1012, 1013, 1037, 1055, 1059, 1157, 1183, 1231, 1235, 1237, 1241, 1250, 1252, 1253, 1254, 1257, 1262, 1369, 1503, 1527, 1530, 1531, 1532	Med. Juris. (1870)	478
2 Hale, P.C.	1003, 1011, 1013	Med. Juris., (2nd Ed.)	336
1 Hallam's Const. Hist.	442, 443	Narada (Sacred Book of the East), pp. 207-212	1767
1 Hawk, P.C.	977, 989, 991, 999, 1003, 1004, 1006, 1009, 1011, 1013, 1060, 1092, 1097, 1144, 1171, 1233, 1241, 1242, 1250, 1252, 1254, 1257, 1267, 1290, 1307, 1401, 1418, 1488, 1503, 1527, 1530, 1531, 1532	Novum Organum Aphorism	45
2 Hawk, P.C.	1566, 1572	Odger's Libel (4th Ed.)	1723
2 Hedaya	1670	Oudh Cr. Cir. No. 82 of 1885	1547
Heinecius, pt. 7, s. 118	1694	Paillet Manual de Droit Francais	1246
Henry's Classification and Use of Finger Prints, p. 20	1588	Psalm, lii 5, 10, 14, 24, 29	1694
2 Hist Cr. L. 121	1580	Pult, 46, b	1566, 157
3 Hist. Cr. L. 10	964	2 Roll Abr. p. 554, pl. 45	11682
Indian Law Commr's. 1st Report	957, 959, 1000, 1058, 1064, 1073, 1078, 1096, 1098, 1099, 1101, 1110, 1180, 1185, 1192, 1471, 1477, 1505, 1506	Roscol's Cr. Ed.	1000, 1250
Indian Law Commr's. 2nd Report	1616, 1762, 1776	2 Russ (6th Ed.)	1257
Indian Law Commr's. 4th Report	1059	2 Russ Ch. X, Note (a)	1248
Inst. 4, 18, 7	1561	3 Russ (6th Ed.)	1003, 1008
3 Inst.	977, 989, 1008, 1235, 1254, 1262, 1267, 1504, 1532, 1566, 1572	Saunder's Justinian 4, 4, 1 p. 418	1767
		Stauf, 26 A.	1262
		2 Starkie Libel, p. 16 Note (n)	1706
		Stephen's Dig. Cr. L.	1065, 1079
		2 Stephen Hist. Cr. L. 56	1527
		3 Stephen's Hist Cr. L.	992, 1527
		Stephen's Story of Nuncumar, p. 168	1017
		Story's Conflict of Laws	1659, 1661
		2 Taylor (5th Ed.)	1078, 1086
		2 Taylor Med. Juris.	1071, 1232
		Todd's Divorce Bill, (1896) W. N. 60 (3)	1686
		Tranter Str. 49	999
		Vishnu, pp. 27, 28, 36	1767
		Vrihaspati, p. 355	1767
		Webster	1378
		Yajnavalkya (Mandlik's Ed. ) p. 232 s. 205	1767
		Year Book, 17 Ed. IV, 1	974

TABLE OF PRINCIPAL STATUTES AND ACTS

VOLUME I.

ENGLISH STATUTES.		PAGE		PAGE
21 Henry III, c. 22	..	206	4 Geo. IV, c. 80	.. 119
51	..	875	5 " " c. 84	.. 225
3 Edw. I, Westminster I, c. 342	..	465	5 " " c. 108	.. 145
33 " I,	..	442	5 " " c. 114	.. 127
18 " III, st. 4	..	546	7 & 8 Geo. IV, c. 28	.. 202
12 Rich. II, c. 11	..	465	7 " " " c. 29	.. 251
23 Henry VIII, c. 1	..	398	7 " " " c. 30	.. 508
35 " " c. 2 (Act of 1543, s. 4)	..	127	7 " " " c. 84	.. 794
1 Edw. VI, c. 1	..	398	9 Geo. IV, c. 31	.. 202
1 " " c. 12	..	950	9 " " c. c. 55, 56	.. 251
5 & 6 Edw. VI, c. 4	543,	936	2 Will IV, c. 12	.. 119
13 Eliz. c. 5	..	716	2 " " c. 34	.. 830
18 " c. 5	..	749	3 & 4 Will IV, c. c. 85	128, 566
27 " c. 4	..	716	4 " 5 " " c. 36	.. 127
27 " c. 10	..	749	5 " 6 " " c. 41	.. 931
31 " 3. 7	..	853	5 " 6 " " c. 63	.. 850
14 Car. 2, c. 4	..	950	6 " 7 " " c. 37	.. 851
16 " 2, c. 7	..	931	6 " 7 " " c. 66	.. 927
1 Will. & M., c. 18	..	930	7 " " " c. 91	485, 486
3 & 4 Will. & M., c. 9	..	398	7 Will. IV & 1 Vict., c. 91	.. 486
9 & 10 Will, III, c. 7	..	852	6 & 7 vict., c. 96, (Lord Campbell's Act)	.. 476
" " " c. 32	..	927	7 & 8 Vict., c. 24	118, 876
10 & 11 " " c. 17	..	853	8 Vict., c. c. 16, 18 & 20, (English Clauses Consolidation Statutes of 1845)	.. 161
11 & 12 " " c. 4	..	455	8 & 9 Vict., c. 74	.. 927
6 Anne., c. 7	..	465	8 " 9 " c. 109	.. 931
7 " c. 12 (The Diplomatic Privilege Act 1708)	119,	120	11 & 12, Vict., c. 12	414, 456
9 " c. 6	..	927	12 & 13, Vict., c. 26 (Admiralty Offences Act)	.. 134
9 " c. 14	..	931	12 " 13 " c. 96 (Admiralty Offences (Colonial) Act 1849)	119, 124
1 Geo. I, st. 2, c. 5, (Riot Act)	..	508	13 & 14 Vict., c. 21 (Lord Brougham's Act)	.. 207
8 " c. 2	..	927	14 & 15 " c. 92	.. 251
12 " II, c. 28	..	927	16 & 17 " c. 99	218, 226
13 " " c. 19	..	927	17 & 18 " c. 18	.. 148
24 " " c. 23	..	206	" " c. 102	571, 573, 582
24 " " c. 25	..	206	" " c. 104 (Merchant Shipping Act 1854)	.. 133
25 " " c. 37	..	786	20 & 21 " c. 3	.. 202
9 & 10 Geo. III, c. 97	..	119	" " c. 85	.. 263
12 Geo. III, c. 24	..	168	21 & 22 " c. 105	..
12 " " c. 61	..	853	" " c. 106 (Government of India Act 1858)	.. 143
13 " " c. 63 (The Regulating Act 1772)	119,	122	23 & 24 Vict., c. 32	543, 930
18 " " 6	119,	455	" " c. 88	Admiralty Jurisdiction (India) Act 1860:)
21 " " c. 70	119,	121, 272	24 & 25 Vict., c. 54 (Indian Civil Service Act 1861)	132, 152
24 " " c. 25	..	119	" " c. 67	128, 135
26 " " c. 57	..	119	" " c. 94	127, 398
33 " " c. 52	132, 152, 560,	566	" " c. 96 (English Larceny Act)	159, 251, 292, 755, 772
36 " " c. 7	..	458	" " c. 99	807, 818, 828
37 " " c. 70	..	485	" " c. 100, 127, 202, 265, 413, 442,	930
37 " " c. 142	119,	122	" " c. 104	132, 133
39 & 40 Geo. III, c. 79	..	119
42 Geo. III, c. 119	..	927
43 " " c. 58	..	413
56 " " c. 138	..	749
1 Geo. IV, c. 4	..	886
1 & 2 Geo. IV, c. 41	..	936

		PAGE			PAGE
25 & 26 Vict. c. 4 (Army Marines Militia & Volunteers Act 1862)		132	47 & 48 Vict. c. 70, (Corrupt and Illegal Practices Municipal Election Act 1884)		572, 580
26 & 27 Vict., c. 24	..	148	.. .. c. 76, (English Post Office Protection Act 1884)		836, 842
.. .. c. 116	..	148	48 & 49 .. c. 69	..	265
.. .. c. 117 (Nuisances Removal Act 1863)	..	875	50 & 51 .. c. 29 (Margarine Act 1887)
27 & 28 Vict., c. 17	130, 131		51 & 52 .. c. 64 (Libel Amendment Act 1888)	..	477
.. .. c. 47	..	814	52 & 53 .. c. 10	..	127
28 & 29 .. c. 15 (Government of India Act, 1865)	128, 132		.. .. c. 21	..	845
30 & 31 .. c. 102 (Representation of the People Act, 1864)	141, 571, 573, 574		.. .. c. 64 (The English Interpretation Act 1889)	140, 141, 144
31 & 32 .. c. 121 (English Sale of Food and Drugs Act)	875		53 & 54 .. c. 69	..	546
32 & 33 .. c. 91	148, 879		.. .. c. 27 (The Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act 1890)	..	134
.. .. c. 98 (Indian Council Act, 1869)	129, 130, 135		54 & 55 .. c. 38	..	835
.. .. c. 99	..		.. .. c. 75	..	910
33 & 34 .. c. 3	130, 396		.. .. c. 76 (Public Health (London) Act 1891)	868
.. .. c. 15 (Naturalisation Act) 1870)	..	130	55 & 56 .. c. 14	..	128
.. .. c. 23 s. 1.	..	222	.. .. c. 61	..	151
.. .. c. 90	127, 148, 479		56 & 57 .. c. 54	..	251
.. .. c. 102	..		57 & 58 .. c. 60 (Merchant Shipping Act)	127, 134
34 & 35 .. c. 31	..	442	58 & 59 .. c. 40	..	580
35 & 36 .. c. 33	..	571	59 & 60 .. c. 14, (The Short Titles Act 1896)	..	143
.. .. c. 19 (Kidnapping Act)	..	263	6 Edw. VII, c. 47, (Trade Disputes Act 1896)	..	442
36 & 37 .. c. 32	..	168	5 & 6 Geo. V., c. 61, (Government of India Act 1915)	110, 121, 122, 128, 129, 131, 135, 143, 927,
.. .. c. 69	..	742	6 & 7 .. c. 37	..	143
.. .. c. 66 (Judicature Act)	742		9 & 10 .. c. 101	143, 936
.. .. c. 88	..	148	25 & 26 .. c. 42 (Government of India Act, 1935)	..	133
37 & 38 .. c. 27	..	134	INDIAN ACTS.
.. .. c. 35	..		Imperial Acts.
.. .. c. 41 Colonial Courts Jurisdiction Act 1874	..	132	XI	cf 1843 (Hereditary, officers Bombay)	.. 592
38 Vict., c. 17 (Explosives Act 1875)	..	907	III	of 1844 (Corporal punishment)	.. 224
38 & 39 Vict. c. 51	..	263	V	of 1844 (Lotteries)	.. 927
.. .. c. 55	742, 853, 880, 909		XVIII	of 1845 (Offences by Convicts)	.. 224
.. .. c. 63 (English Sale of Food and Drugs Act 1875)	875		XV	of 1848 (Supreme Court's Officers Training)	.. 566
.. .. c. 86	442, 874		I	of 1849 (Offenders in Foreign States)	126, 130
39 & 40 .. c. 22	..	442	XVIII	of 1850 (Judicial Officers Protection)	272, 279, 280
41 .. c. 10	..	135	XXVI	of 1850 (Improvements in Towns)	.. 592
41 & 42 .. c. 6	..	910	XXXIV	of 1850 (State Prosiners)	452, 482
.. .. c. 49 (Weight and Measures Act 1878)	845, 849, 851		III	of 1852 (Bombay Spirituous Liquors)	713
.. .. c. 73 (The Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act 1878)	..	124	XXIV	of 1855 (Penal Servitude)	216, 218, 226
42 & 43 Vict., c. 11 (English Bankers Books Evidence Act 1879)	..	146	XI	of 1857 (State Offences)	.. 286
44 & 45 Vict., c. 58, (Army Act 1881)	135, 152, 485, 486, 488, 490, 491		XXIX	of 1857 (Bombay Land Customs)	.. 544
.. .. c. 69, (Fugitive Offenders Act 1881)	..	132
.. .. c. 96	..	758
46 & 47 .. c. 3 (Corrupt Practices Prevention Act 1883)	127, 442
.. .. c. 51	546, 571, 573, 577, 579, 582
47 & 48 .. c. 46	..	487
.. .. c. 38, (Indian Marine Service Act)	..	487

	PAGE		PAGE
III of 1858 (State Prisoners)	452, 482	XV of 1873 (N.-W. Provinces and Oudh Municipalities)	152, 566
XXXVI of 1858 (Indian Lunatic Asylums)	275	XVIII of 1873 (N.-W. P. Rent)	145
VIII of 1859 (C. P. C.)	654, 742	XIX of 1873 (N.-W. P. Land Revenue)	149, 717
X of 1859 (Bengal Rent)	146	II of 1874 (Administrator-General)	566, 692
XIII of 1859 (Workmen's Breach of Contract)	742	VII of 1874 (British Burma Municipal)	152
XXIV of 1859 (Police Madras)	566	IX of 1874 (European Vagrancy)	289
X of 1860 (Customs Duties)	143	XIV of 1874 (Scheduled Dist.)	110, 118
I of 1861	150, 290, 542, 566, 602	IV of 1875 (Merchant Shipping)	152
VI of 1861 (Commencement of Penal Code)	118	IX of 1875 (Majority)	306, 334
XXV of 1861 (Cr. P. C.)	276, 279, 651	I of 1876 (Telegraph)	150
X of 1862 (Stamp)	207	III of 1876 (British Burma Labour Law)	151
VI of 1863 (Customs)	275	VI of 1876 (Chutia Nagpur)	149
III of 1864 (Foreigners)	596	XI of 1876 (Presidency Banks)	566
VI of 1864 (Whipping)	215, 224, 255, 259, 684, 686	XIX of 1876 (Dramatic Performance)	596
X of 1865 (Succession)	184, 635	XXII of 1876 of (Museums)	149, 152
XV of 1865 (Parsi Marriage and Divorce)	149	II of 1877 (Probate and Letters of Administration)	151
III of 1867 (Public Gambling Act)	289	III of 1877 (Registration)	112, 159
XXV of 1867 (Press and Registration Books)	475	V of 1877 (Straits Settlement Emigration)	151
I of 1868 (General Clauses)	144, 159, 161, 207, 234, 241, 273	XV of 1877 (Limitation)	206
IX of 1869 (Income Tax)	650	VII of 1878 (Forest)	152, 566, 633, 665
XXII of 1869 (Gara Hills)	133	IX of 1878 (The Arms)	289
I of 1870 (Indian Quarantine)	785	I of 1879 (Stamp)	603, 650
VII of 1870 (Court Fees)	154	IV of 1879 (Railways)	151
XIV of 1870 (Repealing)	126	V of 1879 (Presidency Banks)	566
XXII of 1870 (European British Subjects)	131	XV of 1879 (Rangoon Port Commissioners)	150
XXIV of 1870 (Oudh Talukdar's Relief Act)	149, 152	XVIII of 1879 (Legal Practitioners)	141, 692
XXVII of 1870 Penal Code Amendment)	185, 201, 226, 261, 395, 452, 456, 462, 485, 487, 683, 686, 775, 777, 788, 789, 926, 927	XXI of 1879 (Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition)	126, 129
I of 1871 (Cattle Trespass)	149	IV of 1880 (Portuguese Treaty)	201
IV of 1871 (Coroner's)	149, 151, 596, 607	VII of 1880 (Merchant Shipping)	149, 152
V of 1871 (Prisoner's)	218	XIV of 1880 (Census)	151
VII of 1871 (Emigration)	151, 289, 927	II of 1881 (Pegu and Litang Canal)	149
XXVII of 1871 (Criminal Tribes)	596	V of 1881 (Probate and Administration)	596
I of 1872 (Indian Evidence)	123, 183, 185, 311, 324, 334, 361, 447, 448, 473, 553, 566, 605, 656, 664, 681, 693, 704, 804	XV of 1881 (Factories)	152, 149
III of 1872 (Special Marriage)	694, 696	XVIII of 1881 (C. P. Land Revenue)	566
IV of 1872 (Punjab Laws)	110, 112, 351	XIX of 1881 (Forest)	149, 566
IX of 1872 (Contract)	172, 558	XX of 1881 (Sindh Incumbered Estates)	152
X of 1872 (Cr. P. C.)	249, 606, 633, 757	XXI of 1881 (Broach and Kaira Estates etc.)	149, 152
XI of 1872 (The Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition)	126	Army Act 1881	488, 491, 492, 493
XV of 1872 (Christian Marriage)	152, 692	XXII of 1881 (Excise Act)	289
X of 1873 (Oaths)	208, 603, 604, 608, 648, 649, 673	IV of 1882 (T. P. Act.)	159, 160, 351, 715, 719
		V of 1882 (Forest Act)	155, 289, 290
		VI of 1882 (Indian Companies Act)	142, 159, 692

	PAGE		PAGE
VIII	of 1882 (Penal Code Amend- ment) 130, 234, 240, 251, 751	III	of 1895 (Criminal Law Am- endment) 144, 149, 224, 610, 611
X	of 1882 (Code of Criminal Procedure) 127, 131, 601, 653, 751	XIV	of 1895 (Pilgrim's Ships) 890
XIII	of 1882 (Putwaris and Kanun- goes) .. 149	XX	of 1896 (Sind Encumbered Estates) .. 150
XIV	of 1882 (Code of Civil Procedure) 146, 281	III	of 1897 (Epidemic Diseases) 499, 872
XV	of 1882 (Presidency Small Cause Courts) 150, 151, 566	IV	of 1897 (Fisheries) .. 289
XVI	of 1882 (Jhansi Incumber- ed Estate) .. 150	VIII	of 1897 (Reformatory School) 224, 289
XXI	of 1883 (Emigration) 149, 289	X	of 1897 (General Clauses) 112, 135, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 159, 161, 182, 184, 206, 207, 209, 230, 396, 664
IV	of 1884 (Explosives) 284, 907	IV	of 1898 (Penal Code Amendment) 109, 129, 415, 462, 531
XIV	of 1884 494, 546, 571	V	of 1898 (Code of Criminal Procedure) 109, 111, 117, 123, 132, 146, 184, 226, 231, 232, 233, 234, 238, 242, 243, 250, 255, 258, 259, 268, 270, 273, 276, 279, 282, 289, 291, 293, 310, 311, 327, 390, 403, 416, 436, 438, 450, 457, 459, 460, 461, 463, 479, 481, 483, 496, 504, 505, 508, 525, 528, 529, 534, 544, 546, 547, 563, 580, 582, 585, 586, 587, 588, 590, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 602, 603, 604, 605, 607, 610, 611, 613, 618, 620, 632, 633, 635, 637, 648, 649, 653, 655, 757, 466, 671, 675, 681, 686, 694, 698, 706, 714, 718, 720, 722, 724, 731, 733, 736, 745, 754, 765, 773, 774, 780, 782, 783, 784, 788, 803, 804, 845, 846, 848, 905, 919.
XVII	of 1884 (Burma Muni- cipal) 854		of 1898 (Post Office) .. 293
VIII	of 1885 (Bengal Tenancy) 150		of 1899 (Stamp) 603, 650, 662
XVII	of 1885 (C. P. Court of Wards) 149, 158		of 1899 (Glanders & Marcy) 149, 670
II	of 1886 (Income Tax) 146, 656, 665		of 1901 (Indian Ports) .. 872
VI	of 1886 (Births, Deaths and Marriages Re- gistration Act) .. 149		of 1901 (Assam Labour and Emigration) 141
X	of 1886 (Criminal Law Amend- ment). 201, 234, 254, 758, 788, 789		of 1903 (Extradition) 127, 130
I	of 1887 (General Clauses) 182		of 1908 (Code of Civil Procedure) 146, 239, 281, 584, 586, 588, 596, 604, 605, 620, 621, 628, 629, 652, 653, 654, 681, 692, 727.
X	of 1887 (Native Passengers Ships) 890		of 1908 (Newspapers Incite- ments to Offences) 230
XIV	of 1887 (Indian Marine) 487		of 1908 (Limitation) .. 206
XVIII	of 1887 (Allahabad Univer- sity) 149, 545, 555, 557		of 1908 (Registration) 150, 159, 655
I	of 1889 (Metal Tokens) 180, 804		of 1909 (Whipping) .. 202
IV	of 1889 (Merchandise Marks) .. 692		of 1910 (Penal Code Amendment) 254
VII	of 1889 (Succession Certi- ficate) .. 692		of 1911 (Criminal Tribes) 253
XIII	of 1889 (Cantonments) .. 289		of 1913 (Companies Act Amendment) 159
IX	of 1890 (Railways) 289, 306, 544, 545, 683, 686, 687,
XI	of 1890 (Prevention of Cruelty to Ani- mals) .. 155
III	of 1891 (Evidence Act Amendment) 395, 431
VII	of 1891 (Assam Forest Regulation) 132, 149
XII	of 1891 (Repealing and Amend- ing) .. 260
XII	of 1891 (Amending Act) 118, 143, 788, 789
XVI	of 1891 (Colonial Courts of Admiralty, India) 134
XVIII	of 1891 (Banker's Books Evidence) .. 696
X	of 1892 (General Clauses) .. 240
I	of 1894 (Land Acquisition) 149, 596
III	of 1894 (Law Amendment Criminal) 150, 600, 707, 745, 761, 763
IX	of 1894 (Prisons) .. 150

		PAGE			PAGE
VIII	of 1913 (Criminal Law Amendment)	201, 441	III	Police)	279, 566
VIII	of 1914 (Motor Vehicles)			of 1872 (Bombay Muni-
XXXIX	of 1920 (Indian Elections)	149, 571, 578, 580, 582	VI	cipal)	152
XVI	of 1921	222, 280, 286, 449, 456, 459	V	of 1873 (Bombay District Municipal)	152
XI	of 1922 (Income Tax)	596, 650		of 1879 (Bombay Land Rev. Code)	566, 592, 621
XVIII	of 1923 (Cr. Pro. Amendment)	205, 242, 439, 671	III	of 1888 (City of Bombay Municipal)	566, 596, 635
XX	of 1923 (Amendment)	113	II	of 1890 (Bombay Salt)	289
VIII	of 1925 See Bill No. 8 of 1924	979	IV	of 1890 (Bombay District Police)	279
XXIX	of 1925 (Amendment)		III	of 1901 (Bombay District Municipality)	229, 566
XII	of 1926	802, 803	IV	of 1902 (Bombay City Police)	279
X	of 1927 (Repealing and Amending Act)	148, 230, 485, 487, 490, 491, 493, 494, 495	I	of 1904 (Bombay General Clauses)	230
XXV	of 1927 (Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act)	940	II	of 1904 (Bombay Motor Vehicles)	916
XXXV	of 1934 (Repealing and Amending Act)	135	I	of 1095 (Bombay Court of Wards)	149, 544, 545

BENGAL ACTS.

VII	of 1858 (Bengal Excise)	371
VII	of 1864 (Bengal Salt)	289
V	of 1867 (Bengal General Clauses)	230
VI	of 1868 (District Towns)	274
III	of 1869 (Arrest for Cruelty to Animals)	289
VI	of 1870 (Village Chaukidar)	619
VIII	of 1876 (Estates Partition.)	626
IV	of 1877 (Calcutta Municipal Corporation)	149
I	of 1879 (Chota Nagpur Landlord and Procedure)	146
VII	of 1880 (Public Demands Recovery)	619
IV	of 1881 (Bengal Excise Amendment)	566
III	of 1884 (Bengal Municipal).	566
VIII	of 1885 (Bengal Tenancy Act)	146
II	of 1888 (Calcutta Municipal consolidation)	566
I	of 1895 (Public Demands Recovery)	717, 718
V	of 1897 (Estates Partition)	626
II	of 1904 (Bengal Public Parks)	147
VI	of 1908 (Chota Nagpur Tenancy)	146
VII	of 1912 (Bengal, etc., Laws)	145

BOMBAY ACTS.

III	of 1852 (Spirituous Liquor)	713
V	of 1862 (Bhadree and Narvadaree Tenures)	592
VII	of 1867 (Bombay Distract Police)
VIII	of 1867 (Bombay Village	566

BURMA ACTS.

XVIII	of 1882 (Steam Boilers and Prime Movers)	149
II	of 1867 (Registration)	150
III	of 1898 (Burma Municipalities)	149, 566
XIII	of 1898 (Burma Laws)	110, 224
IV	of 1902 (Burma Forest)	149
II	of 1905 (Burma Canal)	149
IV	of 1905 (Rangoon Port)	150
I	of 1908 (Rangoon Victoria Memorial)	150

CENTRAL PROVINCES ACTS.

IX	of 1883 (Tenancy)	146
XI	of 1898 (Central Provinces Tenancy)	146
XXIV	of 1899 (Central Provinces Court of Wards)	149, 544, 545
XVI	of 1903 (C. P. Municipal)	566
I	of 1917 (C. P. Land Revenue.)	224

MADRAS ACTS.

XXIV	of 1859 (District Police)	279
V	of 1866 (Labour Contracts with Natives)	149, 152
III	of 1869 (Empowering Revenue Officers to Summon Witnesses)	589
III	of 1873 (Madras Civil Courts)	150
V	of 1878 (Madras City of Municipal)	152
V	of 1879 (Madras Abkari Laws Amendment)	152
V	of 1882 (Madras Forest).	149
I	of 1884 (City of Madras Municipal)	149, 566
V	of 1884 (Madras Local Boards)	149, 371, 628
I	of 1886 (Madras Abkari)	371
II	of 1886 (Madras Harbour Trust)	238

TABLE OF STATUTES AND ACTS

CXV

		PAGE			PAGE
III	of 1888 (Madras City Police)	279	II	of 1793 (Bengal Land Revenue)	566
IV	of 1889 (Madras Salt)	289	V	of 1703 (Appeals)	546
I	of 1891 (Madras General Clauses)	230	XI	of 1796 (Resisting Process)	580
I	of 1904 (Madras District Municipalities)	156, 566	XVII	of 1806 (Bengal Land Redemption and Foreclosure)	640
NORTH-WEST PROVINCES ACTS.			II	of 1807 (Punishment of Perjury and Forgery)	647
XV	of 1873 (N.-W.P. & Oudh Municipal)	566	VIII	of 1813 (Trial of Persons Committing offences Abroad)	126
XIX	of 1873 (Land Revenue Act)	717	XVII	of 1817 (Criminal Procedure)	118
II	of 1901 (North-Western Provinces Tenancy)	146	III	of 1818 (Bengal State Prisoners)	452, 482, 483, 720
PUNJAB ACTS.			XII	of 1818 (House Breaking)	118
XX	of 1891 (Punjab Municipal Act)	566	I	of 1822 (Amending Ben. Reg. XLIX of 1793, etc.)	126
II	of 1902 (Punjab Steam Boilers and Prime Movers)	150	IX	of 1822 (Aliens)	126
I	of 1903 (Punjab Military Transport Animals)	150	VIII	of 1829 (Amending Ben. Reg. V. of 1909 & 1 of 1822)	126
II	of 1903 (Punjab Court of Wards)	545	II	of 1834 (Abolition of Corporal Punishment)	224
UNITED PROVINCES ACTS.			III	of 1899 (Santhal Parganas Justice and Laws)	110
I	of 1899 (U. P. Steam Boilers and Prime Movers)	150	I	of 1900 (Chittagong Hill Tracts)	110
III	of 1899 (United Provinces Court of Wards)	149, 545	BOMBAY REGULATION.
I	of 1900 (United Provinces Municipal)	149, 158, 545	XXV	of 1817	482
II	of 1901 (Agra Tenancy)	146	XIV	of 1827 (Crimes and Offences)	118
III	of 1901 (U. P. Land Revenue)	149, 590	XVIII	of 1827 (Stamps)	118
REGULATION IMPERIAL.			XXII	of 1827 (Military Authority Assistance to Marching Troops)	118
III	of 1872 (Santhal Parganas Settlement)	110	II	s. 54	720
IV	of 1872 (Ajmere Talukdars Relief)	152	MADRAS REGULATIONS.
V	of 1872 (Sindh Frontier)	110	I	of 1803 (Board of Revenue)	566
IX	of 1874 (Arakan Hill Districts Laws)	110	II	of 1803 (Collectors)	566
III	of 1877 (Ajmere Laws)	110	VI	of 1811 (Punishment of Perjury and Forgery)	647
V	of 1886 (Ajmere Municipalities)	566	IV	of 1816 (Village Munsifs)	589
IV	of 1887 (Punjab Frontier Crimes)	234	VII	of 1816	159
I	of 1888 (Ajmere Govt. Wards)	149, 545	XI	of 1816 (Police)	7380
I	of 1890 (British Beluchistan Laws)	110	II	of 1819 (State Prisoners)	118, 482, 720
V	of 1890 (British Beluchistan Forest)	149	IV	of 1821 (Police Punishment by Heads of Village)	356
III	of 1892 (Sindh Frontier)	229	XII	of 1832 (Crimes Committed Abroad)	126
I	of 1894 (Angul Dt.)	110	XIV	of 1832 (Purchasing for soldiers)	118
I	of 1894 (Kochin Hill Tribes)	110, 234, 237, 238, 254	PUNJAB REGULATIONS.
V	of 1896 (Chin Hills)	110, 237, 238, 254	III	of 1901 (Frontier Crimes)	224, 504
III	of 1901 (Frontier Crimes)	224	UPPER BURMA REGULATIONS.
			II	of 1867 (Upper Burma Regulation)	150

TABLE OF PRINCIPAL STATUTES AND ACTS

VOLUME II.

ENGLISH STATUTES.		PAGE			PAGE
3 Edw. 1, c. 26	..	1290	7 Will. IV & 1 Vict., c. 85	..	1075
5 Rich. II, c. 7	..	1510	.. .. c. 86, s. 4	..	1527
5 Hen. IV, c. 5	..	1097	.. .. s. 5	..	1184
25 Hen. VIII, c. 6	..	1241	.. .. s. 7	..	1290
28 Hen. VIII, c. 7	..	1659	.. .. s. 8	..	1257
.. .. c. 16	..	1659	1 Vict., c. 87, s. 4	..	1304
32 .. c. 38	..	1659	4 & 5 Vict., c. 100 s. 48	..	1236
1 Mar. St. 2, c. 3	..	1536	6 & 7 .. c. 96 (Lord Campbell's	..
1 Eliz. c. 2	..	1536	Act, 1843)	..	1721
22 & 23 Car. II, c. 1 (Coventry Act)	..	1097	.. .. s. 3	..	1290
31 Car. II, c. 2, s. 11	..	1186	.. .. s. 6	..	1721
1 Will. & Mary, c. 18, s. 15	..	1536	.. .. s. 7	..	1761
.. .. St. 2, c. 2	..	1737	8 & 9 Vict., c. 109, s. 17 (Gaming	..
9 .. c. 16	..	1097	Act, 1845)	..	1420
9 Geo. I, c. 22 (The Black Act)	..	1097	9 & 10 Vict., c. 59	..	1537
7 Geo. II, c. 21	..	1317	.. .. c. 95, s. 58 (proviso)	..	1153
26 .. c. 19, s. 1	..	1097	12 .. c. 46, s. 1	..	1059
12 Geo. III, s. 1 (Dockyards Protec-	..	1507	14 & 15 .. c. 100, s. 8	..	1577
tion Act, 1772)	..	1507	.. .. s. 9	..	1077
33 .. c. 52, s. 62	..	1290	16 & 17 .. c. 23, s. 41	..	1645
39 .. c. 85	..	1357	18 & 19 .. c. 122, s. 27 (Metropo-	..
43 .. c. 58	..	1075	litan Building Act, 1855)	..	1279
52 .. c. 155	..	1537	20 & 21 Vict., c. 54, s. 17	..	1256
4 Geo. IV c. 54, s. 2	..	1490	.. .. c. 85, s. 29 (Divorce	..
.. .. s. 3	..	1773	Act)	..	1686
5 .. c. c. 113 (Slave Trade Act,	..	1218	21 & 22 .. c. 93 (Legitimacy De-	..
1824)	..	1218	claration Act, 1858)	..	1664
.. .. s. 9	..	1218	24 & 25 .. c. 41	..	1487
.. .. s. 10	..	1218	.. .. c. 76, s. 44 (Larceny	..
7 .. c. 64, s. 9	..	1059	Act, 1861)	..	1290
7 & 8 .. c. 2	..	1304	24 & 25 Vict., c. 76, s. 45	..	1290
.. .. c. 27	..	1099	.. .. ss. 46, 47	..	1290
.. .. c. 29, s. 6	..	1282	.. .. s. 48	..	1290
.. .. s. 8	1279, 1295, 1297, 1528	1532	.. .. c. 91, s. 95	..	1393
.. .. s. 11	..	1532	.. .. c. 94, s. 3	..	1059
.. .. s. 12	1278, 1281	1256	.. .. c. 96, s. 3 (Larceny	..
.. .. s. 18	..	1256	Act, 1861)	1278, 1345
.. .. s. 47	..	1357	.. .. ss. 21, 22	..	1256
.. .. s. 57	..	1395	.. .. s. 28	..	1252
7 & 8 Geo. IV, c. 30, s. 2 (Malicious	..	1487	.. .. s. 38	..	1392
Injuries to Property Act, Eng-	..	1487	.. .. s. 40	..	1184
land, 1826)	..	1487	.. .. s. 44	..	1763
7 & 8 Geo. IV, c. 30, ss. 16 & 17	..	1487	.. .. ss. 44, 45	..	1301
9 .. c. 31	1075, 1122, 1241	1122	.. .. s. 45	..	1297
.. .. s. 11	..	1122	.. .. s. 47	..	1311
.. .. s. 14	1090, 1091	1188	.. .. s. 49	1297, 1305
.. .. s. 20	..	1188	.. .. s. 50	..	1537
.. .. s. 21	..	1188	.. .. s. 51	1532, 1337
.. .. c. 55, s. 40	..	1357	.. .. s. 52	..	1537
.. .. s. 50 (1)	..	1398	.. .. s. 53	1279, 1528
10 .. c. 34, s. 24 (1)	..	1188	.. .. s. 54	..	1550
.. .. s. 25 (1)	..	1188	.. .. s. 56	1528, 1551
11 Geo. IV & 1 Will. IV, c. 68	..	1377	.. .. s. 57	..	1278
11 .. s. 2	..	1377	.. .. s. 60	..	1278
1 Will. IV & 1 Vict., c. 89, ss. 4, 6	..	1507	.. .. s. 64	..	1257
.. .. c. 66, s. 3	..	1645	.. .. s. 67	1282, 1372
.. .. s. 16	..	1565	.. .. s. 68	..	1357
.. .. c. 85	..	1695	.. .. s. 69	..	1372
2 & 3 Will IV, c. 125	..	1537	.. .. ss. 69, 70	..	1252
			.. .. s. 70	..	1357

TABLE OF STATUTES AND ACTS

cxvii

[illegible]

PAGE				PAGE
XXVII	of 1870	s. 12	.. 1044	IV	of 1882 (Transfer of Property)	s. 53	.. 1466
I	of 1871	(Cattle Trespass), s. 13	.. 1783	VI	of "	s. 54	.. 1476
XXVII	of "	(Criminal Tribes), s. 19	.. 1366	VIII	of "	(Penal Code Amendment)	s. 7 1070
I	of 1872	(Evidence) s. 20	.. 1159		"	s. 8	.. 1136
		s. 19	1314, 1367, 1683	XXI	of 1883	(Emigration) s. 9	.. 1389
		s. 3	.. 1341	IV	of 1884	(Explosives) s. 82, (cl. 2)	.. 1159
		s. 6	.. 1755	IV	of 1889	(Merchandise Marks)	s. 13 1159
		s. 6, ill. (a)	.. 1018		"	s. 2	.. 1622
		s. 6, ill. (c)	.. 1755		"	s. 3	.. 1562
		s. 7, ill. (a)	.. 1315		"	s. 5	.. 1622
		s. 8, ill. (a)	.. 1018		"	s. 8	.. 1616
		s. 8, ill. (j)	.. 1312		"	s. 9	.. 1616
		s. 9	.. 1755	IV	of 1889	(Merchandise Marks)	s. 14 1616, 1629
		s. 11	1212, 1452		"	s. 15	1616, 1629
		s. 14	.. 1453		"	s. 33	1616, 1629
		s. 14, (a)	.. 1410		"	s. 41	.. 1635
		s. 14, ill. (b), (d)	.. 1598	XIII	of "	(Cantonment) s. 15	.. 1159
		s. 14, ill. (e)	.. 1755	IX	of 1890	(Railways) s. 55	.. 1350
		s. 14, Expl. 2	.. 1332		"	ss. 72-82	.. 1377
		s. 15, ill. (b), (c)	.. 1598	X	of 1891	(Criminal Law Amendment)	s. 1 1230
		ss. 25, 26	.. 1018		cf "	(Repealing and Amending)	1062, 1389
		s. 26	.. 1128		of 1895	(Criminal Law Amendment)	s. 4 1612
		s. 27	1018, 1128	XXI	of 1896	(Paper Currency Amendment)	ss. 15, 17 .. 1672
		(Evidence) s. 30,		IV	of 1897	(Fisheries)	s. 6 .. 1478
		ill. (a)	.. 1018		"	s. 7	.. 1159
		s. 32	.. 1018	VIII	of 1897	(Reformatory Schools)	s. 29.. 1159
		s. 32 (8)	.. 1756	IV	of 1898	(Penal Code Amendment)	s. 6 1771
		s. 32, ill. (a)	.. 1018	V	of 1898	(Crim. Pro. Code)	s. 4 (h) .. 1741
		s. 43, ill. (a)	.. 1756		"	s. 50	.. 1689
		s. 45	.. 1584		"	s. 54 only	.. 1153
		s. 47	.. 1584		"	s. 58	.. 1159
		s. 50	.. 1690		"	s. 59	.. 1159
		s. 54	.. 1335		"	s. 61	.. 1159
		s. 73	.. 1584		"	s. 64	.. 1159
		s. 98	.. 1756		"	s. 65	.. 1159
		s. 102	.. 1481		"	s. 100.	1154, 1164, 1166
		s. 105	1002, 1015, 1721, 1752		"	s. 108 (c)	.. 1725
		s. 105, ill. (b)	.. 1000		"	s. 110	.. 1332
		s. 114, ill. (a)	.. 1273, 1276, 1396, 1400, 1406		"	s. 160	.. 1152
		s. 114, ill. (b)	.. 1018, 1320, 1398		"	s. 162	.. 1018
		s. 133	.. 1397		"	s. 164	.. 1018
IX		(Contract)	.. 1437		"	s. 179	1379, 1657
		s. 23	.. 1224		"	s. 179, ill. (a) (d)	.. 1036
		s. 170	.. 1350		"	179, ill. (c)	1299, 1379, 1773
		s. 171, ill. (a)	.. 1350		"	s. 180 E.	.. 1390
		s. 171	.. 1351		"	s. 180, ill. (b)	.. 1394
		s. 182	.. 1388		"	s. 181 (4)	.. 1199
		s. 221	.. 1351		"	s. 195	.. 1597
XV		(Christian Marriage)	.. 1666		"	s. 195 (c)	1582, 1608
IX	of 1875	(Majority)	.. 1226		"	s. 195 (2)	.. 1582
I	of 1877	(Specific Relief) s. 3	.. 1189
VI	of 1878	(Treasure Trove) s. 35	.. 1567
VII	of 1878	(Forests) s. 20	.. 1353
XI	of "	(Arms) s. 63	.. 1159
XXII	of 1881	(Excise) s. 12	.. 1159
II	of 1882	(Trusts) s. 207	.. 1159
		s. 3	.. 1358
IV	of 1882	(Transfer of Property) s. 94 ill. (b)	1381
			1462, 1466

		PAGE			PAGE
V	of 1898 (Crim Pro. Code)		XXX	of 1923 (Civil Marriage Act Amendment)	1655
	" " s. 195 (5)	1582	XVIII	of 1924 (Penal Code Amendment ss. 372, 373)	1218, 1223, 1679
	" " s. 198	1650, 1653, 1751, 1760	III	of 1925 (Workmen's Breach of Contract repealing Act) s. 2	1650, 1653
	" " s. 199	1679, 1687	XXIV	of 1925 (Penal Code Amendment)	1236
	" " s. 207	1026	XXIX	of 1925 (Penal Code Amendment)	1230, 1236
	" " s. 210	1015	XXX	of 1927 (Indian Divorce Act Amendment)	1655
	" " s. 212	1015	X	of 1927 (Repealing and Amending Act)	1770
	" " s. 213 (2)	1015
	" " s. 230	1760		BENGAL ACTS.
	" " s. 234	1373	VII	of 1864 (Salt) s. 24	1159
	" " s. 234, ill. (h)	1773	II	of 1867 (Public Gambling) s. 11	1159
	" " s. 235, ill. (b)	1533	III	of 1869 (Cruelty to Animals) s. 1	1159
	" " s. 236	1268	VII	of 1878 (Excise and Licensing) ss. 40, 41	1159
	" " s. 237	1268
	" " s. 238	1784		BOMBAY ACTS.
	" " s. 238 (3)	1679	V	of 1787 (Abkari)	1151
	" " s. 239	1225, 1268	V	of 1879 (Land Rev. Code) s. 37	1520
	" " s. 239, ill. (c)	1268	IV	of 1887 (Prevention of Gambling) s. 12A	1159
	" " s. 239 (e)	1394	II	of 1890 (Salt) s. 39	1159
	" " s. 239 (f)	1394
	" " s. 239, ill. (j)	1397		BURMA ACTS.
	" " s. 250	1744	XVI	of 1884 (Gaming) s. 7	1159
	" " s. 260 (a)	1140	XX	of 1886 (Upper Burma Laws) s. 7 (1)	1018
	" " s. 260 (c)	1102	III	of 1898 (Municipalities) s. 194	1159
	" " s. 260 (d)	1268
	" " s. 260 (f)	1393		MADRAS ACTS.
	" " s. 260 (i)	1537	I	of 1886 (Abkari) s. 34	1159
	" " s. 266, 336	1026	IV	of 1889 (Salt) s. 49	1159
	" " s. 271	1024
	" " s. 345	1113, 1687		N. W. P. ACT.
	" " s. 345 (5)	1679	XV	of 1873 (Municipalities) s. 35	1159
	" " s. 491	1155, 1163
	" " s. 517	1270		REGULATIONS.
	" " s. 519	1270		IMPERIAL.
	" " s. 521 (1)	1759	XVII	of 1817 (Criminal Procedure)	1680
	" " Sch. V.	1270	VII	of 1819 (Abduction)	1680
	Form, XXVIII	1036	III	of 1901 (Frontier Crimes)	956, 1167, 1185, 1198, 1230, 1245, 1306, 1389, 1471, 1509, 1677
	" " Sch. V, (XXVIII (1) (10)	1036
	" " Sch. V, [XXVIII (8)]	1114		BENGAL.
XII	of 1899 (Currency Notes & Forgery) s. 2	1662	XXI	of 1795 (Dharna, Infanticided Benares)	1776
VI	of 1901 (Assam Labour & Emigration)	1216, 1439	LII	of 1803 (Court of Wards Ceded Provinces) s. 3	1313
	" " s. 64	1439
III	of 1903 (Electricity) s. 39	1254
XV	of 1903 (Extradition) Sch. I	1160
III	of 1907 (Provincial Insolvency)	1462
V	of 1908 (Code of Civil Procedure)	1260
XVII	of 1908 (Registration)	1565
III	of 1909 (Presidency Towns Insolvency)	1462
IV	of 1909 (Whipping)	1314, 1546
VII	of 1909 (Whipping Act) s. 3 (d)	1278, 1546, 1547, 1548
	" " s. 3 (e)	1551
	Government of India Act, s. 67 (7)	1704
	" " s. 72 (D)	1704
XVIII	of 1923 (Criminal Procedure Code)	1160, 1163, 1184, 1199, 1657
XX	of 1923 (Penal Code Amendment) ss. 366-A & 366-B	1204, 1210

		PAGE			PAGE
	BOMBAY.			confinement of Individuals as State Prisoners)	1159
LIII	of 1803 (Criminal Law)
	s. 3 ..	1311
III	of 1818 (State Prisoners) ..	1159
VII	of 1820 (Dharna) ..	1776
XIV	of 1827 (Defining crimes and offences and specifying the punishments etc.)		VIII	of 1802 Faujdari Adalat)
	s. 36 ..	1776		s. 15 ..	1014
XVII	of 1827 (Rules for the Assessment and Realization of the Land Revenue, etc.) ..	1159	XV	of 1803 (Criminal Law)
				s. 3 ..	1311
XXV	of 1827 (Rules for the apprehension and		II	of 1819 (State Prisoners).	1159
				UPPER BURMA.
			V	of 1898 (Forest) s. 63.	1159, 1306, 1509
			XIII	of 1898 (Laws Act) s. 4
				(3) (b) ..	1773

Advocate

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE, 1860.

(ACT XLV OF 1860).

(Passed on the 6th October, 1860, as Amended upto January 1936).

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTION.

Preamble.

WHEREAS it is expedient to provide a general Penal Code for British India; It is enacted as follows:—

Title and extent of operation of the Code.

1. This act shall be called the Indian Penal Code, and shall take effect * * * throughout the whole of the territories which are or may become vested in Her Majesty by the Statute 21 & 22 Victoria, Chapter 106, entitled "An Act for the better government of India" * * *.

Punishment of offences committed within the said territories.

2. Every person shall be liable to punishment under this Code and not otherwise for every act or omission contrary to the provisions thereof, of which he shall be guilty within the said territories * * *.

Punishment of offences committed beyond, but which by law may be tried within the territories.

3. Any person liable, by any law passed by the Governor-General of India in Council, to be tried for an offence committed beyond the limits of the said territories shall be dealt with according to the provisions of this Code for any act committed beyond the said territories in the same manner as if such act had been committed within the said territories.

4. The provisions of this Code apply also to any offence committed by—

Extension of Code to extra-territorial offences.

(1) any Native Indian subject of Her Majesty in any place without and beyond British India;

(2) any other British subject within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India;

(3) any servant of the Queen, whether a British subject or not, within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India.

Explanation.—In this section the word "offence" includes every act committed outside British India which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under this Code.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a coolie, who is a Native Indian subject, commits a murder in Uganda. He can be tried and convicted of murder in any place in British India in which he may be found.

(b) B, a European British subject, commits a murder in Kashmir. He can be tried and convicted of murder in any place in British India in which he may be found.

(c) C, a foreigner, who is in the service of the Punjab Government, commits a murder in Jhind. He can be tried and convicted of murder at any place in British India in which he may be found.

(d) D, a British subject living in Indore, instigates E to commit a murder in Bombay. D is guilty of abetting murder.

5. Nothing in this Act is intended to repeal, vary, suspend, or affect any of the provisions of the Statute 3 and 4 William IV, Chapter 85, or of any Act of Parliament passed after that Statute in any-wise affecting the East India Company, or the said territories, or the inhabitants thereof; or any of the provisions of any Act for punishing mutiny and desertion of officers, soldiers, sailors or airmen in the service of Her Majesty * * * *, or of any special or local law.

Certain laws not to be affected by this Act.

CHAPTER II.

GENERAL EXPLANATIONS.

6. Throughout this Code every definition of an offence, every penal provision and every illustration of every such definition or penal provision, shall be understood subject to the exceptions contained in the chapter entitled "General Exceptions," though those exceptions are not repeated in such definition, penal provision or illustration.

Definitions in the Code to be understood subject to exceptions.

Illustrations.

(a) The sections in this Code, which contain definitions of offences, do not express that a child under seven years of age cannot commit such offences; but the definitions are to be understood subject to the general exception which provides that nothing shall be an offence which is done by a child under seven years of age.

(b) A, a Police-officer, without warrant, apprehends Z, who has committed murder. Here A is not guilty of the offence of wrongful confinement; for he was bound by law to apprehend Z, and therefore the case falls within the general exception which provides that "nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is bound by law to do it."

Sense of expression once explained.

7. Every expression which is explained in any part of this Code, is used in every part of this Code in conformity with the explanation.

8. The pronoun "he" and its derivatives are used of any person, whether male or female.

Gender.

9. Unless the contrary appears from the context, words importing the singular number include the plural number, and words importing the plural number include the singular number.

Number.

10. The word "man" denotes a male human being of any age: the word "woman" denotes a female human being of any age.

"Man"; "Woman."

11. The word "person" includes any Company or Association, or body of persons, whether incorporated or not.

"Person."

12. The word "public" includes any class of the public or any community.

"Public."

13. The word "Queen" denotes the Sovereign for the time being of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

"Queen."

14. The words "servant of the Queen" denote all officers or servants continued, appointed or employed in India by or under the authority of the said Statute 21 & 22 Victoria, Chapter 106, entitled "An Act for the Better Government of India," or by or under the authority of the Government of India or any Government.

"Servant of the Queen."

15. The words "British India" denote the territories which are or may become vested in Her Majesty by the said Statute 21 & 22 Victoria, Chapter 106, entitled "An Act for the Better Government of India" * * * *.

"British India."

Government of India"

16. The words "Government of India" denote the Governor-General of India in Council, or during the absence of the Governor-General of India from his Council, the President in Council, or the Governor-General of India alone, as regards the powers which may be lawfully exercised by them or him respectively.

17. The word "Government" denotes the person or persons authorised by law to administer executive Government in any part of British India.

18. The word "Presidency" denotes the territories subject to the Government of a Presidency.

19. The word "Judge" denotes not only every person who is officially designated as a Judge, but also every person who is empowered by law to give, in any legal proceeding, civil or criminal, a definitive judgment, or a judgment which, if not appealed against, would be definitive, or a judgment which, if confirmed by some other authority, would be definitive, or who is one of a body of persons, which body of persons is empowered by law to give such a judgment.

Illustrations.

(a) A Collector exercising jurisdiction in a suit under Act X of 1859 is a Judge.

(b) A Magistrate exercising jurisdiction in respect of a charge on which he has power to sentence to fine or imprisonment, with or without appeal, is a Judge.

(c) A member of a panchayat which has power, under Regulation VII, 1816, of the Madras Code, to try and determine suits, is a Judge.

(d) A Magistrate exercising jurisdiction in respect of a charge on which he has power only to commit for trial to another Court, is not a Judge.

20. The words "Court of Justice" denote a Judge who is empowered by law to act judicially alone, or a body of Judges which is empowered by law to act judicially as a body, when such Judge or body of Judges is acting judicially.

Illustration.

A panchayat acting under Regulation VII, 1816, of the Madras Code, having power to try and determine suits, is a Court of Justice.

21. The words "public servant" denote a person falling under any of the descriptions hereinafter following, namely:—

First.—Every Covenanted servant of the Queen ;

Second.—Every Commissioned Officer in the Military, Naval or Air Forces of the Queen while serving under the Government of India or any Government ;

Third.—Every Judge ;

Fourth.—Every officer of a Court of Justice whose duty it is, as such officer, to investigate or report on any matter of law or fact, or to make, authenticate, or keep any document, or to take charge or dispose of any property, or to execute any judicial process, or to administer any oath, or to interpret, or to preserve order in the Court; and every person specially authorized by a Court of Justice to perform any of such duties ;

Fifth.—Every juryman, assessor or member of a panchayat assisting a Court of Justice or public servant ;

Sixth.—Every arbitrator or other person to whom any cause or matter has been referred for decision or report by any Court of Justice, or by any other competent public authority ;

Seventh.—Every person who holds any office by virtue of which he is empowered to place or keep any person in confinement ;

Eighth.—Every officer of Government whose duty it is, as such officer, to prevent offences, to give information of offences, to bring offenders to justice, or to protect the public health, safety or convenience ;

Ninth.—Every officer whose duty it is, as such officer, to take, receive, keep or expend any property on behalf of Government, or to make any survey, assessment or contract on behalf of Government, or to execute any revenue-process, or to investigate, or to report, on any matter affecting the pecuniary interests of Government, or to make, authenticate or keep any document relating to the pecuniary interests of Government, or to prevent the infraction of any law for the protection of the pecuniary interests of Government, and every officer in the service or pay of Government or remunerated by fees or commission for the performance of any public duty ;

Tenth.—Every officer whose duty it is, as such officer, to take, receive, keep or expend any property, to make any survey or assessment or to levy any rate or tax for any secular common purpose of any village, town or district, or to make, authenticate or keep any document for the ascertaining of the rights of the people of any village, town or district.

Eleventh.—Every person who holds any office in virtue of which he is empowered to prepare, publish, maintain or revise an electoral roll or to conduct an election or part of an election.

Illustration.

A Municipal Commissioner is a public servant.

Explanation 1.—Persons falling under any of the above descriptions are public servants, whether appointed by the Government or not.

Explanation 2.—Wherever the words “ public servant ” occur, they shall be understood of every person who is in actual possession of the situation of a public servant, whatever legal defect there may be in his right to hold that situation.

Explanation 3.—The word “ election ” denotes an election for the purpose of selecting members of any legislative, municipal or other public authority, of whatever character, the method of selection to which is by, or under, any law prescribed as by election.

22. The words “ moveable property ” are intended to include corporeal property of every description, except land and things attached to the earth or permanently fastened to anything which is attached to the earth.

“ Moveable property.”

23. “ Wrongful gain ” is gain by unlawful means of property to which the person gaining is not legally entitled.

“ Wrongful Gain.”

“ Wrongful loss ” is the loss by unlawful means of property to which the person losing it is legally entitled.

“ Wrongful loss.”

A person is said to gain wrongfully when such person retains wrongfully, as well as when such person acquires wrongfully. A person is said to lose wrongfully when such person is wrongfully kept out of any property, as well as when such person is wrongfully deprived of property.

“ Gaining wrongfully ” : “ Losing wrongfully.”

24. Whoever does anything with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another person, is said to do that thing “ dishonestly.”

“ Dishonestly.”

25. A person is said to do a thing fraudulently if he does that thing with intent to defraud but not otherwise.

“ Fraudulently.”

26. A person is said to have “ reason to believe ” a thing if he has sufficient cause to believe that thing but not otherwise.

“ Reason to believe.”

Property in possession of wife, clerk or servant.

27. When property is in the possession of a person's wife, clerk or servant, on account of that person, it is in that person's possession within the meaning of this Code.

Explanation.—A person employed temporarily or on a particular occasion in the capacity of a clerk or servant, is a clerk or servant within the meaning of this section.

28. A person is said to “counterfeit” who causes one thing to resemble another thing, intending by means of that resemblance to practise deception, or knowing it to be likely that deception will thereby be practised.

Explanation 1.—It is not essential to counterfeiting that the imitation should be exact.

Explanation 2.—When a person causes one thing to resemble another thing, and the resemblance is such that a person might be deceived thereby, it shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that the person so causing the one thing to resemble the other thing intended by means of that resemblance to practise deception or knew it to be likely that deception would thereby be practised.

29. The word “document” denotes any matter expressed or described upon any substance by means of letters, figures or marks, or by more than one of those means, intended to be used, or which may be used, as evidence of that matter.

Explanation 1.—It is immaterial by what means or upon what substance the letters, figures or marks are formed, or whether the evidence is intended for, or may be used in, a Court of Justice, or not.

Illustrations.

A writing expressing the terms of a contract, which may be used as evidence of the contract, is a document.

A cheque upon a banker is a document.

A power-of-Attorney is a document.

A map or plan which is intended to be used or which may be used as evidence, is a document.

A writing containing directions or instructions is a document.

Explanation 2.—Whatever is expressed by means of letters, figures or marks as explained by mercantile or other usage, shall be deemed to be expressed by such letters, figures or marks within the meaning of this section, although the same may not be actually expressed.

Illustration.

A writes his name on the back of a bill of exchange payable to his order. The meaning of the endorsement, as explained by mercantile usage, is that the bill is to be paid to the holder. The endorsement is a document, and must be construed in the same manner as if the words “pay to the holder” or words to that effect had been written over the signature.

30. The words “valuable security” denote a document which is, or purports to be, a document whereby any legal right is created, extended, transferred, restricted, extinguished or released, or whereby any person acknowledges that he lies under legal liability, or has not a certain legal right.

Illustration.

A writes his name on the back of a bill of exchange. As the effect of this endorsement is to transfer the right to the bill to any person who may become the lawful holder of it, the endorsement is a “valuable security.”

31. The words “a will” denote any testamentary document.

“A will.”

Words referring to acts include illegal omissions.

32. In every part of this Code, except where a contrary intention appears from the context, words which refer to acts done extend also to illegal omissions.

33. The word "act" denotes as well a series of acts as a single act: the word "omission" denotes as well a series of omissions as a single omission.

34. When a criminal act is done by several persons, in furtherance of the common intention of all, each of such persons is liable for that act in the same manner as if it were done by him alone.

35. Whenever an act, which is criminal only by reason of its being done with a criminal knowledge or intention, is done by several persons, each of such persons who joins in the act with such knowledge or intention is liable for the act in the same manner as if the act were done by him alone with that knowledge or intention.

36. Wherever the causing of a certain effect, or an attempt to cause that effect, by an act or by an omission, is an offence, it is to be understood that the causing of that effect partly by an act and partly by an omission is the same offence.

Illustration.

A intentionally causes Z's death, partly by illegally omitting to give Z food, and partly by beating Z. A has committed murder.

37. When an offence is committed by means of several acts, whoever intentionally co-operates in the commission of that offence by doing any one of those acts, either singly or jointly with any other person, commits that offence.

Illustrations.

(a) A and B agree to murder Z by severally and at different times giving him small doses of poison. A and B administer the poison according to the agreement with intent to murder Z. Z dies from the effects of the several doses of poison so administered to him. Here A and B intentionally co-operate in the commission of murder, and as each of them does an act by which the death is caused, they are both guilty of the offence though their acts are separate.

(b) A and B are joint jailors, and, as such, have the charge of Z, a prisoner, alternately for six hours at a time. A and B, intending to cause Z's death, knowingly co-operate in causing that effect by illegally omitting, each during the time of his attendance, to furnish Z with food supplied to them for that purpose. Z dies of hunger. Both A and B are guilty of the murder of Z.

(c) A, a jailor, has the charge of Z, a prisoner. A, intending to cause Z's death, illegally omits to supply Z with food; in consequence of which Z is much reduced in strength, but the starvation is not sufficient to cause his death. A is dismissed from his office, and B succeeds him. B, without collusion or co-operation with A, illegally omits to supply Z with food, knowing that he is likely thereby to cause Z's death. Z dies of hunger. B is guilty of murder, but, as A did not co-operate with B, A is guilty only of an attempt to commit murder.

Persons concerned in criminal act may be guilty of different offences.

38. Where several persons are engaged or concerned in the commission of a criminal act, they may be guilty of different offences by means of that act.

Illustration.

A attacks Z under such circumstances of grave provocation that his killing of Z would be only culpable homicide not amounting to murder. B having ill-will towards Z and intending to kill him, and not having been subject to the provocation, assists A in killing Z. Here, though A and B are both engaged in causing Z's death, B is guilty of murder, and A is guilty only of culpable homicide.

39. A person is said to cause an effect "voluntarily" when he causes it by means whereby he intended to cause it, or by means which, at the time of employing those means, he knew or had reason to believe to be likely to cause it.

Illustration.

A sets fire, by night, to an inhabited house in a large town, for the purpose of facilitating robbery, and thus causes the death of a person. Here, A may not have intended to cause death, and may even be sorry that death has been caused by his act: yet, if he knew that he was likely to cause death, he has caused death voluntarily.

40. Except in the chapter and sections mentioned in clauses 2 and 3 of this section, the word "offence" denotes a thing made punishable by this Code.

In Chapter IV, Chapter V-A and in the following sections, namely, sections 64, 65, 66, 67, 71, 109, 110, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, 187, 194, 195, 203, 211, 213, 214, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 347, 348, 388, 389 and 445, the word "offence" denotes a thing punishable under this Code, or under any special or local law as hereinafter defined.

And in sections 141, 176, 177, 201, 202, 212, 216 and 441 the word "offence" has the same meaning when the thing punishable under the special or local law is punishable under such law with imprisonment for a term of six months or upwards, whether with or without fine.

41. A "special law" is a law applicable to a particular subject.

42. A "local law" is a law applicable only to a particular part of British India.

43. The word "illegal" is applicable to everything which is an offence or which is prohibited by law, or which furnishes ground for a civil action: and a person is said to be "legally bound to do" whatever it is illegal in him to omit.

44. The word "injury" denotes any harm whatever illegally caused to any person, in body, mind, reputation or property.

45. The word "life" denotes the life of a human being, unless the contrary appears from the context.

46. The word "death" denotes the death of a human being, unless the contrary appears from the context.

47. The word "animal" denotes any living creature, other than a human being.

48. The word "vessel" denotes anything made for the conveyance by water of human being or of property.

49. Wherever the word "year" or the word "month" is used, it is to be understood that the year or the month is to be reckoned according to the British calendar.

50. The word "section" denotes one of those portions of a chapter of this Code which are distinguished by prefixed numeral figures.

51. The word "oath" includes a solemn affirmation substituted by law for an oath, and any declaration required or authorized by law to be made before a public servant or to be used for the purpose of proof, whether in a Court of Justice or not.

52. Nothing is said to be done or believed in "good faith" which is done or believed without due care and attention.

CHAPTER III.

OF PUNISHMENTS.

53. The punishments to which offenders are liable under the provisions "Punishments." of this Code are,—

First,—Death ;

Secondly,—Transportation ;

Thirdly,—Penal servitude ;

Fourthly,—Imprisonment, which is of two descriptions, namely :—

(1) Rigorous, that is, with hard labour ;

(2) Simple.

Fifthly,—Forfeiture of property ;

Sixthly,—Fine.

54. In every case in which sentence of death shall have been passed, the Government of India or the Government of the place within which the offender shall have been sentenced may, without the consent of the offender, commute the punishment for any other punishment provided by this Code.

Commutation of sentence of death.

55. In every case in which sentence of transportation for life shall have been passed, the Government of India or the Government of the place within which the offender shall have been sentenced may, without the consent of the offender, commute the punishment for imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding fourteen years.

Commutation of sentence of transportation for life.

56. Whenever any person being an European or American is convicted of an offence punishable under this Code with transportation, the Court shall sentence the offender to penal servitude instead of transportation according to the provisions of Act XXIV of 1855:

Sentence of Europeans and Americans to penal servitude.

Provided that, where an European or American offender would, but for such Act, be liable to be sentenced or ordered to be transported for a term exceeding ten years, but not for life, he shall be liable to be sentenced or ordered to be kept in penal servitude for such term exceeding six years as to the Court seems fit, but not for life.

Proviso as to sentence for term exceeding ten years, but not for life.

57. In calculating fractions of terms of punishment, transportation for life shall be reckoned as equivalent to transportation for twenty years.

Fractions of terms of punishment.

58. In every case in which a sentence of transportation is passed, the offender, until he is transported, shall be dealt with in the same manner as if sentenced to rigorous imprisonment, and shall be held to have been undergoing his sentence of transportation during the term of his imprisonment.

Offenders sentenced to transportation how dealt with until transported.

59. In every case in which an offender is punishable with imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards, it shall be competent to the Court which sentences such offender, instead of awarding sentence of imprisonment, to sentence the offender to transportation for a term not less than seven years, and not exceeding the term for which by this Code such offender is liable to imprisonment.

Transportation instead of imprisonment.

60. In every case in which an offender is punishable with imprisonment which may be of either description, it shall be competent to the Court which sentences such offender to direct in the sentence that such imprisonment shall be wholly rigorous, or that such imprisonment shall be wholly simple, or that any part of such imprisonment shall be rigorous and the rest simple.

Sentence may be (in certain cases of imprisonment) wholly or partly rigorous or simple.

61. [Repealed.]

62. [Repealed.]

63. Where no sum is expressed to which a fine may extend, the amount of fine to which the offender is liable is unlimited, but shall not be excessive.

Amount of fine.

Sentence of imprisonment for non-payment of fine.

64. In every case of an offence punishable with imprisonment as well as fine, in which the offender is sentenced to a fine, whether with or without imprisonment, and in every case of an offence punishable with imprisonment or fine, or with fine only, in which the offender is sentenced to a fine,

it shall be competent to the Court which sentences such offender to direct by the sentence that, in default of payment of the fine, the offender shall suffer imprisonment for a certain term, which imprisonment shall be in excess of any other imprisonment to which he may have been sentenced or to which he may be liable under a commutation of a sentence.

65. The term for which the Court directs the offender to be imprisoned in default of payment of a fine shall not exceed one-fourth of the term of imprisonment which is the maximum fixed for the offence, if the offence be punishable with imprisonment as well as fine.

Limit to imprisonment for non-payment of fine, when imprisonment and fine awardable.

Description of imprisonment for non-payment of fine.

66. The imprisonment which the Court imposes in default of payment of a fine may be of any description to which the offender might have been sentenced for the offence.

67. If the offence be punishable with fine only, the imprisonment which the Court imposes in default of payment of the fine shall be simple, and the term for which the Court directs the offender to be imprisoned, in default of payment of fine, shall not exceed the following scale, that is to say, for any term not exceeding two months when the amount of the fine shall not exceed fifty rupees, and for any term not exceeding four months when the amount shall not exceed one hundred rupees, and for any term not exceeding six months in any other case.

Imprisonment for non-payment of fine, when offence punishable with fine only.

Imprisonment to terminate on payment of fine.

68. The imprisonment which is imposed in default of payment of a fine shall terminate whenever that fine is either paid or levied by process of law.

69. If, before the expiration of the term of imprisonment fixed in default of payment, such a proportion of the fine be paid or levied that the term of imprisonment suffered in default of payment is not less than proportional to the part of the fine still unpaid, the imprisonment shall terminate.

Termination of imprisonment on payment of proportional part of fine.

Illustration.

A is sentenced to a fine of one hundred rupees and to four months' imprisonment in default of payment. Here, if seventy-five rupees of the fine be paid or levied before the expiration of one month of the imprisonment, A will be discharged as soon as the first month has expired. If seventy-five rupees be paid or levied at the time of the expiration of the first month, or at any later time while A continues in imprisonment, A will be immediately discharged. If fifty rupees of the fine be paid or levied before the expiration of two months of the imprisonment, A will be discharged as soon as the two months are completed. If fifty rupees be paid or levied at the time of the expiration of those two months, or at any later time while A continues in imprisonment, A will be immediately discharged.

70. The fine, or any part thereof which remains unpaid, may be levied at any time within six years after the passing of the sentence, and if, under the sentence, the offender be liable to imprisonment for a longer period than six years, then at any time previous to the expiration of that period; and the death of the offender does not discharge from the liability any property which would, after his death, be legally liable for his debts.

Fine leviable within six years, or during imprisonment.

Death not to discharge property from liability.

71. Where anything which is an offence is made up of parts, any of which parts is itself an offence, the offender shall not be punished with the punishment of more than one of such of his offences, unless it be so expressly provided.

Limit of punishment of offence made up of several offences.

Where anything is an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished, or where several acts, of which one or more than one would by itself or themselves constitute an offence, constitute, when combined, a different offence, the offender shall not be punished with a more severe punishment than the Court which tries him could award for any one of such offences.

Illustrations.

(a) A gives Z fifty strokes with a stick. Here A may have committed the offence of voluntarily causing hurt to Z by the whole beating, and also by each of the blows which make up the whole beating. If A were liable to punishment for every blow, he might be imprisoned for fifty years, one for each blow. But he is liable only to one punishment for the whole beating.

(b) But if, while A is beating Z, Y interferes, and A intentionally strikes Y, here, as the blow given to Y is no part of the act whereby A voluntarily causes hurt to Z, A is liable to one punishment for voluntarily causing hurt to Z, and to another for the blow given to Y.

72. In all cases in which judgment is given that a person is guilty of one of several offences specified in the judgment, but that it is doubtful of which of these offences he is guilty, the offender shall be punished for the offence for which the lowest punishment is provided if the same punishment is not provided for all.

Punishment of person guilty of one of several offences, the judgment stating that it is doubtful of which.

73. Whenever any person is convicted of an offence for which under this Code the Court has power to sentence him to rigorous imprisonment, the Court may, by its sentence, order that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of the imprisonment to which he is sentenced, not exceeding three months in the whole, according to the following scale, that is to say—

Solitary confinement.

a time not exceeding one month if the term of imprisonment shall not exceed six months :

a time not exceeding two months if the term of imprisonment shall exceed six months and shall not exceed one year :

a time not exceeding three months if the term of imprisonment shall exceed one year.

74. In executing a sentence of solitary confinement, such confinement shall in no case exceed fourteen days at a time, with intervals between the periods of solitary confinement of not less duration than such periods, and when the imprisonment awarded shall exceed three months, the solitary confinement shall not exceed seven days in any one month of the whole imprisonment awarded, with intervals between the periods of solitary confinement of not less duration than such periods.

Limit of solitary confinement.

75. Whoever, having been convicted,—

Enhanced punishment for certain offences under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII after previous conviction.

(a) by a Court in British India, of an offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of this Code with imprisonment of either description for a term of three years or upwards, or

(b) by a Court of Tribunal in the territories of any Native Prince or State in India acting under the general or special authority of the Governor-General in Council or of any Local Government, of an offence which would, if committed in British India, have been punishable under those Chapters of this Code with like imprisonment for the like term, shall be guilty of any offence punishable under either of those Chapters with like imprisonment for the like term, shall be subject for every such subsequent offence to transportation for life, or to imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years.

CHAPTER IV.

GENERAL EXCEPTIONS.

Act done by a person bound, or by mistake of fact believing himself bound, by law.

76. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is, or who by reason of a mistake of fact and not by reason of a mistake of law in good faith believes himself to be, bound by law to do it.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a soldier, fires on a mob by the order of his superior officer, in conformity with the commands of the law. A has committed no offence.

(b) A, an officer of a Court of Justice, being ordered by that Court to arrest Y, and, after due enquiry, believing Z to be Y, arrests Z. A has committed no offence.

77. Nothing is an offence which is done by a Judge when acting judicially in the exercise of any power which is, or which in good faith he believes to be, given to him by law.

78. Nothing which is done in pursuance of, or which is warranted by the judgment or order of, a Court of Justice, if done while such judgment or order remains in force, is an offence, notwithstanding the Court may have had no jurisdiction to pass such judgment or order, provided the person doing the act in good faith believes that the Court had such jurisdiction.

Act done by a person justified, or by mistake of fact believing himself justified by law.

79. Nothing is an offence which is done by any person who is justified by law, or who by reason of a mistake of fact and not by reason of a mistake of law in good faith, believes himself to be justified by law, in doing it.

Illustration.

A sees Z commit what appears to A to be a murder. A, in the exercise, to the best of his judgment, exerted in good faith, of the power which the law gives to all persons of apprehending murderers in the act, seizes Z, in order to bring Z before the proper authorities. A has committed no offence, though it may turn out that Z was acting in self-defence.

80. Nothing is an offence which is done by accident or misfortune, and without any criminal intention or knowledge in the doing of a lawful act in a lawful manner by lawful means and with proper care and caution.

Illustration.

A is at work with hatchet; the head flies off and kills a man who is standing by. Here, if there was no want of proper caution on the part of A, his act is excusable and not an offence.

81. Nothing is an offence merely by reason of its being done with the knowledge that it is likely to cause harm, if it be done without any criminal intention to cause harm, and in good faith for the purpose of preventing or avoiding other harm to person or property.

Act likely to cause harm, but done without criminal intent, and to prevent other harm.

Explanation.—It is a question of fact in such a case whether the harm to be prevented or avoided was of such a nature and so imminent as to justify or excuse the risk of doing the act with the knowledge that it was likely to cause harm.

Illustrations.

(a) A, the captain of a steam-vessel, suddenly and without any fault or negligence on his part, finds himself in such a position that, before he can stop his vessel, he must inevitably run down a boat B with twenty or thirty passengers on board, unless he changes the course of his vessel, and that, by changing his course, he must incur risk of running down a boat C with only two passengers on board, which he may possibly clear. Here, if A alters his course without any intention to run down the boat C and in good faith for the purpose of avoiding the danger to the passengers in the boat B, he is not guilty of an offence, though he may run down the boat C by doing an act which he knew was likely to cause that effect, if it be found as a matter of fact that the danger which he intended to avoid was such as to excuse him in incurring the risk of running down C.

(b) A, in a great fire, pulls down houses in order to prevent the conflagration from spreading. He does this with the intention in good faith of saving human life or property. Here, if it be found that the harm to be prevented was of such a nature and so imminent as to excuse A's act, A is not guilty of the offence.

Act of a child under seven years of age.

82. Nothing is an offence which is done by a child under seven years of age.

83. Nothing is an offence which is done by a child above seven years of age and under twelve, who has not attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequences of his conduct on that occasion.

Act of a child above seven and under twelve of immature understanding.

84. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who, at the time of doing it, by reason of unsoundness of mind, is incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is either wrong or contrary to law.

Act of a person of unsound mind.

85. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who, at the time of doing it, is, by reason of intoxication, incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is either wrong, or contrary to law: provided that the thing which intoxicated him was administered to him without his knowledge or against his will.

Act of a person incapable of judgment by reason of intoxication caused against his will.

86. In cases where an act done is not an offence unless done with a particular knowledge or intent, a person who does the act in a state of intoxication shall be liable to be dealt with as if he had the same knowledge as he would have had if he had not been intoxicated, unless the thing which intoxicated him was administered to him without his knowledge or against his will.

Offence requiring a particular intent or knowledge committed by one who is intoxicated.

87. Nothing which is not intended to cause death, or grievous hurt, and which is not known by the doer to be likely to cause death, or grievous hurt, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, to any person, above eighteen years of age, who has given consent, whether express or implied, to suffer that harm; or by reason of any harm which it may be known by the doer to be likely to cause to any such person who has consented to take the risk of that harm.

Act not intended and not known to be likely to cause death or grievous hurt done by consent.

Illustration.

A and Z agree to fence with each other for amusement. This agreement implies the consent of each to suffer any harm which, in the course of such fencing, may be caused without foul play; and if A, while playing fairly, hurts Z, A commits no offence.

88. Nothing, which is not intended to cause death, is an offence by reason of any harm, which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, or be known by the doer to be likely to cause, to any person for whose benefit it is done in good faith, and who has given a consent, whether express or implied, to suffer that harm, or to take the risk of that harm.

Act not intended to cause death done by consent in good faith for person's benefit.

Illustration.

A, a surgeon, knowing that a particular operation is likely to cause the death of Z, who suffers under a painful complaint, but not intending to cause Z's death, and intending, in good faith, Z's benefit, performs that operation on Z, with Z's consent. A has committed no offence.

89. Nothing which is done in good faith for the benefit of a person under twelve years of age, or of unsound mind, by or by consent, either express or implied, of the guardian or other person having lawful charge of that person, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause or be known by the doer to be likely to cause, to that person :

Act done in good faith for benefit of child or insane person, by or by consent of guardian.

Provisos.

Provided—

First.—That this exception shall not extend to the intentional causing of death, or to the attempting to cause death ;

Secondly.—That this exception shall not extend to the doing of anything which the person doing it knows to be likely to cause death, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or grievous hurt; or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity.

Thirdly.—That this exception shall not extend to the voluntary causing of grievous hurt, or to the attempting to cause grievous hurt, unless it be for the purpose of preventing death or grievous hurt, or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity ;

Fourthly.—That this exception shall not extend to the abetment of any offence, to the committing of which offence it would not extend.

Illustration.

A, in good faith, for his child's benefit without his child's consent, has his child cut for the stone by a surgeon, knowing it to be likely that the operation will cause the child's death, but not intending to cause the child's death. A is within the exception, inasmuch as his object was the cure of the child.

90. A consent is not such a consent as is intended by any section of this Code, if the consent is given by a person under fear of injury, or under a misconception of fact, and if the person doing the act knows, or has reason to believe, that the consent was given in consequence of such fear or misconception ; or,

Consent known to be given under fear or misconception.

if the consent is given by a person who, from unsoundness of mind, or intoxication, is unable to understand the nature and consequence of that to which he gives his consent ; or Consent of insane person.

unless the contrary appears from the context, if the consent is given by a person who is under twelve years of age.

Consent of child.

91. The exceptions in sections 87 and 88 and 89 do not extend to acts which are offences independently of any harm which they may cause, or be intended to cause or be known to be likely to cause, to the person giving the consent, or on whose behalf the consent is given.

Exclusion of acts which are offences independently of harm caused.

Illustration.

Causing miscarriage (unless caused in good faith for the purpose of saving the life of the woman) is an offence independently of any harm which it may cause or be intended to cause to the woman. Therefore, it is not an offence "by reason of such harm"; and the consent of the woman or of her guardian to the causing of such miscarriage does not justify the act.

92. Nothing is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause to a person for whose benefit it is done in good faith, even without that person's consent, if the circumstances are such that it is impossible for that person to signify consent, or if that person is incapable of giving consent, and has no guardian or other person in lawful charge of him from whom it is possible to obtain consent in time for the thing to be done with benefit:

Previsos

Provided—

First.—That this exception shall not extend to the intentional causing of death, or the attempting to cause death;

Secondly.—That this exception shall not extend to the doing of anything which the person doing it knows to be likely to cause death, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or grievous hurt or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity;

Thirdly.—That this exception shall not extend to the voluntary causing of hurt, or to the attempting to cause hurt, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or hurt;

Fourthly.—That this exception shall not extend to the abetment of any offence, to the committing of which offence it would not extend.

Illustrations.

(a) Z is thrown from his horse, and is insensible. A, a surgeon, finds that Z requires to be trepanned. A not intending Z's death, but in good faith, for Z's benefit, performs the trepan before Z recovers his power of judging for himself. A has committed no offence.

(b) Z is carried off by a tiger. A fires at the tiger knowing it to be likely that the shot may kill Z, but not intending to kill Z, and in good faith intending Z's benefit. A's ball gives Z a mortal wound. A has committed no offence.

(c) A, a surgeon, sees a child suffer an accident which is likely to prove fatal unless an operation be immediately performed. There is not time to apply to the child's guardian. A performs the operation in spite of the entreaties of the child, intending, in good faith, the child's benefit. A has committed no offence.

(d) A is in a house which is on fire, with Z, a child. People below hold out a blanket. A drops the child from the housetop, knowing it to be likely that the fall may kill the child, but not intending to kill the child, and intending, in good faith, the child's benefit. Here, even if the child is killed by the fall, A has committed no offence.

Explanation.—Mere pecuniary benefit is not benefit within the meaning of sections 88, 89 and 92.

93. No communication made in good faith is an offence by reason of any harm to the person to whom it is made, if it is made for the benefit of that person.

Communication made in good faith.

Illustration.

A, a surgeon, in good faith, communicates to a patient his opinion that he cannot live. The patient dies in consequence of the shock. A has committed no offence, though he knew it to be likely that the communication might cause the patient's death.

94. Except murder, and offences against the State punishable with death, nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is compelled to do it by threats, which, at the time of doing it, reasonably cause the apprehension that instant death to that person will otherwise be the consequence: Provided the person doing the act did not of his own accord, or from a reasonable apprehension of harm to himself short of instant death, place himself in the situation by which he became subject to such constraint.

Act to which a person is compelled by threats.

Explanation 1.—A person who, of his own accord, or by reason of a threat of being beaten, joins a gang of dacoits, knowing their character, is not entitled to the benefit of this exception, on the ground of his having been compelled by his associates to do anything that is an offence by law.

Explanation 2.—A person seized by a gang of dacoits, and forced by threat of instant death, to do a thing which is an offence by law; for example, a smith compelled to take his tools and to force the door of a house for the dacoits to enter and plunder it, is entitled to the benefit of this exception.

95. Nothing is an offence by reason that it causes, or that it is intended to cause, or that it is known to be likely to cause, any harm, if that harm is so slight that no person of ordinary sense and temper would complain of such harm.

Act causing slight harm.

Of the Right of Private Defence.

Things done in private defence.

96. Nothing is an offence which is done in the exercise of the right of private defence.

Right of private defence of the body and of property.

97. Every person has a right, subject to the restrictions contained in section 99, to defend—

First.—His own body, and the body of any other person, against any offence affecting the human body;

Secondly.—The property, whether moveable or immoveable, of himself or of any other person, against any act which is an offence falling under the definition of theft, robbery, mischief or criminal trespass, or which is an attempt to commit theft, robbery, mischief or criminal trespass.

98. When an act, which would otherwise be a certain offence is not that offence, by reason of the youth, the want of maturity of understanding, the unsoundness of mind, or the intoxication of the person doing that act or by reason of any misconception on the part of that person, every person has the same right of private defence against that act which he would have if the act were that offence.

Right of private defence against the act of a person of unsound mind, etc.

Illustrations.

(a) Z, under the influence of madness, attempts to kill A; Z is guilty of no offence. But A has the same right of private defence which he would have if Z were sane.

(b) A enters by night a house which he is legally entitled to enter. Z, in good faith, taking A for a house-breaker, attacks A. Here Z, by attacking A under this misconception, commits no offence. But A has the same right of private defence against Z, which he would have if Z were not acting under that misconception.

99. There is no right of private defence against an act which does not reasonably cause the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt, if done, or attempted to be done by a public servant acting in good faith under colour of his office, though that act may not be strictly justifiable by law.

Acts against which there is no right of private defence.

There is no right of private defence against an act which does not reasonably cause the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt, if done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant acting in good faith under colour of his office, though that direction may not be strictly justifiable by law.

There is no right of private defence in cases in which there is time to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities.

Extent to which the right may be exercised. The right of private defence in no case extends to the inflicting of more harm than it is necessary to inflict for the purpose of defence.

Explanation 1.—A person is not deprived of the right of private defence against an act done, or attempted to be done, by a public servant, as such, unless he knows, or has reason to believe, that the person doing the act is such public servant.

Explanation 2.—A person is not deprived of the right of private defence against an act done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant, unless he knows, or has reason to believe, that the person doing the act is acting by such direction, or unless such person states the authority under which he acts, or, if he has authority in writing, unless he produces such authority, if demanded.

100. The right of private defence of the body extends, under the restrictions mentioned in the last preceding section, to the voluntary causing of death or of any other harm to the assailant, if the offence which occasions the exercise of the right be of any of the descriptions hereinafter enumerated, namely :—

First.—Such an assault as may reasonably cause the apprehension that death will otherwise be the consequence of such assault ;

Secondly.—Such an assault as may reasonably cause the apprehension that grievous hurt will otherwise be the consequence of such assault ;

Thirdly.—An assault with the intention of committing rape ;

Fourthly.—An assault with the intention of gratifying unnatural lust ;

Fifthly.—An assault with the intention of kidnapping or abducting ;

Sixthly.—An assault with the intention of wrongfully confining a person, under circumstances which may reasonably cause him to apprehend that he will be unable to have recourse to the public authorities for his release.

101. If the offence be not of any of the descriptions enumerated in the last preceding section, the right of private defence of the body does not extend to the voluntary causing of death to the assailant, but does extend, under the restrictions mentioned in section 99, to the voluntary causing to the assailant of any harm other than death.

102. The right of private defence of the body commences as soon as a reasonable apprehension of danger to the body arises from an attempt or threat to commit the offence though the offence may not have been committed ; and it continues as long as such apprehension of danger to the body continues.

103. The right of private defence of property extends, under the restrictions mentioned in section 99, to the voluntary causing of death or of any other harm to the wrong-doer, if the offence, the committing of which, or the attempting to commit which, occasions the exercise of the right, be an offence of any of the descriptions hereinafter enumerated, namely :—

First.—Robbery

Secondly.—House-breaking by night ;

Thirdly.—Mischief by fire committed on any building, tent or vessel, which building, tent or vessel is used as a human dwelling, or as a place for the custody of property ;

Fourthly.—Theft, mischief or house-trespass, under such circumstances as may reasonably cause apprehension that death or grievous hurt will be the consequence, if such right of private defence is not exercised.

104. If the offence, the committing of which, or the attempting to commit which, occasions the exercise of the right of private defence, be theft, mischief or criminal trespass, not of any of the descriptions enumerated in the last preceding section, that right does not extend to the voluntary causing of death, but does extend, subject to the restrictions mentioned in section 99, to the voluntary causing to the wrong-doer of any harm other than death.

105. The right of private defence of property commences when a reasonable apprehension of danger to the property commences.

Commencement and continuance of the right of private defence of property.

The right of private defence of property against theft continues till the offender has effected his retreat with the property or either the assistance of the public authorities is obtained, or the property has been recovered.

The right of private defence of property against robbery continues as long as the offender causes or attempts to cause to any person death or hurt or wrongful restraint or as long as the fear of instant death or of instant hurt or of instant personal restraint continues.

The right of private defence of property against criminal trespass or mischief continues as long as the offender continues in the commission of criminal trespass or mischief.

The right of private defence of property against house-breaking by night continues as long as the house-trespass which has been begun by such house-breaking continues.

106. If in the exercise of the right of private defence against an assault which reasonably causes the apprehension of death, the defender be so situated that he cannot effectually exercise that right without risk of harm to an innocent person, his right of private defence extends to the running of that risk.

Right of private defence against deadly assault when there is risk of harm to innocent person.

Illustration.

A is attacked by a mob who attempt to murder him. He cannot effectually exercise his right of private defence without firing on the mob, and he cannot fire without risk of harming young children who are mingled with the mob. A commits no offence if by so firing he harms any of the children.

CHAPTER V.

OF ABETMENT.

Abetment of a thing.

107. A person abets the doing of a thing, who—

First.—Instigates any person to do that thing ; or,

Secondly.—Engages with one or more other person or persons in any conspiracy for the doing of that thing, if an act or illegal omission takes place in pursuance of that conspiracy, and in order to the doing of that thing ; or

Thirdly.—Intentionally aids, by any act or illegal omission, the doing of that thing.

Explanation 1.—A person who, by wilful misrepresentation, or by wilful concealment of a material fact which he is bound to disclose, voluntarily causes or procures, or attempts to cause or procure, a thing to be done, is said to instigate the doing of that thing.

Illustration.

A, a public officer, is authorized by a warrant from a Court of Justice to apprehend Z. B, knowing that fact and also that C is not Z, wilfully represents to A that C is Z, and thereby intentionally causes A to apprehend C. Here B abets by instigation the apprehension of C.

Explanation 2.—Whoever, either prior to or at the time of the commission of an act, does anything in order to facilitate the commission of that act, and thereby facilitates the commission thereof, is said to aid the doing of that act.

108. A person abets an offence, who abets either the commission of an offence, or the commission of an act which would be an offence, if committed by a person capable by law of committing an offence with the same intention or knowledge as that of the abettor.

Abettor.

Explanation 1.—The abetment of the illegal omission of an act may amount to an offence although the abettor may not himself be bound to do that act.

Explanation 2.—To constitute the offence of abetment it is not necessary that the act abetted should be committed, or that the effect requisite to constitute the offence should be caused.

Illustrations.

(a) A instigates B to murder C. B refuses to do so. A is guilty of abetting B to commit murder.

(b) A instigates B to murder D. B in pursuance of the instigation stabs D. D recovers from the wound. A is guilty of instigating B to commit murder.

Explanation 3.—It is not necessary that the person abetted should be capable by law of committing an offence, or that he should have the same guilty intention or knowledge as that of the abettor, or any guilty intention or knowledge.

Illustrations.

(a) A, with a guilty intention, abets a child or a lunatic to commit an act which would be an offence, if committed by a person capable by law of committing an offence, and having the same intention as A. Here A, whether the act be committed or not, is guilty of abetting an offence.

(b) A, with the intention of murdering Z, instigates B, a child under seven years of age, to do an act which causes Z's death. B, in consequence of the abetment, does the act in the absence of A and thereby, causes Z's death. Here, though B was not capable by law of committing an offence, A is liable to be punished in the same manner as if B had been capable by law of committing an offence, and had committed murder, and he is therefore subject to the punishment of death.

(c) A instigates B to set fire to a dwelling-house. B, in consequence of the unsoundness of his mind, being incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is wrong or contrary to law, sets fire to the house in consequence of A's instigation. B has committed no offence, but A is guilty of abetting the offence of setting fire to a dwelling-house, and is liable to the punishment provided for that offence.

(d) A, intending to cause a theft to be committed, instigates B to take property belonging to Z out of Z's possession. A induces B to believe that the property belongs to A. B takes the property out of Z's possession, in good faith, believing it to be A's property. B, acting under this misconception, does not take dishonestly, and therefore does not commit theft. But A is guilty of abetting theft, and is liable to the same punishment as if B had committed theft.

Explanation 4.—The abetment of an offence being an offence, the abetment of such an abetment is also an offence.

Illustration.

A instigates B to instigate C to murder Z. B accordingly instigates C to murder Z, and C commits that offence in consequence of B's instigation. B is liable to be punished for his offence with the punishment for murder; and, as A instigated B to commit the offence, A is also liable to the same punishment.

Explanation 5.—It is not necessary to the commission of the offence of abetment by conspiracy that the abettor should concert the offence with the person who commits it. It is sufficient if he engage in the conspiracy in pursuance of which the offence is committed.

Illustration.

A concerts with B a plan for poisoning Z. It is agreed that A shall administer the poison. B then explains the plan to C, mentioning that a third person is to administer the poison, but without mentioning A's name. C agrees to procure the poison, and procures and delivers it to B for the purpose of its being used in the manner explained. A administers the poison; Z dies in consequence. Here, though A and C have not conspired together, yet C has been engaged in the conspiracy in pursuance of which Z has been murdered. C has therefore committed the offence defined in this section, and is liable to the punishment for murder.

108-A. A person abets an offence within the meaning of this Code who, in Abetment in British India of offences outside it. British India, abets the commission of any Act without and beyond British India which would constitute an offence if committed in British India.

Illustration.

A, in British India, instigates B, a foreigner in Goa, to commit a murder in Goa. A is guilty of abetting murder.

Procedure :—Special complaint.

109. Whoever abets any offence shall, if the act abetted is committed in consequence of the abetment, and no express provision is made by this Code for the punishment of such abetment, be punished with the punishment provided for the offence.

Punishment of abetment if the act abetted is committed in consequence and where no express provision is made for its punishment.

Explanation.—An act or offence is said to be committed in consequence of abetment, when it is committed in consequence of the instigation, or in pursuance of the conspiracy, or with the aid which constitutes the abetment.

Illustrations.

(a) A offers a bribe to B, a public servant, as a reward for showing A some favour in the exercise of B's official functions. B accepts the bribe. A has abetted the offence defined in section 161.

(b) A instigates B to give false evidence. B, in consequence of the instigation, commits that offence. A is guilty of abetting that offence, and is liable to the same punishment as B.

(c) A and B conspire to poison Z. A, in pursuance of the conspiracy, procures the poison and delivers it to B in order that he may administer it to Z. B, in pursuance of the conspiracy, administers the poison to Z in A's absence and thereby causes Z's death. Here B is guilty of murder. A is guilty of abetting that offence by conspiracy, and is liable to the punishment for murder.

Procedure:—Court by which offence abetted is triable—Cognizable, if offence abetted cognizable—According as warrant or summons may issue for offence abetted—According as the offence abetted is compoundable or not.

110. Whoever abets the commission of an offence shall, if the person abetted does the act with a different intention or knowledge from that of the abettor, be punished with the punishment provided for the offence which would have been committed if the act had been done with the intention or knowledge of the abettor and with no other.

Punishment of abetment if person abetted does act with different intention from that of abettor.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 109.

Liability of abettor when one act abetted and different act done.

111. When an act is abetted and a different act is done, the abettor is liable for the act done, in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had directly abetted it :

Provided the act done was a probable consequence of the abetment, and was committed under the influence of the instigation, or with the aid or in pursuance of the conspiracy which constituted the abetment.

Proviso.

Illustrations.

(a) A instigates a child to put poison into the food of Z, and gives him poison for that purpose. The child, in consequence of the instigation, by mistake puts the poison into the food of Y, which is by the side of that of Z. Here, if the child was acting under the influence of A's instigation, and the act done was under the circumstances a probable consequence of the abetment, A is liable in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had instigated the child to put the poison into the food of Y.

(b) A instigates B to burn Z's house. B sets fire to the house and at the same time commits theft of property there. A, though guilty of abetting the burning of the house, is not guilty of abetting the theft; for the theft was a distinct act, and not a probable consequence of the burning.

(c) A instigates B and C to break into an inhabited house at midnight for the purpose of robbery, and provides them with arms for that purpose. B and C break into the house, and being resisted by Z, one of the inmates, murder Z. Here, if that murder was the probable consequence of the abetment, A is liable to the punishment provided for murder.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 109.

Abettor when liable to cumulative punishment for act abetted and for act done.

112. If the act for which the abettor is liable under the last preceding section is committed in addition to the act abetted, and constitutes a distinct offence, the abettor is liable to punishment for each of the offences.

Illustration.

A instigates B to resist by force a distress made by a public servant. B, in consequence, resists that distress. In offering the resistance, B voluntarily causes grievous hurt to the officer executing the distress. As B has committed both the offence of resisting the distress, and the offence of voluntarily causing grievous hurt, B is liable to punishment for both these offences; and, if A knew that B was likely voluntarily to cause grievous hurt in resisting the distress, A will also be liable to punishment for each of the offences.

113. When an act is abetted with the intention on the part of the abettor of causing a particular effect, and an act for which the abettor is liable in consequence of the abetment, causes a different effect from that intended by the abettor, the abettor is liable for the effect caused, in the same manner and to the same extent as if he had abetted the act with the intention of causing that effect, provided he knew that the act abetted was likely to cause that effect.

Illustration.

A instigates B to cause grievous hurt to Z. B, in consequence of the instigation, causes grievous hurt to Z. Z dies in consequence. Here, if A knew that the grievous hurt abetted was likely to cause death, A is liable to be punished with the punishment provided for murder.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 109.

114. Whenever any person, who if absent would be liable to be punished as an abettor, is present when the act or offence for which he would be punishable in consequence of the abetment is committed, he shall be deemed to have committed such act or offence.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 109.

115. Whoever abets the commission of an offence punishable with death or transportation for life, shall, if that offence be not committed in consequence of the abetment, and no express provision is made by this Code for the punishment of such abetment, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine; and if any act for which the abettor is liable in consequence of the abetment, and which causes hurt to any person, is done, the abettor shall be liable to imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to fourteen years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Illustration.

A instigates B to murder Z. The offence is not committed. If B had murdered Z, he would have been subject to the punishment of death or transportation for life. Therefore A is liable to imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years and also to a fine; and, if any hurt be done to Z in consequence of the abetment, he will be liable to imprisonment for a term which may extend to fourteen years, and to fine.

Procedure :—Court by which offence abetted is triable—Cognizable, if offence abetted cognizable—According as warrant or summons may issue for offence abetted—Not bailable—According as offence abetted is compoundable or not.

116. Whoever abets an offence punishable with imprisonment shall, if that offence be not committed, in consequence of the abetment, and no express provision is made by this Code for the punishment of such abetment, be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for that offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term provided for that offence; or with such fine as is provided for that offence, or with both;

and if the abettor or the person abetted is a public servant, whose duty it is to prevent the commission of such offence, the abettor shall be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for that offence, for a term which may extend to one-half of the longest term provided for that offence, or with such fine as is provided for the offence, or with both.

Illustrations.

(a) A offers a bribe to B, a public servant, as a reward for showing A some favour in the exercise of B's official functions. B refuses to accept the bribe. A is punishable under this section.

(b) A instigates B to give false evidence. Here, if B does not give false evidence, A has nevertheless committed the offence defined in this section, and is punishable accordingly.

(c) A, a police-officer, whose duty it is to prevent robbery, abets the commission of robbery. Here, though the robbery be not committed, A is liable to one-half of the longest term of imprisonment provided for that offence, and also to fine.

(d) B abets the commission of a robbery by A, a police officer, whose duty it is to prevent that offence. Here, though the robbery be not committed, B is liable to one-half of the longest term of imprisonment provided for the offence of robbery, and also to fine.

Procedure :—Court by which offence abetted is triable—Cognizable, if offence abetted cognizable—According as warrant or summons may issue for offence abetted—According as offence abetted is bailable or not—According as offence abetted is compoundable or not.

117. Whoever abets the commission of an offence by the public generally or by any number or class of persons exceeding ten, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Abetting commission of offence by the public, or by more than ten persons.

Illustration.

A affixes in a public place a placard instigating a sect consisting of more than ten members to meet at a certain time and place, for the purpose of attacking the members of an adverse sect, while engaged in a procession. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 116.

118. Whoever intending to facilitate or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby facilitate the commission of an offence punishable with death or transportation for life, voluntarily conceals, by any act or illegal omission, the existence of a design to commit such offence or makes any representation which he knows to be false respecting such design, shall, if that offence be committed, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or, if the offence be not committed, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years; and in either case shall also be liable to fine.

Concealing design to commit offence punishable with death or transportation for life—

if offence be committed;

if offence be not committed.

Illustration.

A, knowing that dacoity is about to be committed at B, falsely informs the Magistrate that a dacoity is about to be committed at C, a place in an opposite direction, and thereby misleads the Magistrate with intent to facilitate the commission of the offence. The dacoity is committed at B in pursuance of the design. A is punishable under this section.

Procedure :—Court by which offence abetted is triable—Cognizable, if offence abetted cognizable—According as warrant, or summons may issue for offence abetted—Not bailable if offence committed but bailable if offence be not committed—According as offence abetted is compoundable or not.

119. Whoever, being a public servant, intending to facilitate or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby facilitate the commission of an offence which it is his duty as such public servant to prevent,

Public servant concealing design to commit offence which it is his duty to prevent—voluntarily conceals, by any act or illegal omission, the existence of a design to commit such offence, or makes any representation which he knows to be false respecting such design, shall, if the offence be committed, be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for the offence, for a term which may extend to one-half of the longest term of such imprisonment, or with such fine as is provided for that offence, or with both; (1)

if offence be committed;

if offence be punishable with death, etc.;

or, if the offence be punishable with death or transportation for life, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years; (2) or, if the offence be not committed, shall be punished with imprisonment of any description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of such imprisonment, or with such fine as is provided for the offence, or with both. (3)

if offence be not committed.

Illustration.

A, an officer of police, being legally bound to give information of all designs to commit robbery which may come to his knowledge, and knowing that B designs to commit robbery, omits to give such information, with intent to facilitate the commission of that offence. Here A has by an illegal omission concealed the existence of B's design, and is liable to punishment according to the provision of this section.

Procedure :—Court by which offence abetted is triable—Cognizable, if offence abetted cognizable—According as warrant or summons may issue for offence abetted—According as offence abetted is bailable or not (in case of 1); but not bailable (in case of 2); bailable (in case of 3)—According as offence abetted is compoundable or not.

120. Whoever, intending to facilitate or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby facilitate the commission of an offence punishable with imprisonment,

Concealing design to commit offence punishable with imprisonment—

voluntarily conceals, by any act or illegal omission, the existence of a design to commit such offence, or makes any representation which he knows to be false respecting such design, shall, if the offence be committed, be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence, for a term which may extend to one-fourth,

if offence be committed;

and, if the offence be not committed, to one-eighth, of the longest term of such imprisonment, or with such fine as is provided for the offence, or with both.

if offence be not committed.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 119.

CHAPTER V-A.

CRIMINAL CONSPIRACY.

120-A. When two or more persons agree to do, or cause to be done—

Definition of criminal conspiracy. (1) an illegal act, or
(2) an act which is not illegal by illegal means,

such an agreement is designated a criminal conspiracy :

Provided that no agreement except an agreement to commit an offence shall amount to a criminal conspiracy unless some act besides the agreement is done by one or more parties to such agreement in pursuance thereof.

Explanation.—It is immaterial whether the illegal act is the ultimate object of such agreement, or is merely incidental to that object.

120-B. (1) Whoever is a party to a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence punishable with death, transportation or rigorous imprisonment for a term of two years or upwards, shall, where no express provision is made in this Code for the punishment of such a conspiracy, be punished in the same manner as if he had abetted such offence.

(2) Whoever is a party to a criminal conspiracy other than a criminal conspiracy to commit an offence punishable as aforesaid shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding six months, or with fine or with both.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Other procedure same as for substantive offence.

CHAPTER VI.

OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE STATE.

Waging or attempting to wage war, or abetting waging of war against the Queen.

121. Whoever wages war against the Queen, or attempts to wage such war, or abets the waging of such war, shall be punished with death, or transportation for life, and shall also be liable to fine.

Illustrations.

(a) A joins an insurrection against the Queen. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(b) A in India abets an insurrection against the Queen's Government of Ceylon by sending arms to the insurgents. A is guilty of abetting the waging of war against the Queen.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

121-A. Whoever within or without British India conspires to commit any of the offences punishable by section 121, or to deprive the Queen of the sovereignty of British India, or of any part thereof, or conspires to overawe, by means of criminal force or the show of criminal force, the Government of India or any Local Government, shall be punished with transportation for life or any shorter term, or with imprisonment of either description which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.—To constitute a conspiracy under this section, it is not necessary that any act or illegal omission shall take place in pursuance thereof.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 121.

122. Whoever collects men, arms or ammunition or otherwise prepares to wage war with the intention of either waging or being prepared to wage war against the Queen, shall be punished with transportation for life or imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 121.

123. Whoever, by any act, or by any illegal omission, conceals the existence of a design to wage war against the Queen, intending by such concealment to facilitate, or knowing it to be likely that such concealment will facilitate, the waging of such war, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 121.

124. Whoever, with the intention of inducing or compelling the Governor-General of India, or the Governor of any Presidency, or a Lieutenant-Governor, or a Member of the Council of the Governor-General of India, or of the Council of any Presidency, to exercise or refrain from exercising in any manner any of the lawful powers of such Governor-General, Governor, Lieutenant-Governor or Member of Council, Assaulting Governor-General, Governor, etc., with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power.

assaults or wrongfully restrains, or attempts wrongfully to restrain, or overawes, by means of criminal force or the show of criminal force, or attempts so to overawe, such Governor-General, Governor, Lieutenant-Governor or Member of Council, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

124-A. Whoever by words, either spoken or written, or by signs, or by visible representation, or otherwise, brings or attempts to bring into hatred or contempt, or excites or attempts to excite disaffection towards, Her Majesty or the Government established by law in British India, shall be punished with transportation for life or any shorter term, to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment which may extend to three years, to which fine may be added, or with fine.

Explanation 1.—The expression “disaffection” includes disloyalty and all feelings of enmity.

Explanation 2.—Comments expressing disapprobation of the measures of the Government with a view to obtain their alteration by lawful means, without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, do not constitute an offence under this section.

Explanation 3.—Comments expressing disapprobation of the administrative or other action of the Government without exciting or attempting to excite hatred, contempt or disaffection, do not constitute an offence under this section.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session, Chief Presidency Magistrate, or District Magistrate, or Magistrate of the 1st class specially empowered—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

125. Whoever wages war against the Government of any Asiatic Power in alliance or at peace with the Queen or attempts to wage such war, or abets the waging of such war, shall be punished with transportation for life, to which fine may be added, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, to which fine may be added, or with fine.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

126. Whoever commits depredation, or makes preparations to commit depredation, on the territories of any Power in alliance or at peace with the Queen, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years and shall also be liable to fine and to forfeiture of any property used or intended to be used in committing such depredation, or acquired by such depredation.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 125.

127. Whoever receives any property knowing the same to have been taken in the commission of any of the offences mentioned in sections 125 and 126, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine and to forfeiture of the property so received.

Procedure :—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

128. Whoever, being a public servant and having the custody of any State prisoner or prisoner of war, voluntarily allows such prisoner to escape from any place in which such prisoner is confined, shall be punished with transportation for life, or imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Public servant voluntarily allowing prisoner of State or war to escape.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

129. Whoever, being a public servant and having the custody of any State prisoner or prisoner of war, negligently suffers such prisoner to escape from any place of confinement in which such prisoner is confined, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Public servant negligently suffering such prisoner to escape.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

130. Whoever knowingly aids or assists any State prisoner or prisoner of war in escaping from lawful custody, or rescues or attempts to rescue any such prisoner, or harbours or conceals any such prisoner who has escaped from lawful custody, or offers or attempts to offer any resistance to the re-capture of such prisoner shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Aiding escape of, rescuing or harbouring such prisoner.

Explanation.—A State prisoner or prisoner of war, who is permitted to be at large on his parole within certain limits in British India, is said to escape from lawful custody if he goes beyond the limits within which he is allowed to be at large.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

CHAPTER VII.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO THE ARMY, NAVY AND AIR FORCE.

131. Whoever abets the committing of mutiny by an officer, soldier, sailor or airman in the Army, Navy or Air Force of the Queen, or attempts to seduce any such officer, soldier, sailor or airman from his allegiance or his duty, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Abetting mutiny, or attempting to seduce a soldier, sailor or airman from his duty.

Explanation.—In this section the words “ officer,” “ soldier,” “ sailor ” and “ airman ” include any person subject to the Army Act, the Indian Army Act, 1911 or the Air Force Act, as the case may be.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

132. Whoever abets the committing of mutiny by an officer, soldier, sailor or airman in the Army, Navy or Air Force of the Queen, shall, if mutiny be committed in consequence of that abetment, be punished with death or with transportation for life, or imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Abetment of mutiny, if mutiny is committed in consequence thereof.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 131.

133. Whoever abets an assault by an officer, soldier, sailor or airman in the Army, Navy or Air Force of the Queen, on any superior officer being in the execution of his office shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Abetment of assault by soldier, sailor or airman on his superior officer, when in execution of his office.
Procedure :—Session—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

134. Whoever abets an assault by an officer, soldier, sailor or airman in the Army, Navy or Air Force of the Queen, on any superior officer being in the execution of his office, shall, if such assault be committed in consequence of that abetment, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Abetment of such assault if the assault is committed.
Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

135. Whoever abets the desertion of any officer, soldier, sailor or airman in the Army, Navy or Air Force of the Queen, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Abetment of desertion of soldier, sailor or airman.
Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

136. Whoever, except as hereinafter excepted, knowing or having reason to believe that an officer, soldier, sailor or airman in the Army, Navy or Air Force of the Queen, has deserted, harbours such officer, soldier, sailor or airman shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Harbouring deserter.
Exception.—This provision does not extend to the case in which the harbour is given by a wife to her husband.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 135.

137. The master or person in charge of a merchant vessel, on board of which any deserter from the Army, Navy or Air Force of the Queen is concealed, shall, though ignorant of such concealment, be liable to a penalty not exceeding five hundred rupees, if he might have known of such concealment but for some neglect of his duty as such master or person in charge, or but for some want of discipline on board of the vessel.

Deserter concealed on board merchant vessel through negligence of master.
Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

138. Whoever abets what he knows to be an act of insubordination by an officer, soldier, sailor or airman in the Army, Navy or Air Force of the Queen, shall, if such act of insubordination be committed in consequence of that abetment, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Abetment of act of insubordination by soldier, sailor or airman.
Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

138-A. [Repealed.]

139. No person subject to the Army Act, the Indian Army Act, 1911, the Naval Discipline Act or the Air Force Act is subject to punishment under this Code for any of the offences defined in this Chapter.

Persons subject to certain Acts.

140. Whoever, not being a soldier, sailor or airman in the Military, Naval or Air service of the Queen, wears any garb or carries any token resembling any garb or any token used by such a soldier, sailor or airman with the intention that it may be believed that he is such a soldier, sailor or airman shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate — Cognizable — Summons — Bailable — Not compoundable.

CHAPTER VIII.

OF OFFENCES AGAINST THE PUBLIC TRANQUILLITY.

141. An assembly of five or more persons is designated an “unlawful assembly.” if the common object of the persons composing that assembly is—

First.—To overawe by criminal force, or show of criminal force, the Legislative or Executive Government of India, or the Government of any Presidency, or any Lieutenant-Governor, or any public servant in the exercise of the lawful power of such public servant ; or

Second.—To resist the execution of any law, or of any legal process ; or

Third.—To commit any mischief or criminal trespass, or other offence ; or

Fourth.—By means of criminal force, or show of criminal force, to any person to take or obtain possession of any property, or to deprive any person of the enjoyment of a right of way, or of the use of water or other incorporeal right of which he is in possession or enjoyment, or to enforce any right or supposed right ; or

Fifth.—By means of criminal force, or show of criminal force, to compel any person to do what he is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do what he is legally entitled to do.

Explanation.—An assembly which was not unlawful when it assembled, may subsequently become an unlawful assembly.

142. Whoever, being aware of facts which render any assembly an unlawful assembly, intentionally joins that assembly, or continues in it, is said to be a member of an unlawful assembly.

143. Whoever is a member of an unlawful assembly, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

144. Whoever, being armed with any deadly weapon, or with anything which, used as a weapon of offence, is likely to cause death, is a member of an unlawful assembly, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

145. Whoever joins or continues in an unlawful assembly knowing that such unlawful assembly has been commanded in the manner prescribed by law to disperse, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 144.

146. Whenever force or violence is used by an unlawful assembly, or by any member thereof, in prosecution of the common object of such assembly, every member of such assembly, is guilty of the offence of rioting.

147. Whoever is guilty of rioting, shall be punished with imprisonment for of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

148. Whoever is guilty of rioting, being armed with a deadly weapon or with anything which, used as a weapon of offence, is likely to cause death, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

149. If an offence is committed by any member of an unlawful assembly in prosecution of the common object of that assembly, or such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of that object, every person who, at the time of the committing of that offence, is a member of the same assembly, is guilty of that offence.

Procedure :—Court by which offence is triable—According as arrest may be made without warrant for offence or not—According as warrant or summons may issue for offence—According as offence is bailable or not—Not compoundable.

150. Whoever hires or engages, or employs, or promotes, or connives at the hiring, engagement or employment of any person to join or become a member of any unlawful assembly, shall be punishable as a member of such unlawful assembly, and for any offence which may be committed by any such person as a member of such unlawful assembly in pursuance of such hiring, engagement or employment, in the same manner as if he had been a member of such unlawful assembly, or himself had committed such offence.

Procedure :—Court by which offence is triable—Cognizable—Warrant or Summons according to offence committed by person hired—According as offence is bailable or not—Not compoundable.

151. Whoever knowingly joins or continues in any assembly of five or more persons likely to cause a disturbance of the public peace, after such assembly has been lawfully commanded to disperse, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Explanation.—If the assembly is an unlawful assembly within the meaning of section 141, the offender will be punishable under section 145.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

152. Whoever assaults or threatens to assault, or obstructs or attempts to obstruct, any public servant in the discharge of his duty as such public servant, in endeavouring to disperse an unlawful assembly, or to suppress a riot or affray, or uses, or threatens, or attempts to use criminal force to such public servant, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

153. Whoever maliciously, or wantonly, by doing anything which is illegal, gives provocation to any person intending or knowing it to be likely that such provocation will cause the offence of rioting to be committed, shall, if the offence of rioting be committed in consequence of such provocation, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both; and, if the offence of rioting be not committed, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Wantonly giving provocation with intent to cause riot.

if rioting be committed;

if not committed.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Warrant (if rioting be committed)—or summons (if not committed)—Bailable—Not compoundable.

153-A. Whoever by words, either spoken or written, or by signs, or by visible representations, or otherwise, promotes or attempts to promote feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of Her Majesty's subjects, shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Promoting enmity between classes.

Explanation.—It does not amount to an offence within the meaning of this section to point out, without malicious intention and with an honest view to their removal, matters which are producing, or have a tendency to produce, feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of Her Majesty's subjects.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

154. Whenever any unlawful assembly or riot takes place, the owner or occupier of the land upon which such unlawful assembly is held, or such riot is committed, and any person having or claiming an interest in such land, shall be punishable with fine not exceeding one thousand rupees, if he or his agent or manager, knowing that such offence is being or has been committed, or having reason to believe it is likely to be committed, do not give the earliest notice thereof in his or their power to the principal officer at the nearest police-station, and do not, in the case of his or their having reason to believe that it was about to be committed, use all lawful means in his or their power to prevent it and, in the event of its taking place, do not use all lawful means in his or their power to disperse or suppress the riot or unlawful assembly.

Owner or occupier of land on which an unlawful assembly is held.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

155. Whenever a riot is committed for the benefit or on behalf of any person who is the owner or occupier of any land respecting which such riot takes place or who claims any interest in such land, or in the subject of any dispute which gave rise to the riot, or who has accepted or derived any benefit therefrom, such person shall be punishable with fine, if he or his agent or manager, having reason to believe that such riot was likely to be committed or that the unlawful assembly by which such riot was committed was likely to be held, shall not respectively use all lawful means in his or their power to prevent such assembly or riot from taking place, and for suppressing and dispersing the same.

Liability of person for whose benefit riot is committed.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 154.

156. Whenever a riot is committed for the benefit or on behalf of any person who is the owner or occupier of any land respecting which such riot takes place, or who claims any interest in such land, or in the subject of any dispute which gave rise to the riot, or who has accepted or derived any benefit therefrom,

Liability of agent of owner or occupier for whose benefit riot is committed.

the agent or manager of such person shall be punishable with fine, if such agent or manager, having reason to believe that such riot was likely to be committed, or that the unlawful assembly by which such riot was committed was likely to be held, shall not use all lawful means in his power to prevent such riot or assembly from taking place and for suppressing and dispersing the same.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

157. Whoever harbours, receives or assembles, in any house or premises in his occupation or charge, or under his control any persons, knowing that such persons have been hired, engaged or employed, or are about to be hired, engaged or employed, to join or become members of an unlawful assembly, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

158. Whoever is engaged or hired, or offers or attempt to be hired or engaged, to do or assist in doing any of the acts specified in section 141, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both, and whoever, being so engaged or hired as aforesaid, goes armed, or engages or offers to go armed, with any deadly weapon or with anything which used as a weapon of offence is likely to cause death, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons but warrant (if to go armed)—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary (cl. 1 and 2).

159. When two or more persons, by fighting in a public place, disturb the public peace, they are said to “commit an affray.”

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

160. Whoever commits an affray, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to one hundred rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

CHAPTER IX.

OF OFFENCES BY OR RELATING TO PUBLIC SERVANTS.

161. Whoever, being or expecting to be a public servant, accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept, or attempts to obtain from any person, for himself or for any other person, any gratification whatever, other than legal remuneration, as a motive or reward for doing or forbearing to do any official act or for showing or forbearing to show, in the exercise of his official functions, favour or disfavour to any person, or for rendering or attempting to render any service or disservice to any person, with the Legislative or Executive Government of India, or with the Government of any Presidency, or with any Lieutenant-Governor, or with any public servant, as such, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

2127. 20. 7. 2001

Explanations.—"Expecting to be a public servant." If a person not expecting to be in office obtains a gratification by deceiving others into a belief that he is about to be in office, and that he will then serve them, he may be guilty of cheating, but he is not guilty of the offence defined in this section.

"Gratification." The word "gratification" is not restricted to pecuniary gratifications, or to gratifications estimable in money.

"Legal remuneration." The words "legal remuneration" are not restricted to remuneration which a public servant can lawfully demand, but include all remuneration which he is permitted by the Government, which he serves, to accept.

"A motive or reward for doing." A person who receives a gratification as a motive for doing what he does not intend to do, or as a reward for doing what he has not done, comes within these words.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a munsif, obtains from Z, a banker, a situation in Z's bank for A's brother, as a reward to A for deciding a cause in favour of Z. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(b) A, holding the office of Resident at the Court of a subsidiary Power, accepts a lakh of rupees from the Minister of that Power. It does not appear that A accepted this sum as a motive or reward for doing or forbearing to do any particular official act, or for rendering or attempting to render any particular service to that Power with the British Government. But it does appear that A accepted the sum as a motive or reward for generally showing favour in the exercise of his official functions to that Power. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(c) A, a public servant, induces Z erroneously to believe that A's influence with the Government has obtained a title for Z, and thus induces Z to give A money as a reward for this service. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

Procedure ;—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

162. Whoever accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept, or attempts to obtain, from any person, for himself or for any other person, any gratification whatever as a motive or reward for inducing, by corrupt or illegal means, any public servant to do or to forbear to do any official act, or in the exercise of the official functions of such public servant to show favour or disfavour to any person, or to render or attempt to render any service or disservice to any person with the Legislative or Executive Government of India, or with the Government of any Presidency, or with any Lieutenant-Governor, or with any public servant, as such, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure ;—Same as under s. 161.

163. Whoever accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain, from any person, for himself or for any other person, any gratification whatever, as a motive or reward for inducing, by the exercise of personal influence, any public servant to do or to forbear to do any official act, or in the exercise of the official functions of such public servant to show favour or disfavour to any person, or to render or attempt to render any service or disservice to any person, with the Legislative or Executive Government of India, or with the Government of any Presidency, or with any Lieutenant-Governor, or with any public servant, as such, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Illustration.

An advocate who receives a fee for arguing a case before a Judge; a person who receives pay for arranging and correcting a memorial addressed to Government, setting forth the services and claims of the memorialist; a paid agent for a condemned criminal, who lays before the Government statements tending to show that the condemnation was unjust,—are not within this section, inasmuch as they do not exercise or profess to exercise personal influence.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

164. Whoever, being a public servant, in respect of whom either of the offences defined in the last two preceding sections is committed, abets the offence, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Illustration.

A is a public servant. B, A's wife, receives a present as a motive for soliciting A to give an office to a particular person. A abets her doing so. B is punishable with imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year, or with fine, or with both. A is punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

165. Whoever, being a public servant, accepts or obtains, or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain, for himself, or for any other person, any valuable thing without consideration, or for a consideration which he knows to be inadequate, from any person whom he knows to have been, or to be, or to be likely to be concerned in any proceeding or business transacted or about to be transacted by such public servant, or having any connection with the official functions of himself or of any public servant to whom he is subordinate, or from any person whom he knows to be interested in or related to the person so concerned, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a Collector, hires a house of Z, who has a settlement case pending before him. It is agreed that A shall pay fifty rupees a month, the house being such that, if the bargain were made in good faith, A would be required to pay two hundred rupees a month. A has obtained a valuable thing from Z without adequate consideration.

(b) A, a Judge, buys of Z, who has a cause pending in A's Court, Government promissory notes at a discount, when they are selling in the market at a premium. A has obtained a valuable thing from Z without adequate consideration.

(c) Z's brother is apprehended and taken before A, a Magistrate, on a charge of perjury. A sells to Z shares in a bank at a premium, when they are selling in the market at a discount. Z pays A for the shares accordingly. The money so obtained by A is a valuable thing obtained by him without adequate consideration.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

166. Whoever, being a public servant, knowingly disobeys any direction of the law as to the way in which he is to conduct himself as such public servant, intending to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will, by such disobedience, cause injury to any person, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Illustration.

A, being an officer directed by law to take property in execution, in order to satisfy a decree pronounced in Z's favour by a Court of Justice, knowingly disobeys that direction of law, with the knowledge that he is likely thereby to cause injury to Z. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

167. Whoever, being a public servant, and being, as such public servant, charged with the preparation or translation of any document, frames or translates that document in a manner which he knows or believes to be incorrect, intending thereby to cause or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby cause injury to any person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

168. Whoever, being a public servant, and being legally bound as such public servant not to engage in trade, engages in trade, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

169. Whoever, being a public servant, and being legally bound, as such public servant, not to purchase or bid for certain property, purchases or bids for that property, either in his own name or in the name of another, or jointly, or in shares with others, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both; and the property, if purchased, shall be confiscated.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

170. Whoever pretends to hold any particular office as a public servant, knowing that he does not hold such office or falsely personates any other person holding such office, and in such assumed character does or attempts to do any act under colour of such office, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description, for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

171. Whoever, not belonging to a certain class of public servants, wears any garb or carries any token resembling any garb or token used by that class of public servants, with the intention that it may be believed, or with the knowledge that it is likely to be believed, that he belongs to that class of public servants, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description, for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

CHAPTER IX-A.

(OF OFFENCES RELATING TO ELECTIONS.)

171-A. For the purposes of this Chapter—

(a) “candidate” means a person who has been nominated as a candidate at any election and includes a person who, when an election is in contemplation, holds himself out as a prospective candidate thereat; provided that he is subsequently nominated as a candidate at such election ;

(b) “electoral right” means the right of a person to stand, or not to stand as, or to withdraw from being, a candidate or to vote or refrain from voting at an election.

Bribery.

171-B. (1) Whoever—

(i) gives a gratification to any person with the object of inducing him or any other person to exercise any electoral right or of rewarding any person for having exercised any such right ; or

(ii) accepts either for himself or for any other person any gratification as a reward for exercising any such right or for inducing or attempting to induce any other person to exercise any such right, commits the offence of bribery :

Provided that a declaration of public policy or a promise of public action shall not be an offence under this section.

(2) A person who offers, or agrees to give, or offers or attempts to procure, a gratification shall be deemed to give a gratification.

(3) A person who obtains or agrees to accept or attempts to obtain a gratification shall be deemed to accept a gratification, and a person who accepts a gratification as a motive for doing what he does not intend to do, or as a reward for doing what he has not done, shall be deemed to have accepted the gratification as a reward.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

171-C. (1) Whoever voluntarily interferes or attempts to interfere with the free exercise of any electoral right commits the offence of undue influence at an election.

(2) Without prejudice to the generality of the provisions of sub-section (1), whoever—

(a) threatens any candidate or voter, or any person in whom a candidate or voter is interested, with injury of any kind, or

(b) induces or attempts to induce a candidate or voter to believe that he or any person in whom he is interested will become or will be rendered an object of Divine displeasure or of spiritual censure, shall be deemed to interfere with the free exercise of the electoral right of such candidate or voter, within the meaning of sub-section (1).

(3) A declaration of public policy or a promise of public action, or the mere exercise of a legal right without intent to interfere with an electoral right, shall not be deemed to be interference within the meaning of this section.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 171-B.

171-D. Whoever at an election applies for a voting paper or votes in the name of any other person, whether living or dead, or in a fictitious name, or who having voted once at such election applies at the same election for a voting paper in his own name, and whoever abets, procures or attempts to procure the voting by any person in any such way, commits the offence of personation at an election.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 171-B.

171-E. Whoever commits the offence of bribery shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both :

Provided that bribery by treating shall be punished with fine only.

Explanation.—“ Treating ” means that form of bribery where the gratification consists in food, drink, entertainment, or provision.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 171-B.

171-F. Whoever commits the offence of undue influence or personation at an election shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Non-compoundable.

171-G. Whoever with intent to affect the result of an election makes or publishes any statement purporting to be a statement of fact which is false and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, in relation to the personal character or conduct of any candidate shall be punished with fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 171-F.

171-H. Whoever without the general or special authority in writing of a candidate incurs or authorises expenses on account of the holding of any public meeting, or upon any advertisement, circular or publication, or in any other way whatsoever for the purpose of promoting or procuring the election of such candidate, shall be punished with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees:

Provided that if any person having incurred any such expenses not exceeding the amount of ten rupees without authority obtains within ten days from the date on which such expenses were incurred the approval in writing of the candidate, he shall be deemed to have incurred such expenses with the authority of the candidate.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 171-F.

171-I. Whoever, being required by any law for the time being in force or any rule having the force of law to keep accounts of expenses incurred at or in connection with an election fails to keep such accounts shall be punished with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 171-F.

CHAPTER X.

OF CONTEMPTS OF THE LAWFUL AUTHORITY OF PUBLIC SERVANTS.

172. Whoever absconds in order to avoid being served with a summons, notice or order proceeding from any public servant legally competent, as such public servant, to issue such summons, notice or order, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both ;

or, if the summons or notice or order is to attend in person or by agent, or to produce a document in a Court of Justice, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Any Magistrate—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

173. Whoever in any manner intentionally prevents the serving on himself, or on any other person, of any summons, notice or order proceeding from any public servant legally competent, as such public servant, to issue such summons, notice or order, or intentionally prevents the lawful affixing to any place of any such summons, notice or order, or intentionally removes any such summons, notice or order from any place to which it is lawfully affixed, or intentionally prevents the lawful making of any proclamation, under the authority of any public servant legally competent, as such public servant, to direct such proclamation to be made,

shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both;

or, if summons, notice, order or proclamation is to attend in person or by agent, or to produce a document in a Court of Justice, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

174. Whoever, being legally bound to attend in person or by an agent at a certain place and time in obedience to a summons, notice, order or proclamation proceeding from any public servant legally competent, as such public servant, to issue the same, intentionally omits to attend at that place or time, or departs from the place where he is bound to attend before the time at which it is lawful for him to depart, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both;

or, if the summons, notice, order or proclamation is to attend in person or by agent in a Court of Justice, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Illustrations.

(a) A being legally bound to appear before the Supreme Court at Calcutta in obedience to a subpœna issuing from that Court, intentionally omits to appear. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(b) A being legally bound to appear before a Zila Judge, as a witness, in obedience to a summons issued by that Zila Judge, intentionally omits to appear. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Any Magistrate—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

175. Whoever, being legally bound to produce or deliver up any document to any public servant, as such, intentionally omits so to produce or deliver up the same, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both;

or, if the document is to be produced or delivered up to a Court of Justice, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Illustration.

A, being legally bound to produce a document before a Zila Court, intentionally omits to produce the same. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Court in which offence committed, subject to provisions of Ch. XXXV—or if not committed in Court—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

176. Whoever, being legally bound to give any notice or to furnish information on any subject to any public servant, as such, intentionally omits to give such notice or to furnish such information in the manner and at the time required by law, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both;

Omission to give notice or information to public servant by person legally bound to give it.

or, if the notice or information required to be given respects the commission of an offence, or is required for the purpose of preventing the commission of an offence, or in order to the apprehension of an offender, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

177. Whoever, being legally bound to furnish information on any subject to any public servant, as such, furnishes, as true, information on the subject which he knows or has reason to believe to be false, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both;

or, if the information which he is legally bound to give respects the commission of an offence, or is required for the purpose of preventing the commission of an offence, or in order to the apprehension of an offender, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a landholder, knowing of the commission of a murder within the limits of his estate, wilfully misinforms the Magistrate of the district that the death has occurred by accident in consequence of the bite of a snake. A is guilty of the offence defined in this section.

(b) A, a village watchman, knowing that a considerable body of strangers has passed through his village in order to commit a dacoity in the house of Z, a wealthy merchant residing in a neighbouring place, and being bound, under clause 5, section VII, Regulation III, 1821, of the Bengal Code, to give early and punctual information of the above fact to the officer of the nearest police-station, wilfully misinforms the police officer that a body of suspicious characters passed through the village with a view to commit dacoity in a certain distant place in a different direction. Here A is guilty of the offence defined in the latter part of this section.

Explanation.—In section 176 and in this section the word “ offence ” includes any act committed at any place out of British India, which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under any of the following sections, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460 ; and the word “ offender ” includes any person who is alleged to have been guilty of any such act.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary (cl. 1).

178. Whoever refuses to bind himself by an oath or affirmation to state the truth, when required so to bind himself by a public servant legally competent to require that he shall so bind himself, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Court in which offence committed, subject to provisions of Ch. XXXV or if not committed in Court, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary. This note equally applies to ss. 179 and 180.

179. Whoever, being legally bound to state the truth on any subject to any public servant, refuses to answer any question demanded of him touching that subject by such public servant in the exercise of the legal powers of such public servant, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 178.

180. Whoever refuses to sign any statement made by him, when required to sign that statement by a public servant legally competent to require that he shall sign that statement, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 178.

181. Whoever, being legally bound by an oath or affirmation or state the truth on any subject to any public servant or other person authorized by law to administer such oath or affirmation, makes, to such public servant or other person as aforesaid, touching that subject, any statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

182. Whoever gives to any public servant any information which he knows or believes to be false, intending thereby to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, such public servant—

False information with intent to cause public servant to use his lawful power to the injury of another person.

(a) to do or omit anything which such public servant ought not to do or omit if the true state of facts respecting which such information is given were known by him, or,

(b) to use the lawful power of such public servant to the injury or annoyance of any person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Illustrations.

(a) A informs a Magistrate that Z, a police-officer, subordinate to such Magistrate, has been guilty of neglect of duty or misconduct, knowing such information to be false, and knowing it to be likely that the information will cause the Magistrate to dismiss Z. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(b) A falsely informs a public servant that Z has contraband salt in a secret place, knowing such information to be false, and knowing that it is likely that the consequence of the information will be a search of Z's premises, attended with annoyance to Z. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(c) A falsely informs a policeman that he has been assaulted and robbed in the neighbourhood of a particular village. He does not mention the name of any person as one of his assailants, but knows it to be likely that in consequence of this information the police will make enquiries and institute searches in the village to the annoyance of the villagers or some of them. A has committed an offence under this section.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

183. Whoever offers any resistance to the taking of any property by the lawful authority of any public servant, knowing or having reason to believe that he is such public servant, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 182.

184. Whoever intentionally obstructs any sale of property offered for sale by the lawful authority of any public servant, as such, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Obstructing sale of property offered for sale by authority of public servant.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

185. Whoever, at any sale of property held by the lawful authority of a public servant, as such, purchases or bids for any property on account of any person, whether himself or any other, whom he knows to be under a legal incapacity to purchase that property at that sale, or bids for such property not intending to perform the obligations under which he lays himself by such bidding, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

Illegal purchases or bid for property offered for sale by authority of public servant.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 184.

186. Whoever voluntarily obstructs any public servant in the discharge of his public functions, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Obstructing public servant in discharge of public functions.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 184.

187. Whoever, being bound by law to render or furnish assistance to any public servant in the execution of his public duty, intentionally omits to give such assistance, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both ;

Omission to assist public servant when bound by law to give assistance.

and if such assistance be demanded of him by a public servant legally competent to make such demand for the purposes of executing any process lawfully issued by a Court of Justice, or of preventing the commission of an offence, or of suppressing a riot, or affray, or of apprehending a person charged with or guilty of an offence, or of having escaped from lawful custody, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 184.

188. Whoever, knowing that, by an order promulgated by a public servant lawfully empowered to promulgate such order, he is directed to abstain from a certain act, or to take certain order with certain property in his possession or under his management, disobeys such direction,

Disobedience to order duly promulgated by public servant.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 184.

shall, if such disobedience causes or tends to cause obstruction, annoyance or injury, or risk of obstruction, annoyance or injury, to any person lawfully employed, be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both ;

and if such disobedience causes or tends to cause danger to human life, health or safety, or causes or tends to cause a riot or affray, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Explanation.—It is not necessary that the offender should intend to produce harm, or contemplate his disobedience as likely to produce harm. It is sufficient that he knows of the order which he disobeys, and that this disobedience produces, or is likely to produce, harm.

Illustration.

An order is promulgated by a public servant lawfully empowered to promulgate such order, directing that a religious procession shall not pass down a certain street. A knowingly disobeys the order, and thereby causes danger of riot. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

189. Whoever holds out any threat of injury to any public servant, or to any person in whom he believes that public servant to be interested, for the purpose of inducing that public servant to do any act, or to forbear or delay to do any act, connected with the exercise of the public functions of such public servant, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 188.

190. Whoever holds out any threat of injury to any person for the purpose of inducing that person to refrain or desist from making a legal application for protection against any injury to any public servant legally empowered, as such, to give such protection, or to cause such protection to be given, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 188.

CHAPTER XI.

OF FALSE EVIDENCE AND OFFENCES AGAINST PUBLIC JUSTICE.

191. Whoever, being legally bound by an oath or by an express provision of law to state the truth, or being bound by law to make a declaration upon any subject, makes any statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, is said to give false evidence.

Explanation 1.—A statement is within the meaning of this section, whether it is made verbally or otherwise.

Explanation 2.—A false statement as to the belief of the person attesting is within the meaning of this section, and a person may be guilty of giving false evidence by stating that he believes a thing which he does not believe, as well as by stating that he knows a thing which he does not know.

Illustrations.

(a) A, in support of a just claim which B has against Z for one thousand rupees, falsely swears on a trial that he heard Z admit the justice of B's claim. A has given false evidence.

(b) A, being bound by an oath to state the truth, states that he believes a certain signature to be the handwriting of Z, when he does not believe it to be the handwriting of Z. Here A states that which he knows to be false, and therefore gives false evidence.

(c) A, knowing the general character of Z's handwriting, states that he believes a certain signature to be the handwriting of Z; A in good faith believing it to be so. Here A's statement is merely as to his belief, and is true as to his belief, and therefore, although the signature may not be the handwriting of Z, A has not given false evidence.

(d) A, being bound by an oath to state the truth, states that he knows that Z was at a particular place on a particular day, not knowing anything upon the subject. A gives false evidence whether Z was at that place on the day named or not.

(e) A, an interpreter or translator, gives or certifies as a true interpretation or translation of a statement or document, which he is bound by oath to interpret or translate truly, that which is not and which he does not believe to be a true interpretation or translation. A has given false evidence.

192. Whoever causes any circumstance to exist, or makes any false entry in any book or record, or makes any document containing a false statement, intending that such circumstance, false entry or false statement may appear in evidence in a judicial proceeding, or in a proceeding taken by law before a public servant as such, or before an arbitrator, and that such circumstance, false entry or false statement, so appearing in evidence, may cause any person who in such proceeding is to form an opinion upon the evidence, to entertain an erroneous opinion touching any point material to the result of such proceeding, is said "to fabricate false evidence."

Illustrations.

(a) A puts jewels into a box belonging to Z, with the intention that they may be found in that box, and that this circumstance may cause Z to be convicted of theft. A has fabricated false evidence.

(b) A makes a false entry in his shop-book for the purpose of using it as corroborative evidence in a Court of Justice. A has fabricated false evidence.

(c) A, with the intention of causing Z to be convicted of a criminal conspiracy, writes a letter in imitation of Z's handwriting, purporting to be addressed to an accomplice in such criminal conspiracy, and puts the letter in a place which he knows that the officers of the Police are likely to search. A has fabricated false evidence.

193. Whoever intentionally gives false evidence in any stage of a judicial proceeding, or fabricates false evidence for the purpose of being used in any stage of a judicial proceeding, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine ; and whoever intentionally gives or fabricates false evidence in any other case, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation 1.—A trial before a Court-martial * * * * is a judicial proceeding.

Explanation 2.—An investigation directed by law preliminary to a proceeding before a Court of Justice, is a stage of a judicial proceeding, though that investigation may not take place before a Court of Justice.

Illustration.

A, in an enquiry before a Magistrate for the purpose of ascertaining whether Z ought to be committed for trial, makes on oath a statement which he knows to be false. As this enquiry is a stage of a judicial proceeding, A has given false evidence.

Explanation 3.—An investigation directed by a Court of Justice according to law, and conducted under the authority of a Court of Justice, is a stage of a judicial proceeding, though that investigation may not take place before a Court of Justice.

Illustration.

A, in an enquiry before an officer deputed by a Court of Justice to ascertain on the spot the boundaries of land, makes on oath a statement which he knows to be false. As this enquiry is a stage of a judicial proceeding, A has given false evidence.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

194. Whoever gives or fabricates false evidence, intending thereby to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, any person to be convicted of an offence which is capital by the law of British India or England, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine ;

Giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction of capital offence.
and if an innocent person be convicted and executed in consequence of such false evidence, the person who gives such false evidence, shall be punished either with death or the punishment herein-before described.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

195. Whoever gives or fabricates false evidence intending thereby to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, any person to be convicted of an offence which by the law of British India or England is not capital, but punishable with transportation for life, or imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards, shall be punished as a person convicted of that offence would be liable to be punished.

Giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction of offence punishable with transportation or imprisonment.

Illustration.

A gives false evidence before a Court of Justice, intending thereby to cause Z to be convicted of a dacoity. The punishment of dacoity is transportation for life, or rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, with or without fine. A, therefore, is liable to such transportation or imprisonment, with or without fine.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

196. Whoever corruptly uses or attempts to use as true or genuine evidence any evidence which he knows to be false or fabricated, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave or fabricated false evidence.

Using evidence known to be false.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—According as offence of giving such evidence is bailable or not—Not compoundable.

197. Whoever issues or signs any certificate required by law to be given or signed, or relating to any fact of which such certificate is by law admissible in evidence, knowing or believing that such certificate is false in any material point, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave false evidence.

Issuing or signing false certificate.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

198. Whoever corruptly uses or attempts to use any such certificate as a true certificate, knowing the same to be false in any material point, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave false evidence.

Using as true a certificate known to be false.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 197.

199. Whoever, in any declaration made or subscribed by him, which declaration any Court of Justice, or any public servant or other person, is bound or authorized by law to receive as evidence of any fact, makes any statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, touching any point material to the object for which the declaration is made or used, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave false evidence.

False statement made in declaration which is by law receivable as evidence.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

Using as true such declaration knowing it to be false. 200. Whoever corruptly uses or attempts to use as true any such declaration, knowing the same to be false in any material point, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave false evidence.

Explanation.—A declaration which is inadmissible merely upon the ground of some informality, is a declaration within the meaning of sections 199 and 200.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

201. Whoever, knowing or having reason to believe that an offence has been committed, causes any evidence of the commission of that offence to disappear, with the intention of screening the offender from legal punishment, or with that intention gives any information respecting the offence which he knows or believes to be false, shall, if the offence which he knows or believes to have been committed is if a capital offence ; punishable with death, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine ; (1) and if the offence is punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine (2) ; if punishable with transportation ; and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment for any term not extending to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence, for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of the imprisonment provided for the offence, or with fine, or with both.(3) if punishable with less than ten years' imprisonment.

Illustration.

A, knowing that B has murdered Z, assists B to hide the body with the intention of screening B from punishment. A is liable to imprisonment of either description for seven years, and also to fine.

Procedure :—Session only (in case of 1) ; Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of 1st class (in case of 2 and 3) or Court by which offence is triable (in case of 3)—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

202. Whoever, knowing or having reason to believe that an offence has been committed, intentionally omits to give any information respecting that offence which he is legally bound to give, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

203. Whoever, knowing or having reason to believe that an offence has been committed, gives any information respecting that offence which he knows or believes to be false, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Explanation.—In sections 201 and 202 and in this section the word “ offence ” includes any act committed at any place out of British India, which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under any of the following sections, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

204. Whoever secretes or destroys any document which he may be lawfully compelled to produce as evidence in a Court of Justice, or in any proceeding lawfully held before a public servant, as such, or obliterates or renders illegible the whole or any part of such document with the intention of preventing the same from being produced or used as evidence before such Court or public servant as aforesaid, or after he shall have been lawfully summoned or required to produce the same for that purpose, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

205. Whoever falsely personates another, and in such assumed character makes any admission or statement, or confesses judgment, or causes any process to be issued or becomes bail or security, or does any other act in any suit or criminal prosecution, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

206. Whoever fraudulently removes, conceals, transfers or delivers to any person any property or any interest therein, intending thereby to prevent that property or interest therein from being taken as a forfeiture or in satisfaction of a fine, under a sentence which has been pronounced, or which he knows to be likely to be pronounced, by a Court of Justice or other competent authority, or from being taken in execution of a decree or order which has been made, or which he knows to be likely to be made by a Court of Justice in a Civil suit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

207. Whoever fraudulently accepts, receives or claims any property or any interest therein, knowing that he has no right or rightful claim to such property or interest, or practises any deception touching any right to any property or any interest therein, intending thereby to prevent that property or interest therein from being taken as a forfeiture or in satisfaction of a fine, under a sentence which has been pronounced, or which he knows to be likely to be pronounced by a Court of Justice or other competent authority, or from being taken in execution of a decree or order which has been made, or which he knows to be likely to be made by a Court of Justice in a civil suit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 206.

208. Whoever fraudulently causes or suffers a decree or order to be passed against him at the suit of any person for a sum not due, or for a larger sum than is due to such person or for any property or interest in property to which such person is not entitled, or fraudulently causes or suffers a decree or order to be executed against him after it has been satisfied, or for anything in respect of which it has been satisfied, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Illustration.

A institutes a suit against Z. Z, knowing that A is likely to obtain a decree against him, fraudulently suffers a judgment to pass against him for a larger amount at the suit of B, who has no just claim against him, in order that B, either on his own account or for the benefit of Z, may share in the proceeds of any sale of Z's property which may be made under A's decree. Z has committed an offence under this section.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

209. Whoever fraudulently or dishonestly, or with intent to injure or annoy any person, makes in a Court of Justice any claim which he knows to be false, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Dishonestly making false claim in Court.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 208.

210. Whoever fraudulently obtains a decree or order against any person for a sum not due, or for a larger sum than is due, or for any property or interest in property to which he is not entitled, or fraudulently causes a decree or order to be executed against any person after it has been satisfied or for anything in respect of which it has been satisfied, or fraudulently suffers or permits any such act to be done in his name, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Fraudulently obtaining decree for sum not due.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 208.

211. Whoever, with intent to cause injury to any person, institutes or causes to be instituted any criminal proceeding against that person, or falsely charges any person with having committed an offence, knowing that there is no just or lawful ground for such proceeding or charge against that person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both ; (1) and if such criminal proceeding be instituted on a false charge of an offence punishable with death, transportation for life, or imprisonment for seven years or upwards, shall be punishable with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

False charge of offence made with intent to injure

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class (in case of 1), also session (if punishable 7 years) but session only (if punishable with death or transportation)—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

212. Whenever an offence has been committed, whoever harbours or conceals a person whom he knows or has reason to believe to be the offender, with the intention of screening him from legal punishment,

Harbouring offender—

shall, if the offence is punishable with death, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine ;

if a capital offence ;

and if the offence is punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine ;

if punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment.

and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment which may extend to one year, and not to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of imprisonment provided for the offence, or with fine, or with both.

“ Offence ” in this section includes any act committed at any place out of British India, which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under any of the following sections, namely, 302, 304, 382, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 402, 435, 436, 449, 450, 457, 458, 459 and 460 ; and every such act shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be punishable as if the accused person had been guilty of it in British India.

Exception.—This provision shall not extend to any case in which the harbour or concealment is by the husband or wife of the offender.

Illustration.

A, knowing that B has committed dacoity, knowingly conceals B in order to screen him from legal punishment. Here, as B is liable to transportation for life, A is liable to imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding three years, and is also liable to fine.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class, or also Court by which offence is triable (if punishable for one year and not to ten years)—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

213. Whoever accepts or attempts to obtain, or agrees to accept, any gratification for himself or any other person, or any restitution of property to himself or any other person, in consideration of his concealing an offence or of his screening any person from legal punishment for any offence, or of his not proceeding against any person for the purpose of bringing him to legal punishment, shall, if the offence is punishable with death, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine ; (1)

and if the offence is punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine ; (2)

and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment not extending to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of imprisonment provided for the offence, or with fine, or with both. (3)

Procedure :—Session (in case of 1) ; Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class (in case of 2) ; Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class or Court by which offence is triable (in case of 3)—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

214. Whoever gives or causes, or offers or agrees to give or cause, any gratification to any person, or to restore or cause the restoration of any property to any person, in consideration of that person's concealing an offence, or of his screening any person from legal punishment for any offence, or of his not proceeding against any person for the purpose of bringing him to legal punishment, shall, if the offence is punishable with death, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine ; (1)

and if the offence is punishable with transportation for life, or with imprisonment which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine ; (2)

and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment not extending to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of imprisonment provided for the offence, or with fine, or with both. (3)

Exception.—The provisions of sections 213 and 214 do not extend to any case in which the offence may lawfully be compounded.

Illustrations [Repealed by Act X of 1882].

Procedure :—Session (in case of 1); Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class (in case of 2); Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class or Court by which offence is triable (in case of 3)—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

215. Whoever takes or agrees or consents to take any gratification under pretence or on account of helping any person to recover any movable property of which he shall have been deprived by any offence punishable under this Code, shall, unless he uses all means in his power to cause the offender to be apprehended and convicted of the offence, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

216. Whenever any person convicted of or charged with an offence, being in lawful custody for that offence, escapes from such custody, or whenever a public servant, in the exercise of the lawful powers of such public servant, orders a certain person to be apprehended for an offence, whoever, knowing of such escape or order for apprehension, harbours or conceals that person with the intention of preventing him from being apprehended, shall be punished in the manner following, that is to say, if the offence for which the person was in custody or is ordered to be apprehended is punishable with death, he shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine ;

if the offence is punishable with transportation for life, or imprisonment for ten years, he shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, with or without fine ;

and if the offence is punishable with imprisonment which may extend to one year and not to ten years, he shall be punished with imprisonment of the description provided for the offence for a term which may extend to one-fourth part of the longest term of the imprisonment provided for such offence, or with fine, or with both.

“ Offence ” in this section includes also any act or omission of which a person is alleged to have been guilty out of British India which, if he had been guilty of it in British India, would have been punishable as an offence, and for which he is, under any law relating to extradition, or under the Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881, or otherwise, liable to be apprehended or detained in custody in British India, and every such act or omission shall, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be punishable as if the accused person had been guilty of it in British India.

Exception.—This provision does not extend to the case in which the harbour or concealment is by the husband or wife of the person to be apprehended.

Procedure :—Session only (in case of 1); Session, Presidency Magistrate, or Magistrate of 1st class (in case of 2); Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class, or Court by which offence is triable—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

216-A. Whoever, knowing or having reason to believe that any person are about to commit or have recently committed robbery or dacoity, harbours them or any of them, with the intention of facilitating the commission of such robbery or dacoity, or of screening them or any of them for punishment, shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Penalty for harbouring robbers or dacoits.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section it is immaterial whether the robbery or dacoity is intended to be committed, or has been committed, within or without British India.

Exception.—This provision does not extend to the case in which the harbour is by the husband or wife of the offender.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

216-B. In sections 212, 216 and 216-A, the word “harbour” includes the Definition of “harbour” in sections 212, 216 and 216-A. supplying a person with shelter, food, drink, money, clothes, arms, ammunition or means of conveyance, or the assisting a person in any way to evade apprehension.

217. Whoever, being a public servant, knowingly disobeys any direction of the law as to the way in which he is to conduct himself as such public servant, intending thereby to save, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby save, any person from legal punishment, or subject him to a less punishment than that to which he is liable, or with intent to save, or knowing that he is likely thereby to save, any property from forfeiture or any charge to which it is liable by law, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

218. Whoever, being a public servant, and being as such public servant, charged with the preparation of any record or other writing, frames that record or writing in a manner which he knows to be incorrect, with intent to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, loss or injury to the public or to any person, or with intent thereby to save, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby save, any person from legal punishment, or with intent to save, or knowing that he is likely thereby to save, any property from forfeiture or other charge to which it is liable by law, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

219. Whoever, being a public servant, corruptly or maliciously makes or pronounces in any stage of a judicial proceeding, any report, order, verdict, or decision which he knows to be contrary to law, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 218.

220. Whoever, being in any office which gives him legal authority to commit persons for trial or to confinement, or to keep persons in confinement, corruptly or maliciously commits any person for trial or confinement, or keeps any person in confinement, in the exercise of that authority, knowing that in so doing he is acting contrary to law, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

221. Whoever, being a public servant, legally bound as such public servant to apprehend or to keep in confinement any person charged with or liable to be apprehended for an offence, intentionally omits to apprehend such person, or intentionally suffers such persons to escape, or intentionally aids such person in escaping or attempting to escape from such confinement, shall be punished as follows, that is to say,

Intentional omission to apprehend on the part of public servant bound to apprehend.

with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, with or without fine, if the person in confinement, or who ought to have been apprehended, was charged with, or liable to be apprehended for, an offence punishable with death ; (1) or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, with or without fine, if the person in confinement, or who ought to have been apprehended, was charged with, or liable to be apprehended for, an offence punishable with transportation for life or imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years ; (2) or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, with or without fine, if the person in confinement, or who ought to have been apprehended, was charged with, or liable to be apprehended for, an offence punishable with imprisonment for a term less than ten years.

Procedure :—Session only (in case of 1)—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class (in case of 2)—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class (in case of 3)—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

222. Whoever, being a public servant, legally bound as such public servant to apprehend or to keep in confinement any person under sentence of a Court of Justice for any offence, or lawfully committed to custody intentionally omits to apprehend such person, or intentionally suffers such person to escape, or intentionally aids such person in escaping or attempting to escape from such confinement, shall be punished as follows, that is to say—

Intentional omission to apprehend on the part of public servant bound to apprehend person under sentence or lawfully committed.

with transportation for life or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to fourteen years, with or without fine, if the person in confinement, or who ought to have been apprehended, is under sentence of death ; (1) or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, with or without fine, if the person in confinement, or who ought to have been apprehended, is subject, by a sentence of a Court of Justice, or by virtue of a commutation of such sentence, to transportation for life or penal servitude for life, or to transportation or penal servitude or imprisonment for a term of ten years or upwards ; (2) or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both, if the person in confinement, or who ought to have been apprehended, is subject, by a sentence of a Court of Justice, to imprisonment for a term not extending to ten years, or if the person was lawfully committed to custody. (3)

Procedure :—Session only (in case of 1 or 2) but Session or Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class (in case of 3)—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Non-bailable (in case of 1 and 2) but Bailable (in case of 3)—Not compoundable.

223. Whoever, being a public servant legally bound as such public servant to keep in confinement any person charged with or convicted of any offence or lawfully committed to custody, negligently suffers such person to escape from confinement, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Escape from confinement or custody negligently suffered by public servant.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

224. Whoever intentionally offers any resistance or illegal obstruction to the lawful apprehension of himself or any offence with which he is charged or of which he has been convicted, or escapes or attempts to escape from any custody in which he is lawfully detained for any such offence, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Explanation.—The punishment in this section is in addition to the punishment for which the person to be apprehended or detained in custody was liable for the offence with which he was charged, or of which he was convicted.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

225. Whoever intentionally offers any resistance or illegal obstruction to the lawful apprehension of any other person for an offence, or rescues or attempts to rescue any other person from any custody in which that person is lawfully detained for an offence, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both ; (1) or, if the person to be apprehended, or the person rescued or attempted to be rescued, is charged with or liable to be apprehended for an offence punishable with transportation for life or imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine ; (2) or, if the person to be apprehended or rescued, or attempted to be rescued, is charged with or liable to be apprehended for an offence punishable with death, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine ; (3)

or, if the person to be apprehended or rescued, or attempted to be rescued, is liable, under the sentence of a Court of Justice, or by virtue of a commutation of such a sentence, to transportation for life, or to transportation, penal servitude, or imprisonment, for a term of ten years or upwards, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine ; (4) or, if the person to be apprehended or rescued, or attempted to be rescued, is under sentence of death, shall be punished with transportation for life or imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding ten years, and shall also be liable to fine. (5)

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class (in case of cl. 1) ; Add. Session (in case of cl. 2) ; Session only (in case of cls. 3, 4 and 5)—Warrant—Cognizable—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

225-A. Whoever, being a public servant, legally bound as such public servant to apprehend, or to keep in confinement, any person in any case not provided for in section 221, section 222 or section 223, or in any other law for the time being in force, omits to apprehend that person or suffers him to escape from confinement, shall be punished—

(a) if he does so intentionally, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both ; and

(b) if he does so negligently, with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—As to clause (a)—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

Procedure :—As to clause (b)—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

225-B. Whoever, in any case not provided for in section 224 or section 225 or in any other law for the time being in force, intentionally offers any resistance or illegal obstruction to the lawful apprehension of himself or of any other person, or escapes or attempt to escape from any custody in which he is lawfully detained, or rescues or attempts to rescue any other person from any custody in which that person is lawfully detained, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

226. Whoever, having been lawfully transported, returns from such transportation, the term of such transportation not having expired, and his punishment not having been remitted, shall be punished with transportation for life, and shall also be liable to fine, and to be imprisoned with rigorous imprisonment for a term not exceeding three years before he is so transported.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

227. Whoever, having accepted any conditional remission of punishment, knowingly violates any condition on which such remission was granted, shall be punished with the punishment to which he was originally sentenced, if he has already suffered no part of that punishment, and if he has suffered any part of that punishment, then with so much of that punishment as he has not already suffered.

Procedure :—Court by which original offence was triable—Non-cognizable—Summons—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

228. Whoever intentionally offers any insult, or causes any interruption to any public servant, while such public servant is sitting in any stage of a judicial proceeding, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Court in which offence committed, subject to provisions of Ch. XXXV—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

229. Whoever, by personation or otherwise, shall intentionally cause, or knowingly suffer himself to be returned, empanelled or sworn as a juror or assessor in any case in which he knows that he is not entitled by law to be so returned, empanelled or sworn, or knowing himself to have been so returned, empanelled or sworn contrary to law, shall voluntarily serve on such jury or as such assessor, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

CHAPTER XII.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO COIN AND GOVERNMENT STAMPS.

230. Coin is metal used for the time being as money, and stamped and issued by the authority of some State or Sovereign Power in order to be so used.

“Coin” defined. Queen’s coin is metal stamped and issued by the authority of the Queen, or by the authority of the Government of India, or of the Government of any Presidency, or of any Government in the Queen’s dominions, in order to be used as money ; and metal which has been so stamped and issued shall continue to be the Queen's coin for the purposes of this Chapter, notwithstanding that it may have ceased to be used as money.

Illustrations.

- (a) Cowries are not coin.
- (b) Lumps of unstamped copper, though used as money, are not coin.
- (c) Medals are not coin, inasmuch as they are not intended to be used as money.
- (d) The coin denominated as the Company's rupee is the Queen's coin.
- (e) The "Farukhabad" rupee, which was formerly used as money under the authority of the Government of India, is Queen's coin although it is no longer so used.

231. Whoever counterfeits or knowingly performs any part of the process of counterfeiting coin, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.—A person commits this offence who intending to practise deception, or knowing it to be likely that deception will thereby be practised, causes a genuine coin to appear like a different coin.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

232. Whoever counterfeits, or knowingly performs any part of the process of counterfeiting the Queen's coin, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

233. Whoever makes or mends, or performs any part of the process of making or mending, or buys, sells or disposes of, any die or instrument, for the purpose of being used, or knowing or having reason to believe that it is intended to be used, for the purpose of counterfeiting coin, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

234. Whoever makes or mends, or performs any part of the process of making or mending, or buys, sells or disposes of, any die or instrument, for the purpose of being used, or knowing or having reason to believe that it is intended to be used, for the purpose of counterfeiting the Queen's coin, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

235. Whoever is in possession of any instrument or material, for the purpose of using the same for counterfeiting coin, or knowing or having reason to believe that the same is intended to be used for that purpose, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine ; and if the coin to be counterfeited is the Queen's coin, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Session only (if Queen's coin)—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

236. Whoever, being within British India, abets the counterfeiting of coin out of British India shall be punished in the same manner as if he abetted the counterfeiting of such coin within British India.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

237. Whoever imports into British India, or exports therefrom, any counterfeit coin, knowing or having reason to believe that the same is counterfeit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

238. Whoever imports into British India, or exports therefrom, any counterfeit coin which he knows or has reason to believe to be a counterfeit of the Queen's coin, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

239. Whoever, having any counterfeit coin, which at the time when he became possessed of it he knew to be counterfeit, fraudulently or with intent that fraud may be committed, delivers the same to any person, or attempts to induce any person to receive it, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

240. Whoever, having any counterfeit coin, which is a counterfeit of the Queen's coin, and which, at the time when he became possessed of it, he knew to be a counterfeit of the Queen's coin, fraudulently or with intent that fraud may be committed, delivers the same to any person, or attempts to induce any person to receive it, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

241. Whoever delivers to any other person as genuine, or attempts to induce any other person to receive as genuine, any counterfeit coin which he knows to be counterfeit, but which he did not know to be counterfeit at the time when he took it into his possession, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine to an amount which may extend to ten times the value of the coin counterfeited, or with both.

Illustration.

A, a coiner, delivers counterfeit Company's rupees to his accomplice B, for the purpose of uttering them. B sells the rupees to C, another utterer, who buys them knowing them to be counterfeit. C pays away the rupees for goods to D, who receives them, not knowing them to be counterfeit. D, after receiving the rupees, discovers that they are counterfeit and pays them away as if they were good. Here D is punishable only under this section, but B and C are punishable under section 239 or 240, as the case may be.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

242. Whoever, fraudulently or with intent that fraud may be committed, is in possession of counterfeit coin, having known at the time when he became possessed thereof that such coin was counterfeit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable for fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

243. Whoever, fraudulently or with intent that fraud may be committed, is in possession of counterfeit coin, which is a counterfeit of the Queen's coin, having known at the time when he became possessed of it that it was counterfeit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Possession of Queen's coin by person who knew it to be counterfeit when he became possessed thereof.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

244. Whoever, being employed in any mint lawfully established in British India, does any act, or omits what he is legally bound to do, with the intention of causing any coin issued from that mint to be of a different weight or composition from the weight or composition fixed by law, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Person employed in mint causing coin to be of different weight or composition from that fixed by law.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

245. Whoever, without lawful authority, takes out of any mint, lawfully established in British India, any coining tool or instrument, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Unlawfully taking coining instrument from mint.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

246. Whoever fraudulently or dishonestly performs on any coin any operation which diminishes the weight or alters the composition of that coin, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Fraudulently or dishonestly diminishing weight or altering composition of coin.

Explanation.—A person who scoops out part of the coin and puts anything else into the cavity, alters the composition of that coin.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

247. Whoever fraudulently or dishonestly performs on any of the Queen's coin any operation which diminishes the weight or alters the composition of that coin, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Fraudulently or dishonestly diminishing weight or altering composition of Queen's coin.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

248. Whoever performs on any coin any operation which alters the appearance of that coin, with the intention that the said coin shall pass as a coin of a different description, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Altering appearance of coin with intent that it shall pass as coin of different description.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

249. Whoever performs on any of the Queen's coin any operation which alters the appearance of that coin, with the intention that the said coin shall pass as a coin of a different description, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Altering appearance of Queen's coin with intent that it shall pass as coin of different description.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

250. Whoever, having coin in his possession with respect to which the offence defined in section 246 or 248 has been committed, and having known at the time when he became possessed of such coin that such offence had been committed with respect to it, fraudulently or with intent that fraud may be committed, delivers such coin to any other person, or attempts to induce any other person to receive the same shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

251. Whoever, having coin in his possession with respect to which the offence defined in section 247 or 249 has been committed, and having known at the time when he became possessed of such coin that such offence had been committed with respect to it, fraudulently or with intent that fraud may be committed, delivers such coin to any other person, or attempts to induce any other person to receive the same, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

252. Whoever fraudulently, or with intent that fraud may be committed, is in possession of coin with respect to which the offence defined in either of the sections 246 or 248 has been committed, having known at the time of becoming possessed thereof that such offence had been committed with respect to such coin, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

253. Whoever fraudulently, or with intent that fraud may be committed, is in possession of coin with respect to which the offence defined in either of the sections 247 or 249 has been committed, having known at the time of becoming possessed thereof that such offence had been committed with respect to such coin, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

254. Whoever delivers to any other person as genuine or as a coin of a different description from what it is, or attempts to induce any person to receive as genuine, or as a different coin from what it is, any coin in respect of which he knows that any such operation as that mentioned in sections 246, 247, 248 or 249 has been performed, but in respect of which he did not, at the time when he took it into his possession, know that such operation had been performed, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine to an amount which may extend to ten times the value of the coin for which the altered coin is passed, or attempted to be passed.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

255. Whoever counterfeits, or knowingly performs any part of the process of counterfeiting, any stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.—A person commits this offence who counterfeits by causing a genuine stamp of one denomination to appear like a genuine stamp of a different denomination.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

256. Whoever has in his possession any instrument or material for the purpose of being used, or knowing or having reason to believe that it is intended to be used, for the purpose of counterfeiting any stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

257. Whoever makes or performs any part of the process of making, or buys, or sells, or disposes of, any instrument for the purpose of being used, or knowing or having reason to believe that it is intended to be used, for the purpose of counterfeiting any stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

258. Whoever sells, or offers for sale, any stamp which he knows or has reason to believe to be a counterfeit of any stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

259. Whoever has in his possession any stamp which he knows to be a counterfeit of any stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, intending to use, or dispose of the same as a genuine stamp, or in order that it may be used as a genuine stamp, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

260. Whoever uses as genuine any stamp, knowing it to be a counterfeit of any stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

261. Whoever fraudulently, or with intent to cause loss to the Government, removes or effaces from any substance, bearing any stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, any writing or document for which such stamp has been used, or removes from any writing or document a stamp which has been used for such writing or document, in order that such stamp may be used for a different writing or document, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 260.

262. Whoever fraudulently, or with intent to cause loss to the Government, uses for any purpose a stamp issued by Government for the purpose of revenue, which he knows to have been before used, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

263. Whoever fraudulently, or with intent to cause loss to Government, Erasure of mark erases or removes from a stamp issued by Government for denoting that stamp the purpose of revenue, any mark put or impressed upon such stamp for the purpose of denoting that the same has been used, has been used.

or knowingly has in his possession, or sells or disposes of, any such stamp from which such mark has been erased or removed, or sells or disposes of any such stamp which he knows to have been used, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

263-A. (1) Whoever—

Prohibition of fictitious stamps. (a) makes, knowingly utters, deals in or sells any fictitious stamp, or knowingly uses for any postal purpose any fictitious stamp, or

(b) has in his possession, without lawful excuse, any fictitious stamp, or
(c) makes or, without lawful excuse, has in his possession any die, plate, instrument or materials for making any fictitious stamp, shall be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees.

(2) Any such stamp, die, plate, instrument or materials in the possession of any person for making any fictitious stamp may be seized and shall be forfeited.

(3) In this section "fictitious stamp" means any stamp falsely purporting to be issued by Government for the purpose of denoting a rate of postage or any facsimile or imitation or representation, whether on paper or otherwise, of any stamp issued by Government for that purpose.

(4) In this section and also in sections 255 to 263, both inclusive, the word "Government," when used in connection with, or in reference to, any stamp issued for the purpose of denoting a rate of postage, shall, notwithstanding anything in section 17, be deemed to include the person or persons authorized by law to administer executive Government in any part of India, and also in any part of Her Majesty's dominions or in any foreign country.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

CHAPTER XIII.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO WEIGHTS AND MEASURES.

264. Whoever fraudulently uses any instrument for weighing which he knows to be false, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

265. Whoever fraudulently uses any false weight or false measure of length or capacity, or fraudulently uses any weight or any measure of length or capacity as a different weight or measure from what it is, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 264.

266. Whoever is in possession of any instrument for weighing, or of any weight, or of any measure of length or capacity, which he knows to be false, and intending that the same may be fraudulently used, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 264.

267. Whoever makes, sells or disposes of any instrument for weighing, or any weight, or any measure of length or capacity which he knows to be false, in order that the same may be used as true, or knowing that the same is likely to be used as true, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 264.

CHAPTER XIV.

OF OFFENCES AFFECTING THE PUBLIC HEALTH, SAFETY, CONVENIENCE, DECENCY AND MORALS.

268. A person is guilty of a public nuisance who does any act or is guilty of an illegal omission which causes any common injury, danger or annoyance to the public or to the people in general who dwell or occupy property in the vicinity, or which must necessarily cause injury, obstruction, danger or annoyance to persons who may have occasion to use any public right.

A common nuisance is not excused on the ground that it causes some convenience or advantage.

269. Whoever unlawfully or negligently does any act which is, and which he knows or has reason to believe to be, likely to spread the infection of any disease dangerous to life, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

270. Whoever malignantly does any act which is, and which he knows or has reason to believe to be, likely to spread the infection of any disease dangerous to life, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 269.

271. Whoever knowingly disobeys any rule made and promulgated by the Government of India, or by any Government, for putting any vessel into a state of quarantine, or for regulating the intercourse of vessels in a state of quarantine with shore or with other vessels, or for regulating the intercourse between places where an infectious disease prevails and other places, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

272. Whoever adulterates any article of food or drink so as to make such article noxious as food or drink, intending to sell such articles as food or drink, or knowing it to be likely that the same will be sold as food or drink, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 271.

273. Whoever sells, or offers or exposes for sale, as food or drink, any article which has been rendered or has become noxious, or is in a state unfit for food or drink, knowing or having reason to believe that the same is noxious as food or drink, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 271.

274. Whoever adulterates any drug or medical preparation in such a manner as to lessen the efficacy or change the operation of such drug or medical preparation, or to make it noxious, intending that it shall be sold or used for, or knowing it to be likely that it will be sold or used for, any medicinal purpose, as if it had not undergone such adulteration, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 271.

275. Whoever, knowing any drug or medical preparation to have been adulterated, in such a manner as to lessen its efficacy, to change its operation, or to render it noxious, sells the same, or offers or exposes it for sale, or issues it from any dispensary for medicinal purposes as unadulterated, or causes it to be used for medicinal purposes by any person not knowing of the adulteration, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 271.

276. Whoever knowingly sells, or offers or exposes for sale, or issues from a dispensary for medicinal purposes, any drug or medicinal preparation, as a different drug or medical preparation, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

277. Whoever voluntarily corrupts or fouls the water of any public spring or reservoir, so as to render it less fit for the purpose for which it is ordinarily used, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

278. Whoever voluntarily vitiates the atmosphere in any place so as to make it noxious to the health of persons in general dwelling or carrying on business in the neighbourhood or passing along a public way, shall be punished with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

279. Whoever drives any vehicle, or rides, on any public way in a manner so rash or negligent as to endanger human life, or to be likely to cause hurt or injury to any other person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

280. Whoever navigates any vessel in a manner so rash or negligent as to endanger human life, or to be likely to cause hurt or injury to any other person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

281. Whoever exhibits any false light, mark or buoy, intending or knowing it to be likely that such exhibition will mislead any navigator, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Exhibition of false light, mark or buoy.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

282. Whoever knowingly or negligently conveys, or causes to be conveyed for hire, any person by water in any vessel, when that vessel is in such a state or so loaded as to endanger the life of that person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Conveying person by water for hire in unsafe or overloaded vessel.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

283. Whoever, by doing any act, or by omitting to take order with any property in his possession or under his charge, causes danger, obstruction or injury to any person in any public way or public line of navigation, shall be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees.

Danger or obstruction in public way or line of navigation.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

284. Whoever does, with any poisonous substance, any act in a manner so rash or negligent as to endanger human life, or to be likely to cause hurt or injury to any person, or knowingly or negligently omits to take such order with any poisonous substance in his possession as is sufficient to guard against probable danger to human life from such poisonous substance, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Negligent conduct with respect to poisonous substance.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

285. Whoever does, with fire or any combustible matter, any act so rashly or negligently as to endanger human life, or to be likely to cause hurt or injury to any other person, or knowingly or negligently omits to take such order with any fire or any combustible matter in his possession as is sufficient to guard against any probable danger to human life from such fire or combustible matter, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Negligent conduct with respect to fire or combustible matter.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

286. Whoever does, with any explosive substance, any act so rashly or negligently as to endanger human life, or to be likely to cause hurt or injury to any other person, or knowingly or negligently omits to take such order with any explosive substance in his possession as is sufficient to guard against any probable danger to human life from that substance, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Negligent conduct with respect to explosive substance.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 285.

287. Whoever does, with any machinery, any act so rashly or negligently as to endanger human life, or to be likely to cause hurt or injury to any other person,
 Negligent conduct with respect to machinery. or knowingly or negligently omits to take such order with any machinery in his possession or under his care as is sufficient to guard against any probable danger to human life from such machinery, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

288. Whoever, in pulling down or repairing any building, knowingly or negligently omits to take such order with that building as is sufficient to guard against any probable danger to human life from the fall of that building, or of any part thereof,
 Negligent conduct with respect to pulling down or repairing buildings. shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

289. Whoever knowingly or negligently omits to take such order with any animal in his possession as is sufficient to guard against any probable danger to human life, or any probable danger of grievous hurt from such animal, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.
 Negligent conduct with respect to animal.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

290. Whoever commits a public nuisance in any case not otherwise punishable by this Code, shall be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees.
 Punishment for public nuisance in cases not otherwise provided for.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

291. Whoever repeats or continues a public nuisance, having been enjoined by any public servant who has lawful authority to issue such injunction not to repeat or continue such nuisance, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.
 Continuance of nuisance after injunction to discontinue.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

292. Whoever—

(a) sells, lets to hire, distributes, publicly exhibits or in any manner puts into circulation, or for purposes of sale, hire, distribution, public exhibition or circulation makes, produces or has in his possession any obscene book, pamphlet, paper, drawing, painting, representation or figure or any other obscene object whatsoever, or
 Sale, etc., of obscene books, etc.

(b) imports, exports or conveys any obscene object for any of the purposes aforesaid, or knowing or having reason to believe that such object will be sold, let to hire, distributed or publicly exhibited or in any manner put into circulation, or

(c) takes part in or receives profits from any business in the course of which he knows or has reason to believe that any such obscene objects are, for any of the purposes aforesaid, made, produced, purchased, kept, imported, exported, conveyed, publicly exhibited or in any manner put into circulation, or

(d) advertises or makes known by any means whatsoever that any person is engaged or is ready to engage in any act which is an offence under this section, or that any such obscene object can be procured from or through any person, or

(e) offers or attempts to do any act which is an offence under this section, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine, or with both.

Exception.—This section does not extend to any book, pamphlet, writing, drawing, or painting kept or used bona fide for religious purposes or any representation sculptured, engraved, painted or otherwise represented on or in any temple, or on any car used for the conveyance of idols, or kept or used for any religious purpose.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

293. Whoever sells, lets to hire, distributes, exhibits or circulates to any person under the age of twenty years any such obscene object as is referred to in the last preceding section, or offers or attempts so to do, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

294. Whoever, to the annoyance of others—

Obscene acts and songs. (a) does any obscene act in any public place, or (b) sings, recites or utters any obscene songs, ballad or words, in or near any public place, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate — Cognizable — Warrant — Bailable — Not compoundable.

294-A. Whoever keeps any office or place for the purpose of drawing any lottery not authorised by Government shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine, or with both.

And whoever publishes any proposal to pay any sum, or to deliver any goods, or to do or forbear doing anything for the benefit of any person, on any event or contingency relative or applicable to the drawing of any ticket, lot, number or figure in any such lottery, shall be punished with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Any Magistrate—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

CHAPTER XV.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO RELIGION.

295. Whoever destroys, damages or defiles any place of worship, or any object held sacred by any class of persons with the intention of thereby insulting the religion of any class of persons or with the knowledge that any class of persons is likely to consider such destruction, damage or defilement as an insult to their religion, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

295-A. Whoever, with deliberate and malicious intention of outraging the religious feelings of any class of His Majesty's subjects, by words, either spoken or written, or by visible representations, insults or attempts to insult the religion or the religious beliefs of that class, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Deliberate and malicious acts intended to outrage religious feelings of any class, by insulting its religion or religious beliefs.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Sanction.

296. Whoever voluntarily causes disturbance to any assembly lawfully engaged in the performance of religious worship, or religious ceremonies, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Disturbing religious assembly.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

297. Whoever, with the intention of wounding the feelings of any person, or of insulting the religion of any person, or with the knowledge that the feelings of any person are likely to be wounded, or that the religion of any person is likely to be insulted thereby,

Trespassing on burial places, etc.

commits any trespass in any place of worship or on any place of sepulture, or any place set apart for the performance of funeral rites or as a depository for the remains of the dead, or offers any indignity to any human corpse, or causes disturbance to any persons assembled for the performance of funeral ceremonies, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

298. Whoever, with deliberate intention of wounding the religious feelings of any person, utters any word or makes any sound in the hearing of that person, or makes any gesture in the sight of that person, or places any object in the sight of that person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Uttering words, etc. with deliberate intent to wound religious feelings.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable.

CHAPTER XVI.

OF OFFENCES AFFECTING THE HUMAN BODY.

Of Offences Affecting Life

299. Whoever causes death by doing an act with the intention of causing death, or with the intention of causing such bodily injury as is likely to cause death, or with the knowledge that he is likely by such act to cause death, commits the offence of culpable homicide.

Culpable homicide.

Illustrations.

(a) A lays sticks and turf over a pit, with the intention of thereby causing death, or with the knowledge that death is likely to be thereby caused. Z, believing the ground to be firm, treads on it, falls in and is killed. A has committed the offence of culpable homicide.

(b) A knows Z to be behind a bush. B does not know it. A, intending to cause, or knowing it to be likely to cause, Z's death, induces B to fire at the bush, B fires and kills Z. Here B may be guilty of no offence; but A has committed the offence of culpable homicide.

(c) A, by shooting at a fowl with intent to kill and steal it, kills B, who is behind a bush, A not knowing that he was there. Here, although A was doing an unlawful act, he was not guilty of culpable homicide, as he did not intend to kill B, or cause death by doing an act that he knew was likely to cause death.

Explanation 1.—A person who causes bodily injury to another who is labouring under a disorder, disease or bodily infirmity, and thereby accelerates the death of that other, shall be deemed to have caused his death.

Explanation 2.—Where death is caused by bodily injury, the person who causes such bodily injury shall be deemed to have caused the death, although by resorting to proper remedies and skilful treatment the death might have been prevented.

Explanation 3.—The causing of the death of a child in the mother's womb is not homicide. But it may amount to culpable homicide to cause the death of a living child, if any part of that child has been brought forth, though the child may not have breathed or been completely born.

300. Except in the cases hereinafter excepted, culpable homicide is murder, Murder. if the act by which the death is caused is done with the intention of causing death, or—

Secondly.—If it is done with the intention of causing such bodily injury as the offender knows to be likely to cause the death of the person to whom the harm is caused, or

Thirdly.—If it is done with the intention of causing bodily injury to any person and the bodily injury intended to be inflicted is sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause death, or

Fourthly.—If the person committing the act knows that it is so imminently dangerous that it must, in all probability, cause death, or such bodily injury as is likely to cause death, and commits such act without any excuse for incurring the risk of causing death or such injury as aforesaid.

Illustrations.

(a) A shoots Z with the intention of killing him. Z dies in consequence. A commits murder.

(b) A, knowing that Z is labouring under such a disease that a blow is likely to cause his death, strikes him with the intention of causing bodily injury. Z dies in consequence of the blow. A is guilty of murder, although the blow might not have been sufficient in the ordinary course of nature to cause the death of a person in a sound state of health. But if A, not knowing that Z is labouring under any disease, gives him such a blow as would not in the ordinary course of nature kill a person in a sound state of health, here A, although he may intend to cause bodily injury, is not guilty of murder, if he did not intend to cause death or such bodily injury as in the ordinary course of nature would cause death.

(c) A intentionally gives Z a sword-cut or club-wound sufficient to cause the death of a man in the ordinary course of nature. Z dies in consequence. Here A is guilty of murder, although he may not have intended to cause Z's death.

(d) A without any excuse fires a loaded cannon into a crowd of persons and kills one of them. A is guilty of murder, although he may not have had a premeditated design to kill any particular individual.

Exception 1.—Culpable homicide is not murder if the offender, whilst deprived of the power of self-control by grave and sudden provocation, causes the death of the person who gave the provocation, or causes the death of any other person by mistake or accident.

When culpable homicide is not murder.

The above exception is subject to the following provisos:—

First.—That the provocation is not sought or voluntarily provoked by the offender as an excuse for killing or doing harm to any person.

Secondly.—That the provocation is not given by anything done in obedience to the law, or by a public servant in the lawful exercise of the powers of such public servant.

Thirdly.—That the provocation is not given by anything done in the lawful exercise of the right of private defence.

Explanation.—Whether the provocation was grave and sudden enough to prevent the offence from amounting to murder is a question of fact.

Illustrations.

(a) A, under the influence of passion excited by a provocation given by Z, intentionally kills Y, Z's child. This is murder, inasmuch as the provocation was not given by the child, and the death of the child was not caused by accident or misfortune in doing an act caused by the provocation.

(b) Y gives grave and sudden provocation to A. A, on this provocation, fires a pistol at Y, neither intending nor knowing himself to be likely to kill Z, who is near him, but out of sight. A kills Z. Here A has not committed murder, but merely culpable homicide.

(c) A is lawfully arrested by Z, a bailiff. A is excited to sudden and violent passion by the arrest, and kills Z. This is murder, inasmuch as the provocation was given by a thing done by a public servant in the exercise of the powers.

(d) A appears as a witness before Z, a Magistrate. Z says that he does not believe a word of A's deposition, and that A has perjured himself. A is moved to sudden passion by these words, and kills Z. This is murder.

(e) A attempts to pull Z's nose. Z, in the exercise of the right of private defence, lays hold of A to prevent him from doing so. A is moved to sudden and violent passion in consequence, and kills A. This is murder, inasmuch as the provocation was given by a thing done in the exercise of the right of private defence.

(f) Z strikes B. B is by this provocation excited to violent rage. A, a bystander, intending to take advantage of B's rage, and to cause him to kill Z, puts a knife into B's hand for that purpose. B kills Z with the knife. Here B may have committed only culpable homicide, but A is guilty of murder.

Exception 2.—Culpable homicide is not murder if the offender, in the exercise in good faith of the right of private defence of person or property, exceeds the power given to him by law and causes the death of the person against whom he is exercising such right of defence without premeditation, and without any intention of doing more harm than is necessary for the purposes of such defence.

Illustration.

Z attempts to horsewhip A, not in such a manner as to cause grievous hurt to A. A draws out a pistol. Z persists in the assault. A, believing in good faith that he can by no other means prevent himself from being horsewhipped, shoots Z dead. A has not committed murder, but only culpable homicide.

Exception 3.—Culpable homicide is not murder if the offender, being a public servant or aiding a public servant acting for the advancement of public justice, exceeds the powers given to him by law, and causes death by doing an act which he, in good faith, believes to be lawful and necessary for the due discharge of his duty as such public servant and without ill-will towards the person whose death is caused.

Exception 4.—Culpable homicide is not murder if it is committed without premeditation in a sudden fight in the heat of passion upon a sudden quarrel and without the offender's having taken undue advantage or acted in a cruel or unusual manner.

Explanation.—It is immaterial in such cases which party offers the provocation or commits the first assault.

Exception 5.—Culpable homicide is not murder when the person whose death is caused, being above the age of eighteen years, suffers death or takes the risk of death with his own consent.

Illustration.

A, by instigation, voluntarily causes Z, a person under eighteen years of age, to commit suicide. Here, on account of Z's youth, he was incapable of giving consent to his own death; A has therefore abetted murder.

301. If a person, by doing anything which he intends or knows to be likely to cause death, commits culpable homicide by causing the death of any person, whose death he neither intends nor knows himself to be likely to cause, the culpable homicide committed by the offender is of the description of which it would have been if he had caused the death of the person whose death he intended or knew himself to be likely to cause.

Punishment for murder.

302. Whoever commits murder shall be punished with death, or transportation for life, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

Punishment for murder by life-convict.

303. Whoever, being under sentence of transportation for life, commits murder, shall be punished with death.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 302.

304. Whoever commits culpable homicide not amounting to murder, shall be punished with transportation for life, or imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine, if the act by which the death is caused is done with the intention of causing death, or of causing such bodily injury as is likely to cause death ; or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, or with fine, or with both, if the act is done with the knowledge that it is likely to cause death, but without any intention to cause death or to cause such bodily injury as is likely to cause death.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

304-A. Whoever causes the death of any person by doing any rash or negligent act not amounting to culpable homicide shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

305. If any person under eighteen years of age, any insane person, any delirious person, any idiot, or any person in a state of intoxication commits suicide, whoever abets the commission of such suicide, shall be punished with death or transportation for life, or imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

306. If any person commits suicide, whoever abets the commission of such suicide, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 305.

307. Whoever does any act with such intention or knowledge, and under such circumstances that, if he by that act caused death, he would be guilty of murder, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine; and, if hurt is caused to any person by such act, the offender shall be liable either to transportation for life, or to such punishment as is hereinbefore mentioned.

When any person offending under this section is under sentence of transportation for life, he may, if hurt is caused, be punished with death.

Attempts by life-convicts.

Illustrations.

(a) A shoots at Z with intention to kill him, under such circumstances that, if death ensued, A would be guilty of murder. A is liable to punishment under this section.

(b) A with the intention of causing the death of a child of tender years exposes it in a desert place. A has committed the offence defined by this section, though the death of the child does not ensue.

(c) A, intending to murder Z, buys a gun and loads it. A has not yet committed the offence. A fires the gun at Z. He has committed the offence defined in this section, and, if by such firing he wounds Z, he is liable to the punishment provided by the latter part of the first paragraph of this section.

(d) A, intending to murder Z, by poison, purchases poison and mixes the same with food which remains in A's keeping; A has not yet committed the offence in this section. A places the food on Z's table or delivers it to Z's servants to place it on Z's table. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 305.

308. Whoever does any act with such intention or knowledge, and under such circumstances that, if he by that act caused death, he would be guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both; and, if hurt is caused to any person by such act, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Illustration.

A, on grave and sudden provocation, fires a pistol at Z, under such circumstances that if he thereby caused death he would be guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

309. Whoever attempts to commit suicide and does any act towards the commission of such offence, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

310. Whoever, at any time after the passing of this Act, shall have been habitually associated with any other or others for the purpose of committing robbery or child-stealing by means of or accompanied with murder, is a thug.

311. Whoever is a thug, shall be punished with transportation for life, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

Of the Causing of Miscarriage, of Injuries to Unborn Children, of the Exposure of Infants, and of the Concealment of Births.

312. Whoever voluntarily causes a woman with child to miscarry, shall, if such miscarriage be not caused in good faith for the purpose of saving the life of the woman, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both; and, if the woman be quick with child, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation.—A woman who causes herself to miscarry, is within the meaning of this section.

Procedure :—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

313. Whoever commits the offence defined in the last preceding section, Causing miscarriage without woman's consent. without the consent of the woman, whether the woman is quick with child or not, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

314. Whoever, with intent to cause the miscarriage of a woman with child, does any act which causes the death of such woman, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine ;

Death caused by act done with intent to cause miscarriage.

If act done without woman's consent.

and if the act is done without the consent of the woman, shall be punished either with transportation for life, or with the punishment above mentioned.

Explanation.—It is not essential to this offence that the offender should know that the act is likely to cause death.

Procedure :—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

315. Whoever before the birth of any child does any act with the intention of thereby preventing that child from being born alive or causing it to die after its birth, and does by such act prevent that child from being born alive, or causes it to die after its birth, shall, if such act be not caused in good faith for the purpose of saving the life of the mother, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, or with fine, or with both.

Act done with intent to prevent child being born alive or to cause it to die after birth.

Procedure<sup>1</sup> :—Same as under s. 314.

316. Whoever does any act under such circumstances, that if he thereby caused death he would be guilty of culpable homicide, and does by such act cause the death of a quick unborn child, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Causing death of quick unborn child by act amounting to culpable homicide.

Illustration.

A, knowing<sup>2</sup> that he is likely to cause the death of a pregnant woman, does an act which, if it caused the death of the woman, would amount to culpable homicide. The woman is injured but does not die ; but the death of an unborn quick child with which she is pregnant is thereby caused. A is guilty of the offence defined in this section.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 314.

317. Whoever, being the father or mother of a child under the age of twelve years, or having the care of such child, shall expose or leave such child in any place with the intention of wholly abandoning such child, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Exposure and abandonment of child under twelve years, by parent or person having care of it.

Explanation.—This section is not intended to prevent the trial of the offender for murder or culpable homicide, as the case may be, if the child die in consequence of the exposure.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

318. Whoever, by secretly burying or otherwise disposing of the dead body of a child, whether such child die before or after or during its birth, intentionally conceals or endeavours to conceal the birth of such child, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Concealment of birth by secret disposal of dead body.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 317.

Of Hurt.

319. Whoever causes bodily pain, disease, or infirmity to any person is said to cause hurt.

320. The following kinds of hurt only are designated as "grievous" :—

First.—Emasculation.

Secondly.—Permanent privation of the sight of either eye.

Thirdly.—Permanent privation of the hearing of either ear.

Fourthly.—Privation of any member or joint.

Fifthly.—Destruction or permanent impairing of the powers of any member or joint.

Sixthly.—Permanent disfiguration of the head or face.

Seventhly.—Fracture or dislocation of a bone or tooth.

Eighthly.—Any hurt which endangers life or which causes the sufferer to be, during the space of twenty days, in severe bodily pain, or unable to follow his ordinary pursuits.

321. Whoever does any act with the intention of thereby causing hurt to any person, or with the knowledge that he is likely thereby to cause hurt to any person, and does thereby cause hurt to any person, is said "voluntarily to cause hurt."

322. Whoever voluntarily causes hurt, if the hurt which he intends to cause or knows himself to be likely to cause is grievous hurt, and if the hurt which he causes is grievous hurt, is said "voluntarily to cause grievous hurt."

Explanation.—A person is not said voluntarily to cause grievous hurt except when he both causes grievous hurt, and intends or knows himself to be likely to cause grievous hurt. But he is said voluntarily to cause grievous hurt, if intending or knowing himself to be likely to cause grievous hurt of one kind, he actually causes grievous hurt of another kind.

Illustration.

A, intending or knowing himself to be likely permanently to disfigure Z's face, gives Z a blow which does not permanently disfigure Z's face, but which causes Z to suffer severe bodily pain for the space of twenty days. A has voluntarily caused grievous hurt.

323. Whoever, except in the case provided for by section 334, voluntarily causes hurt, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Non-cognizable — Summons — Bailable—Compoundable.

324. Whoever, except in the case provided for by section 334, voluntarily causes hurt by means of any instrument for shooting, stabbing or cutting, or any instrument, which, used as a weapon of offence, is likely to cause death, or by means of fire or any heated substance, or by means of any poison or any corrosive substance, or by means of any explosive substance or by means of any substance which it is deleterious to the human body to inhale, to swallow, or to receive into the blood, or by means of any animal, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

325. Whoever, except in the case provided for by section 335, voluntarily causes grievous hurt, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure:—Same as under s. 324.

326. Whoever, except in the case provided for by section 335, voluntarily causes grievous hurt by means of any instrument for shooting, stabbing or cutting, or any instrument which, used as a weapon of offence, is likely to cause death, or by means of fire or any heated substance, or by means of any poison or any corrosive substance, or by means of any explosive substance, or by means of any substance which it is deleterious to the human body to inhale, to swallow, or to receive into the blood, or by means of any animal, shall be punished with transportation for life or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure:—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Summons—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

327. Whoever voluntarily causes hurt, for the purpose of extorting from the sufferer, or from any person interested in the sufferer, any property or valuable security, or of constraining the sufferer or any person interested in such sufferer to do anything which is illegal or which may facilitate the commission of an offence, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure:—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not Bailable—Not compoundable.

328. Whoever administers to or causes to be taken by any person any poison or any stupefying, intoxicating or unwholesome drug, or other thing with intent to cause hurt to such person, or with intent to commit or to facilitate the commission of an offence or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause hurt, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure:—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

329. Whoever voluntarily causes grievous hurt for the purpose of extorting from the sufferer or from any person interested in the sufferer, any property or valuable security, or of constraining the sufferer or any person interested in such sufferer to do anything that is illegal or which may facilitate the commission of an offence, shall be punished with transportation for life, or imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure:—Same as under s. 328.

330. Whoever voluntarily causes hurt, for the purpose of extorting from the sufferer or any person interested in the sufferer, any confession or any information which may lead to the detection of an offence or misconduct, or for the purpose of constraining the sufferer or any person interested in the sufferer to restore or to cause the restoration of any property or valuable security or to satisfy any claim or demand, or to give information which may lead to the restoration of any property or valuable security, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a police-officer, tortures Z in order to induce Z to confess that he committed a crime. A is guilty of an offence under this section.

(b) A, a police-officer, tortures B to induce him to point out where certain stolen property is deposited. A is guilty of an offence under this section.

(c) A, a revenue-officer, tortures A in order to compel him to pay certain arrears of revenue due from Z. A is guilty of an offence under this section.

(d) A, a zemindar, tortures a raiyat in order to compel him to pay his rent. A is guilty of an offence under this section.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

331. Whoever voluntarily causes grievous hurt for the purpose of extorting from the sufferer or any person interested in the sufferer any confession or any information which may lead to the detection of an offence or misconduct, or for the purpose of constraining the sufferer or any person interested in the sufferer to restore or to cause the restoration of any property or valuable security, or to satisfy any claim or demand, or to give information which may lead to the restoration of any property or valuable security, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

332. Whoever voluntarily causes hurt to any person being a public servant in the discharge of his duty as such public servant, or with intent to prevent or deter that person or any, other public servant from discharging his duty as such public servant, or in consequence of anything done or attempted to be done by that person in the lawful discharge of his duty as such public servant, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

333. Whoever voluntarily causes grievous hurt to any person being a public servant in the discharge of his duty as such public servant, or with intent to prevent or deter that person or any other public servant from discharging his duty as such public servant, or in consequence of anything done or attempted to be done by that person in the lawful discharge of his duty as such public servant, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

334. Whoever voluntarily causes hurt on grave and sudden provocation, if he neither intends nor knows himself to be likely to cause hurt to any person other than the person who gave the provocation, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundingable.

335. Whoever voluntarily causes grievous hurt on grave and sudden provocation, if he neither intends nor knows himself to be likely to cause grievous hurt to any person other than the person who gave the provocation, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to four years, or with fine which may extend to two thousand rupees, or with both.

Explanation.—The last two sections are subject to the same provisos as Exception 1, section 300.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

336. Whoever does any act so rashly or negligently as to endanger human life or the personal safety of others, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to two hundred and fifty rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

337. Whoever causes hurt to any person by doing any act so rashly or negligently as to endanger human life, or the personal safety of others, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

338. Whoever causes grievous hurt to any person by doing any act so rashly or negligently as to endanger human life, or the personal safety of others, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

Of Wrongful Restraint and Wrongful Confinement.

339. Whoever voluntarily obstructs any person so as to prevent that person from proceeding in any direction in which that person has a right to proceed, is said wrongfully to restrain that person.

Exception.—The obstruction of a private way over land or water which a person in good faith believes himself to have a lawful right to obstruct, is not an offence within the meaning of this section.

Illustration.

A obstructs a path along which Z has a right to pass, A not believing in good faith that he has a right to stop the path. Z is thereby prevented from passing. A wrongfully restrains Z.

340. Whoever wrongfully restrains any person in such a manner as to prevent that person from proceeding beyond certain circumscribing limits, is said "wrongfully to confine" that person.

Illustrations.

(a) A causes Z to go within a walled space, and locks Z in. Z is thus prevented from proceeding in any direction beyond the circumscribing line of wall. A wrongfully confines Z.

(b) A places men with fire-arms at the outlets of a building, and tells Z that they will fire at Z if Z attempts to leave the building. A wrongfully confines Z.

341. Whoever wrongfully restrains any person, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine, which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable—Summary.

342. Whoever wrongfully confines any person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Punishment for wrongful confinement.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable.

343. Whoever wrongfully confines any person for three days, or more, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Wrongful confinement for three or more days.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

344. Whoever wrongfully confines any person for ten days, or more, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Wrongful confinement for ten or more days.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

345. Whoever keeps any person in wrongful confinement, knowing that a writ for the liberation of that person has been duly issued, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years in addition to any term of imprisonment to which he may be liable under any other section of this Chapter.

Wrongful confinement of person for whose liberation writ has been issued.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

346. Whoever wrongfully confines any person in such manner as to indicate an intention that the confinement of such person may not be known to any person interested in the person so confined, or to any public servant, or that the place of such confinement may not be known to or discovered by any such person or public servant as hereinbefore mentioned, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years in addition to any other punishment to which he may be liable for such wrongful confinement.

Wrongful confinement in secret.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

347. Whoever wrongfully confines any person for the purpose of extorting from the person confined, or from any person interested in the person confined, any property or valuable security, or of constraining the person confined or any person interested in such person to do anything illegal or to give any information which may facilitate the commission of an offence, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Wrongful confinement to extort property or constrain to illegal act.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

348. Whoever wrongfully confines any person for the purpose of extorting from the person confined or any person interested in the person confined any confession or any information which may lead to the detection of an offence or misconduct, or for the purpose of constraining the person confined or any person interested in the person confined to restore or to cause the restoration of any property or valuable security or to satisfy any claim or demand, or to give information which may lead to the restoration of any property or valuable security, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Wrongful confinement to extort confession, or compel restoration of property.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

Of Criminal Force and Assault.

349. A person is said to use force to another if he causes motion, change of motion, or cessation of motion to that other, or if he causes to any substance such motion, or change of motion, or cessation of motion as brings that substance into contact with any part of that other's body, or with anything which that other is wearing or carrying, or with anything so situated that such contact affects that other's sense of feeling: Provided that the person causing the motion, or change of motion, or cessation of motion, causes that motion, change of motion, or cessation of motion in one of the three ways hereinafter described:

First.—By his own bodily power.

Secondly.—By disposing any substance in such a manner that the motion or change or cessation of motion takes place without any further act on his part, or on the part of any other person.

Thirdly.—By inducing any animal to move, to change its motion, or to cease to move.

350. Whoever intentionally uses force to any person, without that person's consent, in order to the committing of any offence, or intending by the use of such force to cause, or knowing it to be likely that by the use of such force he will cause, injury, fear or annoyance to the person to whom the force is used, is said to use criminal force to that other.

Illustrations.

(a) Z is sitting in a moored boat on a river. A unfastens the moorings, and thus intentionally causes the boat to drift down the stream. Here A intentionally causes motion to Z, and he does this by disposing substances in such a manner that the motion is produced without any other act on any person's part. A has therefore intentionally used force to Z; and if he has done so without Z's consent, in order to the committing of any offence, or intending or knowing it to be likely that this use of force will cause injury, fear or annoyance to Z, A has used criminal force to Z.

(b) Z is riding in a chariot. A lashes Z's horses, and thereby causes them to quicken their pace. Here A has caused change of motion to Z by inducing the animals to change their motion. A has therefore used force to Z; and if A has done this without Z's consent, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby injure, frighten or annoy Z, A has used criminal force to Z.

(c) Z is riding in a palanquin. A, intending to rob Z, seizes the pole, and stops the palanquin. Here A has caused cessation of motion to Z, and he has done this by his own bodily power. A has therefore used force to Z; and as A has acted thus intentionally, without Z's consent, in order to the commission of an offence, A has used criminal force to Z.

(d) A intentionally pushes against Z in the street. Here A has by his own bodily power moved his own person so as to bring it into contact with Z. He has therefore intentionally used force to Z; and if he has done so without Z's consent, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby injure, frighten or annoy Z, he has used criminal force to Z.

(e) A throws a stone, intending or knowing it to be likely that the stone will be thus brought into contact with Z, or with Z's clothes, or with something carried by Z, or that it will strike water, and dash up the water against Z's clothes or something carried by Z. Here if the throwing of the stone produce the effect of causing any substance to come into contact with Z, or Z's clothes, A has used force to Z; and if he did so without Z's consent, intending thereby to injure, frighten or annoy Z, he has used criminal force to Z.

(f) A intentionally pulls up a woman's veil. Here A intentionally uses force to her, and if he does so without her consent, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby injure, frighten or annoy her, he has used criminal force to her.

(g) Z is bathing. A pours into the bath water which he knows to be boiling. Here A intentionally by his own bodily power causes such motion in the boiling water as brings that water into contact with Z, or with other water so situated that such contact must affect Z's sense of feeling, A has therefore intentionally used force to Z; and if he has done this without Z's consent, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby cause injury, fear or annoyance to Z, A has used criminal force.

(h) A incites a dog to spring upon Z, without Z's consent. Here, if A intends to cause injury, fear or annoyance to Z, he uses criminal force to Z

351. Whoever makes any gesture, or any preparation, intending or knowing it to be likely that such gesture or preparation will cause any person present to apprehend that he who makes that gesture or preparation is about to use criminal force to that person, is said to commit an assault.

Explanation.—Mere words do not amount to an assault. But the words which a person uses may give to his gestures or preparations such a meaning as may make those gestures or preparations amount to an assault.

Illustrations.

(a) A shakes his fist at Z, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby cause Z to believe that A is about to strike Z. A has committed an assault.

(b) A begins to unloose the muzzle of a ferocious dog, intending, or knowing it to be likely, that he may thereby cause Z to believe that he is about to cause the dog to attack Z. A has committed an assault upon Z.

(c) A takes up a stick, saying to Z, "I will give you a beating." Here, though the words used by A could in no case amount to an assault, and though the mere gesture, unaccompanied by any other circumstance, might not amount to an assault, the gesture explained by the words may amount to an assault.

352. Whoever assaults or uses criminal force to any person otherwise than on grave and sudden provocation given by that person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Explanation.—Grave and sudden provocation will not mitigate the punishment for an offence under this section, if the provocation is sought or voluntarily provoked by the offender as an excuse for the offence, or if the provocation is given by anything done in obedience to the law, or by a public servant, in the lawful exercise of the powers of such public servant, or if the provocation is given by anything done in the lawful exercise of the right of private defence.

Whether the provocation was grave and sudden enough to mitigate the offence, is a question of fact.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Not cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable—Summary.

353. Whoever assaults or uses criminal force to any person being a public servant in the execution of his duty as such public servant, or with intent to prevent or deter that person from discharging his duty as such public servant, or in consequence of anything done or attempted to be done by such person in the lawful discharge of his duty as such public servant, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

354. Whoever assaults or uses criminal force to any woman, intending to outrage or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby outrage her modesty, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 353.

355. Whoever assaults or uses criminal force to any person, intending thereby to dishonour that person, otherwise than on grave and sudden provocation given by that person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable.

356. Whoever assaults or uses criminal force to any person, in attempting to commit theft on any property which that person is then wearing or carrying, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

357. Whoever assaults or uses criminal force to any person, in attempting wrongfully to confine that person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

358. Whoever assaults or uses criminal force to any person on grave and sudden provocation given by that person, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

Explanation.—The last section is subject to the same explanation as section 352.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate — Non-cognizable — Warrant — Bailable — Compoundable — Summary.

Of Kidnapping, Abduction, Slavery and Forced Labour.

359. Kidnapping is of two kinds: kidnapping from British India, and kidnapping from lawful guardianship.

360. Whoever conveys any person beyond the limits of British India without the consent of that person, or of some person legally authorized to consent on behalf of that person, is said to kidnap that person from British India.

361. Whoever takes or entices any minor under fourteen years of age if a male, or under sixteen years of age if a female, or any person of unsound mind, out of the keeping of the lawful guardian of such minor or person of unsound mind, without the consent of such guardian, is said to kidnap such minor or person from lawful guardianship.

Explanation.—The words “lawful guardian” in this section include any person lawfully entrusted with the care or custody of such minor or other person.

Exception.—This section does not extend to the act of any person who in good faith believes himself to be the father of an illegitimate child, or who in good faith believes himself to be entitled to the lawful custody of such child, unless such act is committed for an immoral or unlawful purpose.

362. Whoever by force compels, or by any deceitful means induces, any person to go from any place, is said to abduct that person.

363. Whoever kidnaps any person from British India, or from lawful guardianship, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Punishment for kidnapping.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

364. Whoever kidnaps or abducts any person in order that such person may be murdered, or may be so disposed of as to be put in danger of being murdered, shall be punished with transportation for life or rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Kidnapping or abducting in order to murder.

Illustrations.

(a) A kidnaps Z from British India, intending or knowing it to be likely that Z may be sacrificed to an idol. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(b) A forcibly carries or entices B away from his home in order that B may be murdered. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

365. Whoever kidnaps or abducts any person, with intent to cause that person to be secretly and wrongfully confined, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Kidnapping or abducting with intent secretly and wrongfully to confine person.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

366. Whoever kidnaps or abducts any woman with intent that she may be compelled, or knowing it to be likely that she will be compelled, to marry any person against her will, or in order that she may be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse, or knowing it to be likely that she will be forced or seduced to illicit intercourse, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Kidnapping, abducting or inducing woman to compel her marriage, etc.

And whoever, by means of criminal intimidation as defined in this Code or of abuse of authority or any other method of compulsion, induces any woman to go from any place with intent that she may be, or knowing that it is likely that she will be, forced or seduced to illicit intercourse with another person shall also be punishable as aforesaid.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

366-A. Whoever, by any means whatsoever, induces any minor girl under the age of eighteen years to go from any place or to do any act with intent that such girl may be, or knowing that it is likely that she will be, forced or seduced to illicit intercourse with another person shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to ten years and shall also be liable to fine.

Procuration of minor girl.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 366.

366-B. Whoever imports into British India from any country outside India any girl under the age of twenty-one years with intent that she may be, or knowing it to be likely that she will be, forced or seduced to illicit intercourse with another person,

Importation of girl from foreign country.

and whoever with such intent or knowledge imports into British India, from any State in India any such girl who has with the like intent or knowledge been imported into India, whether by himself or by another person, shall be punishable with imprisonment which may extend to ten years and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 366.

367. Whoever kidnaps or abducts any person in order that such person may be subjected, or may be so disposed of as to be put in danger of being subjected, to grievous hurt, or slavery, or to the unnatural lust of any person, or knowing it to be likely that such person will be so subjected or disposed of, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 366.

368. Whoever, knowing that any person has been kidnapped or has been abducted, wrongfully conceals or confines such person, shall be punished in the same manner as if he had kidnapped or abducted such person with the same intention or knowledge, or for the same purpose as that with or for which he conceals or detains such person in confinement.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

369. Whoever kidnaps or abducts any child under the age of ten years, with the intention of taking dishonestly any moveable property from the person of such child, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 368.

370. Whoever imports, exports, removes, buys, sells, or disposes of any person as a slave, or accepts, receives or detains against his will any person as a slave, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

371. Whoever habitually imports, exports, removes, buys, sells, traffics or deals in slaves shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

372. Whoever sells, lets to hire, or otherwise disposes of any person under the age of eighteen years with intent that such person shall at any age be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution or illicit intercourse with any person or for any unlawful and immoral purpose, or knowing it to be likely that such person will at any age be employed or used for any such purpose, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation I.—When a female under the age of eighteen years is sold, let for hire, or otherwise disposed of to a prostitute or to any person who keeps or manages a brothel, the person so disposing of such female shall, until the contrary is proved, be presumed to have disposed of her with the intent that she shall be used for the purpose of prostitution.

Explanation II.—For the purposes of this section “illicit intercourse” means sexual intercourse between persons not united by marriage or by any union or tie which, though not amounting to a marriage, is recognized by the personal law or custom of the community to which they belong or, where they belong to different communities, of both such communities, as constituting between them a quasi-marital relation.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

373. Whoever buys, hires or otherwise obtains possession of any person under the age of eighteen years with intent that such person shall at any age be employed or used for the purpose of prostitution or illicit intercourse with any person or for any unlawful and immoral purpose, or knowing it to be likely that such person will at any age be employed or used for any such purpose, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Explanation 1.—Any prostitute, or any person keeping or managing a brothel, who buys, hires or otherwise obtains possession of a female under the age of eighteen years shall, until the contrary is proved, be presumed to have obtained possession of such female with the intent that she shall be used for the purpose of prostitution.

Explanation 2.—“ Illicit intercourse ” has the same meaning as in section 372.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 372.

374. Whoever unlawfully compels any person to labour against the will of that person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate — Non-cognizable — Warrant — Bailable—Compoundable.

Of Rape.

375. A man is said to commit “ rape,” who, except in the case hereinafter excepted, has sexual intercourse with a woman under circumstances falling under any of the five following descriptions :

First.—Against her will.

Secondly.—Without her consent.

Thirdly.—With her consent, when her consent has been obtained by putting her in fear of death, or of hurt.

Fourthly.—With her consent, when the man knows that he is not her husband, and that her consent is given because she believes that he is another man to whom she is or believes herself to be lawfully married.

Fifthly.—With or without her consent, when she is under fourteen years of age.

Explanation.—Penetration is sufficient to constitute the sexual intercourse necessary to the offence of rape.

Exception.—Sexual intercourse by a man with his own wife, the wife not being under thirteen years of age, is not rape.

376. Whoever commits rape shall be punished with transportation for life or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine ;

Unless the woman raped is his own wife and is not under twelve years of age, in which case he shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—In case of sexual intercourse by a man with his wife : (If the wife be not under 12) Session, Presidency or District Magistrate ; (If the wife be under 12) Session only—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable ; In any other case Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

Of Unnatural Offences.

377. Whoever voluntarily has carnal intercourse against the order of nature with any man, woman or animal, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine,

Explanation.—Penetration is sufficient to constitute the carnal intercourse necessary to the offence described in this section.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

CHAPTER XVII.

OF OFFENCES AGAINST PROPERTY.

Of Theft.

378. Whoever, intending to take dishonestly any moveable property out of the possession of any person without that person's consent, moves that property in order to such taking, is said to commit theft.

Explanation 1.—A thing so long as it is attached to the earth, not being moveable property, is not the subject of theft; but it becomes capable of being the subject of theft as soon as it is severed from the earth.

Explanation 2.—A moving effected by the same act which effects the severance may be a theft.

Explanation 3.—A person is said to cause a thing to move by removing an obstacle which prevented it from moving or by separating it from any other thing, as well as by actually moving it.

Explanation 4.—A person, who by any means causes an animal to move, is said to move that animal, and to move everything which, in consequence of the motion so caused, is moved by that animal.

Explanation 5.—The consent mentioned in the definition may be express or implied, and may be given either by the person in possession, or by any person having for that purpose authority either express or implied.

Illustrations.

(a) A cuts down a tree on Z's ground, with the intention of dishonestly taking the tree out of Z's possession without Z's consent. Here, as soon as A has severed the tree in order to such taking, he has committed theft.

(b) A puts a bait for dogs in his pocket, and thus induces Z's dog to follow it. Here, if A's intention be dishonestly to take the dog out of Z's possession without Z's consent, A has committed theft as soon as Z's dog has begun to follow A.

(c) A meets a bullock carrying a box of treasure. He drives the bullock in a certain direction, in order that he may dishonestly take the treasure. As soon as the bullock begins to move, A has committed theft of the treasure.

(d) A being Z's servant, and entrusted by Z with the care of Z's plate, dishonestly runs away with the plate, without Z's consent. A has committed theft.

(e) Z, going on a journey, entrusts his plate to A, the keeper of a warehouse, till Z shall return. A carries the plate to a goldsmith and sells it. Here the plate was not in Z's possession. It could not therefore be taken out of Z's possession, and A has not committed theft, though he may have committed criminal breach of trust.

(f) A finds a ring belonging to Z on a table in the house which Z occupies. Here the ring is in Z's possession, and if A dishonestly removes it, A commits theft.

(g) A finds a ring lying on the high-road, not in the possession of any person. A, by taking it, commits no theft, though he may commit criminal misappropriation of property.

(h) A sees a ring belonging to Z lying on a table in Z's house. Not venturing to misappropriate the ring immediately for fear of search and detection, A hides the ring in a place where it is highly improbable that it will ever be found by Z, with the intention of taking the ring from the hiding place and selling it when the loss is forgotten. Here A, at the time of first moving the ring, commits theft.

(i) A delivers his watch to Z, a jeweller, to be regulated. Z carries it to his shop. A, not owing to the jeweller any debt for which the jeweller might lawfully detain the watch as a security, enters the shop openly, takes his watch by force out of Z's hand, and carries it away. Here A though he may have committed criminal trespass and assault, has not committed theft, inasmuch as what he did was not done dishonestly.

(j) If A owes money to Z for repairing the watch, and if Z retains the watch lawfully as a security for the debt, and A takes the watch out of Z's possession, with the intention of depriving Z of the property as a security for his debt, he commits theft, inasmuch as he takes it dishonestly.

(k) Again, if A, having pawned his watch to Z, takes it out of Z's possession without Z's consent, not having paid what he borrowed on the watch, he commits theft, though the watch is his own property, inasmuch as he takes it dishonestly.

(l) A takes an article belonging to Z out of Z's possession without Z's consent, with the intention of keeping it until he obtains money from Z as a reward for its restoration. Here A takes dishonestly; A has therefore committed theft.

(m) A, being on friendly terms with Z, goes into Z's library in Z's absence, and takes away a book without Z's express consent for the purpose merely of reading it, and with the intention of returning it. Here, it is probable that A may have conceived that he had Z's implied consent to use Z's book. If this was A's impression, A has not committed theft.

(n) A asks charity from Z's wife. She gives A money, food and clothes, which A knows to belong to Z, her husband. Here it is probable that A may conceive that Z's wife is authorised to give away alms. If this was A's impression, A has not committed theft.

(o) A is the paramour of Z's wife. She gives a valuable property, which A knows to belong to her husband Z, and to be such property as she has not authority from Z to give. If A takes the property dishonestly, he commits theft.

(p) A, in good faith, believing property belonging to Z to be A's own property, takes that property out of B's possession. Here, as A does not take dishonestly, he does not commit theft.

379. Whoever commits theft shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Summary, if property worth not more than Rs. 50.

380. Whoever commits theft in any building, tent or vessel, which building, tent or vessel is used as a human dwelling, or used for the custody of property, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 379.

381. Whoever being a clerk or servant, or being employed in the capacity of a clerk or servant, commits theft in respect of any property in the possession of his master or employer, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Summary, if property worth not more than Rs. 50.

382. Whoever commits theft, having made preparation for causing death, or hurt, or restraint, or fear of death, or of hurt, or of restraint, to any person, in order to the committing of such theft, or in order to the effecting of his escape after the committing of such theft, or in order to the retaining of property taken by such theft, shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Illustrations.

(a) A commits theft on property in Z's possession; and, while committing this theft, he has a loaded pistol under his garment, having provided this pistol for the purpose of hurting Z in case Z should resist. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(b) A picks Z's pocket, having posted several of his companions near him, in order that they may restrain Z, if Z should perceive what is passing and should resist, or should attempt to apprehend A. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

Of Extortion.

383. Whoever intentionally puts any person in fear of any injury to that person, or to any other, and thereby dishonestly induces the person so put in fear to deliver to any person any property or valuable security or anything signed or sealed which may be converted into a valuable security, commits "extortion."

Illustrations.

(a) A threatens to publish a defamatory libel concerning Z, unless Z gives him money. He thus induces Z to give him money. A has committed extortion.

(b) A threatens Z that he will keep Z's child in wrongful confinement, unless Z will sign and deliver to A a promissory note binding Z to pay certain moneys to A. Z signs and delivers the note. A has committed extortion.

(c) A threatens to send club-men to plough up Z's field unless Z will sign and deliver to B a bond binding Z under penalty to deliver certain produce to B, and thereby induces Z to sign and deliver the bond. A has committed extortion.

(d) A, by putting Z in fear of grievous hurt, dishonestly induces Z to sign or affix his seal to a blank paper and deliver it to A. Z signs and delivers the paper to A. Here, as the paper so signed may be converted into a valuable security, A has committed extortion.

384. Whoever commits extortion shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

385. Whoever, in order to the committing of extortion, puts any person in fear, or attempts to put any person in fear, of any injury, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 384.

386. Whoever commits extortion by putting any person in fear of death or of grievous hurt to that person, or to any other, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

387. Whoever, in order to the committing of extortion, puts or attempts to put any person in fear of death or of grievous hurt to that person or to any other, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 386.

388. Whoever commits extortion by putting any person in fear of an accusation against that person or any other, of having committed or attempted to commit any offence punishable with death, or with transportation for life, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, or of having attempted to induce any other person to commit such offence, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine; and, if the offence be one punishable under section 377 of this Code, may be punished with transportation for life.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 386.

389. Whoever, in order to the committing of extortion, puts or attempts to put any person in fear of an accusation, against that person or any other, of having committed, or attempted to commit, an offence punishable with death or with transportation for life, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine; and, if the offence be punishable under section 377 of this Code, may be punished with transportation for life.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 386.

Of Robbery and Dacoity.

Robbery.

390. In all robbery there is either theft or extortion.

When theft is robbery. Theft is "robbery" if, in order to the committing of the theft, or in committing the theft, or in carrying away or attempting to carry away property obtained by the theft, the offender, for that end, voluntarily causes or attempts to cause to any person death or hurt or wrongful restraint, or fear of instant death or of instant hurt, or of instant wrongful restraint.

When extortion is robbery. Extortion is "robbery" if the offender, at the time of committing the extortion, is in the presence of the person put in fear, and commits the extortion by putting that person in fear of instant death, or of instant hurt, or of instant wrongful restraint to that person, or to some other person, and, by so putting in fear, induces the person so put in fear then and there to deliver up the thing extorted.

Explanation.—The offender is said to be present if he is sufficiently near to put the other person in fear of instant death, or of instant hurt, or of instant wrongful restraint.

Illustrations.

(a) A holds Z down, and fraudulently takes Z's money and jewels from Z's clothes, without Z's consent. Here A has committed theft, and, in order to the committing of that theft, has voluntarily caused wrongful restraint to Z. A has therefore committed robbery.

(b) A meets Z on the high-road, shews a pistol, and demands Z's purse. Z, in consequence, surrenders his purse. Here A has extorted the purse from Z by putting him in fear of instant hurt, and being at the time of committing the extortion in his presence. A has therefore committed robbery.

(c) A meets Z and Z's child on the high-road. A takes the child, and threatens to fling it down a precipice, unless Z delivers his purse. Z, in consequence, delivers his purse. Here A has extorted the purse from Z, by causing Z to be in fear of instant hurt to the child who is there present. A has therefore committed robbery on Z.

(d) A obtains property from Z by saying: "Your child is in the hands of my gang, and will be put to death unless you send us ten thousand rupees." This is extortion, and punishable as such; but it is not robbery, unless Z is put in fear of the instant death of his child.

391. When five or more persons conjointly commit or attempt to commit a robbery, or where the whole number of persons conjointly committing or attempting to commit a robbery, and persons present and aiding such commission or attempt, amount to five or more, every person so committing, attempting or aiding, is said to commit "dacoity".

392. Whoever commits robbery shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine; and, if the robbery be committed on the highway between sunset and sunrise, the imprisonment may be extended to fourteen years.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

393. Whoever attempts to commit robbery shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 392.

394. If any person, in committing or in attempting to commit robbery, voluntarily causes hurt, such person, and any other person jointly concerned in committing or attempting to commit such robbery, shall be punished with transportation for life or with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 392.

395. Whoever commits dacoity shall be punished with transportation for Punishment for life, or with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may dacoity. extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

396. If any one of five or more persons, who are conjointly committing dacoity, commits murder in so committing dacoity, every one
 Dacoity with murder. of those persons shall be punished with death, or transportation for life, or rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 395.

397. If, at the time of committing robbery or dacoity, the offender uses any Robbery or dacoity, deadly weapon, or causes grievous hurt to any person, or with attempt to cause attempts to cause death or grievous hurt to any person, death or grievous hurt. the imprisonment with which such offender shall be punished shall not be less than seven years.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 395.

398. If, at the time of attempting to commit robbery or dacoity, the offender Attempt to commit robbery or dacoity is armed with any deadly weapon, the imprisonment with when armed with deadly weapon. which such offender shall be punished shall not be less than seven years.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 395.

399. Whoever makes any preparation for committing dacoity, shall be Making preparation to commit dacoity. punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 395.

400. Whoever, at any time after the passing of this Act, shall belong to a Punishment for belonging to gang of dacoits. gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing dacoity, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 395.

401. Whoever, at any time after the passing of this Act, shall belong to Punishment for belonging to gang of thieves. any wandering or other gang of persons associated for the purpose of habitually committing theft or robbery, and not being a gang of thugs or dacoits, shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

402. Whoever, at any time after the passing of this Act, shall be one of five Assembling for purpose of committing dacoity. or more persons assembled for the purpose of committing dacoity, shall be punished with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

Of Criminal Misappropriation of Property.

403. Whoever dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use any Dishonest misappropriation of property. moveable property, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Illustrations.

(a) A takes property belonging to Z out of Z's possession, in good faith, believing, at the time when he takes it, that the property belongs to himself. A is not guilty of theft but if A, after discovering his mistake, dishonestly appropriates the property to his own use, he is guilty of an offence under this section.

(b) A, being on friendly terms with Z, goes into Z's library in Z's absence, and takes away a book without Z's express consent. Here, if A was under the impression that he had Z's implied consent to take the book for the purpose of reading it, A has not committed theft. But, if A afterwards sells the book for his own benefit, he is guilty of an offence under this section.

(c) A and B being joint owners of a horse, A takes the horse out of B's possession, intending to use it. Here, as A has a right to use the horse, he does not dishonestly misappropriate it. But, if A sells the horse and appropriates the whole proceeds to his own use, he is guilty of an offence under this section.

Explanation 1.—A dishonest misappropriation for a time only is a misappropriation within the meaning of this section.

Illustration.

A finds a Government promissory note belonging to Z, bearing a blank endorsement. A, knowing that the note belongs to Z, pledges it with a banker as a security for a loan intending at a future time to restore it to Z. A has committed an offence under this section.

Explanation 2.—A person who finds property not in the possession of any other person, and takes such property for the purpose of protecting it for, or of restoring it to, the owner, does not take or misappropriate it dishonestly, and is not guilty of an offence; but he is guilty of the offence above defined, if he appropriates it to his own use, when he knows or has the means of discovering the owner, or before he has used reasonable means to discover and give notice to the owner and has kept the property a reasonable time to enable the owner to claim it.

What are reasonable means or what is a reasonable time in such a case, is a question of fact.

It is not necessary that the finder should know who is the owner of the property, or that any particular person is the owner of it: it is sufficient if, at the time of appropriating it, he does not believe it to be his own property, or in good faith believes that the real owner cannot be found.

Illustrations.

(a) A finds a rupee on the high-road, not knowing to whom the rupee belongs. A picks up the rupee. Here A has not committed the offence defined in this section.

(b) A finds a letter on the road, containing a bank note. From the direction and contents of the letter he learns to whom the note belongs. He appropriates the note. He is guilty of an offence under this section.

(c) A finds a cheque payable to bearer. He can form no conjecture as to the person who has lost the cheque. But the name of the person, who has drawn the cheque, appears. A knows that this person can direct him to the person in whose favour the cheque was drawn. A appropriates the cheque without attempting to discover the owner. He is guilty of an offence under this section.

(d) A sees Z drop his purse with money in it. A picks up the purse with the intention of restoring it to Z, but afterwards appropriates it to his own use. A has committed an offence under this section.

(e) A finds a purse with money, not knowing to whom it belongs; he afterwards discovers that it belongs to Z, and appropriates it to his own use. A is guilty of an offence under this section.

(f) A finds a valuable ring, not knowing to whom it belongs. A sells it immediately without attempting to discover the owner. A is guilty of an offence under this section.

Procedure:—Any Magistrate—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

404. Whoever dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use property, knowing that such property was in the possession of a deceased person at the time of that person's decease, and has not since been in the possession of any person legally entitled to such possession, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine; and, if the offender at the time of such person's decease was employed by him as a clerk or servant, the imprisonment may extend to seven years.

Dishonest misappropriation of property possessed by deceased person at the time of his death.

Illustration.

Z dies in possession of furniture and money. His servant A, before the money comes into the possession of any person entitled to such possession, dishonestly misappropriates it. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

Of Criminal Breach of Trust.

405. Whoever, being in any manner entrusted with property, or with any dominion over property, dishonestly misappropriates or converts to his own use that property, or dishonestly uses or disposes of that property in violation of any direction of law prescribing the mode in which such trust is to be discharged, or of any legal contract, express or implied, which he has made touching the discharge of such trust, or wilfully suffers any other person so to do, commits “criminal breach of trust.”

Illustration.

(a) A, being executor to the will of a deceased person, dishonestly disobeys the law which directs him to divide the effects according to the will, and appropriates them to his own use. A has committed criminal breach of trust.

(b) A is a warehouse-keeper. Z, going on a journey, entrusts his furniture to A, under a contract that it shall be returned on payment of a stipulated sum for warehouse-room. A dishonestly sells the goods. A has committed criminal breach of trust.

(c) A, residing in Calcutta, is agent for Z, residing at Delhi. There is an express or implied contract between A and Z, that all sums remitted by Z to A shall be invested by A, according to Z's direction. Z remits a lakh of rupees to A, with directions to A to invest the same in Company's paper. A dishonestly disobeys the directions, and employs the money in his own business. A has committed criminal breach of trust.

(d) But if A, in the last illustration, not dishonestly, but in good faith, believing that it will be more for Z's advantage to hold shares in the Bank of Bengal, disobeys Z's directions, and buys shares in the Bank of Bengal, for Z, instead of buying Company's paper, here, though Z should suffer loss, and should be entitled to bring a civil action against A, on account of that loss, yet A, not having acted dishonestly, has not committed criminal breach of trust.

(e) A, a Revenue-officer, is entrusted with public money and is either directed by law, or bound by a contract, express or implied, with the Government, to pay into a certain treasury all the public money which he holds. A dishonestly appropriates the money. A has committed criminal breach of trust.

(f) A, a carrier, is entrusted by Z with property to be carried by land or by water. A dishonestly misappropriates the property. A has committed criminal breach of trust.

406. Whoever commits criminal breach of trust shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

407. Whoever, being entrusted with property as a carrier, wharfinger or warehouse-keeper, commits criminal breach of trust in respect of such property, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 406.:

408. Whoever, being a clerk or servant or employed as a clerk or servant, and being in any manner entrusted in such capacity with property, or with any dominion over property, commits criminal breach of trust in respect of that property, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

409. Whoever, being in any manner entrusted with property, or with any Criminal breach of trust by public servant, or by banker, merchant or agent. dominion over property in his capacity of a public servant or in the way of his business as a banker, merchant, factor, broker, attorney or agent, commits criminal breach of trust in respect of that property, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

Of the Receiving of Stolen Property.

410. Property, the possession whereof has been transferred by theft, or by extortion, or by robbery, and property which has been Stolen property. criminally misappropriated or in respect of which * * * criminal breach of trust has been committed, is designated as “stolen property,” whether the transfer has been made, or the misappropriation or breach of trust has been committed, within or without British India. But, if such property subsequently comes into the possession of a person legally entitled to the possession thereof, it then ceases to be stolen property.

411. Whoever dishonestly receives or retains any stolen property, knowing or having reason to believe the same to be stolen property, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both. Dishonestly receiving stolen property.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Summary if property worth not more than Rs. 50.

412. Whoever dishonestly receives or retains any stolen property, the possession whereof he knows or has reason to believe to have been transferred by the commission of dacoity, or dishonestly receives from a person, whom he knows or has reason to believe to belong or to have belonged to a gang of dacoits, property which he knows or has reason to believe to have been stolen, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with rigorous imprisonment for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine. Dishonestly receiving property stolen in the commission of a dacoity.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

413. Whoever habitually receives or deals in property which he knows or has reason to believe to be stolen property, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine. Habitually dealing in stolen property.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 412.

414. Whoever voluntarily assists in concealing or disposing of or making away with property which he knows or has reason to believe to be stolen property, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both. Assisting in concealment of stolen property.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Summary if property worth not more than Rs. 50.

Of Cheating.

415. Whoever, by deceiving any person, fraudulently or dishonestly induces the person so deceived to deliver any property to any person, or to consent that any person shall retain any property, or intentionally induces the person so deceived to do or omit to do anything which he would not do or omit if he were not so deceived, and which Cheating.

act or omission causes or is likely to cause damage or harm to that person in body, mind, reputation or property, is said to "cheat."

Explanation.—A dishonest concealment of facts is a deception within the meaning of this section.

Illustrations.

(a) A, by falsely pretending to be in the Civil Service, intentionally deceives Z, and thus dishonestly induces Z to let him have on credit goods for which he does not mean to pay. A cheats.

(b) A, by putting a counterfeit mark on an article, intentionally deceives Z into a belief that this article was made by a certain celebrated manufacturer, and thus dishonestly induces Z to buy and pay for the article. A cheats.

(c) A, by exhibiting to Z a false sample of an article, intentionally deceives Z into believing that the article corresponds with the sample, and thereby dishonestly induces Z to buy and pay for the article. A cheats.

(d) A, by tendering in payment for an article a bill on a house with which A keeps no money, and by which A expects that the bill will be dishonoured, intentionally deceives Z, and thereby dishonestly induces Z to deliver the article, intending not to pay for it, A cheats.

(e) A, by pledging as diamonds articles which he knows are not diamonds, intentionally deceives Z, and thereby dishonestly induces Z to lend money. A cheats.

(f) A intentionally deceives Z into a belief that A means to repay any money that Z may lend to him and thereby dishonestly induces Z to lend him money, A not intending to repay it. A cheats.

(g) A intentionally deceives Z into a belief that A means to deliver to Z a certain quantity of indigo plant which he does not intend to deliver, and thereby dishonestly induces Z to advance money upon the faith of such delivery. A cheats; but if A, at the time of obtaining the money, intends to deliver the indigo plant, and afterwards breaks his contract and does not deliver it, he does not cheat, but is liable only to a civil action for breach of contract.

(h) A intentionally deceives Z into a belief that A has performed A's part of a contract made with Z, which he has not performed, and thereby dishonestly induces Z to pay money. A cheats.

(i) A sells and conveys an estate to B. A, knowing that in consequence of such sale he has no right to the property, sells or mortgages the same to Z, without disclosing the fact of the previous sale and conveyance to B, and receives the purchase or mortgage money from Z. A cheats.

416. A person is said to "cheat by personation" if he cheats by pretending to be some other person, or by knowingly substituting one person for another, or representing that he or any other person is a person other than he or such other person really is.

Explanation.—The offence is committed whether the individual personated is a real or imaginary person.

Illustrations.

(a) A cheats by pretending to be a certain rich banker of the same name. A cheats by personation.

(b) A cheats by pretending to be B, a person who is deceased. A cheats by personation.

417. Whoever cheats shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

418. Whoever cheats with the knowledge that he is likely thereby to cause wrongful loss to a person whose interest in the transaction to which the cheating relates, he was bound either by law, or by a legal contract, to protect, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

Punishment for cheating by personation. 419. Whoever cheats by personation shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

420. Whoever cheats and thereby dishonestly induces the person deceived to deliver any property to any person, or to make, alter or destroy the whole or any part of a valuable security, or anything which is signed or sealed, and which is capable of being converted into a valuable security, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Cheating and dishonestly inducing delivery of property.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

Of Fraudulent Deeds and Dispositions of Property.

421. Whoever dishonestly or fraudulently removes, conceals or delivers to any person, or transfers, or causes to be transferred to any person, without adequate consideration, any property, intending thereby to prevent, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby prevent, the distribution of that property according to law among his creditors or the creditors of any other person shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Dishonest or fraudulent removal or concealment of property to prevent distribution among creditors.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

422. Whoever dishonestly or fraudulently prevents any debt or demand due to himself or to any other person from being made available according to law for payment of his debts or the debts of such other person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Dishonestly or fraudulently preventing debt being available for creditors.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 421.

423. Whoever dishonestly or fraudulently signs, executes or becomes a party to any deed or instrument which purports to transfer or subject to any charge any property, or any interest therein, and which contains any false statement relating to the consideration for such transfer or charge, or relating to the person or persons for whose use or benefit it is really intended to operate, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Dishonest or fraudulent execution of deed of transfer containing false statement of consideration.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 421.

424. Whoever dishonestly or fraudulently conceals or removes any property, of himself or any other person, or dishonestly or fraudulently assists in the concealment or removal thereof, or dishonestly releases any demand or claim to which he is entitled, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Dishonest or fraudulent removal or concealment of property.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 421.

Of Mischief.

425. Whoever, with intent to cause, or knowing that he is likely to cause, wrongful loss or damage to the public or to any person, causes the destruction of any property, or any such change in any property or in the situation thereof as destroys or diminishes its value or utility, or affects it injuriously, commits "mischief."

Mischief.

Explanation 1.—It is not essential to the offence of mischief that the offender should intend to cause loss or damage to the owner of the property injured or destroyed. It is sufficient if he intends to cause, or knows that he is likely to cause, wrongful loss or damage to any person by injuring any property, whether it belongs to that person or not.

Explanation 2.—Mischief may be committed by an act affecting property belonging to the person who commits the act, or to that person and others jointly.

Illustrations.

(a) A voluntarily burns a valuable security belonging to Z intending to cause wrongful loss to Z. A has committed mischief.

(b) A introduces water into an ice-house belonging to Z, and thus causes the ice to melt, intending wrongful loss to Z. A has committed mischief.

(c) A voluntarily throws into a river a ring belonging to Z, with the intention of thereby causing wrongful loss to Z. A has committed mischief.

(d) A, knowing that his effects are about to be taken in execution in order to satisfy a debt due from him to Z, destroys those effects, with the intention of thereby preventing Z from obtaining satisfaction of the debt, and of thus causing damage to Z. A has committed mischief.

(e) A having insured a ship, voluntarily causes the same to be cast away, with the intention of causing damage to the underwriters. A has committed mischief.

(f) A causes a ship to be cast away, intending thereby to cause damage to Z, who has lent money on bottomry on the ship. A has committed mischief.

(g) A, having joint property with Z in a horse, shoots the horse, intending thereby to cause wrongful loss to Z. A has committed mischief.

(h) A causes cattle to enter upon a field belonging to Z, intending to cause and knowing that he is likely to cause damage to Z's crop. A has committed mischief.

426. Whoever commits mischief shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable when the only loss or damage caused is loss or damage to a private person—Summary.

427. Whoever commits mischief and thereby causes loss or damage to the amount of fifty rupees or upwards, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable when the only loss or damage caused is loss or damage to a private person—Summary.

428. Whoever commits mischief by killing, poisoning, maiming or rendering useless any animal or animals of the value of ten rupees or upwards, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

429. Whoever commits mischief by killing, poisoning, maiming or rendering useless, any elephant, camel, horse, mule, buffalo, bull, cow or ox, whatever may be the value thereof, or any other animal of the value of fifty rupees or upwards, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

430. Whoever commits mischief by doing any act which causes, or which he knows to be likely to cause, a diminution of the supply of water for agricultural purposes, or for food or drink for human beings or for animals which are property, or for cleanliness or for carrying on any manufacture, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine, or with both.

Mischief by injury to works of irrigation or by wrongfully diverting water.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

431. Whoever commits mischief by doing any act which renders or which he knows to be likely to render any public road, bridge, navigable river, or navigable channel, natural or artificial, impassable or less safe for travelling or conveying property, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine, or with both.

Mischief by injury to public road, bridge, river or channel.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

432. Whoever commits mischief by doing any act which causes or which he knows to be likely to cause an inundation or an obstruction to any public drainage attended with injury or damage, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine, or with both.

Mischief by causing inundation or obstruction to public drainage attended with damage.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 431.

433. Whoever commits mischief by destroying or moving any light-house or other light used as a sea-mark, or any sea-mark or buoy or other thing placed as a guide for navigators, or by any act which renders any such light-house, sea-mark, buoy or such other thing as aforesaid less useful as a guide for navigators, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Mischief by destroying, moving or rendering less useful a light-house or sea-mark.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

434. Whoever commits mischief by destroying or moving any land-mark fixed by the authority of a public servant, or by any act which renders such land-mark less useful as such, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Mischief by destroying or moving, etc., a land-mark fixed by public authority.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

435. Whoever commits mischief by fire or any explosive substance, intending to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, damage to any property to the amount of one hundred rupees or upwards, or where the property is agricultural produce ten rupees or upwards, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years and shall also be liable to fine.

Mischief by fire or explosive substance with intent to cause damage to amount of one hundred or (in case of agricultural produce) ten rupees.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

436. Whoever commits mischief by fire or any explosive substance, intending to cause, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby cause, the destruction of any building which is ordinarily used as a place of worship or as a human dwelling or as a place for the custody of property, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Mischief by fire or explosive substance with intent to destroy house, etc.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

437. Whoever commits mischief to any decked vessel or any vessel of a burden of twenty tons or upwards, intending to destroy or render unsafe, or knowing it to be likely that he will thereby destroy or render unsafe, that vessel, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Mischief with intent to destroy or make unsafe a decked vessel or one of twenty tons burden.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 436.

438. Whoever commits, or attempts to commit, by fire or any explosive substance, such mischief as is described in the last preceding section, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Punishment for the mischief described in section 437 committed by fire or explosive substance.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 436.

439. Whoever intentionally runs any vessel aground or ashore, intending to commit theft of any property contained therein or to dishonestly misappropriate any such property, or with intent that such theft or misappropriation of property may be committed, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Punishment for intentionally running vessel aground or ashore with intent to commit theft, etc.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 436.

440. Whoever commits mischief, having made preparation for causing to any person death, or hurt, or wrongful restraint, or fear of death, or of hurt, or of wrongful restraint, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Mischief committed after preparation made for causing death or hurt.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

Of Criminal Trespass.

441. Whoever enters into or upon property in the possession of another with intent to commit an offence or to intimidate, insult or annoy any person in possession of such property,

Criminal trespass.

or, having lawfully entered into or upon such property, unlawfully remains there with intent thereby to intimidate, insult or annoy any such person, or with intent to commit an offence, is said to commit "criminal trespass."

442. Whoever commits criminal trespass by entering into or remaining in any building, tent or vessel used as a human dwelling, or any building used as a place for worship, or as a place for the custody of property, is said to commit "house-trespass."

House-trespass.

Explanation.—The introduction of any part of the criminal trespasser's body entering is sufficient to constitute house-trespass.

443. Whoever commits house-trespass having taken precautions to conceal such house-trespass from some person who has a right to exclude or eject the trespasser from the building, tent or vessel which is the subject of the trespass, is said to commit "lurking house-trespass."

Lurking house-trespass.

444. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass after sunset and before sunrise, is said to commit "lurking house-trespass by night."

Lurking house-trespass by night.

445. A person is said to commit "house-breaking" who commits house-trespass if he effects his entrance into the house or any part of it in any of the six ways hereinafter described ; or if, being in the house or any part of it for the purpose of committing an offence, or, having committed an offence therein, he quits the house or any part of it in any of such six ways, that is to say :—

First.—If he enters or quits through a passage made by himself, or by any abettor of the house-trespass, in order to the committing of the house-trespass.

Secondly.—If he enters or quits through any passage not intended by any person, other than himself or an abettor of the offence, for human entrance ; or through any passage to which he has obtained access by scaling or climbing over any wall or building.

Thirdly.—If he enters or quits through any passage which he or any abettor of the house-trespass has opened, in order to the committing of the house-trespass by any means by which that passage was not intended by the occupier of the house to be opened.

Fourthly.—If he enters or quits by opening any lock in order to the committing of the house-trespass, or in order to the quitting of the house after a house-trespass.

Fifthly.—If he effects his entrance or departure by using criminal force or committing an assault, or by threatening any person with assault.

Sixthly.—If he enters or quits by any passage which he knows to have been fastened against such entrance or departure, and to have been unfastened by himself or by an abettor of the house-trespass.

Explanation.—Any out-house, or building occupied with a house, and between which and such house there is an immediate internal communication, is part of the house within the meaning of this section.

Illustrations.

(a) A commits house-trespass by making a hole through the wall of Z's house, and putting his hand through the aperture. This is house-breaking.

(b) A commits house-trespass by creeping into a ship at a port-hole between decks. This is house-breaking.

(c) A commits house-trespass by entering Z's house through a window. This is house-breaking.

(d) A commits house-trespass by entering Z's house through the door, having opened a door which was fastened. This is house-breaking.

(e) A commits house-trespass by entering Z's house through the door, having lifted a latch by putting a wire through a hole in the door. This is house-breaking.

(f) A finds the key of Z's house-door, which Z had lost, and commits house-trespass by entering Z's house, having opened the door with that key. This is house-breaking.

(g) Z is standing in his doorway. A forces a passage by knocking Z down, and commits house-trespass by entering the house. This is house-breaking.

(h) Z, the door-keeper of Y, is standing in Y's doorway. A commits house-trespass by entering the house, having deterred Z from opposing him by threatening to beat him. This is house-breaking.

446. Whoever commits house-breaking after sunset and before sunrise, is said to commit "house-breaking by night."

447. Whoever commits criminal trespass shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable—Summary.

448. Whoever commits house-trespass shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

Punishment for house-trespass.
Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable—Summary.

449. Whoever commits house-trespass in order to the committing of any offence punishable with death, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with rigorous imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

450. Whoever commits house-trespass in order to the committing of any offence punishable with transportation for life, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

451. Whoever commits house-trespass in order to the committing of any offence punishable with imprisonment, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, and shall also be liable to fine ; and, if the offence intended to be committed is theft, the term of the imprisonment may be extended to seven years.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction ; Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class (if the offence is theft)—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

452. Whoever commits house-trespass, having made preparation for causing hurt to any person, or for assaulting any person, or for wrongfully restraining any person, or for putting any person in fear of hurt, or of assault, or of wrongful restraint, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

453. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass or house-breaking, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

454. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass or house-breaking, in order to the committing of any offence punishable with imprisonment, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine ; and, if the offence intended to be committed is theft, the term of the imprisonment may be extended to ten years.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

455. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass, or house-breaking, having made preparation for causing hurt to any person, or for assaulting any person, or for wrongfully restraining any person, or for putting any person in fear of hurt or of assault or of wrongful restraint, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

Punishment for lurking house-trespass or house-breaking by night.

456. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass by night, or house-breaking by night, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

457. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass by night, or house-breaking by night, in order to the committing of any offence punishable with imprisonment, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, and shall also be liable to fine ; and, if the offence intended to be committed is theft, the term of the imprisonment may be extended to fourteen years.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable—Summary.

458. Whoever commits lurking house-trespass by night, or house-breaking by night, having made preparation for causing hurt to any person, or for assaulting any person, or for wrongfully restraining any person, or for putting any person in fear of hurt, or of assault, or of wrongful restraint, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to fourteen years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

459. Whoever, whilst committing lurking house-trespass or house-breaking, causes grievous hurt to any person or attempts to cause death or grievous hurt to any person, shall be punished with transportation for life, or imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

460. If, at the time of committing of lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night, any person guilty of such offence shall voluntarily cause or attempt to cause death or grievous hurt to any person, every person jointly concerned in committing such lurking house-trespass by night or house-breaking by night, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 459.

461. Whoever dishonestly, or with intent to commit mischief, breaks open or unfastens any closed receptacle which contains or which he believes to contain property, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

462. Whoever, being entrusted with any closed receptacle which contains or which he believes to contain property, without having authority to open the same dishonestly, or with intent to commit mischief, breaks open or unfastens that receptacle, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

CHAPTER XVIII.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO DOCUMENTS AND TO TRADE OR PROPERTY MARKS.

463. Whoever makes any false document or part of a document, with intent to cause damage or injury, to the public or to any person, or to support any claim or title, or to cause any person to part with property, or to enter into any express or implied contract, or with intent to commit fraud or that fraud may be committed, commits forgery.

Making a false document.

464. A person is said to make a false document—

First.—Who dishonestly or fraudulently makes, signs, seals or executes a document or part of a document, or makes any mark denoting the execution of a document, with the intention of causing it to be believed that such document or part of a document was made, signed, sealed or executed by or by the authority of a person by whom or by whose authority he 'knows that it was not made, signed, sealed or executed, or at a time at which he knows that it was not made, signed, sealed or executed ; or

Secondly.—Who, without lawful authority, dishonestly or fraudulently, by cancellation or otherwise, alters a document in any material part thereof, after it has been made or executed either by himself or by any other person, whether such person be living or dead at the time of such alteration ; or

Thirdly.—Who dishonestly or fraudulently causes any person to sign, seal, execute or alter a document, knowing that such person by reason of unsoundness of mind or intoxication cannot, or that by reason of deception practised upon him, he does not know the contents of the document or the nature of the alteration.

Illustrations.

(a) A has a letter of credit upon B for rupees 10,000, written by Z. A, in order to defraud B, adds a cipher to the 10,000, and makes the sum 1,00,000 intending that it may be believed by B that Z so wrote the letter. A has committed forgery.

(b) A, without Z's authority, affixes Z's seal to a document purporting to be a conveyance of an estate from Z to A, with the intention of selling the estate to B, and thereby of obtaining from B the purchase money. A has committed forgery.

(c) A picks up a cheque on a banker signed by B, payable to bearer, but without any sum having been inserted in the cheque. A fraudulently fills up the cheque by inserting the sum of ten thousand rupees. A commits forgery.

(d) A leaves with B, his agent, a cheque on a banker, signed by A, without inserting the sum payable and authorizes B to fill up the cheque by inserting a sum not exceeding ten thousand rupees for the purpose of making certain payments. B fraudulently fills up the cheque by inserting the sum of twenty thousand rupees. B commits forgery.

(e) A draws a bill of exchange on himself in the name of B without B's authority, intending to discount it as a genuine bill with a banker and intending to take up the bill on its maturity. Here, as A draws the bill with intent to deceive the banker by leading him to suppose that he had the security of B, and thereby to discount the bill, A is guilty of forgery.

(f) Z's will contains these words—" I direct that all my remaining property be equally divided between A, B and C." A dishonestly scratches out B's name, intending that it may be believed that the whole was left to himself and C. A has committed forgery.

(g) A endorses a Government promissory note and makes it payable to Z or his order by writing on the bill the words " Pay to Z or his order " and signing the endorsement. B dishonestly erases the words " Pay to Z or his order," and thereby converts the special endorsement into a blank endorsement. B commits forgery.

(h) A sells and conveys an estate to Z. A afterwards, in order to defraud Z of his estate, executes a conveyance of the same estate to B, dated six months earlier than the date of the conveyance to Z, intending it to be believed that he had conveyed the estate to B before he conveyed it to Z. A has committed forgery.

(i) Z dictates his will to A. A intentionally writes down a different legatee from the legatee named by Z, and by representing to Z that he has prepared the will according to his instructions, induces Z to sign the will. A has committed forgery.

(j) A writes a letter and signs it with B's name without B's authority, certifying that A is a man of good character and in distressed circumstances from unforeseen misfortune, intending by means of such letter to obtain alms from Z and other persons. Here, as A made a false document in order to induce Z to part with property, A has committed forgery.

(k) A without B's authority writes a letter and signs it in B's name certifying to A's character, intending thereby to obtain employment under Z. A has committed forgery, inasmuch as he intended to deceive Z by the forged certificate, and thereby to induce Z to enter into an express or implied contract for service.

Explanation 1.—A man's signature of his own name may amount to forgery.

Illustrations.

(a) A signs his own name to a bill of exchange, intending that it may be believed that the bill was drawn by another person of the same name. A has committed forgery.

(b) A writes the word "accepted" on a piece of paper and signs it with Z's name, in order that B may afterwards write on the paper a bill of exchange drawn by B upon Z, and negotiate the bill as though it had been accepted by Z. A is guilty of forgery; and if B, knowing the fact, draws the bill upon the paper pursuant to A's intention, B is also guilty of forgery.

(c) A picks up a bill of exchange payable to the order of a different person of the same name. A endorses the bill in his own name, intending to cause it to be believed that it was endorsed by the person to whose order it was payable; here A has committed forgery.

(d) A purchases an estate sold under execution of a decree against B. B, after the seizure of the estate, in collusion with Z, executes a lease of the estate to Z at a nominal rent and for a long period, and dates the lease six months prior to the seizure, with intent to defraud A, and to cause it to be believed that the lease was granted before the seizure. B, though he executes the lease in his own name, commits forgery by antedating it.

(e) A, a trader, in anticipation of insolvency, lodges effects with B for A's benefit and with intent to defraud his creditors; and in order to give a colour to the transaction, writes a promissory note binding himself to pay to B a sum for value received, and antedates the note, intending that it may be believed to have been made before A was on the point of insolvency. A has committed forgery under the first head of the definition.

Explanation 2.—The making of a false document in the name of a fictitious person, intending it to be believed that the document was made by a real person, or in the name of a deceased person, intending it to be believed that the document was made by the person in his lifetime, may amount to forgery.

Illustration.

A draws a bill of exchange upon a fictitious person, and fraudulently accepts the bill in the name of such fictitious person with intent to negotiate it. A commits forgery.

465. Whoever commits forgery shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

466. Whoever forges a document, purporting to be a record or proceeding of or in a Court of Justice, or a register of birth, baptism, marriage or burial, or a register kept by a public servant as such, or a certificate or document purporting to be made by a public servant in his official capacity, or an authority to institute or defend a suit, or to take any proceedings therein, or to confess judgment, or a power of attorney, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

467. Whoever forges a document which purports to be a valuable security or a will, or an authority to adopt a son, or which purports to give authority to any person to make or transfer any valuable security, or to receive the principal, interest or dividend thereon, or to receive or deliver any money, moveable property or valuable security, or any document purporting to be an acquittance or receipt acknowledging the payment of money, or an acquittance or receipt for the delivery of any moveable property or valuable security, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Non-cognizable, but cognizable when the valuable security is a promissory-note of the Government of India—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

468. Whoever commits forgery, intending that the document forged shall be used for the purpose of cheating, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Forgery for purpose of cheating.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

469. Whoever commits forgery, intending that the document forged shall harm the reputation of any party, or knowing that it is likely to be used for that purpose, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Forgery for purpose of harming reputation.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

470. A false document made wholly or in part by forgery is designated “a forged document.”

Forged document.

471. Whoever fraudulently or dishonestly uses as genuine any document which he knows or has reason to believe to be a forged document, shall be punished in the same manner as if he had forged such document.

Using as genuine a forged document.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Same Court as that by which forgery is triable—Non-cognizable but cognizable when the valuable security is a promissory note of the Government of India—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

472. Whoever makes or counterfeits any seal, plate or other instrument for making an impression, intending that the same shall be used for the purpose of committing any forgery which would be punishable under section 467 of this Code, or, with such intent, has in his possession any such seal, plate or other instrument, knowing the same to be counterfeit, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Making or possessing counterfeit seal, etc., with intent to commit forgery punishable under section 467.

Procedure :—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

473. Whoever makes or counterfeits any seal, plate, or other instrument for making an impression, intending that the same shall be used for the purpose of committing any forgery which would be punishable under any section of this chapter other than section 467, or, with such intent, has in his possession any such seal, plate or other instrument, knowing the same to be counterfeit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Making or possessing counterfeit seal, etc., with intent to commit forgery punishable otherwise.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 472.

474. Whoever has in his possession any document, knowing the same to be forged, and intending that the same shall fraudulently or dishonestly be used as genuine, shall, if the document is one of the description mentioned in the section 466 of this Code, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine; and if the document is one of the description mentioned in section 467, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description, for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Having possession of document described in section 466 or 467, knowing it to be forged and intending to use it as genuine.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 472

475. Whoever counterfeits upon, or in the substance of, any material, any device or mark used for the purpose of authenticating any document described in section 467 of this Code, intending that such device or mark shall be used for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to any document then forged or thereafter to be forged on such material, or who, with such intent, has in his possession any material upon or in the substance of which any such device or mark has been counterfeited, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

476. Whoever counterfeits upon, or in the substance of, any material, any device or mark used for the purpose of authenticating any document other than the documents described in section 467 of this Code, intending that such device or mark shall be used for the purpose of giving the appearance of authenticity to any document then forged or thereafter to be forged on such material, or who, with such intent, has in his possession any material upon or in the substance of which any such device or mark has been counterfeited, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

477. Whoever fraudulently or dishonestly, or with intent to cause damage or injury to the public or to any person, cancels, destroys or defaces, or attempts to cancel, destroy or deface, or secretes or attempts to secrete any document which is or purports to be a will, or an authority to adopt a son, or any valuable security, or commits mischief in respect to such document, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

477-A. Whoever, being a clerk, officer or servant, or employed or acting in the capacity of a clerk, officer or servant, wilfully, and with intent to defraud, destroys, alters, mutilates or falsifies any book, paper, writing, valuable security or account which belongs to or is in the possession of his employer, or has been received by him for or on behalf of his employer, or wilfully, and with intent to defraud, makes or abets the making of any false entry in, or omits or alters or abets the omission or alteration of any material particular from or in, any such book, paper, writing, valuable security or account, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Explanation.—It shall be sufficient in any charge under this section to allege a general intent to defraud without naming any particular person intended to be defrauded or specifying any particular sum of money intended to be the subject of the fraud, or any particular day on which the offence was committed.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

Of Trade, Property and Other Marks.

Trade mark.

478. A mark used for denoting that goods are the manufacture or merchandise of a particular person is called a trade mark, and for the purposes of this Code the expression "trade mark" includes any trade mark which is registered in the register of trade marks kept under the Patents, Designs and Trade Marks Act, 1883, and any trade mark which, either with or without registration, is protected by law in any British Possession or Foreign State to which the provisions of the one hundred and third section of the Patents, Designs and Trade Marks Act, 1883, are, under Order in Council, for the time being applicable.

Property mark.

479. A mark used for denoting that moveable property belongs to a particular person is called a property mark.

480. Whoever marks any goods or any case, package or other receptacle containing goods, or uses any case, package or other receptacle with any mark thereon, in a manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that the goods so marked, or any goods contained in any such receptacle so marked, are the manufacture or merchandise of a person whose manufacture or merchandise they are not, is said to use a false trade-mark.

481. Whoever marks any moveable property or goods or any case, package or other receptacle containing moveable property or goods, or uses any case, package or other receptacle having any mark thereon, in a manner reasonably calculated to cause it to be believed that the property or goods so marked, or any property or goods contained in any such receptacle so marked, belong to a person to whom they do not belong, is said to use a false property mark.

482. Whoever uses any false trade mark or any false property mark shall, unless he proves that he acted without intent to defraud, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

483. Whoever counterfeits any trade mark or property mark used by any other person shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 482.

484. Whoever counterfeits any property mark used by a public servant, or any mark used by a public servant to denote that any property has been manufactured by a particular person or at a particular time or place, or that the property is of a particular quality or has passed through a particular office, or that it is entitled to any exemption, or uses as genuine any such mark knowing the same to be counterfeit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

485. Whoever makes or has in his possession any die, plate or other instrument for the purpose of counterfeiting a trade mark or property mark, or has in his possession a trade mark or property mark for the purpose of denoting that any goods are the manufacture or merchandise of a person whose manufacture or merchandise they are not, or that they belong to a person to whom they do not belong, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

486. Whoever sells, or exposes, or has in possession for sale or any purpose of trade or manufacture, any goods or things with a counterfeit trade mark or property mark affixed to or impressed upon the same or to or upon any case, package or other receptacle in which such goods are contained, shall, unless he proves—

Selling goods marked with a counterfeit trade mark or property mark.

(a) that, having taken all reasonable precautions against committing an offence against this section, he had at the time of the commission of the alleged offence no reason to suspect the genuineness of the mark, and

(b) that, on demand made by or on behalf of the prosecutor, he gave all the information in his power with respect to the persons from whom he obtained such goods or things, or

(c) that otherwise he had acted innocently, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

487. Whoever makes any false mark upon any case, package or other receptacle containing goods, in a manner reasonably calculated to cause any public servant or any other person to believe that such receptacle contains goods which it does not contain or that it does not contain goods which it does contain, or that the goods contained in such receptacle are of a nature or quality different from the real nature or quality thereof, shall, unless he proves that he acted without intent to defraud, be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, or with fine, or with both.

Making a false mark upon any receptacle containing goods.

Procedure :—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

488. Whoever makes use of any such false mark in any manner prohibited by the last foregoing section shall, unless he proves that he acted without intent to defraud, be punished as if he had committed an offence against that section.

Punishment for making use of any such false mark.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 487.

489. Whoever removes, destroys, defaces or adds to any property mark, intending or knowing it to be likely that he may thereby cause injury to any person, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Tampering with property mark with intent to cause injury.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd Class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Not compoundable.

Of Currency-Notes and Bank-Notes.

489-A. Whoever counterfeits, or knowingly performs any part of the process of counterfeiting, any currency-note or bank-note, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section and of sections 489-B, 489-C and 489-D, the expression “bank-note” means a promissory note or engagement for the payment of money to bearer on demand issued by any person carrying on the business of banking in any part of the world, or issued by or under the authority of any State or Sovereign Power, and intended to be used as equivalent to, or as substitute for, money.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

489-B. Whoever sells to, or buys or receives from, any other person, or otherwise traffics in or uses as genuine, any forged or counterfeit currency-note or bank-note, knowing or having reason to believe the same to be forged or counterfeit, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Using as genuine forged or counterfeit currency-notes or bank-notes.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 489-A.

489-C. Whoever has in his possession any forged or counterfeit currency-note or bank-note, knowing or having reason to believe the same to be forged or counterfeit and intending to use the same as genuine or that it may be used as genuine, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Possession of forged or counterfeit currency-notes or bank-notes.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

489-D. Whoever makes, or performs any part of the process of making, or buys or sells or disposes of, or has in his possession, any machinery, instrument or material for the purpose of being used, or knowing or having reason to believe that it is intended to be used, for forging or counterfeiting any currency-note or bank-note, shall be punished with transportation for life, or with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Making or possessing instruments or materials for forging or counterfeiting currency-notes or bank-notes.

Procedure :—Session—Cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

CHAPTER XIX.

OF THE CRIMINAL BREACH OF CONTRACTS OF SERVICE.

490. [Repealed.]

491. Whoever, being bound by a lawful contract to attend on or to supply the wants of any person who, by reason of youth, or of unsoundness of mind, or of a disease or bodily weakness, is helpless or incapable of providing for his own safety or of supplying his own wants, voluntarily omits so to do, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three months, or with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees, or with both.

Breach of contract to attend on and supply wants of helpless person.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Summons—Bailable—Compoundable—Summary.

492. [Repealed.]

CHAPTER XX.

OF OFFENCES RELATING TO MARRIAGE.

Cohabitation caused by a man deceitfully inducing a belief of lawful marriage.

493. Every man who by deceit causes any woman who is not lawfully married to him to believe that she is lawfully married to him and to cohabit or have sexual intercourse with him in that belief, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

494. Whoever, having a husband or wife living, marries in any case in which such marriage is void by reason of its taking place during the life of such husband or wife, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Exception.—This section does not extend to any person whose marriage with such husband or wife has been declared void by a Court of competent jurisdiction, nor to any person who contracts a marriage during the life of a former husband or wife, if such husband or wife, at the time of the subsequent marriage, shall have been continually absent from such person for the space of seven years, and shall not have been heard of by such person as being alive within that time, provided the person contracting such subsequent marriage shall, before such marriage takes place, inform the person with whom such marriage is contracted of the real state of facts so far as the same are within his or her knowledge.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

495. Whoever commits the offence defined in the last preceding section having concealed from the person with whom the subsequent marriage is contracted, the fact of the former marriage, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

496. Whoever, dishonestly, or with a fraudulent intention goes through the ceremony of being married, knowing that he is not thereby lawfully married, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not compoundable.

497. Whoever has sexual intercourse with a person who is and whom he knows or has reason to believe to be the wife of another man, without the consent or connivance of that man, such sexual intercourse not amounting to the offence of rape, is guilty of the offence of adultery, and shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to five years, or with fine, or with both. In such case the wife shall not be punishable as an abettor.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable.

498. Whoever takes or entices away any woman who is and whom he knows or has reason to believe to be the wife of any other man, from that man, or from any person having the care of her on behalf of that man, with intent that she may have illicit intercourse with any person, or conceals or detains with that intent any such woman, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable.

CHAPTER XXI.

OF DEFAMATION.

499. Whoever by words either spoken or intended to be read, or by signs or by visible representations, makes or publishes any imputation concerning any person intending to harm, or knowing or having reason to believe that such imputation will harm, the reputation of such person, is said, except in the cases hereinafter excepted, to defame that person.

Explanation 1.—It may amount to defamation to impute anything to a deceased person, if the imputation would harm the reputation of that person if living, and is intended to be hurtful to the feelings of his family or other near relatives.

Explanation 2.—It may amount to defamation to make an imputation concerning a company or an association or collection of persons as such.

Explanation 3.—An imputation in the form of an alternative or expressed ironically, may amount to defamation.

Explanation 4.—No imputation is said to harm a person's reputation, unless that imputation directly or indirectly, in the estimation of others, lowers the moral or intellectual character of that person, or lowers the character of that person in respect of his caste or of his calling, or lowers the credit of that person, or causes it to be believed that the body of that person is in a loathsome state, or in a state generally considered as disgraceful.

Illustrations.

(a) A says, "Z is an honest man; he never stole B's watch," intending to cause it to be believed that Z did steal B's watch. This is defamation, unless it falls within one of the exceptions.

(b) A is asked who stole B's watch. A points to Z, intending to cause it to be believed that Z stole B's watch. This is defamation, unless it falls within one of the exceptions.

(c) A draws a picture of Z running away with B's watch, intending it to be believed that Z stole B's watch. This is defamation, unless it falls within one of the exceptions.

Imputation of truth which public good requires to be made or published.

First Exception.—It is not defamation to impute anything which is true concerning any person, if it be for the public good that the imputation should be made or published. Whether or not it is for the public good is a question of fact.

Second Exception.—It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting the conduct of a public servant in the discharge of his public functions, or respecting his character, so far as his character appears in that conduct, and no further.

Third Exception.—It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting the conduct of any person touching any public question, and respecting his character, so far as his character appears in that conduct, and no further.

Illustration.

It is not defamation in A to express in good faith any opinion what ever respecting Z's conduct in petitioning Government on a public question, in signing a requisition for a meeting on a public question, in presiding or attending at such meeting, in forming or joining any society which invites the public support, in voting or canvassing for a particular candidate for any situation in the efficient discharge of the duties of which the public is interested.

Publication of reports of proceedings of Courts.

Fourth Exception.—It is not defamation to publish a substantially true report of the proceedings of a Court of Justice, or of the result of any such proceedings.

Explanation.—A Justice of the Peace or other officer holding an enquiry in open Court preliminary to a trial in a Court of Justice, is a Court within the meaning of the above section.

Fifth Exception.—It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion whatever respecting the merits of any case, civil or criminal, which has been decided by a Court of Justice, or respecting the conduct of any person as a party, witness or agent, in any such case, or respecting the character of such person, as far as his character appears in that conduct, and no further.

Merits of case decided in Court or conduct of witnesses and others concerned.

Illustrations.

(a) A says—"I think Z's evidence on that trial is so contradictory that he must be stupid or dishonest." A is within this exception if he says this in good faith, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses respects Z's character as it appears in Z's conduct as a witness, and no further.

(b) But if A says: "I do not believe what Z asserted at that trial, because I know him to be a man without veracity," A is not within this exception, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses of Z's character, is an opinion not founded on Z's conduct as a witness.

Sixth Exception.—It is not defamation to express in good faith any opinion respecting the merits of any performance which its author has submitted to the judgment of the public, or respecting the character of the author so far as his character appears in such performance, and no further.

Merits of public performance.

Explanation.—A performance may be submitted to the judgment of the public expressly or by acts on the part of the author which imply such submission to the judgment of the public.

Illustrations.

(a) A person who publishes a book, submits that book to the judgment of the public.

(b) A person who makes a speech in public, submits that speech to the judgment of the public.

(c) An actor or singer who appears on a public stage, submits his acting or singing to the judgment of the public.

(d) A says of a book published by Z, "Z's book is foolish; Z must be a weak man. Z's book is indecent; Z must be a man of impure mind." A is within this exception, if he says this in good faith, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses of Z respects Z's character only so far as it appears in Z's book, and no further.

(e) But if A says, "I am not surprised that Z's book is foolish and indecent, for he is a weak man and a libertine," A is not within this exception, inasmuch as the opinion which he expresses of Z's character is an opinion not founded on Z's book.

Seventh Exception.—It is not defamation in a person having over another any authority, either conferred by law or arising out of a lawful contract made with that other, to pass in good faith any censure on the conduct of that other in matters to which such lawful authority relates.

Censure passed in good faith by person having lawful authority over another.

Illustrations.

A Judge censuring in good faith the conduct of a witness, or of an officer of the Court; a head of a department censuring in good faith those who are under his orders; a parent censuring in good faith a child in the presence of other children; a schoolmaster, whose authority is derived from a parent, censuring in good faith a pupil in the presence of other pupils; a master censuring a servant in good faith for remissness in service; a banker censuring in good faith the cashier of his bank for the conduct of such cashier as such cashier—are within this exception.

Eighth Exception.—It is not defamation to prefer in good faith an accusation against any person to any of those who have lawful authority over that person with respect to the subject-matter of accusation.

Accusation preferred in good faith to authorized person.

Illustration.

If A in good faith accuses Z before a Magistrate; if A in good faith complains of the conduct of Z, a servant, to Z's master; if A in good faith complains of the conduct of Z, a child, to Z's father—A is within this exception.

Imputation made in good faith by person for protection of his or other's interests.

Ninth Exception.—It is not defamation to make an imputation on the character of another, provided that the imputation be made in good faith for the protection of the interest of the person making it, or of any other person, or for the public good.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a shopkeeper, says to B, who manages his business, "Sell nothing to Z unless he pays you ready money, for I have no opinion of his honesty." A is within the exception, if he has made this imputation on Z in good faith for the protection of his own interests.

(b) A, a Magistrate, in making a report to his superior officer, casts an imputation on the character of Z. Here, if the imputation is made in good faith, and for the public good, A is within the exception.

Tenth Exception.—It is not defamation to convey a caution, in good faith, to one person against another, provided that such caution be intended for the good of the person to whom it is conveyed, or of some person in whom that person is interested, or for the public good.

500. Whoever defames another shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

*Procedure :—*Special complaint—Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable.

501. Whoever prints or engraves any matter, knowing or having good reason to believe that such matter is defamatory of any person, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

*Procedure :—*Same as under s. 500.

502. Whoever sells or offers for sale any printed or engraved substance containing defamatory matter, knowing that it contains such matter, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

*Procedure :—*Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable.

CHAPTER XXII.

OF CRIMINAL INTIMIDATION, INSULT AND ANNOYANCE.

503. Whoever threatens another with any injury to his person, reputation or property, or to the person or reputation of any one in whom that person is interested, with intent to cause alarm to that person, or to cause that person to do any act which he is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do any act which that person is legally entitled to do, as the means of avoiding the execution of such threat, commits criminal intimidation.

Explanation.—A threat to injure the reputation of any deceased person in whom the person threatened is interested, is within this section.

Illustration.

A, for the purpose of inducing B to desist from prosecuting a civil suit, threatens to burn B's house. A is guilty of criminal intimidation.

504. Whoever intentionally insults, and thereby gives provocation to any person, intending or knowing it to be likely that such provocation will cause him to break the public peace, or to commit any other offence, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate — Non-cognizable — Warrant—Bailable — Compoundable—Summary.

505. Whoever makes, publishes or circulates any statement, rumour or report,—

Statements conducing to public mischief. (a) with intent to cause, or which is likely to cause, any officer, soldier, sailor or airman in the Army, Navy or Air Force of Her Majesty or * * or in the Imperial Service Troops to mutiny or otherwise disregard or fail in his duty as such ; or shall be punished with imprisonment which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both.

(b) with intent to cause, or which is likely to cause, fear or alarm to the public or to any section of the public whereby any person may be induced to commit an offence against the State or against the public tranquillity ; or

(c) with intent to incite, or which is likely to incite, any class or community of persons to commit any offence against any other class or community ;

Exception.—It does not amount to an offence, within the meaning of this section, when the person making, publishing or circulating any such statement, rumour or report, has reasonable grounds for believing that such statement, rumour or report is true and makes, publishes or circulates it without any such intent as aforesaid.

Procedure :—Special complaint—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Not bailable—Not Compoundable.

506. Whoever commits the offence of criminal intimidation shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine, or with both;(1) and if the threat be to cause death or grievous hurt, or to cause the destruction of any property by fire, or to cause an offence punishable with death or transportation, or with imprisonment for a term which may extend to seven years, or to impute unchastity to a woman, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to seven years, or with fine, or with both.

Punishment for criminal intimidation. If threat be to cause death or grievous hurt, etc.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class (in case of cl. 1) but Session, Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class if threat be to cause death or grievous hurt—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable (in case of cl. 1) but not compoundable when the threat be to cause death or grievous hurt.

507. Whoever commits the offence of criminal intimidation by an anonymous communication, or having taken precaution to conceal the name or abode of the person from whom the threat comes, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to two years, in addition to the punishment provided for the offence by the last preceding section.

Criminal intimidation by an anonymous communication.

Procedure :—Same as under s. 506.

508. Whoever voluntarily causes or attempts to cause any person to do anything which that person is not legally bound to do, or to omit to do anything which he is legally entitled to do, by inducing or attempting to induce that person to believe that he or any person in whom he is interested will become or will be rendered by some act of the offender

Act caused by inducing person to believe that he will be rendered an object of the Divine displeasure.

an object of Divine displeasure if he does not do the thing which it is the object of the offender to cause him to do, or if he does the thing which it is the object of the offender to cause him to omit, shall be punished with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Illustrations.

(a) A sits dhurna at Z's door with the intention of causing it to be believed that, by so sitting, he renders Z an object of Divine displeasure. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

(b) A threatens Z that, unless Z performs a certain act, A will kill one of A's own children, under such circumstances that the killing would be believed to render Z an object of Divine displeasure. A has committed the offence defined in this section.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st or 2nd class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable.

509. Whoever, intending to insult the modesty of any woman, utters any word, makes any sound or gesture, or exhibits any object, intending that such word or sound shall be heard, or that such gesture or object shall be seen, by such woman, or intrudes upon the privacy of such woman, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or with fine, or with both.

Procedure :—Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of 1st class—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Compoundable with Court's sanction.

510. Whoever, in a state of intoxication, appears in any public place, or in any place which it is a trespass in him to enter, and there conducts himself in such a manner as to cause annoyance to any person, shall be punished with simple imprisonment for a term which may extend to twenty-four hours, or with fine which may extend to ten rupees, or with both.

Procedure :—Any Magistrate—Non-cognizable—Warrant—Bailable—Not compoundable.

CHAPTER XXIII.

OF ATTEMPTS TO COMMIT OFFENCES.

511. Whoever attempts to commit an offence punishable by this Code with transportation or imprisonment, or to cause such an offence to be committed, and in such attempt does any act towards the commission of the offence, shall, where no express provision is made by this Code for the punishment of such attempt, be punished with transportation or imprisonment of any description provided for the offence, for a term of transportation or imprisonment which may extend to one-half of the longest term provided for that offence, or with such fine as is provided for the offence, or with both.

Illustrations.

(a) A makes an attempt to steal some jewels by breaking open a box, and finds after so opening the box, that there is no jewel in it. He has done an act towards the commission of theft, and therefore is guilty under this section.

(b) A makes an attempt to pick the pocket of Z by thrusting his hand into Z's pocket. A fails in the attempt in consequence of Z's having nothing in the pocket. A is guilty under this section.

Procedure :—Triable by Court by which the offence attempted is triable—Cognizable if offence attempted is cognizable—Warrant or summons shall issue according as the offence is one in respect of which a warrant or summons shall ordinarily issue—Bailable, if offence contemplated is bailable—Compoundable, if offence attempted is compoundable.

THE INDIAN PENAL CODE

BEING

ACT XLV OF 1860.<sup>1</sup>

(As Amended by all Subsequent Acts up to Date.)

PASSED BY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF INDIA IN COUNCIL.

(Received the Assent of the Governor-General on the 6th October, 1860.)

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTION

Whereas it is expedient to provide a general Penal Code for British India ; It is enacted as follows :—

Preamble.

1. This act shall be called The Indian Penal Code, and shall take effect * * * <sup>2</sup> throughout the whole of the territories <sup>3</sup> which are or may become vested in Her Majesty by the Statute 21 and 22 Victoria, Chapter 106,<sup>4</sup> entitled “An Act for the better government of India.” * * *<sup>5</sup>

Title and extent of operation of the Code.

1. Analogous Law.—The Indian Penal Code was the outcome of the scheme of codification of Indian laws undertaken on behalf of the Government, of which some detailed history has already been given in the Introduction.<sup>6</sup> Prior to this Act, the Criminal law in force in the three Presidency towns of British India was the English Criminal law, the mofussil being subject to the Anglo-Indian Regulations made by the three Legislative Councils, supplemented by other laws introduced by the Muhammadan rulers. In short, the law in force before the passing of this Act, was neither uniform nor universal, while it presented a strange mosaic of English, Mussalman and local laws, the first of which was, and even to this day is, wrapped in glorious uncertainties, the second of which was obviously unsuited to a civilised country and the Regulations fashioned on the local Legislatures contained widely different provisions, many of which were, in the words of the authors of the Anglo-Indian Codes “amazingly unwise.”

2. This section has undergone certain alterations since it had been originally enacted : the words “on and from the first day of May 1861” having been omitted after “and shall take effect” by the Repealing and Amending Act of 1891,<sup>7</sup> as, no longer necessary, the same Act having also repealed the words “except the Settlement of Prince of Wales’ Island, Singapur and Malacca,” with which the section originally closed.

3. Extent of Application.—Besides applying to the territories to which it is made expressly applicable, the Act has now been extended to, or declared to be in force in, other localities as well, a list of which is, as far as it can be ascertained, given in foot-note 3 below.

(1) All offences under the Indian Penal Code are to be enquired into and tried according to the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898 (Act V of 1898) ss. 5 and 28.

The Indian Penal Code is superseded by s. 11, Reg. V of 1872, in the Sindh Frontier Districts, in so far as that Regulation is inconsistent with it.

(2) The words and figures “on and from the first day of May, 1861,” were repealed by the Repealing and Amending Act, 1891 (XII of 1891).

(3) The Indian Penal Code has been applied to offences committed before the 1st

4. The Act also extends to the following :—

(1) The British Protectorates on the Eastern Coast of Africa, the Persian Coast and Islands.

(2) The Indian States and more particularly the following :—

- |  |  |
|--|--|
| (1) The Berar.   | (10) Part of the Navewan Assigned tract near Bhamo in Upper Burmah.  |
| (2) The Hyderabad Residency Bazars.  | (11) The following British cantonments in Native States :—   |
| (3) The Civil and Military stations of Bangalore.  | Agar, Aurangabad, Baroda, Bhuj, Bolaram, Deolali, Disah, Gunah, Hingoli, Jalna, Mhow, Mominabad, Nimach, Nowgong, Raichur, Secunderabad, Sehore, Sirdarpur, Sutna. |
| (4) The Kathiawar Agency.  | (12) Kasumpti (Keonthal).  |
| (5) Kolhapur Civil station.  | (13) Frontier Tracts, Dera Ismail Khan and Dera Gazi Khan.   |
| (6) The Surat Agency.  | (14) The Baluchistan Agency Territories.   |
| (7) The Satara Jagirs (partially).   |  |
| (8) Rajputana, the Parganas of Jodgarh, Dewair, Saroth, Chang, Kotkarna, and the station of Abu. |  |
| (9) Kashmir and Jammu.   |  |

January, 1862, in the Punjab, see s. 39, Punjab Laws Act, 1872 (IV of 1872), and in Ajmer-Merwara, see s. 29, Ajmer Laws Regulation, 1877 (III of 1877).

It has been declared in force—in the Sonthal Parganas by s. 3 of the Sonthal Parganas Settlement Regulation, 1872 (III of 1872), as amended by the Sonthal Parganas Justice and Laws Regulation, 1899 (III of 1899); in the Arakan Hill District by s. 2 of the Arakan Hill District Laws, Regulation, 1916 (I of 1916); in Upper Burma generally except the Shan States, by s. 4 (1) and Sch. I of the Burma Laws Act, 1898 (XIII of 1898); in British Baluchistan by s. 3 of the British Baluchistan Laws Regulation, 1913 (II of 1913); in the Angul District by s. 3 of the Angul Laws Regulation, 1913 (III of 1913);

in the Chittagong Hill-tracts by the Chittagong Hill-tracts Regulation, 1900 (I of 1900); (with modifications) in the Kachin Hill-tracts as regards hill-tribes, by s. 3 of the Kachin Hill-tribes Regulation, 1895 (I of 1895), s. 3;

similarly, in the Chin Hills, as regards hill tribes, by the Chin Hills Regulation, 1896 (V of 1896); in the Paragana of Manpur by s. 2 and Sch. of the Manpur Laws Regulation, 1926 (II of 1926); in Panth Piploda by s. 2 and Sch. of the Panth Piploda Laws Regulation, 1929 (I of 1929).

It has been declared under s. 3 (a) of the Scheduled Districts Act, 1874 (XIV of 1874), to be in force in the following Scheduled Districts, namely, the Tarai Districts of the Province of Agra (see Gazette of India, 1879, Pt. I, p. 505), the Districts of Hazaribagh, Lohardaga (now called the Ranchi District, see Calcutta Gazette, 1899, Pt. I, p. 44), and Manbhum and Pargana Dhalbhum and the Kolhan in the District of Singbhum (see Gazette of India, 1881, Pt. I, p. 504).

By notification under ss. 3 and 5A of the same Act it has been declared in force in the Pargana of Manpur in Central India, see Gazette of India, 1899, Pt. II, p. 419.

The powers of a Local Government were at the same time conferred on the Agent to the Governor-General, Central India Agency, and also those of a High Court for the purposes of the Code, see Gazette of India, ibid.

It has been extended under s. 5 of the same Act to the Lushai Hills; see Gazette of India, 1898, Pt. II, p. 345.

(4) Repealed and re-enacted as 5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61, Government of India Act, 1915, which is now repealed by Government of India Act, 1935 (25 & 26 Geo. 5 c. 42).

(5) The words "except the settlement of Prince of Wales' Island, Singapore and Malacca," were repealed by the Repealing and Amending Act, 1891 (XII of 1891).

(6) See Penal Law (4th Ed.) (§ 32-34)

(7) Act XII of 1891, Sch. 1.

(3) Such parts of the following railways as pass through Indian States.

Railways.

- |   |   |
|---|---|
| (1) Ahmedabad-Prantij Railway.                | (21) Junagarh Railway.                      |
| (2) Barsi Light Railway.                      | (22) Kolar Gold Fields Railway.             |
| (3) Bengal-Nagpur Railway.                    | (23) Kolhapur Railway.                      |
| (4) Bhavnagar Railway.                        | (24) Kotri-Rohri Railway.                   |
| (5) Billimoria-Kolamba Railway.               | (25) Madras and Southern Maharatta Railway. |
| (6) Bombay, Baroda and Central India Railway. | (26) Mehsana-Viramgam Railway.              |
| (7) Cawnpore-Achnera State Railway.           | (27) Morvi Railway.                         |
| (8) Delhi-Umballa-Kalka Railway.              | (28) Mysore State Railway.                  |
| (9) Dhond-Manmad Railway.                     | (29) Nizam's Guaranteed State Railway.      |
| (10) Dhrangadhra Railway.                     | (30) North-Western Railway.                 |
| (11) Godhra-Lunawada Railway.                 | (31) Oudh and Rohilkhund State Railway.     |
| (12) Godhra-Rutlam-Nagda Railway.             | (32) Palanpur-Deesa Railway.                |
| (13) Gondal Porbandar Railway.                | (33) Petlad-Cambay Railway.                 |
| (14) Goona-Baran Railway.                     | (34) Rajkot-Jamnagar Railway.               |
| (15) Great Indian Peninsula Railway.          | (35) Rajpipla State Railway.                |
| (16) Hyderabad-Godaveri Valley Railway.       | (36) Rajputana-Malwa Railway.               |
| (17) Indian Midland Railway.                  | (37) Sabarmati Roho Railway.                |
| (18) Jammu and Kashmir Railway.               | (38) Sangli State Railway.                  |
| (19) Jamnagar and Dwarka Railway.             | (39) Southern Punjab Railway.               |
| (20) Jetalsar-Rajkot Railway.                 | (40) Tapti Valley Railway.                  |

5. The Penal Code is the working Code of all Indian States; but the following have expressly adopted it, mutatis mutandis, and with or without modifications:—

Indian States.

- (1) Bombay States.—Akalkot, Jangira, Jath, Kolhapur, Malia, Miraj (Junior Branch), Muli, Ramsury, Savanur, Sawantwari, Sholapur.
- (2) Central Provinces.—Bamra, Kanker, Khairagarh and Nandgaon.
- (3) Indore.—A Penal Code, founded on Act XLV of 1860, was passed by the Maharaja Holkar some years before 1890.
- (4) Mysore.—The Penal Code was in force during the British administration of the State. By the deed of transfer, 1st March 1881, it was included in the Schedule of Laws which, by section 91 of the deed, the Maharaja was bound to maintain. The Code of Criminal Procedure (Act X of 1882) was introduced by Reg. I of 1886 (Mysore).
- (5) Puducottah.—The Penal Code was declared by the Raja to be the law of his State in 1882.
- (6) Travancore.—The Penal Code and the Whipping Act were adopted in 1881.

6. The Code and its auxiliary the Procedure Code<sup>8</sup> have also been extended to the British Protectorates on the East Coast of Africa,<sup>9</sup> Zanzibar,<sup>10</sup> Somaliland,<sup>11</sup> and on the Persian Coast and adjacent Islands, the Settlement of Prince of Wales' Island, Singapur, Malacca, and the Nicobar Islands.<sup>12</sup> The Code further extends to the Island of Perim<sup>13</sup> and the Laccadive Islands;<sup>14</sup> and it has been adopted (with or without modifications) by the Straits Settlements and Ceylon.

7. Being a British enactment it has as such, of course, no operation in the Native Feudatory States, but cantonments, though territorially situate within Native States have been, by treaty, ceded to the British, and in such a case, the Code would, of course, apply to them. But it is not only to British territory that the Code can apply, since the Governor-General in Council is empowered by the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act, 1879, to extend any British enactment by a declaration even to foreign territory, and such declarations have

(8) Mulana, 1 A. 599 (600); contra in Diljour, 2 C. 225, F. B. offences committed before enactment of the Penal Code only triable in accordance with the procedure laid down in the Code of Criminal Procedure, (See s. 5, Act V of 1898).

(9) Order, 1897.

(10) Ib

(11) Order, 1899.

(12) Order, 1889.

(13) Mangal, 10 B. 258.

(14) Charia, 13 M. 353.

been made in the case of the civil and military stations of Bangalore<sup>15</sup> and other places.<sup>16</sup>

8. The reference to 21 and 22 Vict., c. 106 (since repealed by the Consolidating Act 5 and 6 Geo. V, c. 61)<sup>17</sup> is to the Government of India Act, 1858, the provisions of which cannot be affected by legislation in India. This Statute transferred the Government of India from the East India Company to the Crown,<sup>18</sup> which became thenceforward entitled to all the territories previously governed by the Company. All such territories were, however, to be governed by the Governor-General in Council, whose authority and powers are therein defined. Only territories acquired by the Governor-General in Council for His Majesty will thus be subject to the Code. What such territories are at the present moment has been already set out.

9. It is provided by the Code of Criminal Procedure that all offences under this Code shall be investigated, enquired into, tried and otherwise dealt with according to its provisions.<sup>19</sup> The Code of Criminal Procedure. Penal Code is thus the substantive law, of which the Procedure Code furnishes the adjective law to put in force its provisions.

10. Principle.—This Code was the outcome of the genius of Lord Macaulay, whose defence of a systematized Code has already been noticed in the Introduction.<sup>20</sup> The great advantage of a Code like the present is its simplicity, uniformity and certainty; its drawbacks are its rigorous inelasticity and inadaptability to individual circumstances.

11. Meaning of Words.—“British India” is defined in the General Clauses Act as follows:—“British India” shall mean all territories and places within Her (now His) Majesty’s dominions which are, for the time being, governed by Her Majesty through the Governor-General of India or through any Governor or other Subordinate to the Governor-General of India.<sup>21</sup> British India is not synonymous with “British possession,” which has been defined by the same Act to mean any part of His Majesty’s dominions exclusive of the United Kingdom; and, where parts of those dominions are under both central and a local legislature, all parts under the central legislature shall, for the purposes of this definition, be deemed to be one British possession.<sup>22</sup> British India is thus British possession, but not vice versa. It will be noticed that British India is defined to be a territory which is governed by the Governor-General in Council. As the Native States and the tributary Mahals are not so governed, they are not British India and the Code, as such, does not extend to them.<sup>23</sup> “Shall be called the Indian Penal Code”: The word “shall” has the force of “may,” a word now used in similar places in the Indian Acts.<sup>24</sup> “Which are or may become vested,” e.g., British Burmah. Such territories need not necessarily form part of British India—Burmah does not—but they must, nevertheless, be British possession acquired under the provisions of 21 and 22 Vict., c. 106.

12. Commencement and Extent.—An Act of the Indian Legislature takes effect from the date it receives the assent of the Governor-General. Such assent was given to the Code on the 6th October 1860. It should, therefore, have applied as from that date, were it not for the clause in the section which fixed the 1st January 1862, as the date for its enforcement. The Code was, however, applied in the Punjab<sup>25</sup> and Ajmer-Merwara<sup>1</sup> to offences committed even before

(15) Hayes, 12 M. 39.

(16) See List of British Enactments Act in force in foreign territories.

(17) 5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61 is the Government of India Act, 1915 which is now repealed by ib. of 1935 (25 & 26 Geo. V, c. 42).

(18) Cf. 5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61, s. 1, now see 25 & 26 Geo. V, c. 42.

(19) S. 5, Cr. P. C. (Act V of 1898).

(20) See Penal Law (4th Ed.) (§ 35).

(21) Ss. 2 (7), 71, Act X of 1897.

(22) Ib., 2 (8).

(23) E.g., it does not extend to Mourbhanj. (Keshub, 8 C. 985, F.B.; Horseee Mahapatro v. Dinobundo, 7 C. 523; Bichiranand v. Bhugbut, 16 C. 667).

(24) E.g., s. I, Code of Criminal Procedure (Act V of 1898).

(25) Act IV of 1872, s. 39.

(1) Reg. III of 1877, s. 29.

that date, but apart from such exception, it is not applicable to offences committed before its enactment.<sup>2</sup>

13. Rules for the Interpretation of the Code.—The rules for the interpretation of criminal statutes follow the solicitude which law feels for the life and liberty of the subject. On the principle that it is better that a hundred guilty persons should escape than that an innocent person should suffer, it resolves all reasonable doubts in favour of the accused. On the principle that an accused must be presumed to be innocent till he is proved to be guilty, law requires the accuser to prove all facts compatible with his guilt and incompatible with his innocence.<sup>3</sup> And in this respect law does not weigh in the golden scales the conflicting testimony offered by each side, but taking its stand on the side of the accused, it examines all facts and circumstances with care and circumspection, so that it may not abuse the liberties of those who are placed under its protection.<sup>4</sup>

14. And as it required clear demonstration of facts it requires also clear enunciation of law. For no one can be convicted of a doubtful offence.<sup>5</sup> So the Law Commissioners responsible for the first draft of the Code remarked: "In criminal cases, with which we are now more immediately concerned, we think that the accused party ought always to have the advantage of a doubt on a point of law, if that doubt be entertained after mature consideration by the highest judicial authority, as well as of a doubt on a matter of fact. In civil suits which are actually pending, we think it, on the whole, desirable to leave to the Courts the office of deciding doubtful questions of law which have actually arisen in the course of litigation."<sup>6</sup> In criminal cases, therefore, the law must be precise and intelligible, and the facts proved must be clear and unequivocal. And so far as regards law, while it may be so, still there may be doubts and difficulties which it is the function of the rules to solve. Indeed, as human language is never so precise and inflexible as to admit of no misinterpretation, it is always necessary, and indeed desirable, that these rules, which form, as it were, the Grammar of the Code, should be carefully observed. And for this purpose, it is necessary to examine the whole Code, analyse its scheme and study its vocabulary. Indeed, in order to facilitate this work the draftsmen have avowedly adopted a plan, the object of which is to make the Code self-contained, so far as possible, regarding its construction. In the first place, they have added definitions of terms used in the Code, the object of which is to provide a uniform nomenclature and thus avoid the perplexing variety of senses in which the same term may have been used in cognate enactments or popular parlance. "In our definitions," they observe, "we have repeatedly found ourselves under the necessity of sacrificing neatness and perspicuity to precision, and of using harsh expressions because we could find no other expressions which would convey our whole meaning and no more than our own meaning. Such definitions standing by themselves might repel and perplex the reader, and would perhaps be fully comprehended only by a very few students after long application. Yet, such definitions are found, and must be found in every system of law which aims at accuracy. A legislator may, if he thinks fit, avoid such definitions, and by avoiding them he will give a smoother and more attractive appearance to his workmanship; but in that case, he flinches from a duty which he ought to perform, and which somebody must perform. If this necessary but most disagreeable work be not performed by the law-giver once for all, it must be constantly performed in a rude and imperfect manner by every Judge in the Empire, and will probably be performed by no two Judges in the same way. We have, therefore, thought it right not to shrink from the task of framing these unpleasing but indispensable parts of a Code."<sup>7</sup>

(2) 1 W. R. Cr. Letters 325.

(3) Nobokisto, 8 W. R. (Cr.) 87; Ahmad, 11 W. R. (Cr.) 25, (27); Madhub Chunder, 21 W. R. (Cr.) 13 (20); Deputy Legal Remembrancer v. Karuna, 22 C. 174.

(4) Beharee, 3 W. R. 23 (26).

(5) Imami, 35 A. 24.

(6) Prefatory Address, p. xviii.

(7) Prefatory Address, pp. xiv, xv.

15. It is held that reference to the History of Legislation is permissible but can only be made when reasonable doubt is entertained as to the construction of a Statute. The proper course is, in the first instance, to examine the language of the Statute, to interpret it, to ask what is the natural meaning uninfluenced by any consideration derived from the previous state of the law. If this fails, resort might be had to extraneous aids to interpretation, e.g., the history of legislation, the analogous rules of English Law and the underlying policy which the law was intended to promote or the mischief it was aimed to arrest. A Court is bound to administer the law as enunciated by the Legislature and should neither enlarge nor restrict the sphere of its application.

16. Besides definitions, the draftsmen have, for the same purpose, enlisted the aid of illustrations. The definitions were framed to expound the general terms used in the Code, and they are necessary for the elucidation of the sections generally. "The definitions and enacting clauses contain the whole law. The illustrations make nothing law which would not be law without them. They only exhibit the law in full action, and show what its effects would be on the events of common life."<sup>8</sup> And again: "The illustrations will lead the mind of the student through the same steps by which the mind of those who framed the law proceeded, and may sometimes show him that a phrase which may have struck him as uncouth, or a distinction which he may have thought idle, was deliberately adopted for the purpose of including or excluding a large class of important cases. In the study of Geometry it is constantly found that a theorem, which, read by itself, conveyed no distinct meaning to the mind, becomes perfectly clear, as soon as the reader casts his eye over the statement of the individual cases taken for the purpose of demonstration. Our illustration, we trust, will, in a similar manner, facilitate the study of the law."<sup>9</sup> "Thus the Code will be at once a statute book and a collection of decided cases. The decided cases in the Code will differ from the decided cases in the English law books in two most important points. In the first place, our illustrations are never intended to supply any omission in the written law, nor do they ever, in our opinion, put a strain on the written law. They are merely instances of the practical application of the written law to the affairs of mankind. Secondly, they are cases decided not by the Judges, but by the Legislature, by those who make the law, and who must know more certainly than any Judge can know what the law is which they mean to make."<sup>10</sup> Of course, the illustrations appended to the section are merely expository. They are not exhaustive. If they were, there would have been then no necessity for the sections. They must be only understood to hit off the salient features of the section which remains the only law to be looked at for all purposes. And as the illustrations "make nothing law which would not be law without them,"<sup>11</sup> it follows that if they are inconsistent with the section, it is the section that has to be followed, and the illustrations may be ignored.<sup>12</sup>

17. Besides definitions and illustrations, the framers of the Code have sub-divided the Code into chapters, each prefaced by a suitable heading which may be regarded as preambles to them, and reference to which is legitimate for their construction.<sup>13</sup>

(8) Prefatory Address, p. xvi.

(9) Ib., p. xv.

(10) Ib., xvi,

(11) Ib., p. xvi, cited supra.

(12) Fakirappa, 15 B. 491 (496); Govinda Pillai v. Thayammal, 28 M. 57; Koylash v. Sonatan, 7 C. 132 (135); Rino Subedar, 16 I.C. (S.) 753; Satishchandra v. Ramdyal, 48 C. 388 S.B.

Proviso—Alangamonjori v. Sonamoni, 8 C.

637; Vyankataswami, 2 B. H. C. 106.

Saving Clause—Sitaram Vithal, 11 B. 657.

Marginal Notes (no aid to construction)—Balraj v. Jagat Pal, 26 A. 393 (406); Mahomed Ayoob, 2 Bom. L. R. 918; In the matter of Two Second Grade Pleaders, 34 M. 29; Dukhi Mullah, 23 C. 55.

(13) Ram Sanker v. Ganesh, (1907) 29 A. 385, F. B.; The Directors, etc., Hammer Smith v. Brand, (1868) L. R. 4 H. L. 171.

18. Again, it will be observed that the Code first defines offences generally.

Specific Offence. It then sets out other offences which, though falling into the category of general offences so defined, are distinguished from them by the presence of special circumstances which call for lighter or graver penalties. In such cases, it is the specific section dealing with the specific offence that ought to be requisitioned, and it would be wrong to resort to the general section merely because all its ingredients are present in a particular case.<sup>14</sup> For instance, a man clubs another man to death. Here the offender has certainly committed hurt; but it is not all, for he may have committed grievous hurt, or grievous hurt with a dangerous weapon, or culpable homicide not amounting to murder, or even murder deserving the extreme penalty of the law. All such offences are of the same kind, but they differ in their characteristics and gravity, so as, in fact, to form distinct and different offences. Their discrimination is no doubt the outcome of comparatively modern refinement, but nevertheless it is one which marks the different grades of criminal responsibility which always existed, though it was not always recognized.

19. Lastly, as all penal laws affect the liberty of the subject, they have to be construed strictly.<sup>15</sup> Nothing should be assumed

Strict Construction. to exist which does not appear. If a section is ambiguous or susceptible of another construction, the construction more favourable to the accused should be adopted. It should not be forgotten that it is the duty of tribunals to interpret the law and not to make it. They have defined rules embodied in a Code and it is their duty to follow them. If there are any lacunæ in the law, it is no part of their functions to supplement them, for hard cases make bad law. As their Lordships of the Privy Council observed: "The essence of a Code is to be exhaustive on the matters in respect of which it declares the law, and it is not the province of a Judge to disregard or go outside the letter of the enactment according to its true construction."<sup>16</sup> The correct attitude of the mind in dealing with crimes should be that which Maxwell has well summarized. He says: "Penal laws must be construed strictly. But it is the paramount duty of the judicial interpreter to put upon the language of the Legislature, honestly and faithfully, its plain and rational meaning and to promote its object. The rule of strict construction does not, indeed, require or sanction that suspicious scrutiny of the words, or those hostile conclusions from their ambiguity or from what is left unexpressed, which characterise the judicial interpretation of affidavits in support of ex parte applications, or of a Magistrate's convictions where the ambiguity goes to the jurisdiction. Nor does it allow the imposition of a restricted meaning on the words, wherever any doubt can be suggested, for the purpose of withdrawing from the operation of the statute a case which falls both within its scope and the fair sense of its language. This would be to defeat, not to promote, the object of the Legislature, to misread the statute and misunderstand its purpose. A Court is not at liberty to put limitations on general words which are not called for by the sense, or the objects or the mischief of the enactment; and no construction is admissible which would sanction an evasion of an Act. But the rule of strict construction requires that the language shall be so construed that no cases shall be held to fall within it, which do not fall both within the reasonable meaning of its terms and within the meaning and scope of the enactment. To determine that a case is within the intention of a statute, its language must authorize the Court to say so; but it is not admissible to carry the principle that a case which is within the mischief of a statute is within its provisions so far as to punish a crime not specified in the statute, because it is of equal atrocity or of a kindred character with those which are

(14) Kuloda Prosad, 11 C.W.N. 100.

(15) Patandin, 2 A. L. J. 26; Birajpal, 7 A. L. J. 181; Bista, 1 B. 308; Ganesh Narayan, 13 B. 600; Narottamdas, ib. 681; Kola Lalang, 8 C. 214; Kazi Zeamuddin, 28 C.

504; Bissumbhar, 5 C. W. N. 108; Sheodin, 10 A. 115.

(16) Gokul Mandar v. Pudmanand, 29 C. 707 (715) P. C.; Kari Singh, 40 C. 433; Barendra K. Ghose, 52 C. 197 P. C. enumerated. If the Legislature has not used words sufficiently comprehensive to include within its prohibition all the cases which fall within the mischief intended to be prevented, it is not competent for a Court to extend them."<sup>17</sup>

20. In other words, while it is in the province of the Court to place a rational construction on the law, it is no part of its function to gloss over an ambiguity, inconsistency or confusion which is plainly apparent and not obviously reconcilable. It is then the duty of the Legislature to amend the law. It is no part of the Judge to blink it. So James, L.J., in delivering the judgment of the Privy Council, said: "No doubt all penal statutes are to be construed strictly, that is to say, the Court must see that the thing charged as an offence is within the plain meaning of the words used, and must not strain the words on any notion that there has been a slip, that there has been a casus omissus, that the thing is so clearly within the mischief that it must have been intended to be included and would have been included, if thought of. On the other hand, the person charged has a right to say that the thing charged, although within the words, is not within the spirit of the enactment. But where the thing is brought within the words and within the spirit, there a penal enactment is to be construed like any other instrument, according to the fair commonsense meaning of the language used, and the Court is not to find or make any doubt or ambiguity in the language of a penal statute, where such doubt or ambiguity would clearly not be found or made in the same language in any other instrument."<sup>18</sup> So in another case, Willis, J., observed: "I quite agree that criminal enactments are not to be extended by construction when an offence against the law is alleged, and when the Court has to consider whether that alleged offence falls within the language of a criminal statute, the Court must be satisfied, not only that the spirit of the legislative enactment has been violated, but also that the language used by the Legislature includes the offence in question, and makes it criminal."<sup>19</sup>

21. When it is said that a penal statute must be construed strictly what it implies is, that nothing is to be regarded as within the meaning of the statute which is not within the letter—which is not clearly and intelligibly described in the very words of the statute itself.<sup>20</sup> "It would be extremely wrong that a man should, by a long train of conclusions, be reasoned into a penalty when the express words of the Act of Parliament do not authorize it."<sup>21</sup>

22. Of course, in construing a statute, whether penal or not, due effect should be given to every word—verba aliquid operati debent; <sup>22</sup> but criminal statutes differ from civil in this that in the former the primary duty of the Court is not to make sense but to see if it reads sense. If the words are doubtful, recourse may then be had to the subject-matter, but this is only a secondary rule.<sup>23</sup> In civil law, the rule of equity guides one in the construction of an enactment, but in penal statutes it would be very dangerous to charge one with an offence which the Legislature had omitted to enact. For how is the subject in such cases to know the will of the Legislature and guide his own course accordingly? Moreover, as Lord Watson remarked: "Intention of the Legislature is a common but very slippery phrase, which, popularly understood, may signify anything from intention embodied in positive enactment to speculative opinion as to what the Legislature probably would have meant, although there has been an omission to enact it. In a Court of Law or Equity, what the Legislature intended to be done or not to be done can only be legitimately ascertained from

(17) Per Lord Tenterden in Proctor v. Manwaring, 3 B. & A. 145; Maxwell on the Construction of Statutes, Chap. X (3rd Ed.), 367-370. See also Juggomohan Bukshee v. Roy Mothoora Nath Chowdhary, 7 W. R. 18 P. C.; Nga Po Chein, 13 I. C. (R.) 390.

(18) Dyke v. Elliot; "The Gauntlet," L. R. 4 P. C. 184 (191).

(19) Britt v. Robinson, L. R. 5 C. P. 503

(513, 514).

(20) Kola, 8 C. 214, following Lord Huntingtower v. Gardiner, 1 B. & C. 297 (299); Rex v. Bond, 1 B. & Aldr. 390 (392).

(21) Per Abbot, J., in R. v. Bond, 1 B. & Aldr. 390 (392); Deumal, 3 S. L. R. 66.

(22) "Words ought to have some operation." Kazi Zeamuddin, 28 C. 504.

(23) The Inhabitants of Hodnette, 1 T. R. 96 (101).

that which it has chosen to enact, either in express words, or by reasonable and necessary implication."<sup>24</sup> Debates in the Legislative Councils, Statements of Objects and Reasons, or Reports of the Select Committees are no guide to the construction of a Code,<sup>25</sup> much less a Penal Code, the provisions of which must be plain and unambiguous so as to afford both a clear warning and a certain proof of guilt.<sup>1</sup> If these observations are true about penal statutes generally, they are particularly apposite to the Penal Code, which, for its minuteness and comprehensive rigour, is perfectly Draconian; indeed, so much so that there is scarcely any act or movement, which, if judged malignantly, may not be brought within its ambit. In its attempts to be exhaustive the Code has ceased to be exact. It strove to be scientific, but it has become illogical, so that its interpreters have to exercise the greatest circumspection in construing it.

23. Speaking of the materials drawn for the ground-work of the Code, the framers referred to the English system as "artificial,"

English Cases.

"complicated," "framed without slightest reference to India," and very "defective," and they, therefore, declined to make it, more than any local system, the ground-work of the Code. "Cases decided in England must, therefore, be received in India with a careful allowance for the great difference of the law in the two countries."<sup>2</sup> As Story remarks: "The common law has been expounded to meet the exigencies of the times as they have arisen,"<sup>3</sup> and has, so far as traditional impediments allowed, improved the defence of society, as the weapons of its enemies have been improved, and so West, J., remarked: "The anomalies of the English law arising from its peculiar history have no place here. It is no doubt, an exemplum vitus imitabile, but we should look rather to its general and regular development than to the abnormal growths which here and there disfigure its venerable form, and which, perhaps, most strike the eye of a careless observer. The comprehensive views of Macaulay and his colleagues are manifested in their report presenting the Penal Code: and they ought, I think, to be seconded by a corresponding method of interpretation."<sup>4</sup>

2. Every person shall be liable to punishment under this Code and

Punishment of offences committed within the said territories.

not otherwise for every act or omission contrary to the provisions thereof, of which he shall be guilty within the said territories.<sup>5</sup> * * *

24. Analogous Law.—The legislative powers of the Supreme Government, at the time of the passing of this Code, were defined in 3 and 4 Will. IV, c. 85, which empowers the Governor-General in Council "to make laws and regulations for repealing, amending or altering any laws or regulations whatever now in force, or hereafter to be in force, in the territories of India, or any part thereof, and to make laws and regulations for all persons, whether British or Native, foreign or otherwise, and for all Courts of Justice, whether established by Her Majesty, Charters, or otherwise, and the jurisdictions thereof, and for all places and things whatsoever, within and throughout the whole and every part of the said territories and for all servants of the said Company within the dominions of the Princes and States in

(24) Salomen v. Salomen & Co., (1897) A. C. 22 (38); Bank of England v. Vagliano, (1891) A. C. 107; Norendro v. Kamalabasini, 23 C. 563, P. C.

(25) Walji v. Jaganath, 2 B. 84; Gopal v. Sakoji, 18 B. 133; Surab Sundari v. Uma Prosad, 31 C. 628; Sri Churn, 20 C. 1017, F. B.; Administrator-General v. Premlal, 22 C. 788, P. C.; Gopal v. Par-sotam, 5 A. 121, F. B.; Kadir Baksh v. Bhawani, 14 A. 145.

(1) Cf. Secretary of State v. Balwant, 28 B. 105; Rash Behari v. Bhugwan, 17 C. 209.

(2) Per West, J., in Moorga, 5 B. 338 (362, 363), F. B.; Hoondraj v. Mithomal, 84 I. C. (B.) 58; Potaraju, 36 M. 216; Kari Sing, 40 C. 433; Satish Chandra v. Ramdial, 48 C. 388 S. B.; cf. Bejoy Singh v. Commissioner, Income-tax, 60 C. 1029 P. C.

(3) Conflict of Laws, § 24.

(4) Per West, J., dissentient in Moorga, 5 B. 338, F. B.

(5) The words and figures "on or after the said first day of May, 1861" were repealed by the Repealing and Amending Act, 1891 (XII of 1891).

alliance with the said Company, except that he shall not have the power of making any laws or regulations which shall in any way repeal, vary, suspend, or affect any of the provisions of the Acts, or any provisions of the Acts for punishing mutiny and desertion of officers and soldiers, whether in the service of Her Majesty or the said Company, or any provision or Act hereafter to be passed in any wise affecting the said Company or the said territories or the inhabitants thereof; or any laws which shall in any way affect any prerogative of the Crown or the authority of Parliament, or any part of the unwritten laws or constitution of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, whereon may depend in any degree the allegiance of any person to the Crown of the United Kingdom or the sovereignty or dominion of the said Crown over any part of the said territories."

25. In accordance with this power the Governor-General in Council has power to extend the Code to any person, British or Indian, whether a British subject or a foreigner. And, prima facie, this Code is the sole penal law for all territories described and comprised in the preceding section. But under the provisions of The Scheduled Districts Act,<sup>6</sup> the local Government may, with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council, exclude the operation of the Code from any scheduled District, by notification published in the Gazette of India, and also in the local gazette, if any.<sup>7</sup> In the original Code the words "on or after the 1st day of May 1861," occurred after the word "territories." But they were, by a subsequent Act<sup>8</sup> altered to "the 1st day of January 1862," and every part of the Code was to be construed as if the words "the 1st day of January 1862" had been used instead. These words were altogether deleted by a subsequent Act as no longer necessary.<sup>9</sup> Offences committed before the 1st of January, 1862, are still punishable under the old regulations.<sup>10</sup> These regulations are many and widely divergent,<sup>11</sup> and their general scope has already been set out in the Introduction.<sup>12</sup> Such offences may be enquired into and tried by any Criminal Court in India in accordance with its own procedure<sup>13</sup> except in the case of persons entitled to be tried by the Supreme Court of the three Presidencies (e.g., European British subjects in case of commission of grave offences), when it shall certify the case to the Governor of the Presidency concerned who may thereupon order his trial by the High Court.<sup>14</sup>

26. Principle.—The object of this section is to declare the liability of every person, irrespective of rank, nationality, caste or creed, to be punished under its provisions.<sup>15</sup> In this respect it makes no distinction between a British subject and a foreigner, who enters the British territories and thus, by accepting the protection of British laws, virtually gives an assurance of his fidelity and obedience to them and submits himself to their operation. It is no defence on behalf of a foreigner that he did not know he was doing wrong, the act being no offence in his own country.<sup>16</sup> But, though by virtue of this section, every person, be he even the King, is liable to punishment under this Code, it does not necessarily imply a power in the criminal courts to punish all persons irrespective of rank, status, race and nationality. For, as the powers of the Courts are regulated by the Code of Criminal Procedure, it follows that though a person may have committed an offence within the meaning of this Code, still it does not necessarily follow that there is a tribunal competent in this country to punish him. Thus, for example, there is no Court competent in this country to hear, try or determine any indictment or information against the

(6) Act XIV of 1874.

(7) S. 3. Act XIV of 1874.

(8) Act VI of 1861.

(9) Act XII of 1891, Sch. 1.

(10) Mulna, 1 A. 599 (600); Contra, Diljour, 2 C. 225, F.B.

(11) Ben. Reg. XVII of 1817; Reg. XII of 1818; Bom. Reg. XIV of 1827; XVIII of 1827; XXII of 1827; Mad. Reg. VI of 1811; Reg. XIII of 1816; XIV of 1832.

(12) See, 1 Penal Law (4th Ed.).

(13) The Admiralty Offences (Colonial) Act, 1849, 12 & 13 Vict., c. 96, s. 1, extended to India by the Admiralty Jurisdiction (India) Act, 1860, 23 & 24 Vict., c. 88, s. 1; Kastya, 8 B. H. C. R. Cr. 36.

(14) The Admiralty Offences (Colonial) Act, 1849, 12 & 13 Vict., c. 96, s. 2.

(15) Mahabir Sing, 25 A. 31.

(16) Esop, 7 C. & P. 456. Though this is no defence, yet it is a matter to be considered in mitigation of punishment.

Governor-General and members of his executive council,<sup>17</sup> the Governors of Bombay and Madras and the members of their executive councils,<sup>18</sup> and the Chief Justices and Judges of the Indian High Courts,<sup>19</sup> for any act done in their public capacity. Offences committed by them shall, however, be enquired of, heard, tried and determined in the Court of King's Bench in London,<sup>20</sup> in accordance with the procedure defined in the English Statutes.<sup>21</sup> Foreign sovereigns and ambassadors, their families, secretaries, messengers and servants fall into the same category.<sup>22</sup>

27. It will be observed that the Code enacts that, in future, all offenders shall be punished only under the Code and not otherwise, which implies that the Code being exhaustive, all infractions of law, as laid down in this Code, shall only be punished in the manner therein laid down. As James, J., remarked in a case: "It must be borne in mind that, up to the date of the enactment of Act XVII of 1864, the Legislature took no steps towards expressly repealing the old criminal law. Possibly, it may have been thought hazardous to repeal it wholesale and without such a careful scrutiny as would ensure the rescission of such parts alone of the old law as the Penal Code rendered superfluous; whatever may have been the reason, the old law was left in the Statute Book, and but for the provision of s. 2, the great body of acts and omissions punishable under the Penal Code might have been still prosecuted under the old law."<sup>23</sup>

28. Meaning of Words.—"Every person" means all persons irrespective of nationality, allegiance, rank or status, caste, colour or creed. "Shall be liable to punishment" means that they run the risk of being punished, and not that they shall be punished which depends upon the powers of the Courts constituted to try offenders. The "person" here spoken of is a natural as distinguished from a juridical person, such as a corporation. "And not otherwise" means that no person can be punished for any act which amounts to an offence under the Code otherwise than according to the provisions thereof, except when the same act is made punishable by some local or special law.<sup>24</sup> Of course, the clause could not mean that if a given set of facts constitute an offence both under the Code as well as some local or special law, the offender can only be punished under the Code and not under any other law. The clause is rather intended to direct attention to the forms of punishments prescribed in the Code, which have superseded other forms which were in vogue prior to its enactment. "Act or omission" : A mere act or omission, however immoral, is not punishable, unless it is contrary to the provisions of the Code.<sup>25</sup> "Within the said territories" refers to the territories defined in the preceding section.

29. Persons subject to the Code.—It has been already remarked (§§ 26-27) that all persons are equally subject to the Code. But while it is so, it must be remembered that the authority of the Code may not reach all persons. As the Code is an Act of the Governor-General in Council, its authority is necessarily limited by his legislative authority. And, as the Governor-General in Council cannot legislate so as to "affect the prerogative of the Crown or the authority of Parliament or any part of the unwritten laws or constitution of the United Kingdom," (§ 24) it follows that the act does not, and cannot, affect the established prerogative of the Crown or the common law of England. Now, as according to this common law the King can do no wrong,<sup>1</sup> and, as, by the Constitution of England, his authority is paramount, it follows that the King cannot be proceeded against under the Code, both because

(17) 13 Geo. III, c. 63, ss. 15, 16; 21 Geo. III, c. 70, s. 1; 37 Geo. III, c. 142, s. 11; 9 & 10 Geo. III, c. 97, s. 3; 4 Geo. IV, c. 80, s. 7; see Government of India Act, 1915, s. 110 (5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61; now ib. 1935 (25 & 26 Geo. V, c. 42) s. 306.

(18) 37 Geo. III, c. 142, s. 11; 39 & 40 Geo. III, c. 79, s. 3; now see Government of India Act, 1935, s. 306.

(19) 13 Geo. III, c. 63, ss. 17, 39; 37 Geo. III, c. 142, s. 11; now see Government of India Act, 1935 (25 & 26 Geo. V, c. 42) s. 306.

(20) 11 Will. IV, c. 12; 18 Geo. III, c. 63, s. 39; 21 Geo. III, c. 70, ss. 4, 5.

(21) 24 Geo. III, c. 25, ss. 645-8; 26 Geo. III, c. 57, ss. 1-28.

(22) 7 Anne, c. 12, 35, ss. 3, 4, 6.

(23) 3 M. H. C. R. (App.) 11; Gokul Mandar v. Pudmanand Sing, 29 C. 707 (715) P.C.; Kari Sing, 40 C. 433.

(24) Commrs.' 2nd Rep., ss. 537, 538; Kari Sing, 40 C. 433 (439).

(25) See s. 33, infra.

(1) 1 Black., p. 246.

it does not apply to him as also because there is no Court competent to try him. As Blackstone says ; “ No suit or action can be brought against the Sovereign even in civil matters, because no Court can have jurisdiction over him. For all jurisdiction implies superiority of power ; authority to try would be vain and idle without any authority to redress ; and the sentence of a Court would be contemptible, unless that Court had power to command the execution of it ; but who, says Finch, shall command the King ? Hence it is likewise that, by the law, the person of the Sovereign is sacred, even though the measures pursued in his reign be completely tyrannical and arbitrary, for no jurisdiction upon earth has power to try him in a criminal way, much less to condemn him to punishment. If any foreign jurisdiction had this power, as was formerly claimed by the Pope, the independence of the Kingdom would be no more ; and if such power were vested in any domestic tribunal, there would soon be an end of the Constitution by destroying the free agency of one of the constituent parts of the legislative power.”<sup>2</sup>

30. Besides the King, foreign ambassadors, their families, secretaries, messengers, and servants are also not subject to any municipal law. As Blackstone observes ; “ The rights, the powers, the duties, and the privileges of ambassadors are determined by the law of nature and nations, and not by any municipal constitutions. For, as they represent the persons of their respective masters, who are not subject to any laws but those of their own country, their actions are not subject to the control of the private law of that State wherein they are appointed to reside. He that is subject to the coercion of laws is necessarily dependent on that power by whom those laws were made, but an ambassador ought to be independent of every power except that by which he is sent, and in consequence, ought not to be subject to the mere municipal laws of that nation wherein he is to exercise his functions. If he grossly offends or makes an ill-use of his character, he may be sent home and accused before his master, who is bound either to do justice upon him or avow himself the accomplice of his crimes.”<sup>3</sup> Of course, in order to be exempt, an ambassador must have been sent by a foreign Government. If he is not, the mere fact that he was recognised by His Majesty’s Government is insufficient to clothe him with immunity.<sup>4</sup> It is also said that the immunity of ambassadors extends only to such crimes as are mala prohibita, and not to those that are mala in se, as murder.<sup>5</sup> For a direct attempt against the life of the Sovereign, an ambassador or one of his suite would be directly punishable by the State.<sup>6</sup>

31. The immunities of ambassadors are enjoyed by all diplomatic agents of which the following classes were adopted by the Regulations passed at the Congress of Vienna :—

- (1) Ambassadors.
- (2) Legates (who are papal ambassadors extraordinarily charged with special missions, primarily representing the Pope as head of the Church, always cardinals, and sent only to States acknowledging the spiritual supremacy of the Pope).
- (3) Nuncios (who are ordinary ambassadors and residents, and are never cardinals).
- (4) Envoys and Ministers Plenipotentiary.
- (5) Ministers accredited to the Sovereign.
- (6) Charges d'affaires, accredited to the Minister of Foreign Affairs.

“ The immunities of the diplomatic agent are extended to his family living with him, because of their relationship to him, to secretaries and attaches, whether civil or military, forming part of the mission, but not personally accredited because

(2) 1 Black., p. 242 ; followed per Brett, L.J., in The Parlement Belge, L. R. 5 P.D. 197 (198).

(3) 1 Black., pp. 253, 254. The Diplomatic Privilege Act, 1708 (7 Anne, c. 21). As to when he may be arrested, see Hall’s International Law, pp. 168, 169 (3rd Edn.); Magdalena Steam Navigation Co. v. Martin, (1859) 2 E. & E. 94 ; Musurus Bey v. Gadban, (1894) 2 Q. B.

352.

(4) Per Brett, L.J., in The Parlement Belge, L. R. 5 P. D. 197 (206).

(5) Kerr on Blackstone, Vol. I, p. 224 (4th Edn.). See also Phillimore’s International Law, Vol. II, p. 202 (3rd Edn.).

(6) 2 Black., 254 ; 1 Hale P. C., ss. 96, 99 2 Phil. International Law, p. 202 (3rd Edn.).

of their necessity to him in his official relations, and perhaps also to domestics and other persons in his service not possessing a diplomatic character, because of their necessity to his dignity or comfort. These classes of persons have thus no independent immunity.....It is no doubt generally held that they cannot be arrested on a criminal charge and that a civil suit cannot be brought against them without the leave of their master, and that it rests in his discretion whether he will allow them to be dealt with by the local authorities or, whether he will reserve the case or action for trial in his own country."<sup>7</sup> As an ambassador's house is the reputed part of his sovereign's realm, it follows that his children partake of the nationality of his father wherever they may be born.<sup>8</sup>

32. As foreign ambassadors are exempt from the Code, so are also foreign sovereigns, and for the same reason. As Marshall, C.J., observed: "The world being composed of distinct sovereignties, possessing equal rights and equal independence, whose mutual benefit is promoted by intercourse with each other, and by an interchange of those good offices which humanity dictates, and its wants require, all sovereigns have consented to a relaxation in practice, in cases under certain peculiar circumstances, of that absolute and complete jurisdiction within their respective territories which sovereignty confers. One sovereign being in no respect amenable to another and being bound by the obligations of the highest character not to degrade the dignity of his nation, by placing himself or its sovereign rights within the jurisdiction of another, can be supposed to enter a foreign territory only under an express license, or in the confidence that the immunities belonging to his independent sovereign station, though not expressly stipulated, are reserved by implication, and will be extended to him."<sup>9</sup> It has, therefore, been held to be in accordance with the laws of nations that a sovereign prince resident in the dominions of another is exempt from the jurisdiction of the Courts there.<sup>10</sup> Indeed, the exercise of such jurisdiction would be incompatible with the regal dignity, that is to say, with his absolute independence of every superior authority.<sup>11</sup>

33. Aliens are not privileged against the criminal law of a country. All aliens, whether friendly or hostile, may be proceeded against for any crime committed by them. But in respect of acts of war, alien enemies cannot, it would appear, be tried by Criminal Courts, though they may be dealt with by martial law.<sup>12</sup> Troops of a foreign sovereign nation are also said to be de jure gentium exempt from the municipal laws of the State through which they are accorded a passage.

34. Besides, the foreign sovereigns and diplomatic agents who are exempt from the operation of criminal law, either by treaty or international comity, there are other high dignitaries of the State who are equally exempt from the jurisdiction of the ordinary tribunals, and they are, therefore, liable to punishment for offences committed by them, but there is no tribunal in the country to punish them. It was thus enacted by the East India Company Act, 1780, "that the Governor-General and Council of Bengal shall not be subject jointly or severally to the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court of Fort William in Bengal for or by reason of any Act or Order or any other matter or thing whatsoever counselled, ordered or done by them in their public capacity only and acting as Governor-General in Council."<sup>13</sup> "Provided

(7) Hall's International Law (3rd Edn.), pp. 174, 175.

(8) De Geen v. Stone, 22 Ch. D. 243 (254).

(9) The Exchange v. M'Faddon, 7 Cranch 116 (136); The Parlement Belge, L. R. 5 P. D. 197 (205); Mighell v. The Sultan of Johor, (1894) 1 Q. B. 149.

(10) Per Lord Langdale in The Duke of Brunswick v. The King of Hanover, 6 Beav. 1 (50).

(11) The Parlement Belge, L. R. 5 P. D. 197 (207); Secretary of State v. Moment, 17 C. W. N. 169.

(12) Hawk, P.C.C. 17, s. 6.

(13) 21 Geo. III, c. 70, Preamble. See Government of India Act, 1915, s. 110 (5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61), now ib. of 1935 (25 & 26 Geo. V, c. 42) s. 306.

also, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to discharge or acquit the said Governor-General and Council jointly or severally, or any other person or persons acting by or under their order, from any complaint, suit or process before any competent Court in this Kingdom, or to give any other authority whatsoever, to their acts, than acts of the same nature and description had by the laws and statutes of this Kingdom before this Act was made."<sup>14</sup> Similar exemptions in favour of the Governors of Madras and Bombay and Members of their Council were made by another Statute passed in 1797.<sup>15</sup> This Act, passed for the better administration of justice at Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, defined the powers of the Supreme Courts,<sup>16</sup> but exempted from their jurisdiction the Governors in Council by the following saving clause: "Nothing in this Act shall extend to subject the persons of the Governor or any of the Council at the respective settlements or the persons of the Recorders of the said Courts to be arrested or imprisoned in any suit, action or proceeding in the said Court; nor shall it be competent for the said Courts within their respective jurisdictions to hear or determine or to entertain and exercise jurisdiction in any suit or action against the Governor or any of the Council at the said settlements of Madras and Bombay respectively, for or on account of any act or order of any other act, matter or thing whatsoever counselled, ordered or done by them in their public capacity or acting as Governor in Council." This exemption was re-affirmed in the Government of India Act, 1800, which established the Supreme Courts of Judicature in those places. The exemption of the Chief Justice and Judges of the Supreme (now High) Court is similarly insured by the Regulating Act of 1772, which provided a scheme for the Government of India:—

"S. 17. And it is hereby further enacted and provided that nothing in this Act shall extend to subject the person of the Governor-General or of any of the said council or chief justice and judges respectively for the time being to be arrested or imprisoned upon any action, suit or proceeding in the said Court.<sup>17</sup> But they may be proceeded against in the Court of King's Bench in London."<sup>18</sup>

35. As to these Statutes, it may be observed that they provide for exemptions for acts done by the Governors and their executive councillors in their official capacity. Their exemption to this extent is obviously dictated by high policy, for, if the heads of Government are permitted to be prosecuted for their official acts, how is the government of the country to be carried on? So far, therefore, the officials are immune against their prosecutions in this country. But they are not wholly irresponsible, for the very Acts which create the exemption provide an elaborate procedure for their trial in England. Their exemption is, therefore, only temporary and territorial. Moreover, it does not extend to their private acts unconnected with the discharge of their high functions. It would appear that if a Governor were to commit a murder on the highway, he would not be exempt from trial in this country like any other offender. At any rate, this appears to be the trend of the Regulations on the subject.

36. Indian feudatory princes and princes in political alliance with Government are not British subjects, nor are their territories British territory.<sup>19</sup> They are, therefore, exempt from the operation of the Penal Code.<sup>20</sup> And, as, being heads of their own State, they cannot be tried by the tribunals of their creation, it follows that in their case there is no judicial trial at all. Offences committed by them do not, however, as a rule, go unpunished, though the procedure

(14) 21 Geo. III, c. 70, Preamble. See Government of India Act, 1915, s. 110 (5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61) s. 4, ib. of 1935 (25 & 26 Geo. V, c. 42) s. 306.

(15) 37 Geo. III, c. 142, s. 14, cl. 2, 3, 4. See now Government of India Act, 1935 (25 & 26 Geo. V, c. 42) s. 306.

(16) Established by 13 Geo. III, c. 63.

(17) The East India Company Act (commonly called the Regulating Act), 1772 (13 Geo. III, c. 63) s. 17.

(18) Ib., ss. 39, 40, 41. As to the procedure against Indian offenders in England, see 24 Geo. III, c. 25, ss. 64-85; and 26 Geo. III, c. 57, ss. 1-28.

(19) Mhd. Yusufuddin v. Q.-E., 25 C. 20, P. C.

(20) S. 1, ante.

adopted for their trial is not that provided by the Code of Criminal Procedure,<sup>21</sup> nor is the evidence adduced sifted in the light of the Indian Evidence Act.<sup>22</sup> The action of the Government in bringing them to justice is an act of State,<sup>23</sup> against which there is no appeal to judicial tribunals, and the sentence passed on them need not conform to the description of punishments provided in the Code.<sup>24</sup> The usual practice adopted by Government in cases of alleged crime is to appoint a commission of enquiry which takes such evidence as is forthcoming, draws up its report and submits it to Government for "the information of its mind."<sup>25</sup> The Government then passes a final order, and in doing so, it may or may not adopt the recommendation or findings of the report. If the person affected by the order is aggrieved, his only remedy is by a memorial to the higher political authority, before whom he is entitled to no audience by counsel. He has no remedy in the Civil Court against his conviction, if unjust; for, this being an Act of State the Municipal Courts have no jurisdiction to enquire into or judge of its propriety or correctness.

37. Juridical Persons.—The "person" here spoken of, of course, means and includes a natural person, though the definition of this word as given in section 11 "includes any company or association or body of persons whether incorporated or not." But inasmuch as mens rea is the true test of criminal responsibility, it is apprehended that there can be no crime, unless there is the presence of criminal intention. The person here spoken of is, therefore, used in a narrower sense than in section 11 where the term is defined.

38. "And not otherwise."—The object of this clause has already been explained before (§§ 26-28). The Code being an exhaustive enactment of pains and penalties, all transgressions of its provisions shall only be punishable in conformity with its rules.<sup>1</sup> No person can claim that he shall be judged according to the English Law and not by the Penal Code.<sup>2</sup> If, for example, a person commits adultery, which is a crime in the Code but no offence in England, he cannot claim exemption from punishment on the ground that he is only subject to the English law and ought to be tried as such.<sup>3</sup> So a person who utters a libel, cannot have his tongue pulled out by its root, and while "a tooth for a tooth, and an eye for an eye" may be the dictate of a religious code, it finds no place in the Code. Non-compliance with certain social rituals or non-compliance with the rules of the so-called code of honour was in certain cases regarded as not only an offence against the society but also against the State, and was accordingly visited by condign punishment. All breaches of social etiquette, caste or custom are now no longer penal and they are, therefore, now no longer punishable merely because they were punishable before. The Penal Code is now, therefore, not only the penal but also a moral Code, and by defining transgressions, it necessarily declares what it does not regard as culpable.

39. "Within the said territories."—It is to be observed that the Code only provides for the punishment of offences committed within the territories "which are or may become vested in His Majesty by the Statute 21 and 22 Victoria, Chapter 106."<sup>4</sup> If, therefore, a person commits an offence under the Code but beyond the limits of the said territories, he cannot be proceeded against under the Code, except so far as is otherwise provided by sections 3, 4 and 108-A. For example, a subject of a Native State, who is guilty of receiving stolen property within the Native State, cannot be punished under the Code.<sup>5</sup>

40. The question what area is comprised "within the said territories" must depend on what is, at any time, vested in His Majesty by virtue of the Statute 21 and 22 Victoria, Chapter 106 (§ 8). Besides the territories so vested, international

(21) Act V of 1898.

(22) Act I of 1872.

(23) In re Maharaja Madhava Singh, 6 Bom. L. R. 763, P. C.

(24) Per Lord Davey, in ib., p. 763.

(25) Ib., p. 763.

(1) Per Lord Devay in Gokul Mandar v.

Pudmanund Singh, (1902) 29 C. 707 (715) P. C.

(2) Kastya, 8 B. H. C. R. (Cr.) 63; Gopal Naidu, 46 M. 605, F. B.

(3) Kari Singh, 49 C. 433.

(4) S. 1, ante, see § 8.

(5) Gunjira, 48 A. 687.

law assigns to a State territorial jurisdiction in respect of acts done within a marine league or three geographical miles from low-water mark of the shore.<sup>6</sup> In other words, the territories, strictly speaking, of a State include not only the compass of land in the ordinary acceptation of the term, belonging to such State, but also that portion of the sea lying along and washing its coast which is commonly called its maritime territory.<sup>7</sup> Over all this territory the ordinary courts of the country are empowered to exercise jurisdiction in England with the consent of a Secretary of State, and in a colony with the consent of a Governor.<sup>8</sup> This jurisdiction is conferred on the State for its defence and security,<sup>9</sup> to prevent smuggling and poaching on its shore fisheries, and to protect its coastline. And the Courts are empowered to try offences committed within that area as it leads to the effectual trial of offenders on and near shore<sup>10</sup> in accordance with the provisions of the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878, the principal clauses of which were set out in the previous edition of this work, (see § 26, 4th Ed.)

41. Offences on High Seas. This Code has, then, no application to offences committed on the high seas, and an offence so committed would, therefore, have to be tried under the English law.<sup>11</sup> If, for example, a person commits adultery within three miles of the shore, he may be indicted under the Penal Code, but if he commits it beyond, he will escape scotfree, for adultery is not a crime under the English law. So where the accused was charged for an unnatural offence committed on board an East India ship lying in St. Katherine's Docks, he was held to have been rightly convicted though he was a native of Bagdad where his act would not have amounted to an offence.<sup>12</sup> So in one case, the prisoners Elmstone and Whitwell, who were the Brokers, resident in Bombay, of a British ship named Aurora, conspired in Bombay with Harriot, her Master, and one Marks, her carpenter, that it should be destroyed before it reached Liverpool, the object of the conspirators being to defraud the underwriters, upon certain cargo shipped by them. The ship sailed from Bombay on the 11th of June 1870, and when it had proceeded about 50 miles off the harbour, Marks set on fire, and in collusion with the Master it was destroyed. The four co-conspirators were arrested and committed for trial in Bombay, and the question was whether their offence came under the Penal Code<sup>13</sup> or the English law, and the Full Bench held that while the procedure applicable was Indian, the substantive law applicable to their case was the English law.<sup>14</sup> The same view was taken by another Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court in a case in which the prisoner Thompson had grievously hurt one Ned on board the British ship Scindia upon the high seas.<sup>15</sup>

42. Indeed, the Governor-General in Council has no power to legislate for offences committed on the high seas outside the territorial limits of British India, his jurisdiction extending only to the high seas within three miles off its coasts.<sup>16</sup> So where certain villagers sallied out in boats and maliciously removed a number of fishing stakes lawfully fixed in the sea, by the residents of a neighbouring village, within three miles of the shore, it was held that they were rightly convicted of mischief under the Code.<sup>17</sup> This precedent is, however, no authority for the view that the subject has no rights whatever over this area. It is no doubt reckoned

(6) Rolet v. R., L. R. 1 Pr. C. Ca. 198; Q. v. Anderson, L. R. 1 Cr. Ca. 161; Q. v. Musson, 8 E. & B. 900; Embleton v. Brown, 30 L. J. M. C. 1; Kastya, (1871) 8 B. H. C. R. (Cr.) 63; Potestatem terroe finiri ubi finitur armorum Vis [De Dominio Maris, chap. II; R. v. Elmstone, 7 B. H. C. R. (Cr.) 89].

(7) Per Kemball, J., in Kastya, 8 B. H. C. R. (Cr.) 63.

(8) The Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict., c. 73), Preamble.

(9) Ib.

(10) Admiralty Offences Act (12 & 13 Vict., c. 96), extended to India by the Admiralty

Jurisdiction Act (23 & 24 Vict., c. 88).

(11) 12 & 13 Vict., c. 96, s. 2; Reg. v. Elmstone, 7 B. H. C. R. (Cr.) 86; Reg. v. Thompson, 1 B. L. R. (Cr. O. J.) 1; Kastya, 8 B. H. C. R. (Cr.) 63.

(12) Esop, 7 C. & P. 456; Chill, 8 B. H. C. R. 92; Watkins, 2 M. H. C. R. 444.

(13) S. 437; and ss. 56 & 109.

(14) R. v. Elmstone, 8 B. H. C. R. 89; Q. v. Thompson, 1 B. L. R. (Cr.) 1.

(15) Q. v. Thompson, 1 B. L. R. (Cr.) 1; on the strength of 12 & 13 Vict., c. 96, s. 1.

(16) Kastya, 8 B. H. C. R. (Cr.) 63.

(17) Ib.

amongst the jura regalia of the Crown, so that no one can acquire thereon any right by mere occupancy.<sup>18</sup> But it is nevertheless a part of the res publica over which all subjects have a common right of enjoyment.

43. But as regards a ship of war on the high seas, all nations have agreed to certain limitations of their absolute territorial jurisdiction.

Men of War.

"She constitutes a part of the military force of her nation, acts under the immediate and direct command of her sovereign, is employed by him in national objects. He has many and powerful motives for preventing those objects from being defeated by the interference of a foreign State. Such interference cannot take place without affecting his power and dignity. The implied license under which such a vessel enters a friendly port may reasonably be construed, and it seems to the Court, ought to be construed, as containing an exemption from the jurisdiction of the sovereign within whose territories she claims the rights of hospitality."<sup>19</sup> This immunity which is undoubtedly enjoyed by men of war has been, by international comity, extended to troopships,<sup>20</sup> and indeed, to all ships of the State. "The immunity from such interference arises, not because they are instruments of war, but because they are instruments of sovereignty."<sup>21</sup> And it is on this ground that the exemption of warships has been justified: "The exemption of a public ship of war of a foreign government from the jurisdiction of our Courts depends rather upon its public than upon its military character."<sup>22</sup> But since the immunity rests upon its public character, it cannot be claimed if it is used for trading purposes. And if it is substantially used for this purpose,<sup>23</sup> she cannot claim immunity; but then, on the other hand, if she is declared by a sovereign authority by the usual means to be a ship of war or a ship of the State, the Court cannot inquire by contentious testimony whether that declaration is or is not correct. A ship may, for example, be used for carrying the mails, which is a national purpose. If, therefore, she also carries passengers and freight, she does on that account forfeit her general immunity.

44. As, however, the question of jurisdiction depends upon the place of commission of the offence, it may be sometimes necessary to inquire into that question, and the Courts are so far able to make an inquiry, for otherwise the Court is not in a position to say whether it has or has not jurisdiction.<sup>24</sup>

45. On the principle, cujus est solum ejus est usque ad cælum et ad inferos,<sup>25</sup>

Airships and Aeroplanes.

the column of air resting on the earth belongs to him who is the owner of the soil. Consequently, offences committed in airships and other aerial craft would be ordinarily subject to the law of that country; though it is possible that, by treaty or otherwise, some other arrangement might be come to between the nations for determining the venue of the offence and the law and procedure applicable to it.

3. Any person liable, by any law passed by the Governor-General of India in Council, to be tried for an offence committed beyond the limits of the said territories, shall be dealt with according to the provisions of this Code for any act committed beyond the said territories in the same manner as if such act had been committed within the said territories.

(18) Ins. II. 1, fr. 1, 2, 3; Blundell v. Caterall, 5 B. & Ald. 268; Bluest v. Pipon, 1 Knapp. P. C. C. 60; Malcomsan v. O'Dea, 10 H. L. C. 593, Sir H. Constable's case, 5 Rep., 105 (b).

(19) Per Marshall, C.J., in The Exchange, 7 Cranch, 116; cited with approval per Brett, L. J., in The Parlement Belge, L. R., 5 P. D. 197 (209); The Prince Fredrick, 2 Dod. 451 (466); De Haber v. The Queen of Portugal, 17 Q. B. 171.

(20) The Athol, 1 Wm. Rob. 374.

(21) Briggs v. The Lightships, 11 Allen 157.

(22) The Thomas Scott, 10 L. T. (N. S.) 726; The Parlement Belge, L. R. 5 P. D. 197 (213).

(23) The Parlement Belge, L. R. 5 P. D. 197 (219).

(24) The Parlement Belge, L. R. 5 P. D. 197 (220); Motee Chand v. Mohendranath, 9 W. R. (Cr.) 29.

(25) "Whoever is the owner of the soil, it is his even to the firmament, and to the centre of the earth."

46. Analogous Law.—The “any law” referred to in the section would now be s. 188 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.<sup>1</sup> Now, as the definition of offence in the Procedure Code is “any act or omission made punishable by any law for the time being in force,” including “any act in respect of which a complaint may be made under s. 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act, 1871,”<sup>2</sup> it follows that a Native Indian subject may be prosecuted in British India for any thing done in foreign lands, if it is an offence under any Indian enactment, though it may be an act of virtue in the place of commission. The clause as to sanction is his only safeguard, but it is a safeguard against which he has evidently no appeal. If, for instance, a Native Indian vindicates himself by fighting a duel in France, his conduct would be gentlemanly in the place of his exile, but it will be a crime in India, for which the tribunals of his country may hang him. So again, if a Native Indian commits adultery in England, he commits no crime, for adultery is no crime there, but he may be prosecuted for his act in India, because adultery is a crime in this country. And so, by parity of reasoning, the same liability attaches to a European British subject or a servant of the King in respect of acts committed in the Native States.<sup>3</sup>

47. It may be observed that the generality of the wording of this section would seem to indicate that it extends even to offences committed on the high seas. But, if so, the section would appear to be so far ultra vires, for the Indian Legislature does not possess power to legislate for the high seas (§§ 41-42). Indeed, it may be gravely doubted, if it has any power to legislate for the trial and punishment in respect of offences committed in other territories and jurisdictions governed and administered by, and equally representing, the Crown and Government of England.<sup>4</sup>

48. Anyhow, the course of legislation on the subject is well worth recapitulation here. Leaving alone, for the present, the English Statutes on the subject, the first Act dealing with offences committed beyond British India was the Offenders in Foreign States Act, 1849<sup>5</sup>, which purported to consolidate and supersede the several Regulations<sup>6</sup> which, more or less, provided for the punishment of offences committed beyond British India. This Act made “all subjects of the British Government, and also all persons in the civil or military service of the said Government, while actually in such service, and for six months afterwards, and also all persons who shall have dwelt for six months within the British territories under the Government of the East India Company” amenable to Indian law for all offences committed by them within the territory of any foreign Prince or State.<sup>7</sup> Section 1 of this Act which had repealed all the previous Regulations on the subject was itself, however, repealed by the Repealing Act of 1870.<sup>8</sup> Two years later the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act<sup>9</sup> was passed which again made provision for the punishment of offences committed beyond the territorial jurisdiction of the Government. But the preamble to the Act referred only to the “Native States,” in which term, however, such a place as Cyprus was held to be included.<sup>10</sup> This Act was superseded by a similar Act passed in 1879<sup>11</sup>, in which Chapter III<sup>12</sup> dealt with the apprehension and trial of such offenders. These two Acts made all “British subjects” equally liable to prosecution for offences committed by them beyond British India. In 1882, the Code of Criminal Procedure was passed and the two sections in the Foreign Jurisdiction Act dealing with foreign offences were transposed to this Code, where they became its sections 188 and 189,<sup>13</sup> and the corresponding chapter in the former Act was by the same piece of legislation repealed. These provisions of the Code have been reproduc-

(1) Act V of 1898.

(2) Ib., s. 4 (o).

(3) Chill, 8 B. H. C. R. 92.

(4) But see Po Thaung, 5 L. B. R. 221, 12 Cr. L. J. 198.

(5) Act I of 1849.

(6) Reg. V of 1809; Reg. VIII of 1813; Reg. I of 1822, s. 1; Reg. IX of 1822; Reg. VIII of 1829 of the Bengal Code; Reg. II of 1829;

Reg. XII of 1832 of the Madras Code; Reg. II of 1827, s. 4 of the Bombay Code.

(7) S. 2, Act I of 1849.

(8) Act XIV of 1870.

(9) Act XI of 1872.

(10) Garmukh Singh, 2 A. 218, F. B.

(11) Act XXI of 1879.

(12) Ss. 9-10.

(13) Act X of 1882.

ed in the Consolidating Act of 1898<sup>14</sup> and in consonance with the alteration thus effected the Foreign Jurisdiction and Extradition Act of 1879 was re-christened the Extradition Act, and it was again revised and re-enacted in 1903.<sup>15</sup>

49. So far, then, as regards Indian enactments, the only provision now in force is that embodied in the Code of Criminal Procedure, which has been set out at length elsewhere (§ 46).

50. Adverting to the English Statutes on the subject, there is nothing therein to affect British Indian subjects. But so far as they relate to the trial of British subjects, they are instructive, and contrast strangely with the Indian enactment. In England the authority of the Parliament to legislate for persons outside the United Kingdom appears to be conceded.<sup>16</sup> "That is a rule based on international law by which one sovereign power is bound to respect the subjects and rights of all other sovereign powers outside its own territory."<sup>17</sup> But the Parliament is most reluctant to legislate with respect to offences committed by British subjects in foreign territory.<sup>18</sup> It has, however, provided for punishment only in the following cases, namely: (i) offences committed at sea,<sup>19</sup> (ii) treason,<sup>20</sup> (iii) murder and manslaughter,<sup>21</sup> (iv) slave trade offences,<sup>22</sup> (v) offences against the Explosive Substance Act, 1882,<sup>23</sup> (vi) offences such as forgery and perjury, committed abroad with reference to proceedings in some British Court,<sup>24</sup> (vii) bigamy,<sup>25</sup> and (viii) offences against certain provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870.<sup>1</sup> It may be added that there is no provision to bring foreign offenders to trial in British India, though they may be extradited to their own country.

51. Principle.—This section merely enacts for the uniformity of trial of offences committed beyond the limits of British India, for which he is liable to be tried in British India, in accordance with any law passed by the Governor-General in Council. The section does not authorize such a trial, nor does it specify the offences that are so triable. It merely enacts that, if a person is to be tried for such offences at all, it shall be under the Code. The question whether it is within the competency of a State to punish offenders for offences not committed within its territorial jurisdiction is one upon which there is some difference of opinion. On the one hand, it is asserted that since, subject to treaty or express compact, the judicial power of every State is co-extensive with its legislative power,<sup>2</sup> no State can punish acts committed beyond its territorial jurisdiction. So Wheaton says: "By the common law of England which has been adopted in this respect by the United States, criminal offences are considered as altogether local, and are justifiable only by the Courts of that country where the offence is committed. But this principle is peculiar to the jurisprudence of Great Britain and the United States, and even in these two countries, it has been frequently disregarded by the positive legislation of each in the enactment of Statutes, under which offences committed by a subject or citizen within the territorial limits of a foreign State, have been made punishable in the courts of that country to which the person owes allegiance, and whose laws he is bound to

(14) Act V of 1898.

(15) Act XI of 1903, see the changes since brought about by repealing Act of 1914 and the Amending Act of 1930.

(16) See Westlake's International Law, 127; per Russell, C.J., in R. v. Jameson, (1896) 2 Q. B. 425 (430).

(17) Ib. 430.

(18) Ilbert's Government of India, ch. VII, p. 407.

(19) 4 & 5 Will. IV, c. 36, s. 22; 24 & 25 Vict., cc. 94 & 97; 57 & 58 Vict., c. 60, s. 684. As to Colonies, see 12 & 13 Vict., c. 96.

(20) 35 Hen. VIII, c. 2 (Act of 1543), s. 4.

(21) 24 & 25 Vict., c. 100, s. 9; 2 Steph. History of Criminal Law, p. 2.

(22) 5 Geo. IV, c. 114, ss. 9, 10.

(23) 46 & 47 Vict., c. 3.

(24) 52 & 53 Vict., c. 10, s. 9.

(25) 24 & 25 Vict., c. 100.

(1) 33 & 34 Vict., c. 90.

(2) Wheaton's International Law, ss. 111-113; Hardcastle on Statute Law (2nd Edn.), ch. VII; per Russell, C.J., in R. v. Jameson, (1896) 2 Q. B. 425 (430). In 1839 the question was referred to eminent jurists by the Government of India, and they recorded it as their opinion that the Legislative Council of India had power to legislate for offences committed on the high seas, but later on a different view was given by the law advisers of the Crown. See Forsyth's Cases and Opinions, pp. 17, 32; Ilbert's Govt. of India, pp. 442, 443.

obey. There is some contrariety in the opinions of different public jurists on this question; but the preponderance of their authority is greatly in favour of the jurisdiction of the Courts of the offender's country."<sup>3</sup>

52. Meaning of Words.—"By any law," that is, any other law. Such laws have been set out before (§ 46). "For any act," which would include also illegal omissions.<sup>4</sup> (§ 46).

53. Legislative Powers of the Indian Government.—In the preceding discussion some reference has been made to the ex-territorial power of legislation of the British Parliament. The ex-territorial legislative powers of the Government of India may be here considered. "The Government of India is the creation of Statute. Its powers are derived wholly from the Acts of Parliament and are limited with reference to persons, places, and subject-matter by the Acts of Parliament by which they are conferred."<sup>5</sup> As it has been shown (§§ 24, 25) that the latter wields such a power, the question is narrowed down to this—whether it has delegated its power to the Indian Legislature. At the time of the enactment of the Code, the Indian Legislature possessed the powers conferred on it by the Government of India Act, 1833,<sup>6</sup> which empowered it to make laws for all territories of the East India Company "and for all places and things whatsoever within and throughout the whole and every part of the said territories, and for all servants of the said Company within the dominions of Princes and States in alliance with the said Company."<sup>7</sup> The question whether this section enabled the Indian Legislature to legislate for the trial and punishment of offences committed beyond its territories was referred by it to four eminent English jurists, who recorded their opinion in the affirmative,<sup>8</sup> but they refrained from mentioning from what particular words in the section that power was deducible. As it is, it was not long before the law advisers of the Crown recorded the contrary opinion.<sup>9</sup>

54. This section was, however, superseded by the Act of 1861,<sup>10</sup> which after the usual clause gave the Indian Legislature power to legislate "for all places and things, whatever, within the said territories, and for all servants of the Government of India within the dominions of Princes and States in alliance with Her Majesty."<sup>11</sup> Another Act passed four years later professed to enlarge its powers of legislation "by authorizing him (i.e., the Governor-General in Council) to make laws and regulations for all British subjects of Her Majesty within the dominions of Princes and States in India in alliance with Her Majesty, whether in the service of the Government of India or otherwise."<sup>12</sup> In 1869, another Act empowered the Indian Legislature to make laws and regulations for all persons, being Native Indian subjects of Her Majesty, without and beyond, as well as within the Indian territories, under the dominions of Her Majesty."<sup>13</sup>

55. As to these Acts Sir Courtenay Ilbert remarks: "The language used in the Act of 1861, if construed literally, would seem wide enough to include the territories of any friendly State, whether in Europe or elsewhere. But some limitation must be placed upon it, and it may perhaps be construed as including States having treaty relations with the Crown through the Government of India, whether subject to the suzerainty of Her Majesty or not. However this may be, the power of the Indian Legislature to make laws binding on persons, other than Natives of British India, outside British India and the Native States of India, seems, under existing circumstances, to be open to question."<sup>14</sup>

(3) Wheaton's International Law, s. 113, et seqq.

(4) S. 32, post.

(5) Ilbert's Govt. of India, ch. VII, p. 442.

(6) 3 & 4 Will. IV, c. 85.

(7) Ib., s. 43.

(8) See opinion cited in extenso in Ilbert's Govt. of India, ch. VII, pp. 442, 443.

(9) Forsyth's Cases and Opinions on Constitutional Law, pp. 17, 32.

(10) 24 & 25 Vict., c. 67, re-enacted and codified as Government of India Act, 1915, s. 65 (1) (a) (5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61), now see ib. of 1935.

(11) 24 & 25 Vict., c. 67, s. 22 (explained by 55 & 56 Vict., c. 14, s. 2) now Government of India Act, 1935, (25 & 26 Geo. V, c. 42).

(12) S. 1, 28 & 29 Vict., c. 15.

(13) S. 1, Indian Councils Act, I of 1869 (32 & 33 Vict., c. 98).

(14) Ilbert's Govt. of India, ch. VII, p. 445.

56. All the previous statutes on the subject were consolidated and re-enacted as the Government of India Act, 1915, which is now repealed by Government of India Act, 1935.<sup>15</sup>

4. The provisions of this Code apply also to any offence committed by—

Extension of Code to extra-territorial offences.

- (1) any Native Indian subject of Her Majesty in any place without and beyond British India ;
- (2) any other British subject within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India ;
- (3) any servant of the Queen, whether a British subject or not, within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India.

Explanation.—In this section the word “offence” includes every act committed outside British India which, if committed in British India, would be punishable under this Code.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a coolie, who is a Native Indian subject, commits a murder in Uganda. He can be tried and convicted of murder in any place in British India in which he may be found.

(b) B, a European British subject, commits a murder in Kashmir. He can be tried and convicted of murder in any place in British India in which he may be found.

(c) C, a foreigner, who is in the service of the Punjab Government, commits a murder in Jhind. He can be tried and convicted of murder at any place in British India in which he may be found.

(d) D, a British subject living in Indore, instigates E to commit a murder in Bombay. D is guilty of abetting murder.

[ Servant of the Queen—S. 14, post.      British India—S. 15, post. ]

57. Analogous Law.—This section was substituted by the amending Act, 1898,<sup>16</sup> but in view of the last section and similar provisions of s. 188 of the Criminal Procedure Code, it appears to be redundant.

58. The combined effect of these sections is as follows :—

(1) If an offence is committed by a British Indian subject in British India, it is triable under the Penal Code.

(2) If an offence is committed

(a) by any native Indian subject of His Majesty in any place without and beyond British India,<sup>17</sup> or

(b) (i) by any other British subject, or (ii) by any other servant of the King, whether a British subject or not, within the territories of any Native Prince or Chief in India, it is triable under the Penal Code. (s. 4, cl. 1-3).

(3) If an offence is committed beyond the limits of the said territories, it may be tried in accordance with this Code, as if such offence had been committed within the said territories. But the person to be thus tried for an act must be liable “by any law passed by the Governor-General of India in Council.”<sup>18</sup> These words apparently restrict the operation to the cases specified in the Extradition Act,<sup>19</sup> and ss. 186 and 188 of the Criminal Procedure Code. (Effect of s. 3).

(15) Government of India Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61) now repealed by ib., 1935 (25 & 26 Geo. V, c. 42).

(16) The original s. 4 was repealed by s. 2 of the Indian Penal Code Amendment Act 1898 (IV of 1898), and the section printed in the text substituted for it. For Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Bill which became Act IV of 1898, and for Report of Select Committee, see Gazette of India, 1897, Pt. V, p. 183, ibid., Pt. V, p. 13.

(17) Garmukh Singh, 2 A. 218 F. B.

(18) Essub Ibrahim, (1845) Perry's Oriental Cases, 577 ; De Sylva, (1909) 11 Bom. L. R. 221.

(19) Act XI of 1903, an Act consolidating the Foreign Jurisdiction Act and the Extradition Act of 1879, with subsequent changes brought about by the Repealing Act of 1914 (Act X of 1914) and the Amending Act of 1930 (Act VIII of 1930).

(4) If any offence is committed by a British subject in foreign territories, he is triable by the British Courts.<sup>20</sup> But an offence committed by a foreigner in a foreign territory cannot, on the principles of International law, be tried in British India. It is an accepted doctrine that the law of the country where the crime is committed governs the nature of the offence and the Courts of that country alone have jurisdiction to try the offender.<sup>21</sup>

(5) Lastly, if an offence is committed

(i) by a foreigner in British India,<sup>22</sup> or

(ii) by a foreigner in a foreign territory, but he continues the criminal act in British India, can it be said that the British Courts acquire jurisdiction to try him? It is submitted that they do acquire such jurisdiction.

59. The Bombay High Court, in one case,<sup>23</sup> held the view that, if a person stole certain property in a foreign country, and subsequently disposed it of in British India, the Courts in the latter country had no jurisdiction to punish for the disposal of the stolen property, since it was merely an accessory to the main offence not punishable in British India. This view is obviously unsound and was dissented from in other cases,<sup>24</sup> and has since been overruled by the Legislature by the amendment of s. 410.<sup>25</sup> There are, however, certain offences, such as murder, piracy, or promotion of revolt which the laws of all nations regard as far too heinous to escape punishment in the country where they are committed. If the law were otherwise it might imperil the peace of states; but the comity of nations draws a line between a direct excitement of revolt and an agitation for political reform, though it may result in a revolt.

60. Form of Charge.—In all criminal cases in which it is necessary to frame a charge, it should describe the place of commission of the offence in such a manner as to shew whether it is within or beyond the limits of British India. And where the Court would not have jurisdiction but for the special circumstances here mentioned, the charge should state them. A charge, for instance, in the case of a European British subject, or a servant of His Majesty, should be worded thus:—

(1) “That you, being a British subject (or a servant, of His Majesty the King-Emperor on or about the                      day of                      , at                      , within the dominions of                      did, etc.”

If the offence was committed on the high seas, state—

“ (2) That you, on or about                      day of                      then being a British subject (omit these words if the accused is a foreigner) on board the British ship                      on the high seas, did                      and thereby committed an offence punishable, etc.”

If the accused be a Native Indian subject, then substitute those words for “British subject” in the first form.

61. Meaning of Words.—The term “any native Indian subject” means “natives of British India being British subjects.” The subjects must obviously be so de jure and not de facto.<sup>1</sup> “British India” for the meaning of which see § 11, supra and s. 15, post. “Other British subjects” means approximately “European British subjects.”<sup>2</sup> (§§ 63-64) “Any servant of the Queen,” whether British, Native Indian or foreigner. The term is defined in S. 14, post.

62. A Native Indian Subject.—The term “Native Indian” is but of recent origin. It is defined in the Parliamentary Statute of 1870, though for the limited purpose of that Statute only, as “any person born and domiciled within the dominions of Her Majesty in India, or parents habitually resident in India and not established there for temporary purposes only.”<sup>3</sup> This definition has since been adopted

(20) Bande Ali, (1927) 621.

ante comm.

(21) Anandgir, 7 S.L.R. 128, 24 I.C. 599; Kishen Koer, P. R. No. 20 of 1878; Roda, P.R. No. 30 of 1889; Baladeva, 28 A. 372; Gokaldas Amarsee, (1933) S. 333; Story's Conflict of Laws, § 23, Pirtal, 10 B. H. C. R. 356; Nawabji, (1881) P.R. No. 37.

(23) Moorga, 5 B. 338 F. B.

(24) Shankar, 6 C. 307; Lahya, 1 B. 50.

(25) Act VIII of 1882.

(1) Fakir, (1885) P. R. No. 1 of 1884.

(2) Ilbert's Govt. of India, ch. VII, p. 447.

(3) 33 & 34 Vict., c. 3, s. 6, cl. 3.

(22) Wheeler, (E.C.D.) (1929) S. 161; S. 2,

as a fair working definition in later Acts of Parliament, though out of deference to Indian sentiments the word "native" has been omitted from them.<sup>4</sup> It would be noticed that the definition does not require that the persons born should be legitimate issue, though in the Criminal Procedure Code, where the term "European British subject" is described, a child or grand-child of a European British subject, to be so classed, is required to be by legitimate descent.<sup>5</sup> Again, under the Statute, a person can only be a native Indian subject, if he is born of parents, i.e., "both the parents" and not only one of them, habitually resident in India. The term "habitually resident in India" implies that the parents have not only a fixed place of abode in British India, but that they frequently resort to it for the purpose of residence. It does not exclude the existence of a second home, but it does imply that the primary and principal home of such persons is in British India.<sup>6</sup> This cannot be said of persons in the civil or military service of Government, who live here for temporary purposes only. The same thing might be said of missionaries, professional and commercial men, whose progeny would not then be natives of India, within the meaning of this term, though their legitimate issue would fall under that category.

63. British Subjects.—The term "other British subject" approximately means a European British subject, though, in older Acts<sup>7</sup> it applied to Indian British subjects as well. There is, however, no legal authority in support of its narrower interpretation, (meaning a European British subject), but it has become so established by current usage. And in order to give effect to this interpretation, the Legislature subsequently to those Acts coined a new phrase "European British subjects," which was defined in the Codes of Criminal Procedure of 1882<sup>8</sup> and 1898.<sup>9</sup> But the phrase itself already had passed into legal vocabulary in 1870 when an Act was passed to define the liability of such persons to the High Courts of Madras and Bombay.<sup>10</sup> But while the term "European British subject" may be a fair working equivalent for the older "British subject," it is by no means synonymous with it. And, moreover, the new phrase suffers so much from vagueness and redundancy that even if it be regarded as the definition of the older term it does not carry sense much farther. As Sir Courtenay Ilbert remarks: "This definition is open to much criticism, and obviously errs both by way of redundancy and by way of deficiency. It can hardly be treated as a precise equivalent of the term 'British subject' in its older sense, although it is intended to have approximately the same meaning. If the term 'British subject' in the Act of 1865<sup>11</sup> were to be construed as equivalent to 'European British subject' in the Indian Code of Criminal Procedure, there would appear to be no power under the existing statutory enactments for the Indian Legislature to make laws, say, for a native of Ceylon in the territories of the Nizam (being neither a European British subject nor a native of India). But the language of the Act of 1865<sup>12</sup> can hardly be construed in the light of an artificial definition which was invented at a subsequent date. And even if the expression is used in a restricted sense, probably the most reasonable construction to put on it is that it includes all British subjects except natives of India."<sup>13</sup>

64. The amenability of a European British subject to this Code depends upon (a) whether he was domiciled in this country at the time of the offence, (b) the nature of the offence committed by European British subject.

(4) Cf. S. 99, Government of India Act, 1915, 5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61) now repealed by the present Government of India Act (25 Geo. V., c. 42).

(5) S. 4, Cr. P. C., as amended by Act XII of 1923, s. 2.

(6) Order v. Skinner, 3 A. 91 (101), P. C.; similarly held in Morris v. Baumgarten, Bourke, 128.

(7) See Act I of 1849; The Government of India Act, 1865 (28 Vict., c. 17) s. 1; Indian Councils Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict., c. 98) s. 1.

(8) S. 4, Act X of 1882.

(9) S. 4, Act V of 1898.

(10) Act XXII of 1870, Preamble.

(11) The Government of India Act, 1865, 28 Vict., c. 17.

(12) The words in the brackets are our own.

(13) Govt. of India, pp. 447, 448.

him, and (c) the mode of trial to which he might be subject. It is now settled that all persons residing in British India, irrespective of nationality, are liable for all offences punishable under this Code.

65. Servants of the Queen.—Section 14 defines this term. The legislative authority of the Government of India is expressly declared to extend to “all servants of the Government of India within the dominions of Princes and States in alliance with His Majesty.”<sup>14</sup> Servants of the King are not all necessarily public servants—a class defined in section 21, nor are all public servants necessarily servants of the King. The liability of the servants of the King to punishment under the Indian Code is a matter of discipline and administrative necessity. But while it is no doubt so, it does not confer on a Court in British India any jurisdiction to try him for an offence committed in a Native State; the procedure then for bringing him to trial is that regulated by the Code of Criminal Procedure,<sup>15</sup> subject to which alone he can be brought to trial.”<sup>16</sup>

66. Jurisdiction and Procedure.—As regards procedure, offences committed in British India present no difficulties. They are normal cases, for which the procedure prescribed is that contained in the Procedure Code. But offences committed outside British India require notice, for in respect of them the procedure applicable is neither uniform nor in every case identical. Now, offences committed outside British India may be committed in (i) a part of British territory outside British India, or (ii) on the high seas, or (iii) in a Native State, or (iv) in a foreign State. As regards offences committed by a person in a British territory outside British India, the general rule in the case of a British subject, whether European or Indian, is that he may be tried on the spot in accordance with the local laws of the country. And, if he has, in the meantime, quitted the jurisdiction of the State, he may be either proceeded against under the Fugitive Offenders Act<sup>17</sup> or the Indian Extradition Act.<sup>18</sup>

67. Ex-territorial Jurisdiction.—The ex-territorial jurisdiction of the Indian Courts must, of necessity, be regulated by an Act of Parliament, for since the powers of the Indian Legislature are circumscribed by the Charter of its creation (§ 53), it cannot legislate for territories beyond the ordinary jurisdiction of the Governor-General in Council. Now, as regards the Indian Courts, their powers over British subjects as well as servants have always extended to offences committed in the Native States. Thus it was provided as follows: “And be it further enacted that all His Majesty’s subjects, as well as servants of the said United Company as others, shall be or hereby declared to be amenable to all Courts of Justice, both in India and Great Britain of competent jurisdiction to try offences committed in India, for all acts, injuries, wrongs, oppressions, trespasses, misdemeanours, offences, and crimes whatever, by them or any of them done or to be done or committed in any of the lands or territories of any Native Prince or State, or against their persons or properties or the persons or properties of any of their subjects or people, in the same manner, as if the same had been done or committed within the territories directly subject to and under the British Government in India.”<sup>19</sup> So the Charter of the Supreme Court empowered them to take cognizance of all treasons, murders, crimes, extortions, misdemeanours, trespasses, wrongs, and oppressions committed by any of Her Majesty’s subjects in any of the territories subject to or dependent upon the Government of Bombay, or in the territories of Native Princes or States in alliance with the Government of Bombay.<sup>20</sup> This power was transferred to the High Courts on their constitution.<sup>21</sup> But this is a power which can be exercised only by the Chartered High Courts. It cannot be delegated to any other Court, e.g., the Court of a Judicial Commissioner, though it may, in other matters, possess and exercise co-ordinate

(14) 24 & 25 Vict., c. 67, s. 22; now Government of India Act, 1935, (25 & 26 Geo. V, c. 42).

(15) Natwarai, 16 B. 178.

(16) S. 188.

(17) The view taken in Daya Bhima, 13 B. 147, has been overruled by amendment of S. 188 of the Cr. P. C. (V of 1898).

(18) Act XV of 1903.

(19) S. 4, 33 Geo. III, c. 52, s. 67.

(20) S. 44.

(21) Chill, 8 B. H. C. R. 92; Watkins, 2 M. H. C. R. 444.

jurisdiction.<sup>22</sup> If such a power is delegated by Government, it will be ultra vires, because the Government of India is only empowered<sup>23</sup> to authorize the High Courts established by Royal Charter<sup>24</sup> to try Christian subjects residing in Native States.<sup>25</sup>

68. Therefore, as regards European British subjects and servants of the King, the High Courts possess, by their Charter, jurisdiction to try them for offences committed outside British India in the territories of Native Princes in alliance with His Majesty. And as they have the jurisdiction, it is no defence for the accused that the offence in respect of which he is being proceeded against was not a crime in the State where he had committed it.<sup>1</sup> And this jurisdiction is in no way affected by any supersession of the native administration by officers appointed by the Government of India.<sup>2</sup> The latter has, however, under the terms of its constitution, doubtless powers to extend within or remove from the jurisdiction of the High Courts any territory.<sup>3</sup> This was expressly laid down by Their Lordships of the Privy Council in a case in which, by an Act<sup>4</sup> passed by the Governor-General in Council, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal had been empowered to remove certain tracts within his administrative jurisdiction from the ordinary jurisdiction of the Courts of Civil and Criminal Judicature.<sup>5</sup> And as regards the powers of the High Courts, the same high tribunal held that the terms of the Act,<sup>6</sup> creating the High Courts, and conferring on them jurisdiction in any part of Her Majesty's Indian territories, were meant to be subject to, and not exclusive of, the general legislative power of the Governor-General in Council.<sup>7</sup>

69. Jurisdiction of the High Courts.—Subject, however, to the legislative control of the Governor-General in Council, the powers of the Indian High Courts extend to the territories placed within their ordinary jurisdiction. Besides this jurisdiction they also possess, as seen before, ex-territorial jurisdiction which empowers them to take cognizance of offences committed out of British India, on land or high seas.

70. Besides Native States which, being under the paramountcy of the Government of India, are ordinarily subject to its directions, Jurisdiction over Subjects in Foreign States. there are a number of Asiatic Foreign States over which His Majesty has, by treaty, capitulation, grant, usage, sufferance, or other lawful means, acquired ex-territorial jurisdiction, which has also been delegated to the Indian Courts.

71. Admiralty Jurisdiction.—Adverting now to the offences committed on the high seas, which are no man's territory, the jurisdiction of the Indian Courts depends upon what is known as the admiralty jurisdiction. It is founded on the principle that a ship on the high seas is a floating island belonging to the nation whose flag she is flying. It extends over all ships of a nation that use its flag, whether they be anchored or sailing, whether on the high seas or in rivers below the bridges where the tide ebbs and flows and where great ships go.<sup>8</sup> And it makes no difference whether the ship is made fast to the bottom of the river by anchor and cable, or to its side by ropes from the quay.<sup>9</sup> In such a case, only two questions arise, the first, a question of place, the second, a question of person. In order to establish the British jurisdiction, all that is necessary is that the ship should be a British ship sailing under the British flag, which may be established by parol, it being by no means essential that

(22) Ward, 5 M. 33.

(23) 28 & 29 Vict., c. 15, s. 3.

(24) 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104.

(25) (1865) 28 & 29 Vict., c. 15, s. 3; Ward, 5 M. 33; now see Government of India Act, 1935 (25 & 26 Geo. V, c. 42).

(1) Chill, 8 B. H. C. R. 92.

(2) Watkins, 2 M. H. C. R. 444.

(3) Burah, 4 C. 172, P. C.

(4) Act XXII of 1869, s. 9.

(5) Burah, 4 C. 172, P. C., overruling on this point, Burah, 3 C. 63, F. B.

(6) 24 & 25 Vict., c. 104.

(7) Burah, 5 C. 172, P. C.

(8) Per Lord Blackburn in Anderson, L.R. 1 C. C. R. 161; 38 L. J. (M. C.) 12.

(9) Anderson, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 161; Jemot cited in Arch. Plead. (16th Edn.), p. 395; Allen, 1 Moo. C. C. 154; Carr, 10 Q. B. D. 76 (79); Lesley, (1860) 29 L. J. (M. C.) 97.

the register of the vessel be produced.<sup>10</sup> For if the ship was registered as a British ship and sailed under the British flag, but the owner is not a natural-born British subject, the admiralty jurisdiction will not extend to offences committed upon it.<sup>11</sup> On the other hand, if the owner was a British subject, that jurisdiction will extend to all offences committed thereon, whether the offenders be British subjects or foreigners. In that case, the question how the offender happened to come on board is immaterial. He may have gone there voluntarily or may have been brought there against his will; in any case the Admiralty Court will have jurisdiction over him.<sup>12</sup>

72. So far, then, the law is clear and well settled. The only difficulty that the subject presents is with respect to what shall be considered as the line of demarcation between the country and the high sea. Here, too, the jurisdiction of the Courts of the country up to a marine league is undisputed (§§ 39-42). The difficulty, however, arises where the offence committed is in harbours or below the bridges in great rivers which are partially enclosed by land. But here the question is one of fact and not of law, for if the haven, creek or river is within the body of a country, both the Admiralty as well as the Common Law Courts have concurrent jurisdiction.<sup>13</sup>

73. At one time, offences committed on the high seas were said to be exclusively within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty Court, but they are now placed within the jurisdiction of the ordinary Criminal Courts.<sup>14</sup> The Admiralty Offences Act confers upon all Magistrates jurisdiction to try and dispose of all offences committed by any person "upon the sea, or in any haven, river, creek or place where the admiral or admirals have power, authority, or jurisdiction, or if any person charged with the commission of any such offence upon the sea or in any such haven, river, creek or place shall be brought for trial to any colony."<sup>15</sup> The Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, further makes provision for the trial of such offences by the ordinary tribunals,<sup>16</sup> while the Courts (Colonial) Jurisdiction Act<sup>17</sup> enables the Courts in this country to regulate the procedure at the trial and the sentence by the law of India.<sup>18</sup>

74. It has been already stated before, that the High Courts in India have generally inherited the jurisdiction possessed by their Supreme Courts which they have replaced. These Courts possessed the jurisdiction of the High Court of Admiralty in England as it stood in 1823.<sup>19</sup> Their jurisdiction in Vice-Admiralty was created by commission from the High Court of Admiralty in England in 1843.<sup>20</sup> With the exception of the Allahabad High Court, which has no Admiralty jurisdiction, the other three High Courts are, now, by Statute, declared to be Colonial Courts of Admiralty,<sup>21</sup> within the meaning of the Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act.<sup>22</sup> These three High Courts therefore now possess the same jurisdiction in Admiralty as the Admiralty Courts in England.

75. Mofussil Courts.—As regards the Mofussil Courts, it appears that they did not possess any jurisdiction prior to 1860 when a limited jurisdiction was conferred on them by the Admiralty Jurisdiction (India) Act.<sup>23</sup> This jurisdiction was, however, enlarged in 1894 by the provision of the Merchant Shipping Act, which gave all Courts jurisdiction to try offenders wherever found.<sup>24</sup>

(10) Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict., c. 104, s. 106); Sven Seberg, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 264; Frank Allen, 10 Cox, 405.

(11) Adolph Bjornsen, 10 Cox, 74.

(12) Sven Seberg, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 264; Benito Lopez Christian Sattler, (1858) 7 Cox 431; In re Susanah, 9 B. & C. 446; In re Parisot, (1889) T. L. R. 344; Savarkar, 13 Bom. L. R. 296; Salimullah, 39 C. 487 (490).

(13) John Bruce, 2 Leach. 1093; Essub Ibrahim, (1845) Perry's Oriental Cases, 577; DeSylva, 11 Bom. L. R. 221.

(14) Admiralty Offences Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict., c. 26); Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict., c. 60).

15) S. 1, Admiralty Offences Act, 1849

(12 & 13 Vict., c. 96).

(16) 57 & 58 Vict., c. 60, ss. 684, 687; also see ib., ss. 689, 690.

(17) 37 & 38 Vict., c. 27, s. 3.

(18) Elmstone, 7 B. H. C. R. (C. C.) 89; Salimullah, 30 C. 487.

(19) The Asai, 5 B. H. C. O. C. J. 64; Bardot v. The Augusta, 10 B. H. C. 110 contra The Portugal, 6 B. L. R. 323 (330, 331).

(20) As to the meaning of Vice-Admiralty Court, see Colonial Courts of Admiralty Act, 1819 (53 & 54, Vict., c. 27, s. 9).

(21) Act XVI of 1891.

(22) 53 & 54 Vict., c. 27.

(23) 23 & 24 Vict., c. 88, ss. 1-2.

(24) S. 686, 57 & 58 Vict., c. 60.

5. Nothing in this act is intended to repeal, vary, suspend, or affect any of the provisions of the Statute 3 and 4 William IV, Chapter 85,<sup>25</sup> or of any Act of Parliament passed after that Statute in any wise affecting the East India Company, or the said territories, or the inhabitants thereof ; or any of the provisions of any <sup>1</sup> Act for punishing mutiny and desertion of officers, soldiers, [sailors]<sup>2</sup> or airmen<sup>3</sup> in the service of Her Majesty, or of any special or local law.

Certain laws not to be affected by this Act.

76. Analogous Law.—The provisions of 3 and 4 William IV, c. 85, here referred to or those of the Government of India Act, 1883, which, apart from this section, cannot be affected by legislation in India.<sup>4</sup> This Statute was passed for effecting an arrangement with the East India Company and for the better government of His Majesty's Indian territories, till the 30th April 1854. Its scope has been sufficiently discussed in the foregoing pages (§§ 24, 25). Several Acts have since been passed by Parliament "affecting the East India Company, or the said territories or the inhabitants thereof," and as they are all Acts of Parliament, they remain, as a matter of course, unaffected by the acts of the Indian Legislature. (§ 53). The Act "for punishing mutiny and desertion of officers and soldiers in the service of Her Majesty" is the English Mutiny Act, 1878. Provision for punishment of desertion is made in the Army and Navy Act,<sup>5</sup> confirmed and amended by the Annual Army Acts. This Act provides a Criminal Code of its own,<sup>6</sup> and a special procedure for the trial of offenders by Court-martial.<sup>7</sup> It also lays down a list of persons who are subject to military law.<sup>8</sup>

77. Principle.—This section is enacted ex majori cautela, for, the enactments, purporting to be thereby saved, are from their very nature unaffected by the Code. The saving of special or local law is in accordance with the general principle generalia specialibus non derogant.<sup>9</sup> These certainly required to be saved in view of the sweeping provisions of section 2 which, as observed by the Madras High Court, "has either no operation at all, or else, as I believe it to have done, it repealed all existing penal enactments in force on the date from which the Code was to come into operation. Then the effect of section 5 was to qualify this general repeal, and to declare that notwithstanding it, offences defined by special and local laws should continue to be punishable as heretofore. It may be that it was not competent to the local Legislature to repeal or affect the provisions of some of the laws enumerated in section 5 ; but that is immaterial so far as special and local laws are concerned, for clearly they might have been, and but for section 5, would, as I conceive, have been repealed. If, therefore, a person were required to ascertain from the Penal Code what acts and omissions are punishable in British India as offences, he would properly answer that it appeared from section 2 and section 5 that all acts or omissions contrary to the provisions of the Code itself, or of the provisions of special and local laws and some other laws enumerated in section 5, and these alone and none others were punishable as offences."<sup>10</sup>

78. Meaning of Words.—"Is intended to repeal," that is, as there was no intention, there should be no effect. Though the words may convey that sense,

(25) Repealed by 5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 6, Government of India Act, 1915.

(1) See now the Army Act, 44 & 45 Vict., c. 58, as continued and amended by subsequent Annual Army Acts.

(2) The word "sailors" was inserted by the amending Act of 1934 (Act XXXV of 1934).

(3) For the words "and soldiers" the words "soldiers or airman" were substituted by the Repealing and Amending Act, 1927 (Act X of 1927).

(4) 24 & 25 Vict., c. 67, s. 22 : 32 & 33 Vict., c. 98, s. 3. All Statutes bearing on the Government of India were formally repealed, and consolidated in the Government of India Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61 ; now see Ib. of 1935 (25 & 26 Geo. V., c. 42).

(5) 44 & 45 Vict., c. 58.

(6) 44 & 45 Vict., c. 58, ss. 4-44.

(7) Ib., ss. 45-75.

(8) Ib., ss. 175-183.

(9) "General words do not derogate from special." General words do not repeal or modify special legislation—Seward v. Vera, 10 App. Cas. 68 ; Hawkins v. Gathercole, 6 De M. & G. 1.

(10) 3 M. H. C. R. (App.) 11.

nevertheless they should not be so construed. "Special or local law": "Special law" is defined to be a law applicable to a particular subject,<sup>11</sup> e.g., the Opium Act,<sup>12</sup> and a "Local law" is applicable only to a particular part of British India.<sup>13</sup> The meaning of this clause is that where the special or local law is in conflict with the Code, the latter shall not apply. But where there is no conflict, effect may be given to both.<sup>14</sup> This section is, thus, a saving clause to section 2, and might have been added as its proviso. It was, as Innes, J. remarked, perhaps too long to be introduced into section 2 parenthetically, and was, on that account, and also perhaps for greater clearness, placed by itself.<sup>15</sup> If section 2 had stood alone without this section, its effect would have been to render inoperative such parts of the existing criminal law as provided for the punishment of acts and omissions which were contrary to the provisions of the old law for the punishment of acts and omissions which were not contrary to the provisions of the Code.

79. Saving of Other Laws.—As regards the exemption of the Acts of Parliament, the section merely enacts what would be the result without it. The saving of any of the provisions of any Act for punishing mutiny and desertion of officers and soldiers, refers alike to the English Statute. But the saving of any special or local law was necessary. For if the clause had not existed, the result of section 2 would have been necessarily to repeal all such laws. As it is, the clause is no authority for the proposition that the Code has no application to any case covered by any special or local law. For all that the clause enacts is that the Code shall not "repeal, vary, suspend or affect them." Therefore, if the provisions of the Code and the special or local Act coincide, it is perfectly competent to the Court to proceed under either. It is only in case of conflict between the two that the provisions of the special or local Act are preferably to be resorted to, if they are complete in themselves.<sup>16</sup>

80. Where, for instance, the accused took out a Municipal license for the possession of some carriages and horses and filed a schedule to his statement regarding the number of animals in respect of which he applied for the license, which was alleged to be false, and for which he was prosecuted under different sections of the Code. The accused moved the High Court in revision, and it was held that no prosecution under the Penal Code lay, as the Municipal Act itself provided a penalty for the act.<sup>17</sup> But this case is no authority for the proposition that whenever there is a special law providing a penalty, it alone should be applied to the exclusion of the general criminal law. So where the trustee of a temple misappropriated property belonging to it, the fact that the Regulation of 1817<sup>18</sup> provided for punishment for breach of trust on the part of trustees and managers of Hindu temples, is no reason for excluding the operation of the Code,<sup>19</sup> unless, of course, there be anything in the special or local Act to exclude its operation.<sup>20</sup>

81. Hence, where, for instance, the Mutiny Act<sup>21</sup> provides that British soldiers serving in India or its dependencies may be tried by a general Court-martial, the provision being merely permissive does not exclude jurisdiction of the civil tribunal.<sup>22</sup> So a person offending against the Police Act and the Code may be proceeded against under either,<sup>23</sup> and the fact that he was convicted under one Act rather than the other is then immaterial,<sup>24</sup> though, of course, in such a case he could not be convicted under both the Acts.<sup>25</sup>

(11) S. 41, post.

(12) McDonell, 3 R. 524.

(13) S. 42, post.

(14) Ramachandrappa, 6 M. 249; Nageshappa, 20, B. 543; Bayne, 8 Bom. L. R. 414; Sadasiva Pillai, 1 Weir 26; Jiwaram (1932) A. 69, but contra in Chandi Pershad v. Abdur Rahman, 22 C. 131.

(15) 3 M. H. C. R. (App.) 11.

(16) Chandi Pershad v. Abdur Rahman, 22 C. 131; Jiwaram; (1932) A. 69.

(17) Ib.

(18) S. 16.

(19) Anon, 1 M. 55.

(20) Imam Baksh, (1885) P. R. No. 10.

(21) (1878) 41 Vict., c. 10 (An Act for Punishing Mutiny and Desertion, and for the Better Payment of the Army and their Quarters).

(22) Maguire, 5 C. 124.

(23) Fatteh Khan, (1874) P. R. No. 11.

(24) Kassimuddin, 8 W. R. (Cr.) 55; Gopal Sein, 8 W. R. (Cr.) 16.

(25) Hussun Ali, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 49.

82. And so, it is now provided in the General Clauses Act that "where an act or omission constitutes an offence under two or more enactments, then the offender shall be liable to be prosecuted and punished under any of those enactments, but shall not be liable to be punished twice for the same offence."<sup>1</sup> But this, of course, assumes that there is nothing in the one to exclude the operation of the other. For instance, such would be presumed to be the case where the offence is merely a delict under a special Act,<sup>2</sup> which does not expressly save the provisions of the general criminal law. In other words, where a special or local Act prescribes its own penalties they are presumed to be exhaustive, unless there is anything in the Act to save the general law. It may be added that, as a rule, where an act is punishable both under the Code as well as under a special or local law, the preferable course is to convict under the special law and not under the Code,<sup>3</sup> both because specialia generalibus derogant<sup>4</sup> as well as because the special Acts were primarily constituted to punish such delinquencies. But the practice of the Courts on this point lacks unanimity.<sup>5</sup>

83. Preservation of Common Law Rights.—Besides the special and local laws hereby preserved, the Code has not, it was said, affected the common law rights possessed by the superior Courts of this country. In England, the superior Courts of Record have the most extensive jurisdiction in respect of contempt. In all cases of contempt, a superior Court may fine the offender, order him into custody, or take security for his good behaviour, and this, although an indictable offence has been committed. Any further or threatened acts may be restrained by injunction. These inherent powers of summary committal attaching to the superior Courts of England were held available also to the Indian High Courts.

84. So far as regards India, this was settled by a decision of the Privy Council, which decided that a contempt of Court of the High Court, being contempt of the Court of Record was punishable by it, independently of this Code, and that its order was, therefore, not open to appeal or revision.<sup>6</sup> But this power extends only to the imposition of the sentence of fine or imprisonment. It does not confer on the Court the power to disbar an advocate, against which he may appeal.<sup>7</sup>

85. But, it was said, that these are the powers which the High Courts have inherited from their predecessors the late Supreme Courts. They are, therefore, the powers which exclusively belong to them, and are not possessed by other Courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction, e.g., the Chief Courts or the Courts of the Judicial Commissioner. These and the other inferior Courts have their jurisdiction confined to commit for contempts committed in facie curiæ and not to those committed out of Court.<sup>8</sup> Nor was the High Court held to possess the jurisdiction to punish as an offence, in a summary proceeding, conduct in relation to a proceeding in the mofussil criminal courts, such as comments on a case pending before those courts, as even in the case of the High Court at Calcutta, such jurisdiction was not inherited from

(1) Act X of 1897, s. 26, Ramachandrappa, 6 M. 249; Sadasiva Pillai, 1 Weir 26; Bayne, 8 Bom. L. R. 414.

(2) Chandi Pershad v. Abdur Rahman, 22 C. 131 (139), a case under the Bengal Municipal Act.

(3) Bokoo, (1864) W. R. 21; 3 M. H. C. R. (App.) 11; Kuloda Prasad Majumdar, 11 C. W. N. 100; Rup Deb, 11 A. L. J. 340.

(4) "Things special take from things general." In a case (Hussun Ali, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 49) where the prisoner had been convicted twice over for the same act, both under the Code as well as a special Act. Turner, J., quashed the conviction under the special law, but no reasons are given for the preference—probably the three months' sentence already undergone by the prisoner would have been too severe under the local Acts (Cattle Trespass Act).

(5) In conflict the Code applied in Hussun Ali, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 49; Ramachandrappa, 6 M. 249; special law applied—Bokoo, (1864) W. R. (Cr.) 21; 3 M. H. C. R. (App.) 11; Chandi Pershad v. Abdur Rahman, 22 C. 131; Sadasiva Pillai, (1865) 1 Weir 26; Bayne, 1 Bom. L. R. 414; Rup Deb, (1913) 11 A. L. J. 340.

(6) Surendranath Banerjee v. High Court, 10 C. 109, P. C., following Rainy v. The Justices of Sierra Leone, 8 Moo. P. C., 47 (54); McDermott v. The Justices of British Guiana, 5 Moo. P. C. (N. S.) 466.

(7) Smith v. Justices of Sierra Leone, 3 Moo. P. C. 367 (368), Proceedings are of a quasi-criminal character.—Weston v. Bengalee, 15 C. W. N. 771.

(8) S. 228, post and ss. 477, 487, Cr. P. C.

any of its three abolished predecessors—the Supreme Court, the Sudder Dewany and the Sudder Nizamat Adalats and in any of the other High Courts was not vested by the Charter Act,<sup>9</sup> or the Letters Patents under it, as such conduct is not contempt of the High Court, nor does the High Court's power of superintendence over the mofussil courts imply any power of protecting those courts from improper interference.<sup>10</sup>

86. But though their Lordships of the Privy Council had supported the assumption of jurisdiction by the High Courts in cases of contempt of Courts Act. contempts, their decision is not easily reconcilable with provisions of this section. But that uncertainty has now been set at rest by the enactment of the Contempt of Courts Act<sup>11</sup> which regularizes and regulates the jurisdiction of the courts in dealing with that offence.

87. This enactment protects the Court ; but it is still a question whether counsel in India can invoke the aid of the English common law and claim the same absolute privilege which their confreres enjoy in England. That they cannot appears to be clear, though the analogy of cases relating to contempt of court might suggest an exception, for which, however, there is no legislative sanction. The subject will be found discussed under s. 499.

---

(9) Government of India Act, 1915, ss. 101-114 (5 & 6 Geo. V., c. 6) now repealed by ib. of 1935. Davies, (1906) 1 K. B. 32; Venkat Row, 21 M. L. J. 832.

(10) Governor v. Koli Lal, 20 I. C. (C.) 81; (11) Act XII of 1926.

CHAPTER II.

GENERAL EXPLANATIONS.

6. Throughout this Code every definition of an offence, every penal provision and every illustration of every such definition or penal provision, shall be understood subject to the exceptions contained in the chapter<sup>12</sup> entitled "General Exceptions," though those exceptions are not repeated in such definition, penal provision or illustration.

Definitions in the Code to be understood subject to exceptions.

Illustrations.

(a) The sections in this Code, which contain definitions of offences, do not express that a child under seven years of age cannot commit such offences; but the definitions are to be understood subject to the general exception<sup>13</sup> which provides that nothing shall be an offence which is done by a child under seven years of age.

(b) A, a Police-officer, without warrant, apprehends Z, who has committed murder. Here A is not guilty of the offence of wrongful confinement; for he was bound by law to apprehend Z, and therefore the case falls within the general exception<sup>14</sup> which provides that "nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is bound by law to do it."

88. Analogous Law.—The first illustration is based on s. 76, illustration (b).

89. Principle.—This chapter is for the most part an elaborate interpretation clause. It is a key to the interpretation of the whole Code. The leading terms are here defined and explained, and the meanings, thus announced, are steadily adhered to throughout the subsequent chapters. Sir James Stephen suggests that the object of this chapter is to prevent captious Judges from wilfully misunderstanding the Code, and cunning criminals from evading its provisions. It does not provide explanations for all cases indiscriminately, but only for those cases where difficulty may arise, when it will be necessary to refer to this chapter to see what the meaning of the Code is.<sup>15</sup>

90. The object of this section is to state that the Code has been drawn upon the assumption of absence of all exceptional and extenuating circumstances which have been brought together under the head of "General Exceptions" and which, therefore, control the entire Code. Therefore, for the purpose of seeing whether any act or omission constitutes an offence, it is not sufficient merely to look to within the four corners of the sections, but also to see if the act or omission is covered by the general exceptions. The regulation of exceptions to a general chapter has made the Act more compendious and intelligible, but it is a system which has not been followed in the drafting of several Statutes in England.

7. Every expression which is explained in any part of this Code, is used in every part of this Code in conformity with the explanation.

Sense of expression once explained.

91. Analogous Law.—This section is in accordance with the maxim of common law: Inclusio unius est exclusio alterius.<sup>16</sup> So referring to this clause Holloway, J., said that to say that every expression "shall have a particular meaning everywhere," is to say that it shall have no other meaning anywhere. The point, therefore, is to ascertain the meaning of that explanation, and if the words, taken grammatically, have a definite, certain and unequivocal meaning, if they constitute

(12) Chapter IV, infra.

(13) In s. 82, infra.

(14) In s. 76, infra.

(15) (1860) Proceedings of Council, p. 1261.

(16) "The inclusion of one is the exclusion of another," or "expressio unius est exclusio alterius" (The mention of one is the exclusion of another).

a perfectly complete expression susceptible grammatically of that one unequivocal meaning and of that only, then, however absurd and pernicious the consequences, that meaning is to be followed. "If, however, the expression does not include the complete thought of the Legislature or if the words are equally susceptible of several meanings, we are to seek in other parts of the same Statute, or, in other Statutes certainly in those in pari materia with this, the one of the several possible meanings which ought to be put upon the words."<sup>17</sup>

92. Principle.—All terms explained in the Code bear the Code meaning throughout the Act; so that, if a term is used in one sense in one place, it must be taken to have been used in the same sense in other places as well. If, therefore, that sense, when so applies, is, in any concatenation in the Code, found to be absurd, then, it is sufficient repudiation of its meaning in conjunction with words, though it may then seem appropriate.

8. The pronoun "he" and its derivatives are used of any person, whether male or female.
Gender.

93. Analogous Law.—This section really means what is provided by the English Interpretation Act, 1889,<sup>18</sup> which enacts as follows:—

"1. In this Act and in every Act passed after the year 1850, whether before or after the commencement of this Act, unless the contrary intention appears:—

"(a) words importing the masculine gender shall include females; and

"(b) words in the singular shall include the plural, and words in the plural shall include the singular."

This provision is enacted so far as regards India in the General Clauses Act<sup>19</sup> as follows:—

"13. In all Acts of the Governor-General in Council and Regulations, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context—

"(1) words importing the masculine gender shall be taken to include females; and

"(2) words in the singular shall include the plural, and vice versa."

94. Principle.—Though the section states that the pronoun "he" and its derivatives are used of any person whether male or female, the language of the section itself is either inaccurate or inadequate to express the sense it purports to convey. For, if the section be held to declare that the pronoun "he" is everywhere used in the Code even to denote a female, it is only partially true, for there are sections in which the appropriate pronoun has been and could not but be used.<sup>20</sup> And yet having regard to the last section, this should not have been the case. But, though the language of the section is inapt, its meaning is clear, for it means no more than that the pronoun "he" includes also females.

9. Unless the contrary appears from the context, words importing the singular number include the plural number, and words importing the plural number include the singular number.
Number.

95. Analogous Law.—The section conveys the sense expressed in section 2 of the English Interpretation Act,<sup>21</sup> and section 13 of the General Clauses Act,<sup>22</sup> cited under the last section.

96. Meaning of Words.—"The contrary appears," that is, unless the contrary intention appears.

10. The word "man" denotes a male human being of any age: the word "woman" denotes a female human being of any age.
"Man": Woman."

97. Analogous Law.—The term "man" is here defined in its restricted popular sense as denoting only a human being of the male sex, of any age, but not

(17) 3 M. H. C. R. (App.) 11.

(18) 52 & 53 Vict., c. 63, s. 1.

(19) Act X of 1897, s. 13.

(20) E.g., ss. 354, 375, 493, 494 Expl. 498.

(21) 52 & 53 Vic., c. 63, s. 1; Tatia Mahadeo, 17 I.C. (B.) 794.

(22) Act X of 1897.

one in the womb. The term "man," as used in the Representation of the People Act, 1867<sup>23</sup> was in one case<sup>24</sup> so interpreted overruling the contention made for the suffragettes that it must be interpreted generically as including all persons of the human species; but Byles, J., though conceding that the term was so used in scientific treatises on zoology or fossil organic remains, held that it could not be interpreted in that sense in a Parliamentary Statute.<sup>25</sup>

98. Principle.—In the language of Byles, J., in the case last cited "it is a well-known rule in the construction of Statutes, that, as they are framed for the guidance of the people, their language is to be construed in its ordinary and popular sense."<sup>1</sup> Therefore, since the ordinary and popular sense of the word "man" is confined to denote a male person, the utility of the section becomes apparent.

99. Meaning of Words.—"Of any age" implies that the human being must be sensate. A human foetus, if living, is a human being within the comprehension of this term. A child of six is, of course, a man or a woman according to its sex.<sup>2</sup>

11. The word "person" includes any Company or Association, or body of persons, whether incorporated or not.
"Person."

100. Analogous Law.—The following explanation of the term "person" occurs in section 19 of the English Interpretation Act<sup>3</sup> and section 3 (39) of the General Clauses Act.<sup>4</sup>

"S. 19. In this Act and in every Act passed after the commencement of this Act the expression 'person' shall, unless the contrary intention appears, include any body of persons corporate or unincorporate."

"S. 3 (39). Person shall include any company or association or body of individuals, whether incorporated or not."

101. Meaning of "Person."—The term "person" in its primary and ordinary sense means and includes a human being, whether a man, woman or child. It is used in that sense in ordinary parlance and in many sections of the Code.<sup>5</sup> But it is not invariably so used. For there it includes not only such natural beings but also fictitious persons such as a company or association.<sup>6</sup> In this respect, the term follows the connotation which it has received in English Law.<sup>7</sup>

102. "Prima facie the word "person" in a public Statute includes a corporation as well as a natural person."<sup>8</sup> The definition makes this authoritatively clear, but as it merely enunciates a permissible rule of construction, it leaves the matter as to the particular sense in which it is used in a particular juxtaposition in the Code undecided. Indeed, the latitude here given may, at least, lead to four senses in accordance with the context and the combination in which the word is used. It may, for instance, mean (i) only a natural person, or (ii) only an artificial person, or (iii) invariably both, or lastly (iv) sometimes one and sometimes the other. The particular sense in which the term has been used in the various sections will be found discussed in the ensuing commentary. But, while the term, as described here, includes some fictitious persons, it does not include all. For instance, an idol or an endowment is a juridical person like a company or association, but it is not comprised in the terms. On the other hand, the term is wide enough to include Government as representative of the whole community. And so, in one case, Melville, J., so held in connection with the term as used in section 27 which enacts that "when property is in possession

(23) 30 & 31 Vict., c. 102, s. 3.

(24) Charitan v. Lings, L. R. 4 C. P. 374 (392).

(25) Ib.

(1) Ib., p. 392.

(2) Tatia, 17 I. C. (B.) 794.

(3) 52 & 53 Vict., c. 63.

(4) Act X of 1897.

(5) E.g., 56, 73, 84-87, 100, 105, 114, 137, 139, 141, 149-151, 153, 157, 159, 170, 192, 216, 220-225, 278, 297, 298, 490, 491, 497 and ch. xvi.

(6) "Club" is a person; Cooke, 23 I.C. (Bur.) 195.

(7) Per Lord Blackburn in Pharmaceutical Society v. London & Co., Supply Association, 5 App. Cas. 857; so the word "person" in the Legal Practitioners' Act (XVIII of 1879), s. 6, was in view of the context, previous history and general policy held to exclude a woman—Regina Gaha, 44 C. 290 S. B.

(8) Ib., per Lord Selbourne, C.J.

of a person's wife, clerk, or servant, on account of that person, it is in that person's possession within the meaning of the Code." It was accordingly held that possession of wood in the Government Forest of a forest officer was possession of the Government within the meaning of that section.<sup>9</sup>

103. The term "incorporate" implies legal recognition, incorporation being the formation of a legal body with the quality of perpetual existence and succession, except as limited by the Royal Charter, or Act effecting the incorporation.<sup>10</sup>

"Incorporate."

12. The word "public" includes any class of the public or any community.

"Public."

104. Analogous Law.—This section only defines "public" as a substantive, but it does not declare that its derivatives shall have allied meanings. For instance, "publication" is communication to the public but not necessarily to the public here described. Again, a "public meeting" may be open to the public in the sense here conveyed, or it may not. A public performance is not open only to "any community," though it is open to the "class of the public" which pays for the admission.

105. Meaning of "Public."—In popular parlance the word "public" means the general body of mankind or of a nation, state or community. It is also sometimes used in a more restricted sense of denoting only a particular body or aggregation of people as an author's public.<sup>11</sup> But as used in the Code it may assume a still further variety. For, as including "any class of the public" the term implies any sub-division of the public ever so small but still large enough to form a "class" and which excludes the possibility of a mere individual. So again, the term "community" is used here interchangeably with "public", and as a community may consist of a sect, race or a body of men united on any given principle, the term is sufficiently wide to include only a collection of men possessing some common bond of union. So a bequest in trust "for the community of the convent at A was held to be one for the benefit of the members for the time being of that convent."<sup>12</sup> The members of a community may, therefore, fluctuate, but the community remains unchanged so long as its central principle remains. But the term "public" is a wider term and means only the people spoken of collectively. It consists of classes and communities, but the principles that they possess in common need not be shared by the public at large. In other words, "public" is a generic term of which class and communities are species.

13. The word "Queen" denotes the Sovereign for the time being of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

"Queen."

106. Analogous Law.—It is similarly provided by the General Clauses Act that "Her Majesty" or "the Queen" shall include Her successors.<sup>13</sup> So now, "the King" would denote His Majesty King George V and his successors. In constitutional monarchies, such as England, the name of the Sovereign is, ordinarily, used to denote the State. So, while, in England and this country, offences against the state are often described as offences against the Queen, in republican countries they are described as offences against the State, and indeed, this nomenclature has been adopted even in the Code, as the heading to that class of offences dealt with in Chapter VI.<sup>14</sup> And, in the sections treating with such offence, the term "Queen" has, of course, been used in its impersonal sense as typifying the constituted authority of the State. Similarly, while the name of the King or Queen is invariably used as the prosecutor in cognizable cases, the term is properly understood to mean that the prosecution has been instituted by or under the authority of Government. In this sense the King becomes a juridical person, and in this sense, it is true that the King

(9) Hanmanta, 1 B. 610 (622).

(12) Bradshaw v. Jackman, 21 I. L. R. Ir.

(10) See s. 41, Indian Companies Act 12. (VI of 1882).

(13) S. 3 (23), Act X of 1897.

(11) WEBSTER.

(14) Ss. 121-130.

never dies. It is in this sense that the term has been used in the next section where the phrase "servant of the Queen" means no more than a Government servant.

14. The words "servant of the Queen" denote all officers or servants continued, appointed or employed in India by or under the authority of the said Statute 21 & 22 Victoria, Chapter 106, entitled "An Act for the Better Government of India," or by or under the authority of the Government of India or any Government.

107. Analogous Law.—The term "Government of India" is defined in section 16 and "Government" in section 17. The 21 and 22 Vict., c. 106 referred to, and now cited as the Government of India Act,<sup>15</sup> was passed in 1858, and it had the effect of placing British India under the direct Government of the Crown. It lays down the regulations for the conduct of the Government of India, and the officers and servants continued, appointed or employed under its authority are:—

The Secretary of State (s. 4) Under Secretaries (s. 7); Members of Council of India (ss. 15, 16, now s. 3); Establishment of the Secretary of State (s. 21, now s. 17); Vice-President of Council (s. 29, now s. 7); Governor-General for India (s. 29, now s. 33); Governors of Presidencies (s. 29, now s. 46); Advocate-General (s. 29, now s. 114); Members of the Council of the Governor-General and Governors (s. 32, ss. 63-84); Covenanted Civil Servants (s. 33, now ss. 97-100). Cadets and other departmental appointments (s. 58, now s. 19).

108. All the officers thereunder enumerated are "servants of the Queen," but the list is far from exhaustive, for to them must be added all servants appointed by or under the authority of the Government of India or any Government and which would include all persons commonly designated as Gazetted and non-Gazetted officers. In other words, all officers whose appointment is made by or requires the sanction of any local Government or Administration are servants of the King. But though they are servants of the King, they are not necessarily "public servants" within the meaning assigned to that term in s. 21.

15. The words "British India" denote the territories which are or may become vested in Her Majesty by the Statute 21 & 22 Victoria, Chapter 106, entitled "An Act for the Better Government of India."

109. Analogous Law.—This section ended with the words "except the Settlement of the Prince of Wales's Island, Singapore, and Malacca," but they were struck out by an Amending Act of 1891.<sup>16</sup>

The Statute 21 & 22 Victoria, Chapter 106, known as the Government of India Act, 1858, being in parts repealed and replaced by several subsequent statutes, has now been (except s. 4) wholly repealed by the consolidating Government of India Act, 1915.<sup>17</sup> (§ 8)

110. The definition of British India as here given is practically the same as was afterwards adopted in the General Clauses Act of 1868<sup>18</sup> now re-enacted with slight verbal variation in the Consolidating Act of 1897.<sup>19</sup>

111. As this Act applies only to Acts made after its commencement on the 11th March 1897, the Code, as originally enacted and amended up to that date, remains unaffected. But it may be a question whether the definition in the General Clauses Act would apply to subsequent amendments of the Code. The fact that the Code has given a working definition of the term would not "be anything repugnant in the subject or context"<sup>20</sup> within the meaning of the Act so as to give preference to the Code definition, and yet, if the definition of the Act of 1897 be adopted, there are noticeable changes which are by no means susceptible of an easy reconciliation

(15) The Short Titles Act, 1896 (59 & 60 Vict., c. 14); 21 & 22 Vict., c. 106, is now re-enacted as the Government of India Act, 1915 (5 & 6 Geo. V., c. 61), in certain parts amended by the Act of 1916 (6 & 7 Geo. V., c. 37); 9 & 10 Geo. V., c. 101.

(16) Act XII of 1891, sch. I.

(17) 5 & 6 Geo. V., c. 61, sch. IV.

(18) Act I of 1861, s. 2 (8). Repealed by Act X of 1897.

(19) General Clauses Act (X of 1897), s. 3 (7).

(20) S. 3, Act X of 1897.

with the definition of the Code. For, while it is easy to see what territories have become vested in His Majesty, it is not equally easy to say what places are "governed" by him. That the term "governed" implies direct administration may be conceded, but it is not always easy to say when "Government" ends and "management" or "control" begins. So far as regards Native States, the English Interpretation Act defines their relation to the Government of India.<sup>21</sup> But this definition does not find place in the Indian Act. And even if it did, there still remains an intermediate class of states, and states from time to time placed within political control in which it may be difficult to define the nature of supervision exercised by Government.

112. The territories ordinarily classed as forming British India have already been set out under section 1.

16. The words "Government of India" denote the Governor-General of India in Council, or during the absence of the Governor-General of India from his Council, the President in Council, or the Governor-General of India alone, as regards the powers which may be lawfully exercised by them or him respectively.

113. Analogous Law.—This definition corresponds per littera et verba with the definition of the same term in the General Clauses Acts of 1868<sup>22</sup> and of 1897.<sup>23</sup> It is not defined in the English Interpretation Act.<sup>24</sup>

114. The term as here and in the General Clauses Act defined means not the administration of India, but the chief executive officers in whom is vested the authority for the administration of the country. In other words, it means the men by whom the administration<sup>25</sup> of India is carried on, and not the system by which that administration is regulated. But this is not the only sense in which the phrase is used, for it is used in that sense only "as regards the powers which may be lawfully exercised by them or him respectively." The other sense in which the term is commonly understood is not here recognized, because reference to it was unnecessary in the Code. But it is, nevertheless, a connotation of the term which has found its use in section 124-A of the Code since added to it.

17. The word "Government" denotes the person or persons authorized by law to administer executive government in any part of British India.

115. Analogous Law.—The term "Government" here is not used in its generic sense as implying the form of government by employing a body of men exercising an executive authority in British India, but only the person or persons who exercise it. The term Government includes Local Government<sup>1</sup> and would now include all Provincial Governments within its meaning.

116. A special meaning has been given to the term "Government" as used in this section read with ss. 255-263-A (both inclusive) which deal with the counterfeiting of Government Stamps.<sup>2</sup>

117. As regards the definition of "Government" in this section it is to be observed that the executive administrator of any part of British India is "Government." It is not necessary that that part should be a presidency or a province, or even a division. For the part may be ever so small; if the person is legally empowered to administer executive government therein, he is the "Government" within the meaning of this section. Now, what is an executive government? It would seem

(21) "India" shall mean British India together with any territories of any Native Prince or Chief under the suzerainty of Her Majesty exercised through the Governor-General of India, or through any Governor or other officer subordinate to the Governor-General of India, s. 18 (5) Interpretation Act (1889).

(22) S. 2 (g), Act I of 1868.

(23) S. 3 (22), Act X of 1897.

(24) 52 & 53 Vict., c. 63.

(25) Act X of 1897.

(1) The General Clauses Act (Act X of 1897) s. 3 (2).

(2) Cf. S. 2 of the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act (Act III of 1895).

that the collection of revenue and the maintenance of peace are its chief functions, and a person empowered to maintain peace and collect revenue would be "Government" of that place. The Collector or Deputy Commissioner of a District would, therefore, be the "Government" of his District.<sup>3</sup> And so it has been held that the Collector even acting in the management of a Khas Mahal, the property of the Government, is the Government within the meaning of this section.<sup>4</sup>

118. But the word has a much wider significance in sections 255-263-A, Govt. Stamps. which refer to offences relating to Government stamps, in which the term includes not only the officers here described, but also persons "authorized by law to administer executive government in any part of India, and also in any part of Her Majesty's dominions or in any foreign country."<sup>5</sup> This definition was added to the Code as a result of the Vienna Convention, and it was inserted at the instance of the Post Office to prevent the use of fictitious stamps on letters received from abroad.

119. In these sections, then, the term "Government" includes the executive government of Native States and of all British colonies and dependencies and foreign States wherever situated.

18. The word "Presidency" denotes the territories subject to the "Presidency." Government of a Presidency.

120. Analogous Law.—The General Clauses Act<sup>6</sup> defines "Presidency-town," but not "Presidency" as follows :—

"3 (41). 'Presidency-town' shall mean the local limits for the time being of the Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the High Court of Presidency-town. Judicature at Fort William, Madras, or Bombay, as the case may be."

121. The term "Presidency" is a survival from the times of the East India Company who had divided its possessions in the East into three Presidencies, each Presidency being under a Council of 12 to 16 members, of whom one was the President or Governor, who carried on the administration of his Presidency by a majority of votes. The method of government proved cumbrous and dilatory and several Acts were passed to reform it. In 1773, the Regulating Act created a Governor-General of Bengal for the Presidency of Bengal, who was to be assisted by four Councillors and whose supremacy over the other three presidencies of Madras, Bombay and Benecoolen was therein declared.<sup>7</sup> The Presidency of Benecoolen ceased to exist in 1824, and the Presidency of Bengal was abolished in 1854 when a Lieutenant-Governor was appointed to administer Bengal. It was reconstituted in 1912.<sup>8</sup> There were, therefore, only two presidencies those of Madras and Bombay from 1854 to 1912, when the three Presidencies were again restored.

122. The Government of India Act, 1935, has abolished all distinctions between the Presidencies and the provinces, though it saves the powers exercised by the Presidency High Courts as successors of the old Supreme Court and the Sadar Diwani Adalat.<sup>9</sup>

123. It is to be noted that the definition of "Presidency" here given is different from the definition of the "Presidency-town" as given in the General Clauses Act.<sup>10</sup> Calcutta, for instance, continued to be the Presidency-town under the General Clauses Act, even when Bengal had ceased to be a Presidency.

(3) Bajoo Singh, 26 C. 158.

(4) Ib.

(5) Cf. S. 263-A (4), post.

(6) Act X of 1897.

(7) In Sumatra founded in 1686 and delivered to the Dutch on 11th March 1824 in exchange for Malacca and its dependencies (5 Geo. IV, c. 108).

(8) By Proclamation referred to in the Bengal, &c., Laws Act (VII of 1912).

(9) The Government of India Act, 1935.

(10) Act X of 1897.

19. The word "Judge" denotes not only every person who is officially designated as a Judge, but also every person who is empowered by law to give, in any legal proceeding, civil or criminal, a definitive judgment, or a judgment which, if not appealed against, would be definitive, or a judgment which, if confirmed by some other authority, would be definitive, or who is one of a body of persons, which body of persons is empowered by law to give such a judgment.

Illustrations.

(a) A collector exercising jurisdiction in a suit under Act X of 1859<sup>11</sup> is a Judge.

(b) A Magistrate exercising jurisdiction in respect of a charge on which he has power to sentence to fine or imprisonment with or without appeal, is a Judge.

(c) A member of a panchayat which has power, under Regulation VII, 1816, of the Madras Code, to try and determine suits, is a Judge.

(d) A Magistrate exercising jurisdiction in respect of a charge on which he has power only to commit for trial to another Court, is not a Judge.

124. Meaning of "Judge."—In its ordinary and normal sense the word "Judge" means only a Judge of the High Court.<sup>12</sup> It does not mean a presiding officer of any Court. But the term has been enlarged as to its meaning in a number of Acts both here as well as in England, so that, in law, it may now mean any person competent to deliver a definitive judgment. So in the old Code of Civil Procedure,<sup>13</sup> a "Judge" was the presiding officer of a Court, and this definition has been preserved in the present Code. The same extended sense is conveyed by the Code of Criminal Procedure in which "Judicial proceeding" is defined to be any proceeding in the course of which evidence is, or may be, legally taken on oath.<sup>14</sup> Of course, the judicial proceeding as here understood, need not necessarily be of a "Judge," for a person may be empowered to administer oath, and not competent to deliver a definitive judgment. He may be only competent to submit a report or record an opinion. Illustration (d) furnishes an apt illustration of this. It is, thus, clear that the term, "judicial proceeding", is wider, and does not imply proceedings of a Judge, though all proceedings of a Judge are judicial proceedings.

125. According to the definition, every person officially designated a Judge is a Judge. Besides Judges of the High Court, Sessions Judges, District Judges, Assistant Sessions Judges and Subordinate Judges are ordinarily persons so designated. Besides these, persons who are authorized to give<sup>15</sup> a definitive judgment in a legal proceeding<sup>16</sup> are also included. Now, what is a definitive judgment? As used here, it means no more than a final judgment. A person, then, who is competent to deliver a final judgment, whether subject to confirmation on appeal or not,

(11) Act X of 1859 (an Act to amend the law relating to the recovery of rent in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal) has been repealed in the Chota Nagpore Division of Bengal (except as to the District of Manbhum and the Tributary Mahals) by the Chota Nagpore Landlord and Tenant Procedure Act, 1879 (Bengal Act I of 1879). see now the Chota Nagpore Tenancy Act, 1908 (Beng. Act VI of 1908), and in the rest of Bengal (except as to Calcutta, Orissa and the Scheduled Districts) by the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1885 (VIII of 1885). It is now in force in the District of Manbhum, in the Darjeeling District and in part of the Jalpaiguri District in Bengal and such parts of it as are not inconsistent with the portions of Act VIII of 1885 which have been extended to the Orissa Division are in force in that Division.

Act X of 1859 had been repealed in the Province of Agra (except as to certain Scheduled Districts) by the United Provinces Tenancy Act, 1901 (II of 1901), and in the Central Provinces by the Central Provinces Tenancy Act, 1920 (I of 1920).

(12) Per Barke, B., in Elsley v. Kirby, 12 L. J. Ex. 97; Kissam v. Link. (1896) 1 Q. B. 574; Re Noyce, (1892) 1 Q. B. 642; Miles v. Presland, 4 My. & C. 431; Foster v. Edwards, 48 L. J. (Q. B.) 767; Seth v. Reading, 17 Q. B. D. 131.

(13) S. 2, Act XIV of 1882; now see s. 2 (8), Act V of 1908.

(14) S. 4 (m), Act V of 1898.

(15) "Judgment means the statement given by the Judge of the grounds of a decree or order," s. 2 (10), C. P. C. (Act V of 1908): In the Cr. P. C., Ch. XXVI (ss. 366-373) deals with Judgment.

(16) Co. Litt., 39a, 168a.

is a Judge. And so is a person who is a member of a Bench so empowered. A member of the Bench of Magistrates being, for instance, individually incompetent to deliver a definitive judgment, is, nevertheless, a Judge, because the Bench, of which he is a member, is so competent. But a Magistrate, as such, (except, of course, when expressly so empowered), entitled to certify an affidavit within the meaning of s. 539 of the Criminal Procedure Code, is not a judge.<sup>17</sup>

126. A judgment here means a formal adjudication upon any point claimed or contested by a party appearing before a Court. In the language of the Code it is the sentence of the law pronounced by the Court upon the matter contained in the record.<sup>18</sup> In a criminal case, a conviction is a judgment. But a miscellaneous interlocutory order is not.<sup>19</sup> But inasmuch as such orders are ordinarily passed by persons possessing the larger powers of delivering judgment, the distinction is, for the present purposes, immaterial.

127. Secondly, since the judgment must be delivered in a "legal proceeding" it is apprehended that a "legal proceeding" is not different from a "judicial proceeding" as defined in the Code of the Criminal Procedure.<sup>20</sup> Similar definition occurs in the English Bankers' Book Evidence Act, 1879 where the "legal proceeding" is defined to mean "any civil or criminal proceeding or enquiry in which evidence is, or may be given, and includes an arbitration."<sup>21</sup> The identity of the two is thus clearly established, for it is manifest that the definition of "judicial proceeding" is taken from the definition of "legal proceeding" in the English Statute.

20. The words "Court of Justice" denote a Judge who is empowered by law to act judicially alone, or a body of judges which is empowered by law to act judicially as a body, when such Judge or body of Judges is acting judicially.

Illustration.

A panchayat acting under Regulation VII, 1816, of the Madras Code, having power to try and determine suits, is a Court of Justice.

128. Analogous Law.—The Regulation referred to in the illustration has been repealed by the Madras Civil Courts Act.<sup>22</sup>

129. What is a Court.—"Court," says Lord Coke, "is a place where justice is judicially ministered, and is derived a cura quia in curiis publicis curas gerebant."<sup>23</sup> But this definition appears to be too narrow. For as Fry, L.J., observed, "A Court may perform various functions. The Court of Parliament is a Court, although many of its functions are not judicial. The members are, however, entitled to have absolute immunity for words there spoken. There are other Courts which are not Courts of Justice, but which are rather Courts of Investigation, e.g., a Coroner's Court."<sup>24</sup> So there are several Acts in which the term "Court" has received a definition of its own. But the Court, here intended, is the Court of Justice which, according to the definition, means a Judge or Bench of Judges when acting judicially. The term has, however, another significance, as meaning the place where justice is administered, which was originally its meaning, as Coke has pointed out in his definition.

130. It is to be observed that a Court of Justice is only properly so designated when the Judge or the body of Judges is acting judicially. And they can only act judicially when they are conducting judicial proceeding as before defined (§ 124). If they are only dealing with merely administrative business, they are not

(17) Ramchandra, 5 Pat. 110.

(18) R. v. Biggins, 26 J. P. 437.

(19) Definition of "Order" in C. P. C. (Act V of 1908), s. 2 (14).

(20) S. 4 (m), Cr. P. C.

(21) 42 & 43 Vict., c. 11.

(22) Act III of 1873.

(23) Co. Litt., 58a.

(24) Royal Aquarium v. Parkinson, (1892) 1 Q. B. 431.

a Court of Justice.<sup>25</sup> So a Court-martial, holding an enquiry into the conduct of an officer, cannot be said to be a Court of Justice, nor is their inquiry a judicial proceeding, though a witness examined by them without administering oath stands in the same situation as a witness giving evidence before a judicial tribunal.<sup>1</sup> So the London and County Council, when hearing applications for music and dancing licenses are not a Court, and therefore, not a Court of Justice.<sup>2</sup> So also a Poor Rate Assessment Committee is not a Court.<sup>3</sup> But an officer enquiring into an Income-Tax objection in this country would appear to be a Court of Justice as regards that inquiry, for his proceedings are declared to be "judicial" by the Act,<sup>4</sup> though otherwise the proceedings are merely administrative and not judicial. The Court of Admiralty is, of course, a Court of Justice,<sup>5</sup> and so are the Vice-Admiralty, and Vice-Admiralty Prize Court.<sup>6</sup>

21. The words "public servant" denote a person falling under "Public servant." any of the descriptions hereinafter following, namely :—

First.—Every Covenanted servant of the Queen ;

Second.—Every Commissioned Officer in the Military, [Naval or Air]<sup>7</sup> Forces of the Queen, while serving under the Government of India or any Government ;

Third.—Every Judge ;

Fourth.—Every officer of the Court of Justice whose duty it is, as such officer, to investigate or report on any matter of law or fact, or to make, authenticate, or keep any document, or to take charge or dispose of any property, or to execute any judicial process, or to administer any oath, or to interpret, or to preserve order in the Court ; and every person specially authorized by a Court of Justice to perform any of such duties ;

Fifth.—Every juryman, assessor or member of a panchayat assisting a Court of Justice or public servant ;

Sixth.—Every arbitrator or other person to whom any cause or matter has been referred for decision or report by any Court of Justice, or by any other competent public authority ;

Seventh.—Every person who holds any office by virtue of which he is empowered to place or keep any person in confinement ;

Eighth.—Every officer of Government whose duty it is, as such officer, to prevent offences, to give information of offences, to bring offenders to justice, or to protect the public health, safety or convenience ;

Ninth.—Every officer whose duty it is, as such officer, to take, receive, keep or expend any property on behalf of Government, or to make any survey, assessment or contract on behalf of Government, or to execute any revenue-process, or to investigate, or to report, on any matter affecting the pecuniary interests of Government, or to make, authenticate or keep any document relating to the pecuniary interests of Government, or to prevent the infraction of any law for the protection of the pecuniary interests of Government, and every officer in the service or pay of Government or remunerated by fees or commission for the performance of any public duty ;

(25) Royal Aquarium v. Parkinson, (1892) 1 Q. B. 409.

(1) Per Lord Cairns, L., in Dawkins v. Lord Rokeby, L. R. 7 H. L. 744 (754); O. A. from S. C. L. R. 8 Q. B. 255.

(2) Royal Aquarium v. Parkinson, (1892) 1 Q. B. 431.

(3) R. v. St. Mary Abbots, (1891) 1 Q. B. 378.

(4) S. 37, Income Tax Act (II of 1886).

(5) 26 & 27 Vict., c. 116, s. 3; 32 & 33 Vict., c. 91, s. 3; 33 & 34 Vict., c. 90, s. 30.

(6) 17 & 18 Vict., c. 18, s. 3; ib. c. 19, s. 3; 26 & 27 Vict., c. 24, s. 2; 36 & 37 Vict., c. 88, s. 2.

(7) The words "Naval or Air" were substituted for the words "or Naval" by the Repealing and Amending Act, 1927 (Act X of 1927).

Tenth.—Every officer whose duty is, as such officer, to take, receive, keep or expend any property, to make any survey or assessment, or to levy any rate or tax for any secular common purpose of any village, town or district, or to make, authenticate or keep any document for the ascertaining of the rights of the people of any village, town or district ;

Eleventh.—Every person who holds any office in virtue of which he is empowered to prepare, publish, maintain or revise an electoral roll or to conduct an election or part of an election.<sup>8</sup>

Illustration.

A Municipal Commissioner is a public servant.

Explanation 1.—Persons falling under any of the above descriptions are public servants, whether appointed by the Government or not.

Explanation 2.—Wherever the words “public servant” occur, they shall be understood of every person who is in actual possession of the situation of a public servant, whatever legal defect there may be in his right to hold that situation.

Explanation 3.—The word “election” denotes an election for the purpose of selecting members of any legislative, municipal or other public authority, of whatever character, the method of selection to which is by, or under, any law prescribed as by election.<sup>9</sup>

131. Analogous Law.—The term “public servant” bears some analogy to the term “servant of the Queen,” elsewhere defined.<sup>9</sup> Besides the persons comprised in the definition a large body of men have been so declared within the meaning of the section, by several local Acts.<sup>10</sup>

(8) Clause Eleventh and Explanation 3 have been added by S. 2 of the Indian Election Offences and Inquiries Act (Act XXXIX of 1920).

(9) S. 14, ante.

(10) The following are such Acts or Regulations arranged alphabetically :—a : Ajmere Government Wards Regulation (I of 1888) s. 11 (2) ; Allahabad University (XVIII of 1887) s. 18 (1) ; Angul District Railway (I of 1894) s. 56 ; Assam Labour and Emigration (VI of 1901) s. 4 (2) ; Assam Forest Regulation (VII of 1891) s. 69 ; b : Bengal Court of Wards (Bengal Act IX of 1879) ss. 5, 9-A ; Bengal Public Parks (II of 1904) s. 7 ; Births, Deaths and Marriages Registration (VI of 1886) s. 14 ; Boilers Act (V of 1923) s. 5 (5) ; British Baluchistan Forest Regulation (V of 1890) s. 36 ; British Burma Pilots (XII of 1883) s. 8 (2) ; Broach and Kaira Incumbered Estate (XXI of 1881) s. 33 ; Broach Thakurs Relief (XV of 1872) s. 17 ; [A Karkun employed to execute revenue process is a public servant ; Isab Musa, B. U. C. 117] ; Bombay Civil Courts (XIV of 1869) s. 33 ; Bombay Court of Wards (Bombay Act I of 1905) s. 2 (12) ; Bombay Local Boards (Bombay Act I of 1880) s. 71 ; Bombay Municipal (Bombay Act III of 1888) s. 521 ; Burma Canal (Burma Act II of 1905) s. 167 ; Burma Embankment (Burma Act IV of 1909) s. 12 ; Burma Forest (XI of 1881) s. 76 ; Burma Forest (IV of 1902) s. 75 ; Burma Municipalities (Burma Act III of 1898) ss. 44, 139 ; Burma Steam Boilers and Prime Movers (XVIII of 1882) s. 12 ; c : Calcutta Municipal (Bengal Act III of 1899) s. 646 ; Cattle Trespass (I of 1871) s. 6 ; Census Act (XVI of 1890) s. 3 (2) ; Central Provinces Court of

Wards (XXIV of 1899) s. 19 (2) ; Central Provinces Government Wards (XVII of 1885) s. 12 (2) ; Chhota Nagur Incumbered Estate (VI of 1876) s. 21 ; Chittagong Port Commissioners (Bengal Act of 1887) s. 63 ; Civil Courts (Bengal Act VI of 1871) s. 33 ; Coroners (IV of 1871) s. 5 ; Court of Wards (U. P. Act III of 1899) s. 30 ; d : Dourine (V of 1910) s. 4 (2) ; e : Embankment (XIII of 1877) s. 14 ; Emigration (XVII of 1908) 14 (2) ; Emigration (XXI of 1883) ss. 16 (4), 18 ; f : Factories (XII of 1911) s. 4 (6) ; g : Glanders and Farcy (XIII of 1869) s. 4 (2) ; h : Hazrare Forest Regulation (VI of 1893) s. 413 ; i : Inland Steam Vessels (VI of 1884) ss. 7, 38 ; k : Kanungos and Patwari (N. W. P. Act IX of 1889) s. 17 ; l : Land Record Maintenance (Bengal Act III of 1895) s. 33 ; Land Revenue Act (N. W. P. Act XIX of 1873) s. 35 ; m : Madras Canals & Ferries (Mad. Act II of 1890) s. 11 ; Madras District Municipal (Mad. Act IV of 1884) s. 41 ; Madras Forest (Mad. Act V of 1882) s. 60 ; Madras Forest (V of 1882) s. 66 ; Madras Labour Emigration (Mad. Act V of 1866) s. 3 ; Madras Local Boards (Mad. Act V of 1884) s. 43 ; [A Sanitary Inspector is a public servant, Tiruvengada, 21 M. 428] ; Madras Marriage and Divorce (XV of 1865) s. 23 ; Madras Municipal Act (Mad. Act I of 1884) s. 56 ; Madras Rivers Conservancy (Mad. Act VI of 1884) s. 23 ; Merchant Shipping (VII of 1880) s. 50 ; (V of 1883) s. 14 (2) ; Municipal (U. P. Act I of 1900) s. 51 ; Museum (Indian) (XXII of 1876) s. 14 ; n : N. W. P. and Oudh Land Revenue (U. P. Act III of 1901) s. 27 ; o : Oudh Talukdars Relief (XXIV of 1870) s. 22 ; p : Parsee Marriage and Divorce (XV of 1865) s. 23 ; Pegu and Sittang Canal (II of 1881)

132. Principle.—In all civilized countries, persons designated “the public servants” form a class by themselves as requiring special protection of the law and as, on the other hand, deserving specially rigorous treatment for abuse of power. Persons who are the embodiment of law and authority naturally possess many immunities and privileges, and they are visited by the correspondingly severe penalties of law, if they deviate from the course prescribed to them by their duty. The Code has accordingly prescribed exceptional pains and penalties to provide for offences committed by and against public servants.

133. The too comprehensive nature of the description of “public servant” was objected to at the time of the draft, but the Indian Law Commissioners defended it, adding: “Supposing the several descriptions he (Mr. Norton) specifies to be as comprehensive as he takes them to be, yet it does not appear to us that they are faulty in this respect, with reference to the provisions in the two chapters relating to public servants in the application of which recourse will be had to them. We think they will be found sufficiently distinct and definite for the purpose they are to serve. We have no apprehension that there will be any difficulty in determining who are positively excluded as not falling under any of the descriptions in clause 14.”<sup>11</sup>

134. Meaning of Words.—“Public Servant”: The section describes the term by enumeration. The term may generally be defined to signify any person duly appointed and invested with authority to administer any part of the executive power of the Crown or to execute any other public duty imposed by law, whether it be judicial, ministerial, or mixed. “Other person to whom any cause or matter has been referred for decision or report”: The “cause or matter” must be one in controversy.<sup>12</sup> “Every officer whose duty it is as such officer to take, etc., property”: This means a person employed to exercise to some extent delegated function of Government: he must be either himself armed with some authority of a representative character, or his duties must be immediately auxiliary to those of some one who is so armed.<sup>13</sup> For the meaning of other clauses see below.

135. Who are Public Servants?—This section does not define public servants, but describes them only by enumeration, which itself is merely illustrative and by no means exhaustive. Speaking generally, a “Public servant” must, firstly, be a servant, and secondly a public servant. It is not necessary that a servant should receive any salary or emoluments for his work, since an honorary servant discharging a public duty is as much a servant as a stipendiary servant in the pay of the Crown.<sup>14</sup> Thus a peon who was remunerated by a fee on processes served by him in a Collector’s Court,<sup>15</sup> or a candidate entertained without any pay in the Tahsil Office for learning work in the hope and expectation of eventually being taken on the staff<sup>16</sup> were both held to be public servants.

136. Secondly, it is essential that a public servant must be in charge of some public duty.<sup>17</sup> Public duty is no where defined in the Code, and no general

s. 14; Police (V of 1861) s. 8; Prisons (IX of 1894) s. 23; [A convict warder or overseer is a public servant. Muhammada, (1908) P. R. No. 22]; Punjab Steam Boilers and Prime Movers (Punj. Act II of 1902) s. 12; Punjab Military Transport (Punj. Act I of 1903) s. 4 (2); r: Railway Act (IX of 1890) ss. 4, 137 (1); Rangoon Port Commissioners (XV of 1879) s. 64; Rangoon Port (Burma Act IV of 1905) s. 107; Rangoon Victoria Memorial (Burma Act I of 1908) s. 4; Registration (XVI of 1908) s. 84; s: Sind Incumbered Estates (XX of 1896) s. 35; Small Cause Court (XV of 1882) s. 52; Steam Boilers (N. W. P. and Oudh Act I of 1899) s. 12 (3); Steamship (VII of 1884) ss. 9, 37 (3); t: Telegraph (XIII of 1885) s. 31; u: United Provinces District Board (U. P. Act III of 1906) s. 41; U. P. Steam Boilers and Prime Movers (U. P. Act

I of 1889) s. 12 (3); Upper Burma Oil Field Regulation (VI of 1910) s. 12; Upper Burma Registration Regulation (II of 1897) s. 7 (2); v: Victoria Memorial (X of 1903) s. 4.

(11) First Report, § 78. This section was clause 14 in the Draft Bill.

(12) Debi Din, (1886) A. W. N. 295.

(13) Ramajirav, 12 B. H. C. R. 1; Nizamuddin, 28 C. 344.

(14) Parmeshar Datt, 8 A. 201; followed in Ramachandra Shahu, 12 Pat. 184; Mahendra Prasad, 9 I. C. (C.) 698.

(15) Ramkrishna, 7 B. L. R. 446, 16 W. R. (Cr.) 27.

(16) Parameshar Datt, 8 A. 201; Subramanya v. Somasundaram, 21 M. 428; Mahendra Prasad, 9 I. C. (C.) 698.

(17) Nizamuddin, 28 C. 344.

definition of the word would be complete. It may, however, be said that all persons having to discharge delegated functions of administration of State are public servants.<sup>18</sup> The duty imposed upon such public servant may be ever so exalted or menial, but, as long as he is discharging the public duty, he is a public servant. It matters little that there is some flaw in his appointment, as long as he has in fact "taken the duties and responsibilities belonging to the position of a public servant and he performs those duties, and accepts those responsibilities, and is recognized as filling the position of a public servant."<sup>19</sup>

137. Public servants known to the law are those statutory and those mentioned in this section. The local or special laws have declared certain functionaries as public servants for the purposes of the Penal Code. (§ 131). As they owe their status to some Statute, they are designated Statutory public servants and in their case, it is not necessary to refer to the section, though they must necessarily fulfil its requirements. But they have been so declared in order to place their status beyond contest. A person may be declared to be a public servant by a statute, but such declaration would not necessarily make him a public servant within the meaning of this section, unless he possesses any of the qualifications therein described, though he will, of course, be a public servant for other purposes in accordance with the provisions of the Statute.

138. Another point important to note is that a public servant need not necessarily be appointed by Government.<sup>20</sup> This is obvious from the explanation and from illustration<sup>21</sup> in which a Municipal Commissioner is declared to be a public servant, though he is elected by the suffrage of his constituency subject only to the approval of or confirmation by the Government.

139. In determining whether a person is a public servant or not, the first thing to see is whether he is servant. Then enquiry should turn to whether he is not a statutory public servant. It is only then that the section need be referred to, and as the section is of last resort, attention must be paid to its clauses, with a view to see if the case in point is covered by any of the eleven clauses here enumerated. On referring to them it will sometimes be found that a given case is covered by more than one clause which is quite possible, for the clauses are not mutually exclusive and exhaustive, and only a casual reference to them is sufficient to show that a case might conceivably fall within two or more clauses at the same time. Thus, for instance, a covenanted servant of the Queen may be also a Judge, an officer of a Court of Justice, a juryman, an arbitrator and the rest. But the fact that he may be one or more does not affect his status, if it is once so established. But in order to apply the test here prescribed, it is necessary to grasp with precision the meaning of each clause, for they are by no means free from difficulty.

140. Statutory Public Servants.—A list of the Statutes defining such servants has been given elsewhere (§ 131). An illustrative enumeration may, perhaps, make the subject further clear. Bailiffs and appraisers of the Presidency Courts of Small Causes,<sup>22</sup> Census officers,<sup>23</sup> Coroner of Presidency Town,<sup>24</sup> Emigration officers,<sup>25</sup> Managers of encumbered estates,<sup>1</sup> Factory Inspectors,<sup>2</sup> Forest officers.<sup>3</sup> Servants and officers of the Indian Museum,<sup>4</sup> Certain officers appointed under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1860.<sup>5</sup> Officers executing

(18) Cf. 55 and 56 Vict., c. 61.

(19) Per Straight, J., in Parmeshar Datt, 8 A. 201 (vide Expl. 2 to this section).

(20) Expl. 1.

(21) Ill. to "eleventh" clause.

(22) S. 52, Act XV of 1882.

(23) S. 4, Act XIV of 1880.

(24) S. 5, Act IV of 1871.

(25) S. 14, Act VII of 1871; s. 5, Act III of 1876; s. 50, Act V. of 1877 s. 3, Mad. Act V. of 1866.

(1) Local Encumbered Estates Acts, s. 21; Act VI of 1876 (Chutia Nagpur); s. 22, Act XXIV of 1870 (Taluqdars of Oudh); s. 33, Reg. IV of 1872 (Taluqdars, Thakurs and Jagirdars in Ajmere); s. 33, Act XXI of 1881 (Broach and Kaira Thakurs, etc.); s. 33, Act XX of 1881 (Sindh).

(2) S. 3, Act XV of 1881.

(3) S. 72, Act VII of 1878.

(4) S. 14, Act XXII of 1876.

(5) S. 50, Act VII of 1880.

warrants of Marine Courts,<sup>6</sup> Municipal Commissioners and servants,<sup>7</sup> Officers and servants of local and district boards,<sup>8</sup> Canal officers appointed under the Pegu and Setang Canal Act,<sup>9</sup> Embankment officers,<sup>10</sup> Delegates of Parsi Matrimonial Court,<sup>11</sup> Patwaris and Kanungoes,<sup>12</sup> Pound Keepers,<sup>13</sup> Railway servants,<sup>14</sup> Telegraph officers of private company,<sup>15</sup> Registering officer,<sup>16</sup> Rangoon Port Commissioners, their officers and servants,<sup>17</sup> Sanitary Inspectors,<sup>18</sup> Special Judge under Jhansi Encumbered Estates Act,<sup>19</sup> Judges and Assessors of Courts of Survey and Ship Surveyors,<sup>20</sup> Heads of village for purposes of Madras Abkari Laws Amendment Act,<sup>21</sup> Clerks appointed under the Broach Thakurs Relief Act, whose duty it was to receive rents and execute revenue processes,<sup>22</sup> are all statutory public servants and so declared by the several Acts relating to them.

141. Covenanted Servants of the Queen.—And first, it is provided that every covenanted servant of the Queen is a public servant.

Clause 1. The term “covenanted servants” has now all but passed out of the vocabulary of the Indian Government. But at one time it was the officially recognized mode of expression as applied to members of the Indian Civil Service. The term originated at the time of the East India Company to which superior servants were recruited in England by the Board of Directors under a covenant by which they bound themselves not to trade or to receive presents, to subscribe for pensions and so forth. This practice has since continued and the members of the Indian Civil Service are required to subscribe to a similar declaration. But the covenant is now signed as a matter of form. It has ceased to have any practical utility. The term “covenanted servant” therefore now exactly corresponds with the members of the Indian Civil Service.<sup>23</sup>

142. Persons recruited for what is called the minor civil services, e.g., ‘Education, Forest, Police, Geological Survey’ and the like, are not included in the term, for they are not covenanted servants of the King, though their selection and mode of appointment is identical.

143. The terminology of this clause was objected to on the ground that it might include covenanters with Government by Charter-party. But as to this the Indian Law Commissioners replied that “considering the positive sense that the term ‘covenanted servant’ bears in the Company’s territories, we deem it to be most unlikely.”<sup>24</sup>

144. Officers of the Army, Navy and Air Force.—Commissioned officers of the Army, Navy and Air Force are those to whom commissions for command over officers and men of the regular forces have been duly issued.

145. As the regular Army, Navy and Air Force of the Empire are under the command of the Crown, the military rank and powers of command of their officers depend solely on commissions from the Crown issued in accordance with the provisions of 25 and 26 Vict., c. 4<sup>25</sup> entitled “an Act to enable Her Majesty to

(6) S. 15, Act IV of 1875.

(7) See Local Municipal Acts and s. 25, Act XV of 1873; s. 22, Act VIII of 1874; s. 56, Mad. Act V of 1878; s. 51, Bom. Act III of 1872; s. 15, Bom. Act VI of 1873.

(8) See Local Acts; Tiruvenguda, 21 M. 428.

(9) S. 14, Act II of 1881.

(10) S. 23, Act XV of 1865.

(11) S. 35, Act XIX of 1873; s. 8, Act XIII of 1882.

(12) S. 6, Act I of 1871.

(13) S. 27, Act IV of 1879.

(14) S. 18, Act I of 1876.

(15) S. 84, Act II of 1877.

(16) S. 64, Act XV of 1879.

(17) S. 29, Act XVI of 1882.

(18) S. 12 of Bengal Food Adulteration Act, 1884,—Shailesh, 59 C. 234.

(19) S. 50, Act VII of 1880.

(20) S. 24 (c), Mad. Act V of 1879.

(21) S. 17, Act XV of 1872; Isub Musa, B. U. C. 117.

(22) Dina Nath Gangooly, 8 B. L. R. App. 58; 17 W. R. (Cr.) 12.

(23) The term “Covenanted servant” is nowhere defined in the Statutes. It has been, however, used in the sense of the text in s. 57, (1793) 33 Geo. III, c. 52, which lays down a scheme for the administration of India. The term is treated synonymously with the Indian Civil Service in the Indian Civil Service Act, 1861, s. 2 (24 & 25 Vict., c. 54).

(24) First Report, § 77.

(25) (1862) Army, Marines, Militia and Volunteers Act.

issue Commissions to the officers of Her Majesty's land Forces and Royal Marines, and to Adjutants and Quarter-masters of the Militia and Volunteer Forces without affixing Her Royal Sign Manual thereto." That Act provides for the issue of commissions under the signatures of the Commander-in-Chief and one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, and in the case of Royal Marines, of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, and in the case of Military Chaplains Commissariat and store officers, and of the Adjutants and Quarter-masters in the Militia and Volunteer Forces, of one of Her Majesty's said Principal Secretaries, and that every such commission issued and signed in pursuance of such order in Council shall be conclusive evidence that the officer named in any such Commission had been appointed or promoted by Her Majesty to the rank or office named therein.

146. It will, however, be observed that all persons included in this definition are not public servants within the meaning of this section. For, in the first place, they must be commissioned officers, that is to say, an officer holding commission such as above set out. A "superior officer" is not a commissioned officer, but only a warrant officer.<sup>1</sup> But an officer holding an honorary commission is included in the term.

147. But the commission must be held in the Military and Naval Forces of the King. These words would appear to include forces other than the regular forces, e.g., the auxiliary forces, the volunteers, and volunteer forces, and the militia.<sup>2</sup> A commissioned officer, whether in the regular or reserve forces, stipendiary or volunteer, is a public servant. But the officer must be "serving under the Government of India or any Government."<sup>3</sup> That is to say, officers on active duty alone are public servants. Those superannuated or retired on leave or under suspension are excluded, because they do not then perform the functions which identify them with the Government from which they derive their delegated authority. And since the "Government" they must be serving under must be British, their service in a Native State would not be such service as is contemplated by the section.

148. Every Judge is a Public Servant.—A Judge is defined in section 19, and it is then simple to see what persons fall into this category.

149. Officers of Court of Justice.—This clause for the first time introduces the term "officer" without defining it. It is again used in clauses 8 to 10. It is omitted in clause 7 where the use of the term might have been equally apposite. But at the same time if close attention is paid to the several clauses, it will be perceived that the term has been used in a definite sense, and that it is not used as merely a substitute for the word "person". An officer may then be defined to be a person, employed to exercise, to some extent, and in certain circumstances a delegated function of Government. He is either himself armed with some authority of a representative character, or his duties are immediately auxiliary to those of some one who is so armed.<sup>4</sup> In this sense, it may include a person in the position of a peon,<sup>5</sup> but not a carter,<sup>6</sup> or the lessee of a village,<sup>7</sup> though Deshmukhs and Deshpandes would be sufficiently within the meaning of the term, as they are appointed to perform for the State a portion of its functions, or to aid those who are its active representatives.<sup>8</sup>

150. Now, understanding the term "officer" in this sense, the clause is intended to include all ministerial officers attached to the Courts of Justice. Clerks of Courts are, as such, required to report on any matter of "law or fact" as whether a plaint, petition or memorandum of appeal is, or is not, within time, and whether

(1) (1881) 44 & 45 Vict., c. 58, s. 190 (4).

(2) S. 170 (7), 44 & 45 Vict., c. 58.

(3) ib., s. 190 (12), (13) & (14).

(4) Per West, J., in Ramjirav, 12 B. H. C. R. 1; Nizamuddin, 28 C. 344.

(5) Ramkrishna, 7 B. L. R. 446; 16 W. R. (Cr.) 27; Nizamuddin, 28 C. 344.

(6) Nachimuttu, 7 M. 18.

(7) Ramjirav, 12 B. H. C. R. 1.

(8) See Clause Ninth, post; Ramjirav, 12 B. H. C. R. 1.

it has been presented by a duly authorized person. A Record Keeper<sup>9</sup> is a person entrusted with the custody of records of disposed of cases, while the Sheristadar or Peshkar is entrusted with the custody of pending proceedings. The Nazir is the custodian of Court exhibits and property in suit, while process-servers are entrusted with the duty of executing judicial processes.<sup>10</sup> Notaries Public are, as a rule, appointed to administer oaths, while officers variously described are entrusted with the duty of preserving order in Court. These are the persons ordinarily so employed, but the last clause widens the scope of the rule, for it clothes any person specially authorized by a Court to discharge any of the foregoing functions with the status of public servant.

151. A Court Ameen employed to prepare a plan, to inspect a site, or to effect a partition, would thus fall within the last provision, as a person specially authorized by a Court of Justice. A Commissioner appointed by Court to examine a witness would appear to share the same privilege.

152. The words "specially authorized" obviously imply that the delegation of authority is (a) legal, (b) by a person who himself possesses the authority to authorize another, and (c) by a person who is a ministerial officer as against a judicial officer.<sup>11</sup> Again, the authorization must be express, though in certain cases, it may even be implied.<sup>12</sup> The question whether the authority is or is not properly exercised is immaterial so long as it is clothed with the legality necessary to afford protection to the public servant.<sup>13</sup> Impropriety in the exercise of the authority ought to be distinguished from illegality which totally deprives a person of the privilege given to the public servant.

153. Juror, Assessor and Panch.—Jurors, assessors and panches while on duty, that is, actually engaged in the discharge of their duties, are public servants. This is evident, for they are in the position of Judges and, therefore, possess the Judge's privilege and immunities. Even when assisting a public servant other than a Judge, they are entitled to the same privilege and protection as the public servant whom they have come to assist.

154. Arbitrators and Commissioners.—Arbitrators and Commissioners or other assistants of Courts are public servants whose intervention becomes sometimes necessary, and is not infrequently salutary. But the privilege extends only to persons acting on the motion of the Court or a public servant. It does not extend to officious intermeddlers with public proceedings, or to persons to whose arbitrament the disputing parties may have submitted their cause, with or without the approval of the Court. For, unless the person is made the referee of the Court,<sup>14</sup> or unless some "cause or matter" is referred to him "for decision or report"<sup>15</sup> he is not invested with the immunity which the Court possesses.

155. The persons typified in this section are really persons who fill more or less judicial character, and for the limited purpose for which they are appointed

(9) "It is questioned by one officer whether Jawabnavises, Gomashtas, and other servants of the class come under any of the descriptions in this clause so as to be subject to the provisions of cl. 138 (now s. 161). It seems to us that as servants whose duty it is 'to make' or 'keep documents' they fall under the 5th, 10th or 11th description, according to the Department in which they may be employed."—Indian Commissioners' First Report, s. 79.

(10) Bhagai Dafadar, 2 B. L. R. (F.B.) 21, in which resistance was held to be criminally punishable—and rightly so.

(11) Per Pollock, C.B., in Walsh v. South-

worth, L. R. 6 Exch. 150.

(12) Dharam Chand, 22 C. 596, followed in Sheo Progas v. Bhup Narain, 22 C. 759; Abdul Karim v. Bullen, 6 A. 385, Court Fees Act, s. 22 (Act VII of 1870). This view is supported by Walsh v. Southworth, L. R. 6 Exch. 150.

(13) Abdul Ghafur, 23 C. 896; Satischandra v. Jadu Nandan, 3 C. W. N. 741; Coville v. Kristo Kishore, 26 C. 746; Durga Charan v. Nobin Chandra, 25 C. 274.

(14) Sundar Majhi, 30 C. 1084.

(15) Per Edge, C.J., and Oldfield, J., in Debi Din, (1886) A. W. N. 295.

they become as it were the alter ego of the persons appointing them. Of course, in all such cases, only the fact of appointment is material, its propriety being irrelevant.

156. Policemen, Jailors.—Policemen are persons empowered to place any person in confinement, while Jailors are persons empowered to keep persons in confinement. They are both, therefore, public servants. The test under this head being that the person should have the authority to take or keep another person in confinement, a person so empowered would be a public servant, though he may himself be in confinement. Where, for instance, a convict warder is empowered to keep persons in confinement, he becomes a public servant, though he is himself kept in confinement by another, who, again, is on that account a public servant.<sup>16</sup> The authorization here contemplated must, however, be legal; that is to say, the persons empowered to place and keep persons in confinement must have been so empowered by a competent authority, and as a part of his official duty. The authority must then be general, and not special or relating to any individual case. Where, for instance, a Magistrate orders a person to arrest a runaway offender,<sup>17</sup> the latter does not thereby become a public servant, because the arrest made was not made by virtue of any office which he held. The power to arrest or detain arrested persons must be inherent in his office. It must be a part of his ordinary duties. But it need not be a power unqualified or unlimited. For no one possesses such a power. A Forest officer detecting a person committing an offence against the Forest Act may take him into custody.<sup>18</sup> He is, therefore, a public servant under this clause, though he is also declared to be a public servant under the Forest Act.<sup>19</sup> The power may be conferred upon a person either generally by Statute or Rules and Regulations made thereunder, or it may be conferred by or implied in an appointment to an office duly made. A person so appointed would, then, become a public servant if, by virtue of his office, he has the power to confine any person. If he has the power otherwise than by virtue of his office, he is not a public servant. For example, any private person may arrest any person who, in his view, commits a non-bailable and cognizable offence,<sup>20</sup> but all persons are not, therefore, public servants.

157. Peace Officers.—Similarly, persons holding office by virtue of which it is their duty to (a) prevent offences, (b) to give information of offences, (c) to bring offenders to justice, or (d) to protect the public health, safety or convenience are declared to be public servants. Policemen, Village watchmen,<sup>21</sup> Revenue and Police Patels in Bombay,<sup>22</sup> fall into this class, which, however, is large enough to include even Judges and Magistrates whose duty is as much to prevent offences<sup>23</sup> as to punish for them. And the clause would include Forest officers, officers of the Salt, Excise or Opium department, or indeed, of any department whose duty it is to protect the interest of their department by preventing the commission of offences against it.

158. Officers appointed to give information of offences may, again, be Policemen, Village chowkidars, or members of the Criminal Investigation Department, such as detectives or the like. Mere informers and secret agents are not, however, included in the term, because they are not “officers of Government whose duty it is as such officers” to give information of offences.

159. Officers appointed to bring offenders to justice are again Policemen, Judges, Magistrates, Public Prosecutors and persons generally or specially charged with the duty of conducting prosecutions. A person appointed by the Government Solicitor with the approval of Government and under an arrangement made by the Governor-General in Council to act as prosecutor in a Police Court is thus a public

(16) Kallachand, 7 W. R. (Cr.) 99; Muham-mada, (1908) P. R. (Cr.) No. 22.

(17) E.g. under s. 65, Cr. P. C.

(18) S. 51, Forest Act (V of 1882).

(19) Ib., s. 60.

(20) S. 59, Cr. P. C.

(21) Siddhut, 26 A. 542; Appaji, 21 B. 517.

(22) Appaji, 21 B. 517.

(23) See Part IV “Prevention of offences” (ss. 106-126), Cr. P. C.

servant.<sup>24</sup> Similarly, officers of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals<sup>25</sup> appointed under the Police Act are public servants,<sup>1</sup> because their duty leads them to bring offenders under that Act to justice.

160. Lastly, Health Officers, Sanitary Inspectors, Bazar Masters, Hackney Carriage Examiners, Engineers of the Public Works and Irrigation Departments, Postal Officials, Street Overseers, and, indeed, all persons having similar duties to perform by virtue of their office are public servants. But Inn-keepers and Dak Bungalow cooks are not persons engaged to protect public convenience, though their duties are subservient thereto.

161. Miscellaneous Officers of Government.—The ninth clause is really the otta podrida of the section, and it includes within its comprehensive grasp a large mixed class of non-descript officers who could not be specially provided for. Generally speaking, this class includes officers who receive or disburse money on behalf of Government, such as Treasurers, Cashiers, Opium and Stamp vendors employed in the Government Treasuries. But a Stamp vendor employed not under the Stamp Act, but under an agreement with the Collector was held not to be a public servant.<sup>2</sup>

162. Persons whose duty it is to make survey on behalf of Government are members of the Geological and Topographical Survey of India, officers connected with State Railways, Canal and Irrigation departments and the Department of Settlement and Agriculture. As belonging to this department may be mentioned patwaris,<sup>3</sup> and other minor officials, who prepare maps and plans of rural areas for the purpose of assessment. A surveyor preparing a map of water-course of a khas mahal under the orders of the Collector is a public servant, for “the Collector acting in the management of a khas mahal, the property of the Government, is as much the Government within the meaning of section 17 of the Indian Penal Code as when he is exercising any other of the duties of his official position.”<sup>4</sup>

163. Officers who make contracts on behalf of Government are those belonging to the Commissariat and Public Works Department. Officers in charge of Excise, Opium, Ganja and Salt have also to make contracts on behalf of Government for their sale, but as these officers are usually Civil Officers of the district, they fall not only into this, but also other clauses of the section.

164. Persons who execute judicial process have been declared to be public servants in clause 4. Following that analogy, Revenue process-servants and others assisting the Revenue officers are here declared to fall into the same class. For like judicial subordinates they, too, are exposed to the same temptations and are, therefore, equally amenable to the same rules. Peons, whether permanent or supernumerary, attached to the Collector’s office, and whether in receipt of fixed pay or fees, are within the rule,<sup>5</sup> and so is a peon in the service and pay of Government but attached to office of the Superintendent of the Salt Department, though his duties were probably generally to obey the orders of his superior.<sup>6</sup> But such a menial can scarcely be designated an “officer” in the sense in which that word is used in common parlance. The term must then be understood as merely connoting one who is appointed to some office for the performance of some public duty.<sup>7</sup>

165. Persons empowered to investigate or to report on any matter affecting the pecuniary interests of Government are scattered over almost every department of Government. As such, they become public servants, though they may not be otherwise so qualified. Tax collectors and Tahsil officials are amongst those falling into this class.

(24) Butto Kristo Doss, 3 C. 497.

(25) Act XI of 1890.

(1) Upendra Kumar Ghose, 3 C. L. J. 475 ; Nataraja, 46 M. 90.

(2) Kalyanray, B. U. C., P. 36.

(3) Mudsuddeen, 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. 148.

(4) Bajoo Singh, 26 C. 158.

(5) Ramakrishna Das, 7 B. L. R. 446.

(6) Nizamuddin, 28 C. 344.

(7) Nizamuddin, 28 C. 344 ; Ramajirav, 12 B. H. C. R. 1 (Cr.).

166. Persons who "make, authenticate or keep any document relating to the pecuniary interests of Government" similarly form a numerous class. Revenue Inspectors and Patwaris stand on the lowest rung of the ladder amongst officials of the Department of Survey and Settlements who make documents relating to the pecuniary interests of Government, namely, the land-revenue. Revenue record-keepers and the like are persons who keep such documents.

167. Persons who prevent the infraction of any law for the protection of the pecuniary interests of Government are men like customs officials, and those engaged to detect contraband trade against the monopoly of Government. Excise Inspectors are, for instance, employed to prevent the manufacture of illicit liquor or the importation of foreign opium or ganja. Consequently, they become public servants under the rule.

168. Every officer in the service or pay of Government, is, apart from other considerations, a public servant. But, of course, an officer holding a mere sinecure cannot be called a public servant for there can, then, be no reason for applying to him the exceptional provisions specially enacted for them in the Code. The clause must, therefore, mean a person who holds an office to which some public duty is attached, and which he may be called upon to perform. Consequently, an unpaid apprentice in the office of a Sub-Registrar in Bengal is not a public servant even though his services be reimbursed by the Sub-Registrar out of his allowance.<sup>8</sup> Such was also held to be the case of a Quarter-master's clerk.<sup>9</sup> On the other hand, a Police Sub-Inspector attached to the Finger Print Bureau as an expert, and called as such is a public servant and a bribe offered to him would be punishable under section 161.<sup>10</sup>

169. Officers of Local Bodies.—This clause compendiously states what is more elaborately stated in the last preceding clause in respect of officers of Government. Mutatis mutandis, similar officers, though in the service of Town or Urban Municipalities,<sup>11</sup> Local Boards, District Councils, Sanitary Boards or other similar bodies are public servants. Persons who are in charge of religious as distinguished from secular public benevolence, are, however, not public servants.

170. Municipal Engineers who receive money from the Municipality and pay it out to contractors are, thus, within the definition,<sup>12</sup> though an Engineer who is merely empowered to sign a bill or cheque upon which a different official pays the money might be conceivably classed otherwise, on the ground that he does not "expend any property" of the Municipality.<sup>13</sup> Municipal or Local Board overseers, octroi and cattle-pounds moharirs, cess collectors,<sup>14</sup> goods clerks,<sup>15</sup> or union karmans<sup>16</sup> are persons who take or receive money for their Municipality or Local Boards as the case may be. They are, therefore, public servants. But a Local Board Sircar who merely supervises road work is not a public servant.<sup>17</sup>

171. A Municipal Commissioner individually may be a nonentity, but he is declared to be a public servant by the illustration, but for which he might not have fallen within that class.

172. Not Public Servants.—It was held in a Calcutta case that there was nothing in the Calcutta Municipal Corporation Act<sup>18</sup> to suggest that it was a "public servant."<sup>19</sup> It was, however, conceded that it could be a public servant under clause 10 of the section. But that clause speaks of an "officer" and not a person, and an officer cannot be a juridical person such as a corporation must necessarily be. Indeed, there is scarcely any room for doubt that even the term person as used

(8) Mahendra, 9 I. C. (C.) 698; Bhagwati Sahai, 32 C. 664; but Cf. Fula Bhana, (1888) B. U. C. 38.

(9) Ahad Shah, (1918) P. R. (Cr.) 18; 45 I. C. 150.

(10) Karam Chand, 69 I. C. (L.) 445.

(11) Ezekiel, 6 Bom. L. R. 54 (under the City of Bombay Municipal Act) (Bom. Act III of 1888); Ramasami, 13 M. 131 (under the Madras District Municipalities Act).

(12) Naufawram, 6 B. H. C. R. 64.

(13) Per Gibbes, J., in Naufawram, 6 B. H. C. R. 64.

(14) Babulal, 33 B. 213.

(15) Zakaria, 9 P. R. 1893.

(16) 1 Weir 128.

(17) Addaita v. Kali Dass, 12 C. W. N. 96.

(18) Act IV of 1877

(19) Municipal Corporation, 3 C. 758.

in clause 8 is used there in its strictly narrower sense as denoting a human being (§ 101). The section does not appear to contemplate the possibility of including artificial persons within its comprehension.

173. Then, again, it appears almost superfluous to add that servants in private employ are not public servants within the meaning of the section. But such a contention was once made in a case in which the cashier of the Bank of Bengal carrying on the treasury business of the Government had received illegal gratification from the manager of a Court of Wards on deposit of a certain sum on behalf of Government. The cashier was proceeded against for receiving illegal gratification as a public servant, his status as such being supported on the ground that he was "an officer whose duty it is, as such officer, to take any property on behalf of Government."<sup>20</sup> But the Court held that the money received by the cashier was for the Bank and not for the Government, and that, therefore, he could not be deemed to be a public servant.<sup>21</sup> But the manager of the Court of Wards, though not a servant of Government, is yet a public servant, inasmuch as the Court of Wards, being the Government, his duty to receive moneys for the Court of Wards is really a receipt "on behalf of Government."<sup>22</sup> But this case is in conflict with a Madras case in which a peon employed by the manager of an estate in charge of the Court of Wards was held not to be a public servant.<sup>23</sup> Assuming that the peon was a servant of the Court of Wards, he could not but be a public servant if the manager in the Allaha-bad case was a public servant, for both persons performed the same duties and it is, therefore, submitted that the Madras case was not correctly decided. The correct view was taken by Ainslie and Paul, JJ., in a Calcutta case in which they held a peon of the Collector's Court who received no fixed pay from the Government but was remunerated by fee whenever employed to serve any process and was placed on the Register of Supernumerary peons to be a public servant.<sup>24</sup> So a peon in the service and pay of Government and attached to the office of a Superintendent of the Salt Department is a public servant, though his duties were only to carry out the orders of his official superior, himself a public servant. Of course, labourers and menial servants employed to do work or labour on account of the Government are not "officers" and do not fall within the definition of "public servants" here given.<sup>25</sup>

174. A carter temporarily employed by the Public Works Department could not arrogate to himself that status,<sup>1</sup> though a Lascar can do, as in Madras.<sup>2</sup> But the Receiver of an estate appointed pendente lite is not a public servant,<sup>3</sup> for his position is that of a guardian of the estate for the protection of which he is appointed. So a clerk appointed by a Sub-Registrar and paid out of an allowance given to him is not a public servant as his appointment is not contemplated by the Indian Registration Act, though it empowers the Registering officers to keep a proper establishment. But that alone would scarcely convert every employee under that provision into a public servant.<sup>4</sup> So, while Municipal officers may be, and ordinarily are classed as public servants, it does not follow that all servants of the municipality are also public servants. A municipal water-rate collector is thus held not to be a public servant: et hoc genus omne.<sup>5</sup> Similarly, a goods clerk of a Railway Company,<sup>6</sup> or a Quartermaster's clerk,<sup>7</sup> stand outside the category of public servants. So is the lessee of

(20) Clause 9.

(21) Modun Mohun, 4 C. 376.

(22) Mathura Prasad, 21 A. 127; This case was decided under the N. W. P. Act, which does not contain any declaration as to a manager being a public servant, which, however, is expressly provided in the C. P. Court of Wards Act, S. 12 (ii), Act XVII of 1885.

(23) Arrayi, 7 M. 17; dissented from in Nizamuddin, 28 C. 348.

(24) Ram Krishna Das, 7 B. L. R. 44. This case, too, was dissented from in Nizamuddin,

28 C. 348.

(25) Nachimuttu, 7 M. 8.

(1) Ib.

(2) Public Prosecutor v. Annan Naidu, 48 M. 867.

(3) Ebrahim, 29 C. 236.

(4) Bhagawat Sahai, 32 C. 664.

(5) Gulab, 1 A. L. J. 125, refers to Municipal Act (Act I of 1900) s. 51.

(6) Zakaria, (1898) P. R. No. 9.

(7) Ahad Shah, (1918) P. R. (Cr.) 18; 45 I. C. 150.

a village from Government though he be under obligation to keep an account of the forest revenues and pay it a proportion thereof.<sup>8</sup> A villager assisting a headman in the discharge of his public duties is no more a public servant than a person whom a Magistrate may require to assist him in the discharge of his public duties.<sup>9</sup> Such is also the malguzar holding an enquiry in the matter of damage done to a Government forest, though it may be his duty under the Forest Act to assist Government.<sup>10</sup> A person employed by parties to settle a dispute, though approved by the Court is not necessarily to be treated as appointed by it so as to clothe him with the character of a public servant.<sup>11</sup> A person nominated by the Collector under s. 69 of the Bengal Tenancy Act is not a public servant because he does not perform any of the duties of a public servant.<sup>12</sup> So, again, a public servant would cease to be so on his suspension from duty.<sup>13</sup> A corporation, though a juridical person, is not a natural person so as to be a public servant within the meaning of the section.<sup>14</sup>

22. The words "moveable property" are intended to include corporeal property of every description, except land and things attached to the earth or permanently fastened to anything which is attached to the earth.

175. Analogous Law.—The term "moveable property," here defined, differs, on the one hand, from its definition in the Larceny Act<sup>15</sup> as well as from its numerous definitions in the other Acts of the Indian Legislature.<sup>16</sup> In the English Acts, all intangible rights in property are included in the term and such is the case in the Transfer of Property Act, and other Acts of the Indian Legislature. But in this section, the term is limited to corporeal property, that is to say, tangible moveable property as distinguished from intangible rights which law regards as property and clothes the holder with rights of ownership therein. The definition, thus, excludes all incorporeal objects such as legal relations and rights which are included in the term in civil law. In other words, it takes no account of rights or interest in things apart from the things themselves.

176. Under English Law, which borrows its terminology from the Roman Law, property is divided into (a) corporeal or (b) incorporeal, sometimes spoken of as tangible or intangible property. Corporeal property is such as can be perceived by the senses, such as land or a coat, while incorporeal property consists merely of legal relations and rights including legal obligations and rights of action.

177. Principle.—Since intangible rights in property are not visible, the Penal Code excludes them from the definition of moveable property. Again, things permanently attached to the earth are also excluded from the definition of moveable property in this section; but in civil law, their character would be determined, not by the mere fact of attachment but by its degree. By excluding intangible rights and including things not permanently attached to the earth, the Code makes that definition at once wider and narrower than what obtains in civil law. It does so to eschew conflict and complications, which were sure to arise in the working of the Code, if a more comprehensive definition were adopted. This would be clear from the sequel.

178. Meaning of Words.—"Corporeal property" is property which may be perceived by the senses in contradistinction to incorporeal rights which are not so perceivable, such as obligations of all kinds. "Except land": Land, being immovable property, could not have been included in the term "moveable property." It should be noted that the words used in one place is "land" and in another place "earth". The two words are used in senses apart, as will be explained in the

(8) Ramjirav, 12 B. H. C. R. 1.

(9) Nga Pow, (1917) 38 I. C. (U. B.) 735.

(10) Meharban, 9 I. C. (A.) 669.

(11) Sunder Mahji, 30 C. 1084 (1087).

(12) Chattar Lal v. Thacoor Pershad, 18 C. 518.

(13) Dinanath, 8 B. L. R. App. 58.

(14) Municipal Corporation, 3 C. 758 (764).

(15) 24 & 25 Vict., c. 96, s. 1.

(16) Cf. S. 2 (6) of the General Clauses Act, (Act I of 1868); S. 3 (34) of the General Clauses Act (Act X of 1897); S. 3 of the Indian Registration Act (Act III of 1877); Cl. (9) of S. 2 of Act XVI of 1908; S. 44 of the Indian Companies Act (Act VI of 1882) as amended by Act VII of 1913; S. 3 of the Transfer of Property Act (Act IV of 1882).

sequel (§§ 167- 169). "Things attached to the earth": See the definition of this phrase as given in the Transfer of Property Act. "Or permanently fastened, etc.," which is included in the phrase "attached to the earth."<sup>17</sup>

179. Moveable Property.—The term "moveable property" has been defined here for the special purpose of the Code. As such, its definition is much narrower as compared with its definitions elsewhere. For while incorporeal rights are usually classed as moveables, the Code excludes them from the definition of "moveable property," as it may give rise to conflict and complications which would not be conducive to the easy working of the Code.

180. The term "moveable property" then means only visible or tangible things. It does not, of course, include land which is immoveable property. Nor does it include things, such as trees and buildings attached to the earth. But, earth attached to the earth is a part of it only so long as it is so attached. If it is removed from "the earth" or "land" it becomes moveable property, and as such, the subject of theft. So it is provided in section 378 that "a thing so long as it is attached to the earth, not being moveable property, is not the subject of theft; but it becomes capable of being the subject of theft as soon as it is severed from the earth."<sup>18</sup> Thus, stones so long as they are imbedded in the earth are immoveable property, being a part of the earth, but as soon as they are quarried and carried away, they become moveable property, and, therefore, the subject of theft.<sup>19</sup> So where a swamp had been taken possession of by the Government, and the accused gathered salt, which had spontaneously formed on it, it was held that the removal of salt from the swamp converted it into moveable property, so that the accused were rightly convicted of its theft. "We cannot distinguish this case," observed the Court, "from theft of wood in a reserved forest, except that salt is actually a part of the soil, while trees are not; yet things immoveable become moveable by severance, and this would apply to severed parts of the soil, e.g., stone quarried minerals, iron, or salt collected, as well as to timber which has grown, or edifices which have been raised on the land."<sup>20</sup> So in another case where the accused were charged with stealing 100 cart-loads of earth from the complainant's land, the Court upheld their conviction for theft observing: "It appears to us that earth when dug or ploughed up, so as to be in a state in which it can be put into a cart and taken away, ceases to be 'land' or a thing 'attached to the earth within the meaning of section 22 of the Indian Penal Code. By the process of digging or ploughing, earth may become severed from 'the earth' or from 'any land' to which it was attached; and may become 'moveable property' within the definition contained in that section."<sup>21</sup> Earth, that is soil, and all the component parts of the soil, inclusive of minerals and stones, when severed from the earth, become moveable property, by the fact of severance alone from the earth, and regain their immoveable character as soon as they are deposited therein.

181. So standing crops growing on land, are immoveable property so long as they stand unsevered from the earth upon which they grow, but as soon as they are severed, they become moveable property, and, therefore, capable of theft.<sup>22</sup> In view of this consideration much of the value of the distinction made between things that should be regarded as "attached" or not attached to the earth loses its significance. But in so far as there may be still theft of things that lie in juxtaposition to the earth, but are not attached thereto, the question what things should be considered as attached to the earth has still to be considered. It is not, however, proposed to exhaust the subject here, for the subject has received ample treatment in another work to which reference should be made, if necessary.<sup>23</sup>

182. What is "Land."—Land and things attached to the earth are here excepted from the category of moveable property. In fact, "land and things attached

(17) S. 3, cl. (c), Act IV of 1882; "attached to the earth." Shivram, 15 B. 702.

(18) Exp. 1.

(19) Suri Venkatappayya v. Madula, 27 M. 531, F.B, overruling Kotayya, 10 M. 255; and following Tamma Ghantayya, 4 M. 228;

(20) Tamma Ghantayya, 4 M. 228.

(21) Shivram, 15 B. 702.

(22) S. 378, ill (a) post.

(23) 1 Gour's Law of Transfer (6th Ed.), §§ 84-98.

to the earth, or permanently fastened to anything attached to the earth" are also immoveable property under the General Clauses Act.<sup>24</sup> Land, as such, is immoveable property. Land is the solid part of the surface of the earth, as opposed to water as constituting a part of such surface. So in section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure—a section referring to "Disputes as to immoveable property,"—it is spoken as "land or water," and in clause 2 the expression is for the purpose of that section declared to "include buildings, markets, fisheries, crops, or other produce of land, and the rents or profits or any such property."<sup>25</sup> Of course, the term "land" has been used here in a much restricted sense as connoting only the crust of the earth. In ancient times, however, the term had even a more restricted meaning, for it was used to signify "whatsoever may be ploughed" and "nothing but arable land."<sup>1</sup> But this sense has long since been abandoned, and the word is now used to comprise any ground, soil, or earth whatsoever<sup>2</sup> and whatsoever right therein held whether proprietary or leasehold.<sup>3</sup>

183. But land in civil law comprises not only the surface of the ground, but also everything on or over or under it, for cujus est solum ejus est usque ad cælum et ad inferos.<sup>4</sup> So land includes mines.<sup>5</sup> And so now under the English Conveyancing Act<sup>6</sup> "unless a contrary intention appears, land includes land of any tenure, and tenements and hereditaments, corporeal or incorporeal, and houses and other buildings, also an undivided share in land."<sup>7</sup> But here, the meaning attached to the word is not so large. It is used here merely to denote the surface of the earth, whether dry or covered with water. For land is "not the less land for being covered with water."<sup>8</sup>

184. Things attached to the Earth.—Besides water the term "land" "includes also things attached to the earth." It is used here in the same sense, that is, it means things (a) rooted in the earth, as in the case of trees and shrubs, or (b) things imbedded in the earth, as in the case of walls or buildings, or (c) things attached to what is so imbedded for the permanent beneficial enjoyment of that to which it is attached. The term "attached" does not always mean physically fastened; it may also mean, superincumbent upon, as, for example, heavy machinery kept in situ by its own weight.<sup>9</sup> So trade-fixture are now usually regarded as attached to the earth, though at one time they were not.<sup>10</sup>

185. Permanently Fastened to Things Attached.—Things permanently fastened either to land or to things attached to the earth are not moveable property. Now the question whether a thing is to be so regarded depends upon the degree and nature of the annexation and the purpose for which it was made. Thus doors and windows being attached to buildings for their permanent beneficial enjoyment are regarded as permanently fastened to them. On the other hand, window blinds, window sashes, shutters, fastenings, hangings, tapestry and pier glasses whether nailed or not, beds fastened to the walls or ceilings, fixed tables, water tubs, cup-

(24) S. 2 (5), Act I of 1868; see now s. 3 (25), Act X of 1897.

(25) Co. Litt., 49.

(1) Shep. Touch, 91.

(2) Doe v. Ludlam, 7 Bing 275.

(3) Swift v. Swift, 29 L. J. Ch. 121; Wilson v. Eden, 11 Beav. 237; Prescott v. Barker, 43 L. J. Ch. 498; Butler v. Butler, 28 Ch. D. 66. In the English clause consolidation statutes of 1845, the word "Lands" extends to 'messuages, lands, tenements and hereditaments of any tenure' (8 Vict., cc. 16, 18 and 20).

(4) Co. Litt., 49; Shep. Touch. 91, 2 Black., 18, "whoever has the land, to him alone belong even to the firmament, and to the centre of the earth."

(5) Per Lord Cairns, C., in Smith v. Great

Western Railway, 3 App. Cas. 180; Holliday v. Wakefield, (1891) A.C. 81.

(6) (1881) s. 2 (ii).

(7) For an exhaustive discourse on these words, vide 1 Gour's Law of Transfer (6th Ed.) §§ 84-98.

(8) Per Patterson, J., in R. v. Leeds and Liverpool Navigation Co., 7 A. & E. 685; Regents Canal Co., 6 B. & C. 720; New Port Dock Co., 31 L. J. M. C. 266; Birmingham Water Works Co., 1 B. & S. 84; Southwark and Vauxhall Water Works Co. v. Hampton, (1899) 1 Q. 273 O. A. sub-nom Hampton v. Southwark, &c., Co., (1900) A. C. 3.

(9) Per Esher, M.R., in Tyne Boiler Works Co. v. Longhenton, 56 L. J. M. C. 12; Laing v. Bishopswearmouth, 3 Q. B. D. 299.

(10) 1 Gour's Law of Transfer (6th Ed.) § 94.

boards, book cases screwed to the walls, clock cases, iron ovens, grates, ranges and stoves although fixed in brick work, iron back to chimneys, pumps and all articles of domestic utility or convenience being not annexed for the permanent beneficial enjoyment to that to which they are attached, are regarded as only moveable property.<sup>11</sup>

23. “Wrongful gain” is gain by unlawful means of property to which the person gaining is not legally entitled.

“Wrongful loss” is the loss by unlawful means of property to which the person losing it is legally entitled.

A person is said to gain wrongfully when such person retains wrongfully, as well as when such person acquires wrongfully. A person is said to lose wrongfully when such person is wrongfully kept out of any property, as well as when such person is wrongfully deprived of property.

186. Analogous Law.—“The terms ‘maliciously,’ ‘wrongfully’ and ‘injure’ are words all of which have accurate meanings well known to the law, but which also have a popular and less practical signification. An ‘intent’ to injure, in strictness, means more than an intent to harm. It connotes an intent to do wrongful harm. ‘Maliciously,’ in like manner, means and implies an intention to do an act which is wrongful to the detriment of another. The term ‘wrongful’ imports in its turn the infringement of some rights.”<sup>12</sup> And if there be no infringement, there can be no actionable wrong, however vile the motive.<sup>13</sup> The terms ‘wrongful gain’ and ‘wrongful loss’ do not, however, occur in English law, where their place is taken by ‘malicious act,’ which is an act done illegally and unreasonably and not in the exercise of a bona fide right.<sup>14</sup> So Lord Blackburn observed: “Where any person wilfully does an act injurious to another without lawful excuse” he does it maliciously.<sup>15</sup> In the language of the Code such an act would be said to have been done dishonestly.<sup>16</sup>

187. Principle.—Criminal law takes no note of what is morally wrong, for social morality varies with race and locality. It is to a great extent dependent upon the customs and habits of a people. If law were to punish social transgressions howmuchsoever loss they may cause to society, it would be as uncertain as often incapable of elucidation. Even treachery, envy and jealousy, though universally condemned by the moralist, are not under the bane of law—for they, too, are uncertain in their operation and are difficult of proof. The standard, therefore, which criminal law sets before itself is the standard of legal right and wrong. It does not take cognizance of mala in se but of only mala prohibita. It is true that not a few mala in se are also mala prohibita, but cognizance is taken of them because there are mala prohibita and not because they are mala in se. This section is the exponent of this rule. For it lays down that the test of wrongfulness is unlawfulness. Now a thing may be unlawful in two senses: (a) as unenforceable by law, (b) as punishable by law; for example, an agreement for sexual immorality which is unlawful in the first sense, is not so in the second.<sup>17</sup> Here the term has, therefore, been used in the second sense.

188. Meaning of Words.—“Unlawful means,” i.e., by illegal means as defined in section 43.<sup>18</sup> A person may employ unlawful means for a lawful object as where one commits violence for recovery of his own property: “Wrongful loss is the loss”: which implies total deprivation of the property. If, therefore, the pledgee of goods used them, and thereby caused their deterioration, and not depri-

(11) 1 Gour's Law of Transfer (6th Ed.) § 94.

(12) Per Bowen, L.J., in Mogul Co. v. McGregor, 32 Q. B. D. 598, O. A. (1892) A. C. 25 cited with the approval per Lord Watson, in Allen v. Flood, (1898) A. C. 1.

(13) Allen v. Flood, (1898) A. C. 1.

(14) Jenner, 7 L. J. (O. S.) M. C. 79.

(15) Pembliton, L. R. 122; Welch, 1 Q. B. D. 23.

(16) S. 24, post (q.v.).

(17) Per Bramwell, B., in Cowan v. Milbourn, L. R. 2 Ex. 230 (236).

(18) The Code defines “illegal” in s. 43, but it does not define “unlawful,” but the two concepts bear an identical meaning as is explained by the Law Commissioners. First Report, § 658.

vation, it is not wrongful loss.<sup>19</sup> It may be added that the wrongful loss here means loss of the specific property and not loss generally.<sup>20</sup> “Gain wrongfully”: A person retaining wrongfully cannot be distinguished from one who has acquired wrongfully: for example, one who having received stolen property innocently, retains it after he knows it to be stolen is as much a criminal as one who had received it with guilty knowledge ab initio.

189. Wrongful Gain.—Two things are essential to constitute wrongful gain, and its correlative wrongful loss, namely,—(a) use of unlawful means, and (b) unlawful acquisition. The existence of one without the other is not sufficient. As before observed, the term “unlawful” has a double meaning but the word as used in criminal jurisprudence is limited to convey an act which is both prohibited as well as punishable by law. An act may be merely prohibited without being punishable, as, for instance, immoral acts and contracts which are unlawful because they are prohibited, but which are, however, not punishable. If, therefore, a person hire a house for an immoral purpose, he gains the house by unlawful means,<sup>21</sup> but he does not thereby acquire the house “dishonestly” within the meaning of the next section, nor can it be said that he does not thereby become legally entitled to its possession. For if his possession is illegal, can he be summarily ejected? And even if such were the case, how is the definition material to the Code in which such an act is not punishable as a crime? But this sense of the word “unlawful” is not preserved throughout the Code. For there are sections in which the word has been used ejusdem generis with “immoral” as in sections 372 and 373, where the phrase used is “unlawful and immoral purpose.”<sup>22</sup> Here the sense of the word may be said to have been modified by its association with another word, and the general context. But it is sufficient to put one on one’s guard against regarding the meaning of even a law term as always rigidly inflexible. (For a further commentary see s. 43.)

190. The word “gain” means, as has been subsequently explained, not only acquisition, but also retention. But it must be something more than a mere detention. In other words, it must be an acquisition or retention with the intention of appropriation. Where, therefore, the accused, the pledgee of a turban, was convicted of criminal breach of trust for using it, the Court set aside the conviction on the ground that the wrongful beneficial use of property by him was not a gain to him, nor was it a wrongful loss to the real owner. “For either wrongful loss or gain, the property must be lost to the owner, or the owner must be wrongfully kept out of it.”<sup>23</sup> So where a person maliciously impounded another’s cattle with a view to cause him expense, inconvenience and annoyance, there being neither wrongful gain nor wrongful loss of the property, he could not be convicted of theft.<sup>24</sup> So, in another case, where a servant being wrongfully piqued at being wrongly suspected of the theft of a box, removed it and concealed it in a cowshed to give a lesson to his master, the question arose whether his act caused wrongful gain to him, or wrongful loss to his master, so as to justify his conviction for theft. And it was held that as there was no wrongful gain or loss, the accused could not be so convicted. “Of course,” the Court remarked, “when the owner is kept out of possession with the object of depriving him of the benefit arising from the possession even temporarily, the case will come within the definition. But where the owner is kept out of possession temporarily, not with any such intention, but only with the object of causing him trouble in the sense of mere mental anxiety, and with the ultimate intention of restoring the thing to him without exacting or expecting any recompense, it is difficult to say that the detention amounts to causing wrongful loss in any sense.”<sup>25</sup> But it is submitted that this is a case in which “intention” must be distinguished from “motive”, for the two are not the same. For, if they were, and if the view of the

(19) 3 M. H. C. R. (App.), 6; Nabi Baksh v. Ali Baksh, 25 C. 416.

(20) Aradhun v. Myan Khan, 24 W. R. 7 (8).

(21) Cowan v. Milbourn, L. R. 2 Ex. 230 (236).

(22) Narayan, (1889) B. U. C. 440.

(23) 3 M. H. C. R. (App.) 6.

(24) Aradhun v. Myan Khan, 24 W. R. (Cr.) 7 (8).

(25) Nabi Baksh, 25 C. 416.

Calcutta Court were correct, then what should we say of the case in which the creditor forcibly seized his debtor's goods and detained them with the sole intention of coercing him to pay up his just debts? Here, too, the same reasoning should have exonerated the accused, but it did not.<sup>1</sup>

191. But apart from the policy of the rule, the principle is clear. In forcibly taking wrongful possession of his debtor's goods, the creditor had certainly the intention of causing his debtor loss by unlawful means, but his motive was not to appropriate them but to use them as a screw to compel his debtor to pay up. "Wrongful gain" is not necessarily "dishonest gain," for a person may acquire property by wrongful means without intending to be dishonest. The case of the servant screening his master's box was, it is submitted, wrongful, though it was not dishonest.<sup>2</sup>

192. A person is not guilty of causing wrongful gain to himself if he cuts down the trees standing on his tenancy land, though in doing so he may have committed a civil wrong entitling his landlord to recover damages.<sup>3</sup> The doing of every unauthorized act is not necessarily unlawful, nor is the doing of every unlawful act dishonest so as to expose the doer to the severities of penal law.

193. Meaning of "Gain".—The word "gain" here then means acquisition of the specific property in respect of which he causes wrongful loss to another. If, therefore, a person maliciously impounds another's cattle with a view to put him to expense, the latter would be put to pecuniary loss generally, but not of the property in question, and, therefore, the person impounding his cattle cannot be, as stated before, proceeded against for their theft.<sup>4</sup> The term "property" as used here means anything which not only may be, but is the subject of ownership. Where, for instance, a student forged one certificate to get another so as to secure his admission to a higher class, the certificate which he so procured was held to be property within the meaning of this section.<sup>5</sup>

194. On the other hand, a bull dedicated and set at large at the shradh of a Hindu in accordance with religious usage, ceases to be the property of its former owner, so that a person capturing and killing it could not be said to cause "wrongful loss" of any property to any one.<sup>6</sup> So Straight, J., in one case, remarked: "It was not only not the subject of ownership by any person, but the original owner had surrendered all his rights as its proprietor, and had given the beast its freedom to go whithersoever it chose; it was, therefore, nullius proprietas and as incapable of larceny being committed in respect of it as if it had been ferae naturae."<sup>7</sup> The fact that the bull was given rice by the dedicator's family and their permission was taken by the villagers using it for breeding purposes would not convert it into the property of the family.<sup>8</sup>

195. Of course, it is no function of the Criminal Code to define what is and what is not property. Its legitimate function is to protect what is admitted property, and if it be a matter of doubt what things are the subjects of a certain right, in whom that right resides, and to what that right extends, it must also be a matter of doubt whether that right has or has not been violated. For example, A without Z's permission, shoots snipe on Z's ground and carries them away; here, if the law of civil rights grants the property in such birds to any person who can catch them, A has not, by killing them and carrying them away, invaded Z's right of property. If, on the other hand, the law of civil right declares such birds

(1) Sumeshar, (1888) A. W. N. 96; Agha Muhammad Yusuf, 18 A. 88; Madaree, 5 W. R. 68; Preonath, 3 W. R. 2; Tarinee Prasad, 18 W. R. 8; Sri Churn Chungo, 22 C. 1017, F. B.; overruling contra in Prosonno Kumar v. Uday Saut, 22 C. 669 (676).

(2) Per Pigot, J., in Sri Churn Chungo, 22 C. 1017, F. B.

(3) Reddi Yerranna, 25 I. C. (M.) 338.

(4) Aradhun v. Myan Khan, 24 W.R. (Cr.) 7 (8).

(5) Soshi Bhushan, 15 A. 210.

(6) Bandu, 8 A. 51; Nihal, 9 A. 348; Romesh Chander v. Hiru, 17 C. 852; Sita, 18 B. 212.

(7) Bandhu, 8 A. 51.

(8) Romesh Chunder v. Hiru Mondul, 17 C. 852.

the property of the person on whose lands they are, A has invaded Z's right of property. If it be a matter of doubt what the state of the civil law on the subject actually is, it must also be a matter of doubt whether A has wronged Z or not.

196. A person may wrongfully gain property to which he is not legally entitled, even though it be his joint property. For a person having no right to exclusive possession of property is in principle not to be differentiated from one who had no right to any possession.<sup>9</sup> The wrongful gain and wrongful loss here spoken of mean, of course, material gain and loss, that is to say, some pecuniary gain or loss as distinguished from a mere sentimental gain or loss as, for instance, of honour, dignity or the like. So where a person presented a forged sanad to a Settlement Officer with a view to obtain his recognition to his pretension to bear the title of Lokur, it was held that the accused's conduct was not dishonest, as it did not involve any wrongful gain or loss as understood in the Code.<sup>10</sup>

197. Wrongful Loss.—As the word "property" has the limited significance above set out, it is apparent that "wrongful loss" is the antithesis of wrongful gain. But it would not have been otherwise so. For as in the case of the sacred bull, though its acquisition by the accused would certainly be a gain to him, it did not imply any corresponding loss to any one.

198. But in the sense in which the word is used in the Code the two words are correlated and if one has gained the other must have necessarily lost, and the reason is evident. The Penal Code has been enacted to protect private rights and, therefore, it uses its phraseology in the sense subservient to its object. A person who loses his property by unlawful means is said to suffer wrongful loss. If, therefore, he be in possession of property to which he is not legally entitled, he cannot suffer wrongful loss in respect of it, even though the means employed to deprive him of it be unlawful. Such a case may be supposed of a person in possession of stolen goods, which the rightful owner may regain by the right of re-capture.<sup>11</sup> So where the accused was sold rice by a Famine Relief Officer at 16 seers per rupee on condition that he should sell it at the rate of 15 seers, instead of which he was discovered having sold it at the rate of 12 seers, the question was if his act amounted to a crime, and it was held that it did not, the reason given for the finding being, that as the property on sale became vested in him, it could not be said that his sale at otherwise than the stipulated rate caused wrongful loss to the Relief Superintendent, nor was there a gain on the part of the accused by unlawful means, for the rice having been sold to him and he having paid for it, it was not unlawful for him to sell it again at such prices as he thought fit.<sup>12</sup>

199. Such a case is, however, easily distinguishable from one in which the servant of a liquor contractor was entrusted with liquor by his master to sell. For selling it he was to receive a certain quantity for himself, and he was to account for the remainder to his master with whom he made a legal contract that he would not adulterate it with water before selling it. In violation of that contract he adulterated the liquor with water and sold it at the rate of unadulterated liquor, appropriating the profit thus made to his own use. Here he obtained property by unlawful means (namely, adulteration) to which the customer was legally entitled, and as his intention was apparent, he was rightly convicted of criminal breach of trust.<sup>13</sup> It will be observed that this case differs from that cited last of the grain contractor in that while in the former the property in liquor was not in the seller, in the case of the grain contractor, it had become vested in him. So a milkman who sold adulterated milk could not be convicted of any offence under the Code, for he had caused no wrongful loss to his customers.<sup>14</sup> So where A, a horse dealer, showed B a telegram purporting to be from his principal refusing B's offer for purchase of a mare whereupon B raised the price for which A sold the animal, B subsequently charging him for cheating, the Court threw out the case on B's admission that the mare was worth the money

(9) Cf. s. 425, expl. 2, and ill. (g).

(10) Jan Mahomed, 10 C. 584.

(11) S. 105, post and comm.

(12) Lal Mahomed, 22 W. R. 82.

(13) Jamsetji, (1888) B. U. C. 395.

(14) Hiri, 1888 B. U. C. 367.

he paid for it, holding that the false inducement by A had caused B no wrongful loss.<sup>15</sup> A loss is not wrongful when a person has no legal right to a thing.<sup>16</sup>

200. It would also appear that the "wrongful loss" occasioned by the act of a person must be the proximate cause of that act. If the loss was too remote, it could not be attributed to the unlawful means employed. So, in one case, it was held that the mere permitting of cattle by the accused to stray does not establish his intention to cause, or knowledge that he was likely to cause, wrongful loss or damage to the public or any person.<sup>17</sup>

201. Wrongful Retention or Deprivation.—Of course, as before remarked, a wrongful act ab initio is not to be distinguished from a wrongful act ex post facto. Thus a person may acquire a thing innocently and afterwards retain it wrongfully and in their result the two acts are the same as if he had initially intended to do wrong.

24. Whoever does anything with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another person, is said to do that thing "dishonestly."
"Dishonestly."

202. Analogous Law.—It is said that the term "dishonestly," as here defined, is equivalent to "fraudulently" defined in the next section.<sup>18</sup> But as will appear from the next section the two terms are not used in the same sense, nor have they the same legal incidents.

203. Principle.—The word "dishonestly" is here used in a technical sense, which is at variance with its popular significance as implying deviation from probity. The term is here used in connection with property, and it has nothing to do with probity. If a person causes wrongful gain or loss with that intention, he is dishonest. In other words, where a person intending to gain by unlawful means gains by unlawful means property to which he is not legally entitled, his act is dishonest within the meaning of the section. Three essential ingredients must, thus, be present to constitute dishonesty in law, namely,—(a) intention, (b) employment of unlawful means, and (c) acquisition of property to which one has no right. As has been pointed out in discussion under the last section the presence of the second and third elements constitutes wrongful gain or loss, but not dishonestly in which there must exist the intention to cause wrongful gain or loss which is the essence of dishonesty in this<sup>19</sup> and the ensuing section.

204. Meaning of Words.—"With intent": The word "intent" by its etymology seems to have metaphorical allusion to archery and implies "aim" and thus connotes not a casual or merely possible result—foreseen perhaps not as an improbable incident, but not desired—but rather connotes the one object for which the effort is made and this has reference to what has been called the dominant motive.<sup>20</sup> "Wrongful gain" means material gain.<sup>21</sup> (§§ 188-192).

205. Constitution of Legal Dishonesty.—As has been before observed, nothing is dishonest under the Act, which is not intended to be dishonest. But nothing can be said to have been intended by a person, unless it was his immediate and probable intention: or in other words, unless it was his dominant motive (§ 190). But as "intention" is a psychological act, the only means by which the Court can judge of it is by inference from the external acts and conduct of a party. So Sir James Stephen wrote: "The only possible way of discovering a man's intention is by looking at what he actually did, and by considering what must have appeared to him at the time of the natural consequence of his conduct."<sup>22</sup> The test to be applied is not the test of a hypothetical reasonable man—but of the person whose intention is to be read. The Court must then put

(15) Dick, 12 A. L. J. 1258.

(16) Tun Aung, (1907) 4 B. R. 149; 7 Cr. L. J. 448.

(17) Toorebai Khan, B. U. C. 11.

(18) Lal Mahomed, 22 W. R. 82 (83); but this view is erroneous. Kedur Nath, 5 C. W.

N. 897.

(19) Durmadas Lilaram, (1932) S. 169.

(20) Per Batty, J., in Bhagwant v. Kedari, 25 B. 202 (226); Girdhari, 8 A. 653.

(21) Nga Ba Thein, (1925) R. 9.

(22) 2 History of the Criminal Law, p. 111.

itself as far as possible in his situation for the purpose of seeing what must have been his intention. His habit of life, manner of thought, associations and belief may have influenced him in his action. It is, therefore, essential to take all these elements into consideration. For, in a criminal case, there is no golden rule of conjectural test. The sole test is what was the intention of the accused at the time of the act complained of, and for which purpose it was said that only the primary and not the more remote intention of the accused must be looked at.<sup>23</sup>

206. So where an accountant fraudulently paid away money to B, held in deposit for payment to A, who pressed for its payment, whereupon the accused made false reports to the effect that A's money, held as a revenue deposit, was to be transferred to the Civil Court upon which a cheque for making the transfer was drawn up, which the accused altered to conceal his previous fraud, it was held that the accused's immediate intention being merely to conceal his previous fraud, he could not be convicted of forgery, though he could be convicted of making a false record.<sup>24</sup> So a candidate gaining admission to an examination by presenting a forged certificate which he knew to be forged, was held not to have acted "dishonestly" within the meaning of this section, inasmuch as his primary intention was to gain admission, and not to cause wrongful loss to the university.<sup>25</sup> This case was, however, dissented from in Allahabad on the ground that the certificate was certainly used with intent to support a claim within the meaning of section 463 of the Code,<sup>1</sup> and it has since been overruled.<sup>2</sup> But neither in the Full Bench nor in the Allahabad case was the view of the Calcutta Divisional Bench on the meaning of intention combated, but it was rather conceded. Indeed, it may be now regarded as settled that in judging of a man's intention regard must be had only to his primary and immediate intention, and not to his secondary or more remote intention—if intention it may be called—for in reality it is the motive, which law ignores in judging of a man's criminality (§ 216). So where a person fabricated receipts in lieu of genuine ones which had been lost, he could not be convicted under section 471 of the Code for dishonestly using forged documents.<sup>3</sup>

207. The same principle runs through the case in which the accused's brother felled certain trees without a license, thereupon the accused fearing detection took the Government marking hammer from the watchman's baggage, marked the trees in order to make it appear that they had been marked with the Forest officer's permission, and then replaced the hammer, on which it was held that as the accused did not intend to keep the hammer or deprive the watchman of it, there was no dishonest taking within the meaning of this section, and, therefore, no theft.<sup>4</sup> So again, since "intent to commit an offence" is the cardinal ingredient of criminal trespass,<sup>5</sup> a person who enters upon property in the possession of another may produce those feelings in the mind of the possessor, but if he did not do with that intention, the result produced is immaterial in determining his criminal liability.<sup>6</sup>

208. The same text determines the criminal responsibility of a person charged with cheating. Suppose the case of a person purchasing, say wool, with delivery of possession, from a firm, agreeing to pay the price on the next day, which he did not, and who, moreover, pledged the wool to another and raised money thereon which he himself appropriated, could he be convicted of cheating? It was held not, because there was nothing to shew that at the time of purchase he had no intention to pay.<sup>7</sup>

(23) Girdhari Lal, 8 A. 653; Haradhan, 19 C. 380.

(24) Girdhari Lal, 8 A. 653; Annasami, 1 Weir 554; Sabapathy, 1 Weir 549, but see Rash Behari Das, 35 C. 450; Balakrishna, 37 B. 666.

(25) Haradhan, 19 C. 380; contra in Soshi Bhushan, 15 A. 210; Srinivasan, 25 M. 726.

(1) Soshi Bhushan, 15 A. 210.

(2) Abbas Ali, 25 C. 512, F. B.; following Toshack, 4 Cox. 38.

(3) Sheodayal, 7 A. 450.

(4) Budhu, (1887) P. R. No. 1.

(5) S. 441, post.

(6) Sivaratri, (1885) Weir (3rd Ed.), 329; Rayapadayachi, 19 M. 240; Po Kin, (1902) 1 L. B. R. 355; Vujeer, (1868) B. U. C. 10.

(7) Fazul, (1886) B. U. C. 312.

209. It is not necessary that the intention of the person must be to cause wrongful gain or loss to any person in particular. Indeed, in many cases, e.g., of arson or mischief, it would be impossible to trace precisely the victim of the accused's malice. In England, therefore, it has been expressly provided that in case of arson or forgery it is unnecessary to state or prove that the accused had any intention to injure or defraud any particular person.<sup>8</sup> But these are statutory exemptions which modify the rule.

210. Proof of Intention.—But as regards the proof of intention, it is not in every case that direct evidence is available or necessary. For while it is true that intent must be proved, it is also true that where a person commits an unlawful act, unaccompanied by any circumstance justify its commission, it is presumed that he has acted advisedly, and with an intent to produce the natural consequences of such an act.<sup>9</sup> If, for instance, a man is proved to have wilfully set a house on fire, it was held that no further proof of intention to injure was necessary.<sup>10</sup> So Blackburn, J., in another case, observed: "I have always thought a man acts maliciously when he wilfully does that which he knows will injure another in person or property."<sup>11</sup> These cases may be defended upon the principle of res ipsa loquitur;<sup>12</sup> for, in all such cases, the intention is palpably criminal, and no further proof of its criminality is required. These cases are not, therefore, exceptions to the rule, but are rather illustrations of it. For the question is always one of fact and never one of law, and the decision must, therefore, depend upon the circumstances of each case.<sup>13</sup>

211. But while it is true that sometimes it is supererogatory to adduce evidence of intent, it is also true that cases sometimes arise when the facts are so nicely balanced that any inference as to "intent" becomes a matter of difficulty. Take, for instance, the case of a creditor who takes possession of his debtor's goods with a view to compel him to pay up his just debts. Now, here it cannot be said that the primary intention of the accused was to deprive his debtor of his property—for that was not his intention. Was he, therefore, guilty of theft which he would be if his intention was dishonest, and which, again, means that his primary object was to acquire his debtor's property. At one time, it was held that as that was not his intention, the creditor could not be held guilty of theft.<sup>14</sup> But this view did not long prevail, for the consensus of authorities is, now, in favour of the view that the creditor, in such a case, would be guilty of theft, and it is, indeed, so provided in the Code.<sup>15</sup> And this view may be defended on the ground that the creditor's primary intention was certainly to cause wrongful loss (i.e., loss unauthorized by law), though he did not intend to make wrongful gain. In other words, if a person causes wrongful loss to another, his action may be dishonest, though he does not intend to make any wrongful gain for himself. This is sufficiently clear from the use of the word "or" in the section, which shows that it suffices to constitute dishonesty that either wrongful gain or wrongful loss should have been intended. It is not even necessary that wrongful gain and loss should have been actually caused, for if it were so, an attempted burglary would be no crime. The section gives prominence to the intention, making all else subordinate thereto.

212. The presence or absence of intention is, therefore, the crux in all offences of which dishonesty is an element. And this may be illustrated by many cases from the Reports. Thus, where the manager of a joint Hindu family including

(8) Arson, 12 Geo. 3, c. 24, s. 60; Forgery, 36 and 37 Vict., c. 32, s. 49.

(9) Lakshman, 26 B. 558; Sarsar Singh, (1934) A. 711.

(10) Farrington, Russ. & Ry. 207; Ali Kasim, 10 I. C. (L. B.) 929.

(11) Ward, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 356.

(12) "The thing speaks for itself."

(13) Farnborough, (1895) 2 Q. B. 484.

(14) Longhurst, (1858) Mad. unrep. cited per

Curiam in Baburam, 32 C. 775 (780); Soshee Bhushun Roy, 4 Shome 14; Prosunno Kumar v. Udoy Sant, 22 C. 669; overruled in Sri Churn Chungo, 22 C. 1017, F. B. To the same effect, Madaree, 3 W. R. 2; Preonath, 5 W. R. 68; Gridharee, 10 W. R. 35; Tarinee, 18 W. R. 8; Nagappa, 15 B. 344; Prayag v. Arju Mian, 22 C. 139.

(15) S. 378, ill. (l), post.

some minors applied to the Collector for payment to him of money due to the joint family, and was, thereupon, told to produce a power-of-attorney or to produce the minors to admit his authority to sign the receipt on their behalf, whereupon he produced some persons to falsely personate the minors and thus secured the money, it was held that inasmuch as he had been authorized to receive the money, his act, in producing wrong persons, could not be construed to be dishonest, as he had caused no wrongful gain or loss as required by the last section, nor was it his intention.<sup>16</sup> In another similar case, where one Koomaree who had agreed to sell land, set out to register the conveyance but fell ill on the way and sent in the accused, who, by personating her, had the deed registered in her name, it was held that, though the accused had committed an offence under the Registration Act, she could not be convicted of cheating, as there was nothing to show that she intended to defraud or injure any one in personating Koomaree, and doing an act which Koomaree doubtless would have done had she not been prevented by illness from going to the office in person.<sup>17</sup> This principle was, however, somewhat unduly strained in the case of an accused who had applied for the duplicate of a university certificate to the Registrar in the name of another person qualified to receive it. The Court acquitted him holding that his act was neither dishonest nor fraudulent<sup>18</sup> which unquestionably it was, as was pointed out in a later case of the same Court.<sup>19</sup> And so where the accused being anxious to obtain a recognition of his title to "Loskur" which presumably carried no emolument, presented a forged sanad to the Settlement Officer, it was held that as the accused's sole object was to secure official recognition to a title of dignity, there was no intent to defraud within the meaning of this section.<sup>20</sup> These cases are sufficient to show that the fact that the conduct of the accused has been dishonest in fact does not support an inference that it is dishonest in law, though, as will be seen presently, not a few of the cases above cited present apt illustrations of what is fraudulent without being dishonest—a distinction which appears not to have been considered in them (§ 190).

213. Indeed, there may be cases where the accused may be guilty of an offence under a local Act, but his conduct may not be criminal under the Code. Such a case is presented by a person illegally seizing and impounding cattle with the malicious intent of subjecting the owner to the additional expense, inconvenience and annoyance of rescuing them.<sup>21</sup> Here, the conduct of the accused was culpable but not criminal under the Code. But it would have been so, if his intention had been to support a claim for damages against the owner. Where the accused improperly obtained possession of a person's account book and retained it with the intention of using it in a judicial inquiry as evidence against the person to whom it belonged, it was held that the accused had committed no theft, as such temporary retention could not cause wrongful loss to the owner within the meaning of the Code.<sup>22</sup> But there is no difference in principle between this case and the case of a creditor seizing his debtor's goods with a view to compel him to repay his loan. And, if the test of the Code, as above indicated, be applied, it will be seen that the case was doubtless one of theft and would probably be now so considered. The dishonest intention of a person may be manifested in a variety of ways, but the test, in each case, is the same—what was his immediate intention, and was there a wrongful gain or loss as expounded elsewhere (§§ 193-195). In one case, the accused had seized a boat of the complainant while conveying passengers across a creek which flowed into a river at a point within three miles from a public ferry, his intention being to compel persons who had to cross the creek to use his ferry in the absence of the complainant's boat, and so to increase his income, and it was held that he had committed theft, for though

(16) Baburam, 35 C. 775.

(17) Luthi Bewa, 2 B. L. R. (A. C. Cr.) 25.

(18) Srinivasan, 25 M. 726.

(19) Kotamaraju, 28 M. 90. To the same effect Appasami, 12 M. 151; Soshi Bhusan,

15 A. 210; Ali Hasan, 28 A. 358; Abbas Ali, 25 C. 512, F. B.; Causeley, 43 C. 421.

(20) Jan Mahomed, 10 C. 584.

(21) Aradhun v. Myan Khan, 24 W. R. 7.

(22) Soshee Bhushun Roy, 4 Shome 14.

it was not his intention to convert the boat to his own use, or to deprive the complainant permanently of its possession, still inasmuch as he had caused wrongful loss to the complainant and had profited by it, he was guilty of theft.<sup>23</sup> In such a case, the English rule would probably be different. For there it has been held that where a thief takes away the owner's horse to assist him in carrying off the booty and where he rode it for some distance and then turned it loose, he could not be convicted of horse-stealing, as he did not intend to appropriate it.<sup>24</sup> So, in another case, where a lover took away his sweet-heart's bonnet and carried it to a haymow of his own with the view to induce the girl to go there where she had been seduced before, the jury thought that the prisoner intended to induce the girl to go again to the haymow, but that he did not intend to deprive her of the bonnet, and that, therefore, he was not guilty of larceny.<sup>25</sup> It is needless to add that such a lover in this country would have a very different verdict to his credit.

214. The question of dishonest intention, again, plays a prominent part in cases of theft in which the accused asserts a claim of right.

Claim of Right.

In such cases, too, it is the duty of the Criminal Court to determine what was the intention of the alleged offender, and, if it arrives at the conclusion that he was not acting in the exercise of a bona fide claim of right, then it cannot refuse to convict the offender, assuming, of course, that the other facts are established which constitute the offence.<sup>1</sup> It is, sometimes, said that the mere assertion of a claim of right is enough, even though that right may be ever so ill-founded.<sup>2</sup> But this is scarcely correct, and if it were, it would be a golden rule for all offenders. There is a manifest difference between a mere assertion of a claim of property or right, and a bona fide belief in such a claim. The mere assertion of a claim of right is never in itself a sufficient plea.<sup>3</sup> There must be a claim, though it may not be a good one, but, nevertheless, it must be good enough to be plausible. Where, therefore, a person removes a tree under an honest belief that it belongs to him, but, in doing so, he betrays want of due care and attention, that is, good faith, in ascertaining the ownership of the same, he would be guilty of theft.<sup>4</sup> Good faith, therefore, is another element in determining intention.

215. Analysis of Mental Process in Criminality.—The process of normal mental activity culminating in acts and consequences may be thus described. The initial stage is the rise of some desire in the mind. This desire is accompanied by the idealization of some movement as bringing about its consummation. The recognition of the casual relation of the action to the result involves a germ of belief in the attainability of the object of desire, or in the efficacy of the action. The action, thus idealized, has now to be carried into effect. Its preparatory stage is reached by volition, which is the exercise of the will leading up to fruition of the desire. Thus, then, in voluntary action, the desire of the end is the cause of the desire of the means. The former is the motive and the latter the intention. It is the "solicitation of the motive" or the mere prompting of the mind as yet not followed by action.<sup>5</sup> Next, we have the direction of the active impulse involved in the state of desire into the definite channel of action suggested. This stage of the process of volition is known as the act. The impression it produces on the external world is spoken of as its consequence. And, since motive involves the anticipation of the final realisation, this consummation is spoken of as the object, purpose or end of the action, and co-relatively the action as the means of gaining or realizing the object or desire. These terms are frequently used in criminal jurisprudence, but a reference to the existing case-law would appear to show that their true significance is not always kept in view, and

(23) Nagappa, 15 B. 344.

(24) Crumph, 1 C. & P. 658. To the same effect, Phillips, 2 East P. C. 662; but contra Trebilok, Dears & B. C. C. 453; Peat, 2 East P. C. 557.

(25) Dickenson, Russ. & Ry. 420.

(1) Budh Singh, 2 A. 101; Rahmatulla v. Rahimulla, 27 C. 501.

(2) Bhicajee, (1869) B. U. C. 22; Khetter

Nath v. Indro, 16 W. R. 78; Algara, 28 M. 304; Chaitan v. Kalachand, 10 C. W. N. 233n.

(3) Sabalsang, 4 Bom. L. R. 936; s. 52, post.

(4) Sabalsang, 4 Bom. L. R. 936; Nasib v. Nannoo, 15 W. R. 47; Ajodhya, 54 I. C. (Pat.) 992.

(5) 11 Volkman, s. 147; Waits, s. 41; Bain's Emotions and the Will, Pt. II, Ch. viii.

to that cause may be safely ascribed the somewhat unsatisfactory decisions to which the Courts have, in several cases, committed themselves. Take, for instance, the case of the creditor coercing his debtor to pay up. The debtor owes him a debt. It furnishes the creditor with a motive to see himself repaid. That motive impels him to take forcible possession of his debtor's property. He thus truly intends to take possession of it. That he does so unlawfully is manifest. His taking possession of the property is the act, and the consequence or effect of which is the wrongful deprivation of its possession by the debtor. All the elements of dishonesty are thus fully present, and yet the motive of the creditor was not criminal, and may have been even righteous. But law does not deal with man's motives. It confines itself to his intentions. And it is, therefore, that the difference between the two should be clearly appreciated.

216. Intention and Motive Distinguished.—A distinction, therefore, exists and must be made between a man's intention and motive. A person may act from laudable motive, but if his intention causes wrongful loss, his crime is complete irrespective of his motive. Where, for instance, a Hindu acting under a strong religious impulse seized some cows which a Mahomedan was taking to kill, his motive from the standpoint of a person of his own religion was virtuous, but his intention, being to deprive the lawful owner of the possession of his property, and the means employed being unlawful, he was held guilty of theft.<sup>6</sup> The motive, object or design of a person should never be confused with his intention. The motive of the creditor seizing his debtors' goods to coerce him to pay up his debt was certainly not to cause permanent loss of the goods to the debtor—but he did cause him loss, however temporarily, and he did so intentionally. He was, therefore, held guilty of theft. Criminal law regards only a man's intentions and not his motives.<sup>7</sup> To permit a person who has committed an injury to set up his motives as defence or excuse, and to allege that he did the injury from virtuous motives or from a wrongful impression of the law or the fact, would frequently produce a defect in justice, and allow offenders to escape. So the Law Commissioners wrote: "We do not find that it is permitted to any person to set up his private intentions, or to allege virtuous motives, simply, as defence or excuse under a criminal charge. We hold with the English Criminal Law Commissioners that 'to allow any man to substitute for Law his own notions of right would be in effect to subvert the Law. To investigate the real motive, in each case, would be impracticable, and even if that could be done, a man's private opinion could not possibly be allowed to weigh against the authority of Law.'<sup>8</sup> It is, therefore, never a complete defence to say that though the intention of a person was criminal, his motive was righteous. So, in England, good motive is no justification of a libel.<sup>9</sup> As Lord Blackburn remarked: "No one can cast about firebrands and cause death, and then escape from being responsible by saying he was in sport."<sup>9</sup>

217. Legal v. Popular Dishonesty.—As observed before, (§ 203) dishonesty in law is, at times, different from the dishonesty of the market-place. Unless a person employs unlawful means, his conduct is not dishonest within the meaning assigned to that word in the Code, however reprehensible his conduct may be, when judged according to the standard of popular morality. So a person may divert the flow of his underground water so as to deprive his neighbour of it; and his right is the same whatever his motive may be, whether bona fide to improve his own land, or maliciously to injure his neighbour, or to induce his neighbour to buy him out: "This is not a case in which the state of mind of the person doing the act can affect the right to do it. If it was a lawful act, however ill the motive might be, he had a right to do it. If it was an unlawful act, however good his motive might be, he

(6) Ram Baram, 15 A. 299; Parichat, 5 N. L. R. 17; contra in Raghunath, 15 A. 22 distinguished on the ground that an intention to cause wrongful loss was according to the finding of the Court below absent in that case.

(7) Balok Khan, 4 S. L. R. 38; Vithoo 7

N. L. R. 185; Waris Ali, 7 N. L. R. 180.

(8) First Report, s. 114. Dawkins v. Lord Paulet, L. R. 5 Q. B. 94 (112); Bowan v. Hall, 6 Q. B. D. 333 (343).

(9) Capital and Counties Bank v. Henty, 7 App. Cas. 741 (772).

would have no right to do it. Motives and intentions, in such a question as is now before your Lordships, seem to be absolutely irrelevant.”<sup>10</sup> So trusts and trade combines are ruinous to the petty trade and they tend to secure a trade monopoly, but as they are not illegal, they may appear dishonest to the layman, but they are not so in the eye of the law. And it is recognized a fair game to exclude a rival trader from competition, or to ruin him by underselling.<sup>11</sup>

25. A person is said to do a thing fraudulently if he does that thing
 “Fraudulently.” with intent to defraud, but not otherwise.

218. Analogous Law.—The Code does not define what it is to “defraud.” As Sir James Stephen writes: “There has always been a great reluctance amongst lawyers to attempt to define fraud, and this is not unnatural when we consider the different kinds of conduct to which the word is applied in connection with different branches of law, and especially in connection with the equitable branch of it. I shall not attempt to construct a definition which will meet every case which might be suggested, but there is little danger in saying that whenever the words ‘fraud’ or ‘intent to defraud’ or ‘fraudulently’ occur in the definition of a crime, two elements, at least, are essential to the commission of a crime: namely, first, deceit or an intention to deceive or, in some cases, mere secrecy; and secondly, either actual injury or possible injury or an intent to expose some person either to actual injury, or to a risk of possible injury, by means of that deceit or secrecy. The intent, I may add, is very seldom the only or the principal intention entertained by the fraudulent person, whose principal object, in nearly every case, is his own advantage. The injurious deception is usually intended only as a means to an end, though this, as I have already explained, does not prevent it from being intentional. A practically conclusive test as to the fraudulent character of a deception for criminal purposes is this: Did the author of the deceit derive any advantage from it which he could not have had if the truth had been known? If so, it is hardly possible that that advantage should not have had an equivalent in loss, or risk of loss, to some one else; and, if so, there was fraud. In practice people hardly ever intentionally deceive each other in matters of business for a purpose which is not fraudulent.”<sup>12</sup>

219. Though the term “intend to defraud” has not been defined in the Code, the word “fraud” is defined in the Indian Contract Act<sup>13</sup> for the purpose of that Act, and that definition is, therefore, much wider than this section. Fraud is really protean in its form, and its definition can never be complete or general. In English law, no attempt has been made at its definition, but it has been understood to mean “something dishonest and morally wrong.”<sup>14</sup> But this is its meaning in the civil law, but it is not its sense in the Code, where, however, it appears to have been used in the ordinary acceptation of the word,<sup>15</sup> as denoting the misleading of another by falsehood spoken or acted. According to Le Blanche, J., “By fraud is meant an intention to deceive, may it be from any expectation of advantage to the party himself, or from ill-will towards the other, the fact is immaterial.”<sup>16</sup> But though deception is of the essence of fraud, the two terms are, by no means, interchangeable, since deception may be equally innocent as well as fraudulent.<sup>17</sup> Fraud involves two conceptions, namely, deceit and injury to the person deceived; that is, the infringement of some legal right possessed by one, though it may not necessarily

(10) Per Lord Halsbury, L.C., in Mayor &c., of Bradford v. Pickles, (1895) A. C. 587 (594), affirming O. A. (1894) 3 Ch. 53; (1895) 1 Ch. 145; following Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. C. 349; but the underground channel must be irregular and indefinite. Grand Junction Canal Co. v. Shngar, L. R. 6 Ch. 483.

(11) Mogul Steamship Co. v. McGregor Gow & Co., 23 Q. B. D. 598 O. A., (1892) A. C. 25 (49).

(12) 2 History of Criminal Law, p. 121; cited per Banerji, J., in Mhd. Saeed Khan,<sup>21</sup>

A. 113 (115); Surendra Nath Ghose, 38 C. 75 (90); Balkrishna, 37 B. 666.

(13) Act IX of 1872, s. 17.

(14) Per Willes, J., in ex parte Watson, 21 Q. B. D. 301.

(15) Baburam, 32 C. 775; Balkrishna, 37 B. 666.

(16) In Haycraft v. Creasy, 2 East 92 (108), followed in Vithal, 13 B. 515n.; Khandu Singh, 22 B. 768; Lalit Mohan, 22 C. 313 (322); Rash Behari, 35 C. 450; Balkrishna, 37 B. 666.

(17) Baburam, 32 C. 775.

involve deprivation of property.<sup>18</sup> The word has nothing to do with wrongful gain or wrongful loss of property, for fraud operates on the mind, and thus produces results which the perpetrator of fraud had contemplated.

220. Principle.—This section does not define or describe “fraudulently.” On the other hand, it is enacted to limit its sense for the purpose of the Code. As ordinarily understood, fraud is a term which enters largely in the law of contracts and it has there received a meaning much too extensive for the purpose of the Code. This section, therefore, enacts that there can be no fraud unless there was an intention to defraud. In other words, the Code eliminates from its consideration all constructive frauds and only confines use of the term to deception planned and practised.

221. Meaning of Words.—“Fraudulently” : The choice of an adverb for definition is due to its use, as such, in the Code, and it can only refer to a state of mind as distinguished from the character of the deed. “To do a thing,” which includes words merely spoken.<sup>19</sup> “With intent to defraud,” which may or may not imply deprivation of property actual or intended.<sup>20</sup> The word “defraud” has, at least, three meanings : (i) To deprive one of right, either by obtaining something by deception or artifice, or by taking something wrongfully without the knowledge or consent of the owner ;<sup>21</sup> (ii) to withhold wrongfully from another what is due to him, or to wrongfully prevent one from detaining what he may justly claim ; and (iii) to defeat or frustrate wrongfully. Here the term is used rather in the first, than in the second or third sense. But the three senses together do not convey the precise meaning of the word, which is here used to imply the misleading of one’s mind by causing one to believe what is false, or to disbelieve what is true. “But not otherwise” : But for the doing of a thing with the intention to defraud there is no fraud, as understood in the Code.

222. “Intent to Defraud.”—There can be no fraud, unless there was an intention to defraud. Usually that intention is directed to defraud some one in particular,<sup>22</sup> but it is not necessary that it should have been invariably so directed.<sup>23</sup> A person may gild a brass ring and throw it on the road to cheat passers-by, the object being to make the finder pay a share of its supposed value to the cheat. Here there was clearly an intention to cheat some one though no one in particular. The finder may believe in the genuineness of the ring and sell it to another who may purchase it without scrutiny. Here, though the purchaser has been “defrauded,” the seller had no “intention” to defraud him, and he is, therefore, not guilty of cheating. On the other hand, there may have been an intention to defraud, but no fraud is, in fact, committed, in which case it may be said that a man cannot be punished merely for his criminal intention. He must do something, and having done it, intent to “defraud” another. Now, what is to “defraud” a person ? The word has not been used elsewhere in the Code. But it must mean something different from what is implied in “dishonestly” described in the last section.

223. In a Full Bench case, the Calcutta Judges remarked : “The word ‘defraud’ is of double meaning in the sense that it either may or may not imply deprivation (of property), and as it is not defined in the Code, and is not, so far as we are aware, to be found in the Code except in section 25, its meaning must be sought by a consideration of the context in which the word ‘fraudulently’ is used. The word ‘fraudulently’ is used in sections 471 and 464 together with the word ‘dishonestly’ and presumably in a sense not covered by the latter word. If, however, it be held that ‘fraudulently’ implies deprivation, either actual or intended, then, apparently, that word would perform no function which would not have been fully discharged by the word ‘dishonestly,’ and its use would be mere surplusage. So far as such a consideration carries any weight, it obviously inclines in favour of the (18) Surendra Nath Ghosh, 14 C. W. N. 1066 ; Dhunum Kazee, 9 C. 53 (60) ; Ram Chand Gurvala, (1926) L. 385 ; Sivananda, (1926) M. 1072.

(19) See s. 415, ill. (a) ; s. 416, ills. (a) and (b).

(20) Baburam, 32 C. 775.

(21) Harajivan Walji, 50 B. 174 (185) ; Sanjiv Ratnappa, 56 B. 488 (494).

(22) S. 415, ills.

(23) S. 471, post.

view that the word 'fraudulently' should not be confined to transactions of which deprivation of property forms a part."<sup>24</sup> So where a person forged a certificate of competency as an Engine-room First Tindal, and produced it before an officer to obtain another certificate from him entitling him to present himself for an examination as engine-driver of ocean-going steamers, it was held that the certificate was produced fraudulently, though not dishonestly, as it was produced to deceive the officer, and that he was, therefore, rightly convicted under sections 465 and 471 of the Code.<sup>25</sup> This case was followed in the case of a European lad who had purchased three revolvers giving in the certificates of purchase names not his own, whereupon the Court held him guilty of forgery in that his conduct, though not dishonest, was unquestionably fraudulent.<sup>1</sup> The same view has been taken in the Punjab where the meaning of a false certificate with intent to procure employment in a public department on its strength has been held to be "fraudulent," as its immediate object was to deceive a public officer into a belief that the person holding the certificate possessed a guarantee of efficiency which he did not really possess, and so induced him to grant employment which he might otherwise not have done.<sup>2</sup> But, of course, the same reasoning would not apply to a sanad forged to support a barren title, unconnected with any material advantage,<sup>3</sup> though if regard be had to the language of section 471 it is immaterial whether the document used had or had not anything to do with property.

224. However, apart from the applicability of section 471, the question whether mere words, falsely uttered and erroneously believed in and acted upon, could be said to constitute cheating came up for decision in an Allahabad case and was decided in the negative.<sup>4</sup> There a person had secured his enlistment in the Police by falsely describing himself as being not a resident of a prescribed district. "Fraud or dishonesty" was, it was said, absent from these circumstances. But it was not stated why fraud was absent. A person may deceive, and thereby secure for himself an advantage, whether measurable in money or not, but if he does deceive, his act is fraudulent, though, as such, it may not be criminal.

225. Intent : Primary and Secondary.—Where a person uses a forged document<sup>5</sup> or alters a document<sup>6</sup> to support a just claim, it may be a question whether it is fraudulent because the claimant intends to commit a fraud on the Court by making it believe that the document produced is genuine and that he is entitled to recover money upon its basis. In such and similar cases, the Court not infrequently discriminates between what it calls the primary and the secondary intention. That these have a definite place in mental psychology will be apparent if regard is had to cases in which a person forges receipts to replace the genuine ones lost<sup>7</sup> or fabricates an account to conceal his previous misappropriation,<sup>8</sup> or, in short, where his real or primary intention is to save himself, the subterfuges adopted being merely means to attain that end. So in a case of trespass into the house of another with intent to have illicit intercourse, the Court regards the secondary intention as sufficient to justify a conviction for trespass.<sup>9</sup> The duality of sense in interpreting the word "intent" is, therefore, clear, and since the primary intent ordinarily corresponds with what may be regarded as the "motive" it is often a question of some nicety whether the intent is sufficient to charge one with the responsibility of a crime.

(24) Abbas Ali, 25 C. 512 (521), F. B.

(25) Ib.

(1) Causley, 43 C. 421 : following Toshack, 1 Den. C. C. R. 492; Dhunum Kaze, 9 C. 53; Abbas Ali, 25 C. 512, F. B.

(2) Abdul Razak, (1895) P. R. No. 2.

(3) Jan Mahomed, 10 C. 584.

(4) Dwarka Prasad, 6 A. 97.

(5) Lalit Mohan, 22 C. 313; Dhunum, 9 C. 53; Kedar Nath, 5 C. W. N. 897; contra, Sheodayal, 7 A. 459, dissented from.

(6) Gobindo Mal, (1895) P. R. No. 21; See also Babu Ram Rai, 32 C. 775 (779, 780)—to deceive one is not to defraud one.

(7) Sheodayal, 7 A. 459.

(8) Lal Gumul, (1870) N. W. P. H. C. R. 11; Jageshur, (1874) N. W. P. H. C. R. 56; Jiwnand, 5 A. 221; Girdhari Lal, 8 A. 653; Jyotish Chandra, 36 C. 955.

(9) Laksman, 26 B. 558; Ram Saran, (1906) P. R. 12; followed in Premam, 11 L. 238; Jiwan Singh, (1908) P. R. 17.

226. Immaterial Elements.—It is to be observed that while, in calculating wrongful gain or loss under the last section, it is necessary to see as to what particular person has suffered by the dishonesty, it is not necessary that the intention to defraud must be to defraud anyone in particular. In other words, a general intention to defraud without the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person and wrongful loss to another, is sufficient for the purpose of the definition.<sup>10</sup> It is not, moreover, necessary that the purpose intended should have been achieved. As Maule, J., said: "There may be intention to defraud without the power or the opportunity to defraud."<sup>11</sup> ... It is not necessary that any person should be in a situation to be defrauded."<sup>12</sup> The question, then, that the fraud was fruitless or unnecessary is immaterial. Where, therefore, a person having otherwise a good title, forged a will to support his title though there was no necessity for it, still its user was nevertheless held to be fraudulent. So Norris, J., observed: "Let a person's title to property be ever so good, yet, if, in the course of an action brought against him to gain possession of the property, he uses, by way of supporting his title, though there may be no necessity for the use of it, a forged document such as is this hiba, I am clearly of opinion that he uses it fraudulently."<sup>13</sup> It is, thus, the intention and not the effect that determines the character of the act. A person forging the name of another who has sufficient funds in Bank, to a cheque with his consent merely to try his credit or to imitate his handwriting does not intend to defraud, though there might be persons who might be defrauded. His conduct cannot, therefore, be condemned as fraudulent within the meaning of the section. On the other hand, in the case supposed, the person had no account in Bank which the forger only supposed he had, and on that supposition forged his name, an intention to defraud would be presumed, although no person might or could be defrauded.<sup>14</sup>

26. A person is said to have "reason to believe" a thing if he has "Reason to believe," sufficient cause to believe that thing, but not otherwise.

227. Analogous Law.—The phrase "reason to believe" is used in sections 411-414 relating to receipt of stolen property. A person who has reason to believe must be put upon inquiry and have grounds for his belief; otherwise he has no such reason.

228. Principle.—No man can be condemned as receiver of stolen property, unless it is at least shown that there existed circumstances sufficient to convince him that the property with which he was dealing was stolen property. A man cannot be punished for so infamous a crime without at least so much precaution; for otherwise a careless or a thoughtless man might be convicted if only he did not make sufficient inquiry to ascertain whether the property he was purchasing had been honestly acquired.<sup>15</sup>

229. Meaning of Words.—"If he has sufficient cause," i.e., if the facts and circumstances are such as should probably have brought home to him the knowledge of a fact or from which he could not but have drawn an inference that the fact existed. The words used are "if he has sufficient cause to believe" and not "if there is sufficient cause to believe" which shows that the mere existence of a sufficient cause is not enough, if it was not brought to his knowledge. Sufficient cause must, then, exist and he must know of its existence, otherwise, he has no "reason to believe a thing."

230. Knowledge and Reason to Believe.—This phrase introduces into Criminal Law the presumption of guilt arising from facts which are, in themselves, insufficient to prove the crime itself. As an accessory to a crime he is as great a danger to society as the criminal himself, and as an accessory works in greater secrecy and with circumspection, it is necessary, on the one hand, that he should not be immune for want of direct evidence. On the other hand, as being charged for

(10) Dhunum Kaze, 9 C. 53 (60); Surendra Nath Ghosh, 14 C. W. N. 1076.

(11) Nash, 2 Dears, C. C. R. 493 (500).

(12) Ib., p. 503.

(13) Dhunum Kaze, 9 C. 53.

(14) Nash, 2 Dears C. C. R. 493 (499).

(15) Rango Timaji, 6 B. 402 (403); Gulhad Shah, (1888) P. R. No. 37.

a nefarious act, it is also necessary that he should not be hastily concluded to be guilty, unless there is a sufficient cause for it.

231. What is a sufficient cause in a given case so as to justify the presumption, is a matter upon which no general statement can be made. For it must depend upon the facts and circumstances of each case, upon education, intelligence, knowledge, and opportunity for knowledge, and habits of thought of the receiver, the time, place and his manner of receiving the property, and, indeed, a host of other circumstances from which men usually judge of the intention of others. Where, for instance, a Rajput<sup>16</sup> allowed his female child after the mother's death, to gradually languish away and die from want of proper sustenance, and it was shown that he had persistently ignored the wants of the child, although repeatedly warned by the Police of its condition and the consequences of his neglect of it, and there was nothing to show that the prisoner was not in a position to support the child, it was held that the offence of the prisoner was murder and not merely culpable homicide.<sup>17</sup> In this case the word "know" as used in section 300 was taken to mean the same thing as "reason to believe". These two terms are distinguishable in common parlance, but they appear to express the same idea in law. For, in law a person "knows" a thing not only when he has precise knowledge of it, but also when he is in possession of circumstances leading to the conclusion that the thing exists.<sup>18</sup>

232. In other words, "guilty knowledge" or mens rea does not necessarily imply sensual perception, but belief, founded on facts and circumstances, is tantamount to knowledge in its narrower sense. An examination of the Code would appear to support this view. For while there are sections<sup>19</sup> in which the word "know" alone occurs, it cannot be said that in those sections, the only state of mind postulated is that concerned with direct perception, as distinguished from a mind in which there is conviction from information and belief. Indeed, in some cases, sensual perception is immaterial, as in the case of sale of adulterated drugs<sup>20</sup> by the servant of a chemist who is with his master equally liable; in other cases, it is impossible, as in the case of homicide and murder.<sup>21</sup> For how can a man know otherwise than by inference that he is likely by a certain act to cause death, without which there can be no culpable homicide or murder.<sup>22</sup> That this appears to be the sense in which the expression is used in the Code, is made further manifest by the language employed in the other sections.<sup>23</sup> Where the phrase is varied, as in section 301, in which the words used are "knows to be likely to cause death," or section 418 in which cheating is spoken of "with the knowledge that he is likely thereby to cause wrongful loss," etc., in which certainty born of direct knowledge is rendered unnecessary. Therefore, a person may know that a certain consequence is inevitable or that the existence of a certain fact is undoubted, but it is not necessary that his knowledge must be direct or sensual, and not indirect or inferential.

233. At the same time it cannot, for all time, be assumed that the degree of knowledge in one who "knows" is the same as in one who has "reason to believe." Indeed, the use of the word singly in some sections and the collocation of the two in other sections<sup>24</sup> suggests a distinction which must be present in the mind of the Legislature. The word "know" is certainly much stronger than "reason to believe,"

(16) Rajputs being proud of their high lineage do not welcome the advent of daughters who are supposed to lower their dignity by having to find for them husbands whom they have to acknowledge as their superior—a superstition which accounted for the infanticide of other days. The other reason which led to this crime was that daughters did not make bread winners and could not fight—a distinct disadvantage to a soldierly people.

(17) Gunga Singh, 5 N. W. P. H. C. R. 44.

(18) National Bank of Australasia v. Morris, (1892) A. C. 287 (291).

(19) E.g. ss. 200, 231, 232, 255, 259, 263-A, 271, 275, 276, 299, 300.

(20) Ss. 275, 276.

(21) Pharmaceutical Society v. London and Provincial Supply Association, 5 A. C. 857; Hotchin v. Hindmarsh, (1891) 2 Q. B. 180.

(22) Ss. 299, 300, fourthly.

(23) E.g., ss. 301, 418.

(24) E.g., ss. 201, 202, 203, 258, 411, 414.

as the latter is stronger than "suspect."<sup>25</sup> But the three postulate the same kind of knowledge, though they differ in the degree of proof required in each case. But the evidence required is invariably of the same kind, and the facts and circumstances to be proved are similar, though the amount of conviction which their knowledge may produce may differ, and on that difference will depend the culpability or innocence of the accused. Where, therefore, knowledge is essential to constitute an offence, it is insufficient if the facts adduced fall short of that proof. On the other hand, knowingly ought not to be read into a statutory offence, unless it is clear that the Legislature intended some such qualification.<sup>1</sup> At one time, it was commonly held that guilty knowledge was the essence of a crime: Actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea.<sup>2</sup> But this rule has, of course, no application to this country, and it has generally ceased to have any extended application, owing to the greater precision of modern Statutes.<sup>3</sup> Mens rea or guilty knowledge is still essential to prove all guilt, but while in certain Statutes this is expressly provided by the insertion of words, such as "knowingly, wilfully, fraudulently, negligently," or the like, in others reference to the state of a man's mind is omitted. But mens rea is, nevertheless, necessary in both cases—with, however, this difference that while, in the one case, it must be proved by the prosecution, in the other, it need not be so proved but will be presumed, unless its absence is established by the defence.<sup>4</sup>

234. In other words, the only effect of the presence or absence of words implying scienter or guilty knowledge is to shift the burden of proof. So in a colonial appeal the Privy Council remarked: "It was strongly urged by the respondent's counsel that in order to the constitution of a crime, whether common law or statutory, there must be mens rea on the part of the accused, and that he may avoid conviction by showing that such mens rea did not exist. That is a proposition which their Lordships do not desire to dispute; but the question whether a particular intent is made an element of the statutory crime, and when that is not the case, whether there was an absence of mens rea in the accused, are questions entirely different, and depend upon different considerations. In cases where the Statute requires a motive to be proved as an essential element of the crime, the prosecution must fail if it is not proved. On the other hand, the absence of mens rea really consists in an honest and reasonable belief entertained by the accused of the existence of facts, which, if true, would make the act, charged against him, innocent."<sup>5</sup> But while this rule applies to all criminal offences, such as are described in the Code, it is not a rule without exceptions which fall into three classes, namely:—(i) acts which are not really criminal, but which are in the public interest prohibited under a penalty, e.g., offences against the Revenue or those under the Adulteration Acts or Games Laws, etc.<sup>6</sup>; (ii) public nuisances<sup>7</sup>; (iii) cases in which although the proceeding is criminal in form, it is only a summary mode of enforcing a civil right.<sup>8</sup> For the purpose of the Code, all then that is necessary to see is the degree of knowledge and state of mind essential to constitute a given offence, and the evidence required is commensurate therewith. What evidence is required in each case cannot, of course, be discussed here, for it will have to be discussed under the various sections concerned.

(25) Rango Timaji, 6 B. 402.

(1) Betts v. Armstead, 20 Q. B. D. 771.

(2) "The act itself does not make a man guilty, unless his intention were so."

(3) Prince, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 154; Bishop, 5 Q. B. D. 259; Cundy v. Le Cocq, 13 Q. B. D. 207 (210).

(4) Sherras v. De Rutzen, (1895) 1 Q. B. 918 (921); Osborne v. Chocqueel (1896) 2 Q. B. 109 (111), (case of dog-bite).

(5) Bank of New South Wales v. Piper, (1897) A. C. 383 (389, 390).

(6) Betts v. Armstead, 20 Q. B. D. 771 (773); Attorney-General v. Lockwood, 9 M. &

W. 378; Woodrow, 15 M. & W. 404; Fitzpatrick v. Kelly, L. R. 8 Q. B. 337; Roberts v. Egerton, L. R. 9 Q. B. 494; Marsh, 2 B. & C. 747; Davis v. Harvey, L. R. 9 Q. B. 433; Bishop, 5 Q. B. D. 259; Mullins v. Collins, L. R. 9 Q. B. 292; Cundy v. Le Cocq, 13 Q. B. D. 207.

(7) Stephens, L. R. 1 Q. B. 702; Medley, 6 C. & P. 292; Barnes v. Akroyd, L. R. 7 Q. B. 474.

(8) Morden v. Porter, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 641; Lee v. Simpson, 3 C. B. 871; Hargreaves v. Diddams, L. R. 10 Q. B. 582.

Property in possession of wife, clerk or servant.

this Code.

27. When property is in the possession of a person's wife, clerk or servant, on account of that person, it is in that person's possession within the meaning of

Explanation.—A person employed temporarily or on a particular occasion in the capacity of a clerk or servant, is a clerk or servant within the meaning of this section.

235. Analogous Law.—The section was clauses 17-19 as originally framed, which ran thus:—

“ 17. When property is put into the possession of a person's wife or servant, in trust for that person, it is put into that person's possession if it was not before in his possession, and continues in his possession if it was before in his possession.

“ 18. Property in the possession of a child under 12 years of age, of a lunatic, or of an idiot, if such child, lunatic or idiot, be in the keeping of a guardian or guardians, is in the possession of such guardian or guardians.

“ 19. Property is not said to be in the possession of any party other than a person.”

236. The appropriateness of these clauses was the subject of exhaustive comment<sup>9</sup> on the ground that it was “both arbitrary and inconsistent to attribute possession to cestui que trusts, and to guardians of those things which are put into a wife's or servant's possession in trust for the husband or master, or into an idiot's possession, as, for instance, without the consent or knowledge of the husband, master or guardian. The three clauses were consequently altered and simplified as enacted in the section, which does away with the distinction recognized in English law between “possession” and “custody.”

237. The term “clerk or servant” is borrowed from the English Law and has been used in other sections of the Code where it will be found explained (s. 381).

238. The explanation is, however, in accordance with English Law where the word “‘servant’ includes any person acting as a servant for any particular purpose or occasion.”<sup>10</sup>

239. English View of “Possession.”—In English Criminal Law “possession” is distinguished from “custody,”<sup>11</sup> possession being used in respect of the owner while custody being used to “mean such a relation towards the thing as would constitute possession if the person having custody had it on his own account.... If a servant receives anything for his master from a third person, not being a fellow-servant, he has the possession, as distinguished from the custody of it until he has put it into his master's possession, by putting it into a place or thing belonging to his master, or by some other act of the same sort, whether the servant himself has or has not the custody of that place or thing. If a servant receives anything belonging to his master from a fellow servant who has received it from their common master, such thing continues to be in the possession of the master, unless the servant delivers it with the intention to pass the property therein to the servant to whom it is delivered, having authority to do so from the master. If a servant receives anything belonging to his master from a fellow-servant who has received it on the master's account, and has done no act to put it into the master's possession, it is in the possession of the servant who so received it, and not in his custody merely. A moveable thing is in the possession of the husband of any woman or the master of any servant, who has the custody of it for him, and from whom he can take it at pleasure.”<sup>12</sup>

(9) See Commissioners' First Report, ss. 83, 84.

(10) Stephen's Cr. L. 210; Smith v. Webb, 12 T. L. R. 450.

(11) Stephen's Cr. L., 210, 211.

(12) Ib., cf. Pollock and Wright on Possession, 10 Encyclopædia of the Laws of England, 228, 237.

240. Principle.—This section eliminates the somewhat subtle distinction observed in the English Criminal Law between “possession” and “custody” so that what amounts to a mere custody in England would be deemed to be possession under the Code. The section does not deal with the possession of a trustee, but it is evident that, as the Code recognizes constructive possession only in the cases referred to in this section, the possession of a person in other cases would be his own possession, and not of another for whom he may be holding it in trust.

241. Meaning of Words.—“Person's wife” means during the continuance of conjugal relationship. If there has been a separation, the possession of property by a person's wife cannot be deemed to be his possession. This is evident from the clause “on account of that person,” which means that there must be recognition, express or implied, that the property is held by the other merely as its custodian. So the use by a servant of his master's premises as his private residence is his possession and not the possession of his master.<sup>13</sup> The word “wife” here has been used in its wide sense as signifying a man's spouse, not necessarily lawfully married, or married at all.<sup>14</sup> A Hindu wife in possession of her stridhana or ornaments gifted to her by her husband cannot be said to be in possession of them on account of her husband. Moreover, the doctrine of possession cannot be extended to illegal possession of things on her own account, e.g., possession of cocaine,<sup>15</sup> or a pistol without a license.<sup>16</sup>

242. Limits of Constructive Possession.—This section defines the limits of constructive possession recognized in the Code. It does not define possession as such, which it leaves to the determination of civil law. But what it aims at is to embody a rule and an exception; the rule being that possession, wherever referred to, in the Code must be actual, physical and real and not merely figurative, symbolical or constructive, or that through a trustee, the only exception being the possession of a person's wife, clerk or servant, on account of that person, that is to say, that it must appear or be proved by those relying upon such possession that those relations were holding the property in trust for him. If the property was held by any other relation, e.g., a son or a brother in trust for him, that is on his account, it would not be deemed to be in his possession by virtue of the rule, since the section prescribes the limit beyond which it cannot stretch the degree of constructive possession. But, if such relations live with him as members of a joint family, and an article is found in the house in such place or places, as they or the other persons living in the house may have access to, there is no presumption of law, though the Court may presume, as a fact, that the article was in possession of the head of the house.<sup>17</sup> But it is only a presumption which might be rebutted by proving that some other person was, in fact, in possession of it.<sup>18</sup>

243. The question how a person's, wife's, clerk's or servant's possession is to be proved as being on account of him must depend upon the nature of property and the use to which it is put. In the case of personal dress and ornaments, it cannot be said that the things are held on account of the house-master. Even in the case of the wife, her possession must not be readily assumed to be his or on his account, since this fact, at least, must be proved by those who impute to one possession of a thing not found in his physical custody or control. The section merely raises a presumption which will vary according to the nature of the article concerned and the degree of control exercised over it by the husband or the master, as the case may be, and the party found in actual possession of it. Such presumption would fail in a case where it appears that a party may well

(13) Margam Aiyar v. Mercer, 23 I.C. (M.) 177.

(14) Banwarilal, 22 I.C. (L.) 748, (1914) P. R. No. 20.

(15) Ib.

(16) Choostey, 69 I.C. (A.) 457.

(17) Sangam Lal, 15 A. 129; Dula Singh, 9 L. 531.

(18) But contra in Banwarilal, 22 I.C. (L.) 748, (1914) P. R. No. 20 (Cr.) the term “wife” held to include a permanent mistress.

have held possession of an article, e.g., cocaine<sup>19</sup> without the knowledge of the husband or the master, as the case may be. On the other hand, where the property in question is the house, such presumption would arise and continue even in his absence therefrom.<sup>20</sup>

244. Indeed, possession is, sometimes, determined by control. The possession of a person's wife, clerk or servant is his possession, because the things in their possession are at his beck and call. The "wife" he has delivered possession to, may be his mistress, but so long as he has control over her, he has also possession of the things she holds on his account.<sup>21</sup> So a person may employ a clerk or servant only for a temporary purpose or a limited period, but, if the possession was made over to or taken over by them on his account, that possession continues though the relationship may cease.

245. The section only requires that if possession is once held by a person's wife or servant for him, he retains it till he recovers it by physical delivery. A person merely acting, though not employed as a clerk or servant, is a servant pro confesso within the meaning of this section.

28. A person is said to "counterfeit" who causes one thing to resemble another thing, intending by means of that resemblance to practise deception, or knowing it to be likely that deception will thereby be practised.

"Counterfeit."

Explanation 1.—It is not essential to counterfeiting that the imitation should be exact.<sup>22</sup>

Explanation 2.—When a person causes one thing to resemble another thing, and the resemblance is such that a person might be deceived thereby, it shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that the person so causing the one thing to resemble the other thing intended by means of that resemblance to practise deception or knew it to be likely that deception would thereby be practised.<sup>22</sup>

246. Analogous Law.—The section provides a definition for a word used in Chapter XII in describing offences relating to coin and Government stamps.<sup>23</sup>

247. Principle.—Dishonesty and Fraud are not the essential prerequisites of counterfeiting. Intention to practise deception or knowledge that deception is likely to be thereby practised are alone sufficient. That intention may now, since the enactment of 1889,<sup>24</sup> be presumed if the resemblance is such that deception may, in fact, be produced.<sup>25</sup>

248. Meaning of Words.—"Causes one thing to resemble another," that one thing may be in itself a coin. A person may, for instance, gild a half-pice, a four-anna silver piece to resemble a half-sovereign. One who causes one thing to resemble another is a false coiner, but one who palms off a false coin is a cheat. "Intending..... to practise deception": It is not necessary that deception should, in fact, have been practised. Deception is imposition, the causing one to believe what is false, or disbelieve what is true. Here, the word is used to connote the belief by a person that the counterfeit article is the genuine article. This deception must be the result of resemblance and not any extraneous information supplied. "That a person might be deceived thereby," which is not a pure question of fact, for it depends upon the inference to be drawn from the closeness of resemblance.

(19) Banwarilal, 22 I. C. (L.) 748.

(20) Anant Ram, 59 I. C. (L.) 550.

(21) Bisweswar Sing v. Bhola, 15 Cr. L. J. 172; Margam v. Mercer, 23 I. C. 177; Anant Ram, (1821) P. W. R. 8; 59 I. C. 550.

(22) These Explanations were substituted for the original Explanations by the Metal

Tokens Act (Act I of 1889) s. 9.

(23) Ss. 230, 263-A.

(24) Metal Tokens Act (I of 1889), s. 9; Quadir Bakhsh, 4 A. L. J. 776.

(25) Amrit Sonar, 51 I. C. (Pat.) 263; Nil Money Nag v. Durga, 30 I. C. (C.) 1007; Abdul Sovan v. Jitendranath Datt, (1933) C. 445.

249. Counterfeit Coin.—This description of counterfeit makes two things clear : First, that the value of the counterfeit is immaterial. It may, in fact, possess a greater intrinsic value than the genuine article, but it is, nevertheless, a false token because it is not the genuine article which it is made to imitate. Secondly, there can be no counterfeit, unless there is some resemblance. It need not be exact, but it must none the less be close enough to suggest that the one was intended to be an imitation of the other.<sup>1</sup> That intention may be gathered in two ways—(a) By a legal presumption arising under explanation 2, from the closeness of resemblance, and (b) by proof aliunde, which need only be given if the case is not one for legal presumption. As regards the evidence to be adduced in such cases, a person counterfeiting may either intend to practise deception, or he may know that deception is likely to be thereby practised. A person who intends to practise deception is, of course, a professional coiner or forger, but one who does not intend but knows that his handiwork may be turned to that purpose may be wholly innocent of guilty knowledge, but he is a counterfeiter all the same, because, though not intending it, he knows of the crimes that may be committed thereby. A person who strikes off cheap imitation sovereigns, or currency notes or stamps, not for passing them current, but for the purpose of ornament or adorn an album, would thus be within the description. A thing may be an exact replica of another, but if there is anything thereon to show that it is not the genuine thing, there is no counterfeiting. A currency note marked “specimen” across it in bold letters would, thus, cease to be a counterfeit within the meaning of the rule. On the other hand, an used stamp altered to resemble an unused stamp may amount to counterfeiting if it is passed off as such.<sup>2</sup>

250. Of course, since counterfeiting, here spoken of, is the manufacture of spurious articles in imitation of genuine articles, it follows that a person who palms off a one anna stamp for a rupee stamp, does not counterfeit a rupee stamp,<sup>3</sup> though he may thereby commit the offence of cheating.

29. The word “document” denotes any matter expressed or described upon any substance by means of letters, figures or marks, or by more than one of those means, intended to be used, or which may be used, as evidence of that matter.

Explanation 1.—It is immaterial by what means or upon what substance the letters, figures or marks are formed, or whether the evidence is intended for, or may be used in, a Court of Justice, or not.

Illustrations.

A writing expressing the terms of a contract, which may be used as evidence of the contract, is a document.

A cheque upon a banker is a document.

A power-of-Attorney is a document.

A map or plan which is intended to be used or which may be used as evidence is a document.

A writing containing directions or instructions is a document.

Explanation 2.—Whatever is expressed by means of letters, figures or marks as explained by mercantile or other usage, shall be deemed to be expressed by such letters, figures or marks within the meaning of this section, although the same may not be actually expressed.

Illustration.

A writes his name on the back of a bill of exchange payable to his order. The meaning of the endorsement, as explained by mercantile usage, is that the bill is to be paid to the holder. The endorsement is a document, and must be construed in the same manner as if the words “pay to the holder” or words to that effect had been written over the signature.

(1) Nilmoney v. Durga, 19 C. W. N. 957.

(2) Ram Lal, 60 I. C. 785.

(3) Shuroop Chunder, 2 W. R. 65.

251. Analogous Law.—The term “document” has been also defined in two other Acts of the Indian Legislature.<sup>4</sup> The definition of “document” here given differs from the definition of “writing” in the English Criminal Law. The English word applies to the material on which words are written, whereas it applies here not to the material but to the matter written.<sup>5</sup>

252. Meaning of Words.—“Matter described” means matter delineated, e.g., a map or plan, or a picture upon any substance, e.g., stone, tree or clay.<sup>6</sup> “Letters, figures, or marks,” i.e., whether in language, numbers, pictures or symbols.

253. What is a Document.—The definition above set out and the description given in the section, make it clear that the word “document” is used in law to denote not the substance upon which human ideas are delineated, but the ideas themselves, as expressed in conventional signs addressed to the eye. But the mere expression of ideas does not convert writing into a document unless the writing was “intended to be used or which may be used as evidence of that matter.” So a draft complaint purporting to have been written by a fictitious person charging a certain Raja with the murder of a Fakir, the object of the writer being to levy a black-mail, was a “document” though the writer was apprehended in the act of preparing the draft which, of course, was not to be used as evidence. But the Court held that, though the writing was merely a draft, still, since it might have been used as evidence, it was a document within the meaning of the Code, and as it was a false document, it was a forgery.<sup>7</sup> But in England, it has been held that an avouchment or declaration, whether written or printed, of the character or quality of a chattel, is not a document, which, if false, would be a forgery. So it is said that the writing of a false signature of an artist’s name to a picture to pass it off as a work of the artist<sup>8</sup> or the imitation of a trade-mark on a wrapper enclosing spurious goods<sup>9</sup> would not be documents which, if false, would be forgeries. But, if so, English Law must differ from the law of this country, for, in both cases, they would be documents within the meaning of the section, since in the one case, the signature and in the other case, the pictorial device were intended to be used as evidence of the matter, inasmuch as the signature was intended to be the signature of the artist—which it was not—and the wrapper was intended to be that of the firm which used it for the sale of genuine goods. The term “evidence” is not here used in the sense of admissible or legal evidence as defined in the Indian Evidence Act.<sup>10</sup> It is rather used in its larger sense as denoting matter which is a written memorial of certain ideas to which reference might be made to recall them.

30. The words “valuable security” denote a document which is, or purports to be, a document whereby any legal right is created, extended, transferred, restricted, extinguished or released, or whereby any person acknowledges that he lies under legal liability, or has not a certain legal right.

Illustration.

A writes his name on the back of a bill of exchange. As the effect of this endorsement is to transfer the right to the bill to any person who may become the lawful holder of it, the endorsement is a “valuable security.”

254. Analogous Law.—The term “document” has been defined in the last section. A document creating or extinguishing legal rights is a valuable security. That document must be the original and not merely a copy, for it must of itself

(4) Cf. S. 3 (16) of the General Clauses Act (Act X of 1897). (The earlier General Clauses Act (Act I of 1868) did not define this term) and S. 3 of the Indian Evidence Act (Act I of 1872).

(5) Law Commissioners’ First Report, s. 88.

(6) Krishtappa, 27 Bom. L. R. 599; 87 I. C. 838.

(7) Shifait Ali, 2 B. L. R. (A. Cr.), 12; Ramaswami, 41 M. 589.

(8) Cross, Dears & B. 460.

(9) Smith, 27 L. J. M. C. 225.

(10) Act I of 1872, s. 2.

create or extinguish legal rights.<sup>11</sup> Consequently, it must not be a spent or cancelled document. So the Law Commissioners wrote : " Sir H. Seaton asks, would not a cancelled instrument be a valuable security under this clause? We think not ; for an instrument available for the purpose for which it was made is clearly what the clause intended ; a cancelled instrument, therefore, though by the cancelling of it a legal right may be extinguished, inasmuch as the instrument upon which such right depended is thereby voided, does not fall within its scope."<sup>12</sup>

The term " valuable security " has been made use of in sections 329-331, 347, 348, 420, 467 and 477 of the Code.

255. Meaning of Words.—" Or purports to be " : An unstamped deed is, therefore, a valuable security, though, being unstamped, it may not be admissible in evidence.<sup>13</sup>

256. Characteristics of a Valuable Security.—A valuable security is a document of value, that is to say, a document which of itself creates or extinguishes legal rights, or at least purports to create or extinguish them. If, therefore, the document is executed by a minor<sup>14</sup> or is unstamped, or contains blanks, or does not specify the name of the executee or the date or place of execution,<sup>15</sup> or is infected with any other form of invalidity<sup>16</sup> it is, nevertheless, a valuable security, because " it purports to be one."<sup>17</sup> So the fact that it is incomplete, or contains blanks to be filled in is said to be immaterial, provided it is intended to be used as a valuable security. Certain signatures were forged on each of two printed forms, one intended to be used as a promissory note, and the other as a receipt. One anna stamp was affixed on the top of each paper, but the stamps were neither signed across nor cancelled in any way. They both contained blank spaces left for entering particulars of the amount, the name of the person in whose favour the document was to have been executed, the date and place of execution, and the rate of interest. It was contended that the documents could not be said to " purport to be " valuable securities, but the contention was overruled on the strength of cases<sup>18</sup> which, however, did not cover the point raised. It appears that an incomplete document like the last could scarcely be designated a valuable security, nor could it be held " to purport to be one " for its very incompleteness. These words do not refer to an incomplete document but rather to a completed document which, though intended to, has not in law the effect of a valuable security.

257. So a rough account containing figures only with no particulars and unstamped, though signed by the obligor, is a valuable security, because it purported to create a legal obligation on the part of the obligor, and, as such, it satisfied the requirements of the section.<sup>19</sup> Indeed, in such a case, the document would still have been a valuable security even if it had not been signed by the debtor, since it is not invariably necessary that the document should create or convey any right of itself, it being sufficient if it evidences an obligation upon which the right follows.<sup>20</sup> If, therefore, it is a mere statement of account containing no promise to pay and not even the signature of the obligor, it is still a valuable security.<sup>21</sup> Such is the counter-foil of a paying-in slip which purports to be an acknowledgment of the sum paid into the Bank.<sup>22</sup> A title page of an account book of a firm containing the names of the several partners and showing the capital contributed by each, if signed by the partners, may amount to a valuable security.<sup>23</sup> So a document the registration of which was refused does not, on that account, cease to be a valuable security, for it

(11) Khushal Hiranman, 4 B. H. C. R. 28 ; Naro Gopal, 5 B. H. C. R. 66.

(12) First Report, s. 89.

(13) 7 M. H. C. R. (App.) 26 ; Ramasami, 12 M. 148.

(14) Ram Narain Shahu, (1933) Pat. 601.

(15) Jawahir, 38 A. 430.

(16) Ram Harakh, 90 I. C. (A.) 913.

(17) Ramasami, 12 M. 148 ; Kashi Nath Naek, 25 C. 207 ; Jawahir, 38 A. 430.

(18) Reference, 7 M. H. C. R. 27 ; Ramasami, 12 M. 148 ; followed in Jawahir, 38 A. 430.

(19) Ramasami, 12 M. 148 ; Idu Jolha, 46 I. C. (Pat.) 293. To the same effect per Aldersen, B., in Boardman, 2 M. & Rob. 147.

(20) Kahalavaya, 2 M. H. C. R. 247 ; Idu Jolha, 46 I. C. (Pat.) 293.

(21) Ib.

(22) Turner, 89 I. C. (C.) 248.

(23) Hari Charan, 38 C. 68.

purports to continue a valuable security.<sup>24</sup> So is a forest pass though only its duplicate is used to transport forest produce.<sup>25</sup>

258. A deed of divorce is a valuable security because it extinguishes a legal right of the parties.<sup>1</sup> A kabuliat is, for the same reason, a valuable security.<sup>2</sup> But a copy of a lease cannot be so regarded<sup>3</sup> because it, of itself, does not purport to be a document affecting legal rights. But the counterpart of a document is, of course, not a copy and would, therefore, be a valuable security.

259. No Security.—Now, what is a legal right? It is a right of a civil nature recognized by law, that is to say, a right the infraction of which gives rise to a cause of action. For instance, the grant of an easement is the conferral of a legal right, for such a grant may be made the subject of a suit. But a claim to a mere office of dignity, as to the title of Loskur, is not a legal right, and a sanad forged to support that title does not, therefore, amount to the forgery of a valuable security.<sup>4</sup> An acknowledgment of receipt of an insured parcel is not a valuable security inasmuch as it is merely evidence of its delivery and does not operate as a discharge of any liability.<sup>5</sup> An administrative order of the Superintendent of the Court of Sessions addressed to the Nazir directing him to release the accused on bail is not a valuable security.<sup>6</sup>

“A will.”

31. The words “a will” denote any testamentary document.

260. Analogous Law.—The term “will” has been defined in the Indian Succession Act<sup>7</sup> as “the legal declaration of the intentions of the testator with respect to his property which he desires to be carried into effect after his death.”<sup>8</sup> The General Clauses Act defines it to “include a codicil and every writing making a voluntarily posthumous distribution of property.”<sup>9</sup>

261. A will is really a wish of a person as to the disposal of his property after his death, and, as such, it is revocable by him at pleasure, and, if not revoked, it takes effect only after his death. So it is said in an old book: “A Testament is the true declaration of our last will of that we would to be done after our death.”<sup>10</sup> “Will means the whole testamentary instruments including codicils.”<sup>11</sup> The term has been used in sections 467 and 477 of the Code.

Words referring to acts include illegal omissions.

32. In every part of this Code, except where a contrary intention appears from the context, words which refer to acts done extend also to illegal omissions.

[Illegal omission—S. 43, post.]

262. Act and Omission.—An act is, properly speaking, a determination of the will, producing an effect in the sensible world. It means something voluntarily done by a human being, as, for example, walking, speaking or writing. It involves an operation of the mind as well as of the body. But, as understood in the Code, the term may only signify an operation of the mind, for it includes also illegal omissions, or bodily inaction. But this meaning has only been adopted for compendiousness of expression. The illegal omission, here spoken of, must, no doubt, be such as to have an active effect conducing to the result, as a link in the chain of facts from which an intention to bring about the result may be inferred.<sup>12</sup> It need not be the result itself nor need it be its logical or proximate cause. For instance, a policeman tortures a person for the purpose of extorting a confession. Another policeman

(24) Kashi Nath Naek 25 C. 207.

(25) Doulat Ram, 59 C. 1233.

(1) Azimooddeen, 11 W. R. 15.

(2) 6 W. R. (Cr.) 2; Nasiruddin, (1883) A. W. N. 59; Ismail Panju, 88 I. C. (Nag.) 283.

(3) Per Couch, C. J., arguendo in Kushal Hiranman, 4 B. H. C. R. 28; per Warden, J. arguendo in Naro Gopal, 5 B. H. C. R. 56.

(4) Jan Mahamed, 10 C. 584.

(5) Sadholal, 17 Cr. L. J. 272; Arura, (1913) P. R. No. 10; 20 I. C. 596.

(6) Sher Alam Khan, (1933) B 494.

(7) Act X of 1865.

(8) Ib., s. 3.

(9) Act X of 1897, s. 3 (57).

(10) Terms de la Ley.

(11) Pigot v. Wilder, 26 Bea. 92.

(12) Thornotti, 1 Weir 495.

stands by and watches it unmoved. Now, since it is the duty of every policeman to prevent tortures, his omission to perform his legal duty is an illegal omission, the result of which is the same as if he had abetted the first policeman in using the torture.<sup>13</sup> And if his duty was clear, it was no defence that the torturing policeman was his superior officer, or that the torturer had been ordered by his superior to commit the crime.<sup>14</sup> Nor would it be any defence to say that he was not present at the time of the torture if its commission was facilitated by his absence, or if he had absented himself from the company of the prisoner, when it was his duty to be present, which gave his torturer the chance.<sup>15</sup>

263. As a similar duty is cast upon the Magistrates, a Magistrate who was present while certain police constables were wrongfully confining and causing hurt to a villager with a view to extorting a confession, was similarly convicted of abetment.<sup>16</sup> In both these cases there was an omission, and it was illegal within the meaning assigned to that term by section 43. Whether an omission to do a thing is or is not illegal must, then, be judged by the terms of that section. For instance, in the examples above cited, the duty of the Magistrate and the policeman to prevent the commission of a crime was a matter of legal obligation, the failure of which constituted an illegal omission within the meaning of this section. If, therefore, the same offence had been committed in the presence of another person, say a village chowkidar<sup>17</sup> not charged with the same duty, he could not have been charged with abetment because his omission was not illegal.<sup>18</sup>

264. Not Illegal.—While this section makes an illegal omission tantamount to an act, it draws a line at illegality. A neglect, however gross, does not have that effect unless it is expressly penalized; e.g., in ss. 279, 289, 304, 304A, 337 and 338. The fact is that gross neglect is never criminal unless it is also “illegal” which it is declared by the Code in the sections quoted, as also by ss. 102 and 128 of the Railways Act.<sup>19</sup>

33. The word “act” denotes as well a series of acts as a single act; the word “omission” denotes as well a series of omissions as a single omission.
 “Act” : “Omission.”

265. Analogous Law.—This section is dictated by the same principle as the last section, both sections being enacted to simplify the language of the Code.

266. Principle.—The combined effect of the last section and this is that the word “act” alone is sufficient to signify both a series of acts as well as a series of omissions. But though an “act” and an “omission” include a series of acts and omissions, it does not follow that a number of acts and omissions would, in that sense, constitute only one offence. For whether the acts and omissions constitute one or more offences depends upon other considerations which are not overridden by the section.<sup>20</sup>

Acts done by several persons in furtherance of common intention.

34. When a criminal act is done by several persons, in furtherance of the common intention of all, each of such persons is liable for that act in the same manner as if it were done by him alone.<sup>21</sup>

267. Analogous Law.—The words “in furtherance of the common intention of all” did not exist in the original Code, and were added by the amending Act of 1870.<sup>22</sup> They make all the difference between the old section and the new, for without those words the Code would be widely at variance with the English law where a person not cognizant of the intention of his companions to commit, say,

(13) Latifkhan, 20 B. 394.

(14) Behary Singh, 7 W. R. 3; Sonoo 10 W. R. 48.

(15) Kali Churn, 21 W. R. 11.

(16) Krishna Shetti, 1 Weir 50; Appannee Hegade, 1 Weir 52.

(17) Gopal Chunder v. Foolmoni, 8 C. 728; Lakshmi, B. U. R. 303; Khajah Noorul Hoosein v. Fabre Tonnerre, 24 W. R. 26;

Khadin Sheikh, 4 B. L. R. (A. Cr.) 7.

(18) Ibid.

(19) F. C. Woodward, (1925) S. 233.

(20) S. 235, Cr. P. C.

(21) This section was substituted for the original by the Indian Penal Code Amendment Act, 1870 (XXVII of 1870) s. 1.

(22) Act XXVII of 1870, s. 1.

murder was never held liable, though he may have joined their company to commit an unlawful act.<sup>23</sup>

268. This view was adopted by the Courts in India, even before the section had been formally amended.<sup>24</sup>

269. This and the following sections (ss. 34-38) enunciate the general doctrine of joint liability in crime. As such, they form a class apart and do not really belong to the chapter dealing merely with the interpretation of terms. As for this section it is framed to meet a case in which it may be difficult to distinguish between the acts of the individual members of a party, or to prove precisely the part taken by each individual.<sup>25</sup> The reason why all are deemed guilty in such cases is, that the presence of accomplices affords encouragement, protection and support to the persons actually engaged in committing the crime.

270. Cognate Sections Distinguished.—It should be observed that the words used here are “in furtherance of the common intention of all,” whereas in section 149 describing a similar community of intention and design of an unlawful assembly, the words used are “in prosecution of the common object of that assembly,” which cannot mean the same thing as the words used here.<sup>1</sup> What they do mean will, however, be clear by a comparison between the two sections: First, This section is wider as regards the complicity of criminals, since it affects them regardless of number, whereas s. 149 limits it to persons whose number is not less than five; secondly, while the common object under this section is undefined, that under s. 149 is limited by s. 141; thirdly, a conviction under this section involves co-operative criminal act,<sup>2</sup> whereas under s. 149 all members of an unlawful assembly become constructively liable for an offence committed by one or more of them. In the one case, there must be proof of the criminal act, while, in the other, liability would arise from a mere criminal intention or knowledge.

271. This section is, again, wider than s. 114 which is, however, merely evidentiary and deals with only one aspect of abetment. The one creates liability in one for an act done by the other, whereas s. 114 and the other sections dealing with abetment deal with a closer association of one criminal with another.

272. Comparing this section with that defining abetment,<sup>3</sup> it will be seen that, while the latter punishes an instigator simpliciter, this section demands his closer association in the actual act of crime. Generally speaking, an abetment is complete, though the act abetted may or may not be committed<sup>4</sup>; secondly, the person abetted may or may not be one capable by law of committing an offence<sup>5</sup>; thirdly, the person abetted may or may not have the same guilty intention or knowledge as that of the abettor<sup>6</sup>; fourthly, the abettor's presence may or may not be necessary at the scene of the offence,<sup>7</sup> — all of which are the prerequisites of one's liability under this section.

273. Turning, now, to the distinction between this section, s. 149 and s. 120-A, which defines criminal conspiracy, it would be observed that the last named section is wider than this section or s. 149 in that a mere agreement between two or more persons, followed by an overt act by any of them in pursuance of the agreement, amounts to criminal conspiracy, though the act in itself may not amount to an offence, though, under this section, that act must in itself be criminal. In practice, the three sections may, at times, overlap one another, but the main distinction between them lies in the fact that, while under this section criminality ensues from the doing of a criminal act in furtherance of the common intention, criminal liability

(23) Duffey's case, (1830) 1 Lewin C. C. 194.

(24) Gorachand Gope, B. L. R. (Sup. Vol.), 443, F. B. It is this judgment which influenced the amendment of 1870.

(25) Nga Po Sein, (1902) 9 Bur. L. R. 16.

(1) Per Jackson, J., in Sabed Ali, 11 B. L. R. 347, F. B. approved in Barendra K. Ghose, 52 C. 197 (212) P. C., followed in Bhondur Das, 7 Pat. 758; Mahaddi, 5 C. 871 (873).

(2) Fazoo Khan v. Jatoo, (1931) C. 643.

(3) S. 107.

(4) S. 108, Exp. (2).

(5) S. 108, Exp. (3).

(6) Ib.

(7) Ib.

under s. 120-A only ensues from the moment two or more persons agree, which confines mens rea within narrower limits, though, if there may be an agreement, the act need not be criminal, while under this section there need be no proof of agreement, since a mere common intention would suffice; but in that case, the act itself must be criminal and proved to have been done in furtherance of common intention. Section 149 assumes the presence of at least five participants in the crime, which, again, may or may not be the case covered by this section or s. 120-A. But the elements constituting the mens rea are there wider in that, as required by this section, there need be no common intention, nor common agreement as required by s. 120-A, but merely common object, or, failing this, even knowledge on the part of any member that the object of that assembly was to commit any of the acts enumerated in s. 141, though he may himself have had neither the intention to commit that act nor have agreed to do so. Summing up the three sections, it would be seen that the evidence of criminality under the three sections varies according to the degree of the criminal intent or criminal act, though under s. 149 there is a further condition that the offenders must, at least, be five in number. Where the intention is criminal, the act need not be proved to be criminal; but where the intention is not necessarily criminal, the act itself must be criminal to furnish evidence of criminal intention. In short, there must be criminality either disclosed in the act or in the intention.

274. Take an example: A plans a dacoity and invites B, C and D to join him. They agree to commit dacoity at P's house. Here A has abetted the offence of dacoity by B, C, and D and all the four become members of a criminal conspiracy and would be liable to punishment under s. 120-B. They are, of course, not yet liable under s. 34, 114 or 149. Now A says to B, C and D "I am an old man and will only keep a watch outside P's house" which he does; B, C and D enter P's house and rob P. Here A becomes liable under s. 114 for the dacoity to the same extent as if he had actually joined in robbing P. Now, if while proceeding to P's house, A, B, C and D meet E and ask him to join them in the dacoity and he refuses, A, B, C and D all become liable as abettors under s. 115. Now, suppose E agrees and joins the four, the five become an unlawful assembly under s. 141; and suppose E gets hurt, while crossing a ditch and remains behind, while the remaining four proceed to rob P, A is, nevertheless, liable with the four by reason of s. 149, but s. 34 has not yet come into play. But suppose when E joined he warned his companions that while he was for dacoity he was not for shedding blood. But A and B were enemies of P and had previously decided to kill him. Here the common intention of A and B was to kill P, though the common object of all the five was to dacoit P. Section 34 begins to function. Now, suppose after the dacoity is over, B gives P a fatal stroke, B's stroke would be treated as A's stroke as well, by reason of s. 34, though C, D and E would not be liable for the murder of P. Now, suppose in committing dacoity one of them, C, is seized by P to rescue whom B, C and D strike P with lathis of which P dies—here B had intended to kill P in any case, and he, with A, must share the consequence of B's act, while the common object of the assembly being to dacoit P in prosecution of which B, C and D kill P, therefore, by reason of s. 149 all five become prima facie liable for the murder of P.

275. Now, since all the five have the same intention and the same object, namely, of committing dacoity, it follows that the mens rea of this section and that of s. 149 overlap and if all the five were armed with lethal weapons, the second condition in s. 149 is also present, and, so far as A is concerned, his previous abetment and his presence at the crime makes him liable for dacoity under s. 114 and for murder under s. 396 and for conspiracy under s. 120-A and all alike would be equally guilty of that offence by the application of other principle, e.g., that stated in s. 149. It will, thus, be seen that since all these sections are intended to penalize participation in the crime with diverse intentions and objects and at its various stages, they cannot be regarded as mutually exclusive, and at some stage and in some cases all of them may become equally applicable.

276. Principle.—This section merely prescribes a measure of criminal liability in one aspect of complicity in a crime, that is, that in which several persons participate in design and in action while other sections, already referred to, deal with other aspects of complicity. They all deal with what is known in English law as accession before the fact.

277. Procedure and Practice.—No person can be convicted under this section, unless he is specifically charged with it.<sup>8</sup> This section provides not only for liability to punishment, but also for subjection to another jurisdiction. Thus, if a foreigner in a foreign territory initiates an offence which is completed within British territory, he is, if found within British territory, liable to be tried by the British Court within whose jurisdiction the offence was committed.<sup>9</sup>

278. Charge.—This section as well as ss. 120-B and 149 all deal with constructive liability which must be specifically charged.<sup>10</sup> But, as such, one might be convicted, though the rest are acquitted.<sup>11</sup>

279. The charge under this section should run thus:—

“I (name and office of Magistrate, etc.) hereby charge you (name of accused), as follows:—

“That you—on or about the—day of—at—had formed a common intention with B, C and D to commit an offence, namely—in furtherance of which you did the following criminal act, to wit—(here state the act) resulting in the death of—, an offence punishable under s. 302; and I, therefore, hereby charge you of the said offence under s. 302 read with s. 34 of the I. P. C.

280. Meaning of Words.—“A criminal act is done by several persons”: This does not mean that the several persons do the same act which is physically impossible. It can only mean that several persons do separate acts which might be similar or diverse.<sup>12</sup> “In furtherance of the common intention of all”: This means that all the persons charged must have consented to the commission of the crime committed. The intention must be actual intention,<sup>13</sup> and the common intention of all must be the commission of a criminal act which is done. That is to say, the act done must be the act contemplated by all: otherwise all the co-conspirators are not guilty of the offence committed.<sup>14</sup> These words are much stricter than the words “in prosecution of the common object of that assembly, or such as the members of that assembly knew to be likely to be committed in prosecution of that object” of section 149. The term “intention” implies a resolution of the mind while the term “object” means the purpose for which that resolution was made. Offenders may differ in their intentions and object. The two sections, therefore, prescribe different conditions for their joint liability. Under s. 149 the offence committed need not have been the offence intended. It will suffice if it was considered likely. A reckless man may chance a likelihood without intending it. “By several persons” why not “by one or several persons” which would include by several persons as well.<sup>15</sup> These words have remained as they were originally enacted, but their alteration would improve the sense intended. As it is, the sentence will not bear a too literal construction, for, if so construed, it would read thus: “When a criminal act is committed by several persons in furtherance of the common intention of the several persons, each of such several persons is liable, etc.,” which is not what the section means. There is, of course, no limit to the number of persons acting in pursuance of a common intention.<sup>16</sup> “Each of such persons is liable for that act”: “That act” here means not the individual act or acts of the several persons, but the final act being the cumulative result of all the acts.<sup>17</sup>

(8) Cheda Singh, (1924) P. C. 183.

(9) Chhotalal, 14 Bom. L. R. 147.

(10) Kattoora, (1924) M. 584; Profulla Kumar, 50 C. 41; Dastarali, 58 C. 822.

(11) Dastarali, 58 C. 822.

(12) Barendra Kumar Ghose, (1924) C. 257 F. B. O. A. 52 C. 197 P. C.

(13) Satrughan, 50 I. C. (C.) 337.

(14) Nga Tun Baw, 7 Cr. L. J. 205; Jamarudi, 16 C. W. N. 909; Dhian Singh, 9 A.L.J.

180; Hari Bijal, 17 Bom. L. R. 906; Suleman, (1933) N. 134.

(15) S. 2, ante; Barendra K. Ghose, 52 C. 197 (206) P. C. overruling Nirmal Kanta Roy, 41 C. 1072 in which Stephen, J., held that the act must be done by several persons only and conjointly.

(16) Nibaran, 11 C. W. N. 1085.

(17) Barendra Kumar Ghose, (1924) C. 257 F. B. O. A. 52 C. 197 P. C.

281. Common Intention.—This section lays down a rule of presumption in matters relating to criminal responsibility. It makes the existence of a “common intention” one test of joint responsibility.<sup>18</sup> But what is common intention and how is it to be proved? It seems clear that common intention implies concert and planned action. The fact that two or more persons possess the same intention and take similar action does not make them jointly liable for the combined effect of their action under this section, though they might be liable under the next section. Take an example: the accused, a notorious debauchee well-known for his misdeeds in the neighbourhood, entered the house of a married girl at dead of night and began to ravish her by force. She screamed and shouted “Thief, Thief,” whereupon several villagers armed with sticks ran up to her rescue. Finding the miscreant flagrante delicto one body lightened their sticks upon him, he bolted, but found another party in the verandah who did likewise. He escaped in the courtyard where he found another lot whose blows killed him outright. The parties were animated by the same intention to disable the culprit and to seize his body, but they did not act in furtherance of a “common intention.” Hence they were all acquitted of culpable homicide and of an offence under s. 148.<sup>19</sup>

282. Next, how is a common intention to be proved? The simplest method of proving it is, of course, by direct evidence of conspiracy. But such evidence is not always procurable, nor, if procured, is it invariably reliable, for the only evidence thus obtained would be the evidence of approvers or accomplices which the Courts consider it unsafe to rely upon unless it is corroborated in material particulars.<sup>20</sup> Failing this evidence or its material corroboration, resort must be had to other circumstances evidencing community of interest. This is sometimes sought to be proved from the presence of the accused at the time of the commission of the crime. But this alone is never sufficient.<sup>21</sup> For persons present do not necessarily possess the same intention which is the fact to be decided. Nor can it be held that a person, who, being present, does not prevent the commission of a crime or fails to apprehend the criminal, must be himself one.<sup>22</sup> But if several policemen go out together for the purpose of apprehending a man, and taking him to the thannah on a charge of theft, and some of the party in the presence of the others beat and ill-treat the man in a cruel and violent manner, and the others stand by and look on without endeavouring to dissuade them from their cruel and violent conduct, then the Court might properly infer that they were all assenting parties and acting in concert, and that the beating was in furtherance of a common design.<sup>23</sup> As already observed, the question, therefore, whether a person was inspired by common intention to take part or be present at the commission of a crime cannot be answered by reference to any general principle. It is a question of fact dependent upon the circumstances of each case.<sup>24</sup>

283. But the inference to be drawn from a set of given facts is one upon which the leading precedents shed a flood of light. Thus, in one case,<sup>25</sup> a number of men armed with clubs went out to enforce a right or supposed right by the use of those clubs. Ainslie, J.,<sup>1</sup> inferred their intention to be homicidal because of their number,

(18) Barendra K. Ghosh, 52 C. 197 P. C.; Harihar Singh, 90 I. C. (Pat.) 154; Jhakri, 17 I. C. (C.) 1001; Dhian Singh, 14 I. C. (A.) 649, dissented from in Hamman, 35 A. 560; Pholo, (1933) S. 407; Sadha Singh, (1933) L. 865; Sharif, (1933) L. 315.

(19) Jhakri Chamar, 17 I. C. (C.) 1001.

(20) S. 114 (b), Indian Evidence Act, I of 1872, but see ib., s. 133, which would appear to be in conflict with the earlier clause. But it is not. The one lays down a rule of practice, the other the rule of law.

(21) Jardine, J., in Magan Lal, 14 B. 115; Gorachand Gope, B. L. R. (Sup. Vol.), 443, F. B.

(22) Gorachand Gope, B. L. R. (Sup. Vol.)

443, F. B.

(23) Gorachand Gope, B. L. R. (Sup. Vol.) 443, F. B.

(24) Irshadullah, 55 A. 607, followed in Haider, (1935) A. 504; Nan E., 9 R. 612; Heramba v. Kali Prasanna, 1 C. W. N. 465; Faizulla, 61 I. C. 522; Mianjan, 73 I. C. 81; Adam Ali, 31 C. W. N. 314 (a case where s. 34 applied to s. 304, Part 2; Tara Singh, (1932) L. 189, following Barendra K. Ghose, 52 C. 197 P. C., contra Aniruddha, 86 I. C. (C.) 475, (1925) C. 913.

(25) Sabed Ali, 11 B. L. R. 347 F. B.

(1) Per Ainslie, J., dissentient in Sabed Ali, 11 B. L. R., 347, F. B.; Jailal, 64 I. C. 838.

the strength of the opposing force, and the unlikelihood of self-control in a moment of passion. But it seems that the learned Judge failed to see that it is one thing to suppose what persons sallying out for the vindication of their rights by show of force should think. It is quite another thing to hold that what some or a few of them might or should have thought all must have intended.

284. In short, as remarked before, to think what is likely is not the same thing as to intend it. And this appears to have been the view of the majority of the Full Bench who overruled Ainslie, J.<sup>2</sup> So where a policeman arrested a thief, whereupon the latter shouted for help hearing which his relations and castemen ran up with sticks to rescue him, and in rescuing him two of them grievously hurt the constable, the Magistrate convicted all the four of grievous hurt, but on appeal Mahmud, J., held that some discrimination should be made between the case of the two assailants and the remaining accused, for while the common intention of the four accused was merely to rescue their comrade, the intention to inflict grievous hurt could not be imputed to those who took no part in it.<sup>3</sup>

285. A mere presentiment of a possible danger does not, therefore, constitute an intention to court it. It must be foreseen, foreknown and premeditated. If, therefore, the assembly understood and realized that a certain offence would be committed or was likely to be necessary for the common object, it would bring a case under section 149 though not under this section.<sup>4</sup> It will fall under neither section where though all the accused were agreed as to and joined in the beating, there was no evidence to show that the common intention of them all was to cause grievous hurt, in which case, they could not all be convicted of that offence.<sup>5</sup>

286. Proof of Common Intention.—A common intention may, however, be safely inferred from participating in the crime. The question whether the accused, in a given case, were acting in concert and, if so, upto what point, is a question of fact, which must, to a large extent, depend upon the circumstances of each case.<sup>6</sup> Apart from conspiracy, which needs proof of its own, the question of common intention must be found inferentially from the facts of each case and the acts of each accused. It is a simple case, if the motive or intention of the accused is to commit a particular crime, and that motive or intention can be proved by direct evidence. But the difficulty arises when the intention has to be deduced from the acts of the accused. Take, for example, the following cases: A had entered a house for the purpose of committing adultery. On an alarm being raised, some neighbours, including one P, turned him out and gave him a beating. He was afterwards prosecuted and sentenced to a month's imprisonment. On his release he, along with his two brothers, B and C, waylaid P and on meeting him immediately beat him mercilessly with lathis. On his falling down, they continued to beat him and only ran away when the villagers appeared upon the scene to remonstrate with them. P died the same night. His skull was found to have been fractured in four places. These injuries left no doubt in the mind of the Court as to what the assailant's intention was, and they were all convicted of murder.<sup>7</sup> Now take another case. Some four years before the assault upon him, one P had broken the leg of one A for which he had been imprisoned. It led to two factions. On a certain day P passed by A's village, whereupon A, with his four brothers and cousins, set upon P and brutally assaulted him inflicting countless injuries with clubs. Both his legs were fractured in one or two places, but there was no injury to the head and, though the trunk was bruised no bones were broken, but P died of haemorrhage. The Court held A and his party guilty of culpable homicide and not of murder.<sup>8</sup> Now take a third case. The four accused who were related and were co-sharers entered P's field, three armed with sticks and one B with a loaded gun and wanted to turn him out by

(2) Per Couch, C.J., in Sabed Ali, 11 B. L. R. 347, F. B.; approved in Barendra K. Ghose, 52 C. 197 (212), P. C.; to the same effect, Shwe, 10 L. B. R. 117; 57 I. C. 918.

(3) Dharam Rai, (1887) A. W. N. 236.

(4) Sabed Ali, 11 B. L. R. 347, F. B.

(5) Dhian Singh, 14 I. C. (A.) 649; Jhakri Chamar, 17 I. C. (C.) 1001.

(6) Barendra Kumar Ghose, (1924) C. 257 F. B. O. A. 52 C. 197 P. C.

(7) Ram Newaz, 35 A. 506. ✓

(8) Inder Singh, 10 L. 477.

overawing him with their numbers. As P refused A and his three companions started beating him, but P with the assistance of another defended himself and finding themselves worsted B fired and killed P. The question was what offence the four accused had committed. The question had to be referred to a Full Bench of five judges of whom four held that the firing, being sudden and unpremeditated, must be treated as the act of B from which Ainslie, J., differed asking the majority why did B carry a loaded gun if not to use it, if necessary. But the majority held that since the gun was fired to ward off a counter-attack it could not be said that the assailants had started to dispossess P after killing him, if necessary.<sup>9</sup> Other cases similarly decided follow the same principle. So where two persons having conspired to procure a girl persuaded her mother to give her up which she refused to do, whereupon one of them fired a gun loaded with pebbles which set up gangrene, of which she died. It was held that he alone was guilty of murder and his confederate was acquitted of its abetment.<sup>10</sup>

287. Similarly, in an English case, where a party of poachers beat a keeper and left him senseless after which one of them returned and stole his money, it was held that he alone was guilty of theft.<sup>11</sup> But where eight poachers all armed with guns, being surprised by some keepers who went towards them for the purpose of apprehending them, formed into lines and pointing their guns at the keepers said that they would shoot them, and one of them fired a shot wounding a keeper, it was held that all were guilty of attempted murder, because they had all formed into lines, pointed their guns and threatened to shoot and one of them had nearly carried out the threat.<sup>12</sup> The same view was taken in another case in which six sailors, for reasons unknown, chased a German sailor belonging to another ship, and as the latter took refuge from their attack against a railing, he was stabbed by one of them with a knife of which he died in a few minutes. The evidence as to the hand by which the blow was given was very conflicting. But before the unfortunate man had been stabbed, he had been assaulted brutally and in a dastardly manner by all the six men, and Byles, J., told the Jury that in order to convict all the six men of murder, there must be evidence of common design, or evidence that, being present at the stabbing, they assented and manifested their assent by assisting in the offence, that is, in the use of the knife. For the men may have intended to thrash the sailor, but it did not follow that they intended to stab him as well.<sup>13</sup> Where, therefore, two soldiers went after closing hours to a publican's and demanded beer which he refused, whereupon they returned uttering threats. They again came up some time afterwards, and one of them rushed in, the other remaining without, and while the landlord was trying to eject the intruder he received a violent blow from a sharp instrument from the other soldier which occasioned his death. There was evidence that the two had returned with the deliberate intention of using violence in case their demand was not complied with, and they were consequently both held to be guilty of murder.<sup>14</sup>

288. No Joint Responsibility.—From the foregoing discussion it will be obvious that the essence of joint responsibility lies in the common intention to commit the act complained of. If the act complained of be murder, then all the accused held accountable for it on the strength of this rule must be shown to have joined in a plot to kill. It will not suffice that they had started to commit an assault. It is, of course, by no means necessary that all the accused should have conspired to kill at the same time, for they may become of one mind at the last moment<sup>15</sup> but this must be proved by legal evidence. It cannot be assumed. A stock phrase made use of indiscriminately by the Magistracy of this country—that all are presumed to intend the natural consequences of their acts—has, as has

(9) Sabed Ali, 11 B. L. R. 347 F. B. approved in Barendra Kumar Ghose, 52 C. 197 (211, 212) P. C.

(10) Shuka, 43 I. C. (C.) 827.

(11) Hawkins, 3 C. & P. 892.

(12) Edmeads, 3 C. & P. 390; Warner, 5 C. & P. 525.

(13) Price, 8 Cox 96; To the same effect, Profulla Kumar, 50 C. 41; Barendra Kumar Ghose, 52 C. 197 P. C.; Mukunda Murari, 61 C. 170; Nga Aung Thein, 13 R. 210 F. B. . .

(14) Willoughby, 1 East. P. C. 288; Lal, 99 I. C. 90; Ngo Po Kyone, 11 R. 354.

(15) Ebrahim, (1931) R. 321.

been already pointed out, no place in the criminal jurisprudence of this country. It is not a formula which can take the place of evidence ; though conduct is evidence from which a legitimate inference may be validly drawn in the circumstances of each case.<sup>16</sup> But to fasten one's constructive liability upon a presumed intention is arguing in a vicious circle from which the records of reported cases are unfortunately not entirely free. Where, for instance, three persons A, B and C agreed to attack and assault D with a view to punishing him for the damage caused by cattle to their crop, the fact that one of them struck a deadly blow killing D, would not justify the punishment of all three for murder, though they might justifiably be convicted of causing grievous hurt with a deadly weapon.<sup>17</sup>

289. There are usually three classes of cases of fatal assault where the question of the joint responsibility of several assailants arises ; viz. (i) where several persons join in the assault and inflict numerous injuries and the cumulative effect of all or some of the injuries is to cause death ; (ii) where several persons commit an assault and inflict minor injuries but one of them deals a fatal blow, and he can be identified ; and (iii) where, in the case last supposed, the assailant cannot be identified. In the first case, all the assailants would ordinarily be liable for the fatal assault ;<sup>18</sup> in the second case, the person who is shown by the evidence to have dealt the fatal blow would alone be liable ; while in the third case, none of the assailants would be liable for the fatal blow.<sup>19</sup> The dealing of one fatal stroke by one of several assailants cannot form the basis of a valid inference that the common intention of all the assailants was to murder the person attacked. Take, for instance, an extreme case. A struck B with a hatchet. B fell down, whereupon C hit B with a stick and B subsequently died. Now, it is not a necessary inference, and cannot be assumed as a matter of course that C had a common intention with A to kill B ; nor could C be from that fact alone convicted of the murder of B conjointly with A.<sup>20</sup> So again where the conspirators intended and started to kill A but a chance blow from one of them killed another person, B ; but A escaped, all of them could not be held, apart from s. 111, jointly liable for the murder of B.<sup>21</sup>

290. When a large body of men, each of whom has a grievance against an individual on account of his misconduct, join in the assault, it may be a question of some nicety to determine whether they can all be rightly regarded as guilty of the resultant act committed in pursuance of a common object or in pursuance of a common intention. Such a case arose in Calcutta which led to a difference of opinion between two learned Judges, whereupon the case was ultimately decided on a reference to a third Judge. In this case the deceased, a man of dissolute habits, had entered the privacy of a woman and was assaulted by a number of villagers while he was in the very act of violating her. The deceased escaped out of the room into the corridor where he found himself confronted by another body of men who assaulted him. He ran to the courtyard of the house, where still another body of men beat him to death. The accused were not shown to have taken any part in the assault upon the deceased after he had escaped from the room, and come to the corridor and finally to the courtyard. It was held that the accused could not be convicted under sections 304 and 148, and that as their assault in the room was justified they were acquitted.<sup>22</sup> The converse case is presented by the case of the Tinnevely rioters who having felt aggrieved by the incarceration of a political agitator broke out into lawlessness smashing Government and Municipal property that came in their way. Here though the rioters formed

(16) Satrughan, 50 I. C. (Pat.) 337 ; Aydross (1922) M. W. N. 800 ; Nga Ba E, 24 I. C. 572 ; Mala Singh, (1924) L. 61 ; Dhian Singh, 14 I. C. 649 ; Kanshi, 94 I. C. (L.) 134 ; Pira, 95 I. C. (L.) 504 ; Chandan, 94 I. C. (A.) 363 ; Sheo Balak, (1926) O. 367.

(17) Gouridas, 36 C. 659 (664) ; Morgan, 9 Cr. L. J. 393 ; Mahabir, 19 I. C. (O.) 497 ; Nga Ba, 15 Cr. L. J. 484 ; Raja, 50 I. C. (L.) 977 ; Abdul Karim, 58 I. C. (A.) 158 ; Fatekhan, (1930) L. 950.

(18) Ghulam Hussain, (1924) A. 78 ;

Mahabir, 19 I. C. (O.) 497 ; Kanji Samal, 38 B. 114 ; Jamiruddi, 16 C. W. N. 909.

(19) Gouridas, 36 C. 659 (664) ; Nga Po, 20 I. C. (Bur.) 220 ; Nga Shwe On, 57 I. C. (Bur.) 918 ; Mahabint, 19 I. C. (O.) 497, F. B. ; Yara, (1929) L. 456.

(20) Vahial, 15 I. C. (S.) 810 ; Dhian Singh, 14 I. C. (A.) 649 ; Savarajulu, 47 I. C. 445.

(21) Po Ya, 10 L. B. R. 99, 58 I. C. 525.

(22) Jhakri, 17 I. C. (C.) 1001 ; Adam Ali, 100 I. C. (C.) 718, (1927) C. 324 ; cf. Jafar, 14 A. L. J. 789 ; Karan Singh, ib., 792.

separate groups, their joint trial was upheld on the ground of common intention as indicated by their conduct.<sup>23</sup> As this section deals with constructive liability, it is to be noted that a person cannot be held guilty of an offence under this section, and being so found guilty, his presence cannot be used for the purpose of section 149 so as to make other persons guilty of an offence under that section. Where, for instance, eight persons were concerned in a riot concerning a piece of land and the crop standing thereon, which resulted in murder, and it appeared that death was the result of the combined effect of injuries inflicted by one Jhubboo and some other person unknown, it was held that Jhubboo might be liable for murder by reason of this section, but being thus found constructively guilty of murder it may be a question whether he could be said to have committed an offence under section 149 of the Code so as to make the other prisoners by a double construction guilty of murder.<sup>24</sup>

291. Section Inapplicable.—The section has, of course, no application to sections which are limited by their nature to personal acts, e.g., ss. 304 2nd part,<sup>25</sup> 307, 308,<sup>1</sup> 458<sup>2</sup> and 498.<sup>3</sup>

35. Whenever an act, which is criminal only by reason of its being done with a criminal knowledge or intention, is done by several persons, each of such persons who joins in the act with such knowledge or intention is liable for the act in the same manner as if the act were done by him alone with that knowledge or intention.

When such an act is criminal by reason of its being done with a criminal knowledge or intention.

292. Analogous Law.—The last section dealt with an act following a joint intention, this deals with an act following not a joint but a like intention. The last section approaches criminality because of participation in the intention: this because of participation in action. The last section is limited to offences which are independent of intention or knowledge, that is, those in which intention or knowledge is presumed, this is limited to those in which intention or knowledge cannot be presumed but must be expressly proved. In the one case, the intention and knowledge need not be proved against each of the accused, who, however, may rebut the presumption by setting up an intention not criminal. In a case under this section the accused has nothing to rebut till the prosecution have established criminal intention or knowledge on the part of each accused. In other words, the measure of criminal liability under the previous section is joint intention, the measure under this section is the extent of intention or knowledge of each accused. A and B beat C of which he dies. If it is proved that A and B had the common intention of killing C, A and B would both be liable, and it does not matter to what extent A and B contributed to his death. But, if such intention cannot be proved, it is on the prosecution to prove the intention and knowledge on the part of both. It may be that A had intended to kill C, while B had intended to merely cause hurt and no more; but in either case it lies on the prosecution to prove intention or knowledge.<sup>4</sup>

293. Principle.—The last section dealt with a case in which several persons were assumed to conspire with the common intention of committing a crime. This section goes further and provides that where the element of a particular knowledge or a particular intention enters in the composition of a crime, all the co-accused must be shown to possess that particular knowledge or intention in common, otherwise they cannot be held jointly liable for the crime committed by any of them.<sup>5</sup>

(23) Loganathaiyar, 4 I. C. (M.) 700; but did the common intention cover the act done, Nga Thun Baw, 7 Cr. L. J. 205.

(24) Per Field, J., in Jhubboo Mahton, 8 C. 739; Reazuddi, 15 I. C. (C.) 646.

(25) Aniruddha, (1925) C. 913.

(1) Ali Mirza, 51 C. 265; Nabibux, 52 B.

168; Nga Pu, (1926) R. 207.

(2) Ghulam, 4 L. 399.

(3) Nga Pu, (1926) R. 207; Ali Mirza, 51 C. 265.

(4) Adam Ali, (1927) C. 324.

(5) Ib.

294. Meaning of Words.—“Act which is criminal only by reason of its being done with a criminal knowledge or intent,” e.g., collection of armed men which may or may not be a crime according to the knowledge or intention, so harbouring an offender,<sup>6</sup> and all offences where knowledge or intention is expressly referred to.

295. Proof of Particular Intention when Required.—The Code deals with two classes of crimes: (i) Those in which the proof of knowledge or intention is immaterial; and (ii) those for the completion of which guilty knowledge or intention must be proved. In the latter case, the act itself may be indifferent unless the intention be proved. Suppose a trickster, wishing to palm off a brass ring for gold, wants an accomplice and he goes up to another and tells him that he has got a gold ring by theft and should like to dispose of it. The two thus manage to get rid of the ring, the true nature of which is afterwards discovered and the two men are charged with having practised deception. Here the accomplice cannot be convicted of cheating, for he had not the same criminal knowledge as his companion, though his criminal intent was different.<sup>7</sup> So in the common case presented by a party of rioters proceeding to take forcible possession of land in which one of them commits murder. Now, if the remaining persons had joined the party with the knowledge or intention of committing murder, they will all be equally liable for murder, though only one of them had committed it. But if suppose in such a case only one accused intended the murder, another wanted only to plunder the crops, while the third had no particular intention but had joined the assembly to see the fun. Here the second and third accused could not be charged for murder, and the first accused could not be charged for robbery, for the three accused did not possess the same criminal intention. So where several soldiers, lawfully employed to assist in the apprehension of a person, unlawfully broke open the door of a house where the person was supposed to be, and having done so, some of the soldiers began to plunder, and stole some goods. The question was whether this was felony in all; and Holt, C.J., citing an old case, said: “That they were all engaged in an unlawful act is plain, for they could not justify breaking a man’s house without making a demand first: yet all those who were not guilty of the stealing were acquitted, notwithstanding their being engaged in one unlawful act of breaking the door; for this reason because they knew not of such intent, but it was a chance opportunity of stealing, whereupon some of them did lay hands.”<sup>8</sup>

296. But the particular intent here required may be proved not only by the evidence of common design, but it may also be inferred from a general resolution against all opposers, whether such resolution appears upon evidence to have been actually and explicitly entered into by the confederates, or whether it may be reasonably collected from their number, arms, or behaviour at or before the scene of action. As Bramwell, B., in one case told the jury: “Suppose two men go out together, and one of them holds a third man for the purpose of enabling his companion to cut that man’s throat, and his companion does so, no one could doubt that they were both equally guilty of murder.”<sup>9</sup> The doctrine of joint liability of several persons for the guilt of some of them, applies only to such assemblies as are formed for the purpose of carrying into execution some unlawful purpose. For if the original purpose was lawful, the liability of persons other than those actually taking part in the crime will depend upon, and be measured by, their actual participation in the crime and not upon the fiction of constructive liability.

36. Wherever the causing of a certain effect, or an attempt to cause that effect, by an act or by an omission, is an offence, it is to be understood that the causing of that effect partly by an act and partly by an omission is the same offence.

Effect caused partly by act and partly by omission.

(6) S. 212, post.

(7) Cf. Moore’s case, 1 Leach, 314; 1 Russ., Bk. I, Ch. III, pp. 161, 162.

(8) 2 Hawk, P.C., 29, s. 8; 1 Leach, 7 (a);

1 Russ., p. 162.

(9) Jackson, 7 Cox. 357; Allah Ditta, 4 A. L. J. 276.

Illustration.

A intentionally causes Z's death, partly by illegally omitting to give Z food, and partly by beating Z. A has committed murder.

297. Analogous Law.—This section would have been better placed after section 33. It follows as a necessary corollary from section 32, to which it might have been added by way of an explanation. Since an act includes an illegal omission, the result is the same whether the offence consists of one or more acts or one or more omissions, or partly of one and partly of the other. Criminal Law looks in such cases to the result and not to the means by which it has been achieved.

Co-operation by doing one of several acts constituting an offence.

37. When an offence is committed by means of several acts, whoever intentionally co-operates in the commission of that offence by doing any one of those acts, either singly or jointly with any other person, commits that offence.

Illustrations.

(a) A and B agree to murder Z by severally and at different times giving him small doses of poison. A and B administer the poison according to the agreement with intent to murder Z. Z dies from the effects of the several doses of poison so administered to him. Here A and B intentionally co-operate in the commission of murder, and as each of them does an act by which the death is caused, they are both guilty of the offence though their acts are separate.

(b) A and B are joint jailors, and, as such, have the charge of Z, a prisoner, alternately for six hours at a time. A and B, intending to cause Z's death, knowingly co-operate in causing that effect by illegally omitting, each during the time of his attendance, to furnish Z with food supplied to them for that purpose. Z dies of hunger. Both A and B are guilty of the murder of Z.

(c) A, a jailor, has the charge of Z, a prisoner. A, intending to cause Z's death, illegally omits to supply Z with food; in consequence of which Z is much reduced in strength, but the starvation is not sufficient to cause his death. A is dismissed from his office, and B succeeds him. B, without collusion or co-operation with A, illegally omits to supply Z with food, knowing that he is likely thereby to cause Z's death. Z dies of hunger. B is guilty of murder, but, as A did not co-operate with B, A is guilty only of an attempt to commit murder.

298. Analogous Law.—This is another instance of the commission of crime by conspiracy. The three illustrations amply illustrate not only this section, but section 35 of which this is a corollary.

299. Principle.—This section is an illustration of the rule that in the case of conspiracy the measure of criminality of each conspirator is the cumulative result and not the individual share in the crime. Indeed, if it were otherwise, it would be safer to conspire and distribute criminal responsibility among its members. Such a thing, even if permitted, could not be proved. But it cannot be permitted, because it will be destructive of all law and order. The section enunciates the rule of universal application. So Mr. Bishop has summed it up in the following words: "In the first place, if several, combining both in intent and in act, commit a crime jointly, each is guilty of the same as if he had done the whole alone; and so it is, if each has his particular part to do, the whole contributing to one result. In the next place, since what a man does by his agent he does by himself, if one employs another to do a criminal thing for him, he is guilty of the same as though he had done the thing himself." <sup>10</sup>

300. Meaning of Words.—"Intentionally co-operates," i.e., he knows of the offence to be committed, but only takes a share in its commission, which alone does not complete the crime apart from intention. His act alone might have been innocuous and insufficient, but as his act was in pursuance of a joint intention, his liability is equally joint.

301. Liability of Contributory.—The liability of each of several persons for complicity in a joint action does not depend upon the nature and extent of his participation in the crime, but upon the community of intention. But that alone is not sufficient, for, as this section shows, there must be community of action in consequence of the community of intention, or a combining of both in intent and in act. If there was community of action without community of intent, the liability will be several and not joint. Illustration (c) is an example. Here there was community of action between A and B but not community of intention. They were, therefore, not held jointly liable for the result. If, however, there had been the community of intention between them, the case would then have been as presented in illustration (b), while illustration (a) furnishes a normal case in which there is a combination both in intention and action. So in England, if several combine to forge an instrument and each executes by himself a distinct part of the forgery they are all principals, though they were not together when the instrument was completed. So in a case of forgery of a currency note against Bingley, Dutton, and Batkin, it appeared that Bingley and Dutton bought the paper, and cut it into pieces of the proper size at their house; it was then taken to Batkin, who struck off in blank all the printed part of the note except the date, line and the number, and impressed on the paper the wavy horizontal lines. The blanks were then brought back to the house of Bingley and Dutton, where the watermark was introduced into the paper, after which Bingley, in the presence of Dutton, impressed the date, line and number, and Dutton added the signature, in the absence of Batkin, who was, however, held equally liable with the other two.<sup>11</sup> So, in another case, where A had engraved the plate, B made the paper and C finished it, and it appeared that each acted without knowing anything about the part assigned to the other, it was held that all the three were liable as principals, it being immaterial that the co-conspirators should be mutually known.<sup>12</sup>

(10) 1 Bishop's Cr. L., Vol. I, Ch. XXIII, s. 432.

302. Where, two or more persons jointly attack another, the fact that one batters his skull with a stick while the other is content to hurl at him a heavy stone the result of which is the fracture of his skull, the case is obviously one of intentional co-operation making all the offenders conjointly equally liable for the principal offence.<sup>13</sup> In such a case, it is not necessary to find which injuries were caused by which of the assailants so long as the evidence showed that they were acting in concert and intended to cause bodily injury as was likely to cause death.<sup>14</sup>

Persons concerned in criminal act may be guilty of different offences.

38. Where several persons are engaged or concerned in the commission of a criminal act, they may be guilty of different offences by means of that act.

Illustration.

A attacks Z under such circumstances of grave provocation that his killing of Z would be only culpable homicide not amounting to murder. B having ill-will towards Z and intending to kill him, and not having been subject to the provocation, assists A in killing Z. Here, though A and B are both engaged in causing Z's death, B is guilty of murder, and A is guilty only of culpable homicide.

303. Analogous Law.—This section is the converse of section 34. Under the latter section several persons act in furtherance of a common intention, so that their liability is joint irrespective of the nature or extent of their contribution to the crime. Under the present section several persons combine to commit a crime but not “in furtherance of a common intention.” Therefore, as the intention differs, so does their criminal responsibility.

304. Principle.—As observed in the preceding article, this section assumes the absence of a common intention. For if there had been community of intention, the case would be governed by section 34, and the nature and proportion of the

(11) Bingley, R. & R. C. C. R. 446.

(12) Kirkwood, 1 Mood C. C. 304 (311); Dade, 1 Mood C. C. 307; Bingley, R. & R. 446.

(13) Subbappa Chenappa, 15 Bom. L. R. 303; Ram Newaz, 35 A. 506; but see Gulab, 40 A. 686.

(14) Nam Newaz, 30 A. 506, distinguishing Duma, 19 M. 483; Gouridas, 36 C. 659; Dharam Rai, (1887) A. W. N. 236; Bhola Singh, 29 A. 282; Dhian Singh, 9 A. L. J. 180, following Subbappa Chenappa 15 Bom. L. R. 303.

contributory act would be immaterial. It is only when there is an absence of a common design that there is room for the discrimination permitted by the section. Such a case would arise where, in a sudden quarrel, a person is struck down by two or more persons. So, in a case, where a quarrel arose between one Cheranjan on the one side and Indar and Bacha on the other, and Cheranjan abused Indar, whereupon the latter hit him a blow with a stick and Bacha struck him down by a blow on the head with an axe, inflicting two other wounds with the axe on other parts of the body. Any one of the three axe wounds was sufficient to cause death. The Sessions Judge convicted both under section 304 of the Code, but on appeal Oldfield, J., observed that the offences committed by Indar and Bacha could be distinguished from each other; and while Bacha was, no doubt, guilty of the more serious offence of culpable homicide, Indar's offence was of voluntarily causing hurt. Bacha's blow alone was the cause of death, and neither the assault nor the killing was in furtherance of a common intention so as to render the one man liable for the act of the other. The case, therefore, fell under the provisions of this section, under which, while both are engaged in a criminal act, they may be liable for different offences.<sup>15</sup> There may be a common intention for one purpose, but not for another purpose, in which, too, the rule of the section would apply. Thus, in one case, two persons start to commit burglary and one of them encountering opposition shoots down his opponent: Here the two burglars were engaged in a criminal act, and they had a common intention so far as regards the commission of that act, but the commission of murder was neither a part of the common intention nor in pursuance of a common aim. Therefore, while the person shooting will alone be responsible for murder, his companion could only be convicted of burglary.

39. A person is said to cause an effect "voluntarily" when he causes it by means whereby he intended to cause it, or by means which, at the time of employing those means, he knew or had reason to believe to be likely to cause it.

Illustration.

A sets fire, by night, to an inhabited house in a large town, for the purpose of facilitating robbery, and thus causes the death of a person. Here, A may not have intended to cause death, and may even be sorry that death has been caused by his act: yet, if he knew that he was likely to cause death, he has caused death voluntarily.

305. Analogous Law.—The Code does not define the word "intentionally" though it is frequently used, and is presupposed in every crime. It, however, defines its lesser analogue "Voluntarily." The difference between the two words is one of degree. The definition of this word has been avowedly borrowed from the definition of "wilfully" as prepared by the commissioners on the Criminal Law of England, where they proposed to define it as follows:—"A hurt, damage or other evil consequence of an act shall be deemed to have been caused wilfully where the doer of the act intended such consequence to result or knew or believed that it was likely to result from his act, or where knowing or apprehending that such consequence would probably result from his act, he wilfully incurred the risk of causing it."<sup>16</sup> It will be observed that this definition differs from that of the Code only in having a third item absent, namely, that relating to the probable result.<sup>17</sup>

306. It will be noticed that the Code does not define the word with reference to volition, but rather to the causation of effects. This word frequently occurs in describing offences affecting the human body,<sup>18</sup> and as these form by no means the least important of offences prescribed in the Code, it is essential that the exact import of the term should be clearly understood.

307. The definition here given has been, from the commencement, the subject of hostile comment, as it overlooks the difference between "intention" and

(15) Indar, (1882) A. W. N. 23.

(16) Digest, Ch. 1, s. 3, Art. 2: First Report, s. 103. This definition of "wilfully" is now current in England. Roper v. Knott, (1898)

1 Q. B., 868; Senior, (1899) 11 Q. B. 283.

(17) First Report, s. 104.

(18) Ch. XVI (ss. 299-377).

“knowledge of likelihood” and tends to regard these as convertible terms. But that “intention” is distinct from “knowledge” or “knowledge of likelihood” cannot be denied and was also clearly conceded in the Indian Law Commissioners’ Report,<sup>19</sup> but they justified their draft definition on the ground that as the penal consequence in the two cases is the same, the distinction between the two terms is a distinction without a difference, and their retention enables the Court to define more accurately the state of mind present at the time of the doing of a criminal act.<sup>20</sup> Let it be supposed that A was wilfully to mutilate the person of B, not intending to kill him, but only to injure him from a motive of revenge. Suppose, also, that he did this, knowing that death, though not a certain result, was yet likely to result from what he did, and that, in fact, death did result, it cannot, we presume, be doubted, that the legal penalty ought to be just the same as if A had directly intended to kill.<sup>21</sup> This is, then, the sense now stereotyped in the Indian Criminal law, so that a person shall be deemed to cause an injury “voluntarily” if he either intended it to result directly from his act or omission, or believing that it was in any degree probable that such injury would result from his act or omission, he incurred the risk of causing it.

308. Principle.—The word “voluntarily” has been given an artificial meaning and at variance with its ordinary sense solely for the purpose of the Code. In that sense the predicament of “voluntary offenders will include not only those who directly intend to inflict a particular injury, but also all such as wilfully and knowingly incur the hazard of causing it.”<sup>22</sup> “The proper test of guilt in such cases is that of knowledge and consciousness on the part of the malefactor that hurt or damage is likely to result or will probably result, from what he does; his criminality consists in the wilfully incurring the risk of causing loss or suffering to others. The case of a party so misconducting himself, and so regardless of the interests of others seems to be indistinguishable in point of legal guilt and penal consequences from that of a criminal who acts with the most direct intention to execute an illegal purpose, and it seems to us that he may properly be described as the voluntary author of the mischief produced.”<sup>23</sup>

309. Meaning of Words.—“Causes it by means”: “Means” here signifies acts as well as omissions. “At the time of employing those means,” which alone determines his criminality. “Knew or had reason to believe”: see s. 26.

310. Operation of Criminal Volition.—It is by no means easy to define in language at once precise and perspicacious the exact significance of the word “voluntarily.” The section defines it by applying to it the test of “intention,” “knowledge” and “reasonable belief.” The last has been defined before, and its meaning has been set out there. “Intention” and “knowledge” remain. Now the word “voluntary” as understood in the light of “intention” is, as Bentham pointed out, an ambiguous term,<sup>24</sup> for it may mean either “willing” or “uncoerced.” Again, “the intention or will may regard either of two objects: (a) the act itself; or (b) its consequences. Of these objects, that which the intention regards may be styled intentional. If it regards the act, then the act may be said to be intentional: if the consequences, so also, then, may the consequences. If it regards both the act and the consequences, the whole action may be said to be intentional, whichever of those articles is not the object of the intention, may, of course, be said to be unintentional.”<sup>25</sup> Now the act may be intentional, without the consequences, as when intending to touch a man you chance to hurt him. So the consequences of an act may be intentional without the act being intentional at every stage, as when you run against a man with a view to push him down, but a second man coming in on a sudden between you and the first man, before you can stop yourself, you run against

(19) First Report, Note B.

(20) First Report, s. 101.

(21) English Law Commissioners’ Seventh Rep., s. 25; Indian Law Commissioners’ First Report, s. 107.

(22) English Law Commissioners’ Seventh Rep., s. 22, approved and followed in First Report, s. 105.

(23) English Law Commissioners’ Seventh Rep., s. 23, cited in First Rep., s. 106.

(24) Principles of Morals and Legislation, Vol. I, Ch. VIII, pp. 40, 41.

(25) Ib., Ch. VIII, s. I.

the second man, and by him push down the first.<sup>1</sup> But the consequence of an act cannot be intentional, without the act being itself intentional in at least the first stage, as where the second man pushes down the first man before you have a chance to touch him.<sup>2</sup> The Code, therefore, adopts this test when it judges of a man's intentions by the consequences. But a consequence when it is intentional may either be directly or only collaterally intentional. It is directly intentional when the prospect of producing it constituted one of the links in the chain of causes by which the person was determined to do the act. It is collaterally intentional, when, although the consequence was in contemplation, and appeared likely to ensue in case of the act being performed, yet the prospect of producing such consequence did not constitute a link in the aforesaid chain.

311. Here the Code takes note of both intentions, direct or indirect. But it will be observed that the intention so far is real and not presumed. Presumption, no doubt, enters largely in the determination of collateral intention, but it is, the means by which such intention is judged. It is never taken for granted, and it is here that the Indian law presents striking divergence from the English law, in that it only takes note of actual and not presumed intention in determining criminality, though this sometimes leads to awkward consequences, as in the case<sup>3</sup> where the accused intending to murder his father-in-law dealt him three stunning blows felling him senseless on the ground. The accused believing that he was dead, set fire to the hut in which he fell with a view to remove all evidence of the crime. The fire so kindled killed the man, and the question arose what offence the accused has committed. In so far as he attempted to murder him by dealing him three blows, he was admittedly guilty of attempted murder under section 307 of the Code. But was he guilty of anything more? He had set the house on fire not with the intention of killing the man, but with the sole intention of destroying incriminating evidence against himself. He had not the remotest thought that his victim was still alive when he lighted the fire. At the same time it compassed his death. Under English law, such a case would present no difficulty, for it will presume an intention to kill from the fact accomplished. But this is not the test adopted in Indian jurisprudence. And hence the unsatisfactory decision of the majority of the Courts that the man could not be convicted of murder, as he did not light the fire with the intention of killing the deceased.<sup>4</sup> In another case, the accused had killed his own mother, by beating and kicking her, and the question was raised but not decided, whether the brutal treatment of an old woman by a powerful man would, in such a case, raise an inference of knowledge of the likelihood of death.

312. But the case is instructive, for it draws a distinction between intention, knowledge of likelihood and mere rashness or negligence. Intention : Knowledge : Negligence. "Culpable rashness is acting with the consciousness that the mischievous and illegal consequences may follow, but with the hope that they may not; and often with the belief that the actor has taken sufficient precautions to prevent their happening. The imputability arises from acting despite the consciousness. Culpable negligence is acting without the consciousness that the illegal or mischievous effect will follow, but in circumstances which show that the actor has not exercised the caution incumbent upon him; and that if he had, he would have had the consciousness. The imputability arises from the civil duty of circumspection. It is manifest that personal injury, consciously and intentionally caused, cannot fall within either of these categories, which are wholly inapplicable to the case of an act or series of acts, themselves intended, which are the direct producers of death."<sup>5</sup> Eliminating, then, the two extreme cases of intention and rashness, we have the intermediate state of mind in which the culprit "knew or had

(1) Principles of Morals and Legislation, Vol. I, Ch. VIII, s. 4.

(2) Ib., Ch. VIII, s. 5.

(3) Khandu, 15 B. 194, followed in Palani Goundan, 42 M. 545 (558) F. B. contra (obiter) in Khubi, (1923) A. 545; Kallappa, (1933) M.

798; distinguished in Gajjan Singh, (1931) L. 27 (28).

(4) See this case further commented on under s. 302, post.

(5) Per Holloway, J., in Nidamarit, 7 M. H. C. R. 119; Morgan, 9 Cr. L. J. 393.

reason " to believe that the effect produced was the effect " likely " to be produced by the means which he had employed. These words play an important part in the description of offences dealt with by sections 279, 282, 284-289 and, of course, the important section 299 defining culpable homicide and its allied sections. Under this clause if the reason existed, the Court presumes knowledge of the consequence apart from any actual knowledge that the accused may have possessed.<sup>6</sup> But even then the presumption is rebuttable and the accused may shew that though he had reason to believe, he had also other reasons against it. Suppose, for instance, a person should drive a buggy obviously along a narrow, crowded street. He might not intend to kill any one, but the fact that the lane was narrow and crowded is reason from which he might well infer that his act was likely to kill some person. In such a case, then, if he should cause death, he would be guilty of culpable homicide, and even of murder, if it should be found as a fact that he further knew that his act was so imminently dangerous that it must, in all probability, cause death as contemplated in clause 4 of section 300. Such an inference would be drawn, if a man should drive a buggy furiously not merely along a crowded street, but intentionally into the midst of a crowd of persons. On the other hand, though driving through a crowded street or a crowd of persons, he may show that he was making for a train to discharge an important business in a distant part of the country which he could not otherwise fulfil. In such a case, the Court will presume that his intention was not to cause death, but to save the time.<sup>7</sup>

313. The question whether the effect produced was premeditated or known to be probable by the author is, therefore, always a question of fact to be determined according to the particular circumstances of each case. But whatever the facts, the prosecution have to prove them with sufficient clearness so as to establish a casual relationship between the doer and the deed, for, otherwise, it may be merely a case of post hoc ergo propter hoc which is as great a fallacy in logic as it is in criminal jurisprudence. If, suppose, a sportsman shoots at a fowl with intent to kill and steal it, and in doing so he kills a person who was hidden behind a bush and of whose presence the sportsman had no knowledge. Here, although the death was caused by the sportsman, still as he had no reason to believe that it was likely, he could not be said to have voluntarily caused it.<sup>8</sup> But if suppose that, in such a case, he had sent the deceased in the bush to raise fowls, that fact would alter his criminality, for it will, then, be a reason from which he could have foreseen the result.<sup>9</sup> This view finds support in an English case in which the prisoner was out poaching by night with two other men. He had a gun with him lent him by his brother. The prisoner had just cocked his gun when he was pursued by the watchman. He ran for a short distance and then turned round when his gun went off, wounding the watchman on the shoulder. The prisoner was tried by Lawrence, J., who charged the jury that a man must be presumed to intend the natural consequence of his acts. The prisoner was convicted and sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment, but the court of appeal set aside the conviction, holding that the direction of the Judge to the jury was incorrect and misleading, inasmuch as as a proposition of law it was incorrect that a man must be presumed to intend the natural consequences not only of his intentional acts but also of his accidental acts."<sup>10</sup>

314. " Malignantly " : " Wantonly. "—There are sections in which the Code does not confine itself to the terminology which it has explained in this chapter. It uses, for example, the words " malignantly "<sup>11</sup> and " wantonly "<sup>12</sup> which had been nowhere defined. As their use is limited, their significance will be considered under the sections in which they occur.

315. Effect of Coercion.—The effect of coercion is stated in section 94. It does not justify a murder. Consequently, the act of a person who by threats of

(6) Sunku Seethaiah, 6 I. C. 774.

(7) Per Peacock, C.J., in Gorachand Gope, B. L. R. (Sup. Vol.) 443, F. B.

(8) S. 299, ill. (c), post.

(9) S. 299, ill. (b), post.

(10) William Davies, (unrep.), Times 11th March 1913 (summarized in 7 C. W. N. 125n).

(11) Ss. 153, 270.

(12) S. 153.

death is induced to do an act in order to facilitate the commission of a murder is a "voluntary" act within the meaning of this section.<sup>13</sup>

40. Except in the chapters<sup>14</sup> and sections mentioned in clauses 2 and 3 of this section, the word "offence" denotes a thing made punishable by this Code.

In Chapter IV, [Chapter V-A] and in the following sections, namely, sections 64, 65, 66, 67, 71, 109, 110, 112, 114, 115, 116, 117, 187, 194, 195, 203, 211, 213, 214, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 347, 348, 388, 389, and 445 the word "offence" denotes a thing punishable under this Code, or under any special or local law as hereinafter defined.

And in sections 141, 176, 177, 201, 202, 212, 216, and 441, the word "offence" has the same meaning when the thing punishable under the special or local law is punishable under such law with imprisonment for a term of six months or upwards, whether with or without fine.

[Special Law—S. 41, post.

Local Law—S. 42, post.]

316. Analogous Law.—This section as originally drafted, formed clause 27, but it has been since amended by several Acts.<sup>14</sup> Its terms are further enlarged by an explanatory definition added to s. 216 for the purpose of that section.<sup>15</sup>

317. An abetment<sup>16</sup> of, or an attempt<sup>17</sup> to commit an offence is in itself an offence within the meaning of this section. But vagabonds and habitual robbers, as such, though liable to arrest under section 55 of the Criminal Procedure Code, are not arrested for the commission of any "offence" within the definition here given. So that resistance by them cannot be punished under sections 224 or 225 of the Code.<sup>18</sup> The object of this and other similar sections, e.g., sections 118, 144, 145 of the Procedure Code is the prevention and not the punishment of crime.<sup>19</sup> Consequently, there can be no "offence," for as soon as there is one, there can be, then, no prevention. So neglect to maintain a wife and children is not an offence; consequently, an order passed for maintenance under section 488 of the Procedure Code does not amount to a conviction for an offence.<sup>20</sup>

318. The Code adopts the simpler but less discriminating nomenclature of "offence" to describe what would be classed in England as treason, felonies and misdemeanours. Treason itself being divided into two classes: (i) Grand Treason (or High Treason) and (ii) Petit Treason. High Treason consisted of any overt act signifying an intention to kill or destroy the King or to do him any bodily harm, tending to his death or destruction, maim or wounding, imprisonment or restraint.<sup>21</sup> To levy war against the King,<sup>22</sup> to adhere to His enemies,<sup>23</sup> are other cases of High Treason. Lese majestie or active disloyalty is also cited by Glanvil as an instance of High Treason.<sup>24</sup>

319. "Petit Treason" is when a servant kills his master, a wife her husband, or when a secular or religious man kills his prelate or superior to whom he

(13) Killikyatara, (1912) M. W. N. 1108; 19 I. C. 207.

(14) This section was substituted for the original s. 40, by the Indian Penal Code Amendment Act, 1870 (Act XXVII of 1870) s. 2; the words in the crotchets [ ] being added by the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act (Act VIII of 1913) s. 2; the word "Chapter" was substituted for the word "chapter" by the Repealing and Amending Act, 1930 (Act VIII of 1930). The figures 64, 65, 66 and 71 were inserted by the Indian Penal Code Amendment Act, 1886 (Act X of 1886) s. 21(1).

(15) See amended s. 216, post. The term "offence" includes offences punishable under English Law also, vide Act VIII of 1913, s. 23.

(16) Spier, (1887) P. R. No. 49.

(17) Per Banerji, J., in Ajudhia, 17 A. 120.

(18) Kandhia, 7 A. 67; following Shasti Churn Napat, 8 C. 331.

(19) Umbica Prasad, 1 C. L. J. 271.

(20) Ponnummal, 16 M. 234; following Golam Hossein, 7 W. R. 10; Thakur Ira, 5

B. H. C. R. 81.

(21) Stephen's Criminal Law, 40.

(22) Archbold's Criminal Pleadings, 883-990; Stephen's Criminal Law, 40, 44; 4 Black., Ch. VI.

(23) Ib.

(24) Glanvil Lib., 1 C. 2; 4 Black., 75.

owes "faith and obedience."<sup>25</sup> Petit Treason as a distinct offence has long since ceased to exist, such offences being now "deemed to be murder only, and no greater offence."<sup>1</sup> The word 'Treason' is, therefore, now confined to signify High Treason merely.<sup>2</sup>

320. "Felony" was a term reserved by English law to designate all offences punishable with death and forfeiture. It is variously derived and described. In Termes de la Ley it is said of serious crimes "that they are called felonies of the ancient English word 'fell' or 'fierce' because they are intended to be done with cruel, bitter, fell, fierce, or mischievous minds."<sup>3</sup> But another writer describes the word as signifying an offence which occasions a total forfeiture of property to which capital or other punishment may be superadded according to the degree of guilt.<sup>4</sup> A large number of serious offences are now created felonies by Statute, and their punishment is either death or penal servitude for seven years.<sup>5</sup>

321. All other offences are called misdemeanours, sometimes also termed misprisons, and which, therefore, includes all crimes and offences not being treason and felonies, and which are punishable by either fine or imprisonment, or both.<sup>6</sup> It may be added that while the Penal Code has adopted the simpler mode of describing all punishable acts as "offences," the Criminal Procedure Code had to subdivide offences into warrant cases<sup>7</sup> and summons cases<sup>8</sup> the former being more in the nature of felonies, and the latter of misdemeanours.<sup>9</sup>

"Offence" in the Procedure Code. 322. The definition of "offence" as here given differs materially from that adopted in the companion Code,<sup>10</sup> where it is thus defined :

" 'Offence' means any act or omission made punishable by any law for the time being in force.

" It also includes any act in respect of which a complaint may be made under section 20 of the Cattle Trespass Act."

323. This definition is obviously much wider than the one given here because the Procedure Code provides for the trial of all offences under and without, the Code, while the Code has to define the terms with strict reference to its future use in the Code itself. The term as used here has, then, no reference to the Procedure Code, or English law, and a conviction under either is, then, not a conviction for an "offence" within the meaning of the Code, unless it conforms to the definition of the term as here described.<sup>11</sup> (§ 324).

324. Offence in the Code.—What is then an "offence" as here described? It is said to denote "a thing made punishable by this Code." Now the word "a thing" is as vague as it is comprehensive, for it may mean either a subject or an object, the doer or the deed. But it is obviously used in the latter sense as connoting acts and omissions made penal by the Code.<sup>12</sup> But no legal responsibility attaches to them apart from the doer. It is he who is punishable in respect of them. The term must mean, then, acts and omissions for which a person is punishable under the Code. But the language of the section is inapt, for it speaks of "a thing made

(25) Termes de la Ley, "Treason."

(1) 9 Geo. IV, c. 31, s. 2; 24 & 25 Vic., c. 100, s. 8; Russ., p. 644.

(2) Per Blackburn, C. J., in O'Brien, 1 Ir. R. (O. S.) 176.

(3) See Co. Litt., 391a; 4 Black., 307; 1 Pollock and Maitland's History of Criminal Law, 284, 286; ib., Vol. 2, 125, 463-468, 476-478, 509.

(4) 4 Black., 95; 1 Hawk., Ch. 25, s. 1; 1 Russ., Ch. IV, p. 186.

(5) 7 & 8 Geo. IV, c. 28, s. 8, under which transportation was the punishment provided, but it is now commuted into penal servitude, 20 & 21 Vict., c. 3, s. 2.

(6) 1 Russ., Ch. IV, p. 187; but the use of the term "offence" is not foreign to English Law. As Collins, J., remarked in a case,

"Prima facie an offence is equivalent to a crime"; Derbyshire Coal Co. v. Derby, (1896) 2 Q. B. 57, 58.

(7) S. 4 (w), Cr. P. C.

(8) Ib., s. 4 (v),

(9) Warrant Cases, ib., Ch. XXI (ss. 251-259); Summons Cases, ib., Ch. XX (ss. 241-250).

(10) S. 4 (o), Cr. P. C.

(11) Ganpatrao, 19 B. 105; Ganesh Khanderao, 13 B. 506; Moorga Chetty, 5 B. 338, in which full significance of the term is set out per Melvill, J.

(12) Reference, 3 M. H. C. R. (App.) 11; Moorga Chetty, 5 B. 338; Narayan Dhonde, 6 I. C. (B.) 529; Keshwar Lal v. Girish, 29 C. 496; Po Han, 7 L. B. R. 63; Lewis, 38 M. 733; Ganesh, 10 I. C. (S.) 168.

punishable by the Code," which, of course, could only mean the doer punishable by the Code. But though this sense is clear, it is not inevitable and has been the subject of judicial comment.<sup>13</sup>

325 Rules and Byelaws.—Rules and byelaws made under a local or special law are not offences, unless they are so declared by the laws concerned.<sup>14</sup>

41. A "special law" is a law applicable to a particular subject.
 "Special Law."

326. Analogous Law.—A particular subject is a subject dealing with an individual subject, e.g., the Excise, Opium and Cattle Trespass, Income-tax, Land Acquisition, Criminal Tribes, Emigration Railways or the like. The Whipping Act<sup>15</sup> is not a special law within the meaning of this or the last section, inasmuch as it creates no offence,<sup>16</sup> but merely provides a supplementary or alternative punishment for offences already primarily punishable under the Penal Code, or, in the case of juvenile offenders, under other enactments.<sup>17</sup>

42. A "local law" is a law applicable only to a particular part of British India.
 "Local Law."

327. Analogous Law.—As a "special law" applies to special subjects, the operation of "local law" is confined to particular localities. Such are, for example, the several Revenue Acts, Excise Acts, Court of Wards Acts, Port Trusts Acts and the like.<sup>18</sup>

As, however, rules made under "local laws" do not form a necessary part of such laws, but are made for their convenient working, they do not fall under the category of "local laws."<sup>19</sup>

43. The word "illegal" is applicable to everything which is an offence or which is prohibited by law, or which furnishes ground for a civil action: and a person is said to be "legally bound to do" whatever it is illegal in him to omit.
 "Illegal": "Legally bound to do."

328. Analogous Law.—In several sections<sup>20</sup> the word used is "unlawfully," a concept which has been nowhere defined in the Code. Here the term defined is "illegally", but it is explained by the Law Commissioners that the terms are intended to be used in the same sense and bear the same meaning.<sup>21</sup>

329. Adverting now to the section itself, it will be seen that the word "illegal" has been given here a somewhat wide meaning, for it applies not only to (a) everything which is an offence, or (b) which is prohibited law, but also to (c) anything which furnishes ground for a civil action, e.g., any actionable wrong, whether ex contractu or ex delicto.<sup>22</sup> "These appear wide words," said the Law Commissioners, "but we think it would be difficult to restrict them without the risk of excluding something which ought to be included. Generally we apprehend it will be found unobjectionable to designate as illegal anything done or omitted to be done by man for which he is liable to a civil action."<sup>23</sup>

330. "Unlawful" distinguished:—This section defines the term "illegal" but the Code frequently uses the term "unlawful" in connection with an act where it is intended to connote an act not supported by law<sup>24</sup> as distinct from an act which is "illegal" in the sense that it is prohibited by law. As such, the term "unlawful" is wider in its import, since an act may not be illegal in that there is no law prohibiting it and it may not furnish ground for a civil action, since, in the absence of a statutory law of torts applicable to this country, the right of civil

(13) Moorga Chetty, 5 B. 338; Khandia, 7 A. 67 (71); 3 M. H. C. R. (App.) 11.

(14) Ma Khewet Kyi, 6 R. 791.

(15) Inder Sain, 56 I. C. (L.) 210; Wasudeva, 52 M. 882; Aydroos, (1923) M. 187.

(16) Act IV of 1909.

(17) Po Han, 7 Bur. L.T. 99, 22 I. C. 147.

(18) Reference, 3 M. H. C. R. (App.) 21.

(19) Ganda Shah, (1894) P. R. No. 23.

(20) E.g., ss. 23 and 24.

(21) First Report, § 658.

(22) Bhagwandin, (1929) A. 935; Rahimat Ali, 62 I. C. (B.) 401; Ganpat Subras, 58 B. 491.

(23) First Report, § 91.

(24) Mahendranath, 62 C. 629 (633, 634); Fazlur Rahman, 9 Pat. 725 (unlawful and illegal held identical, sed quaere).

action depends upon the rule of justice, equity and good conscience, which does not rule out customary usages, e.g., forced labour, and slavery—now prohibited by ss. 370 and 371. The term “unlawful” is then an elastic term and its sense varies and eludes a legal definition. S. 23 of the Contract Act furnishes an apt illustration of an enactment in which the two terms have got blended, though it is easy enough to distinguish contracts which are unlawful from those that are illegal.<sup>25</sup> (For a further commentary, see § 187.)

331. The section classes as “illegal” everything prohibited by law. Now law prohibits not only illegal contracts but also those that are void. In other words, contracts may be illegal in the sense of being punishable or forbidden,<sup>1</sup> or they may be void in the sense of being merely unenforceable in law.<sup>2</sup> For instance, contracts of a wagering nature are void without being illegal, in so far as they are not prohibited, though there is a legal prohibition against their enforcement in law.<sup>3</sup> It is, however, apparent from the section that such contracts are not intended to be designated “illegal,” for they do not furnish a ground for a civil action. The only contracts, then, that the Code recognizes as illegal are those that are described in section 23 of the Indian Contract Act. But we are dealing in the section not with contracts but with things prohibited, which means the doing of which is prohibited, though it may not be punishable by law. The latter is no doubt “illegal,” but then it is also an offence. In other words, by illegal acts we should understand acts which are either penal or prohibited or tortious; as, for instance, the asking of irrelevant and indecent questions to a witness under examination, not permitted by the Indian Evidence Act,<sup>4</sup> or the publication of a libellous matter concerning one whose identity is thinly veiled.<sup>5</sup>

332. The prohibition here referred to must be by law, and not merely under, say, departmental rules or order. So where a person in Government service was bound to make a true return of lands in his possession, falsely entered “nil” in his return and made a false statement to the same effect in a revenue enquiry before the Assistant Collector, it was held that he could not be convicted under section 177 of the Code as he was not bound under any law to make a true return.<sup>6</sup> In two previous cases<sup>7</sup> another Bench of the same Court appear to have considered even a breach of duty “illegal” within the meaning of this section, but there is no authority for it. The “law” here referred to is a legislative enactment of rules having that force, but not merely disciplinary orders, though they may be made under the sanction of law. In this view, the furnishing of false returns<sup>8</sup> or the preparation of a false diary,<sup>9</sup> though contrary to Government rules, is not contrary to law, and is, therefore, not “illegal” within the comprehension of this section.

“Injury.” 44. The word “injury” denotes any harm whatever illegally caused to any person, in body, mind, reputation or property.

333. Analogous Law.—An injury is simply an act contrary to law.<sup>10</sup> There can be, therefore, no “injury” unless there is an actionable wrong.<sup>11</sup> The

(25) Cf. S. 23, Contract Act ill. (f)-(h).

(1) S. 23, Indian Contract Act (IX of 1872).

(2) Indian Contract Act, ss. 24-30.

(3) Per Lush, J., in Haigh v. Sheffield, L. R. 10 Q. B. 102; approved by Smith, L.J., in Strachan v. Universal Stock Exchange, (1895) 2 Q. B. 697; but in English Law this difference is not always easy to observe, Wool v. Hamilton, (1898) 2 Q. B. 337. “Illegal” has in a Statute a meaning very near to, but not the same as void, as where a thing is only illegal qua A, it is inoperative as against him and yet may be binding on B (per Alderson, B., in Job v. Launch, 11 Ex. 542.)

(4) Fazlur Rahman, 9 Pat. 725.

(5) Rahimat Alli, 62 I. C. (B.) 401.

(6) Appaya, 14 M. 484; Contrary in Virasami, 4 M. 144, dissented from.

(7) Virasami, 4 M. 144; Revision case, 6 M. H. C. R. (App.) 48.

(8) Revision case, 6 M. H. C. R. (App.) 48.

(9) Virasami, 4 M. 144.

(10) Per Halloway, J., in Swami Nayudu v. Subramania, 2 M. H. C. R. 158 (160).

(11) Rickett v. Metropolitan Railway, L. R. 2 H. L. 175; Metropolitan Board of Works v. McCarthy, L. R. 7 H. L. 243; Cowper Essex v. Acton, 14 App. Cas. 153.

question whether there is an "injury" in a given case must, then, be answered with reference to the civil law.

334. Meaning of Words.—"Any harm whatever": The harm here contemplated may be by word or deed, e.g., defamation causes injury because it "harms" a man in reputation. "Illegally caused to any person," not necessarily directly, for it may, then, amount to "hurt," which is also an injury but of a serious kind. An injury may be caused to a person through another as in the case of adultery, or it may be caused to one's property, as in the case of mischief or theft. "Or property": The property here spoken of is something in existence, i.e., corporeal property. "It cannot with any propriety be applied to the reasonable expectation of pecuniary benefit for the loss of which an action is maintainable by the representative of a deceased person."<sup>12</sup> It should be noted that the "illegality" of harm is the gist of the term. It implies an illegal act or omission.<sup>13</sup> If the injury was not illegal it is not injury within the meaning of this section. So where the accused was entitled to prevent the smuggling of liquor his detention of the complainant was held to constitute no injury.<sup>14</sup>

335. Legal "Injury".—The word "injury" as here defined does not appear to possess all the attributes of "actionable wrong," for which it appears to be a substitute adopted for the purpose of the Code. In civil law, "injury" implies only such infringement of rights for which a person may obtain legal redress in compensation. Such rights, for instance, as rights of personal security, liberty, reputation, or property, and whatever is comprised therein, e.g., rights of copyright, patent, and trade-mark, are all rights, the infraction of which causes "injury", both within the meaning of the Code as well as of civil law. So it has been held "that a false charge laid before the police, and never intended to be prosecuted in Court, may, obviously, subject the accused party to very substantial injury" as defined in the section.<sup>15</sup> In this way not only an actual harm but even the risk of a harm may constitute injury. For a false complaint made against a person may not cause any actual harm in body, mind, reputation, or property, it may not cause any mental anxiety or grief, but as it is a complaint which exposes the party accused to the risk of a prosecution, it falls within the definition of injury as understood in the Code.

336. It would seem that the term not only includes risk of harm to person, but also risk of harm to property as well. Such would appear to be the case in section 285. But is the term large enough to cover a case, say, of an injury suffered by a wife by the death of her husband? At any rate, it would cover a case of an injury suffered by the wife by the death of her husband, though in view of the unamended provisions of s. 545 (b) of the Criminal Procedure Code which provided for the payment of compensation out of the fine "for injury caused by the offence committed," the Court held that, as the death of the husband did not involve loss of property, the wife did not suffer any "injury" by the death of the husband within the meaning of that clause.<sup>16</sup> But this view has since been rectified by the amendment of clause (b) and by the addition therein of words 'for any loss or injury.'<sup>17</sup> The cases now overruled by the Legislature were animadverted upon in the previous edition of this work.<sup>18</sup>

(12) Yalla Gangulu v. Mamidi Dali, 21 M. 74 (76), F. B.; Morgan, 36 C. 302; Appalasami, 1 Weir 441.

(13) Razzack, (1924) A. 197.

(14) Mantripragada, 44 I. C. (M) 973.

(15) Ashrof Ali, 5 C. 281, followed in Salik Roy, 6 C. 582 (583); Ramasami, 7 M. 292; Sheik Beari, 10 M. 232; Priyanath Gupta v. Lalji Chowkidar, (1923) C. 590 (A threat of decree is a harm.) But a threat of ex-communication which is no more than a social boycott is not a harm—Arumuga v.

Muthial, (1933) M. W. N. 736 (1).

(16) Yalla Gangulu v. Mamidi Dali, 21 M. 74, F. B.; affirming Luchmaka, 12 M. 352; which was followed in Abdul Rahiman, (1895) B. U. C. 763; to the same effect, Roop Lall Singh, 10 W. R. 39; Nana Sahib, (1888) B. U. C. 373; Amar Singh, 5 C. P. L. R. (Cr.) 45; Hyat, (1890) P. R. No. 6; but contra in Saif Ali, (1898) P. R. No. 17, F. B.

(17) Criminal Law Amendment Act (Act XXXVIII of 1923) S. 152.

(18) See 1 Penal Law (4th Ed.) p 318.

45. The word "life" denotes the life of a human being, unless the contrary appears from the context.

46. The word "death" denotes the death of a human being, unless the contrary appears from the context.

47. The word "animal" denotes any living creature, other than a human being.

337. Analogous Law.—Sir James Stephen animadverts on the superfluity and incorrectness of this definition. He says it is wholly vague as it might include "an angel, frog-spawn, and probably a tree." Superfluous the definition is not, for it is intended to include fish, insects, and other creatures not ordinarily classed as animals. It is here equivalent to the fauna of Biology. A tree cannot by any mistake be called an animal, for, though living, it is not a "creature" but a "thing."

48. The word "vessel" denotes anything made for the conveyance by water of human beings or of property.

338. Analogous Law.—"Property" here includes live-stock or the lower animals, otherwise vessels made for the conveyance of animals would be excluded.

49. Wherever the word "year" or the word "month" is used, it is to be understood that the year or the month is to be reckoned according to the British calendar.

339. Analogous Law.—The terms "year" and "month" are defined in the same terms in the General Clauses Act.<sup>19</sup> The British calendar has been since the 2nd September 1752, the same as the Gregorian calendar. And so it is provided by section 25 of the Indian Law of Limitation.<sup>20</sup> The British calendar is now universally adopted in calculating all periods in British and Indian enactments.

340. The true measure of "year" is the period of time during which the earth describes one complete revolution in its orbit, and which is the period taken by the sun to leave either equinoctial point of either tropic, and his return to the same. This period is also called the solar or tropical year, and though it is not uniform, its mean length is about 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes and 51.6 seconds. To do away with the odd hours, the New Style Calendar has adopted the average length of 365 days and every fourth year of 366 days.<sup>21</sup> It is now settled by Statute that the increasing day in the leap-year as well as the preceding day should be counted as one day only.<sup>22</sup> It was enacted that the commencement of the year shall be counted from January 1st, instead of the 25th March as theretofore,<sup>23</sup> and it began to be so counted from that year.

341. In computing the period of sentence, a year will thus mean 12 calendar months, and a month according to the number of days comprised therein. In calculating sentences passed on prisoners, the day on which the sentence is passed is counted as a whole day,<sup>24</sup> so that a person sentenced to imprisonment for the space of one calendar month is entitled to be released on the day preceding the date of the previous month on which he was sentenced.<sup>25</sup> In other words, if a prisoner is sentenced, say, on the 26th October, then his sentence would be counted as from the midnight of the 25th, the prisoner being entitled to count the whole of the 26th as the day of imprisonment.<sup>1</sup>

342. In this view a sentence for one calendar month, does not imply imprisonment for a fixed number of days. It may vary according to the month in

(19) "Month," s. 3 (33); "Year," s. 3 (59), Act X of 1897, the older Act had the same definition, s. 2 (4), Act I of 1868.

(20) Act XV of 1877; now see s. 25 of Act IX of 1908.

(21) It is so enacted by 24 Geo. II, c. 25.

(22) 21 Hen. III.

(23) 24 Geo. II, c. 23.

(24) Co. Litt., 255a; Stephen's Criminal Law, 155; hence the practice of fixing a year and a day in certain cases of crimes; e.g., death to constitute murder.

(25) Migotti v. Colvill, 4 C. P. D. 233; Combe v. Pitt, 3 Burr. 1434; Field v. Jones, 9 East. 151; Glassington v. Rawlins, 3 East. 407; Wright Mills, 4 H. & N. 488; Edwards, 9 Ex. 628.

(1) Migotti v. Colvill, 4 C. P. D. 233 (236), affirmed O.A., ib., 237.

which the sentence was passed. Thus, for example, if the imprisonment began on the 30th of a month it will expire at midnight of the 29th of the following month, if the following month is not February, in which case it will expire on its last day whatever be the total number of days, served by the prisoner. So if the month in which the prisoner was sentenced had 31 days, he is only entitled to be released on the 30th of the following month, though in that case he shall have spent in prison 31 and not merely 30 days. So where the prisoner was on the 31st of October sentenced to imprisonment for one calendar month, and for a second offence for a fortnight, commencing after expiration of the calendar month, it was held that the calendar month did not expire until the 30th of November so that he was not entitled to be discharged from the second term of imprisonment until the full period of 15 days computed from the first December had expired, i.e., until midnight of the 14th December.<sup>2</sup>

50. The word "section" denotes one of those portions of a chapter of this Code which are distinguished by prefixed numeral figures.
 "Section."

343. Analogous Law.—As no numerals have been prefixed to sub-sections and clauses, they do not constitute sections by themselves, and cannot be referred to detached from the full sections of which they form a part.

51. The word "oath" includes a solemn affirmation substituted by law for an oath, and any declaration required or authorised by law to be made before a public servant, or to be used for the purpose of proof, whether in a Court of Justice or not.
 "Oath."

344. Analogous Law.—An "oath" is a general term and includes an affirmation where it is so allowed, and an affidavit whether used in a Court of law or otherwise. An affidavit, filed before a Revenue officer assessing Income-Tax, is thus an "oath" within the meaning of the section. A mere declaration, as is used in the verification of complaints and petitions, is, however, not an oath, because it is not made before a public servant, nor is it admissible for the purpose of proof.

345. An oath is a religious asseveration, by which a person renounces the mercy and imprecates the vengeance of Heaven, if he do not speak the truth.<sup>3</sup>

346. In acts of Parliament passed since the end of 1850, "the words 'oath,' 'swear' and 'affidavit' shall include 'affirmation,' 'declaration,' affirming and declaring the case of persons by law allowed to declare or affirm instead of swearing."<sup>4</sup> The same words occur in the English Interpretation Act, 1889,<sup>5</sup> and in the General Clauses Act.<sup>6</sup>

347. As to the persons allowed to affirm instead of swearing, reference must be made to the provisions of the Indian Oaths Act,<sup>7</sup> which substitutes affirmation for an oath in the case of Hindu and Mahomedan witnesses, interpreters and jurors; in other cases affirmation is admissible only if an oath is objected to.<sup>8</sup>

348. For ex majori cautela the same Act enacts that in sections 178 and 181 of the Code the words "or affirmation" shall be deemed to have been inserted,<sup>9</sup> but in view of the extensive meaning of the word here given, that addition would have been assumed as a matter of construction.

349. Meaning of "Oath".—The primary object of an oath is, of course, an invocation addressed to God as an avenger of perjury, or as a witness. The form of oath, therefore, naturally differs, and has to be accommodated to the religious persuasion of the swearer; it being vain to compel a man to swear by a God in whom he does not believe, and whom he, therefore, does not reverence.<sup>10</sup> The rule of law,

(2) Migotti v. Colvill, 4 C. P. D. 233 (237).

(3) White, 1 Leach 430 (431).

(4) 13 & 14 Vict., c. 21, s. 4.

(5) S. 3.

(6) S. 3 (17), Act I of 1868; s. 3 (36), Act

X of 1897.

(7) Act X of 1873.

(8) Ib., s. 6.

(9) Ib., s. 15.

(10) Puffendorf, Bk. IV, c. 2, s. 4.

therefore, is to let a man swear according to the peculiar ceremony of his religion, or in a manner as he may consider binding on his conscience.<sup>11</sup> So while a Christian usually swears on the Bible,<sup>12</sup> and a Roman Catholic with a Crucifix or a Cross placed upon it,<sup>13</sup> a Jew is allowed to swear upon the Pentateuch,<sup>14</sup> and a Mahomedan upon a Koran,<sup>15</sup> while a Hindu may swear on the Gita, or touching the feet of a Brahmin.<sup>16</sup> The oath of a Chinaman is much more elaborate. He must be provided with a China saucer which he strikes and breaks and whereupon he solemnly swears as follows: "I shall tell the truth, and the whole truth; the saucer is cracked, and if I do not tell the truth, my soul will be cracked like the saucer."<sup>17</sup> And there is the record of a trial for high treason in which a recalcitrant witness who was arraigned for treason having objection to be sworn was said to have complied with the law on his touching his buttons and declaring that he was sworn and was under an oath.<sup>18</sup> In this country where innumerable sects and creeds prevail, a witness is usually given the choice of swearing by his favourite deity, but this is by no means necessary, nor is it the law, for a Hindu and Mahomedan has the statutory right to be affirmed, and all that he should be required to do is to affirm in some such language: "The evidence that I shall give shall be the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth," "so help me God" being added by a witness desired to swear.

350. The provision as to the form and administration of oath is not stringent, and an omission to administer an oath or affirmation cannot be availed of by the witness as a defence in a prosecution for perjury.<sup>19</sup>

351. Solemn Affirmation.—A solemn affirmation is equivalent to an oath only in the case in which it is "substituted by law for an oath." It is not per se equivalent to an oath, but attains its solemnity by virtue of the Statute. The Indian Oaths Act<sup>20</sup> is, of course, the law in this country which has made that substitution.<sup>21</sup> The form in which an oath or an affirmation shall be made is left to be provided by the High Courts.<sup>22</sup>

352. Declarations.—Similarly, a declaration, merely as such, is not tantamount to an oath. But it has that effect for the purpose of the Code, if it is made (a) because it was required by law, or if, at any rate, it was made; (b) because it was authorized by law; and (c) as such, it was made to a public servant,<sup>23</sup> or (d) was legally admissible in evidence. In the case of a prosecution for making a false declaration, it is on the prosecution to show that the declaration was so made, failing which the prosecution would fail.

353. Such a declaration need not be in any set form. It is a simple affirmation of a fact, statement or belief as regards matters upon which a declaration is required. Such declarations are required in a variety of cases, such as those which relate to the revenues of customs, or income-tax<sup>24</sup> or excise, the post office, railways and other departments of administration. Where a declaration is made in regard to matters only, some of which are required or authorized by law to be so declared, only so much of the declaration shall fall within the definition of an "oath" the remainder being ignored. The law, here spoken of, means a legislative enactment, or, at least, rules and regulations framed under the authority of such an enactment. It does not mean a mere departmental or disciplinary order, though it may be perfectly legal, being within the competency of the executive authority. So a person could not be prosecuted under section 177 of the Code for making a false return of lands in his enjoyment, because the return was only required by a departmental order, and not by law.<sup>25</sup> So a policeman who had secured his enlistment by giving false information to the recruiting District Superintendent of Police could

(11) Miller v. Solomons, 7 Ex. 534 (558).

(12) Gilham, 1 Esp. 285.

(13) Love, 5 How, S. T. 113.

(14) Omichand v. Barker, 1 Atk. 21.

(15) Morgan, 1 Leach 54.

(16) Omichand v. Barker, 1 Atk. 21.

(17) Entrehman, C. & M. 248.

(18) Christopher Love, 5 St. Trials 113.

(19) S. 13, Indian Oaths Act (X of 1873).

(20) Act X of 1873.

(21) Ib., s. 6.

(22) Ib., s. 7.

(23) S. 21, I. P. C.

(24) S. 52, Income Tax Act (XI of 1922).

(25) Appayya, 14 M. 484.

not be convicted under section 177,<sup>1</sup> but in so far as it was held that he could not also be convicted under section 182, the decision appears to be unsound.<sup>2</sup> A purchaser of a stamp paper giving a false name cannot be said to have made a false declaration, because there is no law under which he is bound to give any information.<sup>3</sup> So a false representation in a memorandum of appeal is not an offence as it is not required by law to be verified.<sup>4</sup> So a person, being now under no legal obligation to state the truth to a police-officer, cannot be convicted under either s. 177 or s. 182, for giving him false information without intending to injure anybody.<sup>5</sup> Similarly, a false declaration prepared and not filed before a public servant would constitute an "oath" within the meaning of the section, though there is no section in the Code to punish it. Such a declaration must be authorized to be made either before a public servant, within the meaning assigned to that term in section 21, or it may be authorized by law to be used for the purpose of proof.

52. Nothing is said to be done or believed in "good faith" which is "Good faith." done or believed without due care and attention.

354. Analogous Law.—This definition of "good faith" is merely a negative one. It does not define "good faith" but rests content by stating what it is not. The positive aspect of the term is presented by the General Clauses Act,<sup>6</sup> in which it is thus defined :—

"3 (20). A thing shall be deemed to be done in 'good faith,' where it is in fact done honestly, whether it is done negligently or not."

This definition in General Clauses Act is the verbatim reproduction of the definition of the term as given in the English Bills of Exchange Act, 1882,<sup>7</sup> and the Sale of Goods Act, 1893.<sup>8</sup>

355. Principle.—"Good faith" plays an important part in the law of crimes, and its presence is ordinarily a sufficient answer to a charge of criminality in many cases. The definition here given is, therefore, the key-note of all sections in which "good faith" enters. Its precise significance is, therefore, necessary.

356. It will be observed that the section defines good faith by exclusion. It says that an act done without due care and attention shall not be deemed to have been done in good faith. The section makes no reference to the moral elements of honesty and right motive which are involved in the popular signification of "good faith," which are prominent in the positive definition enacted in other Acts of the Legislature. It, therefore, follows that while an honest blunderer acts in "good faith" within the meaning of the General Clauses Act, an "honest blunderer" can never act in good faith within the meaning of the Code, for, being "negligent," he has not acted with due care and attention." It will, thus, be seen that the two definitions approach the question from two different standpoints, and there is nothing common between them. For while the general definition condones negligence and carelessness, if only there was honesty, the Code regards honesty as immaterial, and the presence of "care and attention" as all in all. In this respect, the definition would appear to closely correspond with the English notion of "reasonable and probable cause" or "reasonable and justifiable cause" as used in criminal jurisprudence.

357. In this sense, the question of "good faith" is always a question of fact to be determined in accordance with the proved facts and circumstances of each

(1) Dwarka Prasad, 6 A. 97.

(2) See Muhammad Khalil, 10 A. 49; Ganesh Khanderao, 13 B. 506; Budha, (1880) P. R. No. 14, in which it was held that he would be guilty under s. 182, F. P. In Jaggat Singh, Oudh Cas. 11, it was said that he would be guilty even under s. 177.

(3) Parmaya, (1885) B. U. C. 210; contra in Raghoji, 3 B. H. C. R. 42, under the Stamp Act of 1862.

(4) Ghanaya, (1879) P. R. No. 17; Sunt Lal, (1881) P. R. No. 41.

(5) Suraji Mohan, (1873) B. U. C. 76; but if he intends to injure anybody, s. 182, ill. (c), meets the case.

(6) Act X of 1897. No definition of the term existed in the earlier Acts.

(7) S. 90.

(8) S. 62, sub-sec. 2.

case. The standard of "due care and attention" is not the standard of the hypothetically "reasonable man." But it is the standard of the man whose "good faith" is on trial. The Court has to see whether he, circumstanced as he was, had exercised the care and attention which might be expected of him. It is, therefore, irrelevant to say that, in such a case, any other man would have acted differently. It may be so, but the question is not what another man would have done but what the accused did at the time, and what more he could have done, but which he had failed to do. As Batty, J., remarked in a case, "good faith" requires not, indeed, logical infallibility but due care and attention. But how far erroneous actions or statements are to be imputed to want of due care and caution, must in each case be considered with reference to the general circumstances and the capacity and intelligence of the person whose conduct is in question. It is only to be expected that the honest conclusions of a calm and philosophical mind may differ very largely from the honest conclusions of a person excited by sectarian zeal and untrained to habits of precise reasoning."<sup>9</sup>

358. The "due" care required must depend upon the nature of the act, its magnitude and importance, and the facility a person has for the exercise of care and attention. It does not constitute "good faith" necessarily that the person making the imputation believed it to be true. Due care and attention imply a genuine effort to reach the truth, and not the ready acceptance of an ill-natured belief.<sup>10</sup> A butcher unskilled in surgery employed to set a bone on board a vessel on the high seas, would be judged by a very different standard to a qualified surgeon discharging the same duty. So a surgeon working in his surgery would be judged by a different standard to a surgeon in the field. But where a quack unskilled in surgery performs an operation which even a trained surgeon seldom dares, he cannot be accredited with good faith, if his patient trusting him succumbs to his operation. Such was the case of one Kabiraj who, having no knowledge of surgery beyond what he had acquired in his practice, operated a man for internal piles by cutting them out with an ordinary knife, in consequence of which he died from haemorrhage. It was held that as the operation was one so imminently dangerous that even educated surgeons scarcely ever attempt it, the accused was guilty of manslaughter punishable under section 304-A of the Code.<sup>11</sup>

359. In another case, the accused saw a stooping child in the early gloaming and believing it to be a demon, dealt it blows, of which it died. It was proved that the place had the reputation of being haunted but the Court held that, though he was under a mistake of fact he had acted without care and caution and that, therefore, he was guilty under section 304-A of the Code.<sup>12</sup> So again, in another case, A caused crops to be sown on land, as to the enjoyment of which there was a dispute between her and B. B's men having proceeded to reap the crops on behalf of B, the servants of A went to the place with the station-house officer and some constables who were armed. The station-house officer ordered the reapers to leave off reaping and to disperse, which they did not do; he then told one of the constables to fire, who fired into the air. Upon this some of the reapers flew away while others remained there and assumed a defiant attitude. The station-house officer without attempting to make any arrests and without also warning the reapers that if they did not desist from reaping, they would be fired at, gave orders to shoot, and one of the constables fired and mortally wounded one of the reapers. It was found that neither the station-house officer nor the last mentioned constable believed that it was necessary for the public security to disperse the reapers by firing on them. It was, therefore, held that the station-house officer and the constables were not acting in good faith and that the order to shoot was

(9) Abdool Wadood, 31 B. 293 (298); 82; 27 I. C. 657; Channing Arnold, 41 C. Mhd. Gul v. Haji Fazley 56 C. 1013; Upendra 1023 (1058), P. C.; Gayadin, (1934) O. 124.

Nath Bagchi, 36 C. 375; Yad Ali, (1929) C. (11) Sukaroo Kabiraj, 14 C. 566.

779; Bhola Nath, 51 A. 313.

(12) Hayat, (1888) P. R. No. 11; Levett,

(10) Anandrao Balkrishna, 17 Bom. L. R. Cro. Car. 536.

illegal and did not justify the act of the constable, and that both he and the station-house officer were guilty of murder.<sup>13</sup>

360. The circumstances that operate on the exercise of care and attention are, thus, so varied and variable that it is not possible to fix a general standard by which the presence or absence of "good faith" may, in any case, be tested. But at the same time, in such cases, it is always permissible to argue ex post facto; that is to say, a person may show that there was a want of "good faith" because there was the absence of the requisite care and caution. On the other hand, a person relying upon "good faith" may show that he had taken the necessary care and caution, and that, therefore, his act was done in good faith. As the Law Commissioners observed: "He will be required to prove that his conduct was such as to lead fairly to the inference that he acted in good faith as alleged. It is true that he cannot prove directly what was in his mind, but he may be able to prove facts by which this may be sufficiently manifested."<sup>14</sup> "To satisfy the Court of his good faith, he must shew at least that he acted advisedly, and that he had reasonable ground prima facie for believing that he ought to do what he did."<sup>15</sup>

361. So, in order to establish belief in good faith, "a person's simple belief in good faith that circumstances are such and such, ought not to be sufficient; there ought to be sufficiently strong and just grounds for his belief. An instance has been known of a person shooting his own servant who had come to his room at night mistaking him for a robber. Such a one ought not to be held blameless, for he ought to have ascertained that he was a robber before he killed him. The party, in such cases, would have to satisfy the Court that he believed in good faith that the man was a robber, which must be taken, we conceive, to exclude a mere reckless conjecture or suspicion. Belief must have a foundation, and that must be shown."<sup>16</sup> So where a person in ragged attire was seen carrying under his arm three pieces of cloth and a police constable thereupon suspecting him to be in possession of stolen goods questioned him and was told that the cloth was made in England. But noticing that each piece bore Gujrati marks, and not knowing that such marks are placed on English-made goods, he concluded that the statement was false, and that the cloth had been stolen. He took hold of one of the pieces of cloth in order to examine it more closely, but the complainant objecting to it, there was a scuffle. The constable then arrested the complainant but he was subsequently released. The latter prosecuted him for wrongful restraint, but the Court held that the putting of question to the complainant, not for the purpose of causing annoyance or from idle curiosity, but in order to clear up his suspicions was an indication of good faith, and the constable was, therefore, protected under section 79.<sup>17</sup>

362. On the other hand, where a person acts with thoughtless precipitancy, without making sufficient inquiries and jumping to a conclusion upon materials wholly unjustifiable, it cannot be said that he had exercised good faith. Such was the case of a Police Sub-Inspector who saw a horse tied up without any concealment, and because it resembled the animal his father had lost some time previously, he jumped at once to the conclusion that the horse was either stolen or acquired as stolen property. The Sub-Inspector never sent for the supposed owner of the horse, nor took the trouble of getting any credible information as to whether it was his father's horse or not. Had he done so, he would have found that his father's horse had already been found in another place. The Sub-Inspector could not, therefore, plead good faith in exoneration of his conduct.<sup>18</sup> The same view was taken in another case in which the Sub-Inspector had made a search without complying with the prerequisites of s. 165 of the Criminal Procedure Code.<sup>19</sup>

(13) Subh Naik, 21 M. 249.

(14) First Report, § 113.

(15) First Report, § 114; Channing Arnold,

41 C. 1023 (1058), P. C.

(16) First Report, § 161.

(17) Bhawoo v. Mulji, 12 B. 377.

(18) Sheo Surun v. Mhd. Fazil, 10 W. R. 20.

(19) Gopi Mahto, 10 Pat. 821; Chatterji, (1933) A. 434.

363. As a person, acting in good faith, is excepted from criminality under the chapter relating to General Exceptions, and as the word “good faith” is there used in varied collocation, its presence, in each case, must depend upon the circumstances which alone entitle a person to exemption from criminal responsibility. The sense of the term in that connection will have, therefore, to be considered elsewhere.<sup>20</sup>

---

(20) See Ch. IV, post, and the several sections in which the word occurs.

CHAPTER III. OF PUNISHMENTS.

“ Punishments. ”

53. The punishments to which offenders are liable under the provisions of this Code are,—

First.—Death.

Secondly.—Transportation.

Thirdly.—Penal servitude.

Fourthly.—Imprisonment, which is of two descriptions, namely :—

(1) Rigorous, that is, with hard labour.

(2) Simple.

Fifthly.—Forfeiture of property.

Sixthly.—Fine.

364. Analogous Law.—This chapter on Punishments is really a chapter on adjective law, though it is naturally connected intimately with the substantive law enacted in the Code, in which, accordingly, it finds a place. But all the same, it is a chapter relating to procedure and its provisions have, therefore, to be read with the Procedure Code which largely affects its provisions. The authors of the Code had appended a long note<sup>1</sup> to this chapter, which is partly explanatory and partly vindicative. This chapter was, again, exhaustively reviewed by the Indian Law Commissioners, the result of whose minute and critical examination is embodied in sections 433-528 of their Second Report. Jeremy Bentham has in his “Principles of Penal Law” devoted several chapters on the rationale of punishment,<sup>2</sup> and the subject has, in fact, received a consideration which has created quite a literature on the subject. It is not here proposed to pursue the subject from any desire to present the result of studies in this branch of law, for it is unnecessary and would be beyond the scope of the present work. At the same time, it would be conducive to an intelligent study of a subject, which is otherwise obviously repellant and repulsive from its nature and association, if sufficient light is thrown upon it as may be useful alike to the student studying for its principles, and the judge and the lawyer administering its stern provisions in practice.

365. It is a standing complaint against the Code that it is Draconian in its severity as regards punishments. This criticism was not overlooked by the authors who wrote: “We entertain a confident hope that it will shortly be found practicable greatly to reduce the terms of imprisonment which we propose. Where a good system of prison discipline exists, where the criminal, without being subject to any cruel severities, is strictly restrained, regularly employed in labour not of an attractive kind and deprived of every indulgence not necessary to his health, a year’s confinement will generally prove as efficacious as confinement for two years in a gaol where the superintendence is lax, where the work exacted is light and where the convicts find means of enjoying as many luxuries as if they were at liberty. As the intensity of the punishment is increased, its length may safely be diminished. As members of the Committee which is now employed in investigating the system followed in the gaols of this country, we have had access to information which enables us to say with confidence that, in this department of the administration, extensive reforms are greatly needed and may easily be made. The researches of that Committee will, we hope, enable the Law Commission, hereafter, to prepare such a Code of prison discipline as, without shocking the human feelings of the community, may yet be a terror to the most hardened wrong-doers. Whenever such a Code shall come into operation, we conceive that it will be advisable greatly to shorten many of the terms of imprisonment which we have proposed.”<sup>1</sup>

(1) Note A.

(2) Vol. I, Collected Edn., pp. 390-578.

366. Principle.—Punishment is the suffering in person or property inflicted on the offender under the sanction of law. It is the retribution due for violation of the rules of society which are made for its preservation and peace and the infraction of which is a crime. The Code measures the gravity of the violation by the seriousness of the crime and its general effect upon public tranquillity. The measure of guilt is, therefore, the measure of punishment. And it is, therefore, essential that the punishment must fit the crime. It was, at one time, a moot question whether retribution or reform was the sole motive of punishment. Bentham regarded the prevention of mischief as the sole aim of punishment.<sup>2</sup> Other writers regard retribution as its chief mission,<sup>3</sup> but it is evident that so long as punishment was the concern of the person aggrieved, retribution was the sole object. But when it became a function of the State and as society progressed, retribution receded into the background, and prevention of crime and reform of the criminal became as much its concern as the primitive wreaking of revenge. The true doctrine of punishment in modern civilized State is, therefore, now based on the prevention of crime, but it is only its main, though not its sole, object. For, notwithstanding what has been said by Plato, both personal as well as public sentiments demand that the person who has made others suffer unjustly should himself be made to suffer in return. This is quite distinct from the moral side of an act with which properly the Courts are not concerned. They are concerned solely with the nature of the act viewed as a crime, or breach of the law. The law indicates the gravity of the act by the maximum penalty provided for its punishment and the Courts have to judge whether the act committed falls short of the maximum degree of gravity, and, if so, by how much.

367. The principal object of punishment, however, is the prevention of crime, and the measure of punishment must, consequently, vary from time to time according to the prevalence of a particular form of crime and other circumstances. An amount of severity may be very appropriate at one time which would be quite uncalled for at another. It may generally be taken as a sane principle to follow, that punishment should be made as moderate as is consistent with the object aimed at. Punishment in excess is apt to defeat its own object, and to produce a re-action of popular feeling, as experience shows. To shut a man up in prison longer than is really necessary is not only bad for the man himself, but also it is a useless piece of cruelty, economically wasteful and a source of loss to the community.<sup>4</sup>

368. The seven forms of punishments here prescribed necessarily exclude other forms of punishment. Two such forms were specially considered by the draftsmen, namely, dismissal from office, and pillory or exhibition of the offender on a donkey. They considered the first as unfit for executive action, and the second as unequal: “To employ a punishment which is more bitter than the bitterness of death to the man who has still some remains of virtuous and honourable feelings, and which is a mere matter of justice to the utterly abandoned villain, appears to us most unreasonable.”<sup>5</sup>

369. It will be observed that flogging is not in the list of punishments provided by the Code. This was also the punishment passed in review by the draftsmen and condemned for the same reason as pillory and donkey-riding on the ground that, to a person in decent station in life, it adds disgrace to the severity which could not be

(1) Note A, Reprint, p. 95.

(2) Principles of Penal Laws, Pt. 2, Ch. 3, p. 396 (Vol. I, Coll. Edn.).

(3) Mercer's Criminal Responsibility, p. 19.

(4) Per Burgess, J.C., in Nga Ku, (1897)

U. B. R. 330 (334); Nga Tha Kin, 11 I. C. (U. B.) 792; see, to the same effect, Bentham's Principles of Penal Law, Pt. 2, Bk. I, pp. 406-408.

(5) Note A, Reprint, p. 103. (Pothen, L. B. R. 62.)

justified except when inflicted upon juvenile offenders.<sup>1</sup> The draftsmen, however, admitted that their remarks did not apply to juvenile offenders in whose case that form of sentence is both deterrent as well as unexceptionable. In 1864, a Whipping Act was passed and it introduced the sentence of flogging in certain crimes.<sup>2</sup> This act was recently the subject of comment in the House of Commons, and at the instance of the Secretary of State for India in Council, a Bill was drafted and sent out to this country to take the place of the old Act, and it was passed into law in 1908. It has considerably modified the rigor of the old Act and has confined that form of sentence to only old offenders and juveniles.

370. Measure of Punishments.—The appropriateness of the nature and measure of sentence in each case depends upon the gravity of offence, the position and status of the offender, his previous character and the existence of aggravating or extenuating circumstances. A day's imprisonment to an honourable man will have far more deterrent effect than a life spent in durance vile by a hardened criminal. The measure of punishment is, therefore, the measure that must be adapted to each case. But there are certain general considerations which may be here set out, for they are the basic principles upon which the enactment has announced the maximum punishments, leaving their adjustment, in each case, to the discretion of the Judge.

371. Death.—The sentence of death stands in the forefront in the category of punishments. The question whether the State has the right to take away a man's life has often been agitated, but it is a question upon which the moralist and the jurist are never likely to agree. For, while the one condemns it as a relic of a barbaric age in which "life for life" was the common form of revenge, the other justifies it on the ground that its retention in the Penal Laws is itself a terror which has a deterrent effect upon criminals, while its application furnishes an object lesson which not only purges society of its canker worms but tends generally to elevate its conception of, and respect for, human life.

372. All the same the tendency of modern times has been to abolish the capital sentence, and its abolition in several European States does not appear to have had any unfavourable effect on crime. England is, however, still one of those countries in which the capital sentence is still retained. It is, however, confined to eleven cases, namely :—

- |  |  |
|--|--|
| (1) Treason.   | (7) Setting fire to a dwelling-house with any person living therein.               |
| (2) Murder.  | (8) Destroying vessels with intent to murder.                                      |
| (3) Attempted murder by administration of poison, or by wounding, etc.   | (9) Exhibiting false lights, etc., with intent to bring a vessel into danger, etc. |
| (4) Burglary aggravated by assault with intent to murder, etc.   | (10) Destroying ships of war, Royal Arsenals, etc.                                 |
| (5) Robbery with wounding.   | (11) Unnatural offences.   |
| (6) Piracy aggravated by assault with intent to murder any person on board the vessel in respect of which the piracy is committed. |  |

373. It will, thus, be seen that with the exception of the first and last two, the other eight offences are offences involving either the wilful destruction of human life, or the wilful exposing of it to peril. From the tabulated statement elsewhere given, it will be seen that the capital punishment is confined by the Code only to six principal offences, namely :—

- |  |  |
|--|--|
| (1) Treason, e.g. , waging war against the King (s. 121) ; abetment of mutiny (s. 132). | (4) Abetment of suicide of a minor or insane person (s. 305).  |
| (2) Perjury resulting in conviction and death of an innocent person (s. 194).                  | (5) Attempted murder by a transported convict (s. 307, cl. 2). |
| (3) Murder (ss. 302, 303).   | (6) Dacoity with murder (s. 396).                              |

374. The offences for which the Code awards the sentence of death are thus really two, namely, (a) treason and (b) murder. In this respect the Code presents a notable contrast to the English Law, and the authors had deliberately made the departure adding "that to put robbers, ravishers and mutilators on the same footing with murderers is an arrangement which diminishes the security for life.<sup>1</sup> Then as regards offences in which there is a close connection with murder, the draftsmen observed that as those offences were almost always committed under such circumstances that the offender had it in his power to add murder to his guilt, there would be no restraining motive if the punishment of the crime which he has already committed were exactly the same with the punishment for murder. "A law which imprisons for a rape and robbery, and hangs for murder, holds out to ravishers and robbers a strong inducement to spare the lives of those whom they have injured. A law which hangs for rape and robbery, and which only hangs for murder, holds out, indeed, if it be rigorously carried into effect, a strong motive to deter men from rape and robbery, but as soon as a man has ravished or robbed, it holds out to him a strong motive to follow up his crime with a murder."<sup>2</sup>

(1) Note A, Reprint, p. 104.

(2) Act VI of 1864.

375. As regards the sentence of death itself, though the draftsmen could not dispense with the sentence, they added that it is a sentence that ought to be very sparingly inflicted.<sup>3</sup> It is provided by the Code of Criminal Procedure that "when any person is sentenced to death, the sentence shall direct that he be hanged by the neck till he is dead."<sup>4</sup> And "when the accused is sentenced to death by a Sessions Judge, such Judge shall further inform him of the period within which, if he wishes to appeal, his appeal should be preferred."<sup>5</sup>

376. Transportation.—The sentence next after death in gravity is transportation for life, which is only another name for banishment, the maximum period of which is 20 years. It was formerly not allowed for any term short of life, but now an offender may be transported up to seven years.<sup>6</sup> In the case of Europeans and Americans the sentence of transportation is inapplicable, the Court being only empowered to sentence the offender to penal servitude instead of transportation in accordance with the provisions of the Penal Servitude Act.<sup>7</sup> And as regards persons sentenced to transportation, it is provided in the Code of Criminal Procedure that the sentence shall not specify the place to which the person sentenced is to be transported.<sup>8</sup> This sentence is probably as ancient as the other sentence of death, and it has been the favourite method of putting out of the way political offenders and schismatics, rebels and revolutionaries, patriots and reformers. It is even now the favourite method of lopping off tall poppies, and semi-barbaric nations resort to it sanctifying its usage on the ground of lettres de cachet, which is, however, not a judicial but an executive act.

377. The sentence of transportation figures more largely than the extreme penalty of law. It is the maximum sentence reserved for the following sections:—

- |  |  |
|--|--|
| (1) S. 121. Waging war (alternative with death).   | (10) S. 194. Perjury in a capital crime.   |
| (2) S. 121-A. Conspiracy against the State.  | (11) S. 195. Perjury in a crime punishable with transportation.  |
| (3) S. 122. Collection of arms, etc., with the intention of waging war against the King.   | (12) S. 225. Resistance to apprehension of a convict sentenced to death.                                 |
| (4) S. 124-A. Sedition.  | (13) S. 225-A. Omission to apprehend or sufferance of escape on part of public servant in certain cases. |
| (5) S. 125. Waging war against any Asiatic power.  | (14) S. 226. Unlawful return from transportation.  |
| (6) S. 128. Public servant allowing prisoner of State or war in his custody to escape.     | (15) S. 232. Counterfeiting coin.  |
| (7) S. 130. Aiding, etc., of such escaped prisoner.  | (16) S. 238. Import or export of counterfeit coin.   |
| (8) S. 131. Abetment of Mutiny.  | (17) S. 255. Counterfeiting Government Stamps.   |
| (9) S. 132. Abetment of Mutiny if it is committed in consequence (alternative with death). | (18) S. 302. Murder (alternative with death).  |
|  | (19) S. 304. Culpable homicide.  |

(1) Note A, Reprint, p. 93.

(2) Ib., approved by the Law Commissioners in 2nd Report, § 462.

(3) Ib.

(4) S. 368 (1).

(5) S. 371 (3), Cr. P. C.

(6) S. 59, post.

(7) S. 2, Act XXIV of 1855; see s. 56, post.

(8) S. 386 (2).

- (20) S. 305. Abetment of suicide by a minor or insane person (alternative with death).
- (21) S. 307. Attempted murder with hurt.
- (22) S. 311. Being a Thug.
- (23) S. 313. Causing miscarriage without woman's consent.
- (24) S. 314. Ditto, if the woman dies.
- (25) S. 315. Abortion.
- (26) S. 326. Causing grievous hurt by a dangerous weapon.
- (27) S. 329. Causing grievous hurt for extortion.
- (28) S. 364. Kidnapping and abduction in order to murder.
- (29) S. 371. Trade in slaves.
- (30) S. 376. Rape.
- (31) S. 377. Unnatural offence.
- (32) S. 388. Extortion by threat of unnatural offence.
- (33) S. 389. Intimidation by threat of accusation of unnatural offence.
- (34) S. 394. Robbery with hurt.
- (35) S. 396. Murder in dacoity (alternative with death).
- (36) S. 400. Belonging to a dacoit gang.
- (37) S. 409. Criminal Breach of Trust by public servant, banker, merchant, agent, etc.
- (38) S. 412. Receiving property stolen in dacoity.
- (39) S. 413. Trade in stolen property.
- (40) S. 436. Mischief by fire to destroy a house, etc.
- (41) S. 437. Mischief by fire with intent to destroy vessels, etc.
- (42) S. 449. House-trespass to commit an offence punishable with death.
- (43) S. 459. Grievous hurt caused whilst committing lurking house-trespass.
- (44) S. 460. Death or grievous hurt by a confederate concerned in house-breaking.
- (45) S. 467. Forgery of a valuable security, etc.
- (46) S. 472. Manufacturing seal with intent to commit forgery.
- (47) S. 474. Possession of a forged security, etc.
- (48) S. 475. Counterfeiting device or mark for forgery, etc.
- (49) S. 477. Fraudulent tampering of a will, etc.
- (50) S. 511. Certain attempts.

378. Previous convicts may also in certain other cases be sentenced to

Justification of Transportation.

transportation. This sentence is, thus, one which presents as much variety, as it is one which is the maximum sentence which may be passed in any case in which an enhanced sentence is admissible. The draftsmen explained the appropriateness of this sentence as follows: "The consideration which has chiefly determined us to retain that mode of punishment is our persuasion that it is regarded by the natives of India, particularly by those who live at a distance from the sea, with peculiar fear. The pain which is caused by punishment is an unmixed evil. It is by the terror which it inspires that it produces good, and perhaps no punishment inspires so much terror in proportion to the actual pain which it causes as the punishment of transportation in this country. Prolonged imprisonment may be more painful in the actual endurance, but it is not so much dreaded beforehand, nor does a sentence of imprisonment strike either the offender or the by-standers with so much horror as the sentence of exile beyond what they call the Black Water. This feeling, we believe, arises chiefly from the mystery which overhangs the fate of the transported convict. The separation resembles that which takes place at the moment of death. The criminal is taken for ever from the society of all who are acquainted with him, and conveyed by means, of which the natives have but an indistinct notion, over an element which they regard with extreme awe, to a distant country, of which they know nothing, and from which he is never to return. It is natural that this fate should impress them with a deep feeling of terror. It is on this feeling that the efficacy of the punishment depends, and this feeling would be greatly weakened if transported convicts should frequently return, after an exile of seven or fourteen years, to the scene of their offences, and to the society of their former friends."

379. The concluding remark has, however, no application, for law now allows transportation for seven or more years, in which case, the transported convicts do return to the scenes of their earlier years, though the terror of exile has by no means abated on that account. Indeed, it may be doubted, if the learned draftsmen have not attributed the terror to a cause which is not all in all. For no little terror of transportation is due to the fact that the person banished is as good as dead, for his relations cannot see him, and if a Hindu, his crossing the Black Water involves forfeiture of his caste. That this last terror has not wholly disappeared will be testified to by those who have to cross the Black Water for their intellectual advancement, and who on return find themselves strangers in their native land.

380. Transportation to be Abolished.—Though the sentence of transportation has not been removed from the Statute Book its abolition has been decided upon by Government; but the difficulty so far encountered has been to fix its equivalent. A Committee has gone into the question and published its reports, and action is awaited to alter the law.

381. Penal Servitude.—In the original draft there was no provision for this sentence. On the other hand, the draftsmen deprecated the imprisonment of Europeans in India on the ground that “it would lower the prestige of Englishmen if they are placed in the most degrading situations stigmatized by the Courts of justice and engaged in ignominious labours of a gaol.”<sup>1</sup> They, therefore, recommended the execution of the sentence of transportation by transporting European offenders to some British Colony situated in a temperate climate.<sup>2</sup> They also substituted banishment as an alternative sentence. But the passing of an English Statute<sup>3</sup> in 1849 left the Indian Legislature no alternative but to substitute penal servitude for these punishments.

382. The punishment of penal servitude is by section 56 reserved for Europeans and Americans.<sup>4</sup> It is inadmissible in the case of Indian offenders. It consists in keeping an offender in confinement and compelling him to labour. Persons sentenced to penal servitude are, during the term of the sentence, confined in such prison within British India as the Government of India directs, and kept to hard labour.<sup>5</sup> The subject of penal servitude has been exhaustively dealt with in the Act bearing that title;<sup>6</sup> and this has substituted that form of sentence “by reason of providing a place to which Europeans or Americans can, with safety to their health, be sent for the purposes of undergoing sentences of transportation or of imprisonments for long terms.”<sup>7</sup> The same Act provides that the term “European” shall be understood to include any person usually designated a European British subject.<sup>8</sup> But as European British subjects only are included in that term, it does not follow that other Europeans are excluded thereby, for the sentence of penal servitude being stated to be appropriate in the case of an American, it is the sentence that will be substituted also in the case of Europeans other than British subjects. As penal servitude is regarded as more exacting than transportation, the Act lays down a proportion in which the latter is convertible into the former. The proportion is as follows:—

Transportation for 7 years	equals Penal Servitude for 4 years.
“ 7 to 10 years	“ “ 4 to 6 years.
“ 10 to 15 years	“ “ 6 to 8 years.
“ exceeding 15 years	“ “ 6 to 10 years.
“ for life	“ “ life.

383. Imprisonment.—Imprisonment is ordinarily confinement of a person in a penitentiary or gaol by way of punishment. But such confinement must not necessarily be in a place prescribed for the purpose. “It seems clear that any place, whatsoever, wherein a person under a lawful arrest for a supposed crime is restrained of his liberty—whether in the stocks at the street, or in the common gaol, or in the house of a constable or private person, or the prison of the ordinary—is properly a prison within the Statute; for imprisonment is nothing else but a restraint of liberty.”<sup>9</sup> So it is imprisonment in the true sense of the term where a person is sentenced till the rising of the Court,<sup>10</sup> as the liberty of the person is thus restrained, though the person so sentenced is not confined in gaol or subjected to gaol discipline. Of this sentence the framers of the Code wrote: “Of imprisonment we propose to

(1) Note A, Reprint, p. 96.

(2) Ib., pp. 95, 96.

(3) 16 & 17 Vict., c. 99.

(4) Duma Baidya, 19 M. 483.

(5) S. 21, Prisoners' Act (V of 1871).

(6) Penal Servitude Act (XXXIV of 1856).

(7) Ib., Preamble.

(8) Ib., S. 15.

(9) 2 Hawk, P. C. 18, s. 4. The statement is made with reference to 1 Edw. II, De fragentibus prisonam.

(10) Such a one considered to be evasion of justice merely. Kunhi Bava, 114 I. C. 234.

institute two grades, rigorous imprisonment and simple imprisonment. But we do not think the Penal Code is the proper place for describing, with minuteness, the nature of either kind of punishment."<sup>1</sup> This was, therefore, left to the Gaol discipline, and tasks varying with the locality, health and culture of the prisoners have been prescribed as forms of rigorous imprisonment. In England the picking of oakum and working the treadmill, in India the picking of wool, the crushing of grain, the breaking of metal and the pressing of oil are regarded as the usual tasks allotted to rigorously imprisoned offenders; while lighter work or no work at all is exacted from those sentenced to simple imprisonment. Indeed, simple imprisonment is really detention in gaol custody, the prisoner being at liberty to do light work to break the monotony of prison life, if he is so disposed. Such sentence is appropriate to men of position or culture to whom the ignominy of imprisonment is a sufficient punishment.

384. It was originally proposed to fix both a minimum as well as a maximum punishment in several cases, but the propriety of prescribing a minimum sentence in all cases was questioned by the Select Committee, who were of opinion that considering the general terms in which the offences had been defined, and the presence of mitigating circumstances which may render adherence to the prescribed minimum a matter of hardship and even injustice, it was ultimately resolved to fix only the maximum, the apportionment of sentence, in each case, being left to the discretion of the Judge. But in the case of certain heinous offences, it was considered indispensable to fix deterrent minimum sentences, and so the Code prescribes minimum sentences in the two following cases: (i) Where at the time of committing robbery or dacoity, the offender uses any deadly weapon, or causes grievous hurt to any person—in which the minimum term of imprisonment fixed is 7 years;<sup>2</sup> and (ii) the same sentence is prescribed as the minimum in the case of a robber and dacoit armed with a deadly weapon at the time of the commission of the offence.<sup>3</sup> In all other cases the Code fixes no minimum sentence. The maximum sentence fixed for a single offence is 14 years,<sup>4</sup> and the lowest term actually named for one offence is twenty-four hours.<sup>5</sup> And so while the kind of imprisonment to be awarded in each case is left to the judgment of the Judge, the Code instances three cases in which the flagrant nature of the crimes is marked with the single sentence of rigorous imprisonment. These are offences of giving or fabricating false evidence with intent to procure conviction for an offence which is capital by the Code or by the law of England;<sup>6</sup> (ii) unlawful return from transportation;<sup>7</sup> and (iii) house-trespass in order to commit an offence punishable with death.<sup>8</sup>

On the other hand, there are a number of delinquencies for which the sentence prescribed is only simple. These cases are—

- |   |   |
|---|---|
| (1) S. 168. Public servant unlawfully engaging in trade.              | (12) S. 233. Escape from confinement through negligence of a public servant.            |
| (2) S. 169. Public servant unlawfully buying or bidding for property. | (13) S. 225-A (b). To apprehend, etc., negligent omission.                              |
| (3) Ss. 172, 173. Evasion of summons.                                 | (14) S. 228. Interruption of judicial proceedings.                                      |
| (4) S. 174. Failure to attend on summons or order.                    | (15) S. 291. Continuance of nuisance after injunction to discontinue.                   |
| (5) S. 175. Failure to produce document.                              | (16) S. 341. Wrongful restraint.  |
| (6) S. 176. Failure to give information.                              | (17) Ss. 500, 501, 502. Defamation and knowingly printing or selling defamatory matter. |
| (7) S. 177. Failure to render assistance.                             | (18) S. 509. Indecent behaviour.  |
| (8) S. 178. Refusal to take oath.                                     | (19) S. 510. Misconduct by a drunken person.  |
| (9) S. 179. Refusal to answer questions.                              |   |
| (10) S. 180. Refusal to sign statement.                               |   |
| (11) S. 188. Disobedience of legal order.                             |   |

384-A. This classification is made only to show what the view of the Legislature is as regards the gravity or otherwise of the various crimes described in the

(1) Note A, Reprint, pp. 94, 95.

(2) S. 397.

(3) S. 398.

(4) S. 55.

(5) S. 510.

(6) S. 194.

(7) S. 226.

(8) S. 449.

Code. This, however, gives only a general idea of the relative importance of the various crimes. It gives no further suggestion. In fact, as observed before, the Legislature has advisedly left the apportionment of punishment, in each case, to the Judge. And so left, the Judges often find themselves in a quandary as to the principles by which they should regulate their discretion. The result has been a gross inequality of the punishments awarded by the different Courts, and this has led to the establishment of principles, which, though leaving sufficient discretion to the Judge, are yet such as are intended to reduce the inequality to a minimum. These principles will, therefore, be here set out.

385. Principles of Punishment.—In every criminal case, two things have to be considered: first, the heinousness or enormity of the crime itself, and, secondly, the particular circumstances under which the accused has committed it. The first is determined by the law, as will be seen from the preceding discussion, and the comparative table of offences prepared for that purpose. The second point requires further consideration, and will now be considered. Amongst the various offences treated of in the Code the first in order of importance are offences against the person. These are properly accounted as of greater magnitude than offences against property: (i) Because bodily injury inflicts more suffering to the party injured than loss of property; (ii) it is more difficult to protect persons against personal violence; (iii) personal violence spreads a feeling of insecurity and terror through the community; and (iv) injury from it in serious cases is irreparable.

386. As, therefore, personal crimes are more serious than offences against property, it is the duty of the Judge to see that the sentence in the one case is heavier than in the other. But at the same time it must not be forgotten that those are also the cases in which mitigating circumstances are oftener present. For they are crimes which may be committed in the supposed exercise of the right of private defence. They may be the result of a momentary impulse, or provocation, or a feeling of wrong, or they may be very technical having no criminality in them,<sup>1</sup> all of which are mitigating circumstances which it would be injudicious to ignore. Then, again, as regards the offender, he may be a man of tender age or of immature understanding, an old man of senile intellect, a man given to uncontrollable fits of temper, or he may have acted under the order of a person in authority over him, or of one who was in a situation to influence him or to dominate his will. Then, again, the offence may have been committed under a combination of circumstances and the influence of motives which are not likely to recur either with respect to the offender or to any other. Lastly, the Judge cannot ignore the state of health and sex of the accused, his position in life and the extent of deprivation of the ordinary comforts to which he was accustomed.<sup>2</sup>

387. On the other hand, the following circumstances cannot but be regarded as aggravating: (i) Deliberate violence—especially when it is super-added to another crime, viz., robbery and dacoity, in which case, the offender justly forfeits all human sympathy; (ii) use of lethal weapons;<sup>3</sup> (iii) wanton cruelty and malignity; (iv) treachery as where a man is inveigled into an ambush and then murdered; (v) nature of the injury—as where a man is clubbed to death, or where he is stabbed with a knife; (vi) motives, which will, of course, play a most prominent part in determining sentences. For though the proof of motive is not necessary to establish a crime, it

(1) Ananda Parhi, (1931) Pat. 242.

(2) Bentham mentions the following nine circumstances in mitigation of punishment: (1) absence of bad intention; (2) provocation; (3) self-preservation; (4) preservation of some near friend; (5) transgression of the limits of self-defence; (6) submission to menaces; (7) submission to authority; (8) drunkenness, and (9) childhood. The published reports of cases give effect to these considerations, e.g., youth is always a ground for mitigation in a case of murder. Nga Tha Kin, 11 I. C. 792. See also cases under s. 302. So age (Muniandi, 16 M. L. T. 535); position (Kewala, 1913 P. L. R. 317; 21 I. C. 478); but a Baluchi custom justifying the accused in taking the life of his sister for unchastity is no ground for mitigation of sentence. Rahim Khan, 24 I. C. 589; Kaim, 28 S. L. R. 279.

(3) Mya Din, 10 I. C. (R.) 773.

is an element which is very material in determining the sentence. Thefts from places of public resort, such as the fairs, railway trains and the like, are justly deserving of condign severity, inasmuch as such offences are extremely difficult to discover, and, therefore, profitable to those engaged in committing them.<sup>1</sup> The same reason justifies the severity with which thefts of ornaments from infants are visited.

388. There is still another consideration which demands notice. All criminals may be divided into three classes, namely (i) the casual, (ii) the habitual, and (iii) the professional.

The casual criminal may be a victim of circumstances. On the other hand, he may be a professional criminal in the bud. But since the Court has no reason to suppose that it is so, all first offenders have the sympathy of the Court, provided, of course, that they have not forfeited it by their aggravating conduct. In the absence of such circumstances the case of a first offender must be viewed with commiseration, and as in such a case repentance and reformation are always possible, punishment should be rather by way of warning than of penalty. Such a criminal should be given every chance to retrieve his lost reputation, and the Legislature has now provided means by which this may be now done.<sup>2</sup> Even when warning and recognizance are deemed insufficient the penalty inflicted should correct and not sting. It should be such as to produce contrition and not recoil.

389. The case of a habitual offender deserves condign punishment. He is a pest on society and he has forfeited its protection. But while it is so, there may still be mitigating circumstances in his case. He may have been driven to the crime by famine and hunger, the wants of his family, or the failure of his crops. Though a habitual, he may have exercised moderation in his crime, helping himself to just what he wanted, and leaving alone what he did not. A petty plunderer like this can scarcely be treated as a habitual in the real sense of the word.

390. A habitual criminal may become a professional criminal. Educated to crime, living by crime, he commits crime as his business in life, deliberately, with malice aforethought, calculating carefully the proportion which the chance of profit bears to the risk of detection, capture, trial, conviction and punishment — all of which are taken into account.<sup>3</sup> In India, there are castes of professional criminals, the members of which follow theiving as a hereditary calling. These cut-throats and thieves were, at one time, the thugs and pindarees whose terror is at present immortalized in the nursery rhymes. But, though they have passed away, there still remains a number of castes of hereditary thieves such as the Minas, Vaddars and Pasees, who are trained to their ancestral calling from early childhood. In the Deccan there are castes of hereditary coiners. In the North there are whole villages of predatory tribes who overrun the country after the unctuous festival of Dassehra, offering their sacrifice to their protecting deity, the Goddess Kali. They consult Brahmin astrologers as to the "auspicious" day and hours for their burglaries. They work in gangs and assume disguises through which only a skilled eye can penetrate. They are highwaymen, house-breakers by night and holy mendicants by day. Thus safely they reconnoitre the places which they plunder at night. They possess jemmies, picklocks, skeleton keys and unsuspecting long nails which they dexterously employ in house-breaking. They can jump incredibly high, and scale over walls with nothing but a dhoti or rope to support in. Such criminals, whenever brought to justice, should have all the terrors of law shaken upon them. They are enemies of society upon which they prey, and they should be hounded down by a remorseless sentence.

(1) Ananda, 15 I. C. (B.) 803.

(2) S. 562, Cr. P. C.

(3) Cox on the Principles of Punishments, p. 135.

391. The character of the criminal is, then, an important determining factor in the awarding of punishment. But as in the case of offences against the person, so in the case of offences against property, there are aggravating and mitigating circumstances affecting the crime apart from the criminal. These are sufficiently indicated in the sections which have accordingly provided for graduated sentences, applicable to such cases. But apart from these circumstances, there are others which aggravate or mitigate the crime, and which have to be taken into consideration in awarding sentence. An offence, for instance, committed in respect of property, of necessity exposed but yet impossible to be closely watched by the owner, is naturally visited by a severer punishment to safeguard it, than property over which closer supervision is possible. Horses and cattle in the fields, or with travellers encamping with their belongings in the open illustrate this rule. The cause with which an offence may be committed as compared with the gravity of the possible consequences is another circumstance of aggravation. Hence the severity of sentence visited on forgers, coiners and utterers of base coin; law has no means of prevention in these cases, except by awarding exemplary sentence both as a deterrent to the wrong-doer as well as a warning to others similarly inclined.

392. Lastly, offences against the peace receive marked disapproval of law, not only because they are offences against the persons (§ 370), but also because they lead to widespread mischief by attracting partizans and confederates and by the recklessness which the collective courage and encouragement begets. They are also the fruitful source of vendetta which it is the object of law to avert. This exegesis on the measure of punishments is not intended to be complete; because, to be complete, it must pass in review all the sections of the Code which have worked out the relative gravity of the offences in the graduated sentences annexed to them. The principles hereinbefore discussed are, therefore, only supplementary and are intended to give only an indication of the trend of judicial discretion as influenced by other circumstances.

393. Forfeiture.—Blackstone justified the sentence of forfeiture on an assumed original compact between the subject and the State, in which the State safeguarded civil rights of the subject so long as the subject obeyed its laws.<sup>1</sup> But this theory has long since become obsolete and is no longer the favoured formula of sociology. Under English law, forfeiture is now reserved for outlawry.<sup>2</sup> A complete history of forfeiture was given in the previous edition of this work, to which reference is invited.<sup>3</sup>

394. The Code, as originally drafted, followed the English law before its amendment in 1870, and was only amended in 1921<sup>4</sup> by abolishing the sentence of forfeiture in the case of offences except those punishable under ss. 126, 127, and 169 of this Code, in addition to which s. 517 of the Code of Criminal Procedure enables the Court “to make such order as it thinks fit for the disposal of any property or document produced before it, or in its custody, or regarding which any offence appears to have been committed, or which has been used for the commission of any offence.” But, inasmuch as this section authorizes both restoration as well as confiscation of property and is limited to property used in the commission of the offence, it cannot be treated as legalizing the sentence of forfeiture.

395. Pecuniary Forfeiture or Fine.—The sentence of fine is allied to forfeiture. It is, indeed, forfeiture of money by way of penalty.<sup>5</sup> It was justified by

(1) 4 Black., pp. 383, 384.

(2) 33 and 34 Vict., c. 23, s. 1.

(3) See 1 Penal Law (4th Ed.) pp. 342, 343.

(4) Act XVI of 1921.

(5) It is rightly so treated by Bentham in his Principles of Penal Laws, Pt. 2, Bk. 3, pp. 467-470 (Vol. I, Coll. Ed.). On pp. 468,

469 Bentham classifies the superiority of fine as follows: (1) It has the striking advantage of being convertible to profit. (But then Bentham forgets that on that very account it is liable to abuse). (2) It can be regulated according to the means of the offender. (Why should this be an advantage and why cannot the Law Commissioners on the ground of its universality, though they admitted that its severity should be proportionate to the means of the offender, since the sentence not only affected him but also his dependants.<sup>1</sup>

396. Since fine with all its defects continues to be a sentence and the Code does not invariably prescribe the maximum, it is necessary that it should conform to certain well-defined principles ensuring that its amount, in each case, is reasonable but not excessive. In order to secure this result, four points have to be kept in view ; (i) The profit of the offence ; (ii) the value of the thing which is the subject-matter of the offence ; (iii) the amount of the injury ; and (iv) the fortune of the offender.<sup>2</sup> These reasons underlie the report of the authors of the Code and have been adopted in other systems of law.<sup>3</sup> In some cases, not heinous, the Legislature has fixed a limit, but, where no limit has been fixed, it does not follow that fine should be unlimited. Consequently, excessive fine is a sufficient ground for appeal or revision. Fine as an additional penalty can only be justified in special cases, (a) where a short term of imprisonment is considered expedient as where the offender is too old or infirm to undergo a long term of imprisonment, (b) where it is desirable to compensate the complainant, and (c) where the offence involves misappropriation of property by the offender. In other cases, it is inexpedient to add fine to a substantial term of imprisonment, and in practice, it is only in exceptional cases that fine is added to a substantial term of imprisonment.<sup>4</sup>

397. As regards the imposition of fine as a sentence, the Code may be divided into four parts : (i) Offences in which fine is the sole punishment and its amount is limited ; (ii) offences in which fine is an alternative punishment, but its amount is limited ; (iii) offences in which it is an additional imperative punishment, but its amount is limited ; and (iv) cases in which it is both an imperative punishment and its amount is unlimited. A classification of offences from this standpoint would at once shew how the Legislature has carried out its express intention in affixing that sentence.

398. Thus in the following cases fine is the sole punishment, and except in two cases, its amount is limited :—

- |  |   |
|--|---|
| (1) S. 137. Negligently suffering a deserters to conceal in a vessel—maximum fine Rs. 500. (2) S. 154. Criminal responsibility for riot held on one's land—maximum fine Rs. 500. | (3) S. 155. Liability of person for whose benefit riot is committed—unlimited fine. (4) S. 176. Liability of agent of such person—unlimited fine. |
|--|---|

399. The second and third classes comprise by far the largest number of offences in the Code. Lastly, come those heinous cases in which the fine is both compulsory and unlimited. Such are—

- |   |  |
|---|--|
| (1) S. 123. Concealment of conspiracy to wage war against the King. (2) S. 124. Assault on Governor-General, etc., with intent to compel or restrain the exercise of any lawful power. (3) S. 126. Depredation on an ally. (4) S. 127. Taking property in such depredation. | (5) Ss. 128, 129. Public servant allowing escape of political prisoner. (6) S. 130. Aiding, etc., escape of such prisoner. (7) Ss. 131, 132. Abetment of mutiny. (8) S. 133. Assault by a subordinate on a superior officer. (9) S. 134. Abetment of above. |
|---|--|

other punishments be also regulated.) (3) It implies no infamy (so far it fails to fulfil the object of punishment). (4) It is remissible so that complete reparation can be made for an unjust sentence—which is certainly its great advantage. (5) It is popular (which is the reverse of its advantage). One further advantage overlooked by Bentham is that fine has the effect of relieving the tax-payer by reducing the cost of prevention and punishment of crime.

The true disadvantages of fine as a sentence are stated by Bentham to be as follows : (1) It is the family and the dependants who are innocent. (2) It is not exemplary, as at its execution no spectacle is exhibited.

The true disadvantage of fine is its inappropriateness in serious crime. Its true advantage lies in the means it affords for compensating the complainant.

(1) Note A, Reprint, p. 97.

(2) Note A, Reprint, p. 98.

(3) This is in accordance with 4 Black., 377; view of the English Criminal Law Commissioners (7th Ed., p. 107); and the Bill of Rights, though advisedly opposed to Livingstone's Code of Louisiana (See Note A, pp. 97-99).

(4) Islam, (1931) C. 710.

- (10) S. 380. Theft in a dwelling house, etc.
 (11) S. 475. Counterfeiting device or mark for authenticating documents.

- (12) S. 457. Lurking house-trespass by night.

400. "Certainty with respect to the punishment which each of two or more prisoners is to suffer is as essential in a sentence when the punishment is a fine as it is when the punishment is a term of imprisonment."<sup>1</sup> The sentence of fine of a specific sum on a number of prisoners individually and collectively is therefore, illegal.<sup>2</sup>

401. The procedure provided by the Legislature for the recovery of fine will be discussed under section 64 which is the section in point.

402. Whipping.—Corporal punishment was not provided for in the Code. It was expressly abolished in 1834 in territories subject to the Presidency of Fort William,<sup>3</sup> though the same exemption was not extended to the other two Presidencies. In 1844<sup>4</sup> power was, however, given to Magistrates to punish offenders of tender age with stripes. It also provisionally empowered them, "until adequate improvement in prison discipline can be effected" to sentence to corporal punishment persons convicted of petty theft. By a later Act<sup>5</sup> it was extended to life convicts. The sentence, however, became general in its application to certain cases by an Act of 1864<sup>6</sup> which was replaced by Act IV of 1909, which reduces the number of offences in which the sentence of whipping is admissible. "The principal merit of simple afflictive punishments is their exemplarity. All that is suffered by the delinquent during their infliction may be exhibited to the public, and the class of spectators which would be attracted by such exhibitions, consists for the most part of those upon whom the impression they are calculated to produce would be most salutary."<sup>7</sup> But the drawbacks of such a punishment are many. In the first place, the suffering it produces is momentary, and it varies with the caprice or desire of the executioner. In the second place, while it produces trivial effect upon low natures, the degradation that it involves in the case of persons of social standing is out of all proportion to their delinquencies, so much so that a respectable man would prefer death to such dishonour. In the third place, it is a sentence in which reparation is impossible.

403. The punishment is a relic of the old form of tortures of which many forms were devised by the ingenuity of the Middle Ages, and all of which, including flogging, have now been abandoned in Europe. And even as regards this country, there was a strong movement against its continuance, but while its total abandonment has been considered inexpedient, the Legislature has modified its generality and sanctioned its application only to hardened criminals to whom the ordinary punishment may not be sufficiently deterrent. The author had, however, condemned this punishment except in the case of juvenile offenders.<sup>8</sup> (§ 369). The mode in which this sentence is to be executed is described in the Code of Criminal Procedure.<sup>9</sup>

404. No Punishment.—The enumeration of punishments in this section is exhaustive. Consequently, an order of detention passed by the District Magistrate under the Reformatory Schools Act,<sup>10</sup> or an order for notifying address of previously convicted offenders passed under s. 565 of the Code of Criminal Procedure,<sup>11</sup> or an order for release upon probation of good conduct under s. 562 of the same Code or one for mere detention as prescribed in certain Revenue Acts for failure to pay the land assessment<sup>12</sup> do not amount to punishment under this Code. Since the Code prescribes no minimum period of imprisonment, an order for

(1) 5 M. H. C. R. (App.) 5.

(2) Ib.

(3) Reg. II of 1834.

(4) Act III of 1844.

(5) Act XVIII of 1845.

(6) Act VI of 1864 amended by Act II of 1895. For Upper Burmah, see the Burmah Laws Act (XIII of 1898), s. 3 (b) and Sch 2; for the Punjab Frontier Districts and Baluchistan, see the Punjab Frontier Crimes Regulation (Reg. III of 1901), ss. 6 & 12

(2) Now re-enacted as Act IV of 1909.

(7) Principles of Penal Laws (Coll. Ed., Vol. I), pp. 145, 416.

(8) Note A, Reprint, pp. 104, 105.

(9) Ss. 390-396.

(10) Act VIII of 1897; Krishna, 27 I. C. (M.) 198.

(11) Jhagroo, 9 N. L. R. 88.

(12) S. 130, C. P. Land Revenue Act (C. P. Act I of 1917).

imprisonment till the rising of the Court is punishment within the meaning of this section.

54. In every case in which sentence of death shall have been passed, the Government of India or the Government of the place within which the offender shall have been sentenced may, without the consent of the offender, commute the punishment for any other punishment provided by this Code.

405. Analogous Law.—The power of commutation here conferred upon the Executive Government follows the precedent of English Law under which it is lawful for the Secretary of State to order convicts, under sentence of transportation, to be confined in any place appointed for the purpose by His Majesty, in England, until, it may be, they “shall become entitled to their liberty.”<sup>1</sup>

406. The provisions of this and the next section have, in a great measure, become unnecessary by the ampler provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which empower the Governor-General in Council and the Local Government to commute, suspend or remit all judicial sentences,<sup>2</sup> provided that in the case of commutation, they are empowered to commute any one of the following sentences for any other mentioned after it : Death, transportation, penal servitude, rigorous imprisonment for a term not exceeding that to which an offender might have been sentenced, simple imprisonment for a like term, fine. These powers of the Government are independent of those possessed by the Sovereign, who, being the fountain-head of mercy, is entitled to grant pardons, reprieves, respites, or remissions of punishment.<sup>3</sup> In one case, however, the High Court also possesses the power of commutation, for it is provided in the Procedure Code that if a woman sentenced to death is found to be pregnant, the High Court shall order the execution of the sentence to be postponed, and may, if it thinks fit, commute the sentence to transportation for life.<sup>4</sup>

407. Principle.—The principle of this section is thus explained by the framers of the Code : “It is evidently fit that the Government should be empowered to commute the sentence of death for any other punishment provided by the Code. It seems to us also very desirable that the Government should have the power of commuting perpetual transportation for perpetual imprisonment. Many circumstances, of which the executive authorities ought to be accurately informed, but which must often be unknown to the ablest Judge, may, at particular times, render it highly inconvenient to carry a sentence of transportation into effect. The state of those remote Provinces of the Empire, in which convict settlements are established, and the way in which the interest of those Provinces may be affected by any addition to the convict population, are matters which lie altogether out of the cognizance of the tribunals by which those sentences are passed, and which the Government is only competent to decide.”<sup>5</sup>

408. Commutation of Capital Sentence.—The power of commutation, as here described, is not in harmony with the corresponding section of the Code of Criminal Procedure.<sup>6</sup> For while under this section the sentence of death may be commuted “for any other punishment provided by this Code,” the Procedure Code only authorizes the Government to “commute any one of the following sentences, for any other mentioned after it”, i.e., in the case of death sentence the only power it possesses is of commuting it to the sentence of transportation. Under the Code, however, there is nothing to debar the same authority to commute the sentence to any sentence, though it may be the lowest sentence of fine. In any case, whatever its power, it can only commute the original sentence. It cannot commute a commuted sentence, for its power ceases the moment a commutation is made. The power of commutation is independent of the consent of the convict. He may or may not consent to suffer commuted sentence which takes effect as a substantial

(1) 5 Geo. IV, c. 84, s. 10.

(2) Ch. XXIX (ss. 401, 402).

(3) Cf. S. 401 (5), Cr. P. C.

(4) S. 382, Cr. P. C.

(5) Note A, Reprint, p. 95 ; Law Commissioners' 2nd Rep., ss. 511, 512

(6) S. 402.

sentence from the date of commutation. The power of commutation must be unconditional, nor should it be made subject to its acceptance by the convict. On the other hand, the power to suspend or remit a sentence may be either unconditional or it may be made subject to "conditions which the person sentenced accepts."<sup>1</sup> In the latter case, the same authority may recall its clemency on breach of the condition.<sup>2</sup> The condition, again, may be imposed on the accused or any one else.<sup>3</sup>

409. The power of commutation is left advisedly unqualified by any indication of the Legislature as to the reasons for, or the circumstances under which, it will be exercised. The case of a pregnant female convict has been elsewhere provided for.<sup>4</sup> What remains is the case of a person in whose favour similar dictates of humanity might influence the Government to intervene. It may be that a person, too young or too old, or one whose loss to his family would mean its ruin, might be spared the extreme penalty of law. Cases of infanticide often call for the exercise of clemency. A young widow led astray, destroying her offspring, a mother unable to support her newly born babe are not infrequently supplicants for the exercise of this power. Then, again, social and intellectual greatness, past or future services to the State, disclosure of extenuating circumstances not known to the Judge, or not sufficiently accounted for, would be considerations which the Government could not overlook. In fact, after justice has pronounced its doom, there always still remain considerations of clemency and expediency, which require a wider outlook and which call for the exercise of the plenitude of power. Mercy is, therefore, the prerogative of the King as the head of social order and well-being, and the power of commutation or suspension is the power which his representatives must, of necessity, possess, as they possess other attributes of sovereignty.

55. In every case in which sentence of transportation for life shall have been passed, the Government of India or the Government of the place within which the offender shall have been sentenced may, without the consent of the offender, commute the punishment for imprisonment of either description for a term not exceeding fourteen years.

Commutation of sentence of transportation for life.

410. Analogous Law.—The necessity for this power has been explained before in the words of the draftsmen of the Code (§ 407). Provision for the commutation here prescribed has also been made by the Code of Criminal Procedure.

56. Whenever any person being an European or American is convicted of an offence punishable under this Code with transportation, the Court shall sentence the offender to penal servitude instead of transportation according to the provisions of Act XXIV of 1855 :

Sentence of Europeans and Americans to penal servitude.

Provided that, where an European or American offender would, but for such Act, be liable to be sentenced or ordered to be transported for a term exceeding ten years, but not for life, he shall be liable to be sentenced or ordered to be kept in penal servitude for such term exceeding six years as to the Court seems fit, but not for life.

Proviso as to sentence for term exceeding ten years, but not for life.

411. Analogous Law.—Act XXIV of 1855 is the Penal Servitude Act, which is based on an English Statute.<sup>5</sup> The proviso was added by the Indian Penal Code Amendment Act of 1870.<sup>6</sup> The procedure for the trial of European British subjects is prescribed by the Code of Criminal Procedure.<sup>7</sup>

412. The term "European" is explained by the Penal Servitude Act<sup>8</sup> to mean what has since come to be designated a "European British subject,"<sup>9</sup> the meaning of which term has already been explained elsewhere. (§ 382)

(1) S. 401, Cr. P. C.

(2) S. 401 (3), Cr. P. C.

(3) Ib., Cl. (4).

(4) S. 382, Cr. P. C.

(5) 16 & 17 Vict., c. 99.

(6) Act XXVII of 1870, s. 3.

(7) Ch. XXXIII.

(8) Act XXIV of 1855.

(9) Ib., s. 15.

413. As the sentence of penal servitude is exceptional and reserved only to the cases of Europeans and Americans, it is not a legal sentence to be passed on a native of India. Where, therefore, a Court had sentenced a prisoner to penal servitude for life, the High Court altered it to transportation for life.<sup>1</sup>

57. In calculating fractions of terms of punishment, transportation for life shall be reckoned as equivalent to transportation for twenty years.
Fractions of terms of punishment.

414. Analogous Law.—Not only for the purpose of calculating fractions of terms of imprisonment, but also for the purpose of the sentence itself, transportation “for life” has now come to mean transportation for 20 years, the transported convict being, on expiration of that term, free to remain in his abode of exile or return home at his pleasure.

58. In every case in which a sentence of transportation is passed, the offender, until he is transported, shall be dealt with in the same manner as if sentenced to rigorous imprisonment, and shall be held to have been undergoing his sentence of transportation during the term of his imprisonment.
Offenders sentenced to transportation, how dealt with until transported.

415. Principle.—As transportation is the sentence reserved for heinous crimes, the convict is naturally regarded as rigorously imprisoned till the sentence, passed on him, can be given effect to. But except for this temporary purpose, the two sentences cannot be regarded as identical, for, as the ratio laid down for the conversion of transportation into penal servitude shows (§ 381), rigorous imprisonment is far more arduous than transportation, and, therefore, the one cannot be regarded for all purposes as equivalent to the other. Therefore, in cases in which the sentence of transportation cannot be at all carried out, the substituted sentence of imprisonment would have to be revised by Government under section 401 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

59. In every case in which an offender is punishable with imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards, it shall be competent to the Court which sentences such offender, instead of awarding sentence of imprisonment, to sentence the offender to transportation for a term not less than seven years, and not exceeding the term for which by this Code such offender is liable to imprisonment.
Transportation instead of imprisonment.

416. Analogous Law.—This section is new, and was added after the submission of the original draft Code. It enunciates a rule at variance with the views of the authors of the Code, who were of opinion that, to be effectual, the sentence must be lifelong,<sup>2</sup> (§§ 378-379) also adding that their recommendation was in accordance with the then prevailing usage.<sup>3</sup> This recommendation was approved by the Law Commissioners, who were appointed to revise the draft and the present section was thus only added when the Bill was before the Council, but its addition necessarily involved an alteration of the other corresponding sections of the Code, which have, however, remained unamended. Thus the words used in several places are “shall be punished with transportation for life or with imprisonment which may extend, etc.,” which naturally implies what the authors had, indeed, intended that the only transportation to which the Court could condemn an offender is “transportation for life” and not for any shorter term as here prescribed. In other words, while the Court has an option in determining the duration of the term of imprisonment, it has no option in determining the duration of the term of transportation. In the section of the Code which prescribes transportation as a punishment, with the exception of this section, the language used is such as not to leave the Court

(1) Duma, 19 M. 483.

(2) Ncte A, Reprint, p. 94; approved by the Law Commissioners in 2nd Report, s. 433.

 (3) Ib., p. 94.

any option regarding the duration of the term.<sup>1</sup> As this is the only section which authorizes the Court to pass a sentence of transportation for a shorter period than for life, the correct mode of proceeding is to mention that the sentence is passed in accordance with this section,<sup>2</sup> in which case, the form to be used should be as follows :—

“ The Court directs under the provision of section _____ and section 59 of the Indian Penal Code, that the said _____ be, etc.”

This section is inapplicable to a conviction had under a special or a local Act.<sup>3</sup>

417. Principle.—This section places on the Statute Book an adaptation of the doctrine that banishment need not be permanent, but may be of shorter duration, for any term up to 7 years. When transportation was the legal punishment in England, it was usually inflicted to last from 7 to 14 years. The authors of the Code were against short terms of transportation (§ 416). But as Bentham remarks : “ Punishments which are inflicted at the antipodes, in a country of which so little is known, and with which communication was rare, could make only a transient impression upon the minds of people in this country. ‘ The mass of people,’ says an author who had deeply considered the effects of imagination, ‘ make no distinction between an interval of a 1,000 years and of a thousand miles.’ ”<sup>4</sup>

418. Meaning of Words.—“ Offender is punishable with imprisonment, etc.,”: The word “ punishable ” implies that the punishment for the offence is at least 7 years or upwards. An offender may be punished with imprisonment for 7 years with combined sentences, but in that case the section is inapplicable, and the convict cannot be transported. In order to admit of commutation into transportation the imprisonment must be rigorous.<sup>5</sup> “ It shall be competent, ” i.e., merely lawful but not obligatory. “ Instead of awarding sentence of imprisonment, ” i.e., notwithstanding anything to the contrary hereinafter contained. “ Such offender is liable to imprisonment, ” i.e., under the sentence passed by the Court.

419. Commuted Transportation.—This section may be regarded in some degree as a counterpart of section 55, which authorizes the Government of India and the Local Governments to commute the sentence of transportation to any other sentence. This section enlarges the power of the Court by authorizing it to commute the sentence of imprisonment into one of transportation. But the power of the Court is circumscribed by the section, the requirements of which must then be strictly fulfilled. In the first place, then, the sentence must, in one offence alone, be at least of 7 years’ imprisonment. It cannot be made up by adding two or more sentences, even though passed at the same trial for different offences,<sup>6</sup> or sentences passed at separate trials for two or more offences of the same kind,<sup>7</sup> nor can there be a general sentence of transportation for two or more offences when only one of the sentences passed is of 7 years’ imprisonment.<sup>8</sup> As, therefore, the single sentence passed by the Court in one offence must be of at least 7 years’ imprisonment, it follows that no Court can avail itself of the power conferred by this section, unless it has jurisdiction to sentence offenders up to 7 years.<sup>9</sup> As such powers are only wielded by Judges of the High Court and Sessions Court, and Magistrates specially empowered under section 30 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it follows that the operation of the section is confined only to those Courts, and in respect of offences

(1) Naiada, 1 A. 43 (45), F. B.; Boodha, 9 W. R. 6 F. B.; Mhd. Sharif, (1915) P. R. 14, 29 I. C. 826; Alla-ud-din, 52 I. C. (A.) 49.

(2) Rughoo, (1864) W. R. 30.

(3) S. 40, ante; Muthuramalingam, 11 M. L. J. 127.

(4) Bentham’s Principles of Penal Laws, Bk. 5, pt. 2, p. 491 (Vol. I, Coll. Edn.).

(5) 1 W. R. Cr. Letters No. 5; ib., No. 10.

(6) Premchand, (1864) W. R. 35; Mootke

Kora, 2 W. R. 1; Sunda, (1866) P. R. No. 63

Mt. Mathro, (1886) P. R. No. 4; Bahadur,

(1886) P. R. No. 14; Salar Baksh, (1901)

P. R. No. 27; Nga Meik, (1905) U. B. R. 11

P. C.; Tonooram, 3 W. R. 44.

(7) Gourchunder, 8 W. R. 2.

(8) Shonaulla, 5 W. R. 44.

(9) Boodhoo, 9 W. R. 6, F. B.; Nuran, (1880) P. R. No. 17.

which are punishable with 7 or more years' imprisonment. Thus, then, the offence must be punishable, and the offender punished with at least 7 years' imprisonment before it could be commuted to transportation under this section. Where, therefore, a person was convicted of an attempt at rape, and sentenced under this section to transportation for 7 years, the sentence was held to be illegal on the ground that though rape is punishable with 10 years' imprisonment, an attempt at rape is punishable under section 511 of the Code with only 5 years' imprisonment. It was, however, added that as rape is also punishable with transportation for life which counts as transportation for 20 years, the sentence of 7 years' imprisonment, being less than one-half of 20 years, would have been legal if passed independently of this section.<sup>1</sup> So where a prisoner was convicted on separate charges of giving false evidence in a judicial proceeding under section 193 and of forgery under section 467 and sentenced to 7 years' transportation for the first offence, and a further period of transportation for 3 years for the second offence, the second conviction was quashed as illegal on the ground that no transportation for less than 7 years could be ordered under this section.<sup>2</sup>

420. The minimum period of transportation being thus fixed to be 7 years, the Court has either to sentence one to that period or not at all.<sup>3</sup> It may, however, fix any term in excess of that period, provided that the term so fixed does not exceed "the term for which by this Code such offender is liable to imprisonment." These words leave no doubt as to what they mean. For example, an offence is punishable with death, transportation for life and rigorous imprisonment extending to 10 years. Here the Court may sentence the offender to the extreme penalty of law, or it may transport him for life or imprison him for 10 years, but if, in the last case, it wishes to commute that sentence under this section it can only commute it to transportation for any term between 7 and 10 years—10 years being the term of imprisonment to which the offender was liable under the section.<sup>4</sup> Of course, in such a case the Court may find itself confronted with a difficulty, for while its powers of commutation are thus limited, it may consider it a hard case for transportation for life, and as that is the only next alternative, it will have to choose between transportation for life or an imprisonment for 10 years. A transportation, say for 15 years, would, in such a case, be illegal.

421. Again, since the commutation for transportation is only legal in a case when the Court substitutes it for substantive sentence, it could not, for example, award it in default of payment of fine.<sup>5</sup> Where, therefore, a house-breaker was sentenced to transportation for 9 years and to pay a fine of 300 rupees, he could not be sentenced to a further term of 3 years in default of payment of fine. In such a case the only sentence that the Court could pass is a sentence of imprisonment in accordance with the rule laid down in sections 64 and 65.

60. In every case in which an offender is punishable with imprisonment which may be of either description, it shall be competent to the Court which sentences such offender to direct in the sentence that such imprisonment shall be wholly rigorous, or that such imprisonment shall be wholly simple, or that any part of such imprisonment shall be rigorous and the rest simple.

Sentence may be (in certain cases of imprisonment) wholly or partly rigorous or simple.

422. Analogous Law.—The provisions of this and sections 63-74 have been locally modified by the Frontier Crimes Regulation,<sup>6</sup> and the provisions of this and sections 63-65, 68-74 have been modified by the Sind Frontier Regulation.<sup>7</sup>

423. Principle.—This section is discretionary, and enables the Court to pass an appropriate sentence, whether rigorous or simple, or partly of one kind and

(1) Joseph Merrian, 10 W. R. 10.

(2) Gourchunder, 8 W. R. 2.

(3) San Da, (1906) 4. L. B. R. 65.

(4) Rughoo, (1864) W. R. 30; Keifa Singh, 3 W. R. 16; Mohanundo, 5 W. R. 16; Boodhoo, 9 W. R. 6, F. B.; Joseph Merrian, 10

W. R. 10; Naiada, 1 A. 43 F. B.; Atnera, (1903) P. R. No. 31.

(5) Kunhussa, 5 M. 28.

(6) Reg. III of 1901, ss. 13 (2), 61.

(7) Reg. III of 1892, s. 28 (1).

partly of the other, according to the individual requirements of each case—the discretion being, of course, subject to the provisions of the Code, which has, in some places, specified the nature of imprisonment appropriate to certain cases.

61. [Sentence of forfeiture of property.] Repealed.<sup>1</sup>

424. Analogous Law.—This section which has since been repealed by Act XVI of 1921 stood as under: “In every case in which a person is convicted of an offence for which he is liable to forfeiture of all his property, the offender shall be incapable of acquiring any property, except for the benefit of Government, until he shall have undergone the punishment awarded, or the punishment to which it shall have been commuted, or until he shall have been pardoned.”

Illustration.

A, being convicted of waging war against the Government of India, is liable to forfeiture of all his property. After the sentence, and whilst the same is in force, A's father dies, leaving an estate which, but for the forfeiture, would become the property of A. The estate becomes the property of Government.

For a comment on this section, see Penal Law (4th ed.) pp. 356-358.

62. [Forfeiture of property, in respect of offenders punishable with death, transportation or imprisonment.] Repealed.<sup>2</sup>

425. Analogous Law.—This section which has since been repealed by Act XVI of 1921 stood as under: “Whenever any person is convicted of an offence punishable with death, the Court may adjudge that all his property, moveable and immoveable, shall be forfeited to Government; and, whenever any person shall be convicted of any offence for which he shall be transported or sentenced to imprisonment for a term of seven years or upwards, the Court may adjudge that the rent, and profits of all his moveable and immoveable estate during the period of his transportation or imprisonment, shall be forfeited to Government subject to such provision for his family and dependants as the Government may think fit to allow during such period.”

For a comment on this section, see 1 Penal Law (4th ed.) pp. 358-360.

63. Where no sum is expressed to which a fine may extend, the amount of fine to which the offender is liable is unlimited, but shall not be excessive.

426. Analogous Law.—Under the General Clauses Act<sup>3</sup> the provisions of sections 63-70 apply to all fines imposed under the authority of any Act, Regulation, rule, or bye-law, unless the Act, Regulation, rule or bye-law contains an express provision to the contrary.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, these sections have been also made applicable to several local Acts.<sup>5</sup> The policy underlying this section was the subject of much controversy at the draft stage of the Bill. The controversy arose from the fact that in some systems of Law the maximum limit of fine is fixed, whereas in the Bill the authors had fixed no such limit, but had left it solely to the discretion of the Judge. In adopting this course, they justified themselves on three grounds, viz., (i) that the majority of the offenders being poor it would be a hardship on the offender and entail distress on his family, if a minimum is fixed; (ii) the incidence of penalty

(1) Repealed by the Penal Code Amendment Act, 1921 (Act XVI of 1921), s. 4, which, again, has been repealed by Act X of 1927 as spent; but see the General Clauses Act, 1897 (X of 1897) s. 7.

(2) Ib.

(3) Act X of 1897.

(4) S. 25, Act X of 1897.

(5) Bom. General Clauses Act, s. 26 (Bom. Act I of 1904); Mad. General Clauses Act, s. 19 (Mad. Act I of 1891); Bengal Act V of 1867, s. 4.

varies according to the pecuniary capacity of the offender and must be left to be adjusted to the circumstances of each case; (iii) lastly, if the measure of fine were to be proportioned to the amount of the offender's property, it would lead to endless complications.<sup>1</sup>

427. The authors, therefore, recommended adoption of the clauses as here enacted, following the authors of the Bill of Rights, who, with many instances of gross abuse fresh in their recollection, could devise no other rule than that excessive fines should not be imposed. So Blackstone observed "that the quantum of pecuniary fines neither can nor ought to be ascertained by an invariable law. The value of money itself changes from a thousand causes; and, at all events, what is ruin to one man's fortune, may be a matter of indifference to another's. Statute law has not, therefore, often ascertained the quality of fines, nor the common law ever."<sup>2</sup>

428. This was, again, the view reiterated by the English Criminal Law Commissioners who remarked that "the inequality and injustice in some cases, and the inefficiency in others, of resorting to fixed and absolute fines as a mode of penal restraint confines its operation within narrow limits, principally to instances of minor delinquencies punishable by virtue of a summary jurisdiction, and in some particular instances of higher magnitude where the condition of the class of persons on whom the restraint operates is such as to remove, or at least greatly to reduce, the probability that it will operate either with unequal severity, or will be ineffectual from the inability of those who offend to pay the fine, and where, in addition, such a mode of punishment is appropriate to the nature of the offence, and does not afford room for invidious comparison with other instances in which corporal punishment is inflicted in respect of less heinous transgressions."<sup>3</sup>

429. Principle.—The great objection to limiting the amount of fine is then the danger that while it may be inconsiderable to the rich, it may be unjustly oppressive to the poor. The magnitude of a fine must, therefore, in justice be proportioned to the offender's means. There are, however, certain cases in which the transgressions are so small, or are such as affect only a class that the limitation of fine is unobjectionable. Barring such cases the policy of the Legislature has been against limiting it. Its amount is left to the discretion of the Judge. But there are small delinquencies in which it would be unfair to leave fine to the discretion of the Judge. In such cases, the law has to fix the maximum. In other cases, it has left the amount to the discretion of the Judge because of the objections to any other course being taken. (§§ 395, 427).

430. Fair Measure of Fine.—Fine may be limited by Statute, in which case the section has no application. Where it is not so limited, the section provides that it may be "unlimited but shall not be excessive." This does not imply that any Magistrate may impose an unlimited fine, for the jurisdiction of Magistrates is in itself limited to the imposition of a limited fine,<sup>4</sup> and where it is so, that jurisdiction cannot be exceeded by reference to this section. In other words, while this section legalizes the imposition of any fine regardless of amount, it does not confer upon all Courts the power to award it. Now, as the power of the Presidency Magistrates and first class Magistrates is limited to a fine of Rs. 1,000 and of the second and third class Magistrates to Rs. 200, and Rs. 50 respectively, it follows that the maximum magisterial fine cannot exceed Rs. 1,000.<sup>5</sup> Only the High Court and the Court of Sessions are thus in a position to inflict an unlimited fine.<sup>6</sup> Indeed, in a large number

(1) Note A, Reprint, pp. 97, 98.

(2) 4 Comm., p. 377.

(3) 7 Rep., Cited in Law Commissioners' 2nd Rep., s. 476.

(4) S. 32, Cr. P. C.

(5) Under s. 349, Cr. P. Code, 2nd and 3rd class Magistrates being empowered to refer cases before them to a first class Magistrate for enhanced sentence, the latter may inflict the same fine which he could have himself inflicted if he had tried the case.

(6) Abdoor Rahman, 7 W. R. 37; Mohana, (1895) P. R. No. 20, contra in Subhan, (1878) P. R. No. 18, is untenable, as the section was never intended to define jurisdiction or override that conferred by the Procedure Code. It only enunciates the principle, leaving its administration to the Procedure Code.

of cases dealt with in the Code, the amount of fine is itself limited, so that it is only in cases where it is not so limited, and where the offender is being tried before a Judge of the High Court or the Court of Sessions, that the question of unlimited fine becomes relevant.

431. But the prohibition of the section against excessive fines applies equally to all cases, though the section, as worded, does not deal with excessive fines in cases in which its amount is limited. Nevertheless, it is a general principle, which the section recognizes, that no Court should inflict a fine which it would be impossible or very difficult for the accused person to pay, or which is wholly disproportioned to the character of the offence.<sup>1</sup> (§ 395). Indeed, it is a cardinal principle of all punishments that the sentence passed must suit the crime, and in the case of fine, it should be specially so. In the first place, the fine inflicted must have reference to the nature and character of the offence. A person betrayed into crime by his cupidity is a person who should be exemplarily amerced as a deterrent check to his cupidity. "For in punishing thus, he is struck in the most sensible part, which has, so to speak, been pointed out by himself; for it is not possible but that the mischief which he has chosen as the instrument of his vengeance, must appear hurtful to himself."<sup>2</sup> In this respect the policy of law is to deprive him of all his ill-gotten gains (§ 429). For example, a person who has run away with a loaf of bread from a baker's stall, because he was hungry, cannot be treated on the same footing as a bank clerk, who misappropriates a large sum of money by falsification of accounts, or being an agent or servant, he defrauds his master by misappropriating large sums of money, out of which he has acquired property of his own. In such cases, law is callous as to the amount of suffering that it would thereby produce among persons affected thereby. For no man has a right to keep his family in comfort by plunder. Whenever such a case is brought before a Magistrate, it is perfectly competent to him to commit a case to the Sessions, so that the offender may be properly amerced.<sup>3</sup> But all cases in which the love of lucre plays a part cannot be treated alike. For there is a distinction between a highwayman and the father of a famishing family committing a theft for bread to support it. In the one case the offender is the object of a just vengeance of law, in the other case he is justly the object of its commiseration. Bentham lays down the three following rules as applicable to the subject under discussion :—

- (1) That the greater the uncertainty, the greater should be the punishment.
- (2) That it should be sufficient to turn the offender's advantage to a loss.
- (3) That it should be deterrent.<sup>4</sup>

432. These principles are general but not inflexible, and, indeed, they are not intended to be so. For there can be no invariable standard applicable to all circumstances which are infinite and diverse in each case. Law has, therefore, refused to commit itself to any generalization on the subject. It has left it to the Judge to fix a fine with due regard to the circumstances of the case in which it is imposed, and the condition in life of the offender. In any case, fine must serve its own purpose; for it is not the object of fine to extend to the utmost possible limits the term of imprisonment to be awarded by the Magistrate trying the case,<sup>5</sup> and where a fine is not suited to the nature of the offence and is quite beyond the means of the offender to pay it, it should never be inflicted merely in order that a further term of imprisonment in default shall be suffered in addition to the substantive imprisonment which the Magistrate has inflicted to the limits of his powers. If the substantive sentence awardable by a Magistrate is in his opinion insufficient for the offence, it is a fit

(1) Per Jackson, J., in Abdoor Rahman, 7 W. R. 37.

(2) Bentham's Principles of Penal Laws, p. 400 (Coll. Ed., Vol. I).

(3) S. 206, Cr. P. C.

(4) Principles of Penal Laws, pp. 401, 402 (Coll. Ed., Vol. I). The language employed by Bentham is neither perspicacious nor easily intelligible. The text lays down what he means by his rules, which having regard to the numerous and varied circumstances of human life, are not probably capable of a more general enunciation.

(5) Subhan, (1878) P. R. No. 18; Nga Chin, 1 Bur. L. R. 483.

case, not for eking it out by the addition of a fine, but for committal or submission to a higher Magistrate for enhanced sentence.<sup>1</sup> It has already been remarked before that when more than one person is fined on conviction for a joint offence, the sentence must impose a specific fine on each prisoner,<sup>2</sup> and realize it from him and him alone. Consequently, a Magistrate is not justified in inflicting heavy fines on poor persons, on the mere supposition that they are backed up by influential persons who might pay for them. Such considerations should never influence the Magistrate who could have regard only to the circumstances of the accused and not of his possible allies.<sup>3</sup> It is, sometimes, also the practice to mulct offenders in prohibitive fines, the object being to convert the sentence of fine into one of imprisonment. Such a course is to be deprecated, and is opposed to the spirit of the section.<sup>4</sup> And as fine is a punishment for an accomplished wrong, it cannot be inflicted to prevent the commission of a possible offence.<sup>5</sup> Of course, there are cases in which non-compliance with a bye-law is expressly punishable with a daily fine, in which case, such a fine for continued infringement is perfectly legal, but such cases do not arise under the Code, and under it, therefore, no sentence of daily fine can be legally imposed.<sup>6</sup>

433. Procedure for Recovery of Fine.—The question as to what is an appropriate fine in a given case is ordinarily a question of fact and of judicial discretion. But inasmuch as the exercise of sound judicial discretion is in itself a question of law the question is not often considered as one of law in which the High Court would properly exercise its powers of revision.

434. Where a conviction has been had under two sections of the Code, in one of which only an alternative sentence of imprisonment or fine is allowed, a sentence of fine alone is illegal.<sup>7</sup> A fine once imposed cannot be remitted merely on the ground that the offender had already been fined departmentally for his wrong. So where a soldier was found drunk on a public road within Cantonment limits for which he was punished departmentally, as well as by the Cantonment Magistrate, it was held by the High Court that the fine judicially inflicted cannot be remitted, not having been in itself an improper one. "Departmental punishment cannot withdraw a wrong-doer from the cognizance of the ordinary Courts or relieve him from the penalties provided by the law."<sup>8</sup>

435. As will be presently seen (§ 440), that the Court sentencing an offender to a fine has also to sentence him to an alternative sentence in case of default. In such a case, the offender has to suffer imprisonment until the fine is paid. But the sentence of imprisonment does not necessarily take effect from the moment it is pronounced, for the Court is authorized to suspend its execution for a time in order to enable him to raise the amount.<sup>9</sup> It is further empowered to issue a warrant for the levy of the amount by distress and sale of any property belonging to the offender, although the sentence directs that, in default of payment of fine, the offender shall be imprisoned.<sup>10</sup> Where several fines are due from an offender, it has been held that following the principle of s. 59 of the Indian Contract Act, the payer should have the option to determine the order in which to discharge the liability.<sup>11</sup>

436. As one object of fine is to compensate the complainant, the Code of Criminal Procedure empowers the Court to order, when passing judgment, that the whole or any part of the fine

(1) Mohana, (1895) P. R. No. 20.

(2) 5 M. H. C. R. (App.) 5; West, J., assumed the legality of a joint fine in a case, the headnote alone of which is available, (1875) B. U. C. 90.

(3) Bhilya, (1891) B. U. C. 556.

(4) Nga Chin, 1 Bur. L. R. 483; Abdullah, 71 I. C. (L.) 998.

(5) Nga Paw Hi, 1 Bur. L. R. 421; Sagar Dutt, 1 B. L. R. 41; Love, 18 W. R. 44; Jagannath, 5 B. H. C. R. 103; Kristodhone, 25 W. R. 6; Chairman, Municipality v. Aneesuddin, 20 W. R. 64; Tarineechurn, 21 W. R. 31; Ramkrishna Biswas, 27 C. 565.

(6) Nga Paw Hi, 1 Bur. L. R. 421; Kristodhone, 25 W. R. 6.

(7) Bhoobun, 11 W. R. 39.

(8) Ramnaik, (1887) B. U. C. 318, 19.

(9) S. 388, Cr. P. C.

(10) S. 386, Cr. P. C.

(11) Yakoob, 24 S. L. R. 437.

recovered is to be applied (a) in defraying expenses, properly incurred, in the prosecution; (b) in compensation for the injury caused by the offence committed, where substantial compensation is, in the opinion of the Court, recoverable by civil suit.<sup>1</sup> In appealable cases such payment is to be made on decision of the appeal.

64. In every case of an offence punishable with imprisonment as well as fine, in which the offender is sentenced to a fine, whether with or without imprisonment, and in every case of an offence punishable [with imprisonment or fine, or]<sup>2</sup> with fine only, in which the offender is sentenced to a fine,

it shall be competent to the Court which sentences such offender to direct by the sentence that, in default of payment of the fine, the offender shall suffer imprisonment for a certain term, which imprisonment shall be in excess of any other imprisonment to which he may have been sentenced or to which he may be liable under a commutation of a sentence.<sup>3</sup>

437. Analogous Law.—This section, the wording of which has been pronounced to be “not happy,”<sup>4</sup> was clause 51 in the draft Bill, though its language was subsequently altered. Its object is to confer on the Courts the general power to impose imprisonment in default of payment of fine, the subsequent sections being then enacted to lay down limits to that power.<sup>5</sup>

438. The general territorial extent of the section has been modified by two Regulations, the first of which<sup>6</sup> makes the first two clauses inapplicable to the hill tribes affected by the Kachin Hill Tribes Regulation; the second regulation being the Chin Hills Regulation,<sup>7</sup> which substitutes the words “In every case in which the offender is sentenced to a fine” for them. As regards the Punjab Frontier District and Baluchistan, its provisions are affected by the Punjab Frontier Crimes Regulation.<sup>8</sup> Apart from these local modifications, its provisions generally apply to all fines whether under the Code or otherwise.<sup>9</sup>

The provisions of this section must be read as supplemented by the provisions of s. 397 of the Criminal Procedure Code.<sup>10</sup>

439. The first two clauses were substituted for the words “in every case in which an offender is sentenced to fine” by the Indian Penal Code Amendment Act, 1882,<sup>11</sup> and the words “with imprisonment or fine” in the second clause were further inserted by the Amending Act of 1886.<sup>12</sup> These amendments were necessitated by the view taken in several cases of the Madras High Court in which it was held that the award of imprisonment in default of payment of fine, inflicted under the provisions of special or local law, was unauthorized by law.<sup>13</sup> In the first case, this section was held to have no application to a conviction under the Police Act, and in the second case, a similar view was reiterated, and a dissent expressed from two other cases<sup>14</sup> of the same Court, in which the award of the sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine was held to be a mere informality. The effect of the amendment is now to legalise the sentence of imprisonment in such cases, the other cases laying down the

(1) S. 545, Cr. P. C.

(2) These words were inserted by the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1886 (X of 1886) s. 21 (2).

(3) See s. 426.

(4) Per Benson, J., in Yakoob Sahib, 22 M. 238.

(5) Ib.

(6) Reg. I of 1895.

(7) Reg. V of 1896.

(8) Reg. IV of 1887, ss. 15 (2), 52.

(9) General Clauses Act, s. 5 (Act I of 1868); General Clauses Act, s. 25 (Act X of 1897); see s. 40, ante, as to its applicability to special or local laws.

(10) For one such case, see Nan E, 9 R. 612.

(11) Act VIII of 1882, s. 2.

(12) Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act (Act X of 1886) s. 21 (2).

(13) 3 M. H. C. R. (App.) 9; 6 M. H. C. R. (App.) 40; 7 M. H. C. R. (App.) 22.

(14) 5 M. H. C. R. (App.) 21; 5 M. H. C. R. (App.) 23.

440. Principle.—The sentence of fine would be incapable of execution, if the offender had no available means to pay up his fine, and if there were no alternative sentence to induce him to pay it up. This section, therefore, generally confers upon the Court the power of imprisonment in default of the payment of fine, which often acts as a screw to make the offender choose the lesser of the two evils.

442. Imprisonment in Default.—This section confers the general power on Courts to award the sentence of imprisonment in default of fine. The cases contemplated by the section are as follows :—

the Court may sentence the offender to a term of imprisonment in default of the payment of fine. As the term "offence", as used in this section, means not only an offence punishable under the Code, but also an offence punishable under any special or local law,<sup>5</sup> it follows that the section is equally applicable to all offences whether committed under the Code or under any special or local law.

444. It will be observed that the section excludes cases, in which the only sentence is death or transportation. This is not because, in such cases, the Code does not prescribe the sentence of fine, but because the Legislature regards in them the added sentence of imprisonment as inexpedient.

65. The term for which the Court directs the offender to be imprisoned in default of payment of a fine shall not exceed one-fourth of the term of imprisonment which is the maximum fixed for the offence, if the offence be punishable with imprisonment as well as fine.<sup>6</sup>

(6) See § 422.

445. Analogous Law.—This section remains exactly as it was originally drafted.<sup>1</sup> It is qualified by section 33 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.

446. The provisions of this section and those of s. 67 have been held to be equally applicable to punishments under special laws like the Bombay Gambling Act.<sup>2</sup>

447. Principle.—The principle of this section, as explained by the Law Commissioners, is that the punishment provided by it is in default of payment of fine and not in lieu thereof; in other words, the imprisonment does not satisfy the fine, which still remains due in spite of the imprisonment. The Commissioners thought that this was not a hardship, because the prisoner had the option of averting imprisonment by satisfying the fine, and, if he undergoes it, it is not more than a "reasonable punishment for his obstinate resistance to the due execution of the sentence."<sup>3</sup>

448. Meaning of Words.—"The Court directs," i.e., may direct (s. 64). "In default of payment of fine," means failure to pay, not that it amounts to payment; (§ 447) on the other hand, when a portion of the fine is paid the offender is entitled to a proportionate reduction of the imprisonment (s. 69). "Which is the maximum fixed for the offence" apart from the enhanced punishment to which the offender may be liable under s. 75 post. The word "offence" here means anything punishable under the Code or under any special or local law.<sup>4</sup> "Punishable with imprisonment as well as fine": The sense of the phrase "as well as" has been explained under the last section (§ 441). The section applies to cases both in which the sentence of imprisonment is compulsory, and where it is passed in default of fine. The only case not included in the section is the case dealt with in s. 67, in which the sentence passed is of fine only.<sup>5</sup>

449. Fair Term of Imprisonment.—This section prescribes the maximum period of sentence to which an offender may be sentenced under this section. It does not prescribe any inflexible rule, nor does it even attempt to lay down any general rule which the Court may follow in awarding imprisonment for non-payment of fine. But it is clear that the term of imprisonment in default of payment of fine should bear a reasonable proportion to the amount of the fine, regard being had to the circumstances of the convicted person.<sup>6</sup> The fact that one-fourth of the sentence is the utmost limit should be also the invariable rule. The maximum is fixed so that it may not be exceeded. Where, for instance, in a case of assault under s. 352 the offender was fined Rs. 50, he could not be sentenced to a month's imprisonment, for that period would exceed one-fourth of the maximum period of three months, the imprisonment prescribed for the offence.<sup>7</sup> Now, as under the scale provided by s. 67, the offender would have been, in such a case, liable to undergo simple imprisonment up to two months, if the offence had been punishable with fine only, it follows that the offender may conceivably get a shorter term in a more serious offence and a longer term in a less serious one,<sup>8</sup> and this is an anomaly for which there is no justification. It would, therefore, be the duty of the Court to be more discriminating in its application of these sections which are not the best possible, though they are undoubtedly the best the Legislature could provide.

450. As the only alternative sentence that the section provides is that of imprisonment, the Court cannot pass a sentence of transportation, for which s. 59 lends no countenance. So for the purpose of magisterial jurisdiction, the alternative sentence authorized by this section is not to be reckoned as a part of the

(1) Cl. 52, Draft Bill.

(2) Radho, 91 I. C. (S.) 394; (1926) S. 144.

(3) Note A, Reprint, pp. 98-200. These views were generally concurred in by the Law Commissioners in their 2nd. Rep., ss. 489-494.

(4) S. 40, ante but see Klawar, S. C. 175 (Oudh).

(5) Chunder Prashad Sing, 10 W. R. 30.

(6) Nga Cho, (1885) S. J. L. B. 353.

(7) Jehan Buksh, 16 W. R. 42; Darba, 1 A. 461, F. B.; Venkatesagadu, 10 M. 165 (167), F. B.; overruling Muhammad, 1 M. 277.

(8) Darba, 1 A. 461, F. B.; L. B. R. (1872-1892), 364; Ah Hein, (1893-1900), 385; Bhiharao, B. U. C. 979.

substantive sentence. But the powers of the Magistrates in this respect are defined by the Code of Criminal Procedure, to which reference has been made elsewhere (§§ 445, 446). The result of that provision, taken with this section, is that where a Magistrate only fines a person for an offence punishable with imprisonment as well as fine, he is competent to award an alternative sentence up to the extent of his power, provided that it does not contravene the rule of this section. Thus, suppose that in a case of theft under s. 379 of the Code convicted by a Magistrate of the first class, the offender is sentenced to mere fine. Now, the utmost sentence of imprisonment which he can pass in default of payment of the fine is under this section one-fourth of the maximum term of three years provided by that section, i.e., 9 months. Now suppose, in the same case, if the sentence passed was one of imprisonment with fine, then, though this section would make no difference in the alternative sentence, yet the passing of that sentence would contravene s. 33 of the Procedure Code under which, in a case of such combined sentences, the maximum sentence in lieu of fine, which a Magistrate is empowered to pass, is not one-fourth of the sentence prescribed by the offence, but one-fourth of the sentence which the Magistrate is empowered to pass, i.e., 6 months. The two sections, thus, do not always act in unison, but the Court has to see that, in complying with one, it does not contravene the other.

451. Since the offence of bribery is punishable with 3 years' imprisonment, an offender convicted on three counts might be sentenced to 18 months' further imprisonment, i.e., six months under each count in default of payment of fine.<sup>1</sup>

66. The imprisonment which the Court imposes in default of payment of a fine may be of any description to which the offender might have been sentenced for the offence.<sup>2</sup>

Description of imprisonment for non-payment of fine.

452. Analogous Law.—The word "offence" as used in this section denotes anything punishable under the Code or under any special or local law.<sup>3</sup>

453. Nature of Alternative Imprisonment.—This section enables the Court to award any kind of imprisonment, whether rigorous or simple, in default of payment of fine, provided that such imprisonment was allowable as a substantive imprisonment under the section. Consequently, where the sentence of rigorous imprisonment is the only sentence affixed to an offence, the Court cannot award simple imprisonment in default of fine.<sup>4</sup> In other cases it has a discretion.

67. If the offence be punishable with fine only, the imprisonment which the Court imposes in default of payment of the fine shall be simple, and the term for which the Court directs the offender to be imprisoned, in default of payment of fine, shall not exceed the following scale, that is to say, for any term not exceeding two months when the amount of the fine shall not exceed fifty rupees, and for any term not exceeding four months when the amount shall not exceed one hundred rupees, and for any term not exceeding six months in any other case.

Imprisonment for non-payment of fine when offence punishable with fine only.

454. Analogous Law.—This section corresponds with s. 54 of the draft Code, but it was modified before its enactment, and it has since been amended by the addition of the words "the imprisonment which the Court imposes in default of payment of the fine shall be simple, and."<sup>5</sup> This amendment was anticipated by the Bombay High Court, which commented on the ambiguity of the section as it was then worded, and altered the sentence of imprisonment in default of fine from rigorous to simple.<sup>6</sup> The section has been modified as regards hill tribes affected by local Regulations.<sup>7</sup> It is further affected by s. 33 of the Code of Criminal

(1) Harsukh Rai, (1919) 3 P. W. R. 3.

(2) See § 422.

(3) S. 40.

(4) Shimonto Kotal, 7 W. R. 31; Nga Paw, L. B. R. (1893-1900) 281.

(5) Act VIII of 1882, s. 3.

(6) Santu, (1868) 5 B. H. C. R. 45.

(7) Kachin Hill Tribes Regulation (Reg. I of 1895), s. 1 (3), and 3 Chin Hills Regulation (Reg. V of 1896) s. 3.

Procedure which has been set out under s. 65 (§§ 445, 446). This section is complementary to s. 65, as it deals with the cases not provided for in that section, namely, those in which the only sentence prescribed is that of fine. It lays down the equivalent maximum imprisonment that the Code is empowered to award in default of the payment of fine. This power is independent of, and unlimited by, the power of the Magistrate on summary trials,<sup>1</sup> so that, while a Magistrate, on a summary trial, cannot sentence an offender for a term exceeding 3 months, still, where he merely fines him, he may exceed that limit in sentencing him to an alternative imprisonment under this section.<sup>2</sup> But, in awarding the sentence of imprisonment under this section in default of the payment of fine, the Magistrate cannot exceed the term to which, in the exercise of his ordinary jurisdiction, he is entitled to sentence an offender.<sup>3</sup> As the maximum term of sentence, that may be passed under this section, cannot exceed 6 months, a first and second class Magistrate may pass a sentence up to that limit, but, inasmuch as a third class Magistrate cannot pass a sentence for more than one month, he cannot pass a longer sentence, though allowable under this section, for, it would be opposed to s. 33 of the Procedure Code. Of course, though a Court may, under this section, award imprisonment in default of payment of fine, it cannot be levied by imprisonment,<sup>4</sup> where imprisonment has not been awarded as an alternative sentence.

455. Principle.—This section refers only to an offence for which fine is the only punishment. It has no reference to offences punishable either with imprisonment or with fine, the sentences in which would be regulated by s. 65.<sup>5</sup>

68. The imprisonment, which is imposed in default of payment of a fine shall terminate whenever that fine is either paid or levied by process of law.<sup>6</sup>

Imprisonment to terminate on payment of fine.

456. Analogous Law.—The process of law under which fine may be levied is to be found in ss. 386 and 389 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

457. Principle.—This section subordinates imprisonment to fine. Such, indeed, was the intention of the sentence, and so it is provided in the next section that even if the accused pays a portion of the fine, he is entitled to a remission of his proportionate imprisonment.

69. If, before the expiration of the term of imprisonment fixed in default of payment, such a proportion of the fine be paid or levied that the term of imprisonment suffered in default of payment is not less than proportional to the part of the fine still unpaid, the imprisonment shall terminate.<sup>7</sup>

Termination of imprisonment on payment of proportional part of fine.

Illustration.

A is sentenced to a fine of one hundred rupees and to four months' imprisonment in default of payment. Here, if seventy-five rupees of the fine be paid or levied before the expiration of one month of the imprisonment, A will be discharged as soon as the first month has expired. If seventy-five rupees be paid or levied at the time of the expiration of the first month, or at any later time, while A continues in imprisonment, A will be immediately discharged. If fifty rupees of the fine be paid or levied before the expiration of two months of the imprisonment, A will be discharged as soon as the two months are completed. If fifty rupees be paid or levied at the time of the expiration of those two months, or at any later time while A continues in imprisonment, A will be immediately discharged.

458. Principle.—Though this section enacts in favour of proportionate remission of imprisonment on payment of a proportionate part of fine, still it confers

(1) Asghar Ali, 6 A. 61.

(2) S. 262 (2), Cr. P. C.

(3) Darba, 1 A. 461, F. B.; Asghar Ali, 6 A. 61; Venkatessagadu, 10 M. 165, F. B.

(4) Parvag Rai v. Arjun Mian, 22 C. 130; Murad Ali, 40 P. R. 1880; Nga Kywe, 4 L. B. R. (1872-1892) 410. Ss. 67, 68, 69, apply to the Madras Harbour Trust Act (Mad.

Act II of 1886). In the case of hill tribes, to which the Kachin Hill Tribes Regulation (I of 1895) is applied, the scale of punishment is different. See, also, Chin Hills Regulation V of 1896, s. 3. (See foot-note 7 on p. 237).

(5) Yakoob Sahib, 22 M. 238.

(6) See § 422.

(7) Ib.

on the Court no power to refund the fine if the necessary remission earned has not been made owing to an error in not communicating the order to the jailor,<sup>1</sup> though in such a case, the prisoner may apply to the Government for refund of the fine so paid. It is, however, the duty of the Court to order release of the prisoner as soon as the terms of this section have been complied with. And when a fine is imposed in addition to transportation, and the whole or part of the fine is levied, it is the duty of the sentencing Judge to inform the authorities at Port Blair of the fact.<sup>2</sup>

70. The fine, or any part thereof which remains unpaid, may be levied at any time within six years after the passing of the sentence, and if, under the sentence, the offender be liable to imprisonment for a longer period than six years, then at any time previous to the expiration of that period; and the death of the offender does not discharge from the liability any property which would, after his death, be legally liable for his debts.

Fine leviable within six years, or during imprisonment.

459. Analogous Law.—This section was framed on the analogy of the procedure adopted for the recovery of debts in civil cases. As the imprisonment of the debtor does not absolve him from the payment of his debt,<sup>3</sup> so, it was said, should the imprisonment of a convict, whose case is worse and not better than that of a judgment-debtor, not absolve him from the payment of the fine.<sup>4</sup>

460. Principle.—This section enacts a rule of limitation, regarding the period within which fine may be recovered. The period of six years follows the English law of limitation for recovery of debts, while the provision that fine remains recoverable out of the assets of the deceased offender follows the principle of civil law applicable to debts. It will be noticed that this debt, though a Crown debt, is not the first charge upon the assets of the deceased.<sup>5</sup>

461. Procedure for Recovery of Fine.—This section is really a proviso to ss. 64 and 67, for, while these sections provide for alternative imprisonment, this section provides that the imprisonment so awarded and suffered will not absolve the offender from payment of the fine, which still remains due, and which may be recovered within six years of the sentence, or thereafter before expiry of his substantive imprisonment, if the offender be sentenced to more than six years' imprisonment.<sup>6</sup> This means that the limitation fixed by law for recovery of the fine is six years, within which it is competent to the Court to recover it. Such fine may be recovered from the moveable or immoveable property of the convict. The Code of Criminal Procedure provides for its recovery both out of the moveable and immoveable property of the defaulter.<sup>7</sup> In any case, the limitation applicable is six years, after which the offender's property cannot be proceeded against, though there being no limitation for his personal arrest, his liability to imprisonment awarded in default of payment of fine continues irrespective of time. Indeed, such imprisonment is not a satisfaction of the fine, but is a punishment for contempt.<sup>8</sup> The fine inflicted may, therefore, be recovered even though the offender may have served out the alternative imprisonment, and his liability does not even cease with his death. For, on his death, the fine may still be recovered from any property "which would, after his death, be legally liable for his debts." The effect of this clause is to make the unpaid fine rank as a Crown debt pari passu with the other debts of the deceased offender. The question as to what property of the deceased is so liable is a question the determination of which depends upon the personal law of the deceased and the civil liability of his estate to discharge his debts. It may, however, be added that, but for this clause, it would not have been always possible for the Crown to recover fine from the estate of the deceased offender. For instance,

(1) Nathu Mula, 4 B. H. C. R. 37.

(2) 5 M. H. C. R. (App.) 44.

(3) S. 58, C. P. C.

(4) Note A. Reprint, p. 100; Sagwa, 23 A. 497.

(5) Note A. Reprint, p. 100.

(6) Fanthome, (1882) A. W. N. 85; Maya Dewji, B. U. C. 40.

(7) S. 386, Cr. P. C. overruling Sita Nath, 20 C. 478.

(8) Ganu, (1884) B. U. C. 207; Moodsoodun, 3 W. R. 61; Sagwa, 23 A. 497.

in the case of a Hindu convict, the sons might have repudiated the debt as illegal and immoral and therefore, irrecoverable out of the family estate. In any other case, the liability might have been considered as only personal, ceasing with the death of the offender. The liability declared by the clause obviates such questions. It does not, however, create a charge on the offender's estate. There is, therefore, no case of special priority or enlarged limitation.

462. Though the imprisonment awarded in default of payment of fine does not absolve the convict from the payment of fine, still it counts as a sentence, and the Court has, therefore, to see that reducing the sentence of imprisonment and substituting therefor the sentence of a fine, has not the effect of enhancing the sentence as a whole. Where, for instance, the Magistrate had in case of cheating under s. 420 sentenced the accused only to a sentence of six month's imprisonment, and on appeal the Sessions Judge reduced the imprisonment to four months, but added a fine of Rs. 100, or in default of payment, two months' further rigorous imprisonment, it was held that the effect of the sentence on appeal was really to enhance it, for the accused may conceivably have to remain in prison for six months, and yet remain liable to pay the fine.<sup>1</sup> The mere fact that the fine is written off as irrecoverable is, subject to the limitation of six years, no bar to its subsequent recovery by coercive process of law, if it appears that the person from whom it was due has acquired means to pay it. As the section provides a special limitation for the recovery of fine, it cannot be further enlarged by acknowledgment or part-payment under the general law of limitation.<sup>2</sup>

71. Where anything which is an offence is made up of parts, any of which parts is itself an offence, the offender shall not be punished with the punishment of more than one of such of his offences, unless it be so expressly provided.

Limit of punishment of offence made up of several offences,

Where anything is an offence falling within two or more separate definitions of any law in force for the time being by which offences are defined or punished, or where several acts, of which one or more than one would by itself or themselves constitute an offence, constitute, when combined, a different offence,

the offender shall not be punished with a more severe punishment than the Court which tries him could award for any one of such offences.<sup>3</sup>

Illustrations.

(a) A gives Z fifty strokes with a stick. Here A may have committed the offence of voluntarily causing hurt to Z by the whole beating, and also by each of the blows which make up the whole beating. If A were liable to punishment for every blow, he might be imprisoned for fifty years, one for each blow. But he is liable only to one punishment for the whole beating.

(b) But if, while A is beating Z, Y interferes, and A intentionally strikes Y, here, as the blow given to Y is no part of the act whereby A voluntarily causes hurt to Z, A is liable to one punishment for voluntarily causing hurt to Z, and to another for the blow given to Y.

[Offence—s. 40.]

463. Analogous Law.—The last three clauses of this section are new and were added by the Penal Code Amendment Act of 1882.<sup>4</sup> The provisions of this section are closely analogous to those of s. 26 of the General Clauses Act<sup>5</sup> and of ss. 35 and 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

464. Under English law, a person cannot be tried for two offences committed in the same transaction on the ground of unfairness to him in that it would amount to the giving of evidence of his bad character, and otherwise embarrass him in the defence.<sup>6</sup>

English Practice Compared. This section, as well as s. 235 of the Criminal Procedure Code, adopt a rule more

(1) Sagwa, 23 A. 497.

(2) Latiful Hasan v. Mumtaz Ali, 3 A. L. J. 818.

(3) See § 422.

(4) Act VIII of 1882, s. 4.

(5) X of 1892.

(6) Castro, 6 App. Cas. 229 (244.)

favourable to the accused, though this section merely provides for limiting the punishment in cases covered by it. As such, it provides only a penalty for a single offence under the law, and in so doing, recognizes the rule of Roman law, followed in many cases decided under the English law.<sup>1</sup> It is a recognition of the maxim, nemo debet bis punire pro uno delicto.<sup>2</sup>

465. The word "offence" is used in the section in its wider sense, as meaning anything punishable under the Code or any special or local law.<sup>3</sup>

466. Principle.—The object of the section is to confine punishment within reasonable limits. It is based on the rule that where the intention was to commit an offence, the commission of which involves the perpetration of acts, by themselves punishable, the offender shall not be punished for them separately, as his object was to commit one crime and not many. Moreover, if in such a case, every criminal act, however subservient to the main design, were penal, there would be no end to punishment, and the most trivial act might thus be magnified into offences, the punishments of which might be wholly disproportionate to the nature and gravity of the act accomplished. As both this section, as well as the two corresponding sections of the Procedure Code, are directed to this end, and as the two Codes approach the same question from a different standpoint, it is necessary to see how far the provisions of the one Code are affected by the corresponding provisions of the other.

467. It will be observed that the two sections of the Procedure Code do not profess to modify any part of this section, which has, therefore, to be first considered, and which again would prevail in case of conflict with them.

468. Meaning of Words.—"Where anything.....is made up of parts": These words are general but mean where several acts constituting an offence are, taken singly, themselves offences. "Of any law in force": i.e., the same or separate laws.<sup>4</sup> "The offender shall not be punished": Not that the offender commits no offence, but only that he cannot be so convicted, for if he is convicted, he will also have to be punished.<sup>5</sup> "Unless it be so expressly provided": This makes it subject to an express direction to the contrary. The provision for separate punishments must again be something more than a mere fact that the act is punishable in law. It must be a direction sufficiently explicit to override the rule. "Constitute an offence," i.e., as defined in the Code. In the words of Mahmud, J., these words must be understood to refer to the definitions of the offences as enunciated in the Code itself, irrespective of the identity or non-identity of the evidence whereby the several acts are proved.<sup>6</sup>

469. The section now deals with three specific cases: (i) Where a number of acts are committed, all of which are offences, both collectively as well as individually, in which case the author may be punished for any one of them or all collectively, but he cannot be punished for all the acts severally; (ii) where of such several acts, they not only individually constitute separate offences, but also constitute a different offence, when two or more of them are combined, then the offender can only be punished for any one of such offences, and not both<sup>7</sup>; (iii) where an act is penal under two or more Acts, the offender cannot be punished under each of them, for otherwise he would be punished several times over for the same act.<sup>8</sup> The section thus provides for (a) the plurality of acts (cl. 1), (b) the plurality

(1) Moodie, 1 M. & R. 128; Berry Henderson, L. R. 5 Q. B. 296 (302), followed per West, J., in Dod Basaya, 11 C.H.C.R. 13.

(2) "No one shall be twice punished for the same offence."

(3) S. 40, Mhd. Ali Khan, 55 A. 557.

(4) Cf. S. 26, General Clauses Act (X of 1897). Rahamatulla, 1 Pat. L. J. 373, 38 I. C. 438; Kiamuddi, 51 C. 79.

(5) "Ubi jus ibi remedium" (where there is a right there is also a remedy)—Wazir Jan,

10 A. 58; 4 M. H. C. R. (App.) 27; but findings should be recorded on all counts, though punishments should be awarded as here directed—6 M. H. C. R. (App.) 47.

(6) Wazir Jan, 10 A. 58 (69).

(7) Cl. 3.

(8) Cl. 2; Lalamun Singh, 1 Agra 31; Rahmatulla, 1 Pat. L. W. 349, 38 I. C. 433; Sukhnandan Das, 43 I. C. (Pat.) 445; Bhagat Singh, (1930) L. 266. Anant Narayan, (1933) M. 337.

of aspects (cl. 2), and (c) the organic connection of acts with a result differing from the elements (cl. 3).

470. Referring now to s. 35 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, it would be observed that that section was amended in 1923<sup>1</sup> and the word "distinct" deleted. The effect of the amendment is that it is not necessary that the offences should be distinct in order to enable a Judge or Magistrate to pass consecutive sentences subject to s. 71 of the Penal Code. The combined effect of these two sections would be, that if a case falls under s. 71 of the Penal Code the Court cannot award a severer punishment than it could, for any of the offences, constituting component parts of the main offence.<sup>2</sup> Now if we turn to section 235 of the Procedure Code, cases occur in which the plurality of sentences, though legal under that section, would be illegal under the rule here enacted. But in such case, the Procedure Code yields to the rule of the section, which is paramount wherever its principle collides with the Procedure Code. Indeed, the two Codes provide two different rules intended for two different purposes. As was observed by Muttuswamy Ayyar, J., section 234 of the Procedure Code provides rules of criminal pleading only, the rules for assessing punishments being provided by this section supplemented by section 35 of the Procedure Code.<sup>3</sup> In other words, the combined effect of the three sections is that while it is legal under the Code of Criminal Procedure that the accused should be tried for more than one offence, whether they are parts of a greater or another offence or not, but in awarding punishment the provisions of this section shall be observed. There is thus no conflict between the three sections, and cases which note a conflict are cases in which this difference has been overlooked.

471. It will thus be evident that while there is no objection to several such offences being charged with and tried together, the Code limits the punishment to which the offender may be sentenced on conviction. It may, however, be noted that while section 235 of the Procedure Code speaks of the person accused being "charged with and tried," the illustrations all refer to cases in which the person accused may not only be charged with and tried but also convicted of separate offences. The conflict, if any, must then be with these illustrations and the section.

472. Test of Criminality in Complex acts.—This section lays down the true test of criminality in complex acts resulting in complex offences, in which the elementary acts are themselves complete offences as understood in section 40. The section enunciates the rule in which the Code authorizes the passing of a single sentence. But if this were all, all difficulties would have been reduced by reference to it, and in cases howsoever complicated and transactions howsoever long, the sentence would be as for one offence committed. That this was not the object of the Legislature is evident from the enactment of section 235 of the Procedure Code in which more than one offence are contemplated and made penal. The illustrations appended to this section then comprise cases which the Legislature had intended to exclude from the operation of the rule. These offences are ordinarily those committed in the same transaction, in which case the several offences committed are treated as independent offences.

473. The thirteen illustrations appended to section 235 of the Procedure Code are cases in which the Legislature saw no objection to the separate conviction of the offender. These cases furnish an apt contrast to the two illustrations appended to this section. Take, for instance, the first illustration of the two sections: A person rescues another from lawful custody. It is an offence complete and entire by itself. He is resisted by the custodian who is thereupon grievously wounded.<sup>4</sup> Now, since the wounding of the custodian was not a part of the offence of rescuing a person from lawful custody, the offender may be not only tried but also punished for the two offences. But suppose that the person rescued was recaptured by the constable,

(1) Act XVIII of 1923.

(2) Hamma Timma, 30 Bom. L. R. 383.

(3) Nirichan, 12 M. 36.

(4) S. 235, ill. (a), Cr. P. C.; of this section, ill. (b).

and the rescuer thereupon made another effort to rescue him with success. Here, since the second rescue was a part of the same intention in pursuance of the same design, the offender could not be convicted as for two offences to rescue a person in custody. So where a person breaks into a house, and removes property which happens to belong to several persons, he is guilty of only one offence, and not of as many offences as there are owners.<sup>1</sup> Where a gang of dacoits, in pursuance of the common object of robbery, attacked at the same time two houses of different owners in the same village, it was held that they could only be convicted of one offence of dacoity and not of two offences because of the two houses robbed.<sup>2</sup> For the same reason there could be only one conviction of a guard in charge of a goods train for robbery of peoples' goods from separate bags in a truck.<sup>3</sup> In such cases, the rule applicable appears to be this, that if the property, which it was the thief's intention to take, was lying handy so as to be available by one act of trespass, or which was so seized, then the moving of each article in the course of removal of the whole bulk of property cannot ordinarily be considered to be a distinct theft. The theiving project in such a case was single, although it may have been achieved in detail, and the fact that the spoil taken consisted of several things, whether belonging to the same or to different owners, does not necessarily break up the unity of the transaction. If, on the other hand, the property taken consisted of a number of articles so distinctly or diversely situated as to require a distinct act of trespass or a distinct enterprise for the removal of each, the transaction must be ordinarily held to have been not single but complex, and its achievement to have involved the commission of more than one separate theft.<sup>4</sup> So if a person at one time criminally intimidates three persons, he has been held to commit three separate offences, and not merely one,<sup>5</sup> but it may not always be so.<sup>6</sup> So where the accused had abetted two persons to commit criminal breaches of trust he was rightly held liable to suffer the penalty for committing two offences.<sup>7</sup>

474. The unity of offences thus depends upon the unity of transaction as well as upon the unity of intention. Thus, suppose a thief goes to a threshing-floor where the grain of several cultivators is stored, and steals a little from every heap. Here it is plain that there was presumably but one act of thieving accomplished through one and the same trespass, unless it appears that he had distinct designs against the several owners. Such, however, will be the presumption in a case where the thief picks the pockets of several persons in a crowded place,<sup>8</sup> or where he breaks into three houses and steals property therefrom.<sup>9</sup> These and similar cases are thus subject to the rule that where there is a unity of intention, and the acts constituting the offence are founded on one single continuous transaction, there should be only one conviction,<sup>10</sup> though the offences may be several and distinct. So where a person breaks into a house with intent to commit theft, and does commit theft, the question at one time was whether he had committed two offences, or only one, and the Courts were by no means agreed.<sup>11</sup> It has, however, been now settled by the Legislature that in such a case he commits only one offence.<sup>12</sup> And this was the view current under the Procedure Code of 1872.<sup>13</sup>

(1) Shaikh Moneah, 11 W. R. 38, followed in Krishna, (1897) B. N. J. 927; Nga Po, (1882) S. J. L. B. 168; San Hla, (1889) S. J. L. B. 475.

(2) Nga San Dan, (1889) S. J. L. B. 444; (followed in L. B. R. (1872-92), 475.

(3) Har Dial, (1905) P. R. No. 58.

(4) Ali Mahomed, 1 I. C. (C.) 335.

(5) Goolzarkhan, 9 W. R. 30.

(6) L. B. R. (1872-1892) 492.

(7) Babujan (Sheikh), (1923) Cal. 403.

(8) C. P. Cr. C., Pt. 2, No. 20.

(9) 4 M. H. C. R. (App.) 27.

(10) 6 M. H. C. R. (App.) 47.

(11) The view taken in Calcutta was that in such a case there could be only one conviction—Tunaokoch, 2 W. R. 63; Chytun,

5 W. R. 49; Nobo Pullee, 6 W. R. 49; Mus-sahur Daoudh, 6 W. R. 92; Sahroe, 8 W. R. 31; Ramcharan, (1866) B. L. R. (Sup. Vol.) 488, F. B.; contra in Tincouree, (1864) W. R. 31. But the other three Courts had dissented from this view—Anwarkhan, 9 B. H. C. R. 172; Tukaya, 1 B. 214; 4 M. H. C. R. (App.) 37; Daulatya, 3 A. 305; Zor Singh, 10 A. 146; but the Calcutta view has since been accepted by the Legislature, s. 35, ill., Cr. P. C.

(12) S. 35, ill., Cr. P. C.

(13) Anwar Khan, (1872) Bom. (unrep.) Rul., 23rd May; Govinda, (1873) B. U. C. 79; Noujan, 7 M. H. C. R. 375.

475. The question whether certain acts are the component parts of the same offence, depends upon whether the several acts were or were not a part of the same design, which again depends not less upon the proof of circumstances evidencing intention as upon the interval of time and place by which<sup>1</sup> the several acts are separated. If suppose that in the above illustration of house-breaking and theft, a burglar had broken the house, but was scared to flee. He, however, returned afterwards the following night and committed the theft. Here the two offences were distinct, because they were severable and were committed after an interval of time. They would, therefore, be separately punished. So where four policemen were charged with ill-treating the complainant Hamma, his wife Mt. Rakhma, and his son-in-law Yellia during the course of a police investigation into a case of theft, the question was whether the several acts of ill-treatment, between the 5th and 18th January, 1889, constituted only one offence or several offences, it was held that the several acts of violence between those dates could be rightly recorded as constituting only a single transaction. But the ill-treatment of Mt. Rakhma in different places was not taken in the same light, nor was her wrongful confinement and hurt caused to her on a previous day held to be a part of the same transaction.<sup>2</sup> And even as regards Hamma, though the several hurts could be tried together, they were held to constitute separate offences.<sup>3</sup>

476. Proximity of time combined with intention and similarity of action and results are elements for consideration whether the acts alleged form the same transaction or not.<sup>4</sup> The utility of this principle as a test was well brought out in a case in which the facts were these. Four robbers waylaid a party of women and their attendants on a road leading from Batesar Fair at 8 p.m. with the object of robbery. Whilst the robbery was being carried out, a Chaukidar, attracted by the noise, ran up shouting: "Take care, I am coming." Upon this the four thieves ran up and hit the Chaukidar with sticks, fracturing his skull, from which he died. These men had committed another robbery on the same evening between 5 and 6 o'clock, on the same road, about three miles distant from the scene of the murder. They were, therefore, charged at the same trial for two robberies and murder, and the question raised on appeal was whether they could be so tried; it was held that they could not, because the three offences were not immediately connected with each other so as to be jointly triable.<sup>5</sup> In this case there was proximity of time and place, but no unity of intention, which is the reason for holding the joint trial of two riotous factions irregular though not illegal.<sup>6</sup> In such cases, the applicability of the section is out of question, for the three offences could not be regarded as parts of the same offence, and illustration (b) of the section excludes such cases from its purview.

477. But where the accused were convicted of wrongful confinement and assault, the facts proved being that they had seized, dragged and pushed the complainant to certain place in order to punish him, it was held that all the acts of the accused fell within the definition of wrongful confinement and assault, and that, therefore, the case fell within the second paragraph of this section.<sup>7</sup> But where a Head Constable falsely charged a person for gambling and supported his action by false evidence, the two offences were held to be distinct and by no means parts of each other.<sup>8</sup> This view follows an older case the facts of which are not reported, but in which Kemp and Glover, JJ., generally laid down that "the offence of making a false charge and the offence of intentionally giving false evidence in any stage of a judicial proceeding

(1) Nga Tha, 15 I. C. 485.

(2) Fakirapa, 15 B. 491.

(3) Ib.

(4) Per Jardine, J., in Vajiram, 16 B. 414.

(5) Mulna, 14 A. 502.

(6) In re Choragudi Rai Jagadish, 15 C. W. N. 732, 5 I. C. 847; Bazu, 8 W. R. 47; Surroop Chunder Paul, 12 W. R. 75; Chandra

Bhuiya, 20 C. 537. In Bachu v. Sia Ram, 14 C. 358, the Court, however, set aside the conviction; but this view was not concurred in Chandra Bhuiya, 20 C. 537.

(7) Fakira Khan, 19 C. W. N. 181.

(8) Pir Mahomed, 10 B. 254; Balwant, 14 B. L. R. 41.

are not cognate offences, nor are they parts of one and the same offence."<sup>1</sup> So, again, it has been laid down by the same Court that the offence of kidnapping and the offence of selling for the purpose of prostitution are distinct and separate offences, for it does not follow that because a person entices away a minor under the age of 16 years out of the keeping of her lawful guardian, it is necessarily with the intention of selling her for the purposes of prostitution.<sup>2</sup>

478. Where an act of restraint or confinement in an attempt to kidnap has been exercised in furtherance of the attempt, and goes to form part of that offence and is not done with an intention or object which can be separated from the general intention to kidnap, it will constitute an integral part of that offence, and should not form the subject of a separate conviction and sentence.<sup>3</sup> So where certain emigration agents induced two persons to leave their home on the pretence of obtaining service in India, and go to Azamgarh and thence to Ghazipur, the real intention being to ship them off as emigrants to Demerara or Trinidad, and with that object they were confined in the two cities for a number of days, upon which they were prosecuted for wrongful confinement and attempted kidnapping, it was held that inasmuch as the wrongful confinement was in furtherance of the attempt to kidnap, and was in fact a part of that offence, and as it was not done with any intention or object which could be separated from the general intention to kidnap, it was a part of that offence and could not be the basis of an additional conviction.<sup>4</sup> So where a Brahmin enticed away a girl of 11 years and sold her to one Bissessur, to be married to his son, where she remained two days, after which she was taken to a relative, where she remained a month, after which she was transferred to other places till the police rescued her, and prosecuted the Brahmin and Bissessur along with others, the former, for kidnapping (s. 363) and kidnapping a woman for forcible marriage (s. 366), it was held that they could not be convicted under s. 366,<sup>5</sup> but probably it would have been more correct to say that though they were rightly convicted under s. 366, they could not be convicted under s. 363.

479. The same rule cannot, however, be extended to offences under ss. 363 and 372, the latter of which is distinct from kidnapping, and is as such, separately punishable.<sup>6</sup> On the other hand, where the prisoner, being found guilty of kidnapping a child with the intention of robbing it, was convicted both under s. 363 as well as s. 369, it was held that the conviction under s. 363 could not be sustained, as an offence under that section was included in that described in s. 369.<sup>7</sup> So where a Sessions Judge had directed the commitment of the accused for adultery (s. 497) after the accused had already been convicted on a charge of enticing away (s. 498), the High Court held that if the committal was considered necessary, the Judge should have annulled the accused's conviction for adultery, for there could not be two convictions on the same collection of facts, the requisite intention in the one case being the substantive delict in the other.<sup>8</sup>

480. In fact, where the offence is one, it does not matter what means are employed to commit it. Where the accused was convicted of criminal intimidation under s. 506, a conviction under s. 507 could not be superadded to the intimidation on the ground that the accused had posted up an anonymous communication against the same person.<sup>9</sup> Where a person is charged with giving false evidence, a number of lies in a continuous deposition only constitute one piece of false evidence, though the same lie in two depositions would constitute, and be punishable as, two distinct offences.<sup>10</sup> The double conviction of the accused for trespass and rape has been justified on the ground that one offence was not involved in the other,<sup>11</sup> but presumably no rape in that case was possible without trespass. There is, of course, nothing in this section to preclude the Court from convicting the offender for two or more

(1) Abdool Azeez, 7 W. R. 59.

(2) Doorga Doss, 7 W. R. 104 (Rev. p. 68).

(3) Mangroo, 6 N. W. P. H. C. R. 293.

(4) Ib.

(5) Isree Panday, 7 W. R. 56.

(6) Doorga Doss, 7 W. R. 104 (Rev. p. 68).

(7) Po Lan, 6 Bur. L. J. 77, 19 I. C. 167, Shama Sheikh, 8 W. R. 35.

(8) 5 M. H. C. R. (App.) 16.

(9) Zora, 4 B. H. C. R. 12.

(10) Castro v. Q., 6 App. Cas. 229.

(11) Kanchan Molla, (1924) C 1015.

offences if they are distinct and separately punishable under the Code. Such is, for instance, the offence of kidnapping and rape,<sup>1</sup> house-breaking at night with intent to commit theft punishable under s. 457 and theft as a distinct offence punishable under s. 380.<sup>2</sup> But for the same reason a man cannot be awarded consecutive sentences under s. 394 and s. 397, though preparation (s. 399) and assembling (s. 402) for the purpose of committing dacoity, being separate offences, would be punishable as distinct offences.<sup>3</sup>

481. The offences of possessing stolen property under s. 411 and of voluntarily concealing the same property under s. 414 have been held to be identical for the purpose of punishment, the reason given being that s. 414 applies only when there has been no actual receipt of the stolen property and the act of concealing, or assisting in concealing stolen property, does not aggravate the offence of receiving it, the acts of the person being throughout parts of one single continuous transaction.<sup>4</sup> So where a person has obtained property by a criminal breach of trust, he may be convicted for that offence, but he cannot at the same time be convicted also for receiving or retaining stolen property under s. 411, for a person cannot be said to receive or retain stolen property which he had already stolen himself, by getting possession of it by committing a criminal breach of trust. Section 411 applies to a person who receives dishonestly property that has been stolen, or who, after it has been stolen by some means or other, obtains control over it, as for instance, if it is brought to his house, and he, knowing it to have been acquired by theft, retains it. Where, therefore, the attributes of "stolen property" only became attached to it by the fact of misappropriation, it could not be said to have been stolen when it was received by him.<sup>5</sup> In other words, the property was not stolen property when the prisoner received it; it became so as soon as he had committed its misappropriation. As possession was necessary for misappropriation, the one was a part of the other and could not be otherwise treated. So, a person cannot be convicted of using certain forged documents under s. 471, and of having them in his possession with intent to use them under s. 474; for "he could not well have used them unless he had them in his possession."<sup>6</sup>

482. But this reasoning would not hold good in a case where a zemindar employed one Bhagi to secrete stolen railway pins, in the fields and godown of his enemy Sedari for the purpose of implicating him as the thief. Here the zemindar had (a) secreted stolen pins and (b) he had by doing so fabricated false evidence against Sedari, and as the one act was no part of the other, though the two acts were done with the same intent, the accused was held to have committed two distinct offences and not only one offence under the Code.<sup>7</sup> In another case, the accused had cut down and appropriated a tree standing on Government land, whereupon he was convicted both of mischief (s. 425) as well as of theft (s. 379), and his conviction was upheld on the ground that the mischief was complete before the theft could have commenced.<sup>8</sup> But this case overlooks the fact that there could be no theft unless the tree was severed from the ground, and that as its severance was with the intention of committing theft,—an act necessary for that purpose, there could be no double conviction for mischief as well as theft. This, at any rate, was the view taken in two Calcutta cases in which mischief and theft were regarded as parts of one and the same offence.<sup>9</sup> And it is clearly the correct view.

483. Double Liability of Rioters.—This section prescribes a rule that in an offence, the several component parts of which themselves constitute different offences, the sentence should not exceed that prescribed for any one of them. But it naturally leaves the question what component parts constitute distinct offences to be determined by reference to other sections of the Code. Two such sections have given rise to some judicial conflict now sought to be reconciled by the amendment of s. 35 of the Procedure Code. The conflict relates to whether in a case of riot accompanied by the causing of hurt or grievous hurt the two constitute a single offence of riot or are a compound offence in which rioting and the causing of hurt or grievous hurt constitute distinct offences calling for separate sentences. The four sections germane to the discussion are sections 141, 149, 319 and s. 349. Section 141 "Fifth" provides that an assembly that does any of the acts mentioned in the section by means of criminal force is an unlawful assembly punishable under s. 143. Section 149 enacts a rule of constructive liability, and s. 319 includes in the definition of hurt the causing of bodily pain, while s. 349 defines criminal force in large terms and would include the causing of hurt, though in the punitive sections it is limited to common assaults. Now, if we take all these sections together their cumulative effect seems to be that the offence of rioting does necessarily postulate the use of some force, and that, therefore, where in such offence hurt is caused by a person or persons, unknown, the rioters cannot be separately convicted of the two offences of rioting and the causing of hurt, and it has been so held in some cases.<sup>1</sup>

(1) Ghulam Muhammed, 7 L. 484. (2) Mamrez, 89 I. C. (C.) 390. (3) Ghulam Rasul, (1925) L. 819. (4) 4 M. H. C. R. (App.) 13. (5) Shunker, 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. 312; Sheikh Mudun, 1 W. R. 27; Sreemunt, 2 W. R. 63; Seeb Churn, 11 W. R. 12. (6) Nuzur Ali, 6 N. W. P. H. C. R. 39. (7) Rameshar Rai, 1 A. 379. (8) Narayan, 2 B. H. C. R. 392. (9) Bichuk v. Auhuck, 6 W. R. 5; Sahroe, 8 W. R. 31.

484. But it is, of course, clear that where any of the rioters is found to have caused hurt, he becomes personally liable for his act, since section 149 has then no application, and it has been so held.<sup>2</sup> But on the first point the cases are, in spite of the amendment of s. 35 of the Procedure Code by no means unanimous, since some cases have held before the enactment and still continue to hold that since the use of criminal force does not include the causing of hurt a dual conviction even in those cases is legal, though the sentence must not exceed that prescribed for rioting as provided in this section.<sup>3</sup>

485. The difference between the two points of view depends upon the quantum of force included in s. 141. It is agreed on all hands that it does not imply the use of unlimited force or violence, e.g., the causing of grievous hurt or death, though some cases go the length of including grievous hurt as comprised in s. 141; but in view of the amendment of s. 35 of the Procedure Code these cases should no longer be treated as authoritative.

486. Turning now to the amendment of s. 35 of the Procedure Code, its effect is to emphasize the control of this section in a conviction for two or more offences, not necessarily "distinct" as under the unamended section. This still leaves the main question still undecided.

487. There can be no doubt that the use of some force or violence is necessary to constitute rioting, and so long as it is limited to the extent the rioters had decided to use it or its members had anticipated that it would be used, the offence is a single one, and all would be equally liable for it.<sup>4</sup> But if the force or violence used is such as could have been never anticipated by the rioters then they could not be convicted of the offences so committed though they may be all guilty of rioting.<sup>5</sup>

488. The question then depends upon two other questions, namely, (a) what was the amount of force or violence used, and (b) could the rioters have foreseen it—both of which are questions of fact, and not of law. In case (a) the actual assailant may be convicted of a specific offence, committed on individual responsibility, if its commission could not have been foreseen by the rest. If it could have been,

(1) Nilmony Poddar, 16 C. 442 F. B.; overruling contra in Lokenath, 11 C. 349; Kiamuddi, 51 C. 79; Ponniah Lopes, 57 M. 643; Bajo Singh, 8 Pat. 274; Basiruddin, 101 I. C. (C.) 660; Amiruddin, (1925) C. 217; Harendra Barman, (1931) C. 606; Baradi, (1909) 3 S. L. R. 224.

(2) Mohur Mir, 16 C. 725; Ferrasat, 19 C. 105; Ram Angutha, 40 C. 511; Kapil v. Rabhani, (1925) C. 1039.

(3) Bana Punja, 17 B. 260 F. B.; Malu, 23 B. 706 F. B.; Piru, 49 B. 916; Ram Sarup, 7 A. 757 F.B. following Dungar Singh, 7 A. 29; followed in Bisheshar, 9 A. 645; Wajir Jan, 10 A. 58; Sotha Valan v. Rama Kone, 56 M. 481.

(4) Ferrasat, 19 C. 105 Ramdarsan Mahton (1929) Pat. 206.

(5) Sothavalan v. Rama, 56 M. 481.

they may be equally convicted with the actual offenders. In this view the construction of this section presents no difficulty. For the use of some force being a part of the offence of rioting, it cannot be separately punished; but as "the causing of grievous hurt or murder cannot be merely described as the use of force or violence," it is a distinct crime and, as such, separately punishable. And as the liability of aiders and abettors is, in this respect, subject to s. 149, co-extensive with that of the principal offender, it follows that if the knowledge of the commission of that offence could have been foreseen by the other rioters, they would then be equally guilty of it (§§ 281-285).

489. Same Facts constituting Different Offences.—The second para-

Paragraph 2. graph deals with cases in which the same facts constitute different offences either under the Code or under different laws. Offences under ss. 143 and 146, 152 and 353,<sup>1</sup> or under 182 and 211 or under 417 and 420,<sup>2</sup> 323 and 324, 325 and 327, 394 and 397,<sup>3</sup> 435 and 436<sup>4</sup> are examples of such offences under the Code. In such cases the offence is one, though it is differently described, and consequently there cannot be a double penalty for one act<sup>5</sup> (§§ 477-480). There is a large number of offences described in the Code in which the principal offence is the same, but the presence of aggravating or extenuating circumstances requires enhanced or reduced punishment, which has led to the numerical multiplication of offences, but which are all related to the principal offence as genera and species. In all such cases, there cannot be two convictions but only one under the more appropriate of the two sections.<sup>6</sup> For when one set of aggravating circumstances properly attaches to an act making it an offence, another set should not be applied to the same act unless there be in the mind of the offender a wholly separate intention. In some English cases, one act or set of acts of the accused person has been held punishable under two different statutes and a double conviction and sentence has been sustained.

490. In such cases the intention of the Legislature is to guard two interests of different species, and to prevent the person, who has offended against both, from escaping with a penalty provided for the defence of one interest only. So where the accused were convicted for having climbed on to the foot of a warehouse, and set fire to it, with the intention of destroying it and its contents, the Court held that they could not be convicted on two counts, first under s. 436 of mischief in destroying a building used for the custody of property, and secondly under s. 435 of mischief by causing damage to property, to the amount of upwards Rs. 100, and it, therefore, set aside the conviction for the minor offence under s. 435.<sup>7</sup> So in another case, where the accused had been convicted of cheating both under ss. 417 and 420, the Court set aside the cumulative sentence under s. 420, holding that as the act was the same, the accused could not be subjected to a double penalty.<sup>8</sup> So where a mother killed her child by criminal negligence, she was held liable only under s. 304 and not both under ss. 304 and 317,<sup>9</sup> though in such a case a charge under both the sections would seem to be an appropriate one. As Straight, J., remarked: "The criminal exposure under s. 317 was the direct cause of the death of the child, and therefore the crime instead of stopping at s. 317, death being caused, took the more serious shape under s. 304. It was, of course, perfectly proper to frame a charge upon s. 317, because had any question arisen about the cause of death being the exposure, the transaction would have resumed its character under s. 317."<sup>10</sup> So, as the offence of unlawful assembly is included in the offence of rioting, there cannot be a conviction both under s. 143 and s. 146.<sup>11</sup> So there cannot be a double conviction for being in possession of implements and materials for the purpose of using the same for counterfeiting king's coin (s. 235) as well as for performing a part in the process of

(1) Ferrasat, 19 C. 105.

(2) Francis Xavier, (1890) B. U. C. 506.

(3) Mamrez, (1926) L. 47.

(4) Dod Basaya, 11 B. H. C. R. 13

(5) Per Lush, J. in Berry v. Henderson, L. R. 5 Q. B. 296 (302).

(6) Dharm Deo Singh, 35 I. C. (A.) 978.

(7) Dod Basaya, 11 B. H. C. R. 13.

(8) Francis Xavier, (1890) B. U. C. 506.

(9) Banni, 2 A. 349.

(10) Ib.

(11) Meelan v. Dwarka Nath, (1864) W. R. 7.

counterfeiting king's coin (s. 223),<sup>1</sup> or for counterfeiting king's coin ;<sup>2</sup> or culpable homicide (s. 304) as well as for being a member of an unlawful assembly armed with deadly weapons ;<sup>3</sup> for dishonestly receiving property (s. 411) as well as for assisting in concealment of stolen property (s. 414) ;<sup>4</sup> for abduction with intent to rob (s. 369) as well as theft from the person of a child so abducted ;<sup>5</sup> for house trespass and an attempt to murder by the trespasser ;<sup>6</sup> grievous hurt (s. 326) and dacoity with grievous hurt (s. 397) ;<sup>7</sup> of adultery (s. 497) as well as for enticing away for the purpose of illicit intercourse (s. 498) ;<sup>8</sup> for abetment of abduction of a woman (ss. 109 and 498) and for her wrongful confinement (s. 343).<sup>9</sup> For the same reason the Court quashed the double conviction for offences under ss. 354 and 506, holding that the intimidation by throwing a knife was a part of the assault complained of.<sup>10</sup>

491. Compound Offences.—The third paragraph deals with the plurality

Paragraph 3. of acts, one or more of which are themselves criminal and which, when combined, give rise to a different offence, in which case also law limits the punishment to any one of such offences. So interpreting a similar clause in the old Procedure Code of 1872,<sup>11</sup> the Madras Court remarked, "Where several facts aggregated form one offence, and, if severed, constitute several, the offender may be charged with every offence committed, but the utmost punishment awardable is the extreme punishment for the concrete or for one of the separate offences."<sup>12</sup> There are many such offences in the Code. The case presented in the illustration to s. 35 of the Procedure Code, upon which the Courts at one time were divided, is an offence in point. There it is enacted that house-breaking with intent to commit theft (s. 457) and theft (s. 380) are two acts constituting one offence under s. 457,<sup>13</sup> but the two acts of house-breaking (s. 453) and theft (s. 380) are by themselves criminal though their combination produces an offence of a different kind (s. 457), which is distinct from the two offences of which it is made up. In such a case, the section declares that the punishment shall be in accordance with the last paragraph to be presently considered. The same rule applies to cases in which the same person is charged for abetment as well as attempt. So is a case where the accused was convicted of attempt to commit house-breaking by night (ss. 457 and 511), of receiving stolen property (s. 411), of abetment of his confederates in house-breaking by night (s. 109), and of being a member of an unlawful assembly (s. 143), the Court upheld the conviction only for attempted house-breaking, quashing the convictions under the other sections.<sup>14</sup> So a gang of dacoits cannot be convicted of dacoity as well as of abetment of it, in so far as they assist one another. An offence under s. 459, causing grievous hurt whilst committing house-trespass or house-breaking, is a composite offence, of which the elements are (a) house-trespass (s. 448), or (b) house-breaking (s. 453) and (c) causing of grievous hurt (s. 325 or s. 326). So s. 460 is made up of offences punishable under ss. 304, 325 and 456. Other illustrations could be easily multiplied were it necessary. But they all refer to offences in which the presence of some additional circumstance constitutes either a graver offence of the same kind, or a different offence altogether. The words "constitute an offence" as used in this paragraph refer to the definition of offences contained in the Code, irrespective of the identity or non-identity of the evidence whereby the several acts are proved.<sup>15</sup> So where a person falsely personated a public servant (s. 170) and using his position as such, committed extortion (s. 383 or s. 384), it was held that

(1) Hoyat, (1905) P. R. No. 14.

(2) Bishandas, 71 I. C. (L.) 700.

(3) Rubbeeoolah, 7 W. R. 13.

(4) 4 M. H. C. R. (App.) 13.

(5) Noujan, 7 M. H. C. R. 375.

(6) Barkat, 60 I. C. (L.) 54.

(7) Kottaigadu, 30 I. C. (M.) 439; Mabi, 25 B. 706; distinguished in Lab Singh, (1923) Lah. 291.

(8) Pochun Chung, 2 W. R. 35.

(9) Ishwar Chandra Jogee, (1874) W. R. 21.

(10) Nga Lu Nyun, 4 Bur. L. J. 67, 10 I. C.

771.

(11) Act X of 1972, ss. 452, 456.

(12) Noujan, 7 M. H. C. R. 375.

(13) Mahavir, 1 Bom. L. R. 69; Nag Pru, (1886) S. J. L. B. 300. It was so held in the older cases; Tunaokoch, 2 W. R. 63; Chytun Bowra, 5 W. R. 49; Nobo Pullee, 6 W. R. 49; Mussahur, 6 W. R. 92; Sahroe, 8 W. R. 31; Ramcharan, 6 W. R. 39, F. B.; Noujan, 7 M. H. C. R. 375.

(14) Fateh Khan, 8 Bom. L. R. 835.

(15) Wazir Jan, 10 A. 58.

as the two acts constituted distinct offences, and as their combination did not constitute a different offence, the section offered no bar to his conviction under both the sections. As Mahmud, J., remarked: "It is not to the identity or non-identity of the evidence, nor merely to the individual facts of each case as to the practicability of the offence, but to the definitions of offences as to the elements of the corpus delicti that we must look for deciding the question as to the applicability of the latter part of s. 71 of the Indian Penal Code for purposes of assessing punishment.<sup>1</sup>

492. Quantum of Punishment.—The last clause lays down the quantum of punishment in the three classes of cases previously dealt

Paragraph 4. with. Its wording has to be noted, for it has given rise to some controversy. It will be observed that all that the clause enacts is that the maximum punishment in cases covered by the section shall be the maximum punishment fixed for any one of such offences. The words "the Court which tries him could award" do not refer to the jurisdiction of the Court but to the penalties affixed to offences, the object of the rule being to limit the offender's punishment in such cases to the maximum sentence for the gravest offence that his acts may disclose. So far the clause appears to be clear. But subject to that maximum, the sentence should be passed in respect of only the gravest offence, or it should be distributed over the different offences of which a person may have been found guilty. The clause only prohibits the passing of a severer sentence than is the maximum provided for any one offence. It does not prohibit multifarious sentences following upon multifarious convictions. In other words, prima facie the section regulates punishment and not procedure. It only lays down the principle without affecting any rules of procedure not inconsistent with it.

493. The question, therefore, whether on conviction at one trial of a person for offences comprised in the section, it is allowable to pass only one or more sentences, is then a question which has nothing to do with the Code. It is a question of mere procedure, for which reference must be made to the Procedure Code for guidance. Now, if we turn to s. 35 of that Code,<sup>2</sup> we find it laying down the following rules:—

- (a) On conviction for several offences—the Court may sentence for all of them.
- (b) Such sentences may be either concurrent or consecutive.
- (c) But the maximum consecutive sentence shall in no case exceed imprisonment for more than 14 years; or twice the amount of punishment which a Magistrate is ordinarily empowered to inflict, whichever is less.
- (d) Reservation (c) does not apply to concurrent sentences.

72. In all cases in which judgment is given that a person is guilty of one of several offences specified in the judgment, but that it is doubtful of which of these offences he is guilty, the offender shall be punished for the offence for which the lowest punishment is provided if the same punishment is not provided for all.<sup>3</sup>

Punishment of person guilty of one of several offences, the judgment stating that it is doubtful of which.

494. Analogous Law.—This section was clause 61 in the Bill and its object, as explained by the Codifiers, was to provide against offender's escape from punishment for any offence, when it was certain that he had committed one or the other of two or more offences for which he was tried, though it could not be held with certainty that he had committed one of them to the exclusion of the other. Take, for example, the case of theft and criminal breach of trust. The offender is found to have fraudulently misappropriated property, but it is not certain whether his act amounts to theft or criminal breach of trust. He cannot escape punishment for both, consequently, this section provides for his conviction in the alternative.<sup>4</sup>

(1) Wazir Jan, 10 A. 58.

(2) Act V of 1898.

(3) See § 422, supra.

(4) Vide Note A, Reprint pp. 105, 106.

495. The provisions of ss. 236 and 267 (3) of the Code of Criminal Procedure supplement the provisions here enacted.

496. Principle.—The section only applies when the Court has no doubt about the facts, nor of the offender's criminality, being only doubtful about the specific offence his act amounts to. In such a case, this section enables it to convict the offender in the alternative (§ 494).

497. Meaning of Words.—“It is doubtful of which of these offences he is guilty” : The doubt exists not as to the accused's guilt but as to the nature of his guilt. “The offender shall be punished...” : The court has to give him the benefit of the doubt as regards the sentence, but he cannot escape scot-free.

498. Conviction for Doubtful Offences.—This section and the cognate sections of the Criminal Procedure Code (Ss. 236 and 267 (3)) deal with a case in which the facts are certain and they amount to an offence, but which offence it is not certain. In such a case, the Court being in doubt as to the offence, gives him the benefit of its doubt in the sentence which it passes in view of the lesser of the two or more offences, of any one of which he is found guilty. It will be observed that the language of the section would seem to suggest that in such a case, the offender is to be punished “for the offence for which the lowest punishment is provided,” and from which it might be argued that the offender is entitled to an acquittal for the graver of the two offences. But this is not its meaning, though its language is defective. As is clearly expressed in the Code of Criminal Procedure, in such a case the proper course is to convict in the alternative,<sup>1</sup> only the sentence being regulated in view of the minor offence. So, where a person is convicted of two offences in the alternative, one of which is murder, the section is an authority for punishing him with only imprisonment, though that would not have been the sentence admissible, if the offender had been only guilty of murder.<sup>2</sup> Of course, judgment in the alternative cannot be passed in cases in which it is doubtful whether the accused person is guilty of any one of the several offences charged.<sup>3</sup> In such a case, the accused is entitled to be discharged, for it is not a case of doubtful offence but of doubtful criminality.<sup>4</sup> The section applies only to cases of certain criminality but uncertain offence.

73. Whenever any person is convicted of an offence for which under this Code the Court has power to sentence him to rigorous imprisonment, the Court may, by its sentence, order that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of the imprisonment to which he is sentenced, not exceeding three months in the whole, according to the following scale, that is to say :—

a time not exceeding one month if the term of imprisonment shall not exceed six months :

a time not exceeding two months if the term of imprisonment shall exceed six months and [shall not exceed one]<sup>5</sup> year :

a time not exceeding three months if the term of imprisonment shall exceed one year.<sup>6</sup>

499. Analogous Law.—Under English Law, solitary confinement, though at one time legal was rarely awarded<sup>7</sup> and was finally abolished by the Statute Law Revision Act, 1893.<sup>8</sup> This section prescribes the limit within which solitary confinement may be awarded. It repeats an old English rule,<sup>9</sup> now obsolete as a form of torture which fails in its effect on the public. When unduly prolonged it leads to mental derangement.

(1) Tarinee, 7 W. R. 13.

(2) Sahee Singh, (1906) A. W. N. 93.

(3) Partapa, (1913) 11 P. R. No. 11, 21 I. C. 904.

(4) Jamurha, 7 N. W. P. H. C. R. 137 ; Khan Muhommed, (1887) P. R. No. 11.

(5) See § 422, supra.

(6) These words were substituted for the words “be less than a” by s. 5 of the Indian Penal Code Amendment Act, 1882 (VIII of 1882).

(7) 7 & 8 Geo. IV, cc. 29, 30 ; 9 Geo. IV, cc. 55, 56 ; 11 & 12 Vict., c. 159 ; 14 & 15 Vict., v. 92 ; Larceny Act, 1861 (24 & 25 Vict., c. 96).

(8) 56 & 57 Vict., c. 54.

(9) Bentham, IV, p. 49 ; X, p. 530.

500. Principle.—Solitary confinement is isolation of the prisoner from human intercourse and society. It causes a feeling of oppression due to the gregarious instincts of man. Prolonged isolation from human communion becomes intolerable and often leads to mental derangement. When not unduly prolonged, it gives him time to reflect upon the utility of society which his acts were calculated to destroy. The feeling of loneliness has often a chastening influence upon man. On debased nature it has no influence at all. Indeed, the pangs of solitary confinement are felt most unequally by different prisoners. To some the solitary cell is a hermitage,<sup>1</sup> to others it is an infernal dungeon. To minds blank and unthinking it offers a salutary lesson. The sentence has been, therefore, reserved for hardened criminals, and as a punishment for atrocity or brutality.

501. Meaning of Words.—“Solitary confinement for any portion,” which implies that solitary confinement cannot extend to the whole term of imprisonment.<sup>2</sup> “Not exceed three months,” i.e., out of any one punishment. There may then be solitary confinement of as many three months as there are convictions<sup>3</sup> whether simultaneously or successively, but this is never done.<sup>4</sup> “Not exceeding one month”: See section 49 for the definition of a “month.” For the purpose of solitary confinement a month signifies a period equal to the average duration of a calendar month, that is, (disregarding fractions) 30 days.<sup>5</sup>

502. Solitary Confinement.—The sentence of solitary confinement is a mode of undergoing the sentence of rigorous imprisonment. It is not a substantive sentence by itself. As such, an order that a portion of a sentence shall be suffered in solitary confinement is not a judgment against which there can be appeal. It is an order which must be, however, passed and pronounced with the sentence. And as the only restriction made in the section is that it may be added only in cases in which the Court awards the sentence of rigorous imprisonment, it follows that it cannot be ordered in offences which are either not punishable with rigorous imprisonment, or in which the offender is not so punished. If he is so punished, it is immaterial that the trial was summary, for the mode of trial does not affect that sentence.<sup>6</sup>

503. But since it is a sentence which is reserved only for an offence “for which under this Code” the Court has power to pass a sentence of imprisonment, it follows that solitary confinement cannot be awarded on conviction for offences under special or local laws.<sup>7</sup> And since solitary confinement “is to be ordered for any portion or portions of the imprisonment to which he is sentenced,” it follows that where rigorous imprisonment is no part of the substantive sentence, solitary confinement cannot be awarded.<sup>8</sup> It is, therefore, illegal in a case in which the offender has been sentenced to imprisonment in default of the payment of fine,<sup>9</sup> or in default of furnishing security for good behaviour.<sup>10</sup>

504. Solitary confinement is then a sentence reserved only for cases in which a person is sentenced to rigorous imprisonment or in a case in which rigorous imprisonment is the sentence prescribed by the Code. In that case, the section empowers the Court to direct that a portion of the imprisonment up to the limit of three months shall be suffered in solitary confinement. As, however, this is a period fixed for any one sentence, the accused may be sentenced to as many three months of solitary

(1) “Stone walls do not a prison make
Nor iron bars a cage;
Minds innocent and quiet take
That for a hermitage.”
To Althea from Prison.—Richard Lovelace (1618-1653).

(2) Nyan Sukh Methar, 3 B. L. R. 49.

(3) Nihala, (1877) P. R. No. 11;
Khushal, (1877) P. R. No. 13.

(4) Fatta, (1878) P. R. No. 16.

(5) Ib.

(6) Anna Khan, 6 A. 83.

(7) Gholam Hossain, (1866) P. R. No.

120; Hurnarain, (1870) P. R. No. 20;
Manawar, (1875) P. R. No. 4; Mukh Ram,
(1879) P. R. No. 24; Jammu, (1889) P.
R. No. 17; Gurdit Singh, (1889) P. R. No.
17; Nga Kun Ba, (1899) P. J. L. B. 554;
Bidha, 21 A. L. J. 914; Nazir Singh, 76
I. C. 184.

(8) Umar Singh, (1869) P. R. No. 20;
Bunsi, (1882) P. R. No. 9.

(9) Jita, (1873) P. R. No. 26; Jam-
dad, (1887) P. R. No. 53.

(10) Kundan, 36 A. 495; Phakkar, (1927)
A. 472.

confinements as there are convictions, though it is the most unusual course (§ 500) and one which is only barely legal.<sup>1</sup> In fact, it would be as wrong to accumulate sentences of solitary confinements, as it would be wrong to pass several sentences of whipping amounting to 30 stripes each on different simultaneous occasions.<sup>2</sup>

505. Whenever the Court sentences a person to solitary confinement, it must specify the exact period for which that sentence is passed.<sup>3</sup> Being a sentence highly penal, the Court must not overstep the strict limits provided by the section. It has, for instance, no power to direct that the sentence of solitary confinement shall be executed in the first week of every month.<sup>4</sup>

506. No Solitary Confinement.—Since the section empowers the infliction of solitary confinement for a conviction under this Code, it follows that it is not competent to the Court to impose that sentence in a conviction had under any other law, e.g., the Criminal Tribes Act<sup>5</sup> or the Arms Act.<sup>6</sup>

74. In executing a sentence of solitary confinement, such confinement shall in no case exceed fourteen days at a time, with intervals between the periods of solitary confinement of not less duration than such periods, and, when the imprisonment awarded shall exceed three months, the solitary confinement shall not exceed seven days in any one month of the whole imprisonment awarded, with intervals between the periods of solitary confinement of not less duration than such periods.

507. Analogous Law.—This section has been enacted on medical grounds. Continuous solitary confinement is conducive to physical deterioration and mental derangement. It has, therefore, been decided that it shall be at least regularly intermittent.

508. Limit of Solitary Confinement.—This section regulates the execution of the sentence of solitary confinement, as the last section limits its duration. According to the rule here prescribed, the mode of execution depends upon the term of the substantive imprisonment. If it exceeds 3 months, then solitary confinement must be worked out in smaller instalments. For the term being long, the prisoner can serve out his sentence in shorter spells. On the other hand, where the substantive sentence is itself short, that is, where it does not exceed three months, then the longest period of solitary confinement at any one time may extend to a fortnight, but it shall not be more. This is, of course, the maximum term of solitary confinement which the prisoner may be subject to at a time. But where the whole term of imprisonment to which the prisoner was sentenced was only a fortnight, he could not be condemned to pass the whole of that term in solitary confinement.<sup>7</sup> Indeed, as the last section contemplates, only a portion of a sentence can be ordered to be passed in solitary confinement.

509. In case of longer sentences, no single period of solitary confinement shall exceed seven days in any one month. If, therefore, the sentence was for a term of one year and one day out of which 3 months were to be passed in solitary confinement, the order as to solitary confinement, though legal under the last section,<sup>8</sup> would be illegal under this, for three months could not be passed in solitary confinement within a year and a day, having regard to the rule enacted in this section. The Court accordingly reduced the period of solitary confinement to 84 days.<sup>9</sup> But this does not appear to be the view in the Punjab where in a case of 4 months'

(1) Ibrahim, (1879) P. R. No. 7; Abdulla Jan, (1905) P. R. No. 37; Nga Po Thain, (1897) P. J. L. B. 596; Nga Kaing, (1898) 1 U. B. R. 247; U. B. C. M. S. 100; (1892) 1 U. B. R. 146; Patiram, 5 C. P. L. R. 23; Dangar Khan, 68 I. C. 817; (1923) L. 104. In U. B. C. M. S. 10, Nga Sein Po, 1 R. 306, cumulative sentence of solitary confinement is said to be illegal.

(2) Ratiram, 5 C. P. L. R. 23.

(3) Rajada, (1869) P. R. No. 33.

(4) Jiman, 5 C. P. L. R. 17; Duni Chand, 3 P. W. R. 1913.

(5) Act III of 1911; Bidha, L. R. 5 A. 19.

(6) Nazir Singh, 76 I. C. (P.) 184.

(7) Nyan Suk Mether, 3 B. L. R. A. 49 (A. Cr.).

(8) See s. 73, last clause.

(9) Anon, (1879) 1 Weir 15.

rigorous imprisonment, of which one month was ordered to be passed in solitary confinement, the Court upheld the sentence as legal though its execution for more than 28 days was admitted to be not possible.<sup>1</sup>

75. Whoever, having been convicted,—

Enhanced punishment for certain offences.

(a) by a Court in British India, of an offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of this Code with imprisonment of either description for a term of three years or upwards, or shall be guilty of any offence punishable under either of those chapters with like imprisonment for the like term, shall be subject for every such subsequent offence to transportation for life, or to imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years.

(b) by a Court or tribunal in the territories of any Native Prince or State in India acting under the general or special authority of the Governor-General in Council or of any Local Government, of an offence which would, if committed in British India, have been punishable under those chapters of this Code with like imprisonment for the like term,

510. Analogous Law.—Section 75 was substituted for the original<sup>2</sup> by the Indian Penal Code Amendment Act,<sup>3</sup> which came into force on the 18th February 1910. The amendment was explained to meet the case of a habitual offender who, though convicted of serious offences against property, in a place like Berar, which is only technically a Native State, cannot be adequately punished upon his subsequent conviction for a like offence in the Central Provinces.<sup>4</sup> The amendment does not take account of a previous conviction by a Native Prince or State in alliance with His Majesty, though a conviction by an official in such a State appointed generally by the Governor-General in Council or a Local Government would be good for an enhanced sentence under this section. The question under clause (b) would thus, in each case, be whether the previous conviction was had by a tribunal “acting under the general or special authority of the Governor-General in Council or of any Local Government.” A person whose services are merely lent to a Native Darbar by which he is constituted a tribunal is obviously not such a person. On the other hand, persons appointed to be Diwans and Magistrates in Native States which, owing to the minority or incapacity of their chiefs, are under management by the British Government are clearly such tribunals for the time being. Consequently, the question now arising in each such case would be not as to where, but by whom the offender had been previously convicted.

511. The concluding words of this section “or to imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to ten years” were substituted for “or to double the amount of punishment to which he would otherwise have been liable for the same ; provided that he shall not, in any case, be liable to imprisonment for a term exceeding ten years” by the Amending Act of 1886.<sup>5</sup> In its application to hill-tribes to which the Kachin Hill-tribes Regulation<sup>6</sup> is applied,<sup>7</sup> the Code is to be read as if the following additional section were inserted :—

“75A. Notwithstanding anything in this Code, or in any other enactment for the time being in force, a person convicted of any offence punishable under this Code or under any other enactment shall be punishable with fine in lieu of, or in addition to any other punishment to which he may be liable.”

In the Chin Hills the Code is also to be read as if this section (save a few verbal differences and similarly worded), were inserted.<sup>8</sup>

(1) Fatta, (1878) P. R. No. 7.

(2) For the text section as originally drafted see 1 Penal Law (4th Ed.) p. 35 footnote 18.

(3) Act III of 1910.

(4) The Mover's (Sir Herbert Risley's) speech in Council, Gazette of India, Pt. 6 (February 5, 1910), pp. 13, 14 ; Syed Khader

Sahib, 1930 M. W. N. 173.

(5) Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act (X of 1886), s. 22.

(6) Reg. I of 1895.

(7) Ib., ss. 1 (3), 3.

(8) Chin Hills Regulation (Reg. V of 1896).

512. Chapter XII deals with offences relating to coin and Government stamp (ss. 230-263A), Chapter XVII with offences against property (ss. 378-462).

513. Sections 221(7), 310, 311 and 315 of the Code of Criminal Procedure should be read as supplementing the law as here set out.

514. Charge.—The procedure relating to a charge under this section will be presently discussed (§§ 521-522). The charge after a previous conviction may be thus worded—

(i) Previous Imprisonment. I (name and office of the Magistrate or Judge) do hereby charge you—as follows—that you, on or about the—day of—, at—committed—and thereby committed an offence punishable under section—(or section—where charge is in the alternative) of the Indian Penal Code and within my cognizance (or within the cognizance of the Court of Session or High Court) And you the said—stand further charged that you, before the committing of the said offence, had been convicted on the—day of—of an offence punishable under Chapter XII (or Chapter XVII) of the Indian Penal Code with imprisonment for a term of three years, to wit, the offence—, which conviction is still in force and effect, and that you are thereby liable to enhanced punishment under section 75 of the Indian Penal Code.

And I hereby direct that you be tried (by the said Court of Session, or High Court) on the said charge.

515. In all cases in which a previous conviction of any offence renders an accused person liable to whipping on conviction on the charge for which he is under trial, and it is intended to prove such previous conviction to enable the Court to add the sentence of whipping, the following charge would have to be added :—

(ii) Previous Whipping. That at a date previous to the date of the offence of—now charged against you—viz., on the—you—were convicted by the Court of—of the offence of—specified in section 2 or 4 (as the case may be) of Act VI of 1864, and that this conviction of—is still in full force and effect, and being a conviction for the same specific offence as that now charged against you, renders you liable in case you should now be again convicted of—to the punishment of whipping in addition to the punishment provided for the said offence by the Indian Penal Code.<sup>1</sup>

516. It should be noted that though no conviction can be legally had under this section without a specific charge, it does not follow that an enhanced sentence passed under this section constitutes an independent conviction. Consequently, a person convicted of, say robbery and sentenced to enhanced punishment under this section is not convicted of separate offences within the meaning of s. 35 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, so as to justify the awarding of two separate sentences.<sup>2</sup> As this section makes a previous conviction relevant, s. 54 of the Indian Evidence Act is no obstacle to proof of a previous character, which must, however, be adduced only after the accused is found guilty.<sup>3</sup>

517. As the section applies only to persons “convicted of an offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of this Code,” it had been held to be inapplicable to convictions for offences comprised in other Chapters, e.g., s. 369<sup>4</sup> or s. 511<sup>5</sup> or under special or local or other laws.<sup>6</sup> And as the section is a part of a Code which has of its own force no operation beyond British India, a conviction in a foreign State which has adopted the Code, is clearly beyond its comprehension.<sup>7</sup> And as to offences under the Code itself, it avowedly applies only to cases in which both the previous conviction and the trial are under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII. It has been consequently held that, if the

(1) As to the offences punishable in case of second conviction with whipping in addition to other punishment, see ss. 3 and 4 of the Whipping Act (VI of 1864) and s. 391 (3), Cr. P. C.

(2) Muthuakka, 30 I. C. (M.) 435.

(3) Ismail Ali Bai, 39 B. 326; Followed in Suban Sahib, 52 M. 358; Duming, 5 Bom. L. R. 1034.

(4) Fattu, 75 I. C. (L.) (1923) L. 286.

(5) Brij Behari, (1926) 88 I. C. (A.) (1926)

A. 44; Banne, 24 O. C. 260; 64 I. C. 142; Mohammad Hussain, 29 P. L. R. 34.

(6) Moluck Chand, 3 W. R. 17; Hurpaul, 4 W. R. 9; Budhun, 10 C. L. R. 392; Khan Muhammad, (1904) P. R. No. 17; Private Johnson, (1933) Pesh. 6.

(7) Bahawal, 21 I. C. 904; (1913) P. R. No. 11 (Cr.); Muhammad Yar, (1904) P. R. No. 2 Venkatti Shetti, 1 Weir 40; Lal Singh, 7 C. P. L. R. 24.

previous conviction was for theft, and the trial for an attempt to commit the offence of theft, and offence punishable under section 379 read with section 511 of the Code, this section would not apply, as attempted theft, as such is no offence in Chapter XVII, and section 511 is outside that Chapter.<sup>1</sup> For the same reason if the previous conviction was for an attempt and the subsequent trial for a completed offence falling within those Chapters, the previous conviction for the purpose of enhanced punishment cannot be taken into account. And as abetment of an offence falls into the same category, a person guilty of abetment, or on trial for it, may legitimately object to the evidence of a previous conviction against him.<sup>2</sup>

518. Again, as was observed by Prinsep, J., in a case, the object of the section being to provide for additional sentence, not for a less severe sentence, on a second conviction, recourse should not be had to it if the punishment for the offence committed is itself sufficient.<sup>3</sup> Nor was it the intention of the Legislature to enormously enhance the heinousness of petty offences. Where, for instance, a person convicted of receipt of property acquired by dacoity had undergone a sentence of seven years' imprisonment, and he was afterwards convicted of theft of articles of trifling value, the High Court considered the application of this section inappropriate.<sup>4</sup> But the value of property is often the result of an accident. The important question is the intention of the man and his character and attitude towards society,<sup>5</sup> the nature of the offence committed and the gravity of the risk involved. So, where the appellant after four previous convictions for theft had been for the fifth time convicted of the theft of property of no great value, the Court considered the sentence of seven years' transportation by no means excessive.<sup>6</sup> So, while there is no limitation against the applicability of the section, still, as a matter of judicial discretion, the Court is loth to take up an old conviction only for the purpose of awarding enhanced sentence.<sup>7</sup> The section should not be applied mechanically in all cases in which there has been a previous conviction. The interval of time that may have since elapsed, the age and character of the accused during this interval and the necessity of enhanced sentence should all be considered. So, where a man, 55 years old, was convicted of pocket-picking by making a snatch at a purse in a traveller's hand, dropping it at once when the owner called out, and it appeared that he had been previously convicted of pocket-picking in a crowd or a fair 10 years back, the Court considered that, having regard to his old age, his good character during the interval since his last conviction, the fact that he had probably yielded to a sudden temptation, that he was not a skilled thief, and that he had a large family dependent on him for support his previous conviction might be disregarded, and it accordingly reduced his sentence of transportation for seven years to rigorous imprisonment for one year, though he had been previously sentenced to four years' rigorous imprisonment for the same offence.<sup>8</sup> It goes without saying that the highly penal provisions of the section are not retrospective and have no application to an offence committed before the passing of the Code.<sup>9</sup>

519. Principle.—This section was no part of the original Bill, as it left the hands of Lord Macaulay and his colleagues. It was, however, added before the Bill was passed into law, and it was justified on the ground that repeated attacks on property merited more deterrent treatment than the Code had made provision for.

(1) Damu Haree, 21 W. R. 35; Sricharan, 14 C. 357; Nana Rahim, 5 B. 140; Kashia, 10 Bom. L. R. 26; Ram Dayal, 3 A. 773; Ajudhia, 17 A. 120; Bharosa, 17 A. 123; Banne, 64 I. C. (O.) 142; Motawel Pakuran, 1 Weir 37; Deva Singh, (1872) P.R. No. 27; Nihal Singh, (1882) P.R. No. 37; Fattu, (1884) P. R. No. 34; Chandrai, 11 I. C. (L.) 623.

(2) Kashia, 10 Bom. L. R. 26.

(3) Sheo Saran, 9 C. 877; Jowahir Singh, 22 I. C. (L.) 759; Ishar Singh, (1926) L. 617.

(4) Shamjee, 1 C. L. R. 481.

(5) Nur Din, (1903) P. R. No. 28.

(6) Nga Kan Tha, (1895) 1 U. B. R. 147.

(7) Nga Lu Gui, (1884) S. J. L. B. 291; Alladin, 29 P. L. R. 59; Indar Singh, (1926) L. 617; Karuppa Thevan, (1929) M. 841; Murido, (1930) S. 58.

(8) Kasim Ali, 6 W. R. 23; Ishar Singh, (1926) L. 617; Labh Singh, 94 I. C. (L.) 365.

(9) Kaushya Yesu, 4 B. H. C. R. 11; Moluckchand, 3 W. R. 17; Hurpaul, 4 W. R. 9; Pubon, 5 W. R. 66.

In the unsettled state of society at the time the Bill was under discussion, and to check the frequent organized plundering then going on, the ordinary penalties of the Code were considered to be inadequate. But, as observed before, the section confers a power, recourse to which need not be had in every case. It is a reserve armoury of the Criminal Court which should be drawn upon only in case of exceptional urgency (§ 518).

520. Meaning of Words.—“Having been convicted”: This means a conviction for an offence and does not include imprisonment awarded for failure to give security under s. 108 or s. 110 of the Code of Criminal Procedure.<sup>1</sup> “Punishable with imprisonment,” that is, the penalty affixed to the offence must be three years or over, though the offender may have been punished with a less sentence. “Shall be subject,” i.e., is liable to. It does not mean that the Court shall be competent to pass such a sentence. Its competency depends upon its jurisdiction. “Subsequent offence” implies that the subsequent offence was committed after the previous conviction.

521. Case for Enhanced Punishment.—Five conditions must be fulfilled before a person can be awarded enhanced punishment under this section:—

- (i) He must have been previously convicted (a) in British India<sup>2</sup> or (b) by any other Court in India acting under the general or special authority of the Governor-General in Council or of any local Government,<sup>3</sup> of an offence which is punishable with imprisonment for at least 3 years.<sup>4</sup>
- (ii) The offence of which he had been convicted, and of which he is subsequently charged, must be one included in Ch. XII or Ch. XVII of the Code.<sup>5</sup>
- (iii) It must have been committed in British India.
- (iv) He must be subsequently charged with an offence punishable with imprisonment for at least 3 years.<sup>6</sup>
- (v) He must have committed it since his previous conviction.<sup>7</sup>

522. The previous conviction referred to in the section naturally assumes and implies the commission of, and the conviction for an offence in point of time prior to the commission of the subsequent offence.<sup>8</sup> If, therefore, a person shown to have been previously convicted but not of an offence previously committed, his conviction cannot be availed of in a subsequent trial for the purpose of enhanced punishment.<sup>9</sup> So the section is inapplicable where the two offences were committed at one and the same time,<sup>10</sup> though in such a case, one conviction may have been made previously. In one case the section was held to apply only to an offence committed by a person after his release from prison “on the ground that the sentence already borne has had no effect in preventing a repetition of his crime, and has been, therefore, insufficient as a warning. But where the prisoner’s conviction has taken place a very short time before, and where no imprisonment under it has yet been undergone, and no time has been given for reformation, it cannot be said that a prisoner has had any opportunity of shewing what the effect of the first sentence would have been upon him, and it would not be just to punish him as though he were an incorrigible offender whom no comparatively light punishment could wean from evil courses.”<sup>11</sup> This is the doctrine of locus pœnitentiæ which, however humane and commendable, appears to find no place in the section. It is no doubt just that a

(1) Murid, (1930) s. 58; Khanu 110 I. C. (L.) 804; Jaimal Singh, (1923) L. 224.

(2) Muthusamy, 58 M. 707 (Conviction out of British India is of no account.)

(3) Bahawal, (1913) P. R. No. 17. 20 I. C. 1007.

(4) Bhanwar, 42 A. 136; Bahawal, 21 I. C. 904, (1913) P. R. No. 11 (Cr.).

(5) Fattu, (1923) L. 286,

(6) Chandaria, 11 I. C. (L.) 623.

(7) Sayad Abdul, (1926) B. 305; Sakya, 5 B. H. C. R. 36; Megha, 1 A. 637; Po So, 9 L. B. R. 77, 42 I. C. 1007.

(8) Ib.

(9) Megha, 1 A. 637.

(10) Jhoomuck, 6 W. R. 90.

(11) Per Seton-Karr and Glover, JJ., in Pubon, 5 W. R. 66.

criminal should have time to reflect before the vengeance of law is visited upon him, but this is a matter for the consideration of the Court. It is not a necessary corollary of law.<sup>1</sup> So much, however, is clear that where a person is convicted at one trial of two or more offences, one conviction cannot be used as a previous conviction for the purpose of enhanced punishment.

523. Procedure for Enhanced Punishment.—The statutory provisions of the Procedure Code bearing upon the question of procedure have been already noted elsewhere (§ 494). Reference to them will shew that three elements are necessary to prove a previous conviction against an accused:—

- (i) It must form a subject-matter of the charge.
- (ii) It must be proved, if denied.<sup>2</sup>
- (iii) The enhanced sentence must be within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate.

524. Why Previous Conviction Charged.—As regards the charge, the Code of Criminal Procedure provides that, if it is intended to prove a previous conviction for the purpose of awarding enhanced punishment, the fact, date, and place of the previous conviction should be stated in the charge. If such a statement is omitted, the Court may add it at any time before sentence is passed.<sup>3</sup> The object of this statement in the charge is to give notice to the accused of his liability to enhanced punishment, and to give him an opportunity of correcting error, if any, prejudicial to him. In order, therefore, to put the accused upon enquiry, mention of the fact, date and place of the previous conviction is essential; otherwise, the accused cannot be legally sentenced to enhanced punishment.<sup>4</sup> The mere mention of the fact that the accused had been previously convicted of offences under the Indian Penal Code,<sup>5</sup> or that he “is an old offender, is obviously insufficient.”<sup>6</sup> Any defect or omission in this respect may be made good by an addition made before the sentence is pronounced; but it cannot be made good afterwards.<sup>7</sup> Nor can there be sufficient compliance with law unless a separate charge under this section is framed and recorded.<sup>8</sup> A previous conviction duly proved entitles the Court to award enhanced sentence for the offence for which the accused is on trial before it. It cannot sentence the accused as if he had been convicted of two distinct offences—the one being the previous conviction.<sup>9</sup> Reference to previous conviction in the charge is not an indictment, but a reference necessary to inform the accused that his offence presents circumstances of aggravation which, though not affecting his present criminality, will call for condign punishment, if the offence is otherwise adequately proved. It is, therefore, laid down that in a case tried by jury or with the aid of assessors, reference to the previous conviction must not be made till after the close of the trial. Reading the previous conviction before its close, is calculated to bias the jury or the assessors, and it is, therefore, sufficient to vitiate the trial.<sup>10</sup>

(1) C. P. Cr. C. No. 19.

(2) Feroze Khan, 26 P. L. R. 843.

(3) Abbulu, (1909) 7 M. L. T. 77; s. 221 (7), Cr. P. C.

(4) Dungri, 10 I. C. (L) 241; Haridas 5 A. 500; in Raghibali, 3 A. 633 F. B. the facts were peculiar, and the accused was therefore held not to have been misled by vagueness of the charge.

(5) Sheikh Jakir, 22 W. R. 39.

(6) Yippika, (1881) Weir 885.

(7) Raj Coomar, 19 W. R. 41; Annoji, B. H. C. Cr. Rul., 27th April, 1873; Mangloo, (1930) L. 544.

(8) Esan Chunder Dey, 21 W. R. 40; Dorasamy, 9 M. 284; Dungri, (1911) P. W. R. No. 40, 10 I. C. 341. In Ismail, 39 B. 326 followed in In re Subramanian, (1916) M. W. N. 327, a previous conviction not charged induced enhanced sentence; but the judgment is (it is submitted) unsound. In Subramanian, (1916) M. W. N. 327, the Sessions Judge who tried the appellant failed to charge him under this section, but before sentencing him questioned him about his previous conviction. The High Court thereupon refused to quash the enhanced sentence, though it pointed out the desirability of separately charging prisoners under this section.

(9) Khalak, 11 A. 393.

(10) Kulum, 10 W. R. 39; Roshun, 5 C. 768; Jhinguri, (1890) A. W. N. 12; but see Nazim, 5 C. W. N. 670 (672).

525. As the sole object of proving a previous conviction is not to eke out

Proof. weak evidence against the accused but to help the Court to determine the measure of punishment,<sup>1</sup> the Magistrate should try to ignore that fact in considering his judgment. And it is only at the close of the trial that evidence of previous conviction should be admitted.<sup>2</sup> Such evidence must be clear and precise,<sup>3</sup> and whenever it is intended to prove it in accordance with section 511 of the Criminal Procedure Code, it must strictly conform to the requirements of that section. An examination of the accused for that purpose is not "proof" of a previous conviction, unless it be an "admission" upon which the Court is authorized to act.<sup>4</sup> And though under section 511 of the Procedure Code a certified copy of the record of the Court or of the sentence or order is sufficient, it must be a copy "certified under the hand of the officer having the custody of the records of the Court in which such conviction was had."<sup>5</sup> A mere kaifat or report from the record office is not sufficient.<sup>6</sup> But a certificate under the hand of the officer in charge of the jail in which the punishment, or any part thereof, was undergone, has been held sufficient proof of conviction. So also it is held proved by the actual warrant of commitment under which punishment was suffered. In every case, of course, the identity of the accused with the person previously convicted must be clearly established.<sup>7</sup>

526. The power of enhanced punishment does not carry with it enhanced

Jurisdiction. power to award it. The jurisdiction of the Magistrate was neither created by the Code, nor is it enlarged or curtailed by it. The fact that enhanced punishment is legal, does not, therefore, imply that it is legal even though inflicted by a Magistrate not possessing the power to inflict it.<sup>8</sup> Whenever a Magistrate considers the infliction of a sentence beyond his competency essential, he should commit the case to the Court of Session.<sup>9</sup>

527. A judgment awarding enhanced sentence must contain the date of the previous conviction and the sentence passed, as well as the particular offence for which it was had. This section does not empower the Sessions Judge to amalgamate a sentence which he is competent to pass upon a prisoner with a sentence under which he is already undergoing imprisonment, and then commute the amalgamated sentence, condemning the prisoner to a longer period of imprisonment than he is liable to suffer for the offence of which he had been last convicted.<sup>10</sup>

528. It should be noted that whipping was never the sentence recognized by the Code (§ 402), and this section gives no authority for passing a sentence of whipping in addition to any other punishment.<sup>11</sup> But such a punishment is not illegal, for provision is made for the addition of the sentence of whipping in certain cases specified in the Whipping Act.<sup>12</sup>

529. Nature of Enhanced Sentence.—It will be observed that the section provides for the enhanced sentence as comprising only of transportation for life, or imprisonment upto 10 years. In other words, the Court, if it awards a sentence of transportation, must sentence the convict to transportation for life. In lieu, however, of such sentence it may sentence the convict to imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to 10 years, and under the provisions of s. 59, it may, in every case in which the offender is punishable with imprisonment for a

(1) Gulab Hamir, (1894) B. U. J. 688 ; 6 M. H. C. R. (App.) 2 ; 1 Weir 36, 37.

(2) Shiboo Mundal, 3 W. R. 38 ; Jehan Mullick, 5 W. R. 67 ; Kristo Behari Dey, 12 C. L. R. 555 ; Bepin Behari, 13 C. L. R. 110.

(3) Naimuddi, 14 W. R. 7 ; Abdul Malik, 52 M. 795. (Police Certificate insufficient.)

(4) S. 310, Cr. P. C. ; Nazim, 5 C. W. N. 670 (672).

(5) S. 511, Cr. P. C.

(6) Sheikh Ramzan, 15 W. R. 53.

(7) Feroze Khan, (1928) L. 107.

(8) Vithaya, (1871) B. U. C. 49 ; David Narsu, 6 Bom. L. R. 548 ; Gulab Hamir, (1894) B. U. C. 688 ; Bahadur, (1872) P. R. No. 41 ; Nga Tun Tha, (1804) P. J. L. R. 78.

(9) Ss. 347, 548, Cr. P. C. ; Ganu Ladu, 2 B. H. C. R. 126 ; Khalak, 11 A. 393.

(10) Sakya, 5 B. H. C. R. 36.

(11) Nga Tun Tha, (1894) P. J. L. B. 78.

(12) Ss. 3, 4, Whipping Act (VI of 1864).

term of 7 years or upwards, instead of awarding sentence of imprisonment, sentence the offender to transportation for a term not less than 7 years, and not exceeding the term for which under the Code such offender is liable to imprisonment.<sup>1</sup> The section as to enhanced sentence is not to be pressed into service in every case of a previous conviction satisfying its conditions. The enhanced sentence must be called for by the justice of the case. Where, for instance, the subsequent offence was a petty<sup>2</sup> or a technical theft, the Court should not be justified in passing more than a nominal sentence.<sup>3</sup> In any case, the provisions of the section are merely permissive and not obligatory,<sup>4</sup> and are not to be resorted to without due regard to the character of the accused since his previous conviction, the nature and gravity of the crime and its other attendant circumstances justifying the imposition of a deterrent sentence.<sup>5</sup>

530. Section when Inapplicable.—It has already been observed that the section is inapplicable where the two convictions are not for offences comprised in Chapters XII and XVII. If, therefore, a person with such a previous conviction is again convicted, say under s. 403, he could not be awarded enhanced sentence under this section.<sup>6</sup> Nor could one convicted of an attempt (s. 511) be subjected to enhanced sentence under this section.<sup>7</sup> It has been held that in apportioning the sentence the Court may take into consideration, independently of this section, a previous conviction of the offender for the same offence, e.g., under s. 323.<sup>8</sup>

(1) Muhammad Sharif, (1915) P. R. No. 14, 29 I. C. 826.

(2) Nga Po Huyin, 10 I. C. (R.) 772; Harnam Das, (1930) L. 100, Maula, (1929) L. 787; Ujarsingh, (1933) L. 147; Kuppuswami Chetty, (1933) M. W. N. 1259.

(3) Jawahir Singh, 22 I. C. (L.) 759.

(4) Chamman, 54 I. C. (Pat.) 623.

(5) Po Nyein, 9 L. B. R. 167; 45 I. C. 847.

(6) Chandaria, 11 I. C. (L.) 623.

(7) Brij Behari Lal (1926) A. 44; Mhd. Hussain, 29 P. L. R. 34; Nathun, (1933) L. 433.

(8) Ismail Ali, 39 B. 326; Suban Sahib, 52 M. 358; Nga Ba Shim, (1928) R. 200 F. B.

CHAPTER IV.

GENERAL EXCEPTIONS.

531. Topical Introduction.—"This chapter has been framed in order to obviate the necessity of repeating in every penal clause a considerable number of limitations. Some limitations relate only to a single provision, or to a very small class of provisions....Every such exception evidently ought to be appended to the rule which it is intended to modify. But there are other exceptions which are common to all the penal clauses of the Code, or to a great variety of clauses dispersed over many chapters. Such are the exceptions in favour of infants, lunatics, idiots, persons under the influence of delirium, the exceptions in favour of acts done by the direction of the law, of acts done in the exercise of the right of self-defence, of acts done by the consent of the party harmed by them. It would obviously be inconvenient to repeat these exceptions several times in every page. We have, therefore, placed them in a separate chapter, and we have provided that every definition of an offence, every penal provision, and every illustration of a definition or penal provision, shall be construed subject to the provisions contained in that chapter."<sup>1</sup>

532. It will be seen that the chapter dealing with exceptions to criminal responsibility contains 32 sections, but the main principles which they illustrate are only seven. They are:—

- |  |  |
|--|--|
| (1) Where there is an absence of criminal intent (sections 81-86 and 92-94). | (5) Triviality (section 95).   |
| (2) Cases of accident (section 79).  | (6) Acts done in exercise of the right of private defence (sections 96-106). |
| (3) Mistake of fact (sections 76, 79).                                       | (7) Privileged acts (sections 77, 78).                                       |
| (4) Act done by consent (sections 87-90).                                    |  |

533. All these cases, though variously classified and described, are really cases in which there is absence of criminal intent. There is only one case dealt within section 95, in which provision is made for exemption in spite of the presence of criminal intent, the act committed being so inconsiderable as to be negligible.

Act done by a person bound, or by mistake of fact believing himself bound, by law.

76. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is, or who by reason of a mistake of fact and not by reason of a mistake of law in good faith believes himself to be, bound by law to do it.

Illustrations.

(a) A, a soldier, fires on a mob by the order of his superior officer, in conformity with the commands of the law. A has committed no offence.

(b) A, an officer of a Court of Justice, being ordered by that Court to arrest Y, and, after due enquiry, believing Z to be Y, arrests Z. A has committed no offence.

534. Analogous Law.—This chapter has been extended to offences added to the Code since its original enactment.<sup>2</sup>

This section is analogous to section 79, the only difference between the two being that a person under this section believes himself to be bound by law to do a thing, whilst under section 79 he similarly feels justified by law in doing it. In the one case he acts because he believed he must; in the other, he acts because he thought that it was right. In either case the two sections throw round him the same protection.

535. Principle.—This section and section 79 are a paraphrase of the English common law maxim in its application to criminal law: Ignorantia facti excusat; ignorantia juris non excusat.<sup>3</sup> A mistake of law is never a defence in law, whether civil or criminal: Ignorantia juris non excusat.<sup>4</sup> This is the rule, but it is sometimes

(1) Note B. Reprint, p. 106.

(2) By the Indian Penal Code Amendment Act (XXVII of 1870). This Act adds new offences to the Code, to which Chs. IV, V and XXIII were extended. See ib., s. 13, as amended by the Repealing and Amending Act (XII of 1891) under which this chapter was made applicable to offences punishable under ss. 121-A, 124-A, 225-A, 225-B, 294-A and 304-A.

(3) 1 Co., 177. "Ignorance of fact, excuses; ignorance of law does not excuse."

(4) "Ignorance of law is no excuse."

explained by another maxim. "Every man is presumed to know law,"<sup>1</sup> which, if a maxim, is not true, for there can be no presumption when it is a notorious fact that even professional lawyers are sometimes at war as to what is law. The true reason why ignorance of law is never a defence, is that, if it were a defence, it would screen offenders and lead to endless complications. For there would have to be an inquiry in every case, if an accused person was cognizant of law, which would lead to evasions of its provisions on the plea of ignorance. Moreover, the peremptory mandates of law in so far as they are universal and of general application are based upon fairness and commonsense, and they are, at any rate, available to any one desirous of acquainting himself with them. They are, therefore, never the copy-right of the Legislature which offers every facility for their promulgation.

536. Ignorance of law is, therefore, never an excuse, and all persons resident within a State are held to be bound by it, it being immaterial whether they are its subjects or are foreigners.<sup>2</sup>

537. Of course, the term "law" as used in this connection means the general law of the land. But the rule applies equally to all laws, bye-laws, rules and regulations having the force of law.<sup>3</sup> For, though no man is presumed to be the walking cyclopaedia of all laws, however parochial and artificial, still, if ignorance of law were ever admitted to be an excuse, it would introduce the element of uncertainty in the administration of justice which is the foundation of civil society.<sup>4</sup> All the same, the rule is properly applicable only to the general municipal law, though for the sake of convenience it is held to be a rule of universal application, and as one admitting of no exceptions.<sup>5</sup> But exceptions there must be; since no man can be convicted of violating a law of which, as a matter of fact, he is wholly ignorant. It must, then, depend upon the law, the nature of publicity given to it, and the likelihood of the offender being acquainted with it. In a large number of Acts, some qualifying phrases occur which, in themselves, recognize the exceptions. On the other hand, there are bye-laws, such as those regulating the height of buildings, thickness of walls, preservation of open spaces and others conducive to public sanitation and hygiene—which no one can circumvent on the ground of ignorance. The question of mens rea must, therefore, depend upon the subject-matter of the enactment, its purpose and the various circumstances which would make the construction reasonable or unreasonable.<sup>6</sup>

538. So far as the present Code is concerned, it is apparent from the exceptions No Intention: No Crime. here made that the test of criminality in the Code depends upon the presence of criminal intent. The maxim—actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea<sup>7</sup> is, then, as true here as it is in England. It is, indeed, the keynote of the present chapter, as it is of the English Criminal Law. So Coleridge, J., in one case said: "Ignorance of the law cannot excuse any person; but, at the same time, when the question is, with what intent a person takes, we cannot help looking into his state of mind; and if a person take what he believes to be his own,

(1) Per Erle, C. J., in Pooley v. Brown, 11 C. B. (N. S.) 575; Kitchin v. Hawkins, L. R. 2 C. P. 22; per Sir W. Scott, The Charlotte, 1 Dods. R. 392; per Pollock, C.B., in Cooper v. Simmons, 7 H. & N. No. 717. Cf. maxim: "Ignorantia juris quod quisque tenetur scire neminem excusat" (2 Rep., 3b), "Ignorance of the law, which every man is presumed to know, excuses no one." This maxim is quoted and paraphrased with comment, by Blackstone in 4 Black, p. 27. So Hale: "Ignorantia eorum quoe scire tenetur non excusat" (Ignorance of those things which one is bound to know, excuses not) —P. C. 42.

(2) Baronet and Allain, (1852) Dearsly 51; 1 Jurisprudence, 498.

(3) Kassim, 15 I. C. (B.) 802 contra Lewis, 38 M. 773.

(4) Cf. per Willes, J., in Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168 (172).

(5) So Lord Westbury in one case remarked: "It is said 'Ignorantia juris non excusat'; but in that maxim, the word 'jus' is used in the sense of denoting a private right, the ordinary law of the country. But when the word 'jus' is used in the sense of denoting a private right, the maxim has no application"—Cooper v. Chibbs, L. R. 2 H. L. 149 (170).

(6) Per Willes, J., in Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168 (172, 173); Narantakath, 45 M. 986.

(7) "The act itself does not make a man guilty, unless his intention were so."

it is impossible to say that he is guilty of felony."<sup>1</sup> So, in another case, the Court remarked: "It has been said that ignorance of the law is no excuse. But when the Court has a discretion, the petitioner's ignorance of the law may be properly excused."<sup>2</sup> Where, therefore, the Divorce Act, 1857,<sup>3</sup> enacts that the Court shall not be bound to pronounce a decree for divorce, if it shall find that the petitioner has, during the marriage been guilty of adultery, the Court was held to have a discretion which it could exercise in favour of a person who had contracted a bigamous marriage in the belief that his marriage with his first wife had been dissolved by a private agreement setting each party free to marry again.<sup>4</sup> Here then was a case where a person had violated the Statute in ignorance of its provisions, but as he had no intention to do so, and as the Court had a discretion in the matter, it gave him the benefit of that ignorance. This principle may be illustrated by the view taken by the Indian Courts in similar cases, in which it was laid down that inasmuch as the provisions of section 494 of the Code are rigid and render a bigamous marriage, apart from intention, criminal, the plea of innocence is no defence to a charge under that section, though it would be a good defence to a charge under section 497, the language of which leaves room for its admission.<sup>5</sup> But the language of a Statute, though a guide, is not to be taken to be the sole guide in judging of the criminality of an act. For, as Foster, J., said "that though the words of the Statute seem to exclude any other excuse, yet the circumstances must be taken into consideration; otherwise, a law calculated for wise purposes might be made a handmaid to oppression."<sup>6</sup>

539. In the light of these cases, the rule laid down by the Bombay Court cannot be upheld. In another case, the facts were different, but it illustrates the same principle. There the captain of a ship had hired native labourers and carried them on board. At the time that he set sail there was no prohibition against the employment of native labour, but before the natives were engaged, an Act was passed which prohibited the enlistment of native labourers without a license, and their confinement and removal from one place to another was declared to be a felony,<sup>7</sup> and the question was whether the Master of the vessel had brought himself within the Act. "It may, however, be suggested," the Court remarked, "that the carrying, though not unlawful in its commencement, became so when the Act came into operation, notwithstanding the ignorance of the Master that any such Act was in force and though it was then out of his power to obtain a license. But before a continuous act or proceeding not originally unlawful can be treated as unlawful by reason of the passing of an Act of Parliament by which it is in terms made so, a reasonable time must be allowed for its discontinuance; and though ignorance of the law may of itself be no excuse for the Master of a vessel who may act in contravention of it, such ignorance may, nevertheless, be taken into account when it becomes necessary to consider the circumstances under which the act of proceeding alleged to be unlawful was continued, and when and how it was continued, with a view to determine whether a reasonable time had elapsed without its being discontinued."<sup>8</sup>

540. In another case, however, ignorance of law was held to be a case for pardon and not acquittal. In that case, the accused, the Master of a ship, was

(1) John Reed, (1842) C. & M. 306.

(2) Whitworth v. Whitworth, (1893) P. 85 (88); citing Noble v. Noble, L. R. 1 P. & D. 861.

(3) 20 & 21 Vict., c. 85, s. 31.

(4) Whitworth v. Whitworth, (1893) P. 85 (88).

(5) Karsan, 2 B. H. C. R. 117 (124, 1st Ed.); Manohar, 5 B. H. C. R. 17; Khemkor v. Umiashan, 10 B. H. C. R. 381; Robi v. Gobind, 1 B. 97 (116); Sambhu, 1 B. 347; Umi, 6 B. 126; Narantakath, 45 M. 956; contra Abdul Ghani v. Azizul Huq, 39 C. 409.

(6) Foster's Crown Law (3rd Ed.), App.

439 (440), cited per Willes, J., in Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168 (175); also followed by Lord Kenyon, in Banks, 1 Esp. 144; Willamett, 3 Cox. C. C. 281; Cohen, 8 Cox C. C. 41; Sleep, 30 L. J. (M. C.) 170; O'Brien, 15 L. T. (N. S.) 419.

(7) Kidnapping Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict., c. 19), ss. 3, 6, 9, 16, 20. (The title of this Act has been altered by 38 & 39 Vict., c. 51 to "The Pacific Islanders Protection Act, 1872.")

(8) Per Baggallay, J. (Bramwell and Thesiger, JJ., concurring), in Burns v. Nowell, 5 Q. B. D. 444 (454).

indicted for maliciously shooting a mariner of another vessel on the high seas, on the 27th June 1799, an offence made indictable by 39 Geo. III, c. 37, which came into force on the 10th May, 1799, that is, only six weeks before the commission of the crime of whose existence the accused had no knowledge. The jury found that the accused had fired upon the vessel in consequence of a quarrel with its captain, and that the act of the accused fell within the Statute 39 Geo. III, and Lord Eldon, thereupon, held him to be guilty thereunder, though he was unaware of its existence, but thought it might be a case for pardon. However, on reference to twelve other Judges, it was held that the accused could not be indicted under a Statute of whose existence he had no knowledge, and that they, therefore, thought it right that he should have a pardon.<sup>1</sup> These are extreme cases, but then extreme cases are always employed to test the validity of a rule. But as it is, these cases only go the length of holding that ignorance of law may be pleaded in extenuation, though not in justification of a crime. There is, however, a presumption that mens rea, an evil intention, or a knowledge of the wrongfulness of the act is an essential ingredient in every offence, but that presumption is liable to be displaced either by the words of the Statute creating the offence, or by the subject-matter with which it deals, both of which must, therefore, be considered.<sup>2</sup>

541. So far as the Code is concerned, it declares that all the 32 sections forming this chapter should be read as qualifying the penal provisions which follow it. The question then is, whether any of the exceptions forming this chapter negative an offence otherwise shown to have been committed.

542. These sections necessarily lay down only general exceptions, that is to say, exceptions which negative, in all cases, the presumption of criminality. Independent of them, there are certain other considerations which are referred to in the various sections defining offences or laying down penalties which alone determine criminality in a particular case. For example, some offences are only complete, if the act constituting them is done "voluntarily," or "dishonestly," "knowingly" or "having reason to believe" in the existence of certain facts or in other conditions of the mind, which is, then, the essence of criminal obligation, the absence of which form other exceptions to criminal responsibility. It is only when an act is otherwise an offence, answering, as it does, all the requirements of a given definition, that resort must be had to these general exceptions which form, as it were, the touchstone of criminality, to which reference becomes necessary, because the deed would otherwise be a crime. Indeed, reference to this chapter need not be made by the prosecutor at all, for the elements, there dealt with, are not essential for the composition of a crime. They are rather dissolvents which reduce or annihilate criminality by associating it with other acts and intentions which have the effect of altering its original aspect and character.

543. Now, as the mental elements of different crimes differ widely, it follows that the appropriate exceptions to those crimes must also correspondingly differ. So the term "mens rea," "intent" or "guilty mind," though commonly supposed to underlie all crimes, still differs in each case according to the nature and circumstance of the crime. For instance, "mens rea" means, in the case of murder, malice aforethought; in the case of theft, an intention to steal; in the case of rape, an intention to have forcible connection with a woman without her consent; and in the case of receiving stolen goods, knowledge that the goods were stolen. In some cases, it denotes mere inattention. For instance, in the case of manslaughter by negligence (s. 304-A), it may mean forgetting to notice a signal. The term "mens rea" is, therefore, a mnemonic aid, but by no means an exact expression. And as an expression it is inexact and misleading.<sup>3</sup> Now as this chapter generally provides an antithesis to such general criminality, it must necessarily

(1) Richard Bailey, (1800) R. & R. 1.

(921); 1 Weir 74.

(2) Nichols v. Hall, L. R. 8 C. P. 322;
Sherras v. De Rutzen, (1905) Q. B. 1918

(3) Per Stephen, J., in Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168 (186).

be equally inexact and often misleading. Its exact applicability and its necessary shortcomings will best be illustrated by its application to concrete examples.

544. So far as regards this section, it lays down expressly what shall excuse an offence, and impliedly what shall not. Expressly it lays down that an act prompted by (a) a mistake of fact, (b) good faith, and (c) belief in legal compulsion, is protected. Impliedly it lays down that a criminal act under mistaken law is entitled to no protection. The question then is what is the meaning of these terms.

545. What is a Mistake of Fact.—Mistake has a recognized place in civil law. As such it is a well-known concept. There it is used in the sense of misconception or error of judgment not intended to produce the result attained. Such a mistake may,<sup>1</sup> or may not, be due to forgetfulness, ignorance, imperfect information, or faulty ratiocination. It may be due to chance, negligence, stupidity or even superstition, but it must not be due to design, pre-arrangement or pre-concert.<sup>2</sup> A mistake may be due to the imperfection of senses, or it may be due to the deficiency of intellect. Where, for instance, a man kills a man believing him to be a ghost,<sup>3</sup> a hunter mistakes a man for animal and fires, his mistake may be as much due to defective vision as to defective intellect. In either case, if there was no mens rea there was a mistake, and therefore it may be no crime. Here, through a mistake, a man, intending to do a lawful act, has done that which is unlawful. There has not been that conjunction between his act and his will, which is necessary to form a criminal act. "Ignorantia facti doth excuse, for such an ignorance many times makes the act itself morally involuntary. It is known in war, that it is the greatest offence for a soldier to kill or so much as to assault his general: suppose then the inferior officer sets his watch or sentinels, and the general, to try the vigilance or courage of his sentinels, comes upon them in the night in the posture of an enemy; the sentinel strikes or shoots him, taking him to be an enemy; his ignorance of the person excuseth his offence."<sup>4</sup>

546. So where a person made a thrust with the sword at a place where, upon reasonable grounds, he supposed a burglar to be, and killed a person who was not a burglar, he was held to have committed no offence.<sup>5</sup> Where the fact is a tangible object, a mistake regarding it may thus assume any form. Its identity may be mistaken or its form misread. Where, for instance, in a case the prisoner was indicted for unlawfully taking an English girl under the age of 16 out of the possession and against the will of her father, and it was proved that before the girl was taken away she had declared her age to be 18, which the prisoner also believed to be the case and his belief was reasonable, the question arose whether his erroneous bona fide belief exculpated him from the offence of abduction under the statute,<sup>6</sup> and it was held by the majority of the Court that he was guilty of the misdemeanour notwithstanding his mistake.<sup>7</sup> But this decision of the Court is regarded as unsatisfactory, and in conflict with established principles.<sup>8</sup> But the eventual decision

(1) Kelly v. Solari, 9 M. & W. 54; Brownlie v. Campbell, 5 App. Cas. 952; followed per Kay, L.J., in Barrow v. Isaacs & Sons, (1891) 1 Q. B. 417 (425, 426).

(2) Sandford v. Beal, (1895) 65 L. J. (Q. B.) 74.

(3) Waryan Singh, (1926) L. 554.

(4) 1 Hale P. C. 42.

(5) Levet's case, 1 Hale, 474, cited per Stephen, J., in Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168 (187, 188).

(6) As the question turned upon the wording of the statute, it may be here quoted: "Whosoever shall unlawfully take or cause to be taken any unmarried girl, being under the age of 16 years, out of the possession and against the will of her father or mother or of any other person having the lawful care or charge of her, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding 2 years with or without hard labour."—24 & 25 Vict., c. 100, s. 55, cf. s. 361 post for a similar offence.

(7) Prince, 44 L. J. (M. C.) 164, so held by 15 Judges. Brett, J. (afterwards Lord, Esher, M.R.) alone dissenting.

(8) 1 Russ. (5th Ed.) 888; Watkins v. Major, 44 L. J. M. C. 164. It should be noted that in 48 & 49 Vict., c. 69, s. 7, the following is added: "Provided that it shall be a sufficient defence to any charge under this section that the person so charged had reasonable cause to believe that the girl was of or above the age of 18 years. See this case explained per Stephens, J., in Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168 (189, 190).

turned upon the wording of the statute, and the meaning of the word "unlawfully" therein occurring,<sup>1</sup> which was held to mean "without lawful excuse" or "without such an excuse as, being proved, would be a complete legal justification for the act even where all the facts constituting the offence exist."<sup>2</sup> In other words, a person, who deliberately does that which is wrong, must also take the risk of its turning out to be criminal, and if criminal, he cannot turn round and say that he had not contemplated the consequence of his wrongful act.

547. Natural Consequence.—That a man must be prepared to bear the natural consequences of his act is not disputed, as, if he strikes with a dangerous weapon with intent to cause grievous hurt, and kills, he cannot be heard to say that he had misjudged his blow. The result makes the crime murder, not because there may not have been a mistake but because the prisoner had run the risk. It may then be generally laid down that where an act is in itself criminal, criminal intention is presumed, and even proof of mistake of fact is then no defence. In this view the conviction of Prince was right, but not otherwise. On the other hand, where the act is initially indifferent, and becomes only criminal, by the existence of certain facts superadded, then the fact that the accused had misconstrued or mistaken those facts is a good defence, whether the misconstruction or mistake was due to lack of will or lack of knowledge.

548. Effect of Mistake of Mixed Law and Fact.—Sometimes the mistake pleaded is both a mistake of fact as well as of the law. Such a case may arise where a person makes bigamous marriage in ignorance of law,<sup>3</sup> or where he seizes property in the bona fide belief that it is his; or take again the case of two persons reasonably believed to have committed murder in trying to escape, whereupon two persons give them a chase to prevent their escape: one is a policeman, and the other a private citizen. What would be their offence, if suppose each of them kills the run-aways to prevent their escape? It has been held that the policeman would be justified but not so the private citizen.<sup>4</sup> For his mistake "would be not only a mistake of fact, but a mistake of law in supposing that he, a private person, was justified in using as much violence as a public officer, whose duty is to arrest, if possible, a person reasonably suspected a murderer. The supposed homicide would be in the same position as if his mistake of fact had been true; that is, he would be guilty, not of murder, but of manslaughter."<sup>5</sup> So on this point Bishop says: "In civil causes, it would seem that if law and fact are blended as a mixed question, or if one's ignorance of fact is produced by ignorance of law, the whole may be regarded as ignorance of fact, of which the party is at liberty to take advantage. So, in criminal jurisprudence, if the guilt or innocence of the prisoner depends on the fact, to be found by the jury, of his having been or not, when he did the act, in some precise mental condition, which mental condition is the gist of the offence, the jury, in determining this question of mental condition, may take into consideration his ignorance or misinformation in a matter of law. Thus to constitute larceny, there must be an intent to steal, which involves the knowledge that the property taken belongs not to the latter. Yet if all the facts concerning the title are known to the accused, and the question is merely one of law whether the property is his or not, still he may show, and the showing will be a defence to him against criminal process, that he honestly believed it his, through a misapprehension of law. A mere pretence of claim set up by one who does not himself believe it to be valid, does not prevent the act of taking from being larceny."<sup>6</sup> In short, a mixed question of law and fact, is, for the present purpose, treated as a question of fact if the accused was misled into an error of fact on account of an error of law.

(1) See Prince, L.R. 2 C.C. 154 at pp. 170, 178 (per Blackburn, J., and Denman, J.)

(2) Prince, L. R. 2 C. C. 154 (175).

(3) Narantakath, 45 M. 986.

(4) 2 Hale P. C. 89 (97); 1 Russ. (5th Ed.)

p. 726; Raghunath, (1920) Pat. 76.

(5) Per Stephen, J., in Tolson, 23 Q. B. D. 168 (188).

(6) Criminal Law (3rd Ed.), s. 378.

549. A mere mistake of fact is not enough. It must be an honest mistake, and it must not be known to the actor as a mistake when the deed was done. If the doer knew that he was impelled by a mistake to a deed which he knows to be wrong, he has no defence, save that of insanity. It is only an honest faith in a person's act, as a righteous act, that is entitled to legal protection. The fact may not exist, but he must honestly believe in its existence. On the other hand, if the fact exists, and he does not believe in its existence, there is no belief in "good faith" and consequently no protection. Where, for example, a person heard at night a noise and saw a man at the back of the door of his house, from which he believed that an attempt was being made to break into it, and, acting on that belief and on his wife telling him that the plaintiff was the man, he gave the plaintiff, a respectable neighbour, who happened to be passing the front of the house at the time, into custody, whereupon the plaintiff sued for damages for false imprisonment, and the question was whether the defendant had reasonable grounds for believing the plaintiff to be guilty, and if so, whether he honestly believed it. It was then pointed out that a mere honest belief is not enough unless there also existed reasonable grounds for that belief. As Keating, J., remarked: "It cannot be supposed that if a man merely dreamt of a certain state of facts, without any grounds for his impression, and acted on it, it would be sufficient."<sup>1</sup> In this case, the defendant may have grounds for suspicion. But as was pointed out by Willis, J., in another case,<sup>2</sup> mere suspicion will not do.

550. What is the difference between suspicion and belief? "Suspicion may rest on no grounds: belief rests upon some grounds." But as there can be no reasonable grounds unless there are facts sufficient to justify that belief, it follows that what the Court first inquires about is what were the facts and whether they were sufficient to induce an honest belief, and not necessarily a reasonable belief,<sup>3</sup> in them.<sup>4</sup> This view was emphasised in an Indian case to which reference has been made before (s. 52), in which the facts were somewhat similar.<sup>5</sup> So in another case where a policeman had arrested a person as Giria which in fact he was not, the Court acquitted him on the ground that he had made reasonable inquiries and having come to Bombay from an up country station to effect the arrest he was honestly mistaken.<sup>6</sup>

551. The same view was taken in an English case in which the plaintiff, passing through the streets of the city of London with a bundle in his hand about 10 o'clock at night, was stopped by a watchman who took him to the defendant, a beadle, who questioned him as to the contents of the bundle, which the plaintiff replied he did not know and that he was carrying it to his sister in St. George's Fields, and referred him to a house there. He was arrested without enquiry at the house referred to, but was subsequently discharged, and the question was whether the beadle had the power of arrest, and it was held that he had such a power and that the arrest was justified by "abundant ground of suspicion."<sup>7</sup>

552. A person who kills another on jealous suspicion of a wife however strong, cannot therefore plead mistake, for he had no facts whereon to build his honest belief as required by law.<sup>8</sup> So where a number of men seize hold of a woman believed to be a witch and do her to death, they cannot defend their atrocity by reference to honest belief in the woman's witchcraft. For, if such a belief were sufficient to take away human life, there will be no security left but that a person may with impunity slay another because he believes him to be a ghost, or possessed of an evil spirit.

(1) Leete v. Hart, L. R. 3 C. P. 322 (325).

(2) Roberts v. Orchard, 2 H. & C. 769 (777); Hermann v. Seneschal, 13 C. B. (N. S.) 392 (403).

(3) Per Keating, J., in Leete v. Hart, L. R. 3 C. P. 322 (323).

(4) Hughes v. Buckland, 15 M. & W. 346.

(5) Bhawoo v. Mulji, 12 B. 377.

(6) Gopalia, 20 Bom. L. R. 138.

(7) Lawrence v. Hedger, 3 Taunt. 14-16; Dhanjibhai, 20 B. 348.

(8) Devji, 20 B. 215.

553. Policeman's Duty.—The power of a policeman or other recognized conservator of peace to arrest and detain a person in custody must depend upon the terms of the particular statute creating it. Where the terms of such a statute are satisfied, reference to these sections becomes unnecessary, because these sections deal with bona fide mistake, and not with due performance of duty. Indeed, in the latter case, the question of bona fides and sufficient grounds is immaterial. For there was a duty to do, and it was done, whatever may have been the doer's motive. It is only when the act was not justified by law that the other questions arise. This is implied in illustration (a), where a soldier firing on a mob by the order of his superior officer, in conformity with the commands of the law, is held to be protected. Now this section does not state whether the order given by the superior officer was right or wrong. But it is implied that it was wrong. For if it had been right, then the act would have been legal, apart from good faith and his belief in its legality. It is only when the order is illegal that the questions of good faith and belief in its legality arise. A person is then not implicitly bound to obey the commands of his superior officer. The latter may order him to torture a person to death, but he is not bound to obey such an order; and, of course, the maxim respondeat superior has no application to such a case.<sup>1</sup> Only the fear of instant death would extenuate such a crime.<sup>2</sup>

554. A Soldier's Duty.—A soldier may be ordered to use force in four cases : (1) when his country is at war with another, (2) when an area is proclaimed under martial law, (3) when he is called in to aid the civil authorities to preserve or restore order, and (4) when the civil authorities withdraw leaving the military to preserve or restore order. In the first two cases the civil law is suspended and with it this section is in suspense.

555. In the third case, the responsibility of the civil power remains and it is on them to observe the behests of the section. In the last case, that responsibility is thrown on the military who are called in to perform the police duties in the discharge of which they are as much subject to the ordinary law as they would, if instead of being directly charged with the duty of restoring order they were still under the civil power, the only difference being that the directing control is shifted from the civil to the military.

556. It may be said that it is the duty of the soldier to obey his command, it is not for him to reason why. That is true, but only true within limits. The soldier obeying his command only throws the responsibility on his commandant but who has to justify his action. He is not entitled to discharge his duty at his discretion. If this were the law, there would be no difference between a country being placed under martial law which is no law at all and one in which the military are merely called in to perform the police duty.

557. It is, therefore, settled that in such a case the military must put their conduct to the touchstone of two following principles, namely (a) They must act in good faith, i.e., with due care and caution and (b) they must not use more force or destroy more life and property than is absolutely justified by the necessities of the case.<sup>3</sup> The same rules apply to the private whose subjection to military discipline is not higher than his subjection to the higher law in favour of public safety when the act which the military discipline attempts to enforce or to justify, is one which affects the person or property of another. In such a case a soldier, for the purpose of establishing civil order is only a citizen armed in a particular manner. In judging of his action the civil law looks to the surrounding circumstances to see whether they are of such a character as would lead a man of ordinary intelligence to entertain a reasonable belief, that he is bound by law to obey the commands of his superior.<sup>4</sup>

(1) Devji, 20 B. 215 ; Latifkhan, 20 B. 394.

(2) S. 94 (q. v.) ; Latifkhan, 20 B. 394.

(3) S. 130 (2), Cr. P. C. See the Report of Lord Bowen, Sir Albert Rollit and Mr. Haldane, Q.C. on the use of military force to suppress the colliers' strike in 1893, printed in 1 Penal Law (4th Ed.) pp. 426-428.

(4) Gurdit Singh, (1885) P. R. No. 27 ; Niamat Khan, (1883) P. R. No. 17 ; Kennett, 5 Car & P. 282 ; 172 E. R. 976.

558. A person who knowingly obeys an illegal order abets the illegal act of his superior, and as the latter, so is the former without any justification.<sup>1</sup> So where three sepoys of a regiment were cognizant of a quarrel which their Naik had with a mob which was threatening them under circumstances which did not render the act excusable under s. 96, and two men were shot dead, it was held that the sepoys who had fired in obedience to the Naik's orders were not protected by this section, as they must be taken to have known that the Naik was wrong in law, in firing upon the mob, and that they were not bound to obey his illegal orders.<sup>2</sup>

559. Limits of Soldier's Justification.—This view makes it clear that in this respect the duty of the officer and soldier is the same. Either has to believe in good faith that firing is necessary and that firing should not do more harm than is absolutely necessary. If the officer orders firing before it is necessary, the duty of the soldier is plain: he must refuse to fire, and if he does fire, he does so at his own peril. It might be said that this civil duty of the soldier is in conflict with his military duty and discipline, but as Willes, J., remarked: "I believe that the better opinion is, that an officer or soldier, acting under the orders of his superior—not being necessarily or manifestly illegal—would be justified by his orders."<sup>3</sup> In fact, it is only in such cases that the rule here enunciated becomes applicable. The soldier is to exercise good faith, and with good faith he must believe in his legal duty. If he does not know that his officer is wrong, and if he believes that he is right, he is exempt from punishment, whatever may have been his mistake. As Sir James Stephen says: "Soldiers might reasonably think that their officer had good reasons for ordering them to fire into a disorderly crowd, which to them might not appear to be at that moment engaged in acts of dangerous violence; but soldiers could hardly suppose that their officer could have any good grounds for ordering them to fire a volley down a crowded street, when no disturbance of any kind was either in progress or apprehended."<sup>4</sup>

560. This rule applies not only to soldiers but also to others who act in a similar contingency under the orders of their superior;<sup>5</sup> so where a first class constable verbally ordered two police constables to arrest bad characters on the road and to fire if resisted, whereupon the constables challenged two men and fired and killed one man who did not stop, it was held that the order given being manifestly illegal, as it was uncalled for, the constables who obeyed it were themselves guilty of culpable homicide not amounting to murder, though the fact that the accused had acted under orders was material for mitigation of punishment.<sup>6</sup> So in a similar case a sailor was ordered by his superior officer on board a man-of-war to prevent the approach of boats and served out ammunition for the purpose. Boats having persisted in approaching in spite of repeated warnings, he fired a shot and killed a man. He was indicted for and convicted of murder, the Court holding that although he had fired under the impression that it was his duty to do so, it was murder, as the act was not necessary for the preservation of the ship.<sup>7</sup> These are cases in which the superior had authority, but he had exercised it at the wrong moment.

561. The case where the superior was without legal authority is, of course, worse. So where at the trial and execution of Charles I, a soldier who commanded the Guards pleaded at his trial that all he did was as a soldier by the command of his superior officer whom he must obey or die. It was resolved that that was no excuse, for his superior was a traitor, and all who joined with him in that act were traitors, and where the command is traitorous the obedience to that command is also traitorous.<sup>8</sup> Now, however, s. 94 would be a complete answer in such a case.

(1) Latifkhan, 20 B. 394.

(2) Per Rattigan, J., in Gurdit Singh, (1883) P. R. No. 27; Niamat Khan, (1883) P. R. No. 17.

(3) Keighley v. Bell, 4 F. & F. 490.

(4) 2 Criminal Law, 205.

(5) Trainer, 4 F. & F. 105 (112).

(6) Nga Myat Tha, (1882) S. J. L. B. 164.

(7) Thomas, 4 M. & S. 442.

(8) Axtell, (1661) Keylin 13.

562. Engine Driver's Mistakes.—The applicability of this exception in the case of public may arise in a case where the public are bound by law to assist the magistracy and police as they are “in the taking or preventing the escape of any other person whom such Magistrate or police officer is authorized to arrest”; and “the prevention or suppression of a breach of the peace, or in the prevention of any injury attempted to be committed to any railway canal, telegraph, or public property.”<sup>1</sup> So where the engine driver and fireman of a train were indicted for manslaughter arising out of a collision, it appeared that the engine driver had special instructions on that day when an unusual number of trains were running for the Ascot races, that the red signal which usually meant “stop” was to be read as only implying “danger,” which he followed with the result that there was a collision with another train which had preceded them five minutes before and had stopped at Egham, of which fact the accused were ignorant. It was found that if this train had not stopped, as she did at Egham, there would have been no collision. Willes, J., directed the jury that the accused had obeyed the special instructions, believing that they were not illegal, that they had acted honestly in the belief that they were carrying them only, and that they could not, therefore, incur any criminal liability for the result. As for the fireman, he had obeyed the driver, as he was bound to do, and he had no hand in the management of the train. They were accordingly both acquitted.<sup>2</sup>

563. In another case, the deceased, a stoker on board a steam tug, was killed by its explosion, whereupon the captain and engineer were indicted for manslaughter. It appeared that the explosion was due to the failure of the safety valve to act on account of its being tied down by weights, in consequence of which there was more pressure on the boiler than it could bear. There was another valve, the duplicate keys of which were to be in possession of a government inspector and the captain, but the latter had no key at the time of the explosion, and the valve was out of order, but the accused were unaware of it. Hill, J., held that, as the deceased could have as well seen that the valve was out of order and might have repaired it without the intervention of either of the accused, there was no case for their conviction.<sup>3</sup> This case may seem to support the defence of contributory negligence, and the language used by Willes, J., in a case<sup>4</sup> would seem to support the view that a man was not criminally liable for negligence for which he would not be liable in a civil action, from which it might be inferred that as contributory negligence has a recognized place in tort, it should also have a place in delicts. But Lush, J., adverted to this expression of opinion in another case and said that it was quite at variance with what he had always heard,<sup>5</sup> and it is now the prevailing view.<sup>6</sup> The conduct of the person injured will, of course, have important influence as a matter of fact upon the relation of cause and effect between the act of the accused and the consequence induced. But beyond this it has no application. Indeed, in a civil action the primary object of the party injured being the recovery of damages, it is always admissible for the party in wrong to show that the injury complained of has been in part brought about by the party complaining upon himself. But in a criminal case, the object is not to redress personal wrongs but to protect the public, and the same plea cannot be allowed to prevail, for if it were, a person could not be convicted of murder for abetting suicide.<sup>7</sup> So Pollock, C.B., said that where there is a loss of life “each party is responsible for any blame that may ensue, however large the share may be, and so highly does the law value human life that it admits of no justification wherever life has been lost and the carelessness and negligence of any one person has contributed to the death of another person.”<sup>8</sup> [For a further commentary on this subject see s. 304-A.]

564. Mistake when No Defence.—Mens rea is not required where the acts prohibited by a statute are not criminal in any sense, but are prohibited in the public

(1) S. 42, Cr. P. C.

(2) Trainer, 4 F. & F. 105 (112).

(3) Gregory, 2 F. & F. 153.

(4) Birchall, 4 F. & F. 1087.

(5) Jones, 11 Cox C. C. 544.

(6) Per Pollock, C.B., Swindall, 2 C. & R. 330; per Rolfe, B. in Longbottom, 3 Cox C. C. 439; 6 M. H. C. R. (App.) 31 (33).

(7) 6 M. H. C. R. (App.) 31 (33).

(8) Swindall, 2 C. & R. 330.

interest under a penalty. Even in crimes properly so called, the Legislature sometimes prescribes a punishment without requiring proof of moral guilt. But the general rule is that a presumption exists that mens rea is essential to every criminal offence. The question in each case is one of construction, but it may be generally stated that while mens rea is usually necessary in the case of an offence under this Code, it is usually not necessary in the case of a statutory offence. Ordinarily, such statutes are enacted in the interest of public convenience, public health, morals or revenue, or to protect women and children, and other persons suffering from disability. But there are exceptions in each case, and this Code itself furnishes instances in the offences of bigamy, and abduction of a minor under section 361,<sup>1</sup> where the offence is complete without the presence of a mens rea.<sup>2</sup> In cases of statutory offences regard must be had, not only to the language but also to the policy which underlies the statute. For instance, under the English Lunacy Act, it is "not lawful" for any one to receive two or more lunatics in an unlicensed house. The accused received such lunatics but was found not to have known that the persons she received were lunatics. Stephen, J., who tried the prisoner told the jury "that an honest belief on the part of the defendant that that person was not a lunatic would be immaterial," and he was held to be right by a Court of five Judges.<sup>3</sup> Offences insuring the purity of food and drugs are punishable in the public interests apart from any question of mens rea. So the innocent possession of adulterated tobacco,<sup>4</sup> the sale of adulterated food or drugs<sup>5</sup> are offences which are punishable independently of mens rea. So again public policy demands the protection of infants and the preservation of moral relations which justifies the offences before mentioned, the control of intoxicants and poisons<sup>6</sup> and that which prohibits the delivery of intoxicating liquors to children under fourteen except in corked and sealed vessels.<sup>7</sup> Another class comprehends some, and perhaps, all public nuisances.<sup>8</sup>

565. There are, again cases in which, although the proceeding is criminal in form, it is really only a summary mode of enforcing a civil right.<sup>9</sup> Such cases often present much difficulty. The accused, a public works contractor, received permission from his department to quarry stones from a place which turned out to be a protected forest whereupon he was convicted under the Forest Act in Madras,<sup>10</sup> though the permission would have exculpated him in Bombay.<sup>11</sup> There can, of course, be no mistake of fact when there was no possibility for the existence of the fact. This was laid down in a case in which the accused pleaded his mistaken right to fish in a navigable river which Lush, J., held to be no defence as such a right was wholly unknown to the law.<sup>12</sup>

566. But these statutes, though they do not condone the crime, do not altogether ignore the mens rea, for it still enters in the apportionment of the sentence. But otherwise it is not permitted to obscure the public policy which demands of every man the exercise of a certain degree of diligence which it regards incompatible with the possibility of a mistake.

77. Nothing is an offence which is done by a Judge when acting judicially in the exercise of any power which is, or which in good faith he believes to be, given to him by law.

[Judge—S. 19. Good faith—S. 52. Judicially—S. 385.]

- |   |   |
|---|---|
| (1) Prince's Case, L. R. 2 C. C. 154. (2) Lolley's Case, R. &amp; R. 237. (3) Bishop, 5 Q. B. D. 259. (4) Woodrow, 15 M. &amp; W. 404. (5) Fitzpatrick v. Kelly, L. R. 8 Q. B. 337 ; Roberts v. Egerton, L. R. 9 Q. B. 494 ; Derbyshire v. Houlston, (1897) 1 Q. B. 772. (6) Waman, 10 Bom. L. R. 171 ; Masse v. Morriss, (1894) 2 Q. B. 414. (7) Brooks v. Mason, (1902) 2 K. B. 743. (8) Stephens, L. R. 1 Q. B. 702 ; Medley, | 6 C. &amp; P. 292 ; Barnes v. Akroyd, L. R. 7 Q. B. 474. (9) Morden v. Porter, 7 C. B. (N. S.) 641. (10) Penchul, 9 I. C. 567 ; Lewis, 22 I. C. 747, dissenting from Kassim, 15 I. C. (B.) 802. (11) Kassim, 15 I. C. (B.) 802. (12) Hargreaves v. Diddams, L. R. 10 Q. B. 582 ; following Hudson v. Macre, 33 L. J. M. C. 65. |
|---|---|

567. Analogous Law.—This section and the next extend to judicial officers and their ministerial officers the same protection against criminal prosecutions, as the Judicial Officers' Protection Act<sup>1</sup> exempts them from civil liability.

568. Though this and the next section speak only of "Judge," having regard to the meaning of that term in s. 19, it embraces "Judge, Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, Collector or other person acting judicially." The two sections, therefore, cover the same ground though they are differently worded. And so while the older Act speaks of acts "whether or not within the limits of his jurisdiction," it does not mean anything more than an act done "in the exercise of any power which is, or which in good faith he believes to be, given to him by law." A maliciously unjustifiable act is as much outside the limits of the one Act as it is of the other. So it was held under an old English Statute,<sup>2</sup> replaced by the Act of 1850, that the protection afforded by it to provincial Magistrates in India from actions for any wrong or injury done by them in the exercise of their judicial offices, does not confer unlimited protection, but places them on the same footing as those of English Courts of a similar jurisdiction, and only gives them an exemption from liability when acting bona fide in cases in which they have mistakenly acted without jurisdiction. Trespass will not lie against a Judge for acting judicially but without jurisdiction, unless he knew, or had the means of knowing, of the defect of jurisdiction, and it lies upon the plaintiff in every case to prove that fact.<sup>3</sup> This is so, but it does not mean that a plaintiff complaining of judicial misconduct has to establish the exceptional immunity of the defendant. All he has to shew is that the conduct amounts to a delict or an actionable wrong. It is then for the defendant to plead and prove the exemption.<sup>4</sup> The law, both civil and criminal is in this respect the same.<sup>5</sup>

569. Principle.—Judges and judicial officers have in all ages been the targets of malice and spite. Their function often leads to exhibition of temper and a feeling of retaliation. If, therefore, Judges had been placed on the ordinary footing as regards the defence of their official acts and conduct, they would soon have forsaken their legitimate duties in order to find time to vindicate themselves. Moreover, their exposure to the shafts of unsuccessful party or of condemned convict would have made their position one of considerable peril and precarious advantage. For no one would come forward to seek a situation in which his very fearlessness and independence would make him the butt of unscrupulous attack and organized opposition. The laws of all countries have therefore protected their Judges by special legislation, and the same protection has been thrown round them in this country from very early times (§ 567). So Markby, J., in one case said: "The duties which he (a Magistrate) usually performs are of such a nature as to render it absolutely necessary for their due performance that he should have that protection. He has generally either to punish an offence or to vindicate the rights of a private individual; and if he were hampered by fear of the consequences which might arise from a mistaken conclusion, he could not have that independence of mind which is essential to the discharge of such functions as these. This protection is not confined to persons holding and exercising a regular judicial office, but it extends to any persons whose duty it is to adjudicate upon the rights or punish the misconduct of any given person, whatever form the proceedings may take or however informal they may be. This has been so held in England,<sup>6</sup> and I do not see any reason to doubt that the same would be held here."<sup>7</sup>

570. At the same time while there is special protection, it is not unbounded nor unqualified. A corrupt and a tyrannical Judge is as much a pest of society as a brigand and a cut-throat. The one attacks society by polished weapons, the other

(1) XVIII of 1850.

(2) 21 Geo. III, c. 70, s. 24; Calder v. Halket, 2 M. I. A. 293.

(3) Calder v. Halket, 2 M. I. A. 293; Vinayak v. Bai Itcha, 3 B. H. C. R. (A. C.) 36; Sinclair Broughton, 9 C. 341, P. C.

(4) Venkat v. Armstrong, 3 B. H. C. R.

(A. C.) 47.

(5) Vinayak v. Bai Itcha, 3 B. H. C. R. (A. C.) 36.

(6) Tozer v. Child, 7 E. & B. 377.

(7) Chunder Narain v. Brijo Bullub, 14 B. L. R. 254 (257, 258).

by crude appliances. The Legislature has, therefore, passed the strongest laws against the two besetting sins of public servants, namely, corruption and tyranny. The Code itself contains salutary provisions directed against these abuses, and this section offers no impediment to such offenders being brought to book.

571. Meaning of Words.—“Judge when acting judicially”: The exemption is only for acts done in the discharge of his duties. If a Judge fires a pistol on the high road and kills passers-by, he is as much amenable to the ordinary criminal law, as the humblest of the King's subjects. “Power which is believed to be given to him by law”: “Power” here means jurisdiction, as it does in the auxiliary Code.<sup>1</sup> He may exceed his power, but he must not do so consciously. There must be (a) good faith, and (b) belief in his jurisdiction.

572. What Judicial Acts are Protected.—Reference has already been made to the policy of law in protecting judicial officers from civil (§ 569) and criminal liability. The two provisions are the outcome of the same policy, and they are subject to the same rules and restrictions. In such a case, four questions arise: (i) was the officer acting judicially; (ii) was his act within his jurisdiction; (iii) if not, did he believe that he had jurisdiction; and (iv) if so, did he believe it in good faith. If the first two questions are decided in the affirmative, his act is protected, and the two other questions do not then arise.<sup>2</sup> If his act was within his competency, the fact that he had acted carelessly and irregularly would not expose him to an action for damages<sup>3</sup> and a fortiori to a criminal prosecution. Again, no case for exemption arises if the officer was not acting judicially. It is an official, not a personal protection. That it is “the judicial character of the act which alone gives the protection may be seen by comparing the law as applied to persons who act under somewhat similar conditions, but not judicially. Thus it has long been the custom in England, and it is beginning to be the custom here, to confer large powers on individuals or bodies of individuals, to be used for the public benefit. The persons upon whom these powers are conferred in England are generally called commissioners, and they are placed in this position: whilst on the one hand, they are liable for any wrongful act committed by them, they are, on the other hand, generally protected from personal annoyance and from personal liability. A public officer (generally their secretary) is made defendant in the suit, and the law allows them to defray the costs and damages in any suit, brought against them, out of the property entrusted to their care. Without such protection as this, no one would act as a commissioner; whereas a greater immunity than this would be dangerous to the interests of those with whom they come in contact.”<sup>4</sup>

573. So where a Deputy Magistrate, acting as Chairman of the Town Committee under a local Act, ordered the removal of an obstruction from the public road, it was held that though it was the act of a judicial officer, still it was not a judicial act and therefore not entitled to any special protection.<sup>5</sup> The clause under which this case was decided was somewhat ambiguously worded; for it said: “Whoever builds any wall or erects or sets up any fence, rail, post or other obstruction or encroachment in any public highway . . . shall be liable to a fine not exceeding Rs. 50; and the Magistrate shall have power to remove any such obstruction,” the expenses of which were to be recovered from the obstructionist.<sup>6</sup> On the strength of this clause it was contended that the fine and the removal of obstruction were both judicial acts, as the one could not be separated from the other. But the Court held that if that were the correct construction, then the Magistrate could not remove an obstruction, unless he could find somebody to fine and pay for the removal. The two clauses were, therefore, severable and separate, and the power to fine and the

(1) See Ch. III, “Powers of Courts,” Cr.P.C.

(2) Meghraj v. Jakir Husain, 1 A. 280; Halimoozzumah v. Municipal Commissioners, 13 W. R. 340.

(3) Collector v. Taruknath, 7 B. L. R. 449; on review from Taruknath v. Collector, 4

B. L. R. (A. C.) 37.

(4) Chunder Narain v. Brijo Bullub, 14 B. L. R. 254 (257, 258) O. A.; ib., 264-267.

(5) Ib.

(6) Beng. Act VI of 1868, Sch. K.

power of removal were two independent acts, the one being judicial and the other only executive, and, as such, entitled to no protection.<sup>1</sup>

574. This case shows the difficulty of sometimes separating the judicial from what is purely a ministerial or executive act. And in a country where the two functions are still combined in the same individual, this difficulty is not of infrequent occurrence. At the same time, there must exist a clear line of demarcation between them. Even the word "judicial" is not free from ambiguity. For it has two meanings: "it may refer to the discharge of duties exercised by a Judge or Justices in Court; or to administrative duties which need not be performed in Court, but in respect of which it is necessary to bring to bear a judicial mind; i.e., a mind to determine what is fair and just in respect of the matters under consideration. Justices, for instance, act judicially when administering the law in Court, and they also act judicially when determining in the private room what is right and fair in some administrative matter brought before them, e.g., the levying of a rate."<sup>2</sup> The word "judicial" properly applies to such a proceeding as is proper to the function of a Judge.<sup>3</sup> The fact that the proceedings are conducted in Court do not necessarily make them "judicial", for a Court may perform various functions. Parliament is a Court. Its duties as a whole are deliberative and legislative: the duties of part of it only are judicial. It is nevertheless a Court. There are many other Courts which, though not Courts of Justice, are, nevertheless, Courts according to our law. There are, for instance, Courts of investigation, like the Coroner's Court. The existence of immunity does not, therefore, depend upon the question whether the subject-matter of consideration is a Court in Justice, but whether it is a Court in law. It is only to a Court in law, that the privileges under reference apply.<sup>4</sup>

575. The act may be sedente curia, or it may be not, but if it was of a judicial character, it is entitled to the immunity of law.<sup>5</sup> Therefore, an order under the seal of a Criminal Court to bring a native in that Court, to be there dealt with on a criminal charge, is an act of a judicial character, and whether there was any irregularity of error in it or not, would be dispunishable by ordinary process at law.<sup>6</sup> So the taking or refusing of bail is a judicial and not merely a ministerial act, and mistake in the performance of that duty is, apart from malice, insufficient to support an action.<sup>7</sup> As has been before remarked (§§ 572-573) the fact that an officer or body of officials have judicial powers, does not imply that all their acts are of a judicial nature. The London County Council possesses judicial powers, but its members do not act judicially when they sit in council to consider the advisability of granting licenses for music and dancing.<sup>8</sup> "In the case of duties properly administrative, such as that of granting licenses, their action was consultative, for the purpose of administration, and not judicial."<sup>9</sup> So the proceedings of a military Court of inquiry are not judicial, though the enquiry made is authorized and is made by that Court "judicially," that is to say, in a manner as nearly as possible similar to that in which a Court of Justice acts in respect of an enquiry before it.<sup>10</sup> In this case the inquiry had

(1) Per Couch, C.J., in Chunder Narain v. Brijobullub, 14 B. L. R. 254 (265-266).

(2) Per Lopes, L.J., in Royal Aquarium v. Parkinson, (1892) 1 Q. B. 431 (452).

(3) Per Fry, L.J., in ib., p. 447.

(4) Ib. pp. 446, 447.

(5) Per Baron Parke, in Calder v. Halket, 2 M. I. A. 293 (308).

(6) Calder v. Halket, 2 M. I. A. 293 (308), citing (1815) Taaffe v. Downes (unrep.) Irish case, see ib., p. 300.

(7) Parankusam v. Stuart, 2 M. H. C. R. 396.

(8) Per Lord Esher, M.R. in Royal Aquarium v. Parkinson, (1892) 1 Q. B. 431 (441, 443).

(9) Per Lord Esher, M.R., in Royal Aquarium v. Parkinson, 1 Q. B. 431 (443).

(10) Dawkins v. Lord Rokeby, L. R. 8 Q. B. 255, O. A. L. R. 7 H. L. 744, explained per Lord Esher, M.R. in the Royal Aquarium v. Parkinson, (1892) 1 Q. B. 431 (442). It may be added that Kelley, C.B., based his decision on the ground that the motives as well as the duty of a military officer, acting in a military capacity, are questions for a military tribunal alone, and not for a Court of law to determine." Dawkins v. Lord Rokeby, L. R. 8 Q. B. 255 (272). Indeed, the learned Judge cited the Queen's Regulations (ib., p. 266), in which it is expressly laid down, that a Court of inquiry is not to be considered in any light as a judicial body; been ordered by the Commander-in-Chief who was to pass the final order. So in a similar case, where the Viceroy suspected the Maharaja of Panna of being implicated in a case of murder by poisoning, and he thereupon appointed a special Court of inquiry who allowed counsel, recorded evidence, and submitted their report to the Viceroy for final orders, it was held by the Privy Council that the Court so constituted was in no sense a judicial tribunal, and its inquiry was not a judicial inquiry, nor its report a "judgment" against which there could be an appeal. It was in short a tribunal specially constituted "for the information of his mind," the final order passed being an act of State outside the pale of municipal law.<sup>1</sup>

576. Illegal Acts Excluded.—Assuming now that the act complained of was a judicial act, and not within the power given by law, the section requires that it should be further done in good faith and in the belief that it was sanctioned by law. These two requisites are the necessary pre-requisites for exoneration from criminal responsibility of all persons empowered to act under the direction of law. Law extends its protection only to a person who bona fide and not absurdly believes that he is acting in pursuance of his legal power.<sup>2</sup> The question of bona fides is out of question, if the act complained of was wholly illegal. A Commanding Officer of a Cantonment believing a person to be dangerous by reason of insanity, actual or impending, caused him to be arrested and detained in his house for medical examination. The medical officers reported him to be sane, but recommended that he should be placed under the observation of the Civil Surgeon of the place, for which purpose he was further detained. The Commanding Officer who had control and direction of the Police in the Cantonment did not act or intend to act under the Lunatic Asylums Act.<sup>3</sup> The person wrongfully detained sued the Commanding Officer for damages for false imprisonment, and the case ultimately went up to the Privy Council, whose judgment was delivered by Sir Barnes Peacock, who assured, as it was the finding of the Courts below, that at the time of his detention the plaintiff was not a dangerous lunatic. He also found that the defendant had acted bona fide in the discharge of a public duty, and under belief that the plaintiff was dangerous by reason of lunacy. But at the same time he held that there was no law which empowered the defendant to put the plaintiff under restraint for such a purpose, nor had he, after the report of the medical officers that the plaintiff was perfectly sane, any colour of authority for keeping him under restraint in order that he might be removed from the Cantonment and placed under the observation of the Civil Surgeon, even though recommended so to do by the medical officers. The Act for the protection of the judicial officers was relied on by counsel of the defendant, but their Lordships summarily rejected that contention, holding that the defendant was neither a judicial officer nor did he act judicially. In the result he was mulcted in damages for wrongful confinement.<sup>4</sup>

577. The same view was taken in another case in which a Commanding Officer of a regiment had caused a contractor of the regiment to be arrested and kept in confinement on a reasonable suspicion of fraud entertained against him, erroneously believing himself to be lawfully possessed of the authority to do so, though he was shewn not to have acted in malice or conscious violation of the law, nor for the furtherance of any unlawful purpose. The same view was taken by the Madras Court<sup>5</sup> in the case of a Collector of Sea Customs who professed to act under an Act which empowered the levy of a penalty in case of importation of contraband goods. Under that Act,<sup>6</sup> the Collector seized the goods of a merchant from Ceylon on the ground that he was smuggling opium. It was found that the action of the defendant in fining him by telegraph Rs. 56,000 after 15 months' delay without a trial and and this view was affirmed O. A. in L. R. 7 H. L. 744 (754) by Lord Cairns, L. C., who held that though the inquiry was not judicial, still the same exemption from prosecution of witnesses examined by it should be made on the ground of public policy, and this view was concurred in by the Full Court.

(1) Maharajah Madho Singh, 6 Bom. L. R. 763, P. C.

(2) Spooner v. Juddow, 4 M. I. A. 353 (379).

(3) XXXVI of 1858, s. 4.

(4) Calder v. Halket, 2 M. I. A. 293 (308)

(5) Patton v. Hureen Ram, 3 Agr 409.

(6) VI of 1863, s. 24.

without hearing him, and seizing and selling his palmyras to levy the fine, was, apart from jurisdiction, wholly illegal.<sup>1</sup> That in these circumstances, he could not have acted in good faith is clear; for fair enquiry and considerations which are indicative of good faith were totally wanting. The fact that his proceedings were acquiesced in by his superior officers is immaterial, as is also the fact that he may have entertained a belief that he had jurisdiction. A judicial officer is only protected if he exercises reasonable care in the performance of his official duty.<sup>2</sup> Mere bonafide belief is, therefore, not enough, it must be supported by act and conduct from which the Court may reasonably draw an inference that the defendant had fallen into the error in spite of himself. A Magistrate who wilfully acts beyond his jurisdiction does so at his own peril. He is entitled to no consideration,<sup>3</sup> as Lord Denman said in a case: "Magistrates cannot, as is often said, give themselves jurisdiction merely by their own affirmation of it."<sup>4</sup> So where a Magistrate charged and convicted a tailor for "misbehaviour as a domestic servant" under the Regulation of 1814 without information or evidence of the offence charged, and in spite of the plea of the accused that he had given up service because his wages had not been paid, into which there had been no enquiry, it was held that the Magistrate had acted without jurisdiction, and as he had failed to act reasonably, carefully and circumspectly, he could not be said to have acted in good faith, and he was, therefore, not entitled to the protection of the Act.<sup>5</sup>

578. The plea of bona fides can, therefore, only arise when there was a jurisdiction, but which was exercised under a misapprehension either with reference to a person not within it, or in excess of the power of the tribunal. It is out of place where there was initially no jurisdiction, and when the proceeding was throughout corum non judice.<sup>6</sup> If there was a jurisdiction, the fact that it was improperly conferred, or was otherwise defective, would be covered by the rule (§ 573).

579. Reasonable Belief in Jurisdiction Essential.—But a Magistrate who, whether from indolence or considerations of his own convenience, remanded under-trial prisoners for over three months, his proceedings could not be characterized as anything but unwarrantable and illegal.<sup>7</sup> An order for the removal of an obstruction under s. 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure was in one case held not to be a judicial order, consequently a Magistrate who passes an illegal order has nothing to protect him.<sup>8</sup> But such an order cannot but be regarded as judicial, though it is necessarily summary.<sup>9</sup> And a Magistrate acts improperly when, purporting to act under that section, he orders the demolition of a house which is neither an obstruction nor a nuisance, though if, in such a case, the Magistrate honestly believed that he had jurisdiction, he was held entitled to the protection.<sup>10</sup> But the soundness of this view is open to question.

580. If a Magistrate acts in defiance of law with his eyes open, it cannot be said that he had acted in good faith. Indeed, such an order may be properly termed malicious, using that term in its wider sense. As Taunton, J., said: "There are two sorts of malice, malice in fact and malice in law; the former denoting an act done from ill-will towards an individual; the latter a wrongful act intentionally done without just cause or excuse."<sup>11</sup> This appears to have been the view taken in a case in which a Magistrate, professing to act under what is now s. 144 of the Code of Criminal Procedure,<sup>12</sup> had ordered the cutting of the plaintiff's bund

(1) Collector v. Chithambaram, 1 M. 89 (97) F. B.

(2) Collector v. Chithambaram, 1 M. 89 (106) F. B.

(3) Amiappa v. Mhd. Mustafa, 2 M. H. C. R. 443.

(4) Bolton, 1 Q. B. 66.

(5) Vithoba v. Corfield, 3 B. H. C. R. (App.) 1 (24).

(6) Sinclair v. Broughton, 9 C. 341 (353, 354) P. C.

(7) Sahoo, 11 W. R. 19.

(8) Ashburner v. Keshav, 4 B. H. C. R.

(A. C.) 150.

(9) Seshaiyangar v. Raghunatha, 5 M. H. C. R. 345 (353); Taraknath v. Collector, 4 B. L. R. 37 (40, 41); Bishoo v. Chunder, 10 W. R. 27; Jaykisto, 1 B. L. R. (A. Cr.) 20; Bhyroo Dyal, 3 B. L. R. (A. Cr.) 4.

(10) Seshaiyangar v. Raghunatha, 5 M. H. C. R. 345 (359).

(11) Mitchell v. Jenkins, 5 B. & Ad. 5; Kindersley, J., in Collector v. Chithambaram, 1 M. 89 (99) F. B.

(12) The case was decided under Act XXV of 1861, ss. 62, 308 (Cr. P. Code).

to erect which he had acquired a right by prescription or user from time immemorial. In this case, the Magistrate had ordered demolition of the bund on a mere police report and without complying with the procedure laid down by law. He justified his action on the ground of public convenience, but on this the Court pertinently remarked that a Magistrate's idea of what is for the public convenience, in no degree justified him in appropriating or destroying the property of other persons, except in such manner as the law provides.

581. "The Government and the officers of Government are just as much bound to proceed in such matters according to law, as are private individuals; and the Government and its officers are just as much liable in damages for illegally appropriating or destroying property, for the purpose of adding to the convenience of the public, as is a private individual who appropriates or destroys property for his own convenience."<sup>1</sup> "The Judge says that he erred from ignorance and a misapprehension of the mode of procedure; that he acted judicially; and that it does not appear that his proceedings were characterized by a want of care." "In my opinion," observed Macpherson, J., "when a Magistrate violates the plain language of the law and the very first principles of judicial inquiry, his proceedings presumably are characterized by a want of care; and I think that, in the absence of any evidence to rebut that presumption, the Judge of the Court below was wrong in law in holding otherwise."<sup>2</sup>

582. The amount of care and circumspection required varies with the nature of the proceedings and the position of the accused. A Magistrate could scarcely hope to be acquitted of malice, where he issues a warrant for the arrest of a respectable person without any formal complaint or recorded evidence. Action on the report of Police is as strongly to be deprecated as it is usual with inexperienced Magistrates. The extensive power of arrest possessed by Magistrates must proceed from the exercise of judicial discretion, either on the Magistrate's own view, or upon materials furnished by a person responsible for putting the law in motion.<sup>3</sup> Even as such, the Magistrate is not a mere automaton, influenced by statements, however vague and improbable. Before deciding to take away a man's liberty, he must have reasonable and sufficient grounds for believing that action on his part is necessary. The question in such a case is not the question of jurisdiction but of abuse of jurisdiction. And the law on the subject is clear. Where the Magistrate's act is within his jurisdiction, the question is: Was his act illegal or merely irregular? If the latter, he is protected. In any other case, his liability depends upon circumstances. If act was both illegal and mala fide, he is entitled to no immunity merely on the ground that his act was within his jurisdiction. In this respect, law discriminates between a Court of Record and an inferior Court. In the case of the former, law presumes ability and experience to such an extent that it is held to be exempt even though its action be alleged to be falso malitiose et scientor.<sup>4</sup> But the law makes no such presumption in favour of inferior justices.<sup>5</sup>

583. The presence of "good faith" is, therefore, the touchstone of judicial liability, whether his act was with or without jurisdiction. But the fact that an act was within jurisdiction may be evidence of good faith, though it is not invariably so. So the law was thus summed up by Cockburn, C.J., in his charge to the Grand Jury: "When there is jurisdiction, but the jurisdiction is exercised under a misapprehension, either with reference to a person not within it, or in excess of the power of the tribunal, in such cases the persons acting with judicial authority would not be criminally responsible; but supposing that there is no jurisdiction at all,

(1) Taraknath v. Collector, 4 B. L. R. 37 (47); on review Collector v. Taraknath, 7 B. L. R. 449.

(2) Taraknath v. Collector, 4 B. L. R. 37 (49).

(3) Surendra Nath Roy, 5 B. L. R. 274 (291).

(4) Per North, C.J., in Bernardiston v.

Soame, Tay. Rep. 291; per Earle, C.J., in Kemp v. Neville, 10 C. B. (N. S.) 523 (547); Taaffe v. Lord Downes, 3 M. I. A. 36n (39); Fray v. Sir Colin Blackburn, 3 B. & S. 67; Hammond v. Howell, 1 M. 84, O. A. 2 M. 218; Anderson v. Gorrie, 1 Q. B. 688.

(5) Ferguson v. The Earl of Kimoul, 9 Cl. & F. 311; Miller v. Slave, 2 W. Bl. 1141.

that the whole proceeding is corum non judice, that the judicial functions are exercised by persons who have no judicial authority or power, and a man's life is taken, that is murder; for murder is putting a man to death without jurisdiction, or without any of those mitigating circumstances which reduce the crime of murder to one of low degree. Thus in the case put by Lord Coke of a lieutenant having a commission of martial law, who puts a man to death by martial law in time of peace,—that, says Lord Coke, is murder.

584. “Again, on the second branch of the case, in which we take the legality of martial law for granted, if you think that although there may have been a mistake, and most grievous mistake, in condemning and sending this man to death, yet that the proceedings were done honestly and faithfully, and in what was believed to be the due course of the administration of justice, again I say you ought not to harass the accused persons by sending them for trial to another tribunal.”<sup>1</sup>

585. Civil and Criminal Liability.—In the cases above cited instances have been for the most part given of cases in which the Judges were proceeded against civilly. But the same principles which govern their civil liability also govern their criminal liability. The difference, if any, between the two cases, is one of degree and not of quality. So it is laid down in Bacon's Abridgment: “Any fraud or misconduct imputed to Magistrates in proceeding, notwithstanding the issue of a certiorari, may be ground for a criminal proceeding against them, and Lord Kenyon<sup>2</sup> said he believed there were instances in which a criminal information had been granted against Magistrates acting in Sessions. But these must have been instances of manifest oppression and gross abuse of power, for generally the Justices are not punishable for what they do in Sessions.”<sup>3</sup> Such was held to be the case where the Justices had caused a woman to be whipped for damning an older man under a statute which only applied to vagrants,<sup>4</sup> or where they corruptly refused to issue licenses to publicans.<sup>5</sup> And the result would have been the same, even if, apart from corruption, they had acted from malevolence or perversity. So Ashurst, J., said in a case in which the Justices had discharged a vagrant, who had been committed by another Justice, from mere caprice: “This, therefore, was gross misbehaviour in the defendants, which cannot be imputed to mistake or ignorance of law. And though they have denied generally that they acted from any interested motive in this business, yet that is not sufficient, for if they acted even from passion or opposition, that is equally corrupt as if they acted from pecuniary considerations.”<sup>6</sup>

586. The oppression and tyrannical partiality of Judges, Justices and other Magistrates in the administration, and under colour of their offices, may be punished by impeachment in Parliament, or by information or indictment, according to the rank of the offenders, and the circumstances of the offence.<sup>7</sup> Thus, if a Justice of the Peace abuses the authority reposed in him by law, in order to gratify his malice, or promote his private interests or ambition, he may be punished by indictment or information. But though a Justice of the Peace act illegally, yet if he has acted honestly and candidly, without oppression, malice, revenge, or any bad view or ill-intention whatsoever, the Court will never punish him by the extraordinary course of an information, but will leave the party complaining to his ordinary remedy.<sup>8</sup> And whenever Justices have been challenged, either by way of indictment, or application for a criminal information, the question has always been, not whether the act done might, upon full and mature investigation, be found strictly right, but from what motive it had proceeded, whether from a dishonest, oppressive, or corrupt motive, under which description fear and favour may generally be included, or from mistake or error. In the former case alone, they have become the subject of punishment.<sup>9</sup>

(1) Cockburn, pp. 124, 156.

(2) Seton, 7 T. R. 373.

(3) 4 Bac. Abr. 631.

(4) Mather, 2 Barnardiston, 249.

(5) Davis, 3 Burr. 1317; Holland, 1 T. R. 692.

(6) Brooke, 2 T. R. 190.

(7) 4 Black., 141.

(8) 1 Black., 354, Note (17); Palmer, 2 Burr. 1162; 1 Russ., Bk. 2, Ch. XIV (5th Ed.), p. 297.

(9) Per Lord Tenterden, C.J., in Borrow, 3 B. & Ald. 434; ex parte Fenton, 2 Ad. & E. 127; Black, 354.

So, if a Magistrate were to refuse bail in a bailable offence wilfully and in defiance of the law, he will be liable to a criminal prosecution.<sup>1</sup>

587. The Code of Criminal Procedure provides that no Judge or other public servant, not removable from his office by the Government of India or the local Government, can be prosecuted for any offence of which he is accused as such Judge or public servant, without the previous sanction of the Government having power to order his removal. Such Government may determine the person by whom, the manner in which, and the offence or offences for which the prosecution of such Judge or public servant is to be conducted, and may specify the Court before which the trial is to be held.<sup>2</sup> The object of this provision is to prevent petty or vexatious prosecutions.

78. Nothing which is done in pursuance of, or which is warranted by the judgment or order of, a Court of Justice, if done whilst such judgment or order remains in force, is an offence, notwithstanding the Court may have had no jurisdiction to pass such judgment or order, provided the person doing the act in good faith believes that the Court had such jurisdiction.

588. Analogous Law.—This section is a continuation of the last, and it is subject to the same rules. Its provisions should be compared with those of the Act for the protection of judicial officers, which is quoted here, so far as it is material for the purpose of the present section. The language of that Act and this section is not similar, but how far the two really differ will be presently considered. (§ 594).

The clause under reference runs thus : “ (1) .....No officer of any Court or other person, bound to execute the lawful warrants or orders of any such Judge, Magistrate, Justice of the Peace, Collector or other person acting judicially, shall be liable to be sued in any Civil Court, for the execution of any warrant or order, which he would be bound to execute, if within the jurisdiction of the person issuing the same.”<sup>3</sup>

589. The Police Act lays down the following clause which confers a special protection upon police-officers executing the order of Magistrates :—

“ Section 43. When any action or prosecution shall be brought or any proceedings held against any police-officer for any act done by him in such capacity, it shall be lawful for him to plead that such act was done by him under the authority of a warrant issued by a Magistrate.

“ Such plea shall be proved by the production of the warrant directing the act, and purporting to be signed by such Magistrate, and the defendant shall thereupon be entitled to a decree in his favour, notwithstanding any defect of jurisdiction in such Magistrate. No proof of the signature of such Magistrate shall be necessary, unless the Court shall see reason to doubt its being genuine.

“ Provided always that any remedy which the party may have against the authority issuing such warrant shall not be affected by anything contained in this section.”<sup>4</sup>

590. Principle.—Protection of judicial officers would be inadequate and incomplete, if, though enjoining personal immunity, they may be attacked through their ministerial officers who have acted in obedience to their commands. The position of a ministerial officer, acting under the direction of a Judge, is not incompatible with that of a soldier obeying the commands of his commander. So Alison, in his Principles of Criminal Law of Scotland, writes : “ The express command of a Magistrate or officer will exonerate an inferior officer or soldier, unless the command be to do something plainly illegal, or beyond his known duty.” If through gross ignorance, or neglect or design, a Judge or Magistrate pronounces an unlawful sentence, what shall be said of the officers and others who carry it into execution? If the order or warrant was plainly illegal, as for example, to strangle a prisoner in

(1) Badger, 4 Q. B. 468 ; Dodgson, 9 A. & E. 704.

(2) S. 197, Cr. P. C.

(3) Act XVIII of 1850, S. 1.

(4) Act V of 1861, s. 43. For local variations, see the Madras District Police Act (Mad. Act XXIV of 1859), s. 54 ; The jail, or to poison him, or the like, certainly the mere possession of such a warrant will not prevent the officer, who wickedly yields it obedience, from being held as party in the legal murder, and suffering for its commission. But, on the other hand, if the error was in such a part of the proceedings as the officer entrusted with its execution has no opportunity of seeing and is not called upon in duty to examine, and if the warrant put in his hands be fair and in ordinary form, certainly he will not be answerable for any illegality or vice in the previous, and to him, inscrutable proceedings.

Madras City Police Act (Mad. Act III of 1888), s. 81 ; The Bombay City Police Act (Bom. Act V of 1902), s. 140 (3) ; The Bombay District Police Act (Bom. Act IV of 1890), s. 80 (3) ; Bombay Village Police Act (Bom. Act VIII of 1867), s. 20.

591. “The same distinction is applicable in the case of a soldier acting in obedience to the orders of his superior officer, with this additional circumstance in his favour, that he is not only in a much humbler station, and trained to more implicit obedience than a legal functionary, but subject to a peculiar and peremptory code of laws, armed with powers of extraordinary severity, for the express purpose of enforcing on his part the most implicit obedience to command. It will require, therefore, the very strongest case to subject a soldier to punishment for what he does in obedience to the distinct commands of his commanding officer. But still this privilege must have its limits; it is confined to what is commanded in the course of official duty, which plainly and evidently does not transgress its limits. For what if an officer were to command a private soldier to commit murder or to steal, or to aid him in a rape, or if he order a file of soldiers to fire on an inoffensive multitude, certainly in none of these cases will the privates be exempt from punishment if they yield obedience to such criminal mandates.”<sup>1</sup>

592. It will be noticed that (a) good faith and (b) belief in the legality of the order are the only two requisites of an exemption from criminal liability under this section. Mistake of law may, therefore, be a good defence under this section, for in believing that an order issued was legal, a person may be misled by a mistaken view of law as much as by a mistaken view of facts.

593. Meaning of Words.—“In pursuance of, or which is warranted by the judgment or order,” i.e., the act alone was either ordered by the Court or is justified by its order. The judgment or order must be in writing, unless an oral order is authorized by law.<sup>2</sup> “If done whilst such judgment or order remains in force”: Suppose a warrant is issued for the arrest of a person or the attachment of his property, and while the bailiff is on his way to execution, the judgment of the Court is reversed. The bailiff does not know of it and cannot be communicated with. Is he protected under the section? Apparently not under this section, for the subsistence of the judgment is a conditio sine qua non for exemption. But he may be exempt under section 76 or section 79. “Notwithstanding the Court may have had no jurisdiction”: The question raised is one of jurisdiction, and not propriety. A judicial order, if within jurisdiction confers an absolute immunity upon persons commissioned to execute it whatever may be said against its propriety. It is only in the case of a judgment without jurisdiction that good faith and belief in its legality are essential to immunity. “The Court had such jurisdiction,” i.e., at the time of the judgment or order.

594. Protection of Ministerial Acts.—This section extends, as regards criminal prosecution of ministerial officers, the same immunity which they enjoy from civil liability under the Act of 1850.<sup>3</sup> Under that Act the immunity is confined to the execution of any warrant or order which under this section is extended to anything done in pursuance of, or which is warranted by the judgment or order. The difference in language between the two statutes is noticeable not only because they both relate to the same subject but also because they are complementary safeguards against accountability of persons placed in positions of subordinate responsibility. Now ordinarily, it may be taken as a sound maxim, that a person's civil liability for a wrong is greater and not less than his criminal liability. If so, it follows:

(1) P. 673.

(3) Judicial Officers' Protection Act (Act

(2) Maung Pa, (1908) 4 L. B. R. 253, 8 XVIII of 1850).
Cr. L. J. 68.

that the Act of 1850 should be wider in its operation than the present section. But it is not. For under the language used by the two sections it may be that a person cannot be reached on the civil side, but still he may be proceeded against criminally. For under the Act of 1850 anything done in execution of any warrant or order protects the officer charged with its execution whether the warrant was or was not legal and whether it was issued with or without jurisdiction. But under this section the officer is not to the same extent protected against criminal prosecution, for if the warrant was without jurisdiction, it must be shown that "the person doing the act in good faith believed that the Court had such jurisdiction." But this need not be pleaded in bar of a civil suit. So it was held in an English case that the governor of a prison is protected in obeying a warrant of commitment, on its face valid, though it may in fact be illegal.<sup>1</sup> So much appears to be deducible from the language of the Act itself. For it protects persons bound to execute legal warrants, who do any act "for the execution of any warrant which they would be bound to execute, if within the jurisdiction of the person issuing the same." In other words, persons placed in habitual obedience to the lawful orders of others are entitled to presume that all orders emanating from them are lawful, and if any single order be illegal, they cannot be held to act at their peril. At the same time no subordinate, whatever his subordination, can be exonerated for doing an act palpably and apparently illegal. Having had an actual notice of illegality or defective jurisdiction, he is bound to pause and not persist in an illegal pursuit.

595. It is not necessary under the Civil Act that the officer should have been accustomed to execute orders of Court. All that is necessary is that it should have been within the scope of his ordinary duties. If, for example, an orderly peon is employed as a bailiff, he is not entitled to exceptional protection. But this is not ingredient in judging of the criminality of an act under this section, which approaches the question from a somewhat different standpoint. In the first place, while the Civil Act confines its protection only to "an officer of any Court or other person bound to execute the lawful warrants or order," the section is more general, and protects not only such persons but also the public at large—the test being the act and not the person, and the limit of criminal responsibility being determined not by the ordinary duties, but by the terms of the order and belief in its legality. For instance, a person may be awarded a decree declaring his right to maintain a police force. The Court may or may not have jurisdiction to pass such a decree, but if there was such a decree, and he believed in the jurisdiction of the Court, he is entitled to enlist a police force, though, by so doing, he may contravene the law. So if a Court pass a decree for possession of property or delivery of land and on motion or appeal the judgment-debtor obtains stay of execution, his resistance to execution by the decree-holder would be as legal as seizure in execution on behalf of the latter.

596. In this connection the words "in pursuance of" must be distinguished from "warranted by." The former imply an act directly authorized by the order, the latter an act which, though not expressly authorized by it, follows from it, as a matter of course, or as a matter of legal or logical consequence. A warrant of arrest authorized the seizure of the person ordered to be arrested in pursuance thereof. If he escapes, his recapture again and again is warranted by it as a matter of necessity. Whether an act is warranted by, or is done in pursuance of an order, is a question, the answer to which must depend upon the construction of the order itself, and the legal incidents that may be attached to it. For instance, the warrant of a Civil Court, authorizing the seizure of moveable property, must be read subject to the rule that a person executing any process under the Code of Civil Procedure directing or authorizing the seizure of moveable property shall not enter any dwelling-house after sunset and before sunrise, or break open any outer door of a dwelling house.<sup>2</sup> He has, therefore, no right to seize property of a third person, or in possession of a third person in pursuance of such a warrant, which further does not warrant the breaking open the doors of a third person, or of the judgment-debtor except as and to the extent allowed by law.<sup>1</sup> If, therefore, a bailiff exceeds the power conferred upon him by the warrant and authorized by law, the party wronged may treat him as a trespasser, and avail himself of his right of private defence, or sue him for recovery of damages.<sup>2</sup> So, since the judgment-debtor is exempt from arrest while attending a Court, the protection being eundo, morando, et redeundo,<sup>3</sup> his arrest, while on his way to the Court in obedience to a citation to give evidence, and made within the precincts of a Court and with some show of violence and in the sight of the Magistrate, could not be justified by reference to the section.<sup>4</sup> Indeed, the use of force is only in rare cases justified by the Civil Procedure Code; and whenever it is authorized, it must be used with discretion. In the absence of an express direction a bailiff has no right to use force, and if, therefore, in executing a civil process he breaks open the gate of the judgment-debtor, he is guilty of mischief and may be proceeded against as such.<sup>5</sup> So again, since the jurisdiction to arrest is territorial, a person without jurisdiction cannot be illegally brought within jurisdiction and then arrested.<sup>6</sup> An officer charged with the duty to arrest must be in possession of his authority, for under the Code of Criminal Procedure it is obligatory on him to notify the substance of the warrant to the person to be arrested, and, if so required, to show him the warrant,<sup>7</sup> and the same rule would appear to apply to an arrest made in execution of a civil process.<sup>8</sup> If, therefore, a person attempts to arrest another under a warrant not in his possession, he may plead this section as a defence to a charge of wrongful confinement or wrongful restraint; but the person arrested has then also the right of private defence, and he cannot be punished, if he resists his seizure or escapes from custody.<sup>9</sup> In such cases, though the judgment or order may be legal, and there may be no defect of jurisdiction, still the exemption does not extend, because the act complained of was not done in pursuance of the judgment or order, nor was it warranted by it.

(1) Olliet v. Bessey, T. Jones R. 214; Butt v. Newman, Gow. 97; Henderson v. Preston, 121 Q. B. D. 362.

(2) S. 271, Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), now see s. 62, Act V of 1908.

597. So under the Gambling Act<sup>10</sup> the District Superintendents of Police and Magistrates, if on credible information satisfied, are empowered to authorize police officers of a prescribed rank to enter and search suspected gaming-houses. The receipt of credible information is a sine qua non of a legal search.<sup>11</sup> But if the officer concerned issue a search-warrant without credible information, the warrant is defective,<sup>12</sup> but the officer executing it is protected. These may be said to be cases of latent illegalities which no person in subordinate charge can be reasonably expected to canvass; where, however, the defect is patent and such as the exercise of a reasonable care may unravel, the case is different. For there is then no good faith. Indeed, in this connection it may be well to note that as there are different degrees of illegalities, so are there different grades of criminal liability. The judgment or order here referred to may be (i) illegal, or (ii) without jurisdiction. Its illegality may be either (a) patent, or (b) latent; and as regards jurisdiction, (a) it may have been issued by a Court acting wholly without jurisdiction, or (b) having jurisdiction, it may have been irregularly or improperly exercised. These distinctions

(1) Gazi, 7 B. H. C. R. 83.

(2) Gazi, 7 B. H. C. R. 83; Damodher v. Lall, 8 B. H. C. R. (A. C.) 177; Goma v. Gokal Dass, 3 B. 74; Raj Bullub v. Issan Chunder, 7 W. R. 355; Subjan v. Sariatalla, 12 W. R. 329; Kishorymohan v. Hursook, 17 C. 436, P.C.

(3) "While going, staying and returning."

(4) Thakoordas v. Shunker Roy, 3 W. R. 53.

(5) Anderson v. McQueen, 7 W. R. 12.

(6) Shearwood, 2 Tay & Bell 71.

(7) S. 80, Cr. P. C.

(8) Amarnath, 5 A. 318.

(9) Amarnath, 5 A. 318; Janki Pershad, 3 A 205; Abdul Gafur, 23 C. 896; Satis Chundra

v. Jadu Nandan, 26 C. 748; Durga v. Nabin 25 C. 274; H. Colville v. Kris Kishore, 26 C. 746. The English Law is identical, Codd v. Cabe, 1 Ex. D. 352. It would be otherwise in the case of an arrest by a police officer on a suspicion of theft, Vyankatray, 7 B. H. C. R. 50.

(10) S. 5, Act III of 1867.

(11) Subsookh, 2 N. W. P. H. C. R. 4762 Chunni Mull, (1871) P. R. No. 35; Sandhi v. Kanhya, (1876) P. R. No. 14; Kada (188 P. R. No. 6 F. B.

(12) Banwari, (1895) P. R. No. 38; Vir Singh, (1895) P. R. No. 59.

do not directly affect the question to be here considered; but their importance will be readily appreciated in cases arising out of resistance to lawful authority.<sup>1</sup>

598. Lastly, the section contemplates cases in which the act lacks in bona fide belief in the jurisdiction of the Court. Criminal law protects person acting in good faith. On the other hand, it makes no concession in favour of persons who act with their eyes open. In considering this question, regard must always be had to the nature of the act as well as to the position and education of the person acting. A jailor charged with the duty of carrying out the sentence of whipping may be aware that the Magistrate had no jurisdiction to pass it. He is not then bound to execute his order, and if he does so, he acts at his own peril. On the other hand, a menial flagellator may plead his exoneration on the basis of this section. The exercise of good faith then depends not only on the nature of the act, but also upon the character of the actor. The greater the illegality, the less is the chance of exoneration. But it is not all. For even a most flagrant act of illegality in a judgment or order may be unnoticed by a person ignorant of the language and too indolent to get it read. Such a person may lack "good faith" if he believed in jurisdiction without inquiry and without bestowing even a casual attention. A nod is as good as a wink to such a blind person, and he cannot claim protection of law: Vigilantibus, non dormientibus jura subveniunt.<sup>2</sup>

Act done by a person justified, or by mistake of fact believing himself justified by law.

79. Nothing is an offence which is done by any person who is justified by law, or who by reason of a mistake of fact and not by reason of a mistake of law in good faith, believes himself to be justified by law, in doing it.

Illustration.

A sees Z commit what appears to A to be a murder. A, in the exercise, to the best of his judgment, exerted in good faith, of the power which the law gives to all persons of apprehending murderers in the act, seizes Z, in order to bring Z before the proper authorities. A has committed no offence, though it may turn out that Z was acting in self-defence.

[ Good faith—S. 52, supra. ]

599. Analogous Law.—This section is closely analogous to section 76 with which it should be read in order to understand its true significance. It is well to note that the same facts which exempt a person under that section are sufficient to exempt him here. The commentary under this section is, therefore, merely supplementary.

600. Principle.—Section 76 deals with cases in which a person acts in the belief that he is bound by law to act. This section deals with a case in which a person acts in the belief that he is justified by law. Otherwise, the two sections are identical. Cases in which a person feels justified by law are naturally more numerous and complicated than those in which the act is the result of a legal compulsion. This section, like section 76, is generally worded, and protects not only acts justified but not justifiable by law, but also acts both so justified and justifiable, in which case, however, the question of criminality does not arise, for what is legal cannot be criminal. The section then properly applies to cases in which a person acts in the belief that his act is justified by law but which it is not.

601. Meaning of Words.—"Justified by law": The word "law" is used here in its large sense as signifying both written and unwritten law (§ 537). "Mistake of fact," "Mistake of Law" for the meaning of which, see section 76 (§ 545). "Believes himself to be justified by law": It is not necessary that the belief so entertained should be communicated to others. All that is necessary is that it should be entertained in the mind of the actor at the time of the performance of the act. This is essential, for belief ex post facto can have no effect upon its criminality.

(1) Ss. 172-190, 223-227, 353.

vigilant, not of the sleepy."

(2) "Laws come to the assistance of the

602. Acts Justified by Law.—As remarked before, acts justified by law form by far the most complicated and numerous cases in criminal law. In England, the powers of Government officers depend partly upon statute and partly upon common law. In India, however, where the laws have been mostly codified, Government servants derive their powers mainly from Statute Law, though they still retain some powers not derived from Statute. This is specially so in the case of superior officers of the Crown possessing some of the attributes of sovereignty, whose acts cannot be canvassed in a criminal Court, because they are done by virtue of a power which stands above the law.

603. How far this power is possessed, and in what cases it may be exercised, is a question, the answer to which depends upon the place assigned to the Government of India in the English constitution. And as the Government of India doubtless, possesses and exercises some of the delegated functions of sovereignty, it becomes necessary to inquire into the legal status and liability of the British Sovereign who stands at the head of the English constitution. Now, as regards the king, the law ascribes to him in his political capacity absolute perfection. The king can do no wrong. This ancient maxim does not mean that whatever the king does is just and lawful. It means only two things: first, that whatever is exceptionable in the conduct of public affairs is not to be imputed to the king, nor is he answerable for it personally to his people; and secondly, that the prerogative of the Crown extends not to do any injury; it is created for the benefit of the people, and therefore, cannot be exerted to their prejudice.<sup>1</sup> By virtue of this prerogative the king is not under the coercive power of the law, which will not suppose him capable of committing a folly, much less a crime.

604. Powers of the Government of India.—Now, as the Government of India (which only means the Governor-General in Council) is a Government subordinate to the Crown and Parliament, it necessarily possesses rights and powers which are by no means co-extensive with those possessed by the Crown. And whatever powers it possesses, it may transmit by delegation to local or subordinate Governments under it. So far as the powers of the Government are conferred or defined by Statute, no difficulty need be encountered in the construction of the section. For a reference to the Statute will at once shew whether the act sought to be justified by law is so justifiable. The question, however, becomes more difficult when the justification is made on any of the other grounds.

605. Its Amenability to Civil Court.—That acts done in the execution of these sovereign powers were not subject to the control of the Municipal Courts either of India or England has been held in several cases.<sup>2</sup> On the other hand, it is clear that a corporation or company wielding sovereign powers cannot be exempt from amenability to Municipal Courts merely because it is a sovereign body, though, its acts, in respect of which its liability is to be determined, may in no wise possess the attributes of sovereignty.

606. Act of State.—It is thus clear that a Sovereign may possess rights which may be amenable to the jurisdiction and control of the Municipal Courts, and in respect of them it would be no defence to say that they were acts of State.<sup>3</sup> On the other hand, the Municipal Courts cannot arrogate to themselves any jurisdiction over the legitimate exercise of sovereign rights against which the subject may have a remedy—as will be seen in the sequel—but that it is not in the Civil Court. So far it is clear and universally conceded. But it does not advance the discussion much further. We have still to ascertain the exact nature and extent of the two classes of rights, for upon that depends the practical solution of the question. There

(1) 2 Black., p. 246; 3 Black., 254, 255.

(2) Nabob of Arcot v. E. I. Co., (1793) 4 Bro. C. C. 180; E. I. C. v. Syed Ali, (1827) M. I. A. 555 (577, 578), P. C.; Secretary of State v. Kamachee, 7 M. I. A. 476 (531).

(3) The term "act of State" has been used in two senses—in one sense as meaning the lawful acts of the executive Government and its servants; in the other and narrower sense, as denoting warlike and other acts done by the authority of the Crown affecting rights of aliens out of its dominions.

are, no doubt, certain acts of the sovereign power which would be obviously regarded as acts of State. Such would be an act of the Sovereign Power, in relation to peace or war, or an act done by it as being absolutely necessary for the public safety.<sup>1</sup> As the Privy Council observed: "The transactions of independent States between each other are governed by other laws than those which Municipal Courts administer; such Courts have neither the means of deciding what is right, nor the power of enforcing any decision which they may make."<sup>2</sup>

607. But there is no such thing as an act of State between the Sovereign and its subjects. Any seizure of their property or of their person to be legal, must be justified by law. If otherwise, Municipal Courts have the jurisdiction to canvass the propriety and justice of the order and to afford redress in case of impropriety, injustice or illegality. And for this purpose the State has no advantage over a private subject, for both must appeal to the same law for the justification of their act or conduct. So Stephen says: "Courts of law are established for the express purpose of limiting public authority in its conduct towards individuals."<sup>3</sup>

608. Where then the legality of an act is called in question against a servant of the Crown by a British subject, it is not enough for the defendant to plead that it was an act of State; he must also show that it was lawful in accordance with the law of the country in which the act complained of was committed,<sup>4</sup> any unlawful interference with the person and property of the subject being actionable.<sup>5</sup>

609. So far, then, as regards the personal exemptions of executive officers of Government. The liability of judicial officers to criminal prosecution has already been discussed elsewhere. (S. 77)

610. Suspension of Civil Law.—Turning next to the exemption of persons from criminal prosecution on account of justifiable acts, the question may be regarded from the following standpoints: (i) When the act is defended, not under the ordinary law, but on the ground of emergency; (ii) when the act is defended under the ordinary law, but under exceptional circumstances; and (iii) when it is defended on the ground of private defence. As regards justification on the ground of public emergency, sufficient has been said before as to when the use of force is justifiable for the suppression of lawlessness in a given locality. But the question here is, in what circumstances and how far is the suspension of ordinary law, and its supersession by military law justifiable. Now, martial law is neither more nor less than the will of the General who commands the army; in fact, martial law means no law at all. Therefore, the General who declares martial law, and commands that it shall be carried into execution, is bound to lay down the rules, regulations and limits according to which his will is to be carried out.

611. Whenever a country is in open rebellion and the power of the civil authorities cannot be exercised, and the country is in the occupation of the military force, the suspension of civil law follows as a matter of course, for there can be no law when the power to enforce it is gone. In such a case therefore, resort must be had to martial law, in its widest sense.

(1) Cf. Secretary of State v. Kamachee, 7 M. I. A. 476 (501). This view taken by the Supreme Court at Madras is not affected by fact that their judgment was reversed by the Privy Council.—Ib., p. 529.

(2) Per Lord Kingsdown in Secretary of State v. Kamachee, 7 M. I. A. 476 (529).

(3) Stephen's Commentaries, p. 65. But the Sovereign possesses the power of dismissing its servants at pleasure on public grounds, and the persons so dismissed have no redress, though under the same circumstances they might have had redress, if their employer did not wield sovereign powers. This is a prerogative of the Crown justified on the ground of public necessity. It could scarcely be designated an act of State. Grant v. Secretary of State, 2 C. P. D. 445 (460, 463); Chatterton v. Secretary of State, (1895) 2 Q. B. 189; Shenton v. Smith, (1895) A. C. 229; Dunn v. The Queen, (1896) 1 Q. B. 116; Mitchel v. The Queen, (1896) 1 Q. B. 1321 (footnote); Gould v. Stuart, (1896) A. C. 575; Jehangir v. Secretary of State, 27 B. 189, 213.

(4) Carr v. Francis, Times & Co., (1902) A. C. 176.

(5) Fabrigas v. Mostyn, 20 St. Tr. 229; Gubick v. Carrington, 18 St. Tr. 1029; Walker v. Baird, (1892) A. C. 491.

612. When Martial Law Justifiable.—"The proclamation of martial law is in fact no more than a declaration that, under circumstances of urgent public danger, the law is for a time suspended, and that for the safety of the State, the Government deems it necessary to set aside the ordinary rules of law by military force, and to proceed summarily to put down the rebellion, or to punish those who are concerned in it. Courts-martial are employed on such occasions, in order to guard against the danger of subjecting innocent persons to military executions by instituting an enquiry, necessarily only summary, into the guilt of the parties whose immediate punishment is necessary for the restoration of tranquillity and the suppression of rebellion. But Courts-martial so assembled have nothing in common with the tribunals bearing the same name which, under the Mutiny Act, take cognizance of military offences. Courts-martial of such description have powers lawfully defined by the laws under which they are created, and the sentences passed become matters of record, which can be enforced by the military authorities, which is not the case with Courts-martial assembled for the punishment of rebels, under proclamation of martial law, without the sanction of any positive enactment. Sentences of such Courts add nothing to the legality of the punishments inflicted, and serve only to show that these punishments have not been inflicted, without due regard to the guilt of those who were subjected to them. Accordingly, it is the practice where martial law has been used, and punishments have been inflicted under it, that when the danger is over, the Legislature should be applied to for laws of indemnity for the security of those by whom these powers have been exercised, and for whom there is no legal warrant, however necessary it may have been to assume them."<sup>1</sup>

613. The power to proclaim martial law must, however, be exercised by the civil authorities, and that power they may possess either by delegation from the Crown, or by an Act of the Legislature. Possessing the power, it can only be put in use on an occasion of great and imminent emergency. It cannot be put in force in apprehension of—but only in the presence of—danger.

614. General Result.—The decided cases<sup>2</sup> establish three propositions of law, namely, (i) that the Governor has power in case of rebellion to suspend the operation of civil law, and to place the country under martial law, (ii) that an act may be warranted by martial law when it is unjustifiable by civil law, and (iii) that though on the restoration of peace an Act of Indemnity is ordinarily passed legalizing all acts committed during the period of disturbance, and though such an act is, in ordinary cases, sufficient to absolve all persons from criminal or civil liability, still it is not a sufficient answer to an act of gross oppression or brutal barbarity.

615. Emergency Legislation.—These principles have been followed by the Indian Government in the administration of this country, and the State Offences Act,<sup>3</sup> since repealed,<sup>4</sup> empowered—and the power vested in the Governor-General still empowers<sup>5</sup>—the Executive Government to proclaim any area subject to its jurisdiction as in a state of rebellion, and any person committing any crime against the State, or murder, arson, robbery, or other heinous offence against the person or property may, thereafter, be triable by a Commission whose sentence is final.<sup>6</sup> The Commission was, however, only empowered to pass a sentence warranted by law for such crime.<sup>7</sup>

616. Indeed, the rights of private persons during the existence of an insurrection do not necessarily involve suspension of all rights of person and property. They exist, as they existed before, but they are liable to be superseded by the higher interests of society, for the attainments of which they may be even encroached upon.

(1) Finlayson's Review of Authorities as to Suppression of Riot or Rebellion, p. 96.

(2) Phillips v. Eyre, L. R. 6 Q. B. 1 (16, 17); affirming L. R. 4 Q. B. 225; Wright v. Fitzgerald, 27 St. Tr. 759 (765).

(3) Act XI of 1857.

(4) By Act IV of 1921.

(5) S. 72, Government of India Act.

(6) Cf. Act XI of 1857, s. 4. Similar powers were conferred by the Martial Law Ordinances passed from time to time; e.g., Ordinances II-V of 1921 dealing with the outbreak of lawlessness in Malabar.

(7) Act XI of 1857, s. 4.

or ignored : salus populi est suprema lex.<sup>1</sup> The position in such a case is not incomparable to that of a house on fire, when no one denies that it would be perfectly right to pull down neighbouring houses to arrest the progress of the fire. It is, indeed, the natural deduction from the primary law of society, based, as some philosophers term it, on the original compact, that every member of society shall, in the case of necessity, subordinate his individual welfare to the welfare of the community. So there are many cases in which individuals sustain an injury for which the law gives no action, as where private houses are pulled down or bulwarks raised on private property for the preservation and defence of the kingdom against the King's enemies.<sup>2</sup> So long, therefore, as the acts of the Executive Government were directed to the maintenance of order and preservation of peace, the private subject has no remedy, and it would be a sufficient defence to say that the act was considered in the circumstances justifiable. Nor can the conduct of those arraigned for acts done on the spur of the moment and at a time of great national danger be judged by the standard applicable and applied to ordinary cases, though there are naturally limits to this doctrine of irresponsibility, but those limits can only be reached if there is shown to be the presence of malice, cruelty or inhumanity manifestly unnecessary or uncalled for.<sup>3</sup>

617. Operation of an Act of Indemnity.—In order to prevent litigation of this nature it is the usual practice of all States to pass an Act of "grace, and general pardon, indemnity and oblivion," on the restoration of peace. Such an Act has necessarily retrospective effect<sup>4</sup> and is a sufficient defence<sup>5</sup> to all actions, whether civil or criminal, for liability arising under the general law. Of course, if the act sought to be indemnified were tyrannical and inhuman, the Crown has the right of veto which it may be moved to exercise on the advice of its Ministers.<sup>6</sup> But once an Act is passed, and duly assented to by the Crown, it is not for the Municipal Courts, to enquire into its propriety, though they are, of course, precluded from considering how far an alleged act was justified by it.

618. Right of Correction.—There remain other acts which may be justified by law. A moderate chastisement is, for instance, justifiable in the case of parents and persons in loco parentis. It is customary in this country de jure maritiis. The correction in each case must be administered to the person placed as childwife, pupil or apprentice, and in every case it must be moderate and inflicted with discretion. As Cockburn, C.J., said in a case : " A parent, or schoolmaster, who for this purpose represents the parents, and has the parental authority delegated to him, may, for the purpose of correcting what is evil in the child, inflict moderate and reasonable corporal punishment, always, however, with this condition, that it is moderate and reasonable. If it is administered for the gratification of passion or of rage, or if it be immoderate and excessive in its degree, or if it be protracted beyond the child's power of endurance, or with an instrument unfitted for the purpose, and calculated to produce danger to life, or limb, in all such cases the violence is unlawful, and if death ensues, it will be culpable homicide."<sup>7</sup> This was the case of a schoolmaster who had caused the death of a boy by excessive beating. In another case, where the father beat a child two and a half years old with a strap, of which he died, Martin, B., said : " The law as to correction has reference only to a child capable of appreciating correction, and not to an infant two and a half years old. Although a slight slap may lawfully be given to an infant by its mother, more violent treatment of an infant by its father would not be justifiable ; and the only question for the jury to decide is, whether the child's death was accelerated or caused by the blows inflicted by the prisoner."<sup>8</sup>

(1) " The safety of people is the supreme law."

(2) Carter v. Thomas, (1893) 1 Q. B. 673.

(3) Per Buller, J., in Plate Glass Co. v. Meredith, 4 T. R. 797 ; see s. 81, ill. (b).

(4) Act set out in Phillips v. Eyre, L. R. Q. B. 225 (226, 227).

(5) Per Willes, J., in Phillips v. Eyre, L. R. 6 Q. B. 1 (23).

(6) Per Cockburn, C.J., in Phillips v. Eyre, L. R. 4 Q. B. 225 (243).

(7) Hopley, 2 F. & F. 202.

(8) Griffin, 11 Cox. C. C. 402.

619. The question what degree of chastisement is appropriate depends upon the circumstances of each case. A father whose son had got into the habit of stealing, questioned him as to a theft clearly proved against him. He resolutely denied it, whereupon he beat him in a passion with a rope, of which he died. The father was struck with horror at the consequence, as his intention was only to punish him so as to cure him of his wickedness, and it was held that though the beating was justifiable, it had been immoderate and the father was convicted of manslaughter.<sup>1</sup> In another case a girl, aged 15, was placed in the care of her aunt who made her work 14 or 15 hours a day. She was suffering from consumption, and could not turn out the requisite work, whereupon the prisoner gave her a severe beating, saying that she was sure that she was acting the hypocrite and shamming illness, and that she was not unwell. The surgeon said that death was due to consumption accelerated by her ill-treatment. And the question was whether the prisoner could not be convicted of murder, but the Court considered that having regard to the fact that the prisoner believed her to be sound, the offence was only manslaughter.<sup>2</sup> In a similar case the same view was taken of a master who had by privation and ill-treatment compassed the death of an apprentice placed under his care, as the ill-treatment was held to be prompted by a desire to cure the apprentice of his lazy and dirty habits.<sup>3</sup> So, again, where a person locked up his idiot brother in his house and kept him in a dark room without sufficient warmth or clothing, he was held not guilty of assault or imprisonment.<sup>4</sup> These are all cases in which a person placed in civil domination over another exercises his authority for the correction of another, and for that purpose uses force. In such cases, the questions to be considered are: (i) was the force employed reasonable? (ii) was it necessary? and (iii) was it used for correction? If these questions are answered in the affirmative, it is no offence if from any unforeseen cause death should ensue.

620. The authority of the schoolmaster to inflict reasonable corporal punishment is not limited to offences committed by the pupil upon the premises of the school, but may extend to acts done by such pupil while on the way to and from school. The law on the subject has been thus lucidly expounded by Collins, J., who said: "In my opinion the purpose with which the parental authority is delegated to the schoolmaster who is entrusted with the bringing up and discipline of the child, must, to some extent, include an authority over the child while he is outside the four walls of the school. It may be a question of fact in each case whether the conduct of the master in inflicting corporal punishment is right. Very grave consequences would result if it were held that the parent's authority was exclusive up to the door of the school, and that then, and only then, the master's authority commenced; it would be a most anomalous result to hold that in such a case as the present the boy who had been assaulted had no remedy by complaint to his master, who could punish the assailant by a thrashing, but must go before a Magistrate and to enforce a remedy between them as citizens."<sup>5</sup>

621. In contrast to these cases, may be mentioned those in which the persons in authority not only do not obtain protection of law for their act, but their position rather aggravates the crime. A master taking indecent liberties with his female pupil aged 13 would be guilty of assault notwithstanding his position and intention.<sup>6</sup> Cases could be multiplied if it were necessary, but they all illustrate the same principle, namely, that the act is only justifiable so long as it is a correction; when it is used for any other purpose it ceases to have the protection of law.

622. The Authority of the Captain at Sea.—The right of the Captain of a ship at sea to inflict corporal punishment upon a seaman for mutinous conduct rests upon the law of necessity. (§ 615). Of course, the predicament of a Captain

(1) Connor, 7 C. & R. 438.

(2) Cheseman, 7 C. & P. 455.

(3) Self, 1 East, P. C. 226, 227.

(4) Smith, 2 C. & P. 449.

(5) Cleary v. Booth, (1893) 1 Q. B. 465 (468, 469).

(6) Nichol, R. & R. 130; M'Gavarson, B. C. & R. 320.

placed before a mutinous crew is not better but worse than that of a Governor of a rebellious country. For while the Governor may consult his council of war and obtain protection from elsewhere, the Captain of a ship is placed in a position of imminent peril, and cut off as he is from the rest of the world, he has to act on his own judgment and under circumstances when the safety of his vessel and himself is all in all to him. His conduct is, therefore, to be judged not by the ordinary standard of men who act in cold blood, not of those who judge after the event, but of a reasonable man placed under the same predicament as the Captain.

623. Right of Arrest.—Another case for legal justification arises where a person circumscribes the liberty of another in the real or supposed exercise of a power conferred on him by law. The right of arrest is ordinarily possessed by police-officers in cognizable cases,<sup>1</sup> that is to say, cases in which a police-officer within or without the presidency town may, in accordance with the Second Schedule of the Code of Criminal Procedure or under any law for the time being in force, arrest without warrant.<sup>2</sup> So far as regards the offences dealt with in this Code, the Code of Criminal Procedure divides them for this purpose into either cognizable or non-cognizable, the difference between the two classes being that while a police-officer may on his own responsibility arrest in the one case, he cannot do so in the other. In the latter case he can only arrest on a magisterial warrant. The Procedure Code still deals with a class of cases in which any person may arrest with or without a warrant. In the case of offences under a special or local law, police-officers and others also possess similar power of arrest.

624. A police-officer may arrest without a warrant in the case of the following offences under the Penal Code :—

Ss. 109-120 (if the substantive offences are cognizable).

Ss. 131-136, 138, 140, 143-148.

S. 149 (if the offence committed is cognizable).

Ss. 150-153.

Ss. 157-158.

Ss. 170, 171.

Ss. 212, 216, 216A.

Ss. 224, 225, 225B, 226.

Ss. 231-263A.

Ss. 269, 270, 277, 279-283, 285, 286, 289, 291-294, 295-297.

Ss. 302-311, 317, 318.

Ss. 324, 333, 335-344, 346-348.

Ss. 353, 354, 356, 357, 363-369, 371-374.

Ss. 376 (rape on a person other than wife), 377.

Ss. 379-382, 392-402.

Ss. 406-414.

Ss. 419, 420.

Ss. 428-433, 435-440.

Ss. 447-462.

Ss. 467-471.

In the case of offences under other laws a police-officer may arrest a person without warrant, if the offence is punishable with death, transportation or imprisonment for three years or upwards. In any other case, the police may not arrest without a warrant.

Any police-officer may, without an order from a Magistrate, and without a warrant, also arrest persons mentioned in s. 54 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

Similar powers of arrest are given to officers in charge of police stations under ss. 54 and 55 of the Criminal Procedure Code.

A person committing a non-cognizable offence in the presence of a police-officer may be arrested if on demand he refuses to give, or gives a false name and residence till the true name and residence have been ascertained.<sup>3</sup>

Police-officers also possess power of arrest without warrant under certain special and local laws.<sup>4</sup>

(1) S. 4 (f), Cr. P. C.

(2) Ib.

(3) S. 57, Cr. P. C.

(4) Arms Act (Act XI of 1878) s. 12; Cantonments Act (Act XIII of 1889) s. 15; Criminal Tribes Act (Act XXVII of 1871) ss. 20, 26; Cruelty to Animals Act (Beng. Act III of 1869) s. 1; European Vagrancy Act (Act IX of 1874) s. 19; Excise Act (Act XXII of 1881) s. 27; Emigration Act (Act XXI of 1883) s. 82; Explosives Act (Act IV of 1884) s. 13; Fisheries Act (Act IV of 1897) s. 7; Forest Act (Act V of 1882) s. 51; Railways Act (Act IX of 1890) s. 13; Public Gambling Act (Act III of 1867) s. 13; Reformatory Act (Act VIII of 1897) s. 24; Salt Act (Beng. Act VIII of 1864) s. 24; Mad. Act 4 of 1889, s. 49; (Bom. Act II of 1890) s. 39.

Forest officers are also empowered to arrest a person "reasonably suspected of having been concerned in any forest offence punishable with imprisonment for one month or upwards if such person refuses to give his name and residence, or gives a name or residence which there is reason to believe to be false, or if there is reason to believe he will abscond."<sup>1</sup>

625. Limitation on the Power of Arrest.—As regards the power of the police, it will be observed that it has the absolute power of arrest in a cognizable case, but this power, though plenary, has to be exercised with discrimination. There must be at least a reasonable complaint or suspicion against a person of the commission of a non-bailable offence before he could be placed under restraint. "It seems to be generally supposed, and the supposition seems to be generally acted upon, that police-officers, in making enquiries into criminal cases, are limited by their own discretion as to what persons they may arrest and detain in custody. But so far from this being the case, the powers of a police-officer to arrest without a warrant are strictly defined by the Code of Criminal Procedure.

626. Under section 54 of the Procedure Code, the police are empowered to arrest a person reasonably suspected of being in possession of stolen property. Where it is so, a policeman must allege and prove grounds for his suspicions, otherwise he is not protected under this section. Where, for instance, a policeman questioned a person carrying clothes in a bag and upon receiving replies which he erroneously believed to be false, arrested him on a charge of being in possession of stolen goods, the Court held that the arrest was justifiable under this section.<sup>2</sup> But the same defence could not be availed of by a policeman who seeing a horse openly tied up without any attempt at concealment, at once jumped to the conclusion that it was his father's missing horse, and who thereupon at once arrested the owner and the person from whom he had purchased it; though, as a matter of fact, the lost horse had been previously found in another place.<sup>3</sup> This case may be distinguished from the last on the ground that, while in the one case there was an enquiry and the exercise of some judgment, in the other case there was no enquiry at all, and therefore, no facts elicited for the formation of a judgment. This principle may be aptly illustrated by the case of the court-peon who went with two of the decree-holders' men to arrest one M. A palki with closed doors was noticed to be coming out of the male apartment of M's house, whereupon the peon intercepted it and examined it in spite of the protests of its attendants. The peon being prosecuted under section 341, the Court held this section applicable on the ground that the coming of the palki from the direction of the male apartments of M gave the peon some reason to believe that it contained M who was trying to evade his arrest.<sup>4</sup>

627. While the police possess abundant power of arrest, they are not free to choose their own procedure for effecting an arrest. The right procedure is laid down in ss. 46, 47, 48 and 50 of the Code of Criminal Procedure which must be strictly followed.

628. Execution of Warrants How Protected.—As regards the protection of the police acting under a warrant, police-officers are doubly protected. For not only are they protected under this section, but they have been exempted from criminal responsibility by the Police Act.<sup>5</sup>

629. While a man's house is his own castle, it cannot be used for harbouring criminals, and so both in England as well as in this country, the law has been and is that "where a felony hath been committed, or a dangerous wound given, or even where a minister of justice cometh armed with process founded on a breach of the peace, the party's own house is no sanctuary for him; doors may in any of these cases be forced, the notification, demand, and refusal before-mentioned having been previously made."<sup>6</sup> So a

(1) Act V of 1882, s. 51.

(2) Bhawoo, 12 B. 377, see for a similar case Lawrence v. Hedger, 3 Taunt, 14.

(3) Sheo Surun v. Mhd. Fadle, 10 W. R. 20.

(4) Kanailal Gowala, 24 C. 885.

(5) Act V of 1861, s. 43, for similar provisions in the other local Police Acts see under s. 78.

(6) Foster Cr. L., 320.

constable may break open the door to keep the peace if a felony is imminent though not committed, as if there be an affray in a house with fear of bloodshed. "Where an affray is made in a house in the view or hearing of a constable; or where those who have made an affray in his presence, fly to a house, and are immediately pursued by him, and he is not allowed to enter—in order to suppress the affray in the first case or to apprehend the affrayers in either case," the house may be broken open.<sup>1</sup>

630. The amount of force that may justifiably be used to effect an arrest by a police-officer is defined by section 46 of the Criminal Procedure Code, which lays down that in the case of heinous offenders the police have the right of arresting a man dead

What is Justifiable Force. or alive, but in other cases the police have no right to cause death in effecting the arrest. In either case, the police must not use more force than is necessary to effect the arrest, and in judging of what is the proper exercise of force, the question would be whether the means employed to stop the fugitive were such as an ordinarily prudent man would make use of who had no intention of doing any serious injury.<sup>2</sup> Merely excessive use of force, without malice, is not however criminal, though it may not be civilly excusable.<sup>3</sup> And while the Procedure Code condemns use of excessive force, or force resulting in death, still that section does not deprive the police of their right of private defence in exercise of which even death may be caused,<sup>4</sup> though the causing of death would be otherwise unjustifiable. Such a case may arise where the police encounter resistance, in which case they are entitled to repel force by force. Their first duty is to effect an arrest, and they are bound to effect it whatever resistance they may receive. They would be guilty of cowardice and a grave dereliction of duty if upon a mere show of resistance they desisted from arrest. They are employed to apprehend criminals, and it is their duty to apprehend them at the risk of their life. In this respect English Law is even more stringent, for it recognizes the right of the police to even kill the felon if he cannot be arrested alive.<sup>5</sup> But the right to kill is limited in this country to only offenders charged with offences punishable with death or transportation for life, that is to say, offences under sections 121, 132, 194, 302, 303, 305, 307, and 396, which are punishable with death; and sections 121, 121A, 122, 124A, 125, 128, 130-132, 194, 195, 222, 225, 226, 232, 238, 255, 302, 304, 305, 307, 311, 313, 314, 326, 329, 364, 371, 376, 377, 388, 389, 394, 396, 400, 409, 412, 413, 436, 438, 449, 459, 467, 472, 474, 475, and 477, which are punishable with transportation for life.

631. Thirdly, there are cases in which private persons may exercise the right of arrest.<sup>6</sup> Village watchmen or chaukidars are not police-officers within the meaning of the Procedure Code, and they have, therefore, no greater power of arrest than private persons.<sup>7</sup>

632. Duty of a Private Person.—It will be observed that there is no law under which a private person is bound to discharge the same duties as the police. Under s. 42 he is bound to assist a Magistrate or police-officer reasonably demanding his aid. Under s. 43, it is optional with him to assist or not in cases provided by that section. So under s. 59 it is equally optional with him to arrest a person committing an offence as therein described. In no case is the private person then entitled to play the policeman with an offender with, his duties being merely to assist the police if so required, or so disposed. In this respect English Law would appear to differ. For under that law, a private person has the same right of arresting a felon as the police, the only difference between their rights being that while the police may justify a wrongful arrest upon a reasonable suspicion, a private person cannot do so but must shew a felony committed.<sup>8</sup> And in the case of death in capture he will have moreover to shew

(1) 2 Hawk P. C. 136.

(2) Protab Chowkedar, 2 W. R. 9.

(3) Budrool Hossein, 24 W. R. 51.

(4) S. 100, post.

(5) 1 Hale P. C. 489, 490; 1 Hawk P. C. 81, 1 East P. C. 298, 300; Foster Cr. L. 271.

(6) S. 41, 43, 59 Cr. P. C.

(7) Kallu, 3 A. 60; Kalai, 27 C. 366, cf. s. 45, Cr. P. C.

(8) Samuel v. Payne, 1 Dougl. 359; Beckwith v. Philby, 6 B. & C. 63; Davis v. Russell, 5 Bing. 344.

not only that the felony was committed, but that the person killed was the felon.<sup>1</sup> With respect to the right of a private person to arrest in the case of misdemeanour, the rule has been thus stated by Cockburn, C.J.: "Where any one is found actually committing an offence, it is not necessary to wait till a warrant can be obtained if the arrest is effected actually on the spot, and the prisoner is forthwith brought before a Magistrate. It seems to be sometimes supposed that the right of private persons to arrest an offender committing a misdemeanour is limited to those misdemeanours which partake of the nature of a breach of the peace. But the more correct view appears to be that, excepting such crimes as consist of mere omission, or non-feasance, e.g., neglecting to provide one's family with food, there is no distinction between one misdemeanour and another. In fact, all misdemeanours, with the possible exception of perjury and forgery, are breaches of the King's or Queen's peace, as appears from the old forms of indictments contra pacem." <sup>2</sup>

633. In order to justify an arrest, the police must shew one of two things, first, that the prisoner had committed the offence, or secondly, that the person arresting, knew or believed at the time that the person arrested had committed the offence. A constable was employed to guard a copse from which wood had been stolen, and for this purpose he carried a loaded gun. He saw the complainant coming out of the copse carrying stolen wood which of itself was a misdemeanour and challenged him, whereupon he ran away and the constable finding no other means of bringing him to justice fired and wounded him in the leg, for which he was indicted. It, however, appeared that the prosecutor had been twice before convicted of stealing wood, which aggravated his theft to a felony<sup>3</sup> and which, if known to the constable, would have justified the act. But Erle, J., told the jury that neither the belief of the prisoner, that it was his duty to fire, if he could not otherwise apprehend the prosecutor, nor the alleged felony unknown to him at the time constituted such justification, and this view was confirmed on appeal on the ground that though the act of the prosecutor amounted to a felony, still it was no justification for the shooting as the constable did not know of it at the time.<sup>4</sup> But where a person was indicted for wounding a constable with intent to prevent the lawful apprehension of himself, Talfour, J., held that to support the charge it was sufficient that the prisoner was lawfully apprehended, and it was immaterial whether the prisoner believed his apprehension to be lawful.<sup>5</sup> Whether apprehension in a given case was or was not lawful depends upon the facts of each case. Where a police-sergeant went to supervise the work of the accused, a police constable, with whom he had an altercation who thereupon assaulted the sergeant who left him, and returned with police-assistance, but the accused was not found. They returned again in two hours and found the accused at home. The sergeant told him to accompany him to the station-house, but he declined, whereupon the sergeant attempted to arrest him, and thereupon the constable severely wounded him. The jury found the constable guilty of wounding with intent to prevent his lawful apprehension; but upon a case reserved, it was held that apprehension was not lawful, for the assault had been committed before and there being no probability of its renewal, the constable could not be arrested.<sup>6</sup>

634. The illustration appended to this section exemplifies the operation of this section in the case of private persons effecting an arrest in accordance with the rules of the Procedure Code. The right of a person to arrest suo motu is confined to cases described in section 59, that is, to cases in which a person commits a non-bailable and cognizable offence in his view, or where a person is a proclaimed offender. A private person has, therefore, no right to arrest a person on mere suspicion or information.<sup>7</sup> The fact that the person arrested had in fact committed a non-bailable and cognizable crime is in reality no defence to such an arrest, if the person

(1) 2 Hale P. C. 83; 1 East, P. C. 300; Foster Cr. L. 318; 1 Russ. 713.

(2) Griffiths v. Taylor, 48 L. J. App. (C. P.) 152.

(3) 7 & 8 Geo. IV, c. 29, ss. 39; 24 & 26 Vict., c. 96, s. 33.

(4) Dadson, 20 L. J. M. C. 57.

(5) Bentley, 4 Cox. C. C. 406.

(6) Dears, C. C. 358; Marsden, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 131.

(7) Potadu, 11 M. 480.

arresting had not witnessed the crime. But where he so witnessed it, he is protected though there may be facts behind his view which may place a different complexion upon the affair, and which, if known to him at the time, would not have justified his apprehension. A person lawfully arresting another may make him over to his servant for delivery to the police. For in such a case his original custody continues even whilst the person arrested is in charge of his servant.<sup>1</sup>

635. Where the accused had arrested a police constable and took him to the Magistrate, and it was found that the constable was caught in the act of abetting an extortion, an offence which is bailable, the Court acquitted the accused, holding that the act was covered by this section in that the accused had acted in the bona fide but mistaken belief that he had the authority to arrest the constable.<sup>2</sup>

636. Detection and Destruction of Postal Articles.—There are certain powers which special Acts confer upon departmental officers, the exercise of which are subject to the rules and restrictions contained in those Acts. Thus, for instance, the Indian Post Office Act<sup>3</sup> empowers a postal officer, in charge of a post office or authorized by the Postmaster-General in this behalf, to open or unfasten any newspaper or any book, pattern or sample packet, in the course of transmission by post, which is suspected to have been sent by post in contravention of any provisions of the Act relating to postage.<sup>4</sup> The Postmaster-General has further authority to authorize the opening and destruction of any postal article containing obscene, seditious, or grossly offensive matter.<sup>5</sup> The Governor-General in Council have also power to detain or take delivery of any postal article “on the occurrence of any public emergency, or in the interest of the public safety or tranquillity.”<sup>6</sup> A certificate signed by a Secretary to the Government of India is conclusive on the point.<sup>7</sup> Acting under the power so conferred, the Government of India had caused to be detained a number of private letters of English tourists and Indian public men in the autumn of 1907, and on a question being raised in the House of Commons the act was held to be justifiable under this Act.

637. Acts Done under Civil Process.—Persons executing civil process are bound to strictly follow the rules laid down in the Code of Civil Procedure. These rules have now been relegated to the Schedules of the Civil Procedure Code, the terms of which are to be strictly complied with.<sup>8</sup>

638. Other Justifiable Acts.—Several instances occur of acts which the law would justify as done in the belief that they were warranted by law. A bigamous marriage contracted by the wife in the belief that her marriage with her husband has become dissolved by his apostacy is an instance of a mistake of mixed law and fact which the law condones.<sup>9</sup> Other similar instances are afforded by the seizure of his wife by the husband,<sup>10</sup> the pulling of a woman's hair by her lover,<sup>11</sup> the arrest of a person by a policeman who erroneously believed that the person arrested had committed a non-bailable offence.<sup>12</sup> It is said that the justification of “law” in this section excludes a special Act, such as the Forest Act which creates special offences for the protection of public revenue,<sup>13</sup> but this view has been combated elsewhere.<sup>14</sup>

80. Nothing is an offence which is done by accident or misfortune, and without any criminal intention or knowledge in the doing of a lawful act in a lawful manner by lawful means and with proper care and caution.

Accident in Doing
a Lawful Act.

(1) Potadu, 11 M. 480; Fakira, 17 M. 103.

(2) Ragunath, (1920) Pat. 76; 54 I. C. 997.

(3) Act VI of 1898.

(4) Ib., s. 23.

(5) Ib., ss. 20, 23 (3)

(6) Ib., s. 26.

(7) Ib., s. 26 (2).

(8) Act V of 1905, Sch. I.

(9) Narantakath, 45 M. 986.

(10) Ramlo, 12 S. L. R. 29, 47 I. C. 807.

(11) Mi Hia So, 4 Bur. L. J. 268, 13 I. C. 189.

(12) Reghunath, (1920) Pat. 76.

(13) Lewis, 38 M. 773.

(14) Kassim, 15 I. C. (B.) 802.

Illustration.

A is at work with a hatchet; the head flies off and kills a man who is standing by. Here, if there was no want of proper caution on the part of A, his act is excusable and not an offence.

639. Analogous Law.—This section is closely analogous to the next section with which it should be studied. The main difference between these two sections appears to be that while under this section there should be the absence of both criminal intention as well as criminal knowledge, the next section postulates a case in which there is only the absence of criminal intention. The use of the two terms in this section, and the absence of one in the next, shews that the Legislature intended to make a distinction between them. And indeed there is a distinction, as has been before explained. (§§ 310–313).

640. Principle.—In so far as this section lays down that there can be no crime without a criminal intention, it states what is a transparent truism, for there is no such thing as crime in the abstract. No act is per se criminal unless the actor did it with criminal intent. It is, therefore, the correct maxim to say that actus non facit reum, nisi mens sit rea,<sup>1</sup> which only means that both the intent and act must concur in order to constitute a crime. The object of the repression of crime is to preserve order and peace in human society, and it is, therefore, only against human beings who are its component members that criminal law is directed. And as the object of criminal law is to punish only serious infractions of the rules of society, it follows that criminal law cannot punish a man for his mistake or misfortune. But accident is not of itself a defence to a civil suit, unless it was not only an accident but also a misfortune.

641. Meaning of Words.—“Nothing.....done by accident”: The word “accident” does not mean here a mere chance. It rather means an unintentional and unexpected act. The words imply the idea of something not only not intended, but something which was so little expected that it came as a surprise. So the term “misfortune” means the same thing, with this fact superadded that it was as unwelcome as it was unexpected. “The doing of a lawful Act in a lawful manner” means that the act which originated another act must be not only lawful but performed in a lawful manner and by lawful means. “And with proper care and caution,” the propriety being judged by the nature of the act.

642. Accident when a Good Defence.—Accident and misfortune have a recognized place in criminal jurisprudence. They always afford a good defence to the charge of criminality.<sup>2</sup> But they are only a good defence in certain cases and under certain circumstances. They do not furnish an unqualified defence in every case in which the resultant act was unintentional or unexpected. In order that an act should be justifiable on the ground of accident it must be shown (i) that the act was an accident or misfortune, and (ii) that it was not accompanied by any criminal intention but that, on the other hand, (iii) it was the outcome of a lawful act, (iv) which was done in a lawful manner, (v) by lawful means and (vi) with proper care and caution.

643. What is an Accident?—Now, in the first place, what is an accident? Literally, the term means only a befalling of an event.<sup>3</sup> In ordinary parlance it means an event that takes place without one’s foresight or expectation. And this is substantially the sense in which the term has been used here. It means here not only an event, or a thing which occurs, for every occurrence is not an accident. An accident is an occurrence out of the ordinary course,<sup>4</sup> which no man of ordinary prudence could anticipate or provide against. A misfortune is only an accident with attendant evil consequences. Now as both the words “accident” as well

(1) “The act itself does not make a man guilty, unless his intention were so.”

(2) Dwijendra, 31 I. C. (C.) 164.

(3) From Lat. Ad Cadere, to fall.

(4) So held by Willes, J., in Fenick v. Schimalz, L. R. 3 C. P. 313 (316), in which the question was about the loading of a ship under a contract executed “in cases of riots, strikes, or any other accident beyond his control.” To the same effect Hamilton v. Pandorf, 12 App. Cas. 518 (524).

as "misfortune" are here used necessarily in the sense of implying injury to another, the word "misfortune" differs from "accident" in that while the latter involves only injury to another, the former causes injury as much to the author as to another unconnected with the act. It is easy to conceive of a variety of cases of accident, but the accident, here spoken of as a defence to criminality, is an accident which causes injury to another, but causes it only in the manner here described. If A intending to poison B lays a bait for B, which C takes, and dies. Here C's death was an accident in the ordinary sense of the term. So it is in law. But A is nevertheless responsible for it in the same manner as if A had planned his death. And why? Because A's act in attempting to poison B was illegal, and there being one act illegal in the chain of events between the original act and the resultant effect, the effect is the same as if all the acts had been throughout illegal. So where a mother, being angry with one of her children, took up a small iron bar used as a poker and threw it after the child as he was running away from her, and it hit another child who was returning by the same way, in consequence of which he died, the mother was held to be guilty of manslaughter, although it appeared that she had thrown the poker merely to frighten the child with whom she was angry and she had no idea of the presence of the other child who was actually hit and killed. Commenting on these facts, Park, J., said: "If a blow is aimed at an individual unlawfully—and this was undoubtedly unlawful as an improper mode of correction—and strikes another and kills him, it is manslaughter; and there is no doubt if the child at whom the blow was aimed had been struck and died it would have been manslaughter, and so it is under the present circumstances."<sup>1</sup> So if A and B conspire to assault C with their fists, and C receive a chance blow from the fist of either of them causing his death, both A and B are guilty of manslaughter, because their initial act was illegal. But if suppose in such a case instead of hitting C with fist either A or B were to suddenly lay hold of a weapon and therewith strike C, the other will not be liable for causing the death, as he could not be held responsible for an unlawful act not done in pursuance of the common design of them both.<sup>2</sup>

644. The exercise of a lawful right in an unlawful manner is an unlawful act taking away the defence afforded by the section. A person had trespassed into the house of the prisoner in his absence. On his return he desired him to leave, but he refused, which led to an altercation which excited the prisoner who gave him a kick, causing him an injury which occasioned his death. The prisoner being indicted for manslaughter, Alderson, B., said: "A kick is not a justifiable mode of turning a man out of your house, though he be a trespasser. If the deceased would not have died but for the injury he received, the prisoner having unlawfully caused that injury, he is guilty of manslaughter."<sup>3</sup> The same view was taken in another case in which a person in sport threw stones down a coal-pit whereby a man was killed, though he happened to be a trespasser.<sup>4</sup> So there is nothing illegal in a friendly contest for the trial of skill or strength, but if a party take undue advantage of another and cause him injury, he will be criminally responsible.

645. Unlawful Games.—This is in cases where the game itself was lawful. But where the game itself was unlawful, then no consent would condone an injury therein committed. In England, prize-fights, public boxing matches and the like wherein combatants fight for lucre and not for sport are unlawful, and persons engaging therein are guilty of assault to which the consent of the persons to the interchange of blows affords no answer,<sup>5</sup> whatever may have been the agreement between the parties. In fact, the Courts have even gone the length of not only holding the actual combatants liable, but they have even held the spectators to be accomplices.<sup>6</sup>

(1) Conner, 7 C. & P. 438.

(2) Caton, 12 Cox. C. C. 624.

(3) Wild, 2 Lew. C. C. 214.

(4) Fenton, 1 Lew. C. C. 179.

(5) Boulter v. Clarke, Buller's N. P. 16; Mathew v. Ollerton, Comb, 218; Perkins,

4 C. & P. 537; Lewis, 1 C. & K. 419; Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534.

(6) Murphy, C. & P. 103, 1 Hale P. C. 439; see to the same effect, Fost. Cr. L. 350; Coney, 9 Q. B. D. 534.

646. The absence of criminal intent or knowledge alone does not therefore suffice. If it were sufficient, there was no criminal intent, or knowledge in any of the cases before cited. Indeed, the presence of these elements effectively rebuts any presumption of accident. For, as before remarked, an act could not have been accidental, if it had been intended or known. In practice, therefore, the cases relating to accident, presenting any difficulty, are those in which there is a question of unlawfulness or negligence at some stage. If the act was unlawful, and an injury is caused, it is an offence, whatever may have been the intention. So if a person give an improper quantity of liquor to a child and death ensue, it will be manslaughter, though the liquor may have been supplied for sport and without any criminal intention.<sup>1</sup> The goods of a debtor were seized by a person who was put in possession thereof. The debtors plied him with liquor, himself drinking freely, till he was drunk. The debtor then put him into a cabriolet and caused him to be driven about the streets. Within a couple of hours the man died. Lord Denman told the jury that the prisoner would be guilty of manslaughter, if he had driven him about the place, when the deceased was drunk, in order to keep him out of possession and thereby accelerating his death.<sup>2</sup> So the prisoner having the right to possession of a gun in the hands of the deceased, attempted to take it away by force, though he knew it to be loaded. In the struggle which ensued the gun went off accidentally and killed the deceased. Lord Campbell told the jury that though the prisoner was entitled to the gun, to take it away by force was unlawful; and that as the evidence showed that the discharge of the gun, though accidental, was the result of this unlawful act, it was their duty to find the prisoner guilty of manslaughter.<sup>3</sup>

647. It is, however, evident that the case would have been one of pure accident, if the prisoner had not known that the gun was loaded. In one case, however, the prisoner had found a pistol in the street, which he had reason to believe was not loaded, having tried it with a rammer. He took it home and standing before his wife he pulled up the cock in sport and touched the trigger. The pistol went off and killed the woman. He was indicted and convicted of manslaughter, though it was found that the rammer was too short and had, therefore, deceived him. But this is a view which is not likely to be taken, should such a case again arise. Indeed, as Foster says: "Accidents of this lamentable kind may be the lot of the wisest and the best of mankind, and most commonly fall among the nearest friends and relations."<sup>4</sup> Foster himself cites the case of a man who went with his wife to dinner at the house of a friend, carrying with him his loaded gun, which on arrival at the house he discharged and kept aside in a private place. After the dinner he found it there and carried it home, his wife carrying it a part of the way. On arrival at home he touched the trigger and the gun went off, killing the wife whom he dearly loved. It was found that a stranger had in the meantime handled the gun and returned it deposited in the place from where it had been taken. The prisoner was acquitted, on the ground that he had no reason to believe that the gun was loaded.<sup>5</sup>

648. Criminal Negligence.—This brings us to the subject of criminal negligence—a subject which has been already discussed elsewhere in another form (§§ 354-357). Cases of gun accident present differences due to the difference of views as regards the liability of persons handling dangerous weapons. It is sometimes said that a person handling a gun ought to know that it might be loaded. So he should, but what if he examined it and was satisfied that it was not, though this examination was defective. Such was the case of the man who had examined the gun with a short rammer. He was reasonably cautious, though he was held to be guilty. But, as remarked by Foster, J.: "The law in these cases doth not require the utmost caution that can be used; it is sufficient that a reasonable precaution, what is usual and

(1) Martin, 3 C. & P. 211.

(2) Packard, C. & M, 246.

(3) Archer, 1 F. & F. 351.

(4) Foster .Cr. L. 263 (264); 1 East P. C. 266.

(5) Ib., 265.

ordinary in the like cases, be taken.”<sup>1</sup> This is as true as it is supported by precedents. The amount of care and caution required depends upon the nature of the occupation and the amount of risk to human life. The instance of a chemist’s apprentice negligently delivering laudanum, mistaking it for paregoric and thereby occasioning the death of a child, is an instance of negligence which may or may not be criminal according to the circumstances. So Bayley, J., told the jury that if they thought that there was negligence on the part of the prisoner, they were to find him guilty ; if not, they must acquit him.<sup>2</sup> So in another case, the prisoner was indicted for causing the death of two females passing along the causeway in Liverpool where he had been slinging a cask, which fell and caused the death. It appears that there were three customary modes of slinging casks there, one by slings passed round each end of the cask, a second by crane hooks, and a third by a single rope round the centre of the casks which was the manner in which the prisoner had slung it. The cask was hoisted up to the fourth story of a warehouse, and on being pulled endways, towards the door, it slipped from the rope, which it would not have done if it had been secured by any of the first two modes. Park, J., told the jury : “ The double slings are undoubtedly the safest mode ; but if you think that the mode which the prisoner adopted was reasonably sufficient, you cannot convict him.”<sup>3</sup>

649. Negligent Driving.—It is the duty of every person making use of a public way to so use it as not to cause injury to others who are equally entitled to use it. A person driving a cart has to see that persons walking on foot are not injured by his driving. And this liability continues whether the carriage way is or is not apart from a footpath, for a foot passenger has the right to walk on the carriage-way if he is so minded.<sup>4</sup> The amount of care required in driving or riding along a public highway depends upon the time of the day, its crowded state and the nature of the animals driven or ridden. The same care is not required in driving at daytime as is required when driving at night. Again, a street crowded with children or a busy thoroughfare demands more caution than a deserted road. So, while a quiet animal may be easily driven, one has to take care that an unmanageable animal does not get out of hands. So a person using the highway, has to acquaint himself with and observe the rule of the road.

650. Again, a public way is not a race course and persons have no right to use it as such. If, therefore, carts race each other and run over a man killing him, they are both responsible for the death, for they were both using the road in an unlawful manner. Such was the case of Swindall and Osborne who were driving two carts loaded with pots from the potteries. On the way they got drunk and began to race with each other. It was night, and arriving at a toll-gate Swindall who appeared all along to have led the way, told the gate-keeper : “ We have driven over an old man.” The man died and they were indicted for manslaughter. For the prosecution it was contended that it was perfectly immaterial in point of law whether one or both carts had passed over the deceased. The prisoners were in company and had concurred in jointly driving furiously along the road which was an unlawful act ; and as both had joined in it, each was responsible for the consequences, though they might arise from the act of the other. For the prisoners it was contended that evidence showed that only one of the carts had run over the deceased, and the other was therefore entitled to an acquittal. But Pollock, C.B., said : “ I think that is not so. I think the counsel for the Crown is right in his law. If two persons are in this way inciting each other to do an unlawful act, and one of them runs over a man whether he be the first or the last, he would be equally liable. The person who runs over the man would be a principal in the first degree, and the other a principal in the second degree.” And referring to the condition of the deceased the Chief Baron said : “ The prisoners are charged with contributing to the death of the deceased by their negligent and improper conduct ; and if they did so, it matters not whether

(1) Foster, Cr. L. 264 ; 1 East P. C. 266.

(2) Tessymond’s case, 1 Lew. C. C. 169.

(3) Rigmaidon’s case, 1 Lew. C. C. 180.

(4) Boss v. Litton, 5 C. & P. 407 ; Grout, 6 C. & P. 629.

he was deaf, or drunk or negligent, or in part contributed to his own death, for in this consists a great distinction between civil and criminal proceedings. If two coaches run against each other, and the drivers of both are to blame, neither of them has any remedy for damages against the other. But in the case of loss of life, the law takes a totally different view ; for there each party is responsible for any blame that may ensue, however large the share may be ; and so highly does the law value human life, that it admits of no justification where life has been lost and the carelessness or negligence of any one person has contributed to the death of another person."<sup>1</sup>

651. It is no defence in such a case that the deceased was guilty of contributory negligence.<sup>2</sup> On an indictment for manslaughter, it appeared that the deceased was walking along a road in a state of intoxication. The prisoner was driving a pair without reins. On seeing the deceased the prisoner called out to him twice to get out of the way, but from the rapid pace of the horse and his own intoxication he could not do so, and one of the cart wheels passed over him and he was killed. It was held that the prisoner was guilty of manslaughter, as it was his duty to so drive as to prevent any accident or injury that may occur, and that the intoxication of the deceased and his calling him out did not take away that responsibility.<sup>3</sup> In another case, the driver of a cart was sitting inside instead of at the driver's seat, and while he was sitting there, his cart passed over a child who was gathering up flowers on the road. He was held guilty of manslaughter, as by sitting inside the cart he was guilty of negligence.<sup>4</sup> So where two opposition omnibuses were racing each other, and a driver of one in whipping up his own horses frightened the horses of the other, which upset the omnibus, Patterson, J., said : " The question is, whether you are satisfied that the prisoner was driving in such a negligent manner that, by reason of his gross negligence, he had lost the command of his horses ; and that depends on whether the horses were unruly, or whether you believe that he had been racing with the other omnibus, and had so urged his horses that he could not stop them ; because, however he might be endeavouring to stop them afterwards, if he had lost the command of them by his own act, he would be answerable, for a man is not to say ' I will race along a road, and when I am got beyond another carriage I will pull up.' If the prisoner did really race, and only when he had got past the other omnibus endeavoured to pull up, he must be found guilty, but if you believe that he was run away with, without any act of his own, then he is not guilty. The main questions are, were the two omnibuses racing ? and was the prisoner driving as fast as he could, in order to get past the other omnibus ? and had he urged his horses to so rapid a pace, that he could not control them ? If you are of that opinion you ought to convict him." <sup>5</sup>

Contributory Negligence No Defence.

652. The plea of contributory negligence was again strongly urged in a case where a man deaf from his childhood was run over by the prisoner's cart, and it appeared that at the time he had been walking in the middle of the road in spite of repeated warnings, whereupon Rolfe, B., said : " Whatever may have been the negligence of the deceased, I am clearly of opinion that the prisoners would not be thereby exonerated from the consequences of their own illegal acts, which would be traced to their negligent conduct, if any such existed. I am of opinion that if any one should drive so rapidly along a great thoroughfare leading to a large town as to be unable to avoid running over any pedestrian who may happen to be in the middle of the road, it is that degree of negligence in the conduct of a horse and gig which amounts to an illegal act in the eye of the law, and, if death ensues from the injuries thus inflicted, the parties driving are guilty of manslaughter, even though considerable blame may be attributed to the deceased." <sup>6</sup> The learned Judge then went on to add that there was a wide distinction between a civil action for pecuniary

(1) Swindall, 2 C. & R. 230.

(2) Per Lush, J., in Jones, 11 Cox. C. C. 544.

(3) Walker, 1 C. & P. 320.

(4) Knight's case, 1 Lew. C. C. 168.

(5) Knight's case, 1 Lew. C. C. 168.

(6) Longbottom, 3 Cox. C. C. 439.

compensation for death arising from negligence, and a proceeding by way of indictment for manslaughter. In the one case liability of one depends upon the balance of negligence, whereas in the other, negligence is punished; but, if there be contributory negligence, it is taken into account in awarding the sentence.

653. The crowded state of a road was urged as a plea in extenuation in a case in which Perrin, J., however, told the jury that "this unusual concourse of people, instead of offering any extenuation for the prisoner, or diminishing the criminality of his careless driving, if they found it to have been such, would but be a circumstance to add to it, and that it was his duty as well as of all driving upon such occasions, to take more than ordinary precautions against accidents, and to use more than ordinary diligence for the safety of the public."<sup>1</sup>

654. So while a person is not bound to observe the rule of the road, he is bound to use additional precaution if he uses the wrong side, for he ought then to know that he then runs a greater risk of causing accidents.<sup>2</sup>

655. Allied to the subject of contributory negligence is the subject of negligence of servants. If the master and servant engage in a dangerous trade, and the master is guilty of some negligence, which alone, however, was insufficient to produce the mischief, the fact that the negligence of the servant, superadded to that of the master, had caused the injury, would not render the master criminally liable for it. It was so held in a case in which the prisoner was the maker of fireworks which he stocked on the premises, contrary to statute. During his absence, by the negligence of one of his servants, the fireworks became ignited and set fire to a neighbouring house, the occupant of which was burnt to death. Willes, J., convicted the master of misdemeanour holding that, if he had not stocked the fireworks contrary to the statute, the fire would not have occurred. But on a case reserved, the prisoner was acquitted, Cockburn, C.J., holding that, though the prisoner was guilty of illegal act, it was not necessary and immediate cause of the death, since, superadded to his negligence, there was the negligence of the servant.<sup>3</sup> But this was a case of negligence of the servant. The case could have been differently decided, if the servant had been guilty of a wilful act, as in the case of the baker who was held liable, because his servant, to his knowledge, had mixed noxious materials in his bread.<sup>4</sup> In another case, it was suggested that even in a case of negligence of servant, if it could be shown that the injury was well within the contemplation of the master, he would be liable.<sup>5</sup>

656. As already observed, a person may not be civilly liable and yet he may be criminally prosecuted. (§ 652). These cases are, however, those which stand on the border land between civil and criminal law. It is sometimes said that accident of itself is not a defence to civil suit, but this is certainly not the view of civil law. As Parke, B., said: "When the act is that of the servant in performing his duty to his master, the rule of law we consider to be is that the only remedy in that case is against the master, and then only is maintainable, when that act is negligent or improper; and this rule applies to all cases where the carriage or cattle of a master is placed in the care and under the management of a servant, a rational agent. The agent's direct act or trespass is not the direct act of the master.....In all cases where a master gives the direction and control over a carriage, or animal or cattle to another rational agent, the master is responsible in an action on the case for want of skill or care of the agent—no more."<sup>6</sup> So where the servant was driving his master in a carriage and the horses took fright at the barking of a dog and bolted, knocking down the plaintiff who was in the highway, it was held that the injury was purely accidental, and as it could not be attributed to the negligence of the servant, neither the master

(1) Murray, 5 Cox. C. C. 509.

(2) Pluckwell v. Wilson, 5 C. & P. 375.

(3) Bennett, Bell. C. C. 1.

(4) Dixon, M. & S. 11.

(5) Lister, 26 L. J M. C. 196.

(6) Sharrod v. London and North-Western Ry. Co., 4 Ex. 580 (586).

nor the servant was liable for damage.<sup>1</sup> So where the defendant who was one of a shooting party fired at a pheasant, but one of the pellets from his gun accidentally glanced off the bough of a tree and accidentally wounded the plaintiff who was a servant engaged to carry cartridges and game for the party. The jury found that the defendant was not guilty of any negligence in firing as he did, and it was, therefore, held that the defendant could not be held liable for damages.<sup>2</sup> But the civil and criminal liability of a person on account of negligence is, therefore, based on the same considerations. The difference is one of degree and not of kind.

657. Accident in Doing an Unlawful Act.—The prisoner went out to shoot porcupines with the deceased. They agreed to take up certain positions in the jungle and lie in wait for game, which was done. After a while the accused heard a rustle, and believing it was a porcupine, he fired in that direction, but the shot penetrated the heart of his companion who died immediately. The accused was shooting with an unlicensed gun, but it was held that the case was one of pure accident under the section and that the accused was entitled to be acquitted<sup>3</sup> The judgment in this case gives no reason for acquittal, but it is clear that it draws a distinction between malum in se and malum prohibitum, that is to say, whenever it is said that a person causing injury in an unlawful occupation is responsible for the result, what is implied by the unlawfulness of the occupation is something more than what is prohibited by law for the purpose of revenue or census. It implies something which is prohibited because it is essentially wrong.<sup>4</sup> In other words, where a statute renders the doing of a thing illegal for some purpose, it cannot be referred to for anything wholly unconnected with the purpose.

658. So when a statute creates a duty with the object of preventing a mischief of a particular kind, a person who, by reason of another's neglect of the statutory duty, suffers a loss of a different kind, is not entitled to maintain an action in respect of such loss. For instance, where a shipowner was carrying the plaintiff's sheep, but omitted to pen them as required by the Contagious Disease Act, 1869, in consequence of which they were washed overboard, it was held that the object of the statute and the order being to prevent the spread of contagious disease among animals, and not to prevent them against perils of the sea, the plaintiff could not recover.<sup>5</sup> As Pigott, B., put it: "If, indeed, by reason of the neglect complained of, the cattle had contracted a contagious disease, the case would have been different. But as the case stands on this declaration, the answer to the action is this: Admit there has been a breach of duty; admit there has been a consequent injury, but for an altogether different purpose; its object was not to regulate the duty of the carrier for all purposes, but only for one particular purpose."<sup>6</sup>

659. The accused was engaging in a fight, in which a woman intervened to prevent, whereupon the accused aimed a blow at the woman, but it accidentally fell upon and killed the infant she was carrying. It was held that this section afforded no defence, as the accused had attempted to assault the woman which was in itself a wrongful act.<sup>7</sup>

660. These cases, by no means exhaustive, are sufficient to explain the operation of negligence in the formation of crime. Other cases will be found cited in the commentary under section 52 (§§ 354-363).

(1) Holmes v. Mather, L. R. 10 Ex. 261; the same view has been taken by Denman, J., in Stanley v. Powell, (1891) 1 Q. B. 86, in which all the cases on the point have been reviewed.

(2) Stanley v. Powell, (1891) 1 Q. B. 86.

(3) Timappa, 3 Bom. L. R. 678.

(4) 1 Hale P. C. 475; 1 East. P. C. 260; Foster Cr. L. 259.

(5) Gorris v. Scott, L. R. 9 Ex. 125; Ward v. Hoebres, 4 App. Cas. 13.

(6) Ib., p. 130.

(7) Jageshar, 74 I. C. 533.

Act likely to cause harm, but done without criminal intent, and to prevent other harm.

81. Nothing is an offence merely by reason of its being done with the knowledge that it is likely to cause harm, if it be done without any criminal intention to cause harm, and in good faith for the purpose of preventing or avoiding other harm to person or property.

Explanation.—It is a question of fact in such case whether the harm to be prevented or avoided was of such a nature and so imminent as to justify or excuse the risk of doing the act with the knowledge that it was likely to cause harm.

Illustrations.

(a) A, the captain of a steam vessel, suddenly and without any fault or negligence on his part, finds himself in such a position that, before he can stop his vessel, he must inevitably run down a boat B with twenty or thirty passengers on board, unless he changes the course of his vessel, and that, by changing his course, he must incur risk of running down a boat C with only two passengers on board, which he may possibly clear. Here, if A alters his course without any intention to run down the boat C and in good faith for the purpose of avoiding the danger to the passengers in the boat B, he is not guilty of an offence, though he may run down the boat C by doing an act which he knew was likely to cause that effect, if it be found as a matter of fact that the danger which he intended to avoid was such as to excuse him in incurring the risk of running down C.

(b) A in a great fire pulls down houses in order to prevent the conflagration from spreading. He does this with the intention in good faith of saving human life or property. Here if it be found that the harm to be prevented was of such a nature and so imminent as to excuse A's act, A is not guilty of the offence.

661. Analogous Law.—This section recognizes the doctrine of self-preservation, since it speaks of prevention of harm to person or property, which may be of the offender or of any other person. The authors of the Code gave an instance of a smith forced by dacoits to open a door which he did, to avoid his own torture and death. But the case would be different if he had belonged to a gang of dacoits and had then been forced to open the door which he was unwilling to do. A thief who steals, because he would otherwise starve, has similarly no excuse for doing so; if he were excused, it would let in a large body of men to prey upon society and thus destroy the very foundation of society itself.

662. Principle.—This section only gives legislative sanction to the doctrine of salvage common in the law of all nations. Indeed, it is a doctrine of necessity which has, since the sacrifice of Iphigenia, found ready recognition in all mundane transactions. It sanctions the doing of an evil so that good may come. It permits the infliction of a lesser evil in order to avert the greater evil. The two illustrations appended are based upon that assumption. The section requires that the act done should be without "criminal intention," but the word "intention" is here evidently used in a somewhat narrower sense and as distinguished from knowledge. Its primary meaning is the aim or resolution of the mind to produce an effect upon the sensible world. Its secondary meaning is the presumption which law makes of such a resolution from action accompanied by knowledge of the consequence. The section only requires that "criminal intention" in the first sense shall be absent, for intention in the second sense was certainly present in the mind of the Captain in illustration (a) who knowingly runs down boat C to save his own (See s. 24). His motive was certainly not to run down C, but motive is not always the same thing as intention (§ 205). The antithesis of intention and motive may in practice create difficulties. But the Legislature has wisely excluded cases of deliberate mischief from penal immunity, though the boundary line between knowledge and intention may sometimes be invisible. The conditions imposed by the Legislature for penal immunity in any case is that the act which constitutes an offence should not have been so intended, but what should have been intended is the prevention of some imminent injury. The explanation leaves the determination of this question to the jury, and rightly so, for the question depends upon how a reasonable man would have acted under similar circumstances. According to Bentham, harm can only be justified if it is established, (a) that it was inflicted to avert a greater evil, (b) that other means were less effective or more costly, or (c) that the means employed were most efficient.<sup>1</sup>

663. Meaning of Words.—“With the knowledge that it is likely to cause harm”: As to the meaning of the term “knowledge” here, see s. 24, “Without any criminal intention”: The word “intention” here means the purpose or design of doing a prohibited penal act (§ 662). “And in good faith,” for the meaning of which see s. 52. “Preventing or avoiding other harm”: The harm caused need not be necessarily less than the harm averted, though this question would become material when judging of the good faith of an act. Moreover, it is a question upon which depends the justifiability of the act otherwise criminal, as the explanation appended explains.

664. Necessity as a Defence to Criminality.—As has been already remarked, this section is grounded on the wide doctrine of necessity (§ 662). It is the universal law that all good involves some sacrifice. The ploughman who sows his seed in the expectancy of an abundant harvest is probably appealing to the same law of necessity as led Agamemnon to make the sacrifice of Iphigenia. The captain who capsizes a boat to save his own, a person who dismantles houses to arrest the progress of fire, appeal to the same law of necessity as those who deal blow for blow, or even take away another's life to save their own:<sup>2</sup> Necessitas vincit legem.<sup>3</sup> How far the Indian Legislature has thought fit to sanction this doctrine will be manifested from this section. It places no limit on the extent of the injury that may be caused, and the question may be whether this injury may extend to the slaughter of a fellow-being to assuage hunger. Such a question arose in England, and it forms the leading case on the point. There three seamen and a boy, the crew of an English yacht, were cast away in a storm on the high seas, 1,600 miles from the Cape of Good Hope, and were compelled to put into an open boat belonging to the said yacht. They had no food and no water in this boat and in order to save themselves from a certain death they put the boy to death and fed on the boy's body, when they were picked up by a passing vessel.

665. It was certain that if they had not fed on the boy's body they would have died before they were picked up. It was also probable that the boy killed would have succumbed earlier than the three remaining seamen. In fact the slaughter of some one was imminently indispensable to save the lives of the rest, and the question was whether the prisoners who had killed and eaten the boy were guilty of murder, and it was so held by Lord Coleridge, C. J., with the concurrence of the other four Judges. In so holding the learned Chief Justice, however, laid some stress upon the fact that the boy was selected for the sacrifice unfairly and without his consent. But on the question of the right of a person to take another's life to save his own, the judgment was equally explicit. It laid down that law does not recognize in man the absolute necessity of preserving his life. And that as regards morality it recognizes the duty of sacrificing it for the sake of saving another life. It is further admitted that there was in this case no such excuse unless the killing was justified by what has been called “necessity.” But the temptation to the act, which existed there, was not what the law has ever called necessity, nor is it to be regretted.

666. Though law and morality are not the same, and many things may be immoral which are not necessarily illegal, yet the absolute divorce of law from morality would be a fatal consequence; and such divorce would follow if the temptation to murder in this case were to be held by law an absolute defence of it. It is not so “To preserve one's life is generally speaking a duty, but it may be the plainest and highest duty to sacrifice it. War is full of instances in which it is a man's duty not to live, but to die. The duty in case of shipwreck, of a captain to his crew, of the

(1) Bentham's Principles of Penal Laws.

(2) s. 100, post.

(3) “Necessity overcomes law.”

crew to the passengers, of soldiers to women and children.....these duties impose on men the moral necessity, not of the preservation, but of the sacrifice of their lives for others, from which in no country, least of all it is to be hoped in England, will men ever shrink, as indeed, they have not shrunk. It is not correct, therefore, to say that there is any absolute or unqualified necessity for preserving one's life. It is not needful to point out the awful danger of admitting the principle which has been contended for. Who is to be the judge of this sort of necessity? By what measure is the comparative value of lives to be measured? Is it to be strength, or intellect, or what? It is plain that the principle leaves to him who is to profit by it to determine the necessity which will justify him in deliberately taking another's life to save his own. In this case the weakest, the youngest, the most unresisting, was chosen. Was it more necessary to kill him than one of the grown-up men? The answer must be 'No'—

"So spake the Fiend, and with necessity,
The tyrant's plea excused his devilish deeds."

It is not suggested that in this particular case the deeds were "devilish," but it is quite plain that such a principle, once admitted, might be made the legal cloak for unbridled passion and atrocious crime. There is no safe path for Judges to tread but to ascertain the law to the best of their ability and to declare it according to their judgment, and if in any case the law appears to be too severe on individuals, to leave it to the Sovereign to exercise that prerogative of mercy which the Constitution has entrusted to the hands fitted to dispense it.

"It must not be supposed that in refusing to admit temptation to be an excuse for crime it is forgotten how terrible the temptation was; how awful the suffering; how hard in such trials to keep the judgment straight and the conduct pure. We are often compelled to set up standards we cannot reach ourselves, and to lay down rules which we could not ourselves satisfy. But a man has no right to declare temptation to be an excuse, though he might himself have yielded to it, or allow compassion for the criminal to change or weaken in any manner the legal definition of crime." <sup>1</sup>

667. Grove, J., fully concurred with this judgment and added: "If the two accused men were justified in killing Parker, then if not rescued in time, two of the three survivors would be justified in killing the third, and of the two who remained the stronger would be justified in killing the weaker, so that three men might be justifiably killed to give the fourth a chance of surviving."<sup>2</sup> This was the case, it will be noted, of a person who had deliberately killed another for food. And it was a case in which the victim had not been a consenting party. If suppose the boy and the three men had cast lots for the life of one of them, would the case have been different? Evidently not, for such was the case supposed by Sir James Stephen of sailors who had to cast lots to throw some of them overboard to save themselves and to which Lord Coleridge referred in these terms: "The American case<sup>3</sup> cited by my brother Stephen in his Digest from Wharton on Homicide, in which it was decided, correctly indeed, that sailors had no right to throw passengers overboard to save themselves, but on the somewhat strange ground that the proper mode of determining who was to be sacrificed was to vote upon the subject by ballot, can hardly, as my brother Stephen says, be an authority satisfactory to a Court in this country."<sup>4</sup>

668. The principles deducible from the leading English case are then the following: (i) Self-preservation is not an absolute necessity; (ii) No man has a right to take another's life to preserve his own; (iii) There is no necessity that justifies homicide. The last requires an explanation. When it is said that no necessity justifies homicide,

(1) Per Lord Coleridge, C. J., in Dudley and Stephens, 14 Q. B. D. 273 (287, 288). The Court passed the sentence of death on the prisoners, but that sentence was afterwards commuted to one of six months' imprisonment. (Ib., p. 288, note 2.)

(2) Ib., p. 288, note 1.

(3) This was the case of Commonwealth v. Holmes, cited in Wharton's Homicide, p. 237.

(4) Dudley, 14 Q. B. D. 273 (285).

what is implied is that no private necessity justifies it, that is to say, such necessity as conservation of one's life, as distinguished from public necessity or even necessity when it is a justification. So Lord Hale said: "The necessity which justifies homicide is of two kinds: (i) the necessity which is of a private nature; (ii) the necessity which relates to the public justice and safety. The former is that necessity which obliged a man to his own defence and safeguard."<sup>1</sup>

669. In other words, homicide is justifiable only in self-defence<sup>2</sup> and when it is necessary for the good of society—as in the case of war. It is justifiable in no other case. But these cases naturally refer to death when it is the result of direct volition and violence. The same principle cannot be extended to where a person puts another's life in jeopardy to save his own. Such a case is assumed in illustration (a), where a captain runs down the boat C with two passengers, imperilling their life for the sake of saving the passengers of his own boat. Such a case presents some analogy to the case supposed by Lord Bacon of two ship-wrecked persons clinging to a plank not large enough to support both, on which one pushes off another to save himself upon which he is drowned.<sup>3</sup> Sir William Blackstone thinks this is not a crime on the ground of self-defence "since their both remaining on the same weak plank is a mutual, though innocent, attempt upon, and an endangering of each other's life."<sup>4</sup> Both in this case as well as in the case of the captain of the illustration, there was no direct bodily harm, but harm nevertheless, which jeopardized life. Harm to this extent is in extreme cases evidently justifiable.

670. But the section puts no limit on the harm that may justifiably be done in any case. It makes it a question of fact to be decided in accordance with the circumstances of each case. This view was evidently enacted, following the report of the English Criminal Law Commissioners, who had recorded the following opinion: "We are certainly not prepared to suggest that necessity should in every case be a justification. We are equally unprepared to suggest that necessity should in no case be a defence; we judge it better to leave such questions to be dealt with when, if ever, they arise in practice, by applying the principle of law to the circumstances of the particular case." There can be no doubt but that this opinion has been embodied in the explanation, the effect of which is to leave the question of necessity as a defence to criminal liability for determination in each case. All the same the English precedents show how far the doctrine of necessity has received the sanction of English Law, and how far it will receive sanction if a similar question comes up for decision in this country.

671. Dangerous Method of Detecting Crime.—The question what injury a man may justifiably inflict upon another for the preservation of his own property is one upon which the section sheds no certain light. That any harm including death may be caused in self-defence is of course clear.<sup>5</sup> But the question here, is, what harm he may cause voluntarily, not in defence of threatened injury to his property, but to safeguard it against possible injury. The question arose and was decided in a case in which one Dhanja Daji owned some date-trees at Tithal from which the toddy was being constantly stolen. In order to detect the unknown thief, he put into certain of the pots some of the juice of the milkbush. This toddy was purchased from a boy (whether he was or was not the thief is not clear from the report of the case) by some soldiers who drank it and thereupon they were seized with vomiting and purging and a burning sensation in the throat. Medical aid was immediately at hand and the use of the stomach-pump relieved the sufferers. The owner was then prosecuted under s. 328 of the Code for administering poison or causing it to be taken with intent to cause hurt, and he was convicted by the Court whose short judgment, however, gives no reason for their view. It, however, states that "the case does not come within the provisions of s. 81 of the Indian Penal Code, which applies only to acts done without any criminal intention to cause harm."<sup>6</sup>

(1) 1 Hale P. C. 478.

(2) S. 100, post.

(3) Bacon's Elements, c. 5; Hawk P. C. 73.

(4) 4 Black Comm. 186.

(5) Dhanja Daji, 5 B. H. C. R. 59.

(6) Dhanja Daji, 5 B. H. C. R. 59.

There was no criminal intention in the present case, though there was the intention to cause harm and as that was alone sufficient to justify a conviction under s. 328, the case was perhaps rightly decided. But if the offence had turned on the presence of criminal intention, there can be no doubt that Dhanial had no such intention.

672. Indeed, the true reason why the case is not saved by this section is that stated in the explanation, namely, the harm to be prevented was neither so great nor so imminent as to have justified Dhanial in doing the act which he knew might cause widespread harm. In short, the trap laid was unjustifiable on the ground of its great risk. If the risk had not been so great, the act would not have been criminal. Indeed, the fixing of an electric burglar alarm which gives a nocturnal intruder a rude shock and holds him in its grip is not an offence but a legitimate precaution which any householder might think fit to adopt. Indeed, if Dhanial had mixed a less deleterious drug to attain his object, he could not have been convicted under s. 328.

673. On this principle Jardine, J., justified a kick given by a sentry on duty to a police Chief Constable while attempting to force his guard in front of a house on fire, which he was doing in the discharge of his duty, but which the sentry did not know, as the Chief Constable was not in uniform. So Jardine, J., said: "The kick would be justified under s. 81 of the Penal Code as given in good faith for the purpose of preventing much greater harm, the looting of the house or the spread of the fire, on the same principle, that the man is excused by that section, who in a great fire pulls down other people's houses to prevent the conflagration from spreading. As Bostan (the accused) did not know the official character of the Chief Constable, and as this ignorance was a mistake of fact and not of law, he must be dealt with as if the Chief Constable were an ordinary citizen."<sup>1</sup> So where the accused, a member of the Governor's Council, was tried for imprisoning and deposing Lord Pigot, Governor of Madras, on the ground that he had, by his arbitrary and unconstitutional conduct, brought public business to a stand-still, Lord Mansfield in convicting the prisoner, observed: "In England it cannot happen, but in India you may suppose a possible case; but in that case it must be imminent extreme necessity. There must be no other remedy to apply to for redress: it must be very imminent, it must be very extreme; and in the whole they do, they must appear clearly to do it with a view to preserve the society and themselves, with a view of preserving the whole."<sup>2</sup>

674. The cases falling under this section must be distinguished from those in which the act is justified on the ground of self-defence. Self-defence. The two classes of cases have often been dealt with as if they were reducible to the same principle.<sup>3</sup> But they are entirely distinct and distinguishable, and a given case may be defended on the ground of "private defence," though it may be indefensible under this section. And there may be cases which are defensible on either ground. Such was held to be the case of one who had locked up a person found drunk and disorderly on a public way.<sup>4</sup>

Act of a child under seven years of age.

82. Nothing is an offence which is done by a child under seven years of age.

675. Analogous Law.—"Infants under the age of discretion," wrote Blackstone, "ought not to be punished by any criminal prosecution whatever."<sup>5</sup> What the age of discretion is, in various nations, is a matter of some variety. The civil law distinguishes the age of minors, or those under twenty-five years old, into three stages: infantia, from the birth till 7 years age, pueritia, from 7 to 14, and pubertus from 14 upwards. The period of pueritia, or childhood, was again subdivided into two equal parts: from 7 to 10½ was aetas infantiale proxima, from 10½ to 14 was actas pubertiati proxima. During the first stage of infancy and the next

(1) Bostan, 17 B. 626.

(2) Stratton, 21 St. Tr. 1046 (1224).

(3) 1 Russ, Crimes, pp. 847, 848.

(4) Gopal Naidu, 46 M. 605 (631), F. B.

(5) Hawk, P. C. 2.

half stage of childhood, infantia proxima, they were not punished for any crime.<sup>1</sup> During the other half stage of childhood, approaching to puberty, from 10½ to 14, they were indeed, punishable, if found to be doli capaces, or capable of mischief; but with many mitigations, and not with the utmost rigour of the law. During last stage (at the age of puberty, and upwards), minors were liable to be punished, as well capitally, "as otherwise."<sup>2</sup> The rule of the civil law as to the absolute and qualified immunity of infants has found its way into the system of most countries. So under the laws of England "under 7 years of age, indeed, an infant cannot be guilty of felony,<sup>3</sup> for then a felonious discretion is almost an impossibility in nature; but at 8 years old he may be guilty of felony. Also, under 14, though an infant shall be prima facie adjudged to be doli incapax, yet if it appears to the Court and jury, that he was doli capax, and could discern between good and evil, he may be convicted and suffer death."<sup>4</sup> As regards rape English law presumes that a boy under 14 is incapable of committing that offence, but under the Code, while a boy under seven is held totally irresponsible for that or any offence, there is no presumption of non-culpability in the case of a boy under 14, it being a question of fact in each case whether the offence of rape, or indeed, any other offence has been committed.<sup>5</sup>

676. The exemption made here in favour of infants of below 7, does not extend to offences under special or local laws.<sup>6</sup> So an infant below 12 may be convicted of an offence under the Indian Railways Act,<sup>7</sup> and he may be sentenced to whipping, the Court having the discretion of binding over the father or guardian against repetition of the offence by the infant. So an infant may be punished under other Acts which are enacted to preserve public health, order or sanitation, and in fact, any offence of which mens rea is not an essential ingredient.

677. Principle.—This section and the next lay down a rule which, owing to its origin to the civil law, had long since become established in the criminal systems of all civilized countries. An infant below 7 is absolutely doli incapax. In the ordinary course of nature a person of such age is absolutely incapable of distinguishing between right and wrong. There may be an occasional example of exceptional precocity, but such cases must indeed be rare, and law cannot take notice of such freaks. After attaining the age of 7 the absolute immunity of infants is qualified, and infants between 7 and 12 are criminally liable, if it is shown that they have attained the requisite degree of understanding to discriminate between right and wrong. It will be seen that the age of qualified immunity has, so far as regards this country been reduced from 14 to 12,<sup>8</sup> as it was considered that children born in the tropics sometimes attain the requisite understanding at that age. This fact is recognised by the Indian Majority Act,<sup>9</sup> which has fixed the age of 18 as the ordinary period for attaining majority, which is thus 3 years less than the age of majority under English Law.

678. Meaning of Words.—"Nothing is an offence which is done by a child," i.e., so far as the child itself is concerned. If an adult employs a child below 7 years to commit an offence, he is liable, though the child is not.

679. Privilege of Infancy.—An infant under 7 years can do no wrong. He can commit no crime as he is incapable of understanding the consequences of his acts. If therefore a child is accused of an offence under the Code, proof of the fact that he was at the time below 7 years of age is ipso facto an answer to the prosecution.<sup>10</sup> It is not then open to the prosecution to prove precocity of intellect, or any fact to rebut the presumption of innocence, which is then irrebuttable. In England, the law in this respect is slightly different, depending as it does upon the distinction there drawn between a felony and a misdemeanour. An infant under 12 is there

(1) Inst., 3-20-10.

(2) 4 Black. 22.

(3) 1 Hale P. C. 27.

(4) 4 Black. 23.

(5) Paras Ram, 37 A. 187; cf. Gopal Naidu, 46 M. 605, F. B.

(6) S. 42, ante.

(7) Act IX of 1890, s. 130.

(8) S. 83.

(9) Act IX of 1875.

(10) Lukhini Agradanini, 22 W. R. 27 (28).

said to be privileged only in case of non-feasance,<sup>1</sup> but for misdemeanour accompanied with force and violence, as a riot or battery, he is not immune.<sup>2</sup> So he may be, it is said, convicted of a forcible entry<sup>3</sup> or cheating.<sup>4</sup> But no cases have been recorded of the conviction of a child below 7, and the absolute rule here enacted is then practically the modern English rule, under which it is settled that an infant below 7 cannot be convicted of a felony. And therefore, a person cannot justify taking such an infant into custody and taking him before a Magistrate on the ground that he had been caught stealing a piece of wood.<sup>5</sup>

680. It will be seen that, while this section speaks of "under seven" and the next section of "above seven," the two sections make no provision for an infant of 7 years. But such an infant should be dealt with under this rather than under the next section. In a case the jury having found and in fact having committed an act which would, if he were an adult, be homicide, pardon was granted because it was found that at the time of the commission of the act he was under seven.<sup>6</sup> He would be entitled to an acquittal under the Code.

680-A. Where an adult purchased from a child, aged 6 years, two pieces of cloth worth fifteen annas for an anna, and it appeared that the child had taken them from the house of a third person, it was held that, as the child could not steal, the receiver could not be convicted under s. 411 of the Code, but nevertheless, he might be convicted of criminal misappropriation, if he knew that the property belonged to the child's guardian, and dishonestly misappropriated it to his own use.<sup>7</sup>

681. Though a child below 7 years is incapable of committing an offence, a person may employ it as an innocent agent for the commission of a crime, in which case, the adult will be responsible in the same way as if he had himself committed the crime. If suppose in the case last cited the accused had asked the child to fetch him the clothes, which he had done, he would have been guilty of theft though he could not be convicted as a receiver. So again, an adult abettor of a child under 7 may be convicted of abetment, though the child abetted was by law incapable of committing an offence.<sup>8</sup> A person may, for instance, employ a child below 7 to set fire to another's house, or to murder another by administering him poison. In such case the abettor would be punished though the child could not.

Act of a child above seven and under twelve, of immature understanding.

83. Nothing is an offence which is done by a child above seven years of age and under twelve, who has not attained sufficient maturity of understanding to judge of the nature and consequence of his conduct on that occasion.

682. Analogous Law.—Under the Civil law the period of qualified criminal responsibility is fixed between 7 and 14, which is also the rule adopted in England. But this section fixes the shorter period ending with 12 years, which was approved by the Law Commissioners who wrote: "With reference to the precocity of children in the East, the rule of the Indian Code, which fixes the age of twelve as the period after which the plea of immaturity of understanding shall not be allowed, appears to be proper."<sup>9</sup> The age of 12 years was the age of possible discretion under the ancient Saxon law.<sup>10</sup> The effect of this section as distinguished from the corresponding English rule is thus explained by the Law Commissioners: "It would seem from this (i.e., the section) that maturity of understanding is to be presumed in the case of such a child, unless the negative be proved on the defence. By the English Law, in the case of a child from 7 to 14 years of age, incapacity to commit a crime is to be presumed until the contrary be proved. After 14 years capacity is to be presumed until the contrary be proved."<sup>11</sup>

(1) 1 Hale P. C. 20.

(2) Ib.

(3) 4 Bac. Aler, 591.

(4) Bac. Ab. Infancy H.

(5) Marsh v. Loader, 14 C. P. (N. S.) 535.

(6) 1 Hale P. C. 27.

(7) Makbulshah, (1885) 1 Weir 740.

(8) S. 108, Exp. 3, Illus. (a), (b).

(9) First Report, s. 117.

(10) 4 Black. 23.

(11) 4 Black. 23; so held in Lukhini Agradanini, 22 W. R., 27 (28).

683. Principle.—Under English law, as already observed, (§ 682) the privilege of a child aged between 7 to 14, is absolute, while it is qualified in this country, the reason being that cases are known to occur when a child under 14 is found to have attained sufficient maturity of understanding to be able to judge the nature and consequence of his crime, though in awarding the sentence, regard would necessarily be had to his tender age.

684. Meaning of Words.—“Who has not attained sufficient maturity of understanding” means maturity of understanding sufficient to “judge of the nature and consequence of his conduct on that occasion.” The consequences of his conduct here spoken of do not mean the penal consequences, but the natural consequences which flow from a voluntary act, such for instance, as that, when fire is applied to an inflammable substance it will burn, or that a heavy blow with an axe or a sword will cause death or grievous hurt.<sup>1</sup>

685. Qualified Privilege of Children between 7 and 12.—Under Civil law a person under 18 is incapable of entering into a contract. Under the Code a person below 7 is incapable of committing a crime; and a person above 7 and below 12 may or may not be able to commit a crime according to his individual intelligence. Full criminal responsibility commences after 12, though civil liability does not commence till a person has completed his eighteenth year. Law thus presumes earlier development of the faculty to understand criminal responsibility than civil rights. And this is in accordance with the practical experience of mankind. For discrimination between right and wrong does not require the same exertion of the mind as the recognition of civil rights and duties. Lord Hale records the case of a girl of 13, who was burnt for killing her mistress; and one boy of 10, and another of 9 years old, who had killed their companions, were sentenced to death, and the boy of 10 years actually hanged.<sup>2</sup> And another boy of 8 years old was tried at Abingdon in the fifteenth century for firing two barns, and he was hanged as it was proved that he had malice, revenge, and cunning.<sup>3</sup> And so in still another case a boy of 10 was hanged for murdering his bed-fellow,<sup>4</sup> on the ground that after committing the act, he had actually hid himself, from which it was evident that he could discern between good and evil, and malitia supplet aetatem.<sup>5</sup> Two parish children aged 10 and 5 were left in bed together. On the parishioner's return the girl aged 5 was missing, and the boy being questioned stated that the girl had been helped by him to put on her clothes and she then left he knew not whither. Subsequently he confessed to having cut her in various places with a large knife because she had been used to foul herself in bed and had done so that morning which was incorrect. His story was otherwise circumstantially corroborated. He was accordingly convicted, but his sentence was reprieved on his promising to enlist in the navy.<sup>6</sup>

686. There is thus nothing against the possibility of an infant of below 12 years of age committing a crime, but in convicting an infant of such tender years the Court requires strong and unimpeachable testimony about the facts constituting the crime, and as he is deemed ex presumptione juris to possess no discretion, it further requires evidence of it.<sup>7</sup> The second requirement is dispensed with by the section as here enacted, but the rule as to strict proof still remains, and it has been insisted on the trial of infants of tender years. It is necessary, says Lord Hale, speaking of infants between the years of 7 and 12, that very strong and pregnant evidence should be given to convict one of that age.<sup>8</sup> Though it has also been pointed out that in construing this section the capacity of doing that which is wrong is not so much to be measured by years, as by the strength of the offender's understanding and judgment, the circumstances of a case may disclose such a

(1) Lukhini Agradanini, 22 W. R. 27 (28).

(2) Alice de Waldborough's case, 1 Hale P. C., 26, 27.

(3) Dean's case, 1 Hale P. C., p. 25, note (u).

(4) Spigurnal's case, 1 Hale P. C., 26.

(5) “Malice makes up for age.”

(6) York's case, Fost. Cr. L. 70.

(7) 1 Hale P. C. 27; 4 Black 23.

(8) 1 Hale P. C. 27, 28; 1 Hawk. P.C.C., I, s. 1, note (1); 4 Black. 23.

degree of malice as to justify the application of the maxim malitia supplet ætatem.<sup>1</sup> In the case in which these observations were made, the facts found were these : The prisoner, a girl of about 10 years, had been 10 or 12 days before the act abused by her father-in law and her husband, who had attempted to strike her. She took up a dao (a sharp cutting instrument) and struck her husband, while he was asleep, with it on the neck, causing an incised wound 2 inches long by  $\frac{3}{4}$  inch broad and from  $\frac{1}{4}$  to 1 inch deep, which caused his death. After the assault the prisoner ran away and concealed herself. The Court noted her presence of mind and ingenuity in Court, and judging from her demeanour in Court, and her concealment after her deed, it came to the conclusion that she was doli capax and she was accordingly convicted of murder and sentenced to transportation, the Court, however, adding an earnest solicitation for the reprieve of her sentence in excess of 7 years.<sup>2</sup>

687. In another case, the prisoner, a girl under 12 had set fire to her neighbour's house, because the latter had threatened her mother, and the question was whether the prisoner could be tried for arson. The High Court, to whom the reference was addressed on the preliminary question, remarked that the age of the prisoner was no element in considering the propriety of proceeding with the trial, that it was a fact which the prisoner had to establish in defence, in the same manner as the plea of insanity or other incapacity.<sup>3</sup> And in considering the question of the maturity of understanding sufficient to judge of the nature and consequence of the prisoner's conduct, all that the Court had to consider was the natural consequences which flow from a voluntary act, and not the penal consequences that flow therefrom. In other words, where a child is being tried for murder all that the accused need know to be criminally responsible is that death or grievous hurt would ensue from a blow given, or, in the case of arson, that when fire is applied to a substance it will catch fire.<sup>4</sup>

688. In cases arising under this section the sole question that arises is : Was the accused capable of understanding the nature of his act?<sup>5</sup> This may be proved by the nature of his act, his subsequent conduct and his demeanour and appearance in Court. Instances have been given where the Courts have inferred maturity of understanding from the fact that the offender had taken pains to conceal himself after the act. Pre-meditation may evince intelligence as where the girl wife sought the favourable opportunity of attacking her husband while he was asleep. Where a child of 9 years of age took a necklace valued at Rs. 2-8 from another boy and immediately pledged or sold it to another for five annas, the Court considered his conduct, displaying sufficient intelligence to hold him guilty of theft.<sup>6</sup> But if in such a case the accused had sold or pledged the necklace in the vicinity of the theft, it would rather shew defect of intelligence rather than otherwise. And so it was held by Prinsep and Hill, JJ., in a case in which the accused, a boy aged 9, was at 3 A.M. found in the compound of the Commissioner of Patna with a brass pot offering it for sale. The pot belonged to a constable in the compound, and the boy was therefore convicted of its theft. But the High Court remarked that "the fact that he offered it for sale very soon after taking it, and in the same locality is remarkable, and would seem to throw some doubt whether he understood the nature and consequences of his act,"<sup>7</sup> to which might be added that it was still more remarkable that he should have been found offering it for sale at 3 A.M. In another case, the accused, a girl of 10, a servant of the complainant, picked up his button worth eight annas and gave it to her mother, whereupon she was convicted and sentenced to a month's imprisonment, under s. 381, but the High Court quashed her conviction holding that there was no finding by the Magistrate that the accused had attained maturity of understanding sufficient to judge of the nature of her act.<sup>8</sup>

(1) "Malice makes up for age." Aimona (Mt.), 1 W. R. 43.

(2) Aimona (Mt.), 1 W. R. 43 (44).

(3) Lukhini Agradanini, 22 W. R. 27.

(4) Lukhini Agradanini, 22 W. R. 27 (28).

(5) Mukimuddin, 27 C. 133; Marimuthu, 1 I. C. (M.) (807).

(6) Begaragi, 6 M. 373.

(7) Makimuddin, 27 C. 133.

(8) Marimuthu, 1 I. C. M. 807; following Mohimuddin, 27 C. 133.

689. Of course, the nature of the act complained of often offers a fair indication of the capacity and intelligence of the accused. A boy under 12, may, for instance, be conceivably capable of committing theft, arson or even murder. But he is incapable of committing rape. So in regard to rape Lord Hale has laid down a rule that a boy under 14 is under a physical incapacity to commit the offence.<sup>1</sup> "There is," says Lord Coleridge, C. J., "præsumptiones juris et de jure, and Judges have time after time refused to receive evidence to shew that a particular prisoner was in fact capable of committing the offence."<sup>2</sup> And the same learned Judge went on to say that a person could not be guilty of an attempt to commit an offence which he is physically incapable of committing,<sup>3</sup> though in such a case the prisoner may be convicted of common assault,<sup>4</sup> or even an indecent assault.<sup>5</sup> And so in another case a girl of 10 years of age who had married another man during the lifetime of her first husband who was thereupon prosecuted for bigamy, was held not to have attained sufficient maturity of intelligence to judge of the nature and consequence of her second marriage. In this case the marriage was negotiated and caused to be performed by the mother of the accused, and there was nothing to suggest that she had herself brought about her second marriage by concealing the fact of her first marriage, or that she otherwise understood that what she was made to participate in was illegal or improper.<sup>6</sup>

84. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who, at the time of doing it, by reason of unsoundness of mind, is incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is either wrong or contrary to law.

Act of a person of unsound mind.

690. Analogous Law.—The last two sections deal with the deficiency in will due to tender age. This section deals with a deficiency of will due to weak intellect. "The second case of a deficiency in will," wrote Blackstone, "which excuses from the guilt of crimes, arises also from a defective or vitiated understanding, viz., in an idiot or a lunatic, for the rule of the law as to the latter, which may easily be adopted also to the former, is that furiosus furore suo punitur."<sup>7</sup> In criminal cases, therefore, idiots and lunatics are not chargeable with their own acts, if committed when under these incapacities: no, not even for treason itself. Also if a man in his fond memory commits a capital offence, and before arraignment for it, he becomes mad, he ought not to be arraigned for it, because he is not able to plead to it with that advice and caution that he ought. And if, after he has pleaded, the prisoner becomes mad, he shall not be tried; for how can he make his defence. If, after he be tried and found guilty, he loses his senses before judgment, judgment shall not be pronounced, and if, after judgment, he becomes of non-sane memory, execution shall be stayed; for peradventure, says the humanity of the English Law, had the prisoner been of sound memory, he might have alleged something in stay of judgment of execution."<sup>8</sup>

691. These provisions are not novel to this country for they find place in the Code of Criminal Procedure.<sup>9</sup>

692. Assuming that the three compartments of the mind are those controlling cognition, emotion and the will, this section only exempts one whose cognitive faculties are affected. As such the section has been regarded as too narrow and out of date, inasmuch as it makes no provision for a case where one's emotion and the will are so affected as to render the control of the cognitive faculties ineffectual.<sup>10</sup>

(1) 1 Hale P. C. 631.

(2) Groombridge, 7 C. & P. 582; Philips, 8 C. & P. 736; Waite, (1892) 1 Q. B. 600 (601).

(3) Waite, (1892) 1 Q. B. p. 601, per Hawkins, J. in Williams, (1893) 1 Q. B. 320 (321, 322).

(4) Waite, (1892) 1 Q. B. 600 (601); Williams, (1893) 1 Q. B. 320 (321).

(5) Williams, (1893) 1 Q. B. 320 (321).

(6) Godi, (1896) U. B. J. 876.

(7) "A mad man is punished by his madness alone." The same meaning is conveyed by the maxims "Furiosis nulla voluntas est." ("A mad man has no will") and "Furiosus absentis loco est" ("A mad man is like one who is absent").

(8) Hale P. C. 34.

(9) Ss. 464-475, Act V of 1898.

(10) Kader, 23 C. 604; followed in Chajju Mal, (1909) P. L. R. 94, 4 I. C. R. 985.

693. Principle.—Jurists have given various reasons for the exemption of lunatics from criminal responsibility. It has been said that a mad man is best punished by his own madness. So it has been said that if a mad man commits an offence he shall not suffer for the act, because being deprived of memory and understanding by the hand of God, he is regarded as having broken the mere words of the law, but not the law itself. The reason, however, why a mad man is exempt is that his acts being unintentional and involuntary, no Court can correct them by punishment. Being deprived of free-will a mad man is not placed even in a worse predicament than an infant under 7 years. For while the latter can at least control and regulate his acts, the former cannot. Being a victim of his impulses his acts are involuntary as they are unintelligent. It is idle to talk of his possessing mens rea for even his mind is not his own. He is therefore in all ages a fit object of commiseration; but a society has to be protected even against the attack of maniacs, the Procedure Code provides for his detention to prevent mischief. But his detention is not his sentence.

694. It will be observed that the burden of establishing “unsoundness of mind is cast upon the defence.”<sup>1</sup> This is in accordance with reason. For as Rolfe, B., told the jury in a case: “Every man committing an outrage on the person or property of another, must be, in the first instance, taken to be a responsible being. A man going about the world marrying, dealing, and acting as if he were sane, must be presumed to be sane till he proves the contrary. The question therefore would be, not whether the prisoner was of sound mind, but whether he had made out to their satisfaction that he was not of sound mind.”<sup>2</sup> But while it is so as a strict matter of law, since the Court has to find the mens rea, it is not precluded from considering the plea if the materials for it are sufficiently on record.<sup>3</sup>

695. Meaning of Words.—“Who at the time of doing it”: In order to rely on the defence of insanity under this section it must be shown that the accused was insane at the time of the commission of the offence. His insanity, antecedent and subsequent, would of course be relevant to prove his mental state at the time of the offence, but this alone is directly relevant to the case.<sup>4</sup> The section only deals with what constitutes an offence, and what does not. It therefore only speaks of mental irresponsibility at the time of the act. His subsequent incapacity does not affect his crime, though it affects his trial, and the contingency has been therefore provided for in the Procedure Code.<sup>5</sup> “By reason of unsoundness of mind”: This is equivalent to non compos mentis; the words “lunacy or madness” have been avoided as they may differ in degrees and kind. The unsoundness of mind here spoken of may be temporary or permanent, or due to any cause. An idiot, a person non compos mentis by sickness, a lunatic or a person naturally mad or one whose reason is clouded by alcohol is a person so unsound, provided that his unsoundness makes him blind to the nature or criminality of an act.

“Incapable of knowing the nature of the Act”: This phrase differs from that used in s. 83, where the words used are “the nature and consequences of his conduct” (§ 684). It means nothing more than that the person doing the act was not aware that what he was doing was wrong. So the Court in a case told the jury: “The question is whether the prisoner was labouring under that species of insanity which satisfies you that he was quite unaware of the nature, character, and consequence of the act he was committing, or, in other words, whether under the influence of a delusion or of a diseased mind, he was really unconscious at the time that the act he was committing was a crime.”<sup>6</sup> The use of the word “knowing” is significant and implies that in order to exempt a person from criminal responsibilities, insanity must have affected his cognitive faculties. If it merely affected his emotion, or will, leaving his cognition substantially unimpaired he cannot plead

(1) Ram, 50 I. C. (C.) 991; Mantajali, (1909) P. L. R. 94, 4 I. C. 985.
55 I. C. (C.) 477; Buzlur Rahman, (1929) C. 1.

(2) Layton, 4 Cox. C. C. 149.

(3) Tincourie, (1923) C. 460.

(4) Golla, 22 I. C. (M.) 737; Chajju Mal,

(5) S. 466, Cr. P. C.

(6) Oxford 9 C. & P., 555; s. 102, Indian Evidence Act; Kader Nasyer, 23 C. 604.

exemption, though it may be a case of extenuation.<sup>1</sup> Such was the case of the accused who was afflicted with a form of lunacy known as folie circulaire, a malady in which lucid intervals alternated with complete insanity. It was found that at the time of committing murder he was insane but sane enough to know perfectly well that he was committing a crime. He was sentenced to transportation, but the Court directed that he should be watched and the case reported if necessary to the Local Government for the exercise of its power of clemency.<sup>2</sup>

696. What is "Unsoundness of Mind".—A person of "unsound mind" is under certain circumstances held to be exempt from criminal responsibility. The Code does not define "unsoundness of mind." It assumes that the phrase will be understood. But it is one of those phrases which every one professes to understand, but few will dare to explain. The term "unsoundness of mind" has been undoubtedly used here, as it has been by Sir James Stephen, as equivalent to insanity. But insanity, lunacy, unsoundness of mind, mental derangement, mental disorder, madness and mental alienation or aberration have been indiscriminately applied to those states of disordered mind in which a person loses the power of regulating his actions and conduct according to the ordinary rules of society. "In all cases of real insanity, the intellect is more or less affected—hence the term intellectual insanity. In a medical sense this implies a deviation of the mental faculties from an assumed normal or healthy standard. In an insane person there may be no bodily disease, but his language and habits are changed, the reasoning power which he may have enjoyed in common with others is lost or perverted, and he is no longer fitted to discharge those duties which his social position demands. Further, from perversion of reason, he may show a disposition to commit acts which may endanger his own life or the lives of those around him. It is at this point that the law interferes for his own protection, and for that of society."<sup>3</sup>

697. As already observed, insanity not only affected the cognitive faculties but also the other compartments of the mind, viz., the emotion and the will. However, in law, insanity is understood to mean a mental condition in which, either from the existence of delusions, or from incapacity to distinguish between right and wrong, with regard to any matter under action, there is no individual responsibility. It is only with insanity of this kind that we are concerned. It is said that for this purpose, insane persons may be divided into four kinds: (i) a lunatic, (ii) an idiot, (iii) one non compos mentis by sickness, or (iv) by drink.<sup>4</sup> A lunatic and an idiot may be permanently so, or they may be subject to only temporary and occasional fits of the malady. A person suffering from a total alienation of the mind is called "insane" or "mad," the term "lunatic" being reserved for one whose disorder is intermittent with lucid intervals. Insanity is again sub-divided into (a) dementia a nativitate,<sup>5</sup> and (b) dementia accidentalis vel adventitia,<sup>6</sup> persons drunk being spoken as suffering from dementia affectata.<sup>7</sup> Leaving alone for the present this form of "madness" dealt with in the next section, the three other forms of madness call for notice under this section.

698. A person mad from birth is, of course, wholly irresponsible for his acts and his case presents no difficulty.<sup>8</sup> It is only persons who do not suffer from permanent insanity, or who suffer from partial insanity which leaves still some reason and understanding, that present the greatest difficulty. Speaking of partial insanity, Hale says, that it is the condition of very many, especially melancholy persons,

(1) Lakshman, 10 B. 512; Venkatasami, 12 M. 459; Muthusawmi M. 53 I. C. (M.) 828; Razai Mia, 22 C. 817; Kader, 23 C. 604, Mantajali, 55 I. C. (C.) 477; Chajju Mal, (1909) P. L. R. 94, 4 I. C. 985; Anandi, 45 A. 329; Lachman, 46 A. 243; Ramzan, (1918) P. R. (Cr.) 30, 48 I. C. 492; Bugwati Prashad, 74 I. C. (A.) 69.

(2) Lachman, 46 A. 243.

(3) Taylor's Medical Jurisprudence (4th Edn.) p. 474.

(4) Co. Lit., 247; Beverey's case, 4 Coke 124.

(5) "Madness from birth."

(6) Madness which is accidental or adventitious.

(7) Sib.: "Affected or pretended madness"—madness by drunkenness so called. Co. Lit., 247; 1 Hale P. C. 32; 1 Hawk P. C., c. 1, s. 6.

(8) Curiously such a person is called an "idiot" in law, 1 Hale P. C. 34.

who for the most part discover their defect in excessive fears and griefs, and yet are not wholly destitute of reason. "Doubtless most persons that are felons of themselves and others are under a degree of partial insanity, when they commit these offences; it is very difficult to define the invisible line that divides perfect and partial insanity; but it must rest upon circumstances duly to be weighed and considered both by the Judge and Jury, lest on the one side there be a kind of inhumanity to ward the defects of human reason, or, on the other side, too great an indulgence given to great crimes."<sup>1</sup>

699. What kinds and degrees of privations or perversion of understanding exempt a man from liability to legal punishment are therefore questions of some nicety. As Tracy, J., told the jury: "If a man be deprived of his reason, and consequently of his intention, he cannot be guilty; and if that be the case, though he had actually killed my Lord Onslow, he is exempted from punishment; punishment is intended for example, and to deter other persons from wicked designs; but the punishment of a mad man, a person that hath no design, can have no example. This is on one side; on the other side, we must be very cautious; it is not every frantic and idle humour of a man, that will exempt him from justice, and the punishment of the law. When a man is guilty of a great offence, it must be very plain and clear, before a man is allowed such an exemption; therefore it is not every kind of frantic humour or something unaccountable in a man's actions, that points him out to be such a mad man as is to be exempted from punishment; it must be a man that is totally deprived of his understanding and memory, and doth not know what he is doing, no more than an infant, than a brute or a wild beast, such a one is never the object of punishment"<sup>2</sup>

700. But this statement of the law probably carries the doctrine too far, for if the prisoner, in committing the act, was deprived of the power of distinguishing between right and wrong with relation to that act, it was not necessary that he should not have known what he was doing.<sup>3</sup> Such a person is undoubtedly of "unsound mind" within the meaning of the section. That term then has been used to embrace the case of a person who, moved by an irrational impulse, committed the act without knowing that it was a crime. It is used here to denote mental irresponsibility arising from want of capacity, whether temporary or permanent, natural or supervening, whether arising from disease or existing from the time of birth, or whether it was the result of habitual indulgence in liquor or intoxicating drugs. But the insanity here spoken of is something more than a passing phase of a normal mind, as for instance, a temporary insanity or loss of self-control induced by a single drinking bout, or ganja smoking which can scarcely be designated a temporary insanity, as being momentary it may call in the aid of sections 85 and 86 but is not to be treated as insanity here described.<sup>4</sup> Thus, an idiot who is a person without understanding from his birth, a lunatic who has intervals of reason, and a person who is mad or delirious are all persons of "unsound mind."

701. There are numerous degrees of insanity. It has been said that not every little cloud floating over an otherwise enlightened understanding will exempt from criminal responsibility; nor, on the other hand, will every glimmering of reason over the darkness of a troubled mind, subject the unfortunate being to the heavy pains provided for wilful wrong doing.<sup>5</sup> In order to render a man irresponsible for his acts the Code prescribes two tests, namely, (i) that his unsoundness must have reached that degree that he was "incapable of knowing the nature of the act," or (ii) that it had precluded him from understanding that the act he was doing was wrongful.<sup>6</sup> These two elements need not be simultaneously present, in each

(1) 1 Hale P. C. 30.

(2) Edward Arnold, (1724) 16 St. Tr. 695 (764, 765), followed in Tola Ram, 29 P. L. R. 104.

(3) Earl Ferrers, 19 St. Tr. 886.

(4) Vithoo, 7 N. L. R. 185, 13 I. C.

916; Maung Gyi, 7 L. B. R. 13, 20 I. C. 411.

(5) Harkha, (1906) A. W. N. 193.

(6) Bazlur Rahman, (1929) C. 1; Ans. to Qs. 2 and 3 in McNaughten's case, ib.; Kurma Urang, (1928) C. 238.

case, nor indeed, are they invariably so present. For it is easy to conceive of a case in which a person may be perfectly conscious of the nature of his act, though he lacks the capacity to see that it was wrongful. A person killing another, believing that his act was done by the immediate command of God, is an example. Here the person killing knew that his act will result in death, but he did not know that that act was wrongful. Other instances will have to be presently considered (§ 702). So much is, however, clear that in laying down the two tests the Code follows the current of English cases, in which a similar doctrine has been laid down. So the fifteen Judges consulted by the House of Lords replied: "If under the influence of his delusion, he supposes another man to be in the act of attempting to take away his life, and he kills that man, as he supposes in self-defence, he would be exempt from punishment. If his delusion was that the deceased had inflicted a serious injury to his character and fortune, and he killed him in revenge for such supposed injury, he would be liable to punishment."<sup>1</sup> The accused, in a case, was proved to be subject to insane delusions to the effect that he believed at times that he was surrounded and attacked by persons from whom he tried to escape. One day he became subject to a passing delusion that the priest of a Buddhist monastery was keeping his sisters and daughters in the monastery, but for this he had apologized to the priest whom he, however, later on attacked inflicting eight cuts from the effects of which he died. It being proved that the accused was a known mad man and had no conceivable motive for the crime, the Court acquitted him of murder holding that he did not know the nature of the act or that it was wrong.<sup>2</sup>

702. These are cases of delusions in which there is a mistake of fact, as where a person kills another but thinks that he was breaking a jar or thinks that by doing so he is sending the person slain to heaven.<sup>3</sup> In such cases the rule is the same, whether the person was under a mistake of fact, or in delusion. As in the one case so in the other, the Court places him as regards responsibility, in the same situation, as if the facts with respect to which the mistake was made or delusion existed, were real.<sup>4</sup> The twofold test, therefore, follows the two-fold functions of the human mind namely, reason and emotion. The function of the former or the faculty of thought is performed in cognition, perception or judgment: of the latter in moral sentiments and affections, the propensities and the passions. These two functions belong to two different compartments of mind, and one may be diseased while the other is normal.<sup>5</sup> The two classes, it will be seen, relate solely to the domain of reason, they exclude all cases of emotion. A Ghazi plunging his knife into the heart of a Kafir may truly believe that the deed will secure him the peace of Heaven, but he knew that his act will result in death—indeed it was so intended and he further knew that his act was contrary to law. He may be a religious maniac, but he cannot be exempted from punishment, because his case does not fall within the exemption.

703. Indeed, such a case is amply met by the reply of the Judges to the first question of the Lords.<sup>6</sup> Cases of human sacrifice and of murder of supposed witches (s. 302) offer other examples. So where a man sacrificed his own son to the God Mahadeo in pursuance of a vow that if the son were born he would offer Ganges water and do puja, and because, as he alleged that though the son came, wealth had not accompanied its birth, as a protest against which he had cut his own throat, it was held that he could not but be convicted of murder, though his act may have been prompted to some extent by his religious enthusiasm or even hallucination.<sup>7</sup> The accused, in another case, had confessed that he had seen the deceased (a lad aged 8 years who was his brother-in-law) arrange a clandestine meeting between his wife and a young man whom he actually saw enter his wife's apartment sometime before midnight, and again leave it after a considerable interval, and in consequence of

(1) McNaughten's case, 1 C. and K. 130; Muhammad Hussain, 15 O. C. 321, F. B., 18 I. C. 641; Townby, 3 F. & F. 839.

(2) Inga, 4 Bur. L. T. 267, 13 I. C. 385.

(3) Kader Nasyer Shah, 23 C. 604 (607); followed in Ramzan, (1918) P. R. (Cr.) 30,

48 I. C. 492.

(4) Ghinua, (1918) Pat. 57, F. B.

(5) Ghatu Pramanick, 28 C. 613.

(6) McNaughten's case, 1 C. & K. 130.

(7) Bishendharee Kahar, 7 W. R. 64.

what he saw he had not had a wink of sleep until he killed him. It was held that the accused actually believed that he had ocular proof of his wife's infidelity, and that the estimate of his guilt must be made upon the basis of actual existence of the facts in regard to which the delusion existed, and since the accused had acted under the immediate influence of such provocation, his guilt was greatly mitigated under exception 1 to section 300.<sup>1</sup> In another case, the prisoner killed his uncle, by hacking him on the head and neck with a sword, after which he rushed about brandishing his weapon shouting "Victory to Kali," and he attempted to strike other persons including his own father, and the question was whether he was guilty of murder. It appeared that the prisoner was a young man of weak intellect. The motive actuating the offence was trivial and inadequate. When the paroxysm had passed off, during the police inquiry he appeared to be rational, but immediately afterwards he developed aphasia, attempted to commit suicide, and was undoubtedly insane from that time for a period of five years. It was held that the facts warranted, a finding that the prisoner was suffering from a fit of melancholic homicidal mania at the time he hacked the deceased with the sword and was by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing that he was doing an act which was wrong or contrary to law, and that therefore he was not guilty of murder.<sup>2</sup>

704. "Run Amuck."—Persons who "run amuck" probably suffer from similar insane delusions. Fancying some wrong, exaggerating the importance of some grievance, real or imaginary, the soldier takes up his gun and commences to fire at people indiscriminately. All these are cases of homicidal mania, the importance of which calls for separate notice.

705. Homicidal Mania.—Homicidal mania or monomania is commonly defined to be a state of partial insanity, accompanied by an impulse to the perpetration of murder, from which it is also sometimes called impulsive or paroxysmal mania. There may or may not be evidence of intellectual aberration, but the main feature of the disorder is the existence of a destructive impulse which, like a delusion, cannot be controlled by the patient. This impulse, thus dominating over all other feelings, leads a person to destroy those to whom he is most fondly attached, or any one who may be involved in his delusion.<sup>3</sup> It sometimes seizes a man all of a sudden, sometimes it is long-felt but concealed and restrained: there may be merely signs of depression and melancholy, low spirits and loss of appetite, as well as eccentric or wayward habits, but nothing to lead to a suspicion of the fearful struggle that may be going on within the mind. "As in suicidal mania, many of those who are in habits of daily intercourse with the patients have been first astounded by the act of murder, and then only for the first time led to conjecture that certain peculiarities of language or conduct, scarcely noticed at the time, must have been symptoms of insanity. Occasionally the act of murder is perpetrated with great deliberation, and apparently with all the marks of sanity."<sup>4</sup> Taylor goes on to observe that these cases are sometimes rendered difficult by reason of the fact that there may be no distinct proof of the existence, past or present, of any disorder of the mind, so that the chief evidence of the disorder is the act itself.

706. But medico-legal writers are agreed that there are no hallucinations or illusions in this form of insanity<sup>5</sup> which is simply a perversion of the moral sentiments. But inasmuch as the mental powers are seldom unaffected when the moral feeling is so disordered, the derangement of the latter necessarily implies some derangement of the former. Indeed, the perversion of moral feeling is generally observed to be a precursor of mental derangement, though not to the same extent. Homicidal mania, as such, has therefore no recognized place in this exception. And in this respect the English Law is identical.<sup>6</sup> In other words, neither under this section, nor under the rules of English Law can a person plead exemption from criminal liability merely

(1) Ghatu Pramanik, 28 C. 613.

(2) Shibokoeri, 10 C. W. N. 725.

(3) 2 Taylor's Med. Jur. (4th Ed.), 564.

(4) Ib., 477.

(5) See Somnambulism, infra.

(6) 3 Stephen's Cr. L. 126.

on the ground that he was prompted by an involuntary impulse to commit the crime.<sup>1</sup> But there are cases in which the intellect is so far affected as to bring the case of the prisoner within the exception here enunciated. For this purpose homicidal maniacs may be divided into three classes ; (i) Where the propensity to kill is connected with absurd irrational motive, or actual delusion; (ii) where it is connected with no known motive ; (iii) where it is committed without interest, without motive, and often on person loved by the perpetrator.

707. Of course, this classification takes no note of crimes committed from a motive, e.g., of revenge, for, in such cases, there is premeditation, and cognition. They are not, therefore, cases in which there is any room for doubt as to the criminality of the perpetrator. The three degrees above described are, on the other hand, cases in which there may or may not be culpability. For instance, where a married woman killed her husband immediately after an apparent recovery from a disease which caused a great loss of blood and brought on insane delusions of the senses, which had been renewed at the time of the murder, it was held that she had not been in such a state of mind at the time of the act as to know its nature or be accountable for it.<sup>2</sup> So in another case, a married woman, fondly attached to her children and apparently most happy in her family, poisoned two of them without any motive. It appeared that there was insanity in her family, and it was held that the woman had acted in a paroxysm of insanity which deprived her of the power to perceive the consequence of her act, and she could not, therefore, be convicted.<sup>3</sup>

708. In another case the mother, who was suffering from the after-effects of delivery and religious despondency, got up one night and drowned four of her children in a cistern. She afterwards confessed that she could not sleep at night, and that between 12 and 1 o'clock, a black shadowy figure appeared and suggested to her that they could be out of danger if they were in Heaven. It was further suggested to her mind that it was better for them to die young than to grow up wicked and that she could easily put them into the cistern, whereupon she acted.<sup>4</sup> Other cases have occurred in which the filicide confessed to having had the same sensation of darkness or a black spectre brooding over them just before the perpetration of the act.<sup>5</sup> In such cases not only is there no motive for the act, but there could be no possible motive having regard to the known relations between the perpetrator and the deceased. But if this were all, the section would offer no defence. Besides the want of motive, there were circumstances in these from which the Court was justified in inferring that the persons accused were insane and unconscious of the fact that the act committed by them was wrong.

709. In the second class of cases the desire to kill is connected with an irresistible impulse, and no known motive. Where that is the only case, it is obviously insufficient to justify exculpation. As Bramwell, B., told the jury : " It has been urged that you should acquit the prisoner on the ground that, it being impossible to assign any reason for the perpetration of the offence, he must have been acting under what is called a powerful and irresistible influence, or homicidal tendency. But the circumstances of an act being apparently motiveless, is not a ground for which you can safely infer the existence of such an influence. Motives exist unknown and innumerable, which might prompt the act. A morbid and restless, but resistible, thirst for blood would itself be a motive urging to such a deed for its own relief. But if an influence be so powerful as to be termed irresistible so much the more reason is there why we should not withdraw any of the safeguards tending to counteract it. There are three powerful restraints existing, all tending to the assistance of the person who is suffering under such an influence—the restraint of religion, the restraint of conscience, and the restraint of law. But if the influence itself be held a legal excuse, rendering the crime dispunishable, you at once withdraw a most powerful restraint—

(1) Maung Gyi, 7 L. B. R. 13, 20 I. C. 411.

(2) Law, 2 F. & F. 836.

(3) Vyse, 3 F. & F. 247.

(4) Wilson, 1 Stephen's Cr. L. 91.

(5) Brough, 2 F. & F. 838; Hayes, 1 F. & F. 666.

that forbidding and punishing its perpetration. We must return, therefore, to the simple question you have to determine: Did the prisoner know the nature of the act he was doing, and did he know that he was doing what was wrong? <sup>1</sup>

710. The fact that the prisoner was suffering from partial delusion is no ground for exoneration if he was then possessed of sufficient sense to know that his act was wrong or that it would result in loss of human life. So where the prisoner who was sleeping in the same hut with the deceased and the latter's father and brother, got up at dawn and seized an axe which was in the hut, struck the deceased, and then ran away, throwing the axe in the jungle close by, and went to his house about two miles distant where he stayed till the next day when he was arrested, and brought before a Magistrate to whom he confessed, saying that on the night of the occurrence he had seen the deceased who was his brother-in-law, a lad of 8 years, having a private conversation with another who gave him a rupee which he carried to his wife. That another then entered the hut, where his wife was and returned after some time, whereupon he was smitten with such shame that he could get no sleep and that out of rage and a feeling of disgrace he had lost his senses when he killed his brother-in-law. It was found that the accused could not have seen what he had confessed, that the wife, of the accused was but a girl of 11, and had not even attained puberty, that the accused had at the same time no other motive. The accused was undoubtedly suffering from a delusion and he actually believed that he had ocular proof of his wife's infidelity. He was accordingly convicted of murder, though it was suggested that the Government might consider the question of reducing the sentence. <sup>2</sup>

711. So where the prisoner and his wife were seen walking along a road, the prisoner chiding her, and then all of a sudden he fired a pistol at her and she fell, whereupon he pulled her up and they proceeded a few yards, when he pushed her down and inflicted a second wound on her throat with a knife. He then ran away till he was overtaken and arrested by an onlooker to whom he stated that he had had a misfortune and had cut his finger. He would not tell what he had done with the pistol and knife, but said: "I did it. I intended to do it, and that will put an end to it. I have been unhappy since Christmas." The prisoner had threatened to murder his wife before, on whom he had made a previous attack. At the same time the murder was committed without secrecy, whereupon Rolfe, B., told the jury: "The conclusion seemed irresistible that the prisoner was to some extent labouring under a delusion, but he was not exempted from responsibility because he was labouring under a delusion as to his property, unless that had the effect of making him incapable of understanding the wickedness of murdering his wife. But whether that was the question they had to consider, he could not say that it was altogether immaterial that he was insane on one point only. Indeed, his insanity on that point might guide them to a conclusion. As to his sanity on the point involved in this case, and, in this view of the matter, there were two circumstances in the evidence of great importance: these were, the want of motive for the commission of the crime, and its being committed under circumstances which rendered detection inevitable. They could come to no other conclusion than that the prisoner had taken away the life of his wife, and that this was murder, unless he had satisfied them that he was not capable, at the time, of appreciating his acts." <sup>3</sup>

712. In the third class, the impulse to kill is sudden, instantaneous, unreflecting, and uncontrollable. The act of homicide is perpetrated without interest, without motive, and often on persons who are most fondly loved by the perpetrator. This has been called impulsive insanity. "It is said that on particular occasions men are seized with irrational or irresistible impulses to kill, to steal, or to burn, and under the influence of such impulses they sometimes commit acts which would otherwise be most atrocious crimes. It would be absurd to deny the possibility that such impulses may occur, or the fact that they have occurred and have been acted on. Instances are given in which the impulse was felt and resisted. The only question which the existence of such impulses can raise in the administration of criminal justice is, whether the particular impulse was really irresistible as well as unresisted. If it was resistible, the fact that it proceeded from disease would be no excuse at all. If a man's nerves were so irritated by a baby's crying that he instantly killed it, his act would be murder; it would not be the less murder if the same irritation and corresponding desire were produced by some internal disease.<sup>1</sup> The great object of the criminal law is to induce people to control their impulses; and there is no reason why, if they can, they should not control insane as well as sane impulses.<sup>2</sup> The proof that an impulse was irresistible depends on the circumstances of the particular case. The commonest and strongest cases are those of women who, without motive or concealment, kill their children after recovery from child-bed."<sup>3</sup> This is called puerperal mania and is a recognised malady, known to the medical science.<sup>4</sup> Taylor says that in most of these cases women are fully aware of the nature of the act, and that it is contrary to the laws of God and man; they even make efforts to resist it, but they are unable to control their actions like persons in a normal state.<sup>5</sup> In this form of insanity the will-power is then affected. But insanity affecting emotions and the will is not entitled to exceptional treatment. (§§ 725-728).

(1) Hayes, 1 F. & F. 666; Brough 2 F. & F. 838. Ramzan, (1918) P. R. 30, 48 I. C. 492; Dhani Bux, 9, S. I. R. 171, 32 I. C. 671; Naga Khan Hla, (1914) U. B. R. 3. D. Q. R. 28, 26 I. C. 1007.

(2) Ghatu, 28 C. 613, Seat Ali, 41 I. C. 142; Ghinua, (1908) Pat. 57, 43 I. C. 423. Bazlur Rahman (1929) C. 1.

(3) Layton, 4 Cox. C. C. 149.

713. Other forms of impulsive insanity induce the person affected to other forms of crimes. The morbid mania leading to impulsive acts of incendiarism without any motive is a condition recognized by medico-legal writers,<sup>6</sup> though it is not recognized by law. So the morbid propensity for thieving is known as kleptomania, a mania which is said to show itself in females labouring under disordered menstruation, or amongst those who are far advanced in pregnancy—the motive being a mere wish of possession. In this form of the malady, however, the person stealing is perfectly conscious of the act and of its illegality, as is evidenced by the precaution taken before and after the theft.<sup>7</sup> Another form of mania owing its origin to the primary disturbance of the functions of the brain from disease, is that called erotomania, in which the person affected gets possessed of uncontrollable amorous ideas, which are then as predominant as religious ideas in some cases of religious melancholia. Persons of both sexes are subject to this disorder, which is said to be due to some defect in the sexual organs.<sup>8</sup> Persons so affected are perfectly conscious of the nature of their acts, and they are therefore amenable to criminal law both here as well as in England.

714. Dipsomania or Drunkenness.—Allied to these monomanias, is the mania caused by alcoholism. Drink as a rule is no excuse for crime, as the next section lays down. But the question here to be discussed is not that raised by that section, but that which is the outcome of the present exception. That intemperance is not infrequently only the sign of insanity, or one of its symptoms, is now recognized; that intemperance may lead to total deprivation of self-control, or at all events delusions induced by excess, as in delirium tremens rendering the individual irresponsible for his actions, is also possible. So it has been held that though mental incapacity produced by voluntary drunkenness is no defence under the next section, still, if voluntary drunkenness causes a disease which produces such incapacity then this section applies though the disease may be of a temporary character.<sup>9</sup> So where the accused Bheleka Aham, while proceeding towards his field one day, met a boy returning home whom, without speaking a word, he killed with a single stroke of the dao as he passed him. There was no motive for the crime and it appeared that

(1) Laxaman Dagdu, 10 B. 512.

(2) Kader Nasyer 23 C. 604.

(3) Stephen's Cr. L., p. 95.

(4) 2 Taylor's Med. Jur., p. 589.

(5) Ib. p. 590.

(6) Taylor's Med. Jur., p. 591.

(7) Taylor's Med. Jur., p. 593.

(8) Ib., pp. 593, 594.

(9) Bheleka Aham, 29 C. 493.

the accused had exhibited symptoms of insanity since six or seven days previously. His replies to the police were incoherent and meaningless. The evidence showed that the accused was addicted to intemperate habits by excessive use of opium whereupon the Court held that the accused was irresponsible for the act, as at the time he killed the boy, he was incapable of knowing the nature of his act.<sup>1</sup>

715. The law in England is the same. Voluntary drunkenness is no excuse there. It is, on the other hand, considered an aggravation. Still, if a person addicted to drink commit a crime, the question about his intemperance is always relevant as reflecting upon intention, or upon his criminality. So in a case of attempted suicide, Jervis, C. J., said: "If the prisoner was so drunk as not to know what she was about, how can you say that she intended to destroy herself?"<sup>2</sup> And so if drunkenness produces a condition of mind in which the sense of discrimination between right and wrong is obliterated, the question is relevant, for on the existence of that sense depends his criminal responsibility. Excessive drinking causes the derangement of mind known as delirium tremens. It commences with tremors of the hands, and the individual suffers from hallucinations and illusions sometimes of a horrid kind referring to past occupations or events. The patient acquires a predisposition to commit murder or suicide, especially the latter. In delirium tremens there is a formed disease of the brain, while voluntary drunkenness merely produces a temporary disturbance of its functions.<sup>3</sup> In countries where and amongst classes in which drunkenness is common, this form of dementia is frequently raised as a defence. But in order to be sufficient it must establish a condition of positive and well defined insanity. Where it lacks that degree of proof, drunkenness is not an answer to a crime though it may be taken into account as an extenuating circumstance.

716. Somnambulism.—Medico-legal writers regard somnambulism as also a form of insanity in which the mind is subject to hallucinations and illusions, though except in very extreme cases, in which there is a sudden access of insanity, the person is not likely to commit a heinous crime like murder, without recovering from the delusion. In crimes committed in this state of semi-consciousness, the person usually mistakes one person for another, or believes himself surrounded by robbers, or is haunted by imagined feelings of wrong. Taylor mentions several cases of crimes committed during sleep. In one case the prisoner suddenly awoke at midnight, and saw before him, as he believed, a frightful phantom. He twice called out "Who is that?" but receiving no reply, and imagining that the phantom was advancing upon him, he seized a hatchet which was beside him, attacked the spectre, and it was found that he had killed his wife. He was tried for murder, but acquitted on the ground that he was not at the time conscious of his actions.<sup>4</sup> In another case an itinerant pedlar, given to sleep-walking, and in the habit of moving about the country armed with a sword stick, was while asleep on the high road roused by a passer-by. The pedlar suddenly awoke, drew his sword and stabbed the man who soon afterwards died. It was pleaded for him that he had committed the act believing himself to have been attacked by robbers. He was, however, convicted of manslaughter, presumably because he was conscious when he stabbed the man.<sup>5</sup> In another case the prisoner, a woman, had stabbed at night her son-in-law sleeping in the same room with her. There was evidence of previous malice and the knife with which the wound had been inflicted bore the appearance of having been recently sharpened, and the prisoner must have reached over her daughter who was sleeping in the same bed with the deceased. These facts were held to negative the suggestion of unconsciousness, and the prisoner was convicted.<sup>6</sup> In one case the prisoner committed an act during sleep which was the result of voluntary drunkenness, but his act was held to have been done in a state of unconsciousness and he was acquitted. In that case the prisoner and the deceased were two soldiers, and the former had been arrested for drunkenness and put to bed. The deceased went to awaken him, when

(1) Bheleka Aham, 29 C. 493.

(2) 4 Black. 26; Co. Litt., 247.

(3) Taylor's Med. Juris., p. 600.

(4) Bernard Schedmaizig, 2 Tay, Med. Jur.,

p. 600.

(5) Milligan, 2 Tay, Med. Jur., p. 600.

(6) Jackson, 2 Tay, Med. Jur., p. 600;

Minchin, ib.

the prisoner suddenly kicked out, and his boot struck the abdomen of the deceased, causing rupture of the intestines and death. The prisoner did not awake, and appeared then to be quite insensible and he was on that ground acquitted.<sup>1</sup>

717. Insanity as a Defence to Criminality.—The plea of insanity is a defence to criminal responsibility. It must be therefore established by the defence,<sup>2</sup> either from facts alleged or proved by the prosecution, or independently by the defence. Insanity is a medico-legal question. It comprises not only all degrees of mental disorders expressed by the terms partial insanity, impulsive insanity, moral insanity, monomania, pyromania kleptomania and the like, but it presents considerable difficulties in investigation, and, requiring as it does highly specialized mental capacity for observation, it is a defence which is readily available, but which it is not always easy to establish. At the same time, while true cases of insanity are rare, when they do occur they present problems which baffle even specialists in mental diseases.

718. The present section does not refer to insanity in all its stages. It only allows such insanity to be a defence as is sufficient to deprive the person of his reason so that he is unable to “know the nature of the act.” In England where all criminal trials are held by a jury, the question does not present the same difficulties. The juries are entitled to pronounce their verdict without giving their reasons. Accordingly, they do not regard the question from the same standpoint as a judge in this country who has to discharge the double functions of Judge and jury, and give his reasons for his judgment, which, again, is subject to confirmation, appeal or revision.

719. When the prisoner is tried by a jury, the latter do not as a rule trouble themselves with the niceties of law or the perplexing problems that a given case may present. They usually ask themselves the question, “Could any man in his senses have done such an act?” and their verdict depends upon the answer they are able to give to that question. Such a question, indeed, presents itself to the unaided Judge even in this country, but it is not the only question he has to answer, nor is it the sole test by which he judges of the criminal responsibility of an accused before him. It will, therefore, be the purpose of the present discussion to present a summary of the subject so far as it has a bearing on a person’s criminal responsibility.

720. It has been before stated that criminal responsibility depends upon Physical Changes in Deranged Mind criminal intent (§ 661). In other words, wherever there is no criminal intention, there is as a rule no criminal liability. Now, the absence of criminal intention may arise from a variety of causes—mistake, immaturity of understanding due to youth, or absence of understanding due to insanity. Now, insanity may be temporary or permanent, total or partial. It may have, again, some bearing on a person’s criminal act, or none at all. Barring certain exceptional cases to be presently considered, insanity is a disease or disorder of the mind which deprives the man of his reasoning faculties, and makes him a victim to its uncontrollable impulses. Now, as the brain is the organ of the mind, and it is invisible, the only manifestation of mental disorder is presented by the outward acts and conduct of the individual. Even when laid bare either experimentally in the lower animals, or in the human subject by the operation of disease, by accident, or by surgical measures, the passages of motion from place to place and the intimate molecular changes by which its functions are exerted cannot be observed. The utmost that can be observed is a difference in the amount of blood suffused in the vessels of the part, and the effects of injury, in the shape of paralysis or other disability, when the patient is dead, and if the brain is examined microscopically, we can, indeed, observe an extraordinary complexity and delicacy of structure, and we can often distinguish changes in this structure which we know, or reasonably infer, to be the results of the disease.”<sup>3</sup> This is all that can be known. The

(1) French, 2 Tay, Med. Jur., p. 160.

(2) Razai Mia, 22 C. 817; Bahadur, 9 L. 371; Ram, 50 I. C., (C.) 991; Mantajali, 55 I. C.

477; Bazlur Rahman (1929) C. 1, disordered working of the structure cannot be seen, for the working ends with death "and although we may justly infer, when we see a nerve-cell or nerve-fibre shrivelled or swollen, or distorted or disintegrated, that it must, during life, have performed its functions badly or not at all; yet, in the absence of all exact and specific knowledge of what that function is, we are unable to connect in any rational way the changes found after death with the symptoms observed during life.

(3) Mercier's Criminal Responsibility, p. 83.

721. We may be sure that a cell that has burst and extended its nucleus, and a fibre that is severed and broken into lengths, did not, during life, transmit motion in normal amounts or directions, and did not add thereto or subtract therefrom, and did not modify in normal ways the direction of such motion as reached them. But this very general reasoning does not enable us to understand why the patient during life should have been excited or stuporous in conduct nor why he was elevated or depressed in mind. It gives us no inkling of the reason that he entertained delusions, still less of the character of the delusions. We are reduced to suppose that a patient, who has a delusion that he is prosecuted by some unseen and incomprehensible agency, has a change of structure in a part of his brain; and that another patient who has a delusion that the whole world is his own private property, has a change of a different character in that part of his brain, or a change of the same character in another part of his brain, or a change of different character in a different part of his brain. But this is all conjecture.

722. Our knowledge does not enable us to associate any specific kind of change with any specific kind of delusion, nor can we even say that any particular change of structure is necessarily associated with delusion at all, nor, conversely, that delusion is necessarily associated with any particular structural change, nor with any discernible structural change. And what is true of disorders of mind is equally true of disorders of conduct."<sup>1</sup> "Unsoundness of mind" cannot, therefore, be the subject of ocular inspection or demonstration. It can only be known by its outward manifestations. By the language and conduct of the man, his thoughts and emotions are read. According as he conform to, or contrast with, the practice of people of sound mind, the large majority of mankind, we form our judgment as to his mental soundness. For this reason evidence is admissible to show that his conduct and language at different times and on different occasions indicated some morbid condition of his intellectual powers; and the more extended the view of his life, the safer is the judgment formed of him.

723. Everything relating to his physical and mental history is relevant. Evidence as to insanity in his parents and immediate relatives may also be pertinent<sup>2</sup>. It is never allowable to infer insanity in an accused person from the mere fact of its existence in his ancestors. But when testimony directly tending to prove insane conduct on the part of the accused himself has been given, evidence of his family antecedents is admissible as corroborative of that testimony.<sup>3</sup> But the plea of general insanity though admissible, is not a complete answer to a charge. As the section lays down, in order to be effective as a defence, it must be an insanity by reason of which the person was incapable of knowing the nature of the act. So it is stated by Alison that "to amount to a complete bar of punishment, either at the time of committing the offence or of the trial, the insanity must have been of such a kind as entirely to deprive the prisoner of the use of reason, as applied to the act in question, and the knowledge that he was doing wrong in committing it. If, though somewhat deranged, he is able to distinguish right from wrong in his own case, and to know that he was doing wrong in the act which he committed, he is liable to the full punishment of his criminal acts."<sup>4</sup>

(1) Mercier's Criminal Responsibility, pp. 83, 84.

(2) Bahadur, 9 L. 371.

(3) Per Cox., J. in United States v. Guiteau, 10 Fed. Rep. 161, per Maule, J., in Tucker,

1 Cox. C. C. 103; Anandi, 45 A. 329; Bhagwati Prasad, 74 I. C. (L.) 69, Nga Pyau 4 Bur. L. J. 267, 13 I. C. 385.

(4) Principles of the Criminal Law of India, p. 654.

724. The inquiry is then narrowed down to this: Was the accused not in possession of his understanding at the time of the act,<sup>1</sup> so that he could not discern that he was doing a wrongful act? The expression used in the section is "knowing the nature of the act," which would at first blush seem to imply that only insanity which affects the cognitive faculties is a defence to criminal responsibility. Instances of unsoundness of mind of this description would be such as these: A person strikes another and in consequence of an insane delusion thinks he is breaking a jar. Here he does not know the nature of the act. Or he may kill a child under an insane delusion that he is saving him from sin, and sending him to Heaven. Here he is incapable of knowing, by reason of insanity, that he is doing what is morally wrong, or he may, under insane delusion, believe an innocent man, whom he kills, to be a man that was going to take his life, in which case, by reason of his insane delusion, he is incapable of knowing that he is doing what is contrary to the law of the land.<sup>2</sup>

725. But insanity affects not only the cognitive faculties of the mind which guide our actions, but also our emotions which prompt our actions and the will by which our actions are performed. The question whether the exemption here made is confined only to cases of insanity affecting cognitive faculties, or also to those affecting emotions and will, was raised but not decided in a Calcutta case,<sup>3</sup> in which, however, it was held that, if insanity affects a person's emotions and will, it is difficult to say that it does not affect also his cognitive faculties. But the Court was "not prepared to accept the view as generally correct that a person is entitled to exemption from criminal liability under our law in cases in which it is only shown that he is subject to insane impulses, notwithstanding that it may appear clear that his cognitive faculties, so far as we can judge from his acts and words, are left unimpaired. To take such a view as this would be to go against the plain language of s. 84."<sup>4</sup> In this case it appeared that the accused Kader was a cultivator, and had his house and property destroyed by fire, since when he complained of pain in the head and spoke to himself: when the pain was particularly severe, he did not answer when spoken to; that on one occasion he was seen eating potsherds. He played and went about with children much more than was to be expected from a man of his age; and it was found that he was fond of a boy Abdul whom he subsequently murdered without any sane motive. But it appeared that the accused had observed some secrecy in committing the murder. He had tried to conceal the corpse, and he had hid himself in a jungle. On these facts the Court was called upon to determine his criminal responsibility. The Court found that the accused was suffering from mental derangement of some sort, but having regard to the circumstances attending the act, it was constrained to hold that the accused was not, on that account, "incapable of knowing the nature of his act."<sup>5</sup> Finally, however, though constrained to uphold the conviction, the Court recommended the case to the Local Government for mercy.

726. The same course was adopted in another case. The accused Lakshman was suffering from fever, and feeling annoyed with the cries of his two children, aged three years and one year, he took the younger child out of the cradle and cut her throat with a hatchet on the threshold of the inner room. The other child was at the door of the house. He seized her also, and cut her throat in a similar manner, and then went to bed, and fell asleep. The accused had shown no previous symptoms of insanity. He had had fever since five days prior to the day of murder and on that day he had high fever; and the Court had thus to consider the criminality of the accused in the light of this section. It was conceded that if the case had to be decided by medical tests, the accused would have had to be acquitted. But the question was whether that test was legitimately applicable. It was held that it was not, and the Court finally held that unless the act be shown to have been committed in a state of delirium, the accused must be found to be guilty. In other words,

(1) Subbigadu, (1925) 49 M. 1238. (Sanity at the trial immaterial).

(2) Kader Nasyar Shah, 23 C. 604.

(3) Kader Nasyar Shah, 23 C. 604.

(4) Ib.

(5) Ib.

the criminality of the accused was to be judged by the sole test of his consciousness of the nature of his act. As, however, there was no evidence of delirium, the Court confirmed the conviction, but commended him to the mercy of Government.<sup>1</sup>

727. The same view was taken in a parallel case disposed of by the High Court at Madras.<sup>2</sup> In that case one Venkatasami was prosecuted for the murder of a child, his brother's wife, probably, as the medical evidence showed, during the paroxysm of intermittent fever, evidently in the belief that he was surrounded by objects intending to harm him. In that belief he had previously killed a goat with a thrust, and seizing the sword which was handy, he stabbed the child, probably without knowing that he was killing a person whom he loved. It appeared in evidence that the accused had acted very strangely a short time before the murder. He had abused his parents, and had stabbed the goat. The rest was medical evidence which in the opinion of the Court did not amount to more than that there was the possibility of a sudden attack of homicidal mania. But the Court held that, judging by the judicial tests which it was bound to apply, it could not find that what the accused was doing was wrong within the meaning of this section.<sup>3</sup> But in another case one Dil Gazi had for no reason cut his wife's throat with a dao. It appeared that for about a month and a half previously to the deed the accused had ceased attending to his crops or his cattle, saying that the paddy would grow by itself; he chased and abused people, and said that he wanted to die as he thought people were going to loot his house; that he climbed up a tree saying his pillow was there, and that he cut himself on the arm with a dao; that from about the same time the accused had harboured a delusion that armed men would come to his house and take away his wife, and that he was under that delusion on the evening of the occurrence. It also appeared that after the murder, the accused made no attempt to escape or offer resistance or to conceal his act. On these facts the Court said: "In view of the uncertainty that always exists as to how far diseased state of mind extends, and in view of the difficulty, that is never absent from cases like this, of obtaining any trustworthy evidence, we find that the facts on record prove that the unsoundness of his mind prevented his knowing the nature of his act, and that it was wrong."<sup>4</sup> The difference between this case and those previously cited would appear to be the presence of symptoms of mental aberration from which the clouding of his cognitive faculties might well be inferred.

728. This difference in view marks the difference between the medical and legal standpoints from which insanity is viewed. (i) For while a Court of law commonly looks for "some clear and distinct proof of mental delusion or intellectual aberration existing previously to, or at the time of, the perpetration of the crime,"<sup>5</sup> a medical man recognizes that there may be delusion, springing up in the mind suddenly, and not revealed by the previous conduct or conversation of the accused<sup>6</sup> (ii) so the tests employed by the medical man to detect the insanity are different from those employed by the lawyer. He infers insanity from the absence of motive, of any attempt to escape, and of any accomplice. The fact that the person was conscious of the crime is immaterial. On the other hand, the legal test of the existence of insanity is "conduct". A lawyer means by madness "conduct of a certain character," while a physician means by it "a certain disease one of the effects of which is to produce such conduct."<sup>7</sup> The medical man says that an act without motive is the act of a madman. But motive is neither an important nor a recognized test of insanity.

(1) Lakshman Dagdu, 10 B. 512.

(2) Venkatasami, 12 M. 459; Muthuswami, 53 I. C. (M.) 828.

(3) Venkatasami, 12 M. 459, following Laxman, 10 B. 512; followed in Kader Nasyar, 23 C. 604; Dhani Bux, 9 S. L. R. 271,

32 I. C. 67.

(4) Dil Gazi, 34 C. 686; Mani Ram, 8 L. 114; Tola Ram, 102 I. C. (L.), 774.

(5) Burton, 3 F. & F. 772.

(6) Ib.

(7) Stephen's Cr. L. 87.

729. Partial Lunacy.—Partial lunacy would be judged by the same tests, viz., whether the accused was so bereft of reason as not to know the nature of his act.<sup>1</sup>

730. Irresponsibility must be at the time of Doing the Act.—In order to sustain the plea of irresponsibility it must be shown, not that the prisoner was insensible at some other time, though it is not immaterial, but that he was insensible so as to be irresponsible at the time of the commission of the crime. So Lord Justice Clerk Hope told the jury in one case: "A man must believe, not that the crime is wrong in the abstract (for most madmen do admit murder to be wrong and punishable in the abstract), but that the particular act, committed under the influence of the motive which seems to have prompted it, was not an offence against the law; one may know that in the abstract the act is punishable, and yet believe that his particular act is not in law a crime and not punishable."<sup>2</sup> The fact to be primarily determined is then the state of the prisoner's mind at the time of the doing of the act, and it is its "unsoundness" at the time that is an answer to his criminality. But how is the state of his mind at the time to be determined? Direct evidence may be forthcoming as to his overt acts, but it cannot speak of the state of his mind. It will therefore, have to be judged not only by his contemporaneous acts, words and conduct, but also his pre-disposition and his prior and subsequent acts and conduct. As the fact to be inquired is his mental power of cognition at the time, all facts tending to throw a light on it are relevant. The usual method adopted in such inquiry is (i) to place the accused under medical observation, (ii) to let in evidence as to the prisoner's antecedents, (iii) to observe and note his demeanour in Court, (iv) to see if his crime was supported by a motive, or (v) circumstances which postulate cognition, such as (vi) preparation, (vii) the choice of weapon, and the manner of using it, (viii) attempts at concealment, either before or at the time of the act, or afterwards, (ix) the circumstances attending the commission of the crime, such as the choice of time, place and opportunity, (x) the assistance of an accomplice, and (xi) the statements made immediately after the crime. These points require separate consideration.

731. Pleading and Proof of Insanity.—As has been already observed, the plea of insanity is an exception, and as such, it is a plea which must be taken and proved by the defence.<sup>3</sup> But this is scarcely a rule which the Courts will enforce in every case.<sup>4</sup> Indeed, its rigorous observance may in the very cases in which the defence is most helpless, lead to injustice. For prisoners in this country are, as a rule, undefended, and an insane prisoner is prima facie incompetent to plead his insanity. Indeed, the very plea, if taken, would establish his sanity. He is, therefore, naturally thrown on the mercy of the Court whose duty is then to afford him all possible assistance. The first thing, though perhaps not the most important thing, is to place a prisoner suspected of insanity under medical observation. But it must be remembered, that a medical witness cannot be expected to depose about the past condition of the prisoner's mind. That must be the subject of non-medical evidence. The medical evidence is given as of an expert,<sup>5</sup> and as such, it is subject to the reservations and limitations to which such evidence is usually subject. In this connection the Civil Medical Officer is the recognized expert in all cases involving any kind of medico-legal question. But medical officers trained to general duties are usually as learned, in the subject they are called upon to depose about, as any layman, and the present writer has met cases in his practice, in which the counsel employed in the case knew more about the special subject requiring expert

(1) Lord Ferrer's case, 19 St. Tr. 947; Arnold's case, 8 St. Tr. 317; 16 St. Tr. 764 (765); Bellingham's case, Collis. Add. 636; Oxford, 9 C. & P. 533; Oxford, 5 C. & P. 168; Oxford, 9 C. & P. 525; Hadfield's case, Collis, 480; Poochee, 3 W. R. 9; Southey (1865) 4 F. & F. 864; Leigh, (1866) 4 F. & F. 916.

(2) James Gibson, (1844) 4 Brown 232.

(3) S. 105, Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872); Ram Sunder Das, 50 I. C. (C.) 991; Manta Jali, 55 I. C. (C.) 477; Niaz Ali, (1904) A. W. N. 2; Chandra Lal, 21 A. L. J. 776; Irapa, (1898) B. U. C. 818; Bazlur Rahman, (1929) C. 1; Mani Ram, 8 L. 124; Bagga, (1931) L. 276.

(4) Tincourie, 27 C. W. N. 290.

(5) S. 45, Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872).

advice than the senior surgeon whose services were requisitioned for the purpose. So the Earl Shaftesbury said in the Windham case: "He did not know that medical gentlemen (he said it with all respect), unless they had made insanity their special study, were more qualified to judge of the soundness or unsoundness of mind than any person of common sense and practical knowledge of the world. Mere opinions and scientific speculations ought no longer to be adduced in the courts as testimony. Whatever evidence was given by a medical man should be facts, and judgments based on these facts." In cases of insanity the testimony, to be at all useful, is required of a specialist in mental diseases, and it may be doubted if the testimony of any other medical practitioner is relevant. However, assuming that such testimony is available, the points to which the attention of a medical witness should be directed are worthy of notice.

732. The lawyer's standpoint in judging of the criminality of an offender on the ground of insanity is different from that of the medical man, since the lawyer is merely concerned with asking himself the question whether the prisoner knew that what he was doing was wrong, whereas the medical man does not care what the prisoner thought, only so long as his act was the result of an uncontrollable impulse.<sup>1</sup> But, as regards the absence of secrecy and accomplice, both the lawyer and the medical man take the same view, since secrecy and co-operation of an accomplice are evidence of intelligence and not of lunacy. It has been held that a medical witness might give general scientific evidence on the causes and symptoms of insanity, but

Medical Witness. he must not express an opinion as to the result of the evidence he had heard with reference to the sanity or insanity of the prisoner.<sup>2</sup> The question, whether on given facts the prisoner should or should not be pronounced insane, is one of fact, which it is for the jury to decide and not for the medical witness to depose about.<sup>3</sup> The proper function of the medical witness is as an expert to give his opinion as to whether the facts proved furnish proof of the existence of delusion. He may be able to say in looking to the previous habits and mode of life whether there has been any change of habits or character indicative of insanity. The Judge may, for instance, place certain facts proved or assumed and ask the medical witness if, in his judgment, they were indicative of insanity on the part of the prisoner at the time of the alleged act.<sup>4</sup> A medical man may be questioned whether certain proved acts, appearances and conduct are in his opinion symptoms of insanity,<sup>5</sup> though he cannot be asked if the evidence given establish a case of insanity, for that is the very thing the Judge or the jury have to decide.<sup>6</sup> The expert may be asked as to the state of the prisoner's mind but not as to his responsibility, which is again a matter for the Judge or the jury to decide.<sup>7</sup> Where, for instance, a person is in a state of mind in which she is liable to fits of madness, it is for the jury to consider whether the act done was during such a fit, though there is nothing before or after the act to indicate it.<sup>8</sup> In examining medical experts it must not be forgotten that the physician and the jurist view insanity in relation to criminal responsibility from different standpoints (§§ 725-728). And the examination of a medical witness must, therefore, be directed to elucidating points relevant from the standpoint of the jurist. In other words, as the jurist is concerned with only one aspect of insanity—the insanity of the mind—the only questions relevant would be those calculated to prove or disprove that form of insanity. Other questions are however not necessarily irrelevant, for, as has been seen, there may be cases in which the insanity of other faculties, emotions and the will, re-acts upon the mind and produces what may be called intellectual insanity.

733. Questions to Medical Witness.—The following therefore, appear to be the appropriate questions that may be put to a medical witness in cases of suspected insanity:—

(1) Burton, 3 F & F. 732.
 (2) Doe v. Bainbridge, 4 Cox. C. C. 454.
 (3) Wright, R. & R. 456; Searle, 1 M. & Rob. 75; Bainbridge v. Bainbridge, 4 Cox. C. C. 454.

(4) Frances, 4 Cox C. C. 56.
 (5) John Wright, R. & R. 456.
 (6) Searle, 1 M. & R. 75.
 (7) Richards, 1 F. & F. 87.
 (8) Richards, 1 F. & F. 87.

1. Have you examined. . . . ?
2. Have you done so on several different occasions, so as to preclude the possibility of your examinations having been made during lucid intervals of insanity ?
3. Do you consider him to be capable of managing himself and his personal affairs ?
4. Do you consider him to be of "unsound mind," in other words, intellectually insane ?
5. If so, do you consider his mental disorder to be complete or partial ?
6. Do you think he understands the obligation of an oath ?
7. Do you consider him, in his present condition, competent to give evidence in a Court of law ?
8. Do you consider that he is capable of pleading to the offence of which he now stands accused ?
9. Do you happen to know how he was treated by his friends (whether as a lunatic, an imbecile, or otherwise) prior to the present investigation and the occurrences that have led to it ?
10. What, as far as you can ascertain, were the general characteristics of his previous disposition ?
11. Does he appear to have had any previous attacks of insanity ?
12. Is he subject to insane delusions ?
13. If so, what is the general character of these ? Are they harmless or dangerous ? How do they manifest themselves ?
14. Might such delusion or delusions have led to the criminal act of which he is accused ?
15. Can you discover the cause of his reason having become affected ? In your opinion was it congenital or accidental ?

16. If the latter, does it appear to have come on suddenly or by slow degrees ?

17. Have you any reason for believing that his insanity is of hereditary origin ? If so, please specify the grounds for such an opinion, and all the particulars bearing on it, as to the insane parents or relatives of the accused ; the exciting cause of his attack ; his age when it set in ; and the type which it assumed.

18. Have you any reason to suspect that he is, in any degree, feigning insanity ? If so, what are the grounds for this belief ?

19. Is it possible, in your opinion, that his insanity may have followed the actual commission of his offence, or been caused by it ?

20. Have you any reason to suppose that the offence could have been committed during a lucid interval, during which he could be held responsible for his act ? If so, what appears to have been the duration of such lucid interval ? Or on the contrary, do you believe his condition to have been such as altogether to absolve him from legal responsibility ?

21. Does he now display any signs of homicidal or of suicidal mania or has he ever done so to your knowledge ?

22. Do you consider it absolutely necessary, from his present condition, that he should be confined in a Lunatic Asylum ? or again—

23. Do you think that judicious and unremitting supervision out of an asylum might be sufficient to prevent him from endangering his own life, or the lives or property of others ?

734. Test to Feigned Insanity.—The defence of insanity raises the question of feigned insanity, a subject in which the co-operation of a specialist has to be necessarily requisitioned. Indeed it is only after prolonged and critical observation made when the prisoner feels that he is unobserved, that even a specialist can definitely say whether the insanity pleaded is natural or feigned. The principal points to consider when feigning is suspected would appear to be the following :—

1. When did the prisoner first exhibit signs of insanity ? Before or after the commission of the crime ? It is a fact taught by human experience that insanity is usually pretended after the commission of the crime, and that where the prisoner is shown to have done so, it may be regarded as a badge of fraud, though it is by no means conclusive, for cases have occurred when the first symptom was only noticed after the commission of the crime. And indeed, cases are on record when the intellectual aberration was sudden, but in such case it was almost invariably preceded by some great moral shock or other very obvious cause. But, as a rule, dementia comes on slowly, and is obviously dependent on organic changes, such as old age, apoplexy, paralysis or hemiplegia, or it is a consequence of recurrent mania or monomania. As this form of insanity consists in an entire abolition of all mental power the discovery of any connected ideas, reasoning or reflection, either by language, writing or gestures, would at once show that the case was not one of real dementia.<sup>1</sup>

2. A person feigning admits his insanity, but a person really insane will never admit it, but will, on the contrary, endeavour to establish his sanity. "It may be safely held that a person feigning insanity will rarely, if ever, try to prove himself to be sane ; for he runs the great risk of satisfying others that he is sane, a conclusion which he rarely desires to avoid. But there is no better proof in general, that the insanity (supposing other evidence of it to be strong) is real, than keen and eager attempts by the accused to prove that he is sane, and strong and indignant remonstrances against being held to be insane, although they would protect him against trial and punishment."<sup>2</sup>

3. Insane persons sleep but little, and the sleep is disturbed. An impostor sleeps as soundly as a healthy person.

4. An impostor acts his part only when he thinks he is observed. He takes rest when he thinks he is by himself. A madman's impulses are spasmodic and continue by day and night. An impostor may therefore be detected by watching him unawares.

(1) 2 Taylor's Med. Juris., p. 509.

(2) 2 Taylor's Med. Juris., p. 508.

5. The external appearance of a pseudo-lunatic is in contrast with that of a maniacal patient. There is about the eyes in mania a restlessness which cannot fail to attract attention. Especially is this noticeable when the conversation is turned on matters affecting the prisoner. A person simulating insanity will at once show by his countenance and especially by the movement of his eyes that there is an intelligent understanding of the conversation affecting him.

6. Insanity may also be detected from handwriting. As there is no memory in dementia, it commonly happens that the same words are written over and over again. "No person in a state of confirmed dementia can write a connected sentence, because before the last part of the sentence is completed, the first is forgotten. In imbecility we may meet with every variety of mental defect, but the state of the mind is generally indicated by the expression of the thoughts in writing."<sup>1</sup> It is said that this often serves to detect the existence of a delusion when other means fail. But inasmuch as persons otherwise insane have been known to compose coherent writing, and since all but the most raving lunatic have lucid intervals, this test is one which is not of itself conclusive.<sup>2</sup>

7. Eccentricity and unusual habits may be genuine or assumed. But mere weakness of character, mere liability to impulse, good or bad, mere imprudence, recklessness, and eccentricity, to which might be added immorality, do not constitute unsoundness of mind, unless in looking fairly at the whole evidence, there was a good reason to refer them to a morbid condition of the intellect. They may furnish evidence of unsoundness, but they do not constitute it.

735. Other Evidence of Insanity.—Besides medical evidence, other evidence is also admissible in proof of insanity. Such evidence may consist of facts tending to show that the act of the accused was without motive, and perpetrated under conditions and circumstances which any sane man would have guarded against. The conduct of the accused before the commission of the alleged crime is, as has been before observed, always highly relevant, for it shows not only that the accused was probably not feigning insanity, but that the act complained of must have been unintentional, because the prisoner had been bereft of reason even before the commission of the act. As regards motive, it should be observed that in the view of criminal law the mere absence of motive is never sufficient to exculpate a crime (§ 215), but where insanity is concerned, the want of motive is regarded as some proof of the want of intention, and when that fact is corroborated by evidence of an independent character of the previous insanity of the prisoner, the Court would be justified in acquitting him. So where the prisoner murdered his wife and mother, at the same time wounding his child, and it appeared that he had had previous attacks of insanity and the act complained of was without any motive, the Court felt constrained to acquit him in spite of the dubious testimony of the medical officer.<sup>3</sup>

736. The evidence that the prisoner had prior to the act exhibited symptoms of insanity is relevant, though he may be perfectly sane at the time of the trial, for the question to be considered is the state of the prisoner's mind at the time of the act,<sup>4</sup> not his state of mind at the time of the trial, though the latter fact is also relevant for the purpose of procedure.<sup>5</sup> The mere facts that the conduct of the accused had been of late in some respects unusual, and that his father was insane were in one case held to be insufficient to establish the exception,<sup>6</sup> and these facts by themselves would be insufficient to establish it in any case. But though insufficient, they are not irrelevant, and indeed, in an inquiry touching the prisoner's mind at the time of the act, there can be nothing irrelevant that relates to his physical and mental history. For this purpose, evidence as to insanity in his parents and blood relations is relevant as not affording independent proof of his insanity, but as corroborative of other testimony as to the insanity of the accused. In other words, evidence of ancestral insanity is corroborative of the evidence of the prisoner's insanity. It has been before observed that the plea of insanity is one which must be raised and proved by the accused. The evidence given should be not only unequivocal but clear and distinct.<sup>7</sup>

(1) 2 Taylor's Med. Juris., pp. 538, 539.

(2) Ib., p. 540.

(3) Sheikh Mustaffa, 1 W. R. 19.

(4) Pursoram Doss, 7 W. R. 42; Jugo Mohan, 24 W. R. 5.

(5) Ss. 464, 465, Cr. P. C.

(6) Jeeva Amtha, B. U. J. 10; Arzao Bebee, 2 W. R. 33.

(7) Stokes, 3. C. & K. 185.

737. When the absence of any motive, preparation or purpose for a criminal act is admitted or evidence of some mental derangement such as melancholy or excitement, or of very extraordinary conduct has been given, or other index of disease of the brain appears in the case, the Court ought to use the means pointed out in the various provisions of law, so as to find out as much as possible about the mental state of the accused.<sup>1</sup> The Court may for the purpose of the trial presume insanity from the appearance of the accused.<sup>2</sup> But the Court must have legal evidence on record before it can take the plea into consideration as an answer to the charge. It is not because a man commits a very horrible murder, or because he commits it while labouring under strong passions and feelings, that therefore the world is to assume that he must have been insane when he committed the deed. Where, for instance, it appeared that the accused had, in a sudden fit of jealousy, exhibited intense rage and grief, rolling on the ground in his passion, his eyes being red or blood-shot and his skin being hot, and he struck down his wife calling aloud that he had killed her and then voluntarily gave himself up to a Chowkidar that he might be dealt with according to the law for what he had done, upon which the Court observed; "It may be that, if there had been substantial evidence of the prisoner's unsoundness of mind, these facts, or some of them, might have been deemed to be corroborative of it. But in themselves these facts, whether taken singly or together, are no real evidence of unsoundness of mind, for there is not one of them which might not, in the natural course of events, have been found to exist in the case of a man who was perfectly sane, but was labouring under the influence of great grief and passion."<sup>3</sup>

738. The law presumes every person at the age of discretion to be sane unless the contrary is proved; so if a lunatic had lucid intervals, the law presumes the offence of such person to have been committed in a lucid interval, unless it appears to have been committed during derangement.<sup>4</sup> The accused has, therefore, to prove not only that he was a lunatic, but that his act was committed during lunacy and not in a lucid interval. Where partial delusion or the existence of mental disease is established, it may not be sufficient to exempt a person from criminal responsibility, though mental weakness caused by disease is an extenuating circumstance affecting the sentence. And so while a mental derangement a year prior to the act was in itself insufficient to exonerate the prisoner, still it was a fact calling for further scrutiny.<sup>5</sup> In order to offer a complete answer, the evidence must prove an alienation of reason perverting the moral sense.<sup>6</sup>

85. Nothing is an offence which is done by a person who, at the time of doing it, is, by reason of intoxication, incapable of knowing the nature of the act, or that he is doing what is either wrong, or contrary to law : provided that the thing which intoxicated him was administered to him without his knowledge or against his will.

Act of a person incapable of judgment by reason of intoxication caused against his will.

739. Analogous Law.—In laying down that drunkenness excuses a crime, the section provides that the drink must have been administered to him without his knowledge or against his will. This is in accordance with the English Law, under which it is settled that if the drunkenness be voluntary, it cannot excuse a man from the commission of any crime,<sup>7</sup> but it is, on the other hand, an aggravation of the crime. "As to artificial voluntarily contracted madness by drunkenness or intoxication, which, depriving men of their reason, puts them in a temporary frenzy, our law looks upon this as an aggravation of the offence rather than as an excuse for any criminal misbehaviour."<sup>8</sup> A drunkard, says Sir Eward Coke, who

(1) Nepal, (1886) B. U. J. 229; Nga Po Tho Banerjee, 20 W. R. 70.

(1896) P. J. L. B. 249.

(5) Arzao Bebee, 2 W. R. 33.

(2) Ss. 464, 465, Cr. P. C.

(6) Nobin Chunder Banerjee, 13 B. L. R. 20.

(3) Nobin Chunder Banerjee, 20 W. R. 70.

(7) Co. Litt., 247; 1 Hale P. C. 32; Hawk.

(4) Babe, (1881) B. U. J. 172; Irapa (1898)

P. C. c. 1, s. 6.

B. U. J. 818; Sheodin, (1901) A. W. N. 132;

(8) Co. Litt., 247; Plowd, 19; 4 Black, 26,

Niazali, (1904) A. W. N. 2; Nabinchandra

is voluntarius dæmon, has no privilege thereby, but what hurt or ill soever he doth, his drunkenness does aggravate it : nam omne crimen ebrietas et incendit, et detegit. It has been observed that the real use of strong liquors and the abuse of them by drinking to excess, depend much upon the temperature of the climate in which we live. The same indulgence, which may be necessary to make the blood move in Norway, would make an Italian mad. A German, therefore, says the President Montesquieu,<sup>1</sup> drinks through custom, founded upon constitutional necessity ; a Spaniard drinks through choice, or out of the mere wantonness of luxury ; and drunkenness, he adds, ought to be more severely punished, where it makes men mischievous and mad, as in Spain and Italy, than where it only renders them stupid and heavy, as in Germany and in more northern countries. And accordingly, in the warmer climate of Greece, a law of Pittacus enacted, that he who committed a crime, when drunk, should receive a double punishment," one for the crime itself and the other for the ebriety which prompted him to commit it.<sup>2</sup> The Roman Law, indeed, made great allowances for the vice : Per vinum delapsis capitalis pœna remittitur.<sup>3</sup> " But the law of England, considering how easy it is to counterfeit this excuse, and how weak an excuse it is, though real, will not suffer any man thus to privilege one crime by another."<sup>4</sup>

740. Principle.—Since criminal intention is the foundation of all criminal responsibility, it follows that a person drunk is in the same predicament as a person temporarily insane. Indeed, such state has been termed dementia affectata—a form of lunacy in which the functions of the mind are temporarily suspended. But since no man can be permitted to wear the cloak of immunity by getting drunk, the rule justly excepts cases of voluntary drunkenness. But while such drunkenness is never an answer to a crime, it is relevant in determining the question of intention and for that purpose it is permissible to prove in defence that the prisoner was suffering from a habitual and fixed frenzy brought on by drunkenness.<sup>5</sup>

741. Meaning of Words.—" Who at the time of doing it": The state of the prisoner's mind to be inquired about is at the time of the act, for it is only the mind, as influencing his act that is relevant. " Incapable of knowing the nature of the act, etc."; These words are the same as occur in s. 84. " The thing which intoxicated him," i.e., the intoxicant, such as, alcohol, opium or the laughing gas. " Without this knowledge," not necessarily without his consent. For a person may have been imposed upon, in which case he may have consented to taking the intoxicant. " Or against his will": This means by force.

742. Operation of Drunkenness.—In all ages and in all countries, voluntary drunkenness is regarded as offering no answer to a charge of criminality. Indeed, in some countries drunkenness is regarded as by itself a crime, so that the wrongful intent to get drunk coalesces in law with the intent of the act done when drunk.<sup>6</sup> But the true position of the law seems to be to ignore the fact of drunkenness altogether. It says to the offender : We do not care whether you were drunk or not ; if you were so, it was your own act; you cannot plead your own fault; we pay no regard to the fact.<sup>7</sup> Drunkenness is, therefore, neither an aggravation<sup>8</sup> nor a palliation of the crime.<sup>9</sup> It is immaterial that the drunkenness had deprived a person of his self-restraint. It was a state which he could have foreseen, and it was at any rate the consequence of his voluntary act.<sup>10</sup> Drunkenness is then never an excuse, but when drunkenness becomes a disease, it is then a defence, not because it is drunkenness, but because it is a disease.<sup>11</sup> But in order to relieve a person from criminal responsibility, it must produce a disease of the mind such as delirium tremens.<sup>12</sup> So Lord Hale said : " Although simple frenzy occasioned immediately

(1) Sp. L. b. 14, c. 10.

(2) Puffendorf's Laws of Nature, b. 8, c. 3.

(3) Ff. 49, 16, 6.

(4) Plow. 19; cited per 4 Black, pp. 25, 26.

(5) 1 Hale P. C. 32.

(6) Bishop's Criminal Law, 482.

(7) Collet's Comments, p. 16.

(8) Zoolfkar Khan, 16 W. R. 36.

(9) Ram Sahoy Bhar, (1864) W. R. 24.

(10) Bodhee Khan, 5 W. R. 79; Bheleka Aham, 29 C. 493.

(11) Bheleka Aham, 29 C. 493.

(12) Davis, 14 Cox C. C. 563.

by drunkenness is no excuse, yet if by one or more such practices an habitual or fixed frenzy be caused, though this madness was contracted by the vice and will of the party, yet this habitual and fixed frenzy thereby caused, puts the man into the same condition in relation to crimes, as if the same were contracted involuntarily at first."<sup>1</sup> So Savage says: "A person, say, is given powerful stimulants masked or concealed in some way, or being weak, or suffering from an old injury to the head, an amount which formerly would not have affected him, now produces a great effect; in a state of acute alcoholism he commits a crime, and doubtless would be considered not guilty; but if he has experienced several times the danger which he incurs by taking stimulants even in small quantities, and yet continues to indulge, and then perpetrates a crime, he may justly be considered responsible, even though it may be proved that by inheritance, or in consequence of the injury to the head, he is especially liable to be affected by stimulants. Next, if in consequence of intemperance he becomes slowly affected by mental disorder, and in a state of delirium tremens he commits a crime, he will probably not be considered fully responsible. If instead of delirium tremens alcohol produces chronic insanity or general paralysis of the insane, and in this condition of genuine insanity he does harm, he will not be considered responsible for his acts."<sup>2</sup>

743. It has been stated in the last article (§ 742) that insanity producing delusion leads to crime, in which the plea of insanity is sufficient. Such insanity may arise from drunkenness or any other cause. But a delusion arising from drunkenness short of insanity is never a defence to a crime in this country, though it appears to be otherwise in England.

744. For as Stephens, J., remarked: "Any disease, which so disturbs the mind that you cannot think calmly and rationally of all the different reasons to which we refer in considering the rightness or wrongness of an action, may fairly be said to prevent a man from knowing that what he did was wrong."<sup>3</sup>

745. Drunkenness when a Defence.—But while voluntary drunkenness is, as such, never a defence, still when habitual drunkenness produces frenzy, that fact becomes material for the purpose of showing how it was produced, and when its existence is established, it will excuse a crime, even though it was caused by voluntary drunkenness.<sup>4</sup> Drunkenness is also relevant in considering intention. As Jervis, C. J. said: "If the prisoner was so drunk as not to know what she was about, how can you say that she intended to destroy herself."<sup>5</sup> So Coleridge, J., in one case told the jury that "drunkenness is ordinarily neither a defence nor excuse for crime, and where it is available as a partial answer to a charge, it rests on the prisoner to prove it, and it is not enough that he was excited or rendered more irritable, unless the intoxication was such as to prevent his restraining himself from committing the act in question, or to take away from him the power of forming any specific intention."<sup>6</sup> So in the case of attempted murder, Paterson, J., told the jury that "although drunkenness is no excuse for any crime whatever, yet it is often of very great importance in cases where it is a question of intention. A person may be so drunk as to be utterly unable to form any intention at all, and yet he may be guilty of very great violence."<sup>7</sup> So Baron Alderson said: "If a man chooses to get drunk, it is his own voluntary act: it is very different from a madness which is not caused by any act of the person. That voluntary species of madness, which it is in a party's power to abstain from, he must answer for. However with regard to intention, drunkenness may perhaps be adverted to according to the nature of the instrument used. If a man uses a stick, you would not infer a malicious intent so strongly against him, if drunk, when he made an intemperate use of it, as you would, if he had used a different kind of weapon; but where a dangerous instrument is used, which, if used, must produce grievous bodily harm, drunkenness

(1) 1 Hale P. C. 32.

(2) "Insanity," p. 465.

(3) Davis, 14 Cox. C. C. 564. see §§ 714-715.

(4) 1 Hale P. C. 32.

(5) Moore, 3 C. & K. 319; To the same effect, Stephen, J., in Doherty, 16 Cox. C. C. 306 (308), quoted in 1 Penal Law (4th Edn.) § 804, p. 557.

(6) Monkhouse, 4 Cox. C. C. 55.

(7) Cruse, 8 C. & P. 541.

can have no effect on the consideration of the malicious intention of the party."<sup>1</sup>

Excuses Intention but Not Knowledge. 746. Now as regards the section it will be noticed that while it recognizes the distinction between "intent" and "knowledge" which are the constituents of most offences under the Code, it lays down no more than that a voluntary drunkenness is no excuse for not possessing the knowledge of an act, but it says nothing of the intention. Consequently, where an offence requires that an act shall be done with a particular intention, voluntary drunkenness is an excuse, though it is no excuse where the degree of mentality necessary for the completion of an offence is limited by "knowledge" as distinguished from an "intention."<sup>2</sup> Moreover since voluntary drunkenness merely creates the presumption of knowledge, such knowledge would not lead to further presumption of intention, since where intention is presumed from knowledge, it is presumed from actual knowledge and not when knowledge is merely a legal fiction.<sup>3</sup>

747. The net result of drunkenness as affecting mental responsibility as regards crime may then be thus stated :—

- (1) Drunkenness caused without one's knowledge or against one's will excuses the crime (s. 85).
- (2) Voluntary drunkenness is an excuse only as regards "intention," so that it is a complete excuse in crimes requiring the presence of an "intention" to complete a crime.<sup>4</sup>
- (3) But voluntary drunkenness is no excuse for a crime which requires the presence merely of "knowledge" as distinct from an "intention."
- (4) In any case though a voluntary drunkenness is no excuse for knowledge it does not imply actual knowledge giving rise to the inference of presumed intention.

How Far Excuses Intention. 748. Now since an intention is always a material element in the composition of a crime, the effect of this view would seem to be that though voluntary drunkenness is not a self-sufficient defence, it is yet an element which the Court cannot ignore in judging of the culpability of an act. This was the view taken by Sir Henry James to whom the conflicting views of the Judges had been referred to for opinion. After expressing his inability to quote any general or definite rules on the subject of the extent to which drunkenness can excuse crime, or ought to increase or mitigate punishment, he summarises his own views to the effect that in determining the legal character of the offence committed, drunkenness may be taken into account—

- (i) Where it has established a condition of positive and well-defined insanity.
- (ii) If it produces a sudden outbreak of passion, occasioning the commission of crime under circumstances, which, in the case of a sober person, would reduce the offence of murder to manslaughter.
- (iii) In the case of minor assaults and acts of violence it never can form any legal answer to the charges preferred, but it may either aggravate or mitigate the character of the act committed—probably aggravate it.

(1) Meakin, 7 C. & P. 297, followed in Waryam Singh, 7 L. 141 (147); Patrick Carrol, (1835) 7 C. & P. 145, but contra in John Thomas, 7 C. & P. 817; Pearson, 2 Lewin 144.

(2) J. M., (1910) U. B. R. 17, 8 I. C. 469; Nga Ba, (1911) 1 U. B. R. 105; Nga Tun Bau, 5 Bur. L. T. 175, 17 I. C. 300, P. C.; Tu, 4 L. B. R. 306; Nga Hla Agun, 12 I. C. (Bur.) 85; Rex v. Meade, (1909) 1 K. B. 895; Director v. Beard, (1920) A. C. 479 (499) followed in Jugadi Mallah, 8 Pat. 911; Mandaru Gadaba, 38 M. 479; Devasikamani, (1928) M. 196, Bishan Singh, (1929) L. 637. This distinction in the language of the section appears to have been overlooked in Waris Ali, 7 N. L. R. 180, 13 I. C. 919; Karim Khan, (1909) P. W. R. 4, 1 I. C. 100.

(3) Abdul Karim, S. J. L. B. 650; Nga Ba Gyan, (1911) 1 U. B. R. 105; Mandaru Gadaba, 38 M. 479.

(4) Director v. Beard, (1920) A. C. 479 (499-502), followed in Sheru (1926) L. 232; Muthu Goundan, 1931 M. W. N. 113.

(iv) As to the effect that should be given to drunkenness when determining the amount of punishment to be inflicted, no general rule can be laid down. Its existence may be considered, and may tend either in the direction of increasing or diminishing the punishment.<sup>1</sup> That some such discriminating view should prevail in the enlightened criminal jurisprudence of all countries appears to be incontestable. Suppose, for instance, a man has in his pocket some base coins which he keeps for amusement. He gets drunk and instead of paying out in current coin he puts his hand in the wrong pocket and pays in a coin which is counterfeit. Can it be said that such a man stands on the same footing as another who passes a counterfeit coin knowingly and intentionally, and yet if the section be closely construed, that would appear to be the consequence.<sup>2</sup>

749. So far then as regards voluntary drunkenness. Turning now to involuntary drunkenness, two questions arise : (i) when may drunkenness be said to be involuntary ? and (ii) what is its effect upon crime ? The first question seems simple, and has been disposed of by the section with the words “ that the thing which intoxicated him was administered to him without his knowledge or against his will.” This description would cover the case of a man made drunk through stratagem or the fraud of another, or through ignorance or coercion practised by his friend or foe, as if a person be drugged by his enemies or given to eat or drink such a thing as causes frenzy, or his unskilful physician give him to drink, in all of which cases the person intoxicated may be said not to have been a free agent, and, therefore, not responsible for the consequences of his act.<sup>3</sup> Whether drunkenness in a given case was voluntary or involuntary is a question of fact to be decided upon the proved facts of each case. In some cases drunkenness may have been partly voluntary and partly involuntary, as where a person once drunk is given more to drink when he has either lost the power of resistance or under circumstances which precludes his knowledge of it. What is his criminal responsibility in that case ? It is submitted that in so far as his helplessness was brought on by his involuntary act he could not be held responsible for his act.

86. In cases where an act done is not an offence unless done with a particular knowledge or intent, a person who does the act in a state of intoxication shall be liable to be dealt with as if he had the same knowledge as he would have had if he had not been intoxicated, unless the thing which intoxicated him was administered to him without his knowledge or against his will.

Offence requiring a particular intent or knowledge committed by one who is intoxicated.

750. Analogous Law.—This section would at first blush, appear to have been enacted in antagonism to the prevailing doctrine of the English Law. But that does not appear to be really the case. It gives the drunken man the knowledge of the sober man when judging of his action but does not give him the same intention. Consequently, it does not render him liable to be dealt with as if he had the same intent. The omission to make any express provision in this section as to the intention of a drunken man is not accidental, but appears to have been dictated by the sense that it would have carried the legal fiction too far. Where, therefore, intention is a constituent of an offence, the question must be dealt with on the general principles of law, which are the same both here and in England. The drunkenness may be and should be taken into consideration on the question of intention<sup>4</sup> (§ 751).

751. Principle.—Voluntary drunkenness does not afford a defence that the knowledge required to complete an offence was wanting, though it may be used to show that any “ intent ” if required was absent. The section, it will be seen, draws a distinction between the presumption as to knowledge and presumption as

(1) “ Times,” 4th Jan. 1892.

(2) See, however, s. 86 and Comm.

(3) 1 Hale P. C. 32.

(4) Director v. Beard, (1920) A. C. 479

(501-502) ; Nga Tun Bau, 5 Bur. L. T. 175, 17 I. C. 800 ; Tincouri, 27 C. W. N. 290, (1923) C. 460 ; Mandru, 38 M. 479.

to intention, and though, ordinarily, intention is to be inferred from knowledge, still it is not to be inferred when the knowledge is merely a legal fiction.<sup>1</sup>

752. Meaning of Words.—“With a particular knowledge or intent” : The two words “knowledge” and “intent” are not necessarily synonymous here. “Shall be liable to be dealt with,” which probably means the same thing as “shall be dealt with.” “As if he had the same knowledge,” but not necessarily the same intent.<sup>2</sup> The last word has been advisedly omitted.

753. Presumption of Knowledge Not Resulted by Drunkenness.—A large number of offences in the Code expressly require that in order to complete a particular crime, an act should have been done with a particular “knowledge” or “intention.” Thus, for instance, murder is defined to be only culpable homicide “if the act by which the death is caused is done with the intention of causing death.”<sup>3</sup> Where, however, death is caused by an act with the knowledge of causing death it is usually only culpable homicide.<sup>4</sup> The words “knowledge” and “intention” do not, therefore, imply the presence of the same ingredient. According to the rule here enunciated, it is permissible to rebut a charge of murder by reference to drunkenness, but it would not be permissible to rebut a charge of culpable homicide on the same ground, for the section declares that in spite of drunkenness the same knowledge shall be presumed. But the rule has not been construed so strictly, for it has been held that though voluntary drunkenness cannot excuse the commission of an offence, yet when the question is whether the act was premeditated, or done only from sudden heat and impulse, the fact of the party being intoxicated could not be overlooked.<sup>5</sup> This is also the accepted view in England,<sup>6</sup> and it is commendable to reason. A went into B’s house having a dah in one hand and called out to him to give him money, threatening to cut up B and his wife. He kicked at the doors and slashed them, but when the doors gave way he fell down. Meanwhile B and his wife had fled out of their house. A was charged with attempted robbery armed with a deadly weapon. It was found that A had been drinking toddy before the commission of the offence. It was held that his drunkenness did not prevent the accused from forming in his mind the dishonest intention necessary for extortion, though it was doubtful whether his ebriety would have enabled him to rob B.<sup>7</sup> In another case the accused who was a confirmed ganja smoker was convicted of the murder of a boy for which there was no motive. The accused did not plead insanity under s. 84 but nevertheless the Court held his case to fall under this section and exempted him from the extreme penalty of the law.<sup>8</sup>

87. Nothing which is not intended to cause death or grievous hurt, and which is not known by the doer to be likely to cause death, or grievous hurt, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, to any person, above eighteen years of age, who has given consent, whether express or implied, to suffer that harm; or by reason of any harm which it may be known by the doer to be likely to cause to any such person who has consented to take the risk of that harm.

Illustration

A and Z agree to fence with each other for amusement. This agreement implies the consent of each to suffer any harm which, in the course of such fencing, may be caused without foul play; and if A, while playing fairly, hurts Z. A commits no offence.

(1) Director v. Beard, (1920) C. 479 (500-502); Abdul Karim, (1892) S. J. L. B. 650; Waryam Singh, 7 L. 141.

(2) Nga Sein Gale, 12 R. 445.

(3) S. 302.

(4) S. 299.

(5) Boodh Das, (1866) P. R. 41; Ram Sahoy Bhur, (1864) W. R. 24; Mandru (Re), 38 M. 479; Nyo Hla Aung, 4 Bur. L. J. 221, 12 I. C. 85; Sheru, (1926) L. 232.

(6) Doherty, 16 Cox C. C. 306; Cruse, 8 C. & P. 541 (546); Monkhouse, 5 Cox. C. C. 557; Moore, 3 C & K. 319; Gambu, 1 F. & F. 90; Nga Tun Bau, 5 Bur. L. T. 175, 17 I. C. 800.

(7) Nga Tun Bau, 5 Bur. L. T. 175, 17 I. C. 800.

(8) Tincourie, (1923) C. 460; Jaimal Singh, (1933) L. 294.

754. Operation of Consent on Criminality.—Under the law of the Romans, who had borrowed their ethics from the Greeks, consent was a complete answer to any charge including even murder. This remained the law till the advent of Christianity which taught the sanctity of human life, the doctrine of which was echoed by the Prophet of Islam. Christianity in its turn, had borrowed the tradition from the Jews who regarded suicide as a crime and committed his body to an unhallowed grave. In England, the denial of the right of Christian burial to a suicide has been abrogated by Statute,<sup>1</sup> though such person is buried with an abbreviated service not touched by the Statute. This section adopts the view of the Law Commissioners who instanced the case of a surgeon who had to perform an operation involving the risk of life, but with an even chance of the patient's recovery, or of one who fired at a wild beast attacking a man whom he intended to save, though there was a danger of his killing him by the shot. There were also cases of sport, e.g., boxing and duelling in which both parties consent to suffer harm; but since duelling involves the risk to life it is excepted, otherwise this section and the next two formulate a rule in accordance with the modern notion of life.

755. Apart from this and the two ensuing sections, several Acts, e.g., the Factory Act and the Workmen's Compensation Act have further limited the operation of consent as an exoneration of the employer from his civil liability for compensating the workmen, even though they might have agreed to take the risk. Where such risk does not involve obvious peril to life or suffering of grievous hurt, it would be a good defence to the employer's criminal liability under the Code, though it would not exempt him from civil liability.

756. Principle.—As already stated (§ 754), the common and the canonical law both recognize consent as a good defence to the causing of injury. They both assume that everyone is the best Judge of his own interest, and therefore, it presumes that no one can consent to that which is hurtful to that interest. The doctrine so far is simple and perfectly intelligible, and it is, indeed, the outcome of that natural liberty to which every man is entitled, and the curtailment of which, to be justifiable, must proceed from manifest public policy or obvious necessity. The restrictions made in this and the following sections are dictated by these considerations for, beyond a certain stage, they regard personal injuries from a different ethical standpoint, and it is, therefore, that, while on the one hand, law will not suffer a person to consent to their infliction, nor on the other hand, when inflicted, is the party aggrieved permitted to compound them with the felon.

757. Meaning of Words.—“Not intended to cause death or known to be likely to cause death” : These words have been used to define murder<sup>2</sup> and culpable homicide,<sup>3</sup> hurt<sup>4</sup> and grievous hurt.<sup>5</sup> “By reason of any harm which it may cause” : Such harm may result even in death, but it should not have been intended or known to be likely. Any hurt short of grievous hurt may have been intentionally caused. “Above eighteen years of age” : That being the age of majority, is also necessarily fixed here as the age of consent fixed in this country.<sup>6</sup> “Who has given consent” “Consent” is nowhere defined in the Code, though it has been defined in the Indian Contract Act<sup>7</sup> as follows: “Two or more persons are said to consent when they agree upon the same thing in the same sense”; it is negatively described in s. 90. Consent is the manifestation of the will in concurrence of an act. It implies the use of judgments, free will and physical action. “Express or implied” : Acquiescence is implied consent. It may be inferred from act, as well as conduct. If A challenges B to a boxing match, and B accepts the challenge, both A and B impliedly consent to the infliction and sufferance of mutual injuries though the infliction of such injuries may not have been made the subject of an express covenant. Such is the case contemplated in the illustration.

(1) (1882) 45 & 46 Vict., c. 19, s. 2.

(2) S. 300.

(3) S. 299.

(4) S. 321.

(5) S. 322.

(6) S. 3, Indian Majority Act (Act IX of 1875).

(7) S. 13, Act IX of 1872.

758. Consent as a Defence to Criminality.—Consent, as already seen, has the effect of exonerating or extenuating a criminal act in the following cases :—

- (a) Harm short of grievous hurt may be caused by consent in any case ;
- (b) Even harm resulting in death may be caused, if it was not so intended, but was intended for his benefit ; and in such case, even consent (s. 92) is unnecessary where it is not possible.

759. But these sections evidently refer only to the operation of consent on personal injuries. They have no reference to offences relating to property, and sexual relations. But consent plays an equally important part in these cases, and the present discussion will not be complete without reference to them. It may then be generally stated that, in addition to the two cases above set out, there are other cases in which consent is either a material element in the composition of the crime, or where it has the effect of neutralizing it. Theft and rape may be given as examples of the former, and adultery of the latter. There are other offences, such as wrongful confinement, in which consent is an essential ingredient. Consent, moreover, plays a conspicuous part not only in determining the nature of the offence, but also in justification of an act otherwise criminal. It is a ground of mitigation even in the case of homicide. And as consent may be either express or implied, the subject assumes a degree of complexity into which it is useful to enquire.

760. In the first place, therefore, what is consent? It is undoubtedly the concurrence of wills. But besides concurrence of wills,

Consent Defined. its chief essential constituent is consciousness or knowledge of the act consented to. So on a charge of indecent assault on a boy of eight years, the Court told the jury that "knowledge of what is to be done, or of the nature of the act that is being done, is essential to consent to the act."<sup>1</sup> So where a person consented to the performance of a surgical operation upon himself with great reluctance, the only information communicated to him being that if he submitted to it, he would be cured, the Court held that a person could hardly be said to accept a risk of which he was not aware, and that therefore there was no case for exceptional treatment unless it were shown that the patient was aware of the risk and accepted it.<sup>2</sup> So in another case the fact that the force applied was a form of initiation of a voluntary society, which the party assaulted had agreed to join, was held to be no defence if he did not know beforehand that that was the part of the ceremony.<sup>3</sup> Knowledge of the act and its probable consequences is therefore the first requisite of consent.<sup>4</sup> And since there can be no knowledge without consciousness, it follows that consent without consciousness is impossible. So sexual intercourse with a female put under chloroform or rendered otherwise unconscious is rape, the question of consent being immaterial.<sup>5</sup> So where in such case the consent was obtained by fraud, misrepresentation or coercion, the result was held to be the same as if there never had been any consent.<sup>6</sup> The consent required is therefore free consent, or the free exercise of the will of a conscious agent.<sup>7</sup> Where therefore a child just above ten years of age yielded to her father, there was held to be no consent, for as Lush, J., told the jury: "Consent means consent of will, and if the child (just above ten years of age) submitted under the influence of terror, or because she felt herself in the power of the man, her father, there was no real consent."<sup>8</sup>

761. So Sir James Stephen defines consent in criminal law to mean "a consent freely given by a rational and sober person so situated as to be able to form a rational opinion upon the matter to which he consents."<sup>9</sup> And he goes on to add that "consent is said to be given freely when it is not procured by force, fraud or threats of whatever nature."<sup>10</sup>

Consent in Criminal Law.

(1) Lock, 12 Cox. C. C. 244.
 (2) Sukaroo, 14 C. C. 566.
 (3) Bell v. Hensley, 3 Jones 131; State v. Williams, 75 M. C. 134.
 (4) S. 90, post and Comm.
 (5) Camplin, 1 Cox C. C. 229; Ryan, 2 Cox, C. C. 115; Dee, 15 Cox C. C. 579.

(6) Case, 4 Cox C. C. 220, Flattery, 13 Cox C. C. 388; Dee, 15 Cox C. C. 579.
 (7) Woodhurst, 12 Cox C. C. 443; Dee, 15 Cox C. C. 579.
 (8) Woodhurst, 12 Cox C. C. 443.
 (9) Dig. of Cr. L., Art. 224.
 (10) Ib.

This view has become established in America where Orton, J., enunciated the principle as follows: "When the mind is subjugated as well as the body, so that the power of volition and the mental capacity to either consent or dissent is gone, then the act may be said to be against the will"; and so also it may be said to be without consent. But when the mind is left free to exercise the will, and to consent or dissent, then by consent responsibility for the act is incurred; where there is no such mental capacity, the quality of the act is indifferent, there can be no consent or dissent, and consequently no responsibility. The physical power may be overcome and the utmost resistance be unavailing; yet the mind may remain free to approve or disapprove, consent or dissent."<sup>1</sup> Of course, consent may be free, but it may have been brought about by fraud, misrepresentation or coercion. A person may have consented to a game with a sword in ignorance of the fact that it was tipped with poison: the wife may consent to intercourse with her husband in ignorance of the fact that he was suffering from a foul disease,<sup>2</sup> in both of which cases the effect is the same as if there had never been any consent at all.<sup>3</sup>

762. Implied Consent.—But so long as there is consent, and the consent is free, it is not necessary that it should be express or articulate. For it may be implied or given by implication, or inferred by conduct. So there may be and are cases in which silence implies consent. A modest girl may even signify her consent to her lover's proposal by a "No" uttered so as to denote a modest but real "Yes": Non quod dictum, sed quod factum in jure inspicitur.<sup>4</sup> So where a customer enters a tradesman's shop and picks up goods exhibited for sale, there is implied consent (a) to enter, (b) to handle goods, and (c) to appropriate them at the stated or reasonable price. So again, where a person has been a welcome visitor in the past, he may well assume consent to his continued visits, unless he has had reason to believe otherwise. The term "implied consent" is then, so far as regards the criminal law, used to signify either (a) consent by acts and conduct, or (b) consent presumed though never given or in any way signified. The examples above given illustrate the first sense; illustration (m) appended to s. 378 of the Code may fitly illustrate the other sense. "A, being on friendly terms with Z, goes into Z's library in Z's absence, and takes away a book without Z's express consent, for the purpose merely of reading it, and with the intention of returning it. Here it is probable that A may have conceived that he had his implied consent to use Z's book. If this was A's impression, A has not committed theft." Why not? because A had Z's implied consent to enter his library, and lend himself any book he required therefrom. In this case "implied consent" was only a fiction. It was really no consent at all, but only the probability of obtaining one. In other words, in imputing consent to Z in the case supposed, law presumes consent because, having regard to human conduct and probabilities, it was highly probable, indeed, so probable that its existence may be assumed. It is, however, an assumption all the same, and as such, a fiction, and being a fiction, its scope must be narrowly watched. For while it is true that there are facts which have to be assumed in human conduct, it is also true that human conduct is not invariable, and does not present uniformity. It must, therefore, be clearly established, by evidence from which the Court may be entitled to say that either the consent was not given owing to accidental causes or that it was given by acts or conducts or the only way in which it could have been given.

763. The question whether there was such a consent in a given case is therefore a question of fact dependent upon the circumstances of each case. A large number of cases are to be found in the reports in which the only phase of the question illustrated is that which relates to consent to a sexual intercourse. In such a case express consent is seldom to be looked for, and the only consent possible is implied consent which may be inferred from non-resistance and previous intimacy. It is sometimes said that the resistance required to overcome the imputation of consent

(1) Whittaker v. State; 50 Wis. 518.

(2) Clarence, 23 Q. B. D. 58.

(3) S. 90; Jaladu, 36 M. 453 (456, 457);

Soma, (1916) P. R. 17 (Cr.).

(4) Croft v. Lumley, 6 H. L. C. 722.

must be to the utmost of her power,<sup>1</sup> but there is neither reason nor authority in support of this view. For a woman may find resistance unavailing and even more harmful, and she may therefore not resist more than is essential to express her entire disapproval. And, indeed, more may not always be possible,<sup>2</sup> for the woman may be paralyzed from fear and terrorized into submission, or she may have been overpowered by actual force, or by the number of accomplices, or from her own want of strength.

764. Of course, consent cannot be inferred from mere passivity without something more. For a person may be aware of a plot to commit a crime, and he may take no action to defeat it. He may be quiescent and passive, but is he held to have acquiesced in the nefarious act? It is said that the mere fact that facilities for the commission of an offence are afforded is no indication of consent.<sup>3</sup> But one fails to see why it is not. Of course, if the facilities were afforded to facilitate detection, there is an explanation which is inconsistent with the presumption of consent. But without anything to suggest a definite intention, the usual indicia will undoubtedly lead to the usual inference. Suppose, for instance, that expecting a burglary a person puts out the lights, the question whether the person was or was not privy to the burglary depends upon the intention with which the lights were extinguished. If the person blowing out the light was a maid servant, her conduct would, to say the least, be suspicious. If she had, moreover, left the entrance door unbolted, she could not but be justly suspected of complicity. But if suppose the person putting out the lights and leaving the entrance door unbolted were the owner, his conduct would be attributed to very different motives.<sup>4</sup> He may, for instance, be presumed to have laid a trap for the burglar; but that would be the natural, though not the only presumption, for if the furniture had been heavily insured against burglary, it may be that the owner was plotting to defraud the insurance company.

765. Another class of cases in which implied consent is inferred is that in which the risk of harm is obvious and visible. Such trades, for instance, as involve the handling of machinery or acids or explosives or the like, naturally offer risks which persons engaged therein are presumably aware of and which they have impliedly consented to.<sup>5</sup> Apart, from the special provisions of protective enactments, the presumption arising out of service taken is that the servant consents to the hazards involved in his service. And he cannot complain on the ground that the chances of his risks might have been minimized if his employer had taken greater precaution. "Having consented to serve in the way and manner in which the business was being conducted, he has no proper ground of complaint, even if reasonable precautions have been neglected."<sup>6</sup>

766. Trap to Detect Crime.—The laying of traps is a perfectly justifiable method of detecting crimes. One may have marked property in such a position that if stolen it may be indentified; another may offer illegal gratification in coins or notes marked for the same purpose; a third person may play an accomplice and assist in the commission of a crime, but the criminal cannot in any case contend that those facts in any way mitigated his crime.<sup>7</sup> So it was said in an American case that "the fact that B was willing to assist in and facilitate the detection and arrest of a criminal does not amount to a consent to the commission of the crime, nor will the mere fact that there was a detective with, (apparently assisting), the appellant in the commission of the crime constitute a defence."<sup>8</sup>

(1) People v. Morrison, 1 Parker Cr. R. 625; People v. Dohring, 59 N. Y. 374.

(2) Hallet, 9 C. & P. 751.

(3) 1 Wharton's Cr. L., 164.

(4) Egginton, Leach C. C. 913; 1 Steph. Cr. L., p. 257.

(5) Employers' Liabilities Act, 1880; Membery v. Great Western Ry. Co., 14 App.

Cas. 168; Yarmouth v. France, 19 Q. B. D. 647; (661) Thrussell v. Handyside, 20 Q. B. D. 359.

(6) Sullivan v. India Manufacturing Co., 113 Mass. 396.

(7) Egginton, Leach C. C. 913

(8) State v. Stickney, 53 Kan. 308.

767. The principle underlying this and similar cases has not been stated, but it is obvious. No person can justify an illegal act on the ground of consent. If it were otherwise, the assistance received from abettors and accomplices would be a material element in mitigating the crime. But it is not. So no consent can atone for a public wrong. There are, however, some offences in which consent operates as a condonation of the crime. Such an offence is adultery,<sup>1</sup> which, however, is not even a crime in England. Other offences affecting human life, limb or liberty, are also affected by the presence or absence of consent. In fact, such offences may be generally sub-divided into two clauses viz : (a) those in which non-consent is necessary to constitute the crime, and (b) those which are complete independently of non-consent, but of which consent is a sufficient justification. As instances of the former may be mentioned rape<sup>2</sup> and theft;<sup>3</sup> as instances of the latter may be mentioned hurt caused during employment or in a game. In the former case the very criminality of the act depends upon proof of non-consent, which must then be established by the prosecution; while, in the latter case, consent or its absence is not necessary for the constitution of the crime, though consent has the effect of negating it. This and the other following cognate sections only deal with consent in its second operation, and it is to this aspect of the subject that the present discussion is primarily confined.

768. Operation of Consent on Crime.—Instances have been already given of offences in which consent has the effect of negating criminality. It has been said that where the offences are of a public character, consent does not vary their nature or affect their penalty. Such are offences against the State<sup>4</sup> those relating to the Army, Navy and Air Force<sup>5</sup> or those affecting the public tranquillity<sup>6</sup> offences by or relating to public servants, which cannot be minimized by consent; indeed, in cases of the receipt of illegal gratification, in which money is received by consent, the consent in no way affects the crime. Offences against public justice,<sup>7</sup> and those relating to stamps, coins,<sup>8</sup> weights and measures<sup>9</sup> are for the same reason independent of consent. On the other hand, consent may mitigate or even excuse some of the offences described in Chapter X.<sup>10</sup> Offences relating to religion are necessarily dependent upon consent, while those affecting the human body depend upon consent only in cases covered by this and the next two sections. It will thus be seen that the value of consent varies in the inverse ratio with the gravity of the crime. And in the case of public crimes it has no place at all. And even in other cases its operation is controlled by public policy.

769. So the question whether harm caused in a game is or is not justifiable does not depend merely upon consent, but upon the lawfulness of the game. If the game was unlawful, which means if it was one against public morality or public policy, then the hurt caused therein even by consent is punishable; or, in other words, consent is no defence to an illegal act, when it is both illegal and injurious to the public. So where persons who engage in prize-fights which are illegal commit assault upon each other and are so punishable in spite of their consent.<sup>11</sup> But hurt legitimately caused in manly sports and pastimes entered into for health or recreation, as fencing, boxing, football, single sticks wrestling by consent, playing at cudgels, fencing, archery and the like is justifiable in accordance with the rule here enunciated. But the reason that hurt is justifiable even in these games is because the causing of hurt is inevitable but is not the primary object of the game. If, therefore, the game is made a pretext for causing hurt, it becomes the primary object, and it is not then justifiable, since it is necessary that even in a legitimate game proper caution and perfect fair play should guide both parties.

(1) ; S. 497, post; Marris v. Marris, 2 Sw. & Tr 530; Ellyatt v. Ellyatt, 3 Sw. & Tr. 504; Adams v. Adams, 1 P. & D. 333.

(2) S. 375, post.

(3) S. 378, post.

(4) Ss. 121-130.

(5) Ss. 131-140.

(6) Ss. 141-160.

(7) Ss. 191-229.

(8) Ss. 230-263A.

(9) Ss. 264-294A.

(10) Ss. 172-190.

(11) Murphy, 6 C. & P. 103; Boulter v. Clarke 1 Buller's N. P. 16; Mathew v. Ollerton, Comb. 218; Perkins, 4 C. & P. 537; Lewis, 1 C. & K. 419; Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534 (549).

770. Unlawful Games.—As regards unlawful games, the question depends not so much on the antiquity or popularity of the games as upon their nature and the risk they involve to life and limb. The mere use of force does not render a game illegal unless the force employed involves danger to life and limb. A gladiatorial contest which made the Roman's holiday would undoubtedly be regarded as wholly illegal nowadays. The modern Spanish bull-fight, though a national institution in Spain, would be condemned as illegal in this country. A tilt or tournament was, once upon a time, the favourite pastime of Englishmen, but it was nevertheless held to be illegal even though it may have been commanded by the King, for even the King's commandment would not justify or excuse a person who killed another in a tournament, because the commandment itself was illegal.<sup>1</sup> So fencing with naked swords is illegal though playing with foils is legal so long as the buttons are at the end of the foils. Duels are, of course, illegal, and all taking part in them are equally guilty as aiders and abettors,<sup>2</sup> though it can no longer be maintained that mere presence constitutes the spectators as aiders and abettors.<sup>3</sup>

771. Manly sports and pastimes are encouraged because they afford healthy exercise and develop a martial spirit, and they are not illegal merely because they expose the participants to some risk of harm. But law can tolerate no contest in which the risk of harm is out of all proportion to the advantage derived from the game. And this is especially the case where persons employ deadly weapons or where the game is played in a manner involving the breach of peace. It is for this reason that prize-fights are condemned.<sup>4</sup> Indeed, it may be laid down as the one test of legality in such cases that, if bodily harm is not the motive on either side, the game is legal. But its legality will be seriously shaken if the weapons employed are deadly or dangerous, or the game is played from mercenary motives and draws a large crowd, or being in itself a perfectly fair game, persons engaged therein do not observe its rules, but whether through heat or anger inflict upon each other more injury than would be fair in a friendly contest.<sup>5</sup> So while there is nothing unlawful in sparring, it becomes illegal if the combatants fight on until they are so weak that a dangerous fall is the result.<sup>6</sup> So while wrestling is perfectly legal it would be an assault, if after a combatant cries truce or is vanquished, the other continues to pummel him and thereby causes injury.

772. Extent of Justifiable Harm.—Assuming then that there is consent and it was given for a lawful purpose, the amount of justifiable injury that may be inflicted must not exceed the limit prescribed by the section, the measure of which is not the actual harm but the harm intended or foreseen. In this connection two points call for notice. First, the legality of the extent of harm is judged not by the consent given, but by the intention and knowledge of the person causing it. If he intended or knew that death or grievous hurt would be the result of the harm, he is liable for whatever harm may have been caused independently of any consent of the other party. One person may request another to kill him, but he has no right to kill him by request. The question then, being dependent upon the intention or knowledge of the doer, is one the answer to which must necessarily depend upon the circumstances of each case. But the foregoing considerations are for this purpose material, as they illustrate the guiding principles to which the rule is subject. Secondly, if the harm was not initially intended or known to cause grievous hurt, then the fact that the harm actually caused was grievous or more is immaterial. The two points may be illustrated by reference to the harm caused in a duel and a wrestling match. If the former is fought with loaded pistols, parties intend death, and though the injury caused may be slight, the party causing it is liable irrespective of consent. On the other hand, in a wrestling match there is no intention to cause

(1) Per Stephen, J., in Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534 (549), citing Lambard Eiren, p. 129; 1 Hale P. C. 472; Foster, C. C. 259, 260; 1 East P. C. 270. P. 170; Murphy, 6 C. & P. 103; Bellingham, 2 C. & P. 234; explained; Per Cave, J. in Coney, 8 Q. B. D. 534 (542).
 (2) Young, 8 C. & P. 644; Murphy, 6 C. & P. 103.
 (3) Parkins, 4 C. & P. 537; Hargave, 5 C. & P. 537.
 (4) Perkins, 4 C. & P. 537.
 (5) Canniff, (1840) 9 C. & P. 359; Bradshaw, (1878) 14 Cox C. C. 83.
 (6) Young, 10 Cox C. C. 37.

grievous hurt. It is a fair trial of strength, but if perchance an awkward throw breaks the bone of a wrestler, the other party is not liable, because the injury would be attributed to misadventure.

773. In one case the deceased, a middle-aged Burman, believed himself to have been rendered dao-proof by charms and asked the accused to try a dao on his right arm. The accused believed in the assurance of the deceased and inflicted a moderate blow with his dao as requested, with the result that his arteries were cut and the deceased bled to death. He was convicted under s. 304 but on appeal his conviction was set aside on the strength of this section and section 90, the Court holding that the accused neither intended to cause nor knew that he was likely to cause any hurt, much less the death, of the deceased.<sup>1</sup>

774. Who must Consent?—Lastly, the section enacts that, in order to be operative, consent must be given by the person suffering the harm, and he must be then above eighteen years of age. Of course, where harm is caused with the consent of other persons, the party inflicting it may still be protected under the provisions of section 89, if a proper case under that section is made out or, lastly, it may be a case falling under section 92, in which case, there need be no consent at all. Reserving these two latter cases for future consideration, the section requires that acts sought to be justified under it must be shown to have been consented to by the sufferer himself. If, therefore, a person is forced to play a perfectly legitimate game and suffers injury, it is not justifiable. The fact that in such a case the consent of some other person, whether parent or master, had been obtained is immaterial. And as the person consenting must be above eighteen years of age, what becomes of persons below that age of discretion? Their case is apparently not met by the subsequent sections, which refer to other contingencies. Such a person is then incapable of joining a lawful game under the conditions which prevail in the case of male combatants.

88. Nothing, which is not intended to cause death, is an offence by reason of any harm, which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, or be known by the doer to be likely to cause, to any person for whose benefit it is done in good faith, and who has given a consent, whether express or implied, to suffer that harm, or take the risk of that harm.

Illustration.

A, a surgeon, knowing that a particular operation is likely to cause the death of Z, who suffers under a painful complaint, but not intending to cause Z's death, and intending, in good faith, Z's benefit, performs that operation on Z, with Z's consent. A has committed no offence.

775. Analogous Law.—Under the last section the intentional causing of death or of grievous hurt cannot be justified by consent. Under this section unintentional causing of grievous hurt is justifiable, though not of death. The reason is that under the last section there was no question of benefit to the complainant, whereas in this the act is done in good faith and for the benefit of the injured. The illustration makes it clear that the section has a direct reference to an operation performed by a surgeon, though the section may have a wider application. This section enacts a rule in harmony with English Law which was proposed to be thus stated in the English Criminal Code Bill of 1879: "Every one is protected from criminal responsibility for performing with reasonable care and skill any surgical operation upon any person for his benefit provided that performing the operation was reasonable, having regard to the patient's state at the time, and to all the circumstances of the case."

776. The fact that a person performs an act in good faith and for the benefit of another does not entitle him to perform that act forcibly upon him, even though the person upon whom the benefit is sought to be conferred be foolish in denying to himself the benefit which the other intends to confer on him. Consent is, therefore, necessary, though it need not be express, which may even be implied. The resultant harm may be great, causing even death, but it must not be so intended. It will, thus, be seen that a person working for the benefit of another is given a greater latitude than one who inflicts harm in sport or play.

(1) Nga Shwe Kin, 8 L. B. R. 166 ; 30 I. C. 133.

777. Principle.—A person working for the benefit of another is given a greater latitude than is allowed to one acting merely with consent. The only thing postulated in his case is that he should not intend to cause death, though he may know that death will be caused. Here, since death of a person was probably certain without the benevolent interference of the other party, law permits him to barter one chance for another. The illustration appended furnishes an apt example. Z is there suffering from a painful malady. If it were curable without an operation there would be no necessity for A's assistance. It may not immediately cause death, but it will probably do so, and in the meantime cause the sufferer pain. The sufferer is then permitted to choose between the chance of a cure and death, and he is so permitted, because, without taking that risk, no surgeon will operate on him, and without operation he cannot hope for a cure. Take another example: A person in the grip of a wild beast orders his companion to fire, and the shot misses its aim and kills him. Here he had bartered one chance for another and the fact that it killed him would not affect the question.

778. Meaning of Words.—“Which is not intended to cause death”: In the illustrations given under the last paragraph (§ 777), if the surgeon pretending to cure intentionally stab the patient, or the sportsman deliberately aim at the other, in both the cases they will be responsible for their acts. The clause means that the doer must intend not only not to cause death, but his act must be done in good faith and for his benefit, which means that the intention must be to confer benefit and not cause death. “Or intended by the doer to cause,” that is, if the doer intends to cause any harm short of death, it is no offence if (i) he did not intend to cause his death, (ii) if the act done was for his benefit, (iii) it was done in good faith, and (iv) the sufferer was apprised of the coming harm to which (v) he had expressly or impliedly consented. “For whose benefit it is done”: The explanation added to section 29 says mere pecuniary benefit is not benefit within the meaning of sections 88, 89 and 92.

779. Harm Intended to Benefit.—The scope of the rule here enunciated has been already discussed elsewhere (§ 753). The section enacts that consent justifies any harm short of intended death even though the harm may result in death, if only it was caused for his benefit and in good faith. These words then control the whole section, as do the commencing words: “Nothing which is not intended to cause death.” These three restrictions form the exceptions to the rule, for they lay down that (i) no one shall under any circumstances be excused for causing another's death if he so intended it, or (ii) if it was not caused while doing an act for his benefit, and (iii) which was not done in good faith. If so far the act of the accused is not blame-worthy, then he is not guilty of any harm including death, even though he may have known that death was likely, and even though he may have intentionally caused any harm from which he may have known that death would be caused. In the choice of evils a person may well be left to be his own judge.

780. The first condition postulated is that the act done must be beneficial, and as has been explained elsewhere,<sup>1</sup> the “benefit” here contemplated is not a “mere pecuniary benefit,” which implies that it may be a pecuniary benefit if it is also a benefit of some other kind, as, for instance, it may be for the benefit of his life, health or body. He may expect a legacy if he lives up to a certain age. It may then be also for his pecuniary benefit. But if the harm cause only a pecuniary benefit, it is not a benefit within the comprehension of the rule. For instance, a person may desire, as did the beggar mentioned by Lord Coke, to amputate his arm so as to be able to beg successfully. The harm contemplated would have conferred a mere pecuniary benefit on the sufferer,

Act must be Beneficial.

but that benefit would be the result of imposture. So there is a class of persons in this country who get themselves emasculated with a view to obtaining service in a harem or to follow the occupation of "nautch girls." If, therefore, a person engages another to emasculate him, the question may be whether the performance of such operation would be legal. It was so held in a case<sup>1</sup> in which a man over 18 years of age engaged a party of eunuchs to emasculate him, whereupon they, being persons unskilled and unqualified to perform the operation, simply cut off his private parts without proper ligatures, in consequence of which the man died. It was held that the accused could not claim exemption under this section.<sup>2</sup> The same view was taken in another case in which the prisoner a kabiraj, performed an admittedly dangerous operation of cutting out the internal piles by an ordinary knife, in consequence of which the patient died the next day.<sup>3</sup> Mutilation or disfigurement of one's body is then not a "benefit" within the meaning of this section though it may be justifiable on the ground that it was suffered to avert a greater evil. In the case last cited the Court placed some emphasis on the unskilful manner in which the operation was performed. But if the operation was itself illegal, no skill used in performing it would alter its nature or affect the punishment. But where the operation is itself legal, the exercise of care and attention is a necessary prerequisite for they are implied in the doing of an act in good faith<sup>4</sup> which the rule enjoins.

781. Now as the exercise of care and attention does not postulate any technical skill but only such skill as a man of ordinary prudence and intelligence may command, it follows that it is by no means a necessary ingredient of the section that the assistance rendered should be one especially qualified to render it. So it has been held in England that a physician or surgeon need not be a regular or licensed one to be entitled to exemption.<sup>5</sup> So Blackstone says that "if a physician or surgeon gives his patient a potion or plaster to cure him, which, contrary to expectation, kills him, this is neither murder nor manslaughter, but misadventure; and he shall not be punished criminally, however liable he might formerly have been to a civil action for negligence or ignorance; but it hath been holden, that if it be not a regular physician or surgeon, who administers the medicine or performs the operation, it is manslaughter at the least. Yet Sir Mathew Hale very justly questions the law of this determination; since physic and salves were in use before licensed physicians and surgeons, wherefore he treats this doctrine as apocryphal, and fitted only to gratify and flatter licentiates and doctors in physic, though it may be of use to make people cautious and wary, how they meddle too much in so dangerous an employment."<sup>6</sup>

782. It has thus been long since settled that what is required is care and attention, not necessarily special skill and knowledge. This was clearly laid down by Hullock, B., in a case in which the prisoner had been arraigned before him for compassing the death of a person by thrusting a round piece of ivory against his rectum. "It is my opinion that it makes no difference whether the party be a regular or irregular surgeon; indeed, in remote parts of the country, many persons would be left to die, if irregular surgeons were not allowed to practise. There is no doubt that there may be cases where both regular and irregular surgeons, might be liable to an indictment, as there might be cases where, from the manner of the operation, even malice might be inferred. . . . In the present case no evidence has been given respecting the operation itself. It might have been performed with the most proper instrument and in the most proper manner and yet might have failed. . . . But it would be most dangerous for it to get abroad, that if an operation performed either by a licensed or unlicensed surgeon should fail, that surgeon would

(1) Babulan Hijrah, 5 W. R. 7.

(2) Ib.

(3) Sukaroo Kabiraj, 14 C. 566.

(4) S. 52, ante.

(5) 1 Hale P. C. 429.

(6) 4 Black. 197. It may be added that this view has since been unanimously adopted by the Courts; Crick, 1 F. & F. 519; Webb, 1 M. & Rob. 405; Crook, 1 F & F., 521; and cases cited post.

be prosecuted for manslaughter."<sup>1</sup> So in another case, the prisoner had been known to act as an accoucheur among the lower classes of people, and as such safely confined the deceased, but two days later the deceased suffered from a prolapsus uteri which the prisoner, mistaking to be a part of the placenta, attempted to pull out, and in so doing he lacerated the uterus and severed the mesentric artery causing the death of the patient. The prisoner was thereupon indicted for murder but Lord Ellenborough, C. J., charging the jury said, that, "though the accused was not a qualified accoucheur the fact that he had confined many women at different times showed that he had some degree of skill and the only question that remained was whether there was any want of attention on his part amounting to criminal negligence."<sup>2</sup>

783. But want of care must depend upon the circumstances of each case. Where, for instance, a quack induced a person, two of whose relations had died of consumption, to place herself under his treatment stating that she should die unless she became his patient, and thereupon he applied a noxious liniment which produced a wound which the prisoner went on describing as an improvement, and which he did nothing to stop and to which she eventually succumbed in a fortnight, it was held that the prisoner had been guilty of gross imposture and that he could not be acquitted.<sup>3</sup> In this case the prisoner was able to produce 29 witnesses who had been patients of the prisoner, and were satisfied with his skill and diligence; but nevertheless the jury found him guilty, because he had applied a dangerous ointment in a reckless manner and had moreover, hoaxed the deceased with false assurances of her improvement, in spite of her ulcer which was mortifying and suppurating and growing worse from day to day.

784. Whether the care and attention employed in a case has been adequate and proper may be judged by the effect produced.<sup>4</sup> And so Bolland, B., observed in the same case: "To my mind it matters not whether a man has received a medical education or not; the thing to look at is, whether, in reference to the remedy he has used, and the conduct he has displayed, he has acted with a due degree of caution, or on the contrary, has acted with gross and improper rashness and want of caution. I have no hesitation in saying for your guidance, that if a man be guilty of gross negligence in attending to his patient after he has applied a remedy, or of gross rashness in the application of it, and death ensues in consequence, he will be liable to a conviction for manslaughter."<sup>5</sup> The two cases instituted against one St. John Long aptly illustrate the operation of this rule. In the one case the prisoner had been visited by his patient, of whose condition he was made aware from day to day, in spite of which he went on asserting that the symptoms seen were just the symptoms to be expected in a case of cure, whereas in the second case the prisoner had applied probably the same liniment, but after the application he did not know the whereabouts of his patient, and when he did, she was already under the treatment of another person. Consequently the jury convicted him in the first case and acquitted him in the other.

785. The amount of care and attention required in a given case depends not less upon the nature of the disorder, the character of the medicine used, than upon the education and experience of the prisoner. The same latitude cannot be allowed to a person working from mercenary motives, as to one whose act was inspired by charity and benevolence. A person who handles a dangerous poison, such as morphia, cannot be excused on the ground of mistake if he had administered it without weighing it.<sup>6</sup> So where a person, not a regular practitioner, administered lobelia, a dangerous medicine, it will be for the jury to say whether he had not acted so rashly and carelessly as to cause death.<sup>7</sup> So where the disease from which

(1) Van Butchell, 3 C. & P. 629.

(2) Williamson, 3 C. & P. 635.

(3) St. John Long, 4 C. & P. 398.

(4) Per Bayley, B., in St. John Long.

(2nd case), 4 C. & P. 423.

(5) St. John Long, 4 C. & P. 423.

(6) McLeod, 12 Cox C. C. 534.

(7) Crick, 1 F. & F. 519.

a person is suffering is such as require skilled medical aid, it would be a sheer recklessness on the part of a quack to perform the operation whatever may have been the wish of the patient ; for the question here is not one of consent, but the exercise of good faith, which demands care and attention independently of consent.<sup>1</sup> An unskilled practitioner should be as cautious in not performing difficult operations as in prescribing dangerous drugs, of the use of which he is ignorant.<sup>2</sup> So Cockburn, C.J., in one case observed : " If a person takes upon himself to administer a dangerous medicine, it is his duty to administer it with proper care, and if he does it with negligence, he is guilty of man-slaughter."<sup>3</sup> St. John Long was convicted because he had applied a dangerous ointment in a reckless manner. (§ 783). So where a blacksmith applied mercury to a tumour due to cancer, in consequence of which the patient died of poisoning and the medical evidence showed that, though the deceased would have died of cancer, still his death was accelerated by the medicine, it was held that having regard to the prisoner's education and employment, it was almost want of skill in the prisoner to use the dangerous substance in the manner it had been, but the question was left to the jury who found the prisoner guilty.<sup>4</sup>

786. In such cases where want of care and caution in the prisoner is alleged, the evidence of qualified medical men is admissible for the purpose of showing that the disease sought to be cured was serious, or that the medicine employed was unsuitable and dangerous. But the prisoner cannot call evidence to shew that he had successfully treated others for similar complaints, for the question to be inquired into is not the general competency of the prisoner but his competency in the particular case.<sup>5</sup>

787. Lastly, the greater the education of the prisoner, the greater will be the amount of care and attention required. As Tindal, C.J., said : " Every person who enters into a legal profession undertakes to bring to the exercise of it a reasonable degree of care and skill. He does not undertake, if he is an attorney, that at all events you shall gain your cause ; nor does a surgeon undertake that he will perform a cure nor does he undertake to use the highest possible degree of skill ; there may be persons who have higher education and greater advantages than he has, but he undertakes a fair, reasonable, and competent degree of skill."<sup>6</sup>

788. These principles equally apply to other persons requisitioned for assistance. A fellow-sportsman cannot refrain from firing to rescue his comrade from the grip of certain death, merely because his shot might miscarry and kill every person he intended to save. The test in both cases is the same. Did he act for the benefit of the other, and had he used proper care and attention ?

89. Nothing which is done in good faith for the benefit of a person under twelve years of age, or of unsound mind, by or by consent, either express or implied, of the guardian or other person, having lawful charge of that person, is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause, or be intended by the doer to cause, or be known by the doer to be likely to cause, to that person :

Provisos.

Provided—

First.—That this exception shall not extend to the intentional causing of death, or to the attempting to cause death ;

(1) Spiller, 5 C. & P. 333, Lamphier v. Phipson, 8 C. & P. 475 ; Spilling, 2 M. & Rob. 107 ; Moakes, 4 F. & F. 920.

(2) Markuss, 4 F. & F. 356 Chamberlain, 10 Cox C. C. 486 ; Bull, 2 F. & F. 201 ; Ruddock v. Lowe, (1865) 4 F. & F. 519.

(3) Bull, 2 F. & F. 201 ; Nanny Simpson's Case, (1829) 1 Lewin 172 ; Joseph Webb, (1834) 2 Lewin 191 ; Jones v. Fay, (1865) 4 F. & F. 525.

(4) Crook, 1 F. & F. 521.

(5) Per Maule, J., in Whitehead, 3 C. & K 202 ; explaining Williamson, 3 C. & P. 635 as follows : " In Williamson the witnesses were asked generally causa scientiae. Neither on the one hand nor on the other can other cases be gone into. The attention of the jury must be confined to the present case."

(6) Lamphier v. Phipos, 8 C. & P. 475.

Secondly.—That this exception shall not extend to the doing of anything which the person doing it knows to be likely to cause death for any purpose other than the preventing of death or grievous hurt, or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity ;

Thirdly.—That this exception shall not extend to the voluntary causing of grievous hurt, or to the attempting to cause grievous hurt, unless it be for the purpose of preventing death or grievous hurt, or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity ;

Fourthly.—That this exception shall not extend to the abetment of any offence, to the committing of which offence it would not extend.

Illustration

A, in good faith, for his child's benefit, without his child's consent, has his child cut for the stone by a surgeon, knowing it to be likely that the operation will cause the child's death but not intending to cause the child's death. A is within the exception inasmuch as his object was the cure of the child.

[Good faith—s. 52.]

789. Analogous Law.—This section was clause 71 which the authors justified on the ground that, as the harm here inflicted was on a lunatic or on a child under 12 years of age, something more than mere good faith and benefit was necessary. This is provided in the four provisos. The authors had appended six illustrations to their note of which only illustration (d) was enacted while the other five were omitted. These related to the parent chastising his child or confining it for its benefit or to prevent it from falling into the hands of kidnappers ; but if he emasculated his child or abetted a rape upon his daughter, though for pecuniary benefit, his consent would not exempt him. These illustrations are covered by the provisos.<sup>1</sup>

790. Principle.—This section empowers the guardian or other person similarly situated to inflict harm either himself, or consent to its infliction by another, but it requires that the infliction of harm shall, as in other cases, be (i) “done in good faith,” (ii) “for the benefit of the person,” and further that though done in good faith and for the benefit of the person, it is not an act which is immoral or illegal. (§ 789)

791. Meaning of Words.—“Nothing.....done in good faith for the benefit of a person” : “Good faith” has been defined in s. 52, and its sense generally set out under s. 87. “Benefit” here does not mean a mere pecuniary benefit ; see illustration (e) of the original draft Code.<sup>2</sup> “Of unsound mind,” for the meaning of which see under s. 84. The term is, however, used here in the wider sense as denoting a person who has lost control of either his cognition, emotion or will. “Guardian or other person having lawful charge” : The word “lawful” does not qualify the word “guardian” but “other person” having charge of that person. A guardian de jure or de facto may validly consent only if the consent required is of “other person,” he must be one in lawful charge of the person. The section is really intended to exclude an officious intermeddler in no way interested in his welfare.

792. Consent by Guardian.—This section extends the exception to harm caused either by the guardian himself or by another with his consent. It recognizes the power of parental discipline over children below 12 years of age, for it permits a guardian to chastise his ward for his benefit. The schoolmaster or other persons in loco parentis would be excepted for the same reason. The limit within which a person in authority may legitimately chastise another has been already discussed. All such cases are as much excepted under this section, as on the ground of general policy (§ 789). The question if and how far the husband is protected by the rule here enacted is perhaps not difficult to answer, as the section does not save any class of persons below 12 years of age. It may then be predicated as regards the husband's right of correction that he, being the guardian of his minor wife, is not precluded from administering correction.

(1) Note p, Reprint p. 109.

(2) See 1 Penal Law (4th Ed.) § 851.

793. A person of unsound mind is for all purposes in the same predicament as a child under twelve years of age. The section does not speak of his lucid intervals, but it is probable that a person, though of unsound mind, would be allowed to judge for himself in his lucid intervals. But it would be no illegality if the guardian even then exercised the same power as at any other time, for the section confers upon him a power which is in no way limited or qualified by the fits of the maniac.

794. The power conferred by this section must be exercised for the benefit of the person and in good faith. The "benefit" here spoken of is the personal temporal benefit, not being merely a pecuniary benefit. A person may firmly believe that it would be to the benefit of his child, if it were sacrificed to his deity. He is not, therefore, justified in offering him as a sacrifice. Some persons have a belief, that it is an act of piety to offer their virgin daughters to the deity. The section will not justify their action, whatever may have been their motive. Indeed, the section does not except cases on the ground of so-called spiritual benefit. If it were so, it would not be difficult to justify the most atrocious crime on that ground. Moreover, it will place the life and liberty of infants too much in the hands of their guardians.

795. The Age of Consent.—Unlike the last section this section does not prescribe the age of consent, and it may be a question whether the section applies to all persons irrespective of age. But since the next section refers to the consent of the guardian in the case of a person under twelve years of age, and s. 90 enacts that unless the contrary appears from the context, a consent is not such a consent as is intended by this section, if it is given by a person who is under twelve years of age, it follows that this section permits a minor above that age to consent to an act done under this section. But the validity of consent on the ground of non-age or other incompetency is thrown into the back-ground by the provisions of s. 92 which provides for such cases. Of course, one person seeing another in distress will not wait for the pharisaical formality of a formal consent, which will in most cases be presumed from acceptance of service or the exigency of the case.

90. A consent is not such a consent as is intended by any section of this Code, if the consent is given by a person under fear of injury, or under a misconception of fact, and if the person doing the act knows, or has reason to believe, that the consent was given in consequence of such fear or misconception ; or if the consent is given by a person who, from unsoundness of mind or intoxication, is unable to understand the nature and consequence of that to which he gives his consent ; or Consent known to be given under fear or misconception.

Consent of insane person.

unless the contrary appears from the context, if the consent is given by a person who is under twelve years of age.

Consent of child.

796. Analogous Law.—This section does not define consent, but merely provides that wherever the term consent is used in the Code it must be deliberately and free.<sup>1</sup>

797. In order then that there should be such a consent, the mind must have materials to work upon. In the first place it must have knowledge or consciousness of the act consented to.<sup>2</sup> A person consenting under a "misconception of fact" cannot be said to consent within the meaning of the section. Such misconception may arise from fraud or a misrepresentation of fact.<sup>3</sup> Suppose, for instance, that a person is told by a medical man that a certain drug, if taken internally, would cure him of his ailment. He believes him and consents to take the drug, which was poison, and dies. Here his consent cannot be availed of, because it was given

(1) Story's Eq. Juris. § 222.

(2) Lock, 12 Cox 244 ; Ngwa v. Shwe Kin, 8 L. B. R. 166, 30 I. C. 133.

(3) Jatadu, 38 M. 453 (456, 457) ; Soma, (1916) P. R. (Cr.) 17 ; Mg. Ba Chit, 7 R. 821 (836, 837).

under a misconception of facts. So where the accused who professed to be snake-charmers, persuaded the deceased to allow them to be bitten by a poisonous snake, inducing them to believe that they had power to protect them from harm. Here there was consent, but it was given under a misconception of facts, that is, in the belief that the accused had power by charms to cure snake-bites, and the accused knew that the consent was given under such misconception. It was, therefore, not such a consent as is here understood.<sup>1</sup> So there have been several cases in which women consented to acts on the assurance of their medical men that they were a part of the treatment, and, as such, necessary for the cure, in all of which cases consent could not be used to exculpate the criminal.<sup>2</sup> In such a case it may be said in the words of Wilde, C. J., that "she consented to one thing, he did another materially different, on which she had been prevented by his fraud from exercising her judgment and will."<sup>3</sup>

798. Where a person consents to a thing on the assumption of facts which in fact did not exist, the result is the same as if on the true facts there never had been any consent. Field, J., in one case said: "The actual circumstances were that the prisoner, knowing he had a foul and infectious disease upon him, and that the infection of his wife would be the natural and reasonable consequence of intercourse, solicited intercourse. He also knew that his wife consented to it in ignorance of his condition. Under these circumstances, I think, that her consent to the intercourse in fact was given upon the implied condition that, to the knowledge of the prisoner, the nature of the intercourse was that to which she had bound herself to consent and had been accustomed to consent, i.e., a natural and healthy connection. But the intercourse which the prisoner imposed upon his wife was of a different nature, one which, in all probability, would communicate to her a foul disease, to which, the jury have found, that she would not have consented, had she known the state of his health. It seems to me, therefore, to follow that, the mere consent of the prisoner's wife to an act, innocent in itself, and in no way injurious to her, was no consent at all to what the prisoner did, and, moreover, that he obtained such consent as she gave by wilfully suppressing the fact that he was suffering from disease.....The result, therefore, at which I have arrived, is, that there was no consent in fact by the prisoner's wife to the prisoner's act of intercourse because although he knew, yet his wife did not know, and he wilfully left her in ignorance as to the real nature and character of that act."<sup>4</sup> "Where consent is obtained by duress, fraud, or misrepresentation, there is not even the freedom of will necessary for consent."<sup>5</sup>

799. Of course, it is not necessary that the misconception of facts should have been brought about by the accused. All that is necessary is that he must know or have reason to believe, that the consent was given under the misconception of facts. If, therefore, there be a misconception of facts unknown to the accused, the result so far as he is concerned is the same, as if there had been no misconception at all. The deceased believed that he had been made invulnerable by charms. He invited the accused to try his cla (a stick with a blade about a foot and a half long, on him, and he struck him with it with a moderate force with the result that the arteries were cut and the deceased bled to death. The accused, an ignorant youth of 19, had probably believed in the alleged immunity of the deceased. He was consequently acquitted, the Court holding him protected both by s. 87 and this section.<sup>6</sup>

800. Secondly, there can be no knowledge unless there is consciousness.

(2) Consciousness. Where, therefore, the prisoner made the prosecutrix quite drunk, and ravished her while in the state of insensibility, there could be no question of consent, for consent implies a conscious mind.<sup>7</sup> So

(1) Poonai Fattemah, 12 W. R. 7.

(2) Flattery, 2 Q. B. D. 410; Young, 14 Cox. C. C. 14.

(3) Case, 1 Dent. C. C. 580 (582); cited with approval, per Mellor, J., in Flattery, 2 Q. B. D. 410 (413).

(4) Clarence, 22 Q. B. D. 58.

(5) Saunders, 8 C. & P. 265.

(6) Ngwa Shwe Kin, 8 L. B. R. 166, 30 I. C. 133.

(7) Camplin, 1 Den. C. C. 89.

where the mind is blank owing to idiocy or imbecility, there can be no consent, and any consent given is immaterial.<sup>1</sup>

801. Thirdly, there may be both consciousness and knowledge, and yet not that freedom of mind which is the very essence of consent. (3) Mere Submission is Not Consent. So in a case where a master had taken indecent liberties with a female scholar to which she did not resist, the Court told the jury that though there was submission, there was no consent, as the act was done against her will.<sup>2</sup> So in a similar case Coleridge, J., distinguished a mere submission from consent: "Every consent involves a submission; but it by no means follows that mere submission involves consent. It would be too much to say that an adult submitting quietly to an outrage of this description was not consenting; on the other hand, the mere submission of a child, when in the power of a strong man, and most probably acted upon by fear, can by no means be taken to be such a consent as will justify the prisoner in point of law."<sup>3</sup> So the submission by a boy of eight years of age to an indecent assault was held not to amount to consent, as he was ignorant of the moral nature of the act done to him. In the cases above cited there was a fear, though not perhaps the fear of injury. But where that fear is presented the case is, of course, worse.

802. It is sometimes said that persons who "take the risk" must be deemed to consent. Instances have been given before (§ 765) of cases in which the Courts have refused to infer consent from the mere desire to take a risk. (4) Merely Taking the Risk. A workman may find the machinery he is employed on dangerous. He apprises his employer of that fact and protests against his having to work on it. The employer neglects to repair it. The workman is unwilling to work, but he is afraid to strike, lest he should be dismissed. He takes the risk but does not consent to it. The question, however, becomes more complicated. When the question of taking the risk is presented with reference to that expression as used in Exception 5 to s. 300, which says: "Culpable homicide is not murder when the person whose death is caused being above the age of eighteen years, suffers death, or takes the risk of death with his own consent." In this connection it was said in a case: "A man who, by concert with his adversary, goes out armed with a deadly weapon to fight that adversary who is also armed with a deadly weapon, must be aware that he runs the risk of losing his life; and, as he voluntarily puts himself in that position, he must be taken to incur the risk. If this reasoning is correct as regards a pair of combatants fighting by premeditation, it equally applies to the members of two riots, or assemblies who agree to fight together, and of whom some on each side, are, to the knowledge of all the members, armed with deadly weapons."<sup>4</sup>

803. The question of consent is said to play a part where an armed body of men encounter another body similarly armed, resulting in a free fight between them,<sup>5</sup> in which case it cannot be said that one party had consented to fight the other. The intention, indeed, was not to fight at all, but to overawe the other party to submission by the show of force. In such a case, the question of consent does not arise, though, if death is caused, it may be a question what offence the combatants had committed. The subject will be found discussed under s. 299.<sup>6</sup>

804. Unintelligent Consent.—The second paragraph deals with the semblance of consent which is, however, not the real consent as understood in law. If a person consents to an act, "the nature and consequence" of which he does not understand, his consent is inoperative and ineffectual. The meaning of the phrase

(1) Fletcher, 28 L. J. M. C. 85; Charles Fletcher, L. R. 1 C. C. R. 39; Barret, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 83.

(2) Nichols, Russ. & Ry. 130.

(3) Day, 9 C. & P. 722; Lock, L. R. 2 C. C. R. 10

(4) Kukier Mather, (unrep.) cited in Shamshere Khan, 6 C. 154.

(5) Shamshere Khan, 6 C. 154.

(6) Rahimuddin, 5 C. 31; Naamuddiny

“nature and consequence” of an act has been before explained (s. 83). It is used here in the same sense.

805. Evidence of Consent.—The question whether there was consent in a given transaction is necessarily one of fact depending upon the facts of each case. As consent justifies an act otherwise criminal, it has to be pleaded and proved by the defence. But the evidence required and given will vary in each case. Where the consent pleaded is express, it must be so established. But the accused is not bound by any technical rules of pleading, and if he establishes consent of any kind, it would be sufficient. The quantum of evidence required in a criminal case is not greater than or different to that required in a civil suit.<sup>1</sup> As consent is a mental act it is idle to speak of “physical consent”—a phrase sometimes used to denote physical expression of consent, for “there can be no such thing as material consent and in the case of a rational being, it must be mental consent or nothing.”<sup>2</sup> The Code speaks of consent as express or implied, or as consent simply, in which case too the term would appear to have been used to mean consent, whether express or implied. The evidence of implied consent may consist of acts, circumstances and conduct from which the Court may infer at least a state of mind not opposed to the act. In some cases implied consent may be merely a fiction, that is to say, it may be based upon a mere presumption, unconnected with the actual state of one’s mind (§ 765).

806. Consent of a child.—This section prescribes an age limit for consent in that it enacts that a child under twelve years of age is incapable of giving consent “unless the contrary appears from the context,” i.e., unless any provisions of the Code mentioning consent permit of a different interpretation.<sup>3</sup>

91. The exceptions in sections 87, 88 and 89 do not extend to acts which are offences independently of any harm which they may cause, or be intended to cause, or be known to be likely to cause, to the person giving the consent, or on whose behalf the consent is given.

Illustration.

Causing miscarriage (unless caused in good faith for the purpose of saving the life of the woman) is an offence independently of any harm which it may cause or be intended to cause to the woman. Therefore, it is not an offence “by reason of such harm,” and the consent of the woman or of her guardian to the causing of such miscarriage does not justify the act.

[Benefit—See Explanation.      Good faith—s. 52.      Consent—s. 90.

Hurt—s. 319.      Grievous hurt—s. 320.]

807. Analogous Law.—This section is intended to explain the exceptions in which the operation of consent in condonation of crime is defined. It lays down that the condonation will not extend beyond the harm caused and the offence that the causing of that harm may constitute. The section is a recognition of the two great sub-divisions of crime, public offences and private offences. (vide § 768). Such are the offences against the State or its various departments or its currency or revenue offences, intended to produce public commotion or disturbance, acts intended to interfere with public convenience or to corrupt public morals which are all punishable regardless of the consent of any person who may have been incidentally affected by them. So the consent of an individual to obscene publications, indecent exhibitions and public nuisances has no effect on the criminal responsibility of the persons guilty of them. So again, in cases of affrays and riots consent of the individuals harmed thereby is no answer to the crime which affects the society generally. Duels and prize-fights afford other instances of offences in which the measure of criminality is not the harm consented to or caused to an individual.

808. The case of the offence of miscarriage given in the illustration furnishes another, though not a very apt, example of the operation of the rule. With regard to this offence, there are two theories. It is, on the one hand, contended that the offence partakes of its public character on account of the injury caused to the child, and as affecting society, by preventing the increase of its population. It is on the other hand, said that the injury both to society and the child is too remote, to be penal, but the unsoundness of this view is apparent, since an operation which is both dangerous to the life of the mother as well as deterrent to the progress of population cannot be regarded but as unlawful, regardless of the consent of the mother.

(1) Anunto Ruruagat, 6 W. R. 57 (58).

(2) Dee, 15 Cox C. C. 594.

(3) Khalil-ur-Rahman, 11 R. 213 (222, 223) F. B.

809. The same policy underlies the classification of offences made in the Code of Criminal Procedure between “non-compoundable” and “compoundable” offences, the former being offences in which the consent of the individual directly affected is insufficient to exculpate the offender, the latter being those in which the party wronged is permitted to exonerate the wrong-doer.

810. The illustration quotes the expression “by reason of such harm,” used in sections 87, 88 and 89, in a way which would seem to suggest that the section is naturally implied in those sections, which it is not. If it were, the illustration would have been sufficient without the section.

92. Nothing is an offence by reason of any harm which it may cause to a person for whose benefit it is done in good faith, even without that person’s consent, if the circumstances are such that it is impossible for that person to signify consent, or if that person is incapable of giving consent, and has no guardian or other person in lawful charge of him from whom it is possible to obtain consent in time for the thing to be done with benefit :

Act done in good faith for benefit of a person without consent.

Provided—

First.—That this exception shall not extend to the intentional causing of death, or the attempting to cause death ;

Secondly.—That this exception shall not extend to the doing of anything which the person doing it knows to be likely to cause death, for any purpose other than the preventing of death, or grievous hurt or the curing of any grievous disease or infirmity ;

Thirdly.—That this exception shall not extend to the voluntary causing of hurt, or to the attempting to cause hurt, for any purpose other than the preventing of death or hurt ;

Fourthly.—That this exception shall not extend to the abetment of any offence, to the committing of which offence it would not extend.

Illustrations.

(a) Z is thrown from his horse, and is insensible. A, a surgeon, finds that Z requires to be trepanned. A, not intending Z’s death, but in good faith, for Z’s benefit, performs the trepan before Z recovers his power of judging for himself. A has committed no offence.

(b) Z is carried off by a tiger. A fires at the tiger knowing it to be likely that the shot may kill Z, but not intending to kill Z, and in good faith intending Z’s benefit. A’s ball gives Z a mortal wound. A has committed no offence.

(c) A, a surgeon, sees a child suffer an accident which is likely to prove fatal unless an operation be immediately performed. There is not time to apply to the child’s guardian. A performs the operation in spite of the entreaties of the child, intending, in good faith, the child’s benefit. A has committed no offence.

(d) A is in a house which is on fire, with Z, a child. People below hold out a blanket. A drops the child from the house-top, knowing it to be likely that the fall may kill the child, but not intending to kill the child, and intending, in good faith, the child’s benefit. Here, even if the child is killed by the fall, A has committed no offence.

Explanation.—Mere pecuniary benefit is not benefit within the meaning of sections 88, 89 and 92.

811. Analogous Law.—In its natural sequence this section should have found a place next after section 89. It deals with cases of emergency and not covered by that section. It was thus justified by the Draft Committee : “There yet remains a kindred class of cases which are by no means of a rare occurrence. For example a person falls down in an apoplectic fit. Bleeding alone can save him and he is unable to signify his consent to be bled. The surgeon who bleeds him commits an act falling under the definition of an offence. The surgeon is not the patient's guardian, and has no authority from any such guardian; yet it is evident that the surgeon ought not to be punished. Again, a house is on fire. A person snatches up a child too young to understand the danger, and flings it from the house-top, with a faint hope that it may be caught by a blanket below but with the knowledge that it is highly probable that it will be dashed to pieces. Here, though the child may be killed by the fall, though the person who threw it down knew that it would very probably be killed, and though he was not the child's parent or guardian, he ought not to be punished. In these examples there is what may be called a temporary guardianship, justified by the exigency of the case and by the humanity of the motive. This temporary guardianship bears a considerable analogy to that temporary magistracy with which the law invests every person who is present when a great crime is committed or when the public peace is concerned. To acts done in the exercise of this temporary guardianship, we extend by clause 72 (now 92), a protection very similar to that which we have given to the acts of regular guardians."<sup>1</sup>

812. Four illustrations are appended to the section, to which the following may also be added :—

(a) A is rendered insensible by an accident which makes it necessary to amputate one of his limbs before he recovers his senses. The amputation of his limb without his consent is no offence.

(b) If the accident made him mad, the amputation in spite of his resistance would be no offence.

(c) B is drowning and insensible. A, in order to save his life, pulls him out of the water with a hook which injures him. This is no offence.<sup>2</sup>

813. Principle.—This section enacts a rule which carries its own defence. The four exceptions added were added because it was considered inexpedient to give unlimited power to officious interference with one's self, however benevolent. They demand that the interference shall be to save life, not to imperil it, and no one has a right to interfere with another unless he is reasonably certain of doing more good than harm.

814 Meaning of Words.—“By reason of any harm” : This phrase has been used in sections 87, 88 and 89, and in the illustration to section 91. It refers to cases in which the mere causing of harm alone constitutes an offence. “For whose benefit” : As the explanation adds, this does not mean a mere pecuniary benefit. It does not also mean a spiritual benefit. “If the circumstances are such.” These circumstances may have affected his mind or power of speech or thought. A man gagged and wrongfully confined may be in such a predicament. “It is possible to obtain consent in time,” of which the person aiding will be the sole judge.

815. Beneficial Act Without Consent.—This section deals with those cases in which the exigency of the case requires prompt assistance, in which the formality of consent might delay the benefit till it is too late. The acts authorized without consent are therefore only such acts as from their urgency call for immediate relief, in which no one will think of pausing for consent before rendering assistance. Indeed, in such cases the dictates of humanity prescribe a rule far higher than the one recognised by the criminal law. For who will think of asking consent to justify an interference in a quarrel between two persons, and would it be wrongful confinement if the timely interference of a stranger prevents the combatants from coming to blows? These are trivial cases which may be excused under section 95, but nevertheless they illustrate the first principle in the law of consent which underlies civil as well as criminal law. For, civil law as much welcomes the presence of a stranger<sup>3</sup> as the section under discussion. In both the cardinal rule to be observed is that (i) his interference was necessary ; (ii) that it was beneficial ; and (iii) that

(1) Note B, Reprint, p. 109.

(2) Stephen's Cr. Law, Art. 226.

(3) Eg., s. 69, Indian Contract Act (Act

IX of 1872) ; s. 95, Transfer of Property Act (Act IV of 1882).

it was made when consent was unavailable. The four exceptions appended to the section are self-explanatory. The first exception requires that under no circumstance shall a person intentionally cause the death of another or attempt to cause it. The exception is self-evident, but by no means supererogatory. A person may find himself surrounded by robbers who make a criminal assault on his daughter, whereupon he decides to kill her to save her from the disgrace. So a person may offer his child in sacrifice, believing that it will be to its spiritual benefit. So, again, while a person may not intend another's death, he may risk his life without calculating its cost. This is safeguarded by the second exception. The third exception enunciates the salutary rule that the hurt caused shall in no case exceed the hurt to be averted, which is another way of saying that the interference shall not cause more harm than good. The last exception is directed against assistance rendered for an unlawful purpose. The case of a number of eunuchs having caused the death of a person in trying to emasculate him may be cited by way of an illustration. In that case the deceased desired to emasculate himself and for that purpose employed an old eunuch who, however, performed the operation by cutting off his private parts without ligatures with the result that the patient died from bleeding. It was held that the accused were all guilty.<sup>1</sup> (§ 780)

93. No communication made in good faith is an offence by reason of any harm to the person to whom it is made, if it is made for the benefit of that person.

Illustration.

A, a surgeon, in good faith, communicates to a patient his opinion that he cannot live. The patient dies in consequence of the shock. A has committed no offence, though he knew it to be likely that the communication might cause the patient's death.

[ Person—s. 11.

Good faith—s. 52.

Harm—§ 874.]

816. Analogous Law.—A communication made in good faith may amount to defamation,<sup>2</sup> or it may perhaps amount to hurt,<sup>3</sup> or more. The section sets at rest any doubt that may exist on the subject by protecting all communications made in good faith.

817. Principle.—Two things are essential to protect a person under this section: First, the communication must be made in good faith, and secondly, it must be made for the benefit of that person. It is not clear how the illustration given answers this second requirement. A doctor may be under the painful necessity of giving his patient a timely warning of his approaching dissolution, to enable him to settle up his worldly affairs, to arrange for his succession, and in such a case speaking broadly it will be "for the benefit of that person," though the resultant shock may kill him. But without any such paramount necessity a communication which merely hastens his patient's death without doing his estate any good could scarcely be regarded as entitled to any exceptional privilege.

818. The word "benefit" has been here used undoubtedly in its large sense as including both personal or pecuniary benefit where death is inevitable; it will be to the patient's pecuniary benefit that he should be warned of it betimes, so that he may have time to settle up disputes which may avert the ruin of his fortune. Such a communication may even be for the personal benefit of the patient if it induces him to submit to a treatment of the last resort.

94. Except murder, and offences against the State punishable, with death, nothing is an offence which is done by a person who is compelled to do it by threats which, at the time of doing it, reasonably cause the apprehension that instant death to that person will otherwise be the consequence: Provided the person doing the act did not of his own accord, or from a reasonable apprehension of harm to himself short of instant death, place himself in the situation by which he became subject to such constraint.

(1) Baboolun Hijrah, 5 W. R. 7.

(2) S. 499, post.

(3) S. 319, post.

Explanation 1.—A person who, of his own accord, or by reason of a threat of being beaten, joins a gang of dacoits, knowing their character is not entitled to the benefit of this exception, on the ground of his having been compelled by his associates to do anything that is an offence by law.

Explanation 2.—A person seized by a gang of dacoits, and forced by threat of instant death, to do a thing which is an offence by law, for example a smith compelled to take his tools and to force the door of a house for the dacoits to enter and plunder it, is entitled to the benefit of this exception.

[ Offences against the State—Ch. VI, ss. 121-130.

Murder—s. 300. ]

819. Analogous Law.—This section is narrower than the English Law under which, except in cases of treason and homicide, a person who has been forced to commit an offence by fear of death or of grievous bodily harm is exempt. The fear of having houses burnt, or goods spoiled, is no excuse in the eye of the law for joining and marching with rebels,<sup>1</sup> though an actual force upon the person and present fear of death may form such excuse, provided they continue all the time during which the party remains with the rebels.<sup>2</sup> As Blackstone observed: "A sixth species of defect of will is that arising from compulsion and inevitable necessity. These are a constraint upon the will, whereby a man is urged to do that which his judgment disapproves; and which it is to be presumed his will (if left to itself) would reject. As punishments are therefore only inflicted for abuse of that free will which God has given to man, it is highly just and equitable that a man should be excused for those acts which are done through unavoidable force and compulsion."<sup>3</sup> Of this nature there is the obligation of civil subjection, whereby the inferior has to obey the behests of his superior as where the State commands its subjects to do an act contrary to religion and sound morality. "The sheriff, who burnt Latimer and Ridley, in bigoted days of Queen Mary, was not liable to punishment from Elizabeth for executing so horrid an offence, being justified by the commands of that magistracy which endeavoured to restore superstition under the holy auspices of its merciless sister, persecution."<sup>4</sup> So in the case of persons in private relations the principal case where constraint of a superior is allowed as an excuse for criminal misconduct proceed upon the matrimonial subjection of the wife to her husband, which the law, indeed, presumes so great that she is exempt from punishment for theft or even a burglary if committed in her husband's company.<sup>5</sup> But this is only a presumption, and even as such it only applies to minor offences to mala qua prohibita and not mala in se, such as treason, murder or robbery, in which, apart from her husband's coercion, she is equally responsible.<sup>6</sup>

820. In this respect this section lays down a rule widely divergent according to which no compulsion justifies murder and offences against the State punishable with death, but compulsion may justify other offences if the compulsion was not self-invited. (§ 824).

821. Principle.—"Criminal law," wrote Sir James Stephen, "is itself a system of compulsion on the widest scale. It is a collection of threats of injury to life, liberty and property if people do commit a crime. Are such threats to be withdrawn as soon as they are encountered by opposing threats? The law says to a man intending to commit murder, if you do it, I will hang you. Is the law to withdraw its threat if some one else says, if you do not do it, I will shoot you?"

822. "Surely it is at the moment when temptation to crime is strongest that the law should speak most clearly and emphatically to the contrary. It is, of course, a misfortune for a man that he should be placed between two fires, but it would be a much greater misfortune for society at large if criminals could confer impunity upon their agents by threatening them with death or violence if they refused to

(1) MacGrowther's case, 18 St. Tr.

391.

(2) 1 Hale P. C. 44 (516); 1 Hawk P. C.,

c. 1, s. 14.

(3) 3 Black, 27.

(4) 4 Black, p. 28.

(5) Ib; 1 Hale P. C. 45; 1 Hawk, P. C.,

c. 1, s. 9.

(6) Buncombe, 1 Cox C. C. 183.

execute their commands. If impunity could be so secured, a wide door would be opened to collusion, and encouragement would be given to associations of malefactors, secret or otherwise."<sup>1</sup>

823. Meaning of Words.—“Threats which at the time of doing it, etc.,” that is, the apprehension of instant death must be present at the time of the act. The person must be under the belief that he is to do or die. “Provided the person did not of his own accord,” as in the case contemplated in Explanation 1. Having joined a gang of dacoits, a person could not then plead compulsion, for his initial act was illegal, and one which he was by no means bound to do. “Seized by a gang of dacoits,” i.e., unawares; not if the smith was one of the party but unwilling to force the door.

824. Crime under Compulsion.—This section enunciates a simple rule
(1) When Compulsion is No Defence. under which law recognizes the presence of compulsion as a defence to criminality. It enacts that no compulsion can justify murder and offences against the State punishable with death. As regards the first, no man has a right to take another's life to save his own<sup>2</sup> (§ 664). As regards the second, the State has the right to insure its own preservation by enacting deterrent pains and penalties. In this respect all States do not take the same view of their rights and responsibilities. Indeed, in England, the law in this respect has long since settled to be different. So MacGrowther who was tried for high treason in 1746, for having joined the Duke of Perth in arms against the King, proved that being a tenant of the Duke he had been compelled by him to join the rebel army, who had threatened to burn his house and to destroy his cattle and corn, and that several of the Duke's men came and threatened him with destruction and bound him with cords till he consented to serve as a lieutenant of the Duke's rebel regiment, whereupon Lee, C.J., told the jury that there is not, nor ever was, any tenure which obliged tenants to follow their Lords into rebellion. And as to the matter of force, he said, that the fear of having houses burnt, or goods spoiled, is no excuse in the eye of the law for joining and marching with rebels. “The only force that doth excuse is force upon the person and present fear of death, and this force and fear must continue all the time the party remains with the rebels. It is incumbent on every man, who makes force his defence, to shew an actual force, and that he quitted the service as soon as he could.”<sup>3</sup> Such force will not excuse joining in a rebellion in this country. In other words, English Law permits a man to save his life at the expense of the State, but in India the State demands that it shall be preserved, it may be at the expense of its subjects. But offences against the State to which compulsion is no answer are only those punishable with death. There is only one such offence in the Code, that of waging war against the King,<sup>4</sup> and the only sections to which this section is inapplicable are sections 121 and 302.<sup>5</sup>

825. With these exceptions the rule here enunciated applies. It lays down
(2) When Compulsion is a Defence. that an act committed by a person under the fear of instant death is not a crime. But this fear must be present at the time of the act. If it preceded the act, it ceased to exercise the influence which alone entitles a person to exoneration.<sup>6</sup> So where certain persons admitted having perjured themselves to incriminate a person of murder because they had been so tutored by the Police, the defence was rejected, because they were under no compulsion to make the statements which they did, and which would have had the effect of sending an innocent man to the gallows.<sup>7</sup> Indeed, in permitting a man to commit a crime for the sake of his life, law does not by any means set an exalted standard of morality before the people, but law is a corrector of evil and not a moralist and it never places before itself a standard of altruism which people will not generally find it easy to follow. If it did so, law will soon be honoured in its breach than by its observance. It has, therefore, been enacted that self-preservation shall be a defence,

(1) 2 His. Cor. L. 107.

(4) S. 121, post.

(2) Dudley and Stephens, 14 Q. B. D. 273 ;
Umar Din, 3 L. L. J. 287, 67 I. C. 340.

(5) Aung Hla, 9 R. 404.

(3) MacGrowther, 18 St. Tr. 301 (393, 394) . (1925) A. 315.

followed in Aung Hla, 9 R. 404.

(6) MacGrowther, 18 St. Tr. 301 ; Autar,

(7) Sonoo, 10 W. R. 48.

but a defence only when it was a case of self-preservation. Where, therefore, certain persons offered bribes to classers of the revenue survey, alleging that the bribes were paid under the influence of threats held out by the accused of raising the assessment, cutting down the hedges, and erecting new boundary marks, it was held that the bribe-givers were all accomplices, as nothing but fear of instant death could excuse their crime.<sup>1</sup> But the person may not be threatened with death, and yet the person paying the money need not necessarily be an accomplice. Such a case would arise where the offence discloses facts constituting the offence of extortion.<sup>2</sup> Of course, this section only lays down the general rule, and it is subject to the special provisions of other parts of the Code.

826. In order, however, to entitle a person to avail himself of the general exemption here provided for, he must bring his case strictly within its compass. He must not only show that he was not a voluntary agent, but he must further show that he was given no alternative but to do or die. On this subject people have curiously very vague notions in this country. They seem to think that compulsion, whether physical or moral, of any degree, is sufficient to justify their crime. A policeman is no more justified in torturing a man to death, simply because he had been ordered to do so, by his superior,<sup>3</sup> than a robber can justify his act on the plea that he had to obey his fellow confederates. If this had been a sufficient justification, law would be robbed of its most salutary check, for necessity would be made "the legal cloak for unbridled passion and atrocious crime."<sup>4</sup> Necessity, short of the threat of death, does not, therefore, excuse a crime, though as a matter of judicial propriety it will necessarily mitigate the punishment.<sup>5</sup>

827. Even where a person is shewn to have acted under the fear of instant death, still, it must be shewn that the predicament into which he found himself was not brought about by himself. As the authors of the Code wrote: "If a captain of a merchantman were to run his ship on shore in order to cheat the insurers and then to sacrifice the lives of others in order to save himself from a danger created by his own villainy; if a person who had joined himself to a gang of dacoits with no other intention than that of robbing, were, at the command of his leader accompanied with threats of instant death, in case of disobedience, to commit murder, though unwillingly, the case would be widely different, and our former reasoning would cease to apply; for it is evident that punishment, which is inefficacious to prevent a man from yielding to a certain temptation may often be efficacious to prevent him from exposing himself to that temptation. We cannot count on the fear, which a man may entertain of being brought to the gallows at some distant time, as sufficient to overcome the fear of instant death; but the fear of remote punishment may often overcome the motives which induce a man to league himself with lawless companions, in whose society no person who shrinks from any atrocity that they may command can be certain of his life. Nothing is more usual than for pirates, gang robbers and rioters to excuse their crimes by declaring that they were in dread of their associates and durst not act otherwise. Nor is it by any means improbable that this may often be true. Nay, it is not improbable that crews of pirates and gangs of robbers may have committed crimes which every one among them was unwilling to commit, under the influence of mutual fear, but we think it clear that this circumstance ought not to exempt them from the full severity of the law."<sup>6</sup> No man from a fear of consequences to himself has a right to make himself a party to committing mischief on mankind.<sup>7</sup>

828. The only exception that justifies a person to participate in crime is a reasonable fear of instant death, not a mere threat which may or may not be carried into

(1) Maganlal, 14 B. 131; Ss. 363 & 384.

(2) Ss. 363, 384.

(3) Devji Govindji, 20 B. 215.

(4) Dudley, 14 Q. B. D. 273.

(5) 2 Stephen Cr. L. 107.

(6) Note B, Reprint, p. 112.

(7) Tyler, 8 C. & P. 616 (620); Maganlal, 14 B. 131 (132); Devji Govindji, 20 B. 215 (222, 223); Killikyatara, 19 I. C. (M) 207 execution but a threat which precedes action, and an action which can only be averted by associating in the crime. The question whether the act of a person was prompted by such a fear is a question of fact depending on the circumstances of each case. But whatever the facts, three essential points must be clearly established to justify an act: (a) that the person did not voluntarily expose himself to the constraint; (b) that the fear which prompted his action was the fear of instant death; and (c) that the act itself was done at a time when he was left no option but to do it or die. The threat couched in a resolution as of an anarchist meeting that a certain member shall murder a certain personage, failing which, his head is prescribed, is, therefore, threat of certain death, but not of an instant death. It is, moreover, not a threat at all but a condition of membership, of which all members had timely notice. No anarchist can therefore complain that he was the victim of coercion. The question whether a person was a particeps criminis or merely an involuntary agent will therefore depend upon his previous relations with the other criminals, and upon the circumstances which threw him in their company upon the threats given and resistance made, and the chances that there were of his dying at their hands if he did not submit to their will.

829. The fact that a person was coerced into joining a gang of ruffians may be a sufficient excuse, if he had been presented with the certain alternative of death in case of refusal. The mere fact that a gang of dacoits threatened to beat a recruit is no reason for joining it. But if the gang had personated, say a marriage-procession or officers of Government on duty, the case would be otherwise. For he had then joined a lawful assembly as he then considered it. And if the gang afterwards threw up the mask, and compelled him to commit a crime, he must still resist, but must not be a willing tool in their hands, for his duty is even then to mankind. It is only when his will is dominated by the fear of instant death that he is permitted to plead necessity in justification of his crime. The mere fear of beating or other personal violence is not a reason for swelling the ranks of criminals. If such a reason were sufficient, it existed in MacGrowther's case,<sup>1</sup> but they were considered wholly insufficient. (§ 824).

830. But where a person does not join a gang but is physically overpowered to join it, and is then compelled by a threat of instant death to work for it, he cannot be held responsible, for his will was never given a free play, as he was himself overpowered by physical force. Such is the case of the smith mentioned elsewhere.

831. It will be observed that the section makes no special reference to femme covert. Their case will therefore be judged by the general rule.<sup>2</sup>

95. Nothing is an offence by reason that it causes, or that it is intended to cause, or that it is known to be likely to cause, any harm, if that harm is so slight that no person of ordinary sense and temper would complain of such harm.

Act causing slight harm.

[ Intended to cause—s. 35. Known to be likely to cause harm—§§ 667-669.]

832. Analogous Law.—This section is the legal recognition of the maxim De minimus non curat lex.<sup>3</sup> So the authors observe: "Clause 73<sup>4</sup> is intended to provide for those cases which, though, from the imperfections of language, they fall within the letter of the penal law, are yet not within its spirit, and are all over the world considered by the public and for the most part dealt with by the tribunals as incorrect. As our definitions are framed, it is theft to dip a pen in another man's ink, mischief to crumble one of his wafers, an assault to cover him with a cloud of dust by riding past him, hurt to incommode him by pressing against him in getting into a carriage. There are innumerable acts without performing which men cannot live together in society, acts which all men constantly do and suffer in turn,

(1) 18 St. Tr. 391.

(First Report, ss. 153, 154).

(2) This omission must have been intentional, for it was noticed and advertised upon by the Law Commissioners

(3) "Law does not care about trifles."

(4) Now, s. 95.

and which it is desirable that they should do and suffer in turn, yet which differ only in degree from crimes. That these acts ought not to be treated as crimes is evident, and we think it far better to except them from the penal clauses of the Code than to leave it to the Judges to except them in practice ; for if the Code is silent on the subject the Judges can except these cases only by resorting to one of two practices which we consider as most pernicious, by making law, or by wresting the meaning of the law from its plain meaning." <sup>1</sup>

833. The Madras Regulations <sup>2</sup> as to trivial offences remain unaffected by the section, which has no application where the act charged is an offence irrespective of whether the accused intended to cause or knew himself likely to cause harm.<sup>3</sup> It has, consequently, no application to offences under special or local laws,<sup>4</sup> which are dictated by a different policy.

834. Principle.—Law does not busy itself about unconsidered trifles. It should be stultifying itself if it concerned itself with matters too trivial to demand its notice about which men in their ordinary frame of mind do not complain. Indeed, men living in society must suffer some inconveniences and transgressions without which indeed no society is possible. It will be an idle travesty of law to deal with such delinquencies as if they were crimes. The Code has, therefore, rightly exempted them from that category.

835. Meaning of Words.—“Intended to cause..... any harm” : Even the intentional causing of harm is here excused because of its triviality. The word “harm” here means injury of any kind, including injury to mind, body or property. “No person of ordinary sense and temper,” and belonging to the same class as the complainant and under the circumstances, would complain. Two friends may take liberties with each other, which, as strangers, they would have resented. So, while a friend may walk into another’s library and carry away a newspaper, a stranger doing the same would be guilty of theft.

836. Negligible Wrongs.—This section is intended to exempt from criminality offences which, from their triviality, do not deserve the name of crimes. In one sense they are crimes because they fall within the general definition of crimes and, as such, but for this section, they would be punishable. Indeed, the section has no application, unless the act in question is otherwise a crime under the Code.<sup>5</sup> If there was no offence under the Code, there is no need to apply the section, where, for instance, the accused, a servant, was ordered by his employers to take certain bags of waste paper and forms belonging to him to his yard in a certain place, and there to burn and destroy them. And the accused carried the bags but to his own house, where he kept them presumably for sale. He was prosecuted for criminal breach of trust, and the question was, whether the act of the accused was justifiable under this section. It was conceded that the paper was worthless to the employer and its destruction was ordered to prevent designing men from misusing it for the purpose of committing forgery, whereupon the Court held that, as the act of the accused did not amount to an offence, there was no need to resort to the provisions of this section.<sup>6</sup> This case undoubtedly proceeded upon the assumption that the relinquishment by the owner of his dominion over the bags had the effect of making the bags no man’s property, the appropriation of which could not therefore be a crime. So where the Health Department of Government condemned as rotten a consignment of rice, and ordered its officers to destroy it, whereupon the latter appropriated it without destroying it, it was held that as the rice had ceased to be the property of the Government, the accused could not be convicted of criminal breach of trust, though they may have been guilty of disobedience of departmental rules.<sup>7</sup>

(1) Note B, Reprint, pp. 109, 110.

(2) Reg. XI of 1816, s. 10; Reg. IV of 1821, s. 6.

(3) John Scott, 1 N. L. R. 139.

(4) See s. 40, ante.

(5) Preo Nath, 29 C. 489.

(6) Ib.

(7) Wilkinson, 2 C. W. N. 216 ; followed in Preo Nath, 29 C. 489.

837. Where, however, the facts point to an offence, the section is applicable only if the facts disclosed make it an offence of a trivial character. The triviality of an offence, however, must not be judged solely by the measure of harm, for it depends equally upon other considerations. A soldier striking his officer in anger commits an offence, the heinousness of which cannot be determined by the injury directly caused to the officer. Such assaults, if suffered, will be wholly subversive of military discipline, and they are therefore considered fit for exemplary punishment. This was the ratio decidendi of a case in which a dismissed policeman approached his Superintendent in office and asked him what had been done in the matter of his petition for reinstatement. The Superintendent replied that it had been rejected; thereupon the accused lost control of his temper and struck the Superintendent a blow across his chest with an umbrella which he had in his hand; whereupon he was convicted under section 323 of the Code and sentenced to a year's imprisonment. And conviction and sentence was affirmed on the ground that though the pain caused by the blow might have been trivial, still as it was a blow struck in anger and was accompanied by language of a most violent kind, it could not be treated as a case under this section.<sup>1</sup> A person may pull another by the ear and the case would be one under this section, if the two persons were friends and the pulling was done in sport or by way of gentle admonition. But where an official superior pulls the ear of his subordinate in a quarrel, the case is then one which cannot be so lightly passed over.<sup>2</sup> In this case the complainant having attended the office late, the accused called him into his room and assaulted and insulted him by pulling him by the ear, whereupon the complainant moved for a summons for assault, which the Court held could not be refused. So while it will be an assault of an aggravated kind if a stranger caught hold of the hand of a modest maiden, while passing along a public thoroughfare, the case would be different where the woman was of a questionable character, and the hand was caught in jest, though it had the effect of arresting her movement and causing her annoyance.<sup>3</sup> The object with which an act was done, no less than the relationship in which a party stood to another, will then determine the nature and degree of the crime.

838. A thing may be valueless to one person, but it may have quite a different value to another. For example, a rough jotting of accounts between two persons in the handwriting of the obligor may have no value to the latter, but it may be a piece of valuable evidence to the obligee. Where therefore it was in the custody of the obligee as a token of the obligor's indebtedness, the latter would be guilty of destroying a valuable security, if he tore it up in the course of an altercation with his creditor.<sup>4</sup> And the fact that the account sheet was unstamped, and therefore inadmissible for the enforcement of any legal claim, would be immaterial. For though it was not a valuable security, still, since it purported to be a valuable security, the wanton act of the accused became an offence under section 477 from which this section offered no escape.<sup>5</sup> So a person who made away with cancelled cheques which were to be filed as exhibits in a case, could not plead exemption under this section, on the ground of their intrinsic worthlessness, because, though in themselves valueless, they furnished valuable evidence of payments, which fact could not be ignored in judging of the gravity of the accused's crime.<sup>6</sup>

839. Again law does not regard the same offence in the same light in every case. Reference has been made before to offences relating to property exposed to view or lying in the open, thefts of which are treated with special severity (§§ 391, 392). This must be the underlying reason in the case in which the Court refused to apply this section to the theft of dung cakes worth one pie and mangoes worth three pies from

(1) Sheo Gholam, 24 W. R. 67.

(2) Walmsley, 1 C. W. N., cxxxiv.

(3) Bhairon Misar, (1887) A. W. N. 73.

(4) Ramasami, 12 M. 148.

(5) Ramasami, 12 M. 148, followed on this last point, Kashi Nath Naek, 25 C. 207, to the same effect Kapalavaya, 2 M. H. C. R. 247; 7 M. H. C. R., App. xxvi; Maula Baksh, 27 A. 28.

(6) Maula Baksh, 27 A. 28.

the field of the complainant.<sup>1</sup> Such a case is easily distinguishable from one in which the accused was charged with theft of some pods of trees from Government ground, which were of no value to Government.<sup>2</sup> Such also will be the case where persons pluck fruit or leaves from road side trees. So where a person dug some earth from an open piece of private ground, the earth so appropriated having hardly any appreciable value, the Court regarded the case as a fit one to be disposed of under this section;<sup>3</sup> the same view was taken in another case in which a person had lopped off the branch of a tree overhanging his house, because it inconvenienced him.<sup>4</sup>

840. The ordinary terms of abuse do not constitute an insult and would be covered by this rule, since no one takes them seriously.<sup>5</sup> Moreover, the harm caused by defamatory or insulting words may be so slight as to call in the aid of this section. Where two pleaders in the midst of a case quarrelled over a remark made by one conveying an imputation on the other, whereupon the latter retaliated by calling him a "liar," the Court considered the case sufficiently met by the section.<sup>6</sup> So where the guard of a train asked a passenger for his ticket, stating that he suspected him of travelling without a ticket, the Court threw out the passenger's suit for damages on the ground that the matter was too trivial to call for damages.<sup>7</sup> It was found as a fact in the case that the guard had used the words bona fide, and his suspicion was not altogether unfounded, which was really the saving grace in his case; otherwise the verdict would have been probably different. So where a man was falsely charged with the theft of a goat, he was held justified in prosecuting his accuser of defamation, and the fact that he was a man of low caste could not bring his case within this exception. "The false accusation was one against the moral character of the prosecutor, defamatory in its nature, and presumably made with knowledge and intent to harm or injure the prosecutor, and unless shown to have been made in good faith, renders the party making it liable to be charged with the offence of defamation."<sup>8</sup> So to write of a man as a kulbhrashta<sup>9</sup> or to impute a Hindu that he is an out-caste<sup>10</sup> in a published work would be clearly defamatory.<sup>11</sup>

841. There are some injuries which are from their very nature trivial, as where a person distorts his mouth and smiles at another<sup>12</sup> or where one indulges in practical jokes, in which case the criminality of the act will be judged by the intention and the harm actually caused. So where two disputants challenged each other to a fight in the open, brandishing their sticks, the Court dismissed the case as one covered by this section taking the demonstration as in the nature of sparring, with no intention to fight.<sup>13</sup> A stranger entered a pleader's room attached to a Court in order to see a pleader. One of the pleaders objected to the entry of a stranger reserved for pleaders only, but as the stranger persisted in refusing to leave it he was ejected. He re-entered the room when the objecting pleader abused him, apologizing very shortly afterwards. The stranger prosecuted him for insult but the Court held that in view of the previous provocation to and the subsequent apology by the pleader the case fell under this section.<sup>14</sup> The accused killed a goat by twisting its

(1) Ranchore, 1888 B. M. J. 400.

(2) Kasya 5 B. H. C. R. 35; Mahomed Khan, 8 C. P. L. R. 15.

(3) Gulzarilal, (1882) A. W. N. 229.

(4) Jiwa Ram, (1881) A. W. N. 100; Mahomed Khan, 8 C. P. L. R. 15.

(5) Sharif Ahmed v. Qabul Singh, 43 A. 497. Bhagirath v. Saiyad Ali (1931) C. 392. Jas Raja Jagga, (1929) L. 234.

(6) Vansitart, (1883) A. W. N. 46; Shrif Ahmed v. Qabul Singh, 43 A. 497; Philip Rangel, 56 C. 196; Atwa Singh, (1926) L. 412; Mg. Sein, (1927) R. 23.

(7) South Indian Railway Co. v. Ramkrishna, 13 M. 34; Abdul Rashid, (1929) A. 940.

(8) Per Trevor and Loch, JJ., in Nobin

Dome, 2 W. R. 35 (36).

(9) Lit. Kul, family, and Bhrashta, defiles—one who defiles the family, one who is a disgrace to the family by doing an act condemned by the tenets of religion or morality.

(10) Mohan Lal v. Ramcharan, (1928) A. 213.

(11) Ramanuja v. Prathirvatti, 12 I. C. (M.) 217.

(12) Brain's case, 1 Hale, P. C. 455; Cro. Eliz, 578, in which, however, the prisoner had killed the man, and it was held to be murder.

(13) Parma Singh, 9 I. C. (C.) 586.

(14) Moro Balwant, 22 I. C. (B.) 158; Abdul Rahiman, 36 I. C. (M.) 142.

neck and not by cutting off its throat. He exposed its carcass for sale, which was objected to by Mahomedans but the Court dismissed that complaint holding that though the mode of killing might be obnoxious to their religious feeling the accused was doing it for a living and he could not therefore be convicted under s. 298.<sup>1</sup>

842. While the rule is then applicable to all trifling injuries whether they relate to one's person, reputation, or property, still these are cases in which Law holds the rule inapplicable. Such is the case of intangible immovable property rights in which could not be protected by permitting petty encroachments. Consequently a commoner may maintain an action for an injury to the common against a person who merely walked over it.<sup>2</sup> "That if a commoner could not maintain an action of this sort, a mere wrong-doer might by repeated torts in course of time establish evidence of a right of common."<sup>3</sup> In such cases law allows an action on the ground of the apprehended damage which the denial of the right might entail.<sup>4</sup> These were civil cases, but it is conceivable that the same reasoning may also support a criminal action. They are, however, exceptional cases and fall within the principle that a small mischief is actionable when its prevention would have the effect of preventing a greater mischief.

OF THE RIGHT OF PRIVATE DEFENCE.

Things done in private defence.

96. Nothing is an offence which is done in the exercise of the right of private defence.

843. Analogous Law.—The object of the group of these sections dealing with the right of self-defence agrees with the English general law,<sup>5</sup> though the Commissioners had noted in their report that owing to the lack of spirit displayed by men in this country they had further strengthened this law.<sup>6</sup>

844. Principle.—Self-help was the first rule of Criminal Law.<sup>7</sup> It still remains a rule, though in process of time much attenuated by considerations of necessity, humanity and social order. "The right of defence," wrote Bentham, "is absolutely necessary. The vigilance of magistrates can never make up for the vigilance of each individual on his own behalf. The fear of the law can never restrain bad men as the fear of the sum total of individual resistance. Take away this right and you become in so doing the accomplice of all bad men."<sup>8</sup> The eleven sections comprised in this sub-head codify the rules and limitations which are found floating in English Law. They are based on the cardinal principle that it is the first duty of man to help himself. It is next based on the principle that the Police of State is not ubiquitous, and a person may then strike out for himself, or for another. But such a rule, if unqualified, might encourage vendetta which would lead to social disorder. It therefore lays down the limits within which the rule applies, and the conditions to which it is subject. These conditions were the subject of extended controversy at the time the draft Bill was under consideration, but the clauses as framed, were found to be in substantial agreement with English Law, and were as such passed.

845. Plea of Private Defence.—This section is merely declaratory of a right in the abstract. It lays down that an act done in the exercise of the right of "private defence" is not an offence. It does not define that right, nor does it describe its extent and limitations. This is left to the subsequent sections. The

(1) Kirpa Singh, (1912) P. W. R. 26, 16 I. C. 169.

(2) Pindar v. Wordsworth, 2 East. 154.

(3) Ib., 162.

(4) Genger v. Lysaght, 49 L. T. 51; Robertson v. Hartopp, 42 Ch. D. 484 (500).

(5) First Report, § 146, Reprint, p. 227.

(6) Note B. Reprint, p. 110. These clauses were subjected to an exhaustive review by the Indian Law Commissioners (First Report, §§ 130, 162). But there is nothing in this discussion to elucidate the text. It is, indeed, wholly confined to answering objections, and justifying the clauses in the words of the authors themselves.

(7) See Introduction, to 1 Penal Law (4th Ed.)

(8) Bentham's Principles of Penal Laws.

right of private defence is, however, here declared to be a justification for a crime. But in order to be a justification, the crime must be complete without it. There is no right of private defence under this Code against an act which is not in itself an offence under it.<sup>1</sup> Consequently, there is no right of private defence against an act done in the exercise of that right.<sup>2</sup> But being an exception to general law, it must be pleaded and proved by the defence,<sup>3</sup> though such proof does not imply any evidence tendered by the defence, since it may equally be secured by the evidence of the prosecution or in the course of the cross-examination of their witnesses,<sup>4</sup> or by the statement of the accused.<sup>5</sup> It is competent to the accused to deny the act, and if proved, to justify it,<sup>6</sup> though in some cases the contrary has been maintained. So it is said: "No accused person can at the same time deny committing an act and justify it. The law does not admit of justification by putting forward hypothetical cases; it must be by proof of the actual facts."<sup>7</sup> The plea of private defence cannot, it is said, be listened to unless it is pleaded,<sup>8</sup> and the proper time to plead it is the first Court and not in appeal.<sup>9</sup> But even if so there is nothing to prevent its being raised even at a later stage before the close of the trial, unless it has the effect of springing surprise on the prosecution, in which case the Court will have to allow the prosecution a chance of meeting it. Of course, a Court cannot set up a plea of self-defence when the accused himself has not done so,<sup>10</sup> but if the facts are all there the Court is as much bound to apply the law as it is its duty to do so. And while it is true that the plea must be raised by the accused<sup>11</sup> still the Courts are reluctant to sacrifice justice to a mere technicality<sup>12</sup> unless there are other substantial objections to support it.<sup>13</sup>

846. The true rule appears to be that where a certain intention or knowledge is part of the definition of an offence it is on the prosecution to prove it and in proving it facts have to be necessarily ascertained upon which the accused is entitled to rely for disproof or mitigation of his offence no less than for proving his non-liability. In such case the question is not one of the burden of proof at all, but rather a question of what offence the evidence discloses. But where proof of the offence is complete, and independent evidence is required to disprove the offence, then the question of onus becomes material. Even in that case the accused may by cross-examination of the prosecution witnesses or otherwise establish his exceptional immunity from the crime, and if the facts are all there, and there is no question of surprise or unfairness to either side, the Court will permit the accused to establish his non-liability on the facts appearing on the record. But where the evidence is clear and unequivocal he cannot be permitted to take a line inconsistent with his previous defence and argue for his innocence on hypothetical grounds. He cannot persuade the Court to assume facts which he never pleaded, the pleading of which would necessitate the calling in of new evidence.

(1) Ganouri Lal Das, 16 C. 206 (218). Sewal Seth, (1933) Pat. 144.

(2) Gowri Sanker v. Sulban, 41 I. C. (L. B.) 832.

(3) S. 105, Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872); Farman Khan, 5 Pat. 520.

(4) Kali Charn Mookerjee, 11 C. L. R. 232; Timmal, 21 A. 122; Cf. Bhola Nath, 51 A. 313.

(5) Bhola Nath, 51 A. 313 (321, 322).

(6) Yusuf Hussain, 40 A. 284; Fandi Khot, (1921) Pat. 192; Janki Mahto, (1933) Pat. 568. [The right of private defence may be pleaded alternatively with the plea of alibi.]

(7) Per Ainslie, J., in Jamsheet Sirdar, 1 C. L. R. 62; Pasupat v. Rambhajan, 1 C. W. N. 545; Veerana, 15 I. C. (M.) 310; Adam Ali, (1927) C. 324.

(8) Jamsheet Sirdar, 1 C. L. R. 62; Kali Churn Mookerjee, 11 C. L. R. 232; Timmal, 21 A. 122; but contra in Wajid Hussain, 32 A. 451; Baburam, 19 I. C. (C.) 951; Ram Khelawan Singh, 36 C. 827; Veerana, 15 I. C. (M.) 310; and cases cited post.

(9) Timmal, 21 A. 122; but contra in Rahiman Shah, (1926) N. 202, where the Court admitted the plea in appeal; Nurdad, (1932) L. 606.

(10) Gullu, (1904) A. W. N. 113.

(11) Upendra Nath, 30 I. C. (C.) 113 F. B.; Afiruddi, 52 I. C. (C.) 485 (488); Wajid Hussain, 32 A. 451; Yusuf Hussain, 40 A. 284 explaining s. 105, Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872); Prag Dat, 20 A. 459; Timmal, 21 A. 122; to the same effect Ghulam Rasul, 62 I. C. (L.) 331; Kishen Lal, (1924) A. 645; Jogali, (1927) M. 97; Adam Ali, (1927) C. 324; Hafiza Singh, (1927) L. 786.

(12) Bahadurkhan, 9 O. W. N. 1019.

(13) Ganowri Lall Dass, 16 C. 206

847. It is not possible to formulate a general rule which the Courts at times are apt to lay down in cases which, from their very complexity and variety, present no common rule for guidance. While then the plea of private defence should in strictness of law be raised by the accused, the Court out of its solicitude for doing justice allows such a plea to be argued at any stage, not upon any hypothetical grounds, but if the facts necessary to establish it are on record.<sup>1</sup> But this is an indulgence and not a right and it cannot be extended in a case involving consideration or proof of independent facts, as for instance, defamation.<sup>2</sup> Moreover, the Court will not entertain a plea on appeal inconsistent with the defence set up at the trial.<sup>3</sup>

848. It has been said that the plea of self-defence must not be incompatible with the other plea set up by the defence.<sup>4</sup> This is undoubtedly the rule, but it does not mean that the accused is not entitled to set up alternative pleas. His pleas must not be hypothetical, but founded on a statement of facts. But suppose that the prosecution wholly fail to establish a person's presence in a riot, could not the accused say ; " I decline to say if I was there; but I do say that if I was, I was justified." Such a case is widely different from one in which the accused wholly denies his presence at the scene of crime, but finding his presence conclusively established, he attempts to justify it on appeal.<sup>5</sup> So where the accused had an intrigue with A's wife, who left her cot to visit him. A understood the purpose of her absence and followed her with a hatchet with which he attacked the accused, wounding him, whereupon the accused stabbed A with a knife in the heart killing him immediately. He then made away with the body and all traces of his crime. On being prosecuted for murder he denied all knowledge of the transaction and of his intimacy with A's wife. He was convicted, and on appeal he contended that even if the facts be as proved, his act was justifiable homicide in the exercise of the right of private defence, but, though the plea was considered, it was rejected.<sup>6</sup>

849. Private Defence v. Private Defence.—There is only a right of private defence against acts which are offences. Where an act is justified as being within the limits of the right of private defence, it could give rise to no right of private defence in return.<sup>7</sup>

Right of private defence of the body
and of property.

97. Every person has a right, subject to the restrictions contained in section 99, to defend—

First.—His own body, and the body of any other person, against any offence affecting the human body ;

Secondly.—The property, whether moveable or immoveable, of himself or of any other person, against any act which is an offence falling under the definition of theft, robbery, mischief or criminal trespass, or which is an attempt to commit theft, robbery, mischief or criminal trespass.

[Person—s. 11. Offences affecting the Human Body—Ch. XVI, ss. 299-377 post.
Theft—s. 378. Robbery—s. 390. Mischief—s. 425.
Criminal trespass—s. 441. Attempt—s. 511.]

850. Analogous Law.—This section lays down the rule as section 99 lays down the exceptions to which the rule is subject. It defines the extent of the right, as section 99 prescribes its limitations. This section lays down what a person may do ; section 99 lays down what he is forbidden to do. The two sections are thus complementary to each, and together, complete enunciation of the rule.

(1) Wajid Hussain, 32 A. 451 ; Yusuf Hussain, 40 A. 284 ; Garugu, 8 I. C. (M.) 1088 ; Veerana, 15 I. C. (M.) 310 ; Baburam, 19 I. C. (C.) 951 ; Pachai Gounden, 26 I. C. (M.) 158 ; Upendra Nath Das, 30 I. C. (C.) 113 F. B. ; Afiruddi, 52 I. C. (C.) 485 (488) ; Pasupat v. Ram Bhajan, 1 C. W. N. 545 ; Cf. Nazimuddi, 40 C. 163 ; Ghulam Rasul, 62 I. C. (L.) 331.

(2) Abdur Razak v. Gansi Nath, (1910) P. W.

R. 4, 5 I. C. 714.

(3) Philpot, (1912) 7 Cr. A. R. 140 ; Fitzgibbons, (1912) 7 Cr. A. R. 264.

(4) Wajid Hussain, 32 A. 451 ; Baburam, 19 I. C. (C.) 951.

(5) Hakim, (1884) P. R. No. 41.

(6) Ib.

(7) Gorie Sankar, 41 I. C. (L. B.) 832.

851. Principle.—The right to protect one's own person and property against the unlawful aggressions of others is a right inherent in man. The duty of protecting the person and property of others is a duty which man owes to society of which he is a member and the preservation of which is both his interest and duty. It is, indeed, a duty which flows from human sympathy. As Bentham said: "It is a noble movement of the heart, that indignation which kindles at the sight of the feeble, injured by the strong. It is a noble movement which makes us forget our danger at the first cry of distress. ... It concerns the public safety that every honest man should consider himself as the natural protector of every other."<sup>1</sup> But such protection must not be extended beyond the necessities of the case, otherwise it will encourage a spirit of lawlessness and disorder. The right has therefore been restricted to offences against the human body and those relating to aggressions on property.

852. Meaning of Words.—"Every person has a right to defend": The right exists to defend his and other's body and property by use of force. But what force is justifiable? That depends upon the circumstances of each case. The amount of violence necessary to repel the aggression of one person will not be the same as is necessary to repel an armed band of twenty. "Against an offence": The word "offence" here means an offence made punishable by the Code—and not merely under any special or local law.<sup>2</sup> "The body of any other person," who may be a perfect stranger.<sup>3</sup> "Theft, etc." for the meaning of which see the various sections referred to below the text.

853. Defence of Person.—The right of private defence consists of the right of self-defence and the defence of another person's body and property against the four offences of theft, robbery, mischief or criminal trespass. The right of such defence commences as soon as a reasonable apprehension of danger to person<sup>4</sup> or property<sup>5</sup> arises, and it continues so long as the danger lasts or the property stolen is not recovered. The amount of force, justifiable in the exercise of the right, is such as was strictly necessary for the purpose.<sup>6</sup> The right to defend one's own, or another's person is absolute and unqualified.<sup>7</sup> A person may be on bad terms with another and may be on the prowl to have his revenge. The fact that his act was actuated by malice and a spirit of revenge is nothing if he was well within his right under this section. Such, indeed, was the case of one Dhauman Teli who had been on inimical terms with one Itwari Teli owing to the latter's intrigue with his wife. One night he lay in wait for him with a friend and on Itwari appearing, subjected him to merciless beating. They were prosecuted, but the Court acquitted them observing: "I think Dhauman Teli and Karu Lal are much to be commiserated. The former has defended his house and honour against the trespass of a would-be adulterer; and admitting on the meagre record that there was very violent retaliation, I think that under sections 96 and 104 of the Penal Code, he should be held to have committed no offence, as he was justified in causing any harm short of death to a person committing house-trespass. With respect to Karu Lal, I would give him the benefit of considering him to have aided Dhauman Teli to commit no offence."<sup>8</sup> A person is, of course, entitled to resist by force his seizure for service or employment.<sup>9</sup>

854. It will be observed that the right of private defence postulates the attempt to commit or the commission of an offence specified in the section. There is, therefore, no right unless there was at least an attempt to commit an offence. To suppose in the last case, Itwari had been set upon before he entered Dhauman's house, the two accused could not have justified their beating for the right had not then come into existence. And it would have ceased to exist as soon as Itwari had effected his retreat after the commission of the crime.<sup>10</sup> The right is indeed a right

(1) Bentham's Principles of Penal Laws; Dalganjan, 22 A. L. J. 81.

(2) S. 40, para 1; Gobardhan Bhuyan, 4 B. L. R. 100.

(3) Nga Than, (1933) R. 273.

(4) S. 102; Pancham, 52 I. C. (O.) 887.

(5) S. 105.

(6) S. 99.

(7) Rose, (1884) 15 Cox. C. C. 540.

(8) Dhauman Teli, 6 W. R. 203.

(9) Pancham, 52 I. C. (A.) 887.

(10) Balakee Jolahed, 10 W. R. 9; cf. Banku Behari, 20 I. C. (Pat.) 602. Keshar Lal, (1930) M. W. N. 502.

of defence, and not of punishment for past and prospective iniquities. And the use of force sanctioned is, therefore, proportioned to that purpose and not to the gravity of the crime.

855. Defence of Property.—So, as regards property, whether his own or another's every person has the right to defend it by peaceful means if he can, by show and use of force if he must. But when it is said that a person has a right of private defence as regards property, all that is implied is, that a person in peaceful possession of property is entitled to maintain that possession even by use of force if necessary.<sup>1</sup> The question whether he had or had not the right to possession is immaterial.<sup>2</sup> Indeed, it is not the business of criminal law to protect titles; it does so when it can. But its chief function in this respect is to maintain peace, and for that purpose it protects peaceful possession irrespective of title. A person in such possession is then entitled to collect men to defend his property, and the concourse of such men does not constitute an unlawful assembly.<sup>3</sup> And as it is sometimes impossible to exercise such right successfully without preparation, a person in possession may prepare himself against an expected aggression.<sup>4</sup> But this view is controverted in Allahabad, where the right of preparation is denied.<sup>5</sup> But it is difficult to concede the right without conferring the power to use it with any degree of success. It may be conceded that in case of disputed possession no person has the right of using force against another, for the right of private defence postulates the existence of at least undisputed prior possession. Where therefore two factions, each of whom had been more or less in possession of a field, turned out with armed forces and had a free fight, the case would be different. But where possession is with one party and title in the other, could the person with title turn out the person in possession by main force, and has not the person in possession any right to repel the aggression? That he has such a right is undisputed and undisputable.<sup>6</sup> And so it has been held that where a person kills a wild animal or a wild bird on the property of another, the latter has property in the game and may enforce his right by the use of force if necessary.<sup>7</sup> But the Allahabad Court denies that he has, under the circumstances, any right to repel force by adequate force. The reason why he should have the one right and not the other has not been stated in any reported case.

856. That he has such right can no longer be denied.<sup>8</sup> Any other view would be subversive of the elementary right of self-defence. That it may, and at times does, cause bloodshed and that it is a right which is apt to be abused is no ground for denying it.

857. It will be observed that so far as regards the defence of one's right to property the section mentions only four offences against which the right is said to exist. But the enumeration of these offences is apparently inexhaustive. Indeed, it is not intelligible why the section should have mentioned theft and robbery and omitted to mention house-breaking and dacoity. Indeed if the two offences mentioned were intended to be referred to only generically, then the mere mention of "theft" without "robbery" would have been sufficient. As it is, the right being declared to exist against theft must be deemed to exist against all offences ejusdem generis. And the same

(1) Possession may be proved by legal presumption; Jainath, (1927) Pat. 181, Party relying upon possession must, of course, prove it; Sulleman, (1927) S. 92.

(2) Sachee, 7 W. R. 112, followed in Gooroo Churn, 14 W. R. 69; Toolsee Sing, 10 W. R. 64.

(3) Brijoo Singh v. Khub Lal, 19 W. R. 66; Shunker v. Burma, 23 W. R. 25; Ganourilal Das, 16 C. 206; Gulshah, 6 S. L. R. 121, Fouzdar Rai, (1918) Pat. 254.

(4) Jagarnath, 24 C. 324; Pachkari, 24 C.

686; Uma Churn Singh, 29 C. 244 (246); Poresh Nath Sircar, 33 C. 295; Narsan Pathabai, 14 B. 441; Baglu Ragula Bheemappa, 26 M. 249; Hira, 45 A. 250.

(5) Prag Dat, 20 A. 459; Kaliji, 24 A. 143; Khadu Singh, 24 A. 298; Bechor Anop, 40 B. 105, Jaipal, 33 I. C. (O.) 820; contra Hira, 45 A. 250.

(6) Jasuram, 74 I. C. (Pat.) 73.

(7) Artur, 3 Pat. 549.

(8) Hira, 45 A. 250; Fateh Singh, 41 C. 43.

may be said of mischief and criminal trespass. As against the thief the right of the owner is not only to recover his property but also to secure the thief, and in securing him he is entitled to use such force and violence as may be necessary<sup>1</sup> (§§ 936-937). So where they seized a thief in the act of committing theft in his house, and on the villagers assembling, the thief was found to be dead, and medical evidence showed that death was probably caused by strangulation due to the prisoner holding the deceased with his face downwards as he was getting into the house, it was held that the prisoner had not exceeded the right of private defence, which he had against the thief, and he was consequently acquitted.<sup>2</sup> So in another case the accused had a field of chillies which had frequently been stolen; one night he found the deceased stealing chillies from his field, whereupon he struck him a heavy blow with a stick from which he died. He was held to have acted within his right. As the Court observed: "No man finding a plunder in his field by night in a place where others may be within call is expected to deal his blows very gently."<sup>3</sup> Besides, it must not be forgotten that when a man is surprised by a thief or finds himself surrounded by robbers, he cannot be expected to be cool and calculating. His first impulse is to strike a decisive blow. It may have been unnecessarily severe, but then the Court has to consult his feeling at the moment.<sup>4</sup>

858. As it was observed in a case, the amount of force justifiable may then depend not only upon the nature of danger actually present, but also upon the nature of the danger apprehended. And in judging of the necessity of the violence used the feelings of the man at the time, his exaggerated sense of danger, the want of self-possession, and the disconcerted state of mind, must all be taken into account.

859. The right of private defence against theft and robbery or an attempt to commit theft or robbery calls for no comment, since the right exists, is declared by the section and is otherwise supported by sound sense. But a case on the borderline may sometimes create difficulties. Such was the case of one A, whose cow had trespassed into the field of B, whereupon B seized it and proceeded to take it to the cattlepound. He was waylaid by A and his two companions and as B would not give up the cow, there was a fight, in the course of which, one of A's men speared B through the heart, and killed him. They were convicted; but B's men who had inflicted injuries upon A and A's men were acquitted on the ground that B being in lawful possession of the cow, its attempted rescue by A and his men presumably amounted to an attempted theft. This case can be held rightly decided only if A's act in rescuing the cow is held to amount to an attempted theft within the meaning of S. 378, which was probably taken for granted.<sup>5</sup>

860. The same principles govern cases relating to mischief. Where for instance, the prisoner found that a number of persons from another village had assembled to cut open a bund whereupon he took counsel of the villagers with whom he proceeded to oppose the mischief, he was held to be justified. In such a case the assemblage of men for organizing a defensive campaign cannot be held to be unlawful.<sup>6</sup> So where the villagers of A paraded a procession through the village of B, carrying with them a pot of consecrated water, to which the villagers from B objected, and who consequently obstructed the procession, whereupon the party of A retaliated and used some violence causing grievous hurt to one of the obstructors and hurt to several others. It was held that inasmuch as the villagers from A had a perfect right to pass through B, and as the latter, could not legally object to their carrying the water in their procession their obstruction was unlawful, and amounted to wrongful restraint, or at least to attempted mischief in respect of the pot of water against which the other party had the right of private defence and which justified the force used by them.<sup>7</sup>

(1) S. 105, Comm.

(2) Karrim Bux, 3 W. R. 12.

(3) Makee, 12 W. R. 15.

(4) Bhut Nath, 3 I. C. (C.) 867; Ahmad Din, (1927) L. 194.

(5) Tanoo Shikdar, 3 W. R. 47; Nyein, 38 I. C. (Bur.) 316; Devi Das, 45 I. C. (L.) 683.

(6) Birjao Singh v. Khub Lall, 19 W. R. 96.

(7) Regula Bheemappa, 26 M. 249.

861. Similarly the right of private defence against criminal trespass entitles the person in actual physical possession to use such force as is necessary to maintain his own possession and to turn away the intruder.<sup>1</sup> In the first place, however, there must be at least peaceful possession with the party employing force, for where there is no possession, there is no legal protection to the use of violence. But the possession which law protects is not the possession of a thief. If A owns a house and leaves it open whilst he goes out for a drive, and B, a thief walks into it and takes possession during A's absence, B has physical possession but not juridical possession so as to entitle him to legal protection. In fact B is not in such a case in possession at all; for possession in criminal law means at least prior peaceful possession. If, for instance, on his return, A finding B in the occupation of his house suffers to let him remain in possession, the possession of B would then develop into juridical possession against which A will forfeit the right of private defence.

862. A person in possession does not forfeit his right by the mere disturbance of his possession, as distinct from dispossession.<sup>2</sup> The case would be otherwise if such disturbance was occasioned by the lawful owner effecting a re-entry upon his property. Where the owner of the land and the trees standing upon his tenant's land entered upon it and used the force necessary to prevent the tenant from removing a tree which had been blown down and severed from the ground by the action of the wind, his action was held justified.<sup>3</sup> So a lawful entry in an unlawful manner may entitle the party in possession to exercise the right of private defence. Where, therefore, a zemindar was entitled to levy distress after written notice to the tenants, whose servants entered upon the crops without such notice, the tenants were entitled to consider such an entry as trespass, against which they were held to have the right of private defence.<sup>4</sup> In this case there was an unlawful entry. But suppose that there had been no such entry, then the mere fact that there was persistence in demand of rent would not have amounted to trespass justifying the use of force.<sup>5</sup>

863. The rule as regards criminal trespass is that a person in actual peaceable possession of land cannot be dispossessed by mere use of force; and that he has a right to maintain his possession by use of force if any one attempts to assail it.<sup>6</sup> In such a case the party in possession may use such force as is necessary to prevent a forcible entry by another and as is necessary to compel him to desist.<sup>7</sup> But it does not justify more. It will not, for instance, justify the confinement of the would-be trespasser.<sup>8</sup> Nor does the right include the wanton infliction of harm, as where a person went out to shoot and found the deceased committing real or supposed cattle trespass, whereupon there was an altercation in the course of which the deceased struck the accused with a heavy club who thereupon fired without any particular aim, but lowering the muzzle of the gun so as not to hit a vital part but death nevertheless ensued from the wounds thus inflicted, it was held that the accused's act was not a legal exercise of the right of private defence as he had only to stand back and he was safe.<sup>9</sup> So there is no right of private defence, in a case of pre-meditated riot where the primary object of the opposing factions is to fight, the complaint about trespass being merely a pretence.<sup>10</sup> Indeed, the right of private defence only commences when there is a reasonable apprehension of danger; where, therefore, persons fire guns from five and twenty yards at their expected assailant and injure him, their act is not protected as they had fired and injured a man before they could apprehend any danger from him.<sup>11</sup>

(1) Fateh Singh, 41 C. 43; Ponthala, 24 I. C. (M.) 327, F. B.; Gorie Sankar, 41 I. C. (L. B.) 832; Fouzdar, (1918) Pat. 254.

(2) Binderswari, 46 I. C. (Pat) 413; Chandulla, 22 I. C. (C.) 993.

(3) Padu, 10 N. L. R. 38.

(4) Kanhai Shahi, 23 W. R. 40.

(5) Mahomed Jan v. Khadi Sheikh, 16 W. R. 65.

(6) Tulsi Singh, 10 W. R. 64; Sachee, 7 W. R. 76.

(7) Ib., p. 77.

(8) Shurufuoodin v. Kassinath, 13 W. R. 64.

(9) Kureem Buksh, (1868) P. R. No. 13.

(10) Jeolall, 7 W. R. 34; Sikander, (1918) P. R. No. 36, 48 I. C. 883.

(11) Hussainuddy, 17 W. R. 46.

864. There is, of course, the right of private defence against one forcing another to work or engage into any service against his wish,<sup>1</sup> or against the imprisonment of one's cart or cattle for the service or benefit of a public servant.<sup>2</sup>

98. When an act, which would otherwise be a certain offence, is not that offence, by reason of the youth, the want of maturity of understanding, the unsoundness of mind, or the intoxication of the person doing that act or by reason of any misconception on the part of that person, every person has the same right of private defence against that act which he would have if the act were that offence.

Right of private defence against the act of a person of unsound mind, etc.

Illustrations.

(a) Z, under the influence of madness, attempts to kill A; Z is guilty of no offence. But A has the same right of private defence which he would have if Z were sane.

(b) A enters by night a house which he is legally entitled to enter. Z, in good faith, taking A for a house-breaker attacks A. Here Z, by attacking A under this misconception, commits no offence. But A has the same right of private defence against Z, which he would have if Z were not acting under that misconception.

[Misconception—ss. 76-79.      Youth—ss. 82, 83.      Immaturity of understanding—s. 83.
Unsoundness of mind—s. 84.      Intoxication—s. 85.]

865. Analogous Law.—This section means that the right of private defence exists irrespective of the physical or mental incapacity of the person against whom it is asserted. Illustration (a) furnishes an example of the right against a person who is non compos mentis. Illustration (b) is taken from an English case,<sup>3</sup> discussed elsewhere.<sup>4</sup>

866. Principle.—As the right of private defence is the right of the preservation of one's life and property against all comers, it follows that the defender cannot permit a lunatic, or an inebriate to kill him or rob him of his property without protest. Having the right to preserve his life and possess his property, it is a right which, from its very nature, admits of no exception and may be asserted against any assailant, whether sane or insane, competent or incompetent, against a person mistaken or otherwise. In short the right prevails against overt attacks irrespective of their intention and meaning.

867. Meaning of Words.—“Or by reason of any misconception,” such as in illustration (b). “Every person has the right,” i.e., in judging of the right of private defence, the exceptions which make offences non-penal should be ignored. Accused was the proprietor of land in the occupation of a tenant, upon which a tree was felled by the wind. Such trees belonged to the accused, but the tenant under a misconception that it belonged to him was cutting and stacking the wood. The accused entered on the land to remove the wood but the tenant resisted whereupon the accused assaulted him. The Court held that as, but for the misconception, the tenant's act would amount to theft, it was an offence against which the accused had the right of private defence, and the force used was therefore justified by this section.<sup>5</sup>

99. There is no right of private defence against an act which does not reasonably cause the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt, if done, or attempted to be done, by a public servant acting in good faith under colour of his office, though that act may not be strictly justifiable by law.

Act against which there is no right of private defence.

There is no right of private defence against an act which does not reasonably cause the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt, if done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant acting in good

(1) Pancham, 52 I. C. (O.) 887.

(2) Ram Harakh, 24 I. C. (O.) 172; Pershad v. Baljit, 20 I. C. (O.) 233; Asa, 20 I. C. (L.) 992.

(3) Devett's case, Cro. Car. 538.

(4) S. 79

(5) Padu, 10 N. L. R. 38, 23 I. C. 704.

faith under colour of his office, though that direction may not be strictly justifiable by law.

There is no right of private defence in cases in which there is time to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities.

Extent to which the right may be exercised. The right of private defence in no case extends to the inflicting of more harm than it is necessary to inflict for the purpose of defence.

Explanation 1.—A person is not deprived of the right of private defence against an act done, or attempted to be done, by a public servant, as such, unless he knows, or has reason to believe, that the person doing the act is such public servant.

Explanation 2.—A person is not deprived of the right of private defence against an act done, or attempted to be done, by the direction of a public servant, unless he knows, or has reason to believe, that the person doing the act is acting by such direction, or unless such person states the authority under which he acts, or, if he has authority in writing, unless he produces such authority, if demanded.

[Public servant—s. 21.      Good faith—s. 52.      Acting under colour, etc.—s. 79.
Grievous hurt—s. 320.]

868. Analogous Law.—This section has been misplaced. Its appropriate place is after section 100 which defines the extent of the right. This section defines its limitations. Indeed all the following sections might be more logically re-arranged in this order: Sections 102, 100, 101, 106, 105, 103, 104 and 99. The section itself would have been more logical if the third and fourth paragraphs had preceded the first two. The latter refer to a special class and the explanations would then be better placed. As it is, the third clause of this section must be read as subject to section 105.<sup>1</sup> The first clause was enacted to meet cases which would not fall within section 332 by reason of the public servant in section 332 not being at the time when the assault was committed on him in discharge of a duty imposed on him by law.<sup>2</sup>

869. Principle.—This section lays down the limits within which the right of private defence must be exercised. It does not arm the party wronged with fire and sword, but allows him to help himself only when there is a reasonable apprehension of danger.<sup>3</sup> Other sections define the extent to which the right may be pushed. This section limits the general rule there laid down, and its object is to lay down certain restrictions; the first two of which are specially intended to protect public servants, the remaining two paragraphs being more general.

870. Meaning of Words.—“Under the colour of his office,” that is, bona fide believing that it was his duty to perform the act, whether he was lawful or unlawful in the discharge of his duty.<sup>4</sup> “Strictly justified by law” means that there must be jurisdiction, though the act complained of may not be within that jurisdiction. “More harm than is necessary for the purpose of defence,” that is, the harm inflicted must be no more than is necessary to avert the danger. It may even be deterrent, but must not be excessive.

871. Right against Public Servants.—The first two clauses of this section limit the right of private defence, against public servants, due to the reason that law presumes their acts to be legal, and when in fact they are illegal, law undertakes to remedy them. The first clause limits the right of a person of self-defence, when the party against whom that right has to be enforced happens to be a public servant. In other words, this clause confers an exceptional immunity on public servants against the attacks of persons in the exercise of their right of private defence. As regards the latter, the clause evidently confers no right to the defence of one's

(1) Narsing Pathabhai, 14 B. 441.
 (2) Dalip, 18 A. 246.

(3) Ss. 102, 105.
 (4) Dalip, 18 A. 246 (252).

property against the acts of public servants unless the seizure of property was accompanied by the use of force giving rise to the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt.<sup>1</sup> But this is on the assumption that the public servant was acting within his legitimate powers, which it is for him to show.<sup>2</sup> When this is the case, there will scarcely be any necessity to invoke the aid of the section, for there is no law to justify a public servant in causing death or grievous hurt in the discharge of his duties. Such hurt he is no doubt entitled to cause when illegally resisted, but then there is no right of private defence, when one is legally liable to arrest and is using force to resist it. Nor are the persons who aid and abet such a person exempt from punishment. They cannot plead that they were justified in rescuing a thief by assaulting a policeman charged with the duty of arresting him. The question of private defence has then no application in such a case. The only question that may then arise is that raised in the two explanations, viz., that the person resisting did not know that the person resisted was a public servant, or was acting under the directions of a public servant. But the question attains prominence only when the public servant concerned had acted without jurisdiction, or having jurisdiction he had abused it. In order to earn the protection of this clause two things at least are essential: (i) that he should have acted in good faith; and (ii) that he should have acted "under the colour of his office."

872. In the first place there must be good faith, a term negatively explained in s. 52 which lays down what is not good faith. But

Good Faith. apart from that section the act of the public servant must be supported by the positive presence of care, caution and circumspection and an honest endeavour to discharge his public duty with strict compliance with the requirements of law. This must depend upon the facts of each case. Cases decided on the point will be found set out under ss. 521 and 183 and other sections relating to public servants.

873. As regards the exercise of good faith, the law requires that the public servant acting in the discharge of his duties must exercise

There must be due care and attention. Now, no one can be said to be

Jurisdiction. possessed of good faith when he consciously arrogates to himself a jurisdiction which he does not possess. Where, for instance, a person (A), obtained a decree for a portion of land from a Court which had no jurisdiction to effect partition, and the Court therefore asked the Collector for advice as to how to execute the decree, and the Collector thereupon took upon himself to execute the decree by appointing a surveyor to measure off the land and give possession of it to the decree holder. The surveyor went, but was resisted by the accused who questioned his jurisdiction, whereupon he was prosecuted, but the Court acquitted him, observing that the protection given by this section to a public servant, does not extend to an act which is altogether illegal.<sup>3</sup> So where the revenue peons were assaulted while effecting an attachment of property in execution of a warrant after the date of its return when it ceased to be operative, the Court held the resistance justified as the re-issue of the warrant being illegal the resistance offered was not unjustified.<sup>4</sup> So where the partition Amin of one village being empowered to measure land proceeded to measure the land of an adjoining village and was obstructed, the obstruction was held to be justifiable.<sup>5</sup> So while a District Magistrate has jurisdiction to summon a witness to appear before himself, he has no jurisdiction to arrest a witness for the purpose of giving evidence before the police. If, therefore, a person be so arrested, his resistance would be justifiable.<sup>6</sup> So where a person applied for a search warrant under section 100 of the Criminal Procedure Code (which empowers the search for persons wrongfully confined), but the Magistrate issued

(1) Ponthala, 24 I. C. (M.) 327; but see Adhar, 5 C. W. N. 391.

(2) Bahal, 28 A. 481; Sampat, 15 A. L. J. 566.

(3) Tulsiram, 13 B. 168; Lilla Singh, 22 C. 286; Jogendra Nath Mookerjee, 24 C. 320,

Sit Nyein, 8 I. C. (Bur.) 988, followed in Gopi Mahto, 10 Pat. 821.

(4) Adhar Midday, 5 C. W. N. 391.

(5) Lilla Singh, 22 C. 286.

(6) Jogendra Nath Mookerjee, 24 C. 320.

a search warrant under section 96, (which empowers the issue of a search warrant for the production of document or thing which the Court thinks will not be produced on summons), the Police empowered to execute it were not protected under this section, as the issue of the warrant was not only “not strictly justifiable by law,” but wholly illegal and ultra vires.<sup>1</sup> So while a vaccinator is empowered to take lymph from persons who do not object to it, he has no right to take it as of right, and his attempt to take it without consent was illegal, and such as would justify an assault committed to prevent its removal.<sup>2</sup>

874. This raises the question when is an act merely “not strictly justifiable by law,” so as to entitle the public concerned to the protection of the section. The words “not strictly justifiable” refer to irregular as distinguished from illegal acts. They show that the act was within jurisdiction, but that the jurisdiction had been exercised irregularly or on insufficient grounds. In short, the act has been done wrongly, though it might have been done rightly. They do not apply to an act which was done wrongly and could not possibly have been done rightly.<sup>3</sup> In other words, the clause is not intended to cure the want of jurisdiction but only to erroneous exercise of it, and that when the error affects the procedure rather than the principle—such an irregularity, for instance, as initialling a warrant instead of signing it,<sup>4</sup> or issuing it without complying with the preliminary procedure prescribed by the Civil Procedure Code<sup>5</sup> the mode of delivering possession,<sup>6</sup> or the like—it would be covered by the clause. A Police officer executing a bailable warrant is bound to give the person arrested the option of bail, and if he fails to do so, he is not protected by this section against the rescuers who use force to liberate the person so arrested.<sup>7</sup> So where a subordinate Police officer deputed by the officer in charge of the police station to make a search entered a house in search of person as well as property, though the search for the property required a search warrant from the Station House Officer, it was held that though the search of the house for property without a search warrant was illegal, still the inmates could not offer the resistance especially as the policeman had charged those persons with theft, and the resistance offered to the Police was as much to the search as to their own apprehension.<sup>8</sup> So where the accused were arrested by the Police at midnight lurkings armed, in a village inhabited by dacoits, it was held that even if the arrest be not justifiable under section 100 of the Criminal Procedure Code of 1861,<sup>9</sup> still the resistance could not be justified under this section.<sup>10</sup> The sergeant who arrested the accused whom he found armed with guns, and who were reported against as dacoits was fully within his rights under sections 45 (6) and 54 (1) of the Criminal Procedure Code, and the accused who resisted him and fired at men assisting him, wounding and killing several, were clearly guilty of murder under aggravating circumstances.<sup>11</sup>

875. Such was also the case of a policeman whose cart had been stopped by some camel drivers whose camels had been trespassing on the Government canal banks, and through whose action a prisoner in lawful custody effected his escape, and who had further threatened the officer with personal violence, who thereupon fired a shot without taking careful aim wounding one of his assailants.<sup>12</sup> The same view was taken in another case in which a Sub-Inspector of Salt and Abkari had attempted to enter a house in search of property, the illicit possession of which was

(1) Bisu Haldar v. Probhat Chunder, 6 C. 743; Rajani Kanta, 58 C. 940.
 L. J. 127.
 (2) Mangobind, 3 C. W. N. 627.
 (3) Ib., p. 629; Attar Singh, (1918) P. R. 9, 44 I. C. 742; Gaman, (1913) P. R. 16, 18 I. C. 894.
 (4) Janki Prasad, 8 A. 293.
 (5) Sahibulla, 51 C. 1; Rajani Kanta, 58 C. 940; Puna Mahton, 11 Pat. 743.
 (6) Preolal Mukerjee, 18 C. W. N. 548, 24 I. C. 163; followed in Puna Mahton, 11 Pat.
 (7) Shyama Charan, 15 I. C. (C.) 1006.
 (8) Vyankat Rao, 7 B. H. C. R. 50; Gaman, (1913) P. R. No. 16, 18 I. C. 894; Mirshah Newaz Khan, 8 S. L. R. 1; Chunder Kumar, 3 C. W. N. 344.
 (9) Now s. 54, Act V of 1898.
 (10) Gateea Meena, (1869) P. R. No. 69.
 (11) Bhanga Singh, (1900) P. R. No. 21.
 (12) Mukerjee, (1901) P. R. No. 5.

an offence under the Madras Abkari Act,<sup>1</sup> and which he could not legally do without obtaining a warrant from the Abkari officer, who could only issue a warrant after recording "his reasons and the grounds of his belief."<sup>2</sup> This case probably carries the doctrine of immunity too far. In another case an Excise Sub-Inspector was empowered to search only for "excisable article" under the Bengal Excise Act,<sup>3</sup> and he attempted to search a house for "foreign excisable article," for which he was not empowered to search, it was held that this entry being unlawful, the accused who assaulted him were justified.<sup>4</sup> The section would, however, clearly protect a person who attaches articles exempt from attachment, as where a bailiff attaches agricultural cattle and grain which are under the Procedure Code exempt from attachment.<sup>5</sup> So where in the case of a defaulter under the Local Board Act, a warrant of distress was issued, and a bucket and spade belonging to him attached. The defaulter was a potter and the articles attached were his tools exempt from attachment.<sup>6</sup> The potter resisted the attachment, and it was held that his resistance was illegal.<sup>7</sup> So where on a Magistrate having been satisfied that certain persons accused in a case were keeping out of the way, and he accordingly issued a proclamation under section 87 of the Code of Criminal Procedure and an order for the attachment of their property under section 88, in execution of which the police-officer was informed that the property he was seizing in attachment did not belong to the absconding accused, but the patwari who was present, having stated the contrary, the police-officer proceeded with the attachment, and he was molested. It was held that even assuming that the property attached did not belong to the absconders, the rightful owners had no right to private defence.<sup>8</sup> So where a vakil was appointed to make the attachment, under O. 21, R. 105 of the Civil Procedure Code, but no reasons were given for appointing him instead of the Amin or bailiff, it was held that the provisions in O. 21, R. 105 were not mandatory, consequently the attachment was not illegal or without jurisdiction and, therefore, no right of private defence arose for the accused person.<sup>9</sup>

876. So where the Magistrate ordered the police to take charge of paddy, pending proceedings before it, under section 145 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, which he had no right to do, whereupon the police in pursuance of the order proceeded to guard it, but were resisted by armed violence, it was held that violence was excessive and unjustified, especially as the police had acted in an open and straightforward manner, simply announcing what the orders they had received were.<sup>10</sup> But where the officers of the Salt Department, being empowered to make searches for contraband salt without a warrant only in cases in which the delay in obtaining a magisterial warrant would defeat the object, searched a house without a warrant when there was time to apply for a legal warrant, it was held that their search was illegal and resistance to it was consequently justifiable.<sup>11</sup> There was, of course, no pretension to acting under the colour of their office by the Deputy Commissioner's peons who forcibly seized the bullocks of the accused to pull their own cart out of a rut into which it had fallen, and the conduct of the accused in forcibly retaking his property was of course amply justified.<sup>12</sup> The law imposes no duty on Government officials, nor indeed gives them power to seize animals belonging to private persons for the purposes of camp transport. Consequently, the owner of such property is well justified in resisting its forcible seizure by such officers or their servants, and this section has no application to a case of abuse of power, and a proceeding wholly illegal and without jurisdiction.<sup>13</sup>

877. Explanation 1 goes with this paragraph, and it is intended to protect persons who may have acted in ignorance of the fact that the person they were

(1) Mad. Act I of 1886.

(2) S. 31, Mad. Act I of 1886.

(3) Beng. Act VII of 1858, s. 40.

(4) Pukot Kotu, 19 M. 349.

(5) Mad. Act V of 1884.

(6) Ib., s. 94.

(7) Poomalai, 21 M. 296.

(8) Bhai Lal Chowdhury, 29 C. 417.

(9) Tej Singh, (1935) A. 490; following Sahebullo, 51 C. 1.

(10) Bhola Mahto, 9 C. W. N. 125; Preolal Mukerjee, 18 C. W. N. 548, 24 I. C. 163.

(11) Kalian, 19 M. 310.

(12) Ram Harakh, 24 I. C. 172.

(13) Asa, 20 I. C. (L.) 992; Parshadi v Baljit Singh, 20 I. C. (O.) 233.

dealing with was a public servant. Where a public servant has a distinctive badge or uniform, his position will be manifest to all who have to deal with him. But if a public servant has no distinctive badge or attire, he has to state who he is, before he can claim exceptional treatment. If he was, however, attended by peons whose badges proclaimed his position, or if he was already known in the locality, it would be sufficient.

878. Acting under Orders.—Next to the acts of public servants there are acts done under the direction of public servants which Paragraph 2. are similarly entitled to privileged treatment. Such acts may not be done by persons who are themselves public servants, but they must be done under their direction, and that direction must be legal, though it may not be strictly justifiable by law (§874). This is apparent from the tenor of the first clause, and from the language of which it is evident that an act which would be unjustifiable if done by a public servant, could be no less so if done by another under his authority.

879. So where the warrant issued by the Civil Court was not in the prescribed form, but was generally worded, and it did not authorize the peon charged with its execution to enter into the accused's house or seize his property, resistance to execution was held to be justifiable, though the accused in the case had exceeded his right by inflicting more injury than was necessary under the circumstances of the case.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, the law does not empower a Police officer to search an accused's house for anything but the specific article which has been or can be made the subject of summons or warrant to produce. A general search for stolen property is not authorized and the law cannot be circumvented by use of such an expression as "stolen property relevant to the case." Consequently, a Police officer searching a house in execution of such a warrant is not making a legal search, and any resistance offered to him is not subject to the limitation enacted in this section.<sup>2</sup>

880. Public servants have no legal right to commandeer private property for their own use.<sup>3</sup> Where, therefore, a Forest Settlement Officer deputed a peon "to impress fifteen carts for his use" to which he was apparently entitled under the executive orders of Government, contained in a Revenue Handbook, it was held that the executive rules of Government not having the force of law, the action of the peon in impressing the carts was illegal being an offence under section 374 of the Code, and the resistance offered was therefore justifiable.<sup>4</sup> But where a warrant was issued for the arrest of one Dalip under section 114 of the Code of Criminal Procedure which was addressed to one thana, the officer in temporary charge of which endorsed it over to one Nazir Hoossain and others who arrested Dalip, when they were not in possession of their warrant, whereupon they were set upon by his friends who caused hurt to the police and rescued him. It was held that though the arrest of Dalip was not strictly justifiable by law, still it was one, the irregularity of which was covered by this section and the accused had, therefore, no justification in offering the resistance.<sup>5</sup> In this respect the English Law takes a stricter view of official duties. For in England a person is held justified in offering resistance to a public servant making an arrest, if the warrant or writ is not with him ready to be shewn to the person to be arrested, or if it is in any way defective, as if the name of the officer or party is entered without due authority.<sup>6</sup> This was conceded by Edge, C.J., in Dalip's case in which, however, he considered the Indian rule to be divergent and wider, inasmuch as while good faith will not atone for the absence of a warrant in England, good faith without a warrant is in this country said to be sufficient, provided, of course, the officer had the necessary authority.

(1) Uma Charan Singh, 6 C. W. N. 164; Bahal, 28 A. 481.

(2) Bajrangi, 38 C. 304; Prankhang, 17 I. C. (C.) 76; Ishwar Chandra, 12 C. W. N. 1016.

(3) Asa, (1913) P. L. R. 325, 20 I. C. 992;

Parshadi v. Baljit, 20 I. C. (O.) 233; Ram Harakh, 24 I. C. (O.) 172.

(4) Rakhmaji, 9 B. 558.

(5) Dalip, 18 A. 246; Pershad v. Baljit, 20 I. C. (O.) 233.

(6) Chapman, 12 Cox 4.

881. General Warrants.—A general warrant is a warrant either issued in blank or without particulars sufficient to identify the person sought to be apprehended. The illegality of such warrants has long since been settled in England. All the writers upon the Crown law agree "that there must be an accusation, that the person to be apprehended must be named, and that the officer is not to be left to arrest whom he thinks fit."<sup>1</sup> So where the Secretary of State had issued a warrant for the apprehension of the author, printer and publisher of a paper called North Briton generally, without naming or describing them, Lord Mansfield declared the arrest of one Leach as its printer illegal. As he remarked: "It is not fit that the receiving or judging of the information should be left to the discretion of the officer. The Magistrate ought to judge; and should give certain directions to the officer. This is so, upon reason and convenience."<sup>2</sup> Not only the name of the person to be apprehended but the offence for which he is charged should be clearly stated on the warrant. This was settled in the reign of Charles I who claimed it as his prerogative to commit by his own power, which power was said to devolve in point of execution upon the Secretary of State.<sup>3</sup> The Parliament disputed the King's authority to commit, either by himself or by his Council, without shewing the cause, and it condemned the practice by a resolution of the House passed on the 25th April 1766. This resolution was passed after the practice of general warrants had been condemned and its illegality declared by three Courts in 1763-1765,<sup>4</sup> in the first of which<sup>5</sup> Pratt, L. C. J. (afterwards Lord Camden), considered the practice as "totally subversive of the liberty of the subject." And when it is said that the warrant must contain the name, what is meant is that the name should be so given as to leave no room for ambiguity. The insertion of a surname without the Christian name, the space therefor being left blank, would not be a sufficient description, though the name of the father be inserted, if it appears that more than one person answered the surname.<sup>6</sup> If the Christian name of the person cannot be ascertained some other description sufficient for identification should be inserted.

882. Where a constable went to execute a warrant directing the arrest of one John H., instead of Richard H., the person really intended and who was supposed to be called John H., which was, however, the name of his father, it was held that the arrest of Richard under the colour of the warrant was unjustifiable,<sup>7</sup> though the complainant had pointed him out as the man who had stolen his mare and against whom he had laid the information; but in such a case it would have been perfectly open to the constable to justify the arrest independently of the warrant. The case would have been again different if the warrant had been a writ of execution, in which case the Sheriff was bound to execute it notwithstanding that the defendant was therein wrongly described.<sup>8</sup>

883. It is thus settled that a warrant which does not contain the name or a sufficiently clear description of the person, who is to be arrested or whose house is to be searched, is wholly illegal.<sup>9</sup> But the question whether such a warrant should also state the cause remains. In the three cases last cited the warrant under the signature of the Secretary of State for the search of papers in the office of the paper North Briton had stated no cause, and this fact was animadverted upon by the Judges, who, however, disposed of the cases on the ground that the Secretary of State had no power to issue a general warrant. The question, however, came up for decision in another case in which the plaintiff had been arrested by the Sergeant-at-Arms of the

(1) 1 Hale P. C., pp. 580, 586; 2 Hawk. P. C. 81, 82.

(2) Leach v. Money, 19 St. Tr. 1000 (1027); Entick v. Carrington, 19 St. Tr. 1029 (1069); Wilkes v. Wood, 19 St. Tr. (1154).

(3) This authority was said to be based upon the Statute of Westminster, the first of which recites an arrest by the command of the King to be one of those cases that were irretrievable by the common law.—Staundford Pl., fo. 72 G.

(4) Wilkes v. Wood, (1763) 19 St. Tr. 1154; Leach v. Money, (1765) 19 St. Tr. 1001; Entick v. Carrington, (1765) 19 St. Tr. 1029.

(5) Wilkes v. Wood, 19 St. Tr. 1154 (1167).

(6) Hood, R. & N., C. C. R. 281.

(7) Hoye v. Bush, 1 M. & G. 775 (780).

(8) Reeves v. Slater, 7 B. & C. 486; Fisher v. Magnay, 6 Sc. N. R. 588.

(9) Prankhag, 17 I. C. (C.) 76; but see Gaman, (1913) P. R. No. 16, 18 I. C. 894; Mirza Shah Nawaz Khan, 8 S. L. R. 1.

House of Commons on a warrant which set out no reason for the arrest. It was held by Coleridge, J., that it gave no protection to the officer executing it, but it was held, on appeal<sup>1</sup> that a distinction must be drawn between the warrants issued by the Superior Courts and those issued by the inferior Magistracy, in the former case jurisdiction to issue such warrants would be presumed, in the latter case it must be proved.<sup>2</sup> The Superior Courts, observed Parke, B., wield their jurisdiction by the authority of common law, the Magistrates derive their power by statute by which their authority must appear on the face of the warrants. The rule of jurisdiction consequently, is that nothing shall be intended to be out of the jurisdiction of a Superior Court, but that which specially appears to be so, and nothing shall be intended to be within the jurisdiction of an inferior Court, but that which is so expressly alleged. If the analogy of these cases be applied to India the High Courts would be considered the Superior Courts within the meaning of the rule, all other Courts being Courts of limited jurisdiction and bound by the terms of their creation, whose warrants must comply with the strict requirements of the law which authorizes their issue.

884. It is equally illegal to issue a general search warrant. In this connection reference may, however, be made to explanation 2, according to which a person is not deprived of his right of private

Explanation 2. defence against an act done, or attempted to be done by the direction of a public servant, (a) unless he knows or has reason to believe that the person doing the act is acting by such direction; or (b) unless such person states the authority under which he acts; or (c) if he has authority in writing, unless he produces such authority, if demanded. In the case of a person executing a warrant, the written authority, if demanded, must be produced. If he is unable to produce the authority, he is disqualified from enforcing it. Supposing, however, that the public servant is able to satisfy this requirement of law, is he then entitled to execute the process, though it may be otherwise illegal? In one case Prinsep and Stephen, JJ., have, indeed, permitted themselves to use language which would seem to countenance this conclusion: "They say, that even supposing that the property attached was not the property of the absconders,<sup>3</sup> the rightful owner had no right of private defence of his property, inasmuch as the evidence shows that the police officer was acting in good faith under colour of his office; and even supposing that the order of attachment might not have been properly made, that would in itself be no sufficient ground. The law, as expressed in s. 99, explanation 2, is clear on this point."<sup>4</sup> If this is intended to suggest that as soon as a person produces his authority, he becomes entitled to the protection of clause 2, whatever may have been the defects in the authority, then the proposition cannot be correct. For as has been before observed, the delegate cannot acquire greater immunity by virtue of his delegation than the delegator. And all that Explanation 2 is intended to lay down is, that a person may have been deputed to execute the orders of a public servant, but no one is bound to take notice of him as such, unless the fact is known or brought to one's notice in the manner stated in the explanation. The combined effect of the second paragraph, and the second explanation is to cast on the person claiming special protection the burden of proving that the other knew about his status. This is clear from the use of the words "knows or has reason to believe," words which mean that the information must be conveyed to him directly or indirectly unless the fact was already known to him.

885. Recourse to Authorities.—The third clause of this section places a noticeable restriction upon a person's right to private defence.

Paragraph 3. It lays down that there is no right of private defence in cases in which there is time to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities. A large number of cases have clustered round the words "in which there is time," words which are perhaps ambiguous and misleading. In one sense

(1) Howard v. Gossett, 10 Q. B. 377;
14 L. J. (Q. B.) 375.

(2) Howard v. Gossett, 10 Q. B. 452.

(3) Whose property alone the officers were entitled to attach. See case supra.

(4) Bhai Lal Chowdhury, 29 C. 417.

there is always time to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities, the only danger is that the offender may in the meantime escape, or the property lost may never be found. But as the object of private defence is both to protect person and recover property, it follows that any abstinence which defeats that object could not have been sanctioned by law. It may then be safely asserted that the clause has no application to a case in which the authorities are available, but not availed of, because of the delay and the consequent risk of further harm thereby apprehended. At the same time cases are conceivable in which there was manifestly time to have recourse to the authorities. Such would be the case where the opposite party was preparing to fight, or where forebodings of a coming struggle were otherwise received. In such case the proper procedure would be not to oppose force by force, but to report the matter to the guardians of peace, whose duty it is then to prevent a disturbance. This may appear to be a curtailment of the right of private defence, but it is well justified. As Holloway, J., observed quoting the observations of Pollock, C. B.<sup>1</sup>: "The natural tendency of the law of all civilized States is to restrict within constantly narrowing limits the right of self-help, and it is certain that no other principle can be safely applied to a country abounding in sects inflamed with the bitterness engendered by small theological or ceremonial differences." Quoting these observations Rampini, J., in another case remarked: "The right of self-help when it causes, or is likely to cause, damage to the person or property of another person must be restricted, and recourse to public authorities must be insisted on. If a person prefers to use force in order to protect his property when he could, for the protection of such property, easily have recourse to the public authorities, his use of force is made punishable by the Indian Penal Code. No matter what the intention of that person may be, the law says that he must not use force in such a case. To hold otherwise, would be to encourage and put a premium on offences of rioting."<sup>2</sup>

886. It comes to simply this, that our law does not permit rival claimants to enter in cold blood into battle to settle a dispute which can be settled in a lawful manner. This is possible where the combatants are aware of the preparation made by each other. But a preparation to defend one's possession is not necessarily a preparation to attack another. And the right of a person to collect an armed force would then seem to depend (i) upon his prior peaceful possession, (ii) upon the necessity of defending it by force, and (iii) upon the reasonable expectation of an aggression. There is nothing in section 141 of the Code to render such an assembly unlawful. On the other hand, the assembly of five or more persons, the common object of which is by means of criminal force to take or obtain possession of any property is by that section declared to be unlawful,<sup>3</sup> from which it may be inferred that while the employment of force to take possession is undoubtedly unlawful, the maintenance of one's possession by use of force is not necessarily unlawful. But this is not the view on which the Courts here are agreed, though probably some of the cases may be distinguished on this ground. There are some cases in which the Courts have clearly laid down that a person in possession has undeniably the right of self-defence against another attempting to oust him,<sup>4</sup> but a different note has been sounded in other cases,<sup>5</sup> in which the view taken is that while one has cer-

(1) Hyde v. Graham, 1 H. & C.

(2) Kabiruddin, 35 C. 368, following per Holloway, J., in 7 M. H. C. R. (App.) 35; Jairam Mahton, 35 C. 103.

(3) S. 141, "fourth"

(4) Sohun, 2 W. R. 59; Mitto Singh, 3 W. R. 41; Sachee, 7 W. R. 112; Tulsee Singh, 10 W. R. 64; Birjoo Singh v. Khub Lall, 10 W. R. 66; Shunkur Singh v. Burmah Mahto, 23 W. R. 25; Ganauri Lall, 16 C. 206; Mahesh Sheikh, 21 C. 392; Pachkauri, 24 C. 686; Anant Pandit v. Madhusudan, 26 C. 574; Poresh Nath, 33 C. 295; Bepin Behari v. Pranakul, 11 C. W. N. 176; Ambika Lal

35 C. 443; Baij Kualee, 36 C. 297; Silajit, 36 C. 365; Fateh Singh, 41 C. 43; Narsing, 14 B. 441; Pulimuthu, 24 M. 124; Gouri Shankar, 41 I. C. (L. B.) 830; Panthala, 24 I. C. (M.) 327, F. B.; Penumetza, 44 I. C. (M.) 40; Fouzdar, (1918) Pat. 254; Sundar Baksh Singh, (1918) Pat. 359, Lashkari Khan, 8 S. L. R. 343, 29 I. C. 664.

(5) Nawabdee, (1864) W. R. 11; Jeslalli, 7 W. R. 34; Manu Singh, 7 W. R. 103; Kalee Beparee, 1 C. L. R. 521; Kabiruddin, 7 C. L. J. 359; Prag Dat, 20 A. 459; Kaliji, 24 A. 143; Kadhu, 24 A. 298.

tainly the right of repelling an unpremeditated attack, one has no right to prepare for a fight, whether it be in a righteous cause or otherwise. This view is justified on the ground that the country would be "deluged with blood" <sup>1</sup> if an offender, who could get relief by recourse to law, were allowed to take the law into his own hands.<sup>2</sup> The other view is that a person in possession is entitled to defend his possession against all comers, and he is not bound to take the risk of referring his case to the police.

887. So far as this clause is concerned, the question really turns upon the meaning to be assigned to the words when "there is time" to have recourse to the authorities. Now it has been held that this clause must be read with the first paragraph of section 105;<sup>3</sup> consequently the right of private defence of property commences when a reasonable apprehension of danger of the property commences. "Before such apprehension commences, the owner of the property is not called upon to apply for protection to the public authorities. The apprehension which justifies a recourse to the authorities ought generally to be based on some information of a definite kind, as to the time and place of the danger actually threatened."<sup>4</sup> Where therefore the owner received information that the accused's party were coming next day to plough up the land, he was not thereupon bound to go and lay information to the police. And when in the morning the raid was made, his first duty was to go to his field and not run for the police, unless he passed them on his way. For if he were to go to the police, it may be that the mischief threatened to his property may, in the meantime, be completed.<sup>5</sup> This view, the soundness of which has never been questioned, shows when a person is said to have time to have recourse to the authorities, he is not to carry idle gossip to them; if he does so he runs the risk of being himself prosecuted for making an accusation, the truth of which he may be unable to establish. His information must be definite and precise, and it is then his duty to lay his case before the authorities, before entrusting his defence to his strong right arm. For when it is said that a person having time to have recourse to the authorities has no right of private defence, what is meant is that having the two alternatives equally good, the owner must choose the submission of his case to the authorities rather than enter the lists with his adversary. He is not bound to have recourse to the authorities at the sacrifice of his interest. He is not bound to abandon his property to the mercy of marauders, with a view to making application to the police for assistance.<sup>6</sup>

888. So where the owner found some hostile claimants taking away his saltpetre, he was held justified in reclaiming the property by force, if the circumstances were such that the wrong-doers would have successfully made off with the property if the owner had, in the meantime, gone to report to the police.<sup>7</sup> So where a person is assaulted, he is not bound to escape further injury by resorting to less violence or run away to have recourse to the protection of the public authorities.<sup>8</sup> Indeed, the right of private defence would have been a mockery if the law were otherwise, for the right of private defence is founded on the doctrine of self-help, and its underlying principle is to allow people to help themselves. Moreover, the law could not be invoked to oppress persons, who, when there is no time to have recourse to the public authorities, find themselves in a position in which they must either exert the privilege of private defence as provided and restricted by the law, or submit to a forcible invasion of a right of person or property in case in which, under section 97, the law does not require any such submission.<sup>9</sup>

889. The question whether a person had, in a given case, time to have recourse to the public authorities, is naturally a question of fact dependent upon

(1) Per Holloway, J., in 7 M. H. C. R. (App.) 35 (36).

(2) Per Holloway, J., cited per Rampini, J., in Kabiruddin, 7 C. L. J. 359 (366).

(3) Narsingh Fathubai, 14 B. 441.

(4) Narsing Fathubai, 14 B. 441.

(5) Narsing Fathubai, 14 B. 441; Chandulla Sheikh, 22 I. C. (C.) 993; Penumetsa, 44 I. C. (M.) 40.

(6) Anumantan, (1881) Weir, 144; Shamsher Khan, (1896) A. W. N. 170.

(7) Shamsher Khan, (1896) A. W. N. 170; Chandulla Sheikh, 22 I. C. (C.) 993.

(8) Hafiz Ali, (1907) O. C. 196, 6 Cr. L. J. 271; Alingal Kunhinayan, 28 M. 454; Nga Hla Tun U, (1896) P. L. J. B. 219.

(9) Nga Hla Tun U, (1896) P. L. J. B. 219.

(i) the antecedent knowledge of the attack; (ii) its precision and reliability; (iii) the opportunity it gave to report to the authorities; which again depends upon (iv) the proximity of the police station or other place to which a report might be sent. These questions, of course, do not arise where the attack is sudden and unpremeditated; or where there are no facilities for having recourse to the authorities; or the recourse being had, there is no succour, or it is delayed.

890. Commencement of the Right.—The next clause deals with the quantum of harm that may be caused in self-defence. It

Paragraph 4. will be seen that the right of private defence of person<sup>1</sup> and property<sup>2</sup> commences as soon as a reasonable apprehension of danger to person or property arises. A person is not therefore bound to wait for the first blow before he strikes his adversary, but that does not justify him in attacking him in anticipation. "If A fears upon just grounds that B intends to kill him, and is assured that he is provided with weapons and lies in wait so to do, yet without an actual assault by B upon A or upon his house to commit that act, A may not kill B by way of prevention. For the law hath provided a security for them by flight, and recourse to the civil magistrate for protection."<sup>3</sup> But if in such a case B trespass into A's house to kill him, or raise a blow to smite him, A's right of private defence commences, and he is then under no restraint other than here prescribed. But in considering what was a harm necessary to inflict for the purpose of defence, regard must be had to the position and circumstance of the parties, their comparative strength and the force and violence of the attack, and the consequent angry feelings aroused, the danger apprehended, and the difficulty of adjusting the harm caused to the danger threatened.<sup>4</sup> A man who is assaulted is not bound to modulate his defence step by step, according to the attack, before there is reason to believe the attack is over. He is entitled to secure his victory as long as the contest is continued. He is not obliged to retreat, but may pursue his adversary till he finds himself out of danger, and if, in a conflict between them, he happens to kill, such killing is justifiable. And, of course, where the assault has once assumed dangerous form, every allowance should be made for one, who, with the instinct of self-preservation strong upon him, pursues his defence a little farther than to a perfectly cool by-stander would seem absolutely necessary. The question in such cases will be, not whether there was an actually continuing danger, but whether there was a reasonable apprehension of such danger.<sup>5</sup>

891. That the person attacked should naturally exaggerate the danger is natural, that he should deal with him on that assumption is, therefore, not unreasonable. Law presumes every man to know law, but it does not presume every man to be perfect. In judging of the necessity of harm it makes just allowance for the sentiments of a person placed in a situation of peril and has then no time to think, whose blood is hot, and whose sole object then is to strike one decisive blow so as to ward off the threatened mischief. But the right is, nevertheless, a right of defence, and it must not be converted into one of reprisal. Nor is it a primitive right. For the hurt caused in defence does not exonerate the offender from the sentence of law, nor does the fact that he has already suffered harm entitle him even to a consideration. On the other hand, if the person entitled to inflict harm in private defence, inflicts more harm than was necessary, the Court may make an allowance for the fact and punish him only for the excessive harm.<sup>6</sup> Such harm, though not justifiable, would probably be punishable as a harm caused on provocation.<sup>7</sup> So where two owners of land found some trespassers threatening their possession, whereupon they ran home and brought swords with which they slightly wounded two of the trespassers

(1) S. 102.

(2) S. 105.

(3) 1 Hale P. C. 52.

(4) Marudochela Gounden, 1931 M. W. N. 646.

(5) Alingal Kunhinayan, 28 M. 454; Bhut Nath Dome, 13 C. W. N. 1180; 3 I. C. (C.)

867; Pachai Gownden, 26 I. C. (M.) 158; Radhey, (1923) A. 357.

(6) Cf. per Jackson, J., in Sohun, 2 W. R., 59; Banku Behari, 20 I. C. (C.) 602.

(7) Cf. per Jackson, J., in Sohun, 2 W. R., p. 60.

in the land, it was held that the use of swords was in the circumstances unjustifiable, though having regard to the provocation received, and the right of private defence in the prisoners, they were entitled to a lenient sentence.

892. But a person has no right to kill persons found upon one's land. They may be trespassers, or thieves, or even robbers,<sup>1</sup> but criminal trespass and theft do not justify homicide unless there was resistance and use of violence. As Alderson, B., said: "A kick is not a justifiable mode of turning a man out of your house, though he be a trespasser. If a person becomes excited and gives another a kick, it is an unjustifiable act."<sup>2</sup> So Holroyd, J., said in another case: "A civil trespass will not excuse the firing of a pistol at a trespasser in sudden resentment or anger. If a person takes forcible possession of another man's clothes, so as to be guilty of a breach of the peace, it is more than a trespass; so if a man with force invades and enters into the dwelling of another; but a man is not authorized to fire a pistol on every intrusion or invasion of his house, he ought, if he has a reasonable opportunity, to endeavour to remove him without having recourse to the last extremity; but the making of an attack upon a dwelling and especially at night, the law regards as equivalent to an assault upon a man's person, for a man's house is his castle; and, therefore, in the eye of law, it is equivalent to an assault; but no words or signs are equivalent to an assault, nor will they authorize an assault in return."<sup>3</sup> So where two persons learnt that their land was being ploughed up by eight or ten men and thereupon they rushed out with spears, and who, after a few words of remonstrance, killed two of the trespassers, wounding a third, it appeared that the latter were unarmed and had offered no resistance, the Court held that the use of unprovoked violence resulting in death was wholly out of all proportion to the injury done or threatened, and that the act of the accused was therefore murder.<sup>4</sup> The decision in this case turned upon the fact that the trespassers were unarmed and offered no resistance.

893. The case would, however, be different, where the trespasser attacked the owner with a spear, whereupon the owner struck him a blow with a lathi which killed him. As Markby, J., remarked: "If the prisoner was justified in using it at all, surely he is not to be expected on such an occasion to measure out with any very great nicety the force of his blow."<sup>5</sup> In another case the zemindar and his ryots were on bad terms. The former had employed a number of up-country men to defend his cutcherry threatened by the ryots. One day a pony of Hira Singh, one of such men of the zemindar's having strayed into the ryots' crops, the latter making this a pretext, assembled in large numbers and pursued him, so that he had to beat a retreat towards the cutcherry, where he was surrounded by the ryots whereupon he shouted for help, which brought to his assistance eight men who were, however, beaten and driven back. The ryots had actually entered the cutcherry when the prisoner rushed into an inner apartment, brought out a loaded gun and fired off both barrels, killing one man, and wounding others. It was held that the prisoner's act was justifiable, as having regard to the attitude of the ryots he was justified in believing that they might cause death or grievous hurt to him or his companions.<sup>6</sup> But in this case there was a reasonable apprehension of danger, and on that apprehension arising, the firing of a gun was held to be justifiable. But if in such a case the gun had been fired at, say, from the distance of five and twenty yards before the ryots had entered the cutcherry or menaced its peace, the conduct of the prisoner could not have been justified.<sup>7</sup>

894. Where the deceased, a sturdy dissolute young man, quarrelled with the accused, his uncle and the latter's son, and after an exchange of abuse snatched up a heavy jatu (side post of a cart), three feet long, and aimed a blow with it at his uncle and possibly another at his uncle's son, whereupon the latter seized a second jatu, two feet long, and struck his assailant two blows on the head in consequence

(1) Ram Prosad, (1919) Pat. 262.

(2) Wild's case, 2 Lew, 214; Jhalku Tewari, 21 I. C. (C.) 382.

(3) Meade's case, 1 Lew, 184.

(4) Gourchand Chong, 18 W. R. 19.

(5) Moizudin, 11 W. R. 41 (42).

(6) Ram Lall Singh, 22 W. R. 51.

(7) Hussainuddy, 17 W. R. 46.

of which he died, it was held that there was an excuse for the right of private defence, and that the accused was entitled to be acquitted.<sup>1</sup> So was the accused, a policeman, who was conveying a prisoner, was mobbed by a number of camel-drivers whose camels were trespassing on the canal banks belonging to Government, discharged his gun either accidentally, or without taking careful aim, wounding one of his assailants, it was held that the accused was protected by this section.<sup>2</sup> So while it is a legitimate exercise of the right of private defence to seize a thief, it is not a necessary consequence of that right that he should be beaten to death, unless the thief offers resistance or uses force, in which case even the causing of death is justifiable. But where death was involuntarily caused, as in holding down the thief by the throat in consequence of which he died of suffocation, the Court regarded the death as caused in the legitimate exercise of the right, for which the person causing it could not be held liable.<sup>3</sup> But the case would have been naturally different, if in such a case the prisoner had strangled the thief after he had been secured and was helpless.<sup>4</sup> So where a person found a starved old woman cutting his rice, and thereupon he brutally assaulted her, fracturing her shoulder-blade and wrists and causing two contused wounds on the skull, from the effects of which she immediately died, it was held that the injuries inflicted were far beyond what was justifiable under the circumstances, and that the act of the prisoner was nothing short of murder.<sup>5</sup>

895. Excessive Force.—The case is, however, different where a person, whose property had been frequently stolen, resolves to lie in wait with a companion for the thief. At midnight a thief appeared in the field and thereupon the prisoner struck him a heavy blow with his lathi of which he died, the question was whether the right of private defence had been exceeded. Norman, J., held that it had not been. "No man," he observed, finding a plunderer in his field by night in a place, where others may be within call, is to be expected to deal his blows very gently." The prisoner was acquitted.<sup>6</sup> What difference is there between this case and the last, it may be asked. But the difference is considerable. In the latter case the thief hit was a man and the blow struck was single, whereas in the last case the starved woman could not possibly have offered any resistance, and there was no reason to suppose that she had other companions. This distinction accounts for the different view taken in a similar case. The prisoner had his grain stolen on previous occasions. He was therefore watching his field on a dark night. He saw the deceased cutting his corn, and so chased him. The deceased ran his head against a tree and fell. The prisoner thereupon commenced to hit him recklessly with a fair-sized stick and fractured his skull in two places causing death. It was held that the injury caused was quite unnecessary after the deceased was helpless, but that, inasmuch as it was provoked by the previous thefts from which the prisoner had suffered, he was entitled to some leniency. The accused who was trying to smuggle opium was entrapped by the Excise Inspector assisted by his peon. The Inspector ordered the accused to stop and fired two shots to frighten him. The accused thereupon turned round and stabbed the Inspector with his sword. He was then arrested and while the peon was disarming him the accused wounded him also with the sword. He was arraigned for wounding the two but the Court acquitted him of causing wound to the Inspector on the ground that the shots fired at him might reasonably have caused the apprehension of death or of grievous hurt in the accused who was, however, guilty of wounding the peon who was justified in arresting him.<sup>7</sup> The accused had been to demand his share of the crops from the deceased who aimed a violent blow with his dang at his head but it fell on his shoulder, whereupon the accused struck back with his wahola which he happened to carry with him. It killed the assailant. He was held protected by this exception.<sup>8</sup>

(1) Puran, (1904) P. L. R. 49.

(2) Mukerji, (1901), P. R. No. 5.

(3) Kurim Bux, 2 W. R. 12.

(4) Dhununjai, 14 W. R. 68.

(5) Gohool Bowree, 5 W. R. 33.

(6) Mokee, 12 W. R. 15.

(7) Nga Nan Da, 54 I. C. (U. B.) 577.

(8) Mhd. Akbar, 72 I. C. (L.) 520; cf Pachai Gounden, 26 I. C. (M.) 158.

896. Unjustifiable Force.—No man has a right to kill a thief any more than a trespasser (§ 892). His right extends to protection of his person and the recovery of his property and no force not necessary for that purpose is justifiable. So where the owner found a thief committing house-breaking by night in his house, who upon being detected was endeavouring to escape, (but which was not likely), upon which the accused sent for a kodalee with the express object of killing him and on the kodalee being brought killed him on the spot, he was convicted but his sentence was mitigated by the Local Government.<sup>1</sup> It will be observed that in this case the killing was on purpose, and done with a weapon not ready to hand or seized by the prisoner, and used in the heat of sudden passion. The thief was killed while lying prostrate on the ground held by the accused who had other assistance available to prevent his escape. All these facts clearly showed that the killing was wholly unnecessary to prevent his escape. The accused was therefore technically guilty of murder in cold blood, but inasmuch as his object in killing him was probably to prevent his escape and inasmuch as his act was done in the undoubted belief that the accused had that right, the Court, while convicting the accused, commended these considerations to the mercy of Government who gave effect to them by commuting the sentence passed to one year's rigorous imprisonment.<sup>2</sup> Another case illustrates the wording of the opposite rule. There a thief was caught house-breaking by night with half his body and his head through the wall of a house occupied by none but women, except the prisoner and his young son who was an idiot. The prisoner awoke and seizing a pole-axe which was handy, seized the deceased by the hair, struck him five times on the neck, and in fact, nearly beheaded him. It was held that the accused had exceeded the right of private defence, and that he was therefore guilty of culpable homicide, as his case fell within Exception 2, section 300 of the Code ; but having regard to the fact that the accused had not deliberately chosen the dangerous weapon, that he was unassisted, and that the alarm and excitement produced by his determination to defend his house and his family to the very death, might have, under all the circumstances, led any one to use greater violence than was absolutely necessary for defence, the Court felt justified in passing the light sentence of four months's imprisonment.<sup>3</sup>

897. But where the correction was not only excessive but cruel, mitigation was considered as out of question. Where, for instance, a parker finding a boy stealing wood in his master's ground, beat and tied him to a horse's tail, and the horse having taken fright ran away dragging the boy till his shoulder was broken, of which he died, it was held that the offence was murder, for it was not only an illegal, but a deliberate and dangerous act, and the correction was both excessive and savoured of cruelty.<sup>4</sup> The plea of provocation will not avail where express malice be proved, as where a person declares that he will take his life, in which case death will be attributed to his previous intention and not to the passion that the provocation may have suddenly aroused.<sup>5</sup> In the result he was convicted of culpable homicide and sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment.<sup>6</sup> It would seem that the mere fact that a thief is armed is not sufficient to cause a reasonable apprehension of danger, so as to let in the right of private defence. The accused at night found a man in his field stealing melons. He challenged him, but the man made no answer but ran away, whereupon the accused pursued him into a deserted village, and coming up with him, first struck him a blow on the cheek with his sword, and when the man suddenly turned round, he struck him another blow, which proved fatal. The accused believed that the deceased was armed with a knife and had turned round to stab him, but it was held that the supposition of the accused that the deceased was armed with a knife was insufficient to give rise to any right of private defence in the

(1) Durwan Geer, 5 W. R. 73.

(2) Durwan Geer, 5 W. R. 73 (75) note.

(3) Fukeera, 6 W. R. 50 ; Kunja Bhunia, 39 C. 896 ; Nga Tun Nyein, 38 I. C. (L. B.) 316.

(4) Holloway, Cro. Car. 131 ; 1 Hawk P. C.

c. 39, s. 42 ; 1 Hale, P. C. 453 ; 1 East P. C., p. 237 ; Fost. 292.

(5) 1 East. P. C., p. 224 ; see s. 302, Comm.

(6) Bag, (1902) P. R. No. 29 ; distinguishing Mokey, 12 W. R. 15.

absence of any threat or attempt to draw the knife for the purpose of attacking the accused with it. That as the accused had no stolen property in his possession, the right of private defence for recovery of property did not continue until the wounds were inflicted. The accused's act therefore amounted to murder.<sup>1</sup>

898. So where a Magistrate erroneously ordered the attachment of paddy purporting to act under section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, and the Police Officer intimated to the accused that, in taking charge of the crops, they were only carrying out the order of the Magistrate, whereupon the accused pushed and jostled the constables brandishing their sticks, and then confined them for 19 hours in a room without food and drink, it was held that the action of the petitioners was violently aggressive, and not merely self-defensive, and that they were not therefore protected.<sup>2</sup>

